Commons Adjourn; Important Bills Take Final Form in Legislation

Review of Measures Passed in the Latter Stages of Session

"THE OTTAWA SPOTLIGHT"

Ottawa, July 5th. — The closing days of the session were marked with great activity in both Houses of Parliament. That is, of course, true of all sessions. There is always an acceleration of speed as the hour of prorogation draws near, not necessarily a fixed date but one at which it would be advisable to prorogue. This year the ultimate "zero hour" of prorogation in the minds of parliamentarians has been the opening of the Conservative Convention at Ottawa. The Conservative members should be freed of parliamentary duties when they are called on with other delegates to choose their leader to succeed Mr. Bennett. So remaining bills on the order paper are rapidly moulded into laws.

Among the measures which received the approval of Parliament before the session's close were the National Housing Act, the Bank of Canada amendment, the change in electoral laws, amendments to the Criminal Code, penal reform, and the Transport Bill with Senate amendments. This is not a full list by any means, but it includes some of the most important of the measures.

The Housing Act provides, it will be recalled, for low cost and low rental housing construction. Through pooled loans with lending companies and aid to municipalities through extension of credits at low rates of interest, the Dominion Government hopes to stimulate the building trades which suffered severely through the depression and have been slow in recovering. A parallel measure with the same objective of aiding construction industries and reducing unemployment was the act to stimulate municipal improvements. In the budget, important building materials were exempted from the sales tax.

Several Contests Played Among Lady Golfers

On June 28th the ladies' branch of the Lachute Golf Club held an approaching and putting competition. The prize, given by Mrs. Parnell, was won by Mrs. W. M. Cottingham.

On July 30th a handicap tournament took place and a tie between Mrs. Beaton and Mrs. C. Rogers is to be played off. The prize in this competition is given by Mrs. Tattersfield.

On July 5th a two-ball foursome was played and prizes donated by the Match Committee, Mrs. W. M. Cottingham, Mrs. G. G. Mitchell and Mrs. T. K. Haller, were won by Mrs. Stewart and Mrs. Tattersfield.

During July and August there will be competitions every Tuesday and Thursday, so the ladies anticipate a full and interesting golf season.

Following an error in last week's issue concerning the swimming instruction sponsored by the Lions Club, it is advised that the truck for conveyance of the boys will leave the Auditorium at 4:15 p.m. Wednesday afternoon, instead of 4:45 p.m. as previously announced.

Former H.S. Teacher Is Bride at Three Rivers

Bradley - McDowell

The marriage of Miss Lottie McDowell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Austin McDowell, Shawville, Que., to Mr. Gordon Bradley, of Three Rivers, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Bradley, Redmill, Que., took place at eight o'clock Saturday morning at the St. Andrews United Church parsonage, Three Rivers, Rev. W. Jones officiating.

The bride, who was unattended, wore a frock of navy blue with a short jacket, navy and white accessories, and a corsage bouquet of gardenias.

Mr. and Mrs. Bradley left to spend their honeymoon at Green Lake, a few miles from Shawville. En route they made a brief call at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Y. Deacon in Lachute. Returning, they will take up residence in Three Rivers.

The former Miss McDowell left Lachute four years ago after serving on the teaching staff of the High School for five years. During her residence here she won popularity among the pupils and residents, and friends in this locality extend every wish for her future happiness.

G. DEACON AGAIN HEADS PROT. SCHOOL BOARD

Vacancies occurring in the Lachute Protestant School Board were filled at a meeting Monday morning with the re-election of Geo. Y. Deacon and Wm. Jackson for three-year terms as commissioners.

At a further session on Tuesday evening the board re-elected Geo. Y. Deacon as their chairman.

Discussion of matters pertaining to the next High School term and necessary redecoration to parts of the school building, occupied the attention of the meeting.

Two Bus Services to Montreal Now Operating

New motorcoach services connecting Lachute and Brownsburg with Montreal — via St. Hermas, and also via St. Canut and St. Jerome — have recently been established by the Provincial Transport Company to provide increased facilities for travellers during the summer season.

The route to Montreal, via St. Hermas, now has two services daily in each direction. The service on the route through St. Canut and St. Jerome has one service on week days and two on Saturdays and Sundays in each direction and is already giving evidence of great popularity.

The new schedules are in line with the Company's policy to enlarge services generally throughout the Province to meet the transportation needs of both local and tourist travel.

Domestic Science Subject in High School Next Year

FIVE NEW TEACHERS ARE ENGAGED

Domestic Science will be a new subject on the Lachute High School curriculum next year for girls in Grades VI to IX. Miss Patricia Bennett, of Bury, Que., a qualified instructor, has been engaged to teach this subject. Grade VIII now exceeding 50 pupils in number, on the inspector's recommendation this class will be divided into two sections, one of which will be in charge of Miss Bennett. Four other teachers have been engaged, namely, Miss Betty Jones, of Bedford, for Gr. III; Miss Martha Cunningham, of Huntingdon, for Gr. V; Mr. Crawford Anderson, of Huntingdon, for Grade VI; and Miss Ethel Legrand, of Gaspé, for Gr. VII. Among the present staff, Miss D. Pritchard will be advanced from Gr. V to teach Gr. VIII, and Miss B. Miller, B.A., from Gr. VI to Gr. IX.

Teachers who left the High School staff this year are Miss F. Mason, Miss H. Tibbitts, Miss M. Lacey and Miss E. Bruce.

MOTORIST DEAD, ANOTHER SERIOUSLY INJURED, IN HIGHWAY ACCIDENT EARLY THIS MORNING

One man was killed and another seriously injured in a highway accident early this morning near Simon's Crossing on the Grenville route, just west of Lachute. Their car, a 1937 Pontiac sedan, swerved as it left the paved highway and came upon a stretch of gravel surface. The machine hit a tree beside the road. One of the occupants was killed and the other was taken by ambulance to hospital in Hawkesbury, seriously injured. They were driving toward Lachute from Buckingham.

Victims of the mishap, which occurred at 1:30 this morning, are: Jean Baril, 29 years old, of Montreal — dead. Aimé Paquette, of Buckingham, Que., injured.

Laurel Trio Lost Eighteen Hours in Dense Bush

FOUND BY SEARCH PARTY 1½ MILES FROM HOME

YOUNG LAD, UNAWARE OF PLIGHT, IS "GLAD TO MEET" RESCUERS

Lost for 18 hours in the dense bush at Laurel a summer resident, William D. White, of Montreal, suffered a harrowing experience last week-end. He left his camp on North Lake at 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon with two youngsters, four and seven years old, the sons of his housekeeper, a Swedish woman. The trio started for a hike in the woods, but within an hour Mr. White realized he was lost. With presence of mind he kept the youngsters interested so they were unaware of their predicament until, after spending the entire night in the bush, they were found by searchers at 7 o'clock Sunday morning.

When the party failed to return late Saturday afternoon, the mother of the children notified Louis Paradis, a nearby resident. With the assistance of Mr. C. A. Spatz of Lachute, who has a cottage at Laurel, a party of 15 men well acquainted with the surroundings set out, and with flashlights, shotgun signals and auto-horns from the highway, a search was kept up until 2:30 Sunday morning. Hampered by the darkness, the searchers gave up until 4 a.m., when the hunt was resumed at the first streaks of daylight. One of the search party came upon the lost trio at 7 a.m., and fired two gunshots to notify his friends.

The younger lad greeted the rescuer with a remark that they were hungry; he was glad to meet the man, since Mr. White had brought them on a long hike, and they had encountered no one in their travels. They Paquette was driving the car, and the pair were coming east when their auto swerved and left the highway. The wrecked machine was discovered a short time afterwards by two passing motorists. Baril was found dead inside. The motorists summoned help, and telephoned traffic officer H. Jones. An ambulance was called and Paquette was taken in a critical condition to Dr. Smith's Hospital at Hawkesbury.

Coroner Dr. J. H. Mason, investigating the case this morning, learned that Paquette, the injured man, had been the only eye-witness to the accident. The only other evidence available was from the motorists who discovered the wrecked car. Releasing the body of the deceased, the coroner deferred the inquest until the injured man could appear to give his testimony.

The car, damaged beyond repair, was towed this morning to the Lachute Autos Limited Garage.

Bermuda's railway, believed to be the smallest in the world, also probably has the largest number of stations and stops along its 22 miles of track. The trains have 52 halts to make.

India possesses the largest number of cattle of any country in the world, but, owing to adverse climatic and economic conditions, and the fact that the cow is a sacred animal, the productive value of the cattle industry is not commensurate with its size. The majority of milk cows in India are seriously underfed.

Barnum Was Right

A well known magazine is authority for the statement that out of every three tickets sold on the Irish Sweepstakes in America, two are counterfeit. It also declares that the odds against winning a prize are anywhere from one to three million to one. Proving once again that Barnum was right, because about one hundred million dollars' worth of these tickets are sold every year in the United States and Canada.

were found about 1½ miles from home. One of the boys had fallen asleep during the night, although the cold was intense. A valuable dog belonging to Mr. White had accompanied them on their walk, but had returned home around 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon with its head pierced by porcupine quills. With neither dog nor matches to light a fire the trio were helpless to find their way or to guide the searchers. Although considerably unnerved by the experience Mr. White, on reaching his camp, drove away immediately with his dog to secure the services of a veterinarian.

TENNIS CLUBS PLAY FOR M.P.'s TROPHY

A tennis tournament for a local club trophy is in progress between the Plaisez-Vous and Ayers Limited clubs. The award is a cup donated by Geo. Héon, M.P., to be won by the club taking three out of five engagements.

Playing at their home courts, Plaisez-Vous were victors in the first encounter; and in a contest at Lachute Mills the Ayers Limited Club took the second triumph.

The third round is scheduled for 7 o'clock this evening at the Ayers Limited courts, and will consist of ladies' singles, ladies' doubles, gents' singles and gents' doubles.

Automobile Turns Turtle, Occupants Narrowly Escape

UNINSURED TRUCK TERMED "HIGHWAY DERELICT"

St. Andrews E. — Occupants of Mr. J. A. Mowatt's car narrowly escaped injury Saturday afternoon in a collision on the Montreal highway. Near St. Benoit a light delivery truck, whose approach from an intersecting road was obscured by shrubbery, collided with the Mowatt car, which turned turtle a couple of times and was damaged beyond repair. The doors were jammed and had to be wrenched open from the outside. The truck escaped with a broken fender. There was no accident-liability insurance on this vehicle, neither was the owner in a position to pay for damages — a sort of "highway derelict."

FULL AGENDA BEFORE BROWNSBURG COUNCIL; MONTHLY SESSION BRINGS QUOTA OF PROBLEMS

Brownsburg—The regular monthly meeting of Brownsburg Village Council was held at the Social Club on Monday night, Mayor G. Ball presiding. Also present were Councillors G. I. McFaul, L. Ouellette, W. G. Graham, D. Lepine, L. Wilson and, subsequently, H. Pariseau.

WATERWORKS

Mayor Ball submitted a blueprint showing the levels of the intended water line from the intake at Reardon's Lake to the picnic grounds at Brownsburg.

Mr. Ouellette: "If it is brought out at the picnic grounds it will have to be brought back again to serve the French Hill."

Mr. Graham: "Possibly, but the engineers have mapped that course, and it is of small moment as the pressure is adequate."

Mr. Ouellette: "If the water has to be piped back it will lose on the return. I think it should come in on the French Hill and the gravity would feed the rest of the 'Burg from that."

Mr. Graham: "The gravity starts at the source and the head shown on the present print is 205 feet above the Catholic Church. We will have ample supply and pressure at our highest point."

Mayor Ball: "If we can afford a sufficiently large pipe to obviate the necessity of a reservoir, we will be all right."

Mr. Graham: "That would effect a saving of from $25,000 to $30,000."

Mayor Ball: "This is only a profile blueprint and it will be as well to wait till we get an estimate of the cost, to see how we should proceed."

The matter was dropped at this point.

The secretary read the minutes of last meeting, which were adopted on the motion of Mr. McFaul, seconded Mr. Ouellette.

A letter was received from Mr. Richardson, Works Manager of the C.I.L., advising that the Company desired to determine the Council's use of the dumping ground hitherto enjoyed by the corporation, but offered dumping facilities at another site about one-half mile south-west of the present dump.

Considerable discussion developed over Mr. Lepine's observation that it was "not good business" to accept the offer without first viewing the site.

Mr. McFaul: "We were all around that location and, although we don't know the exact site, we do know that we can't procure any other site, and as the Company's offer is free except that we spend $100 in improving the approach, we should accept."

Mayor: "If we adjourn the matter

Closing Session to Elect Party Leader Three O'Clock This Afternoon

Gasoline Stove Ignites, Quick Action Averts Fire

LACHUTE MILLS RESIDENT SEVERELY BURNED

At 7:40 o'clock Friday evening, Denis Paquette, of Hanford Street, Lachute Mills, was badly burned about the hands and face when a gasoline stove ignited in his home. Paquette opened the window and threw the blazing stove into the yard, and although he averted a fire in the dwelling, was severely burned in doing so. Firemen were summoned, but the flames had been extinguished by the time the truck arrived on the scene.

Children Cause Fire, Playing With Matches

Children playing with matches around a shed at the rear of L. Fournier's butcher shop in the West Ward, caused a fire at 3:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. A ton of hay stored in the building was well ablaze and emitting clouds of smoke when the brigade arrived from their station only a hundred yards distant. Acting promptly the firemen subdued the blaze with a single line of hose. The loss was slight, estimated at around $25.

"Meighen rocks convention by keynote speech" was the headline of a report on Senator Meighen's stand for empire dependence and empire defence, in the early stages of the National Conservative Convention at Ottawa. The pronouncement by the former party leader and prime minister was an attack upon Mackenzie King's policy declining the suggested establishment of air force flying schools in Canada. Meighen called for a frank recognition of Canada's debt to the Empire.

To many delegates it appeared he was defining the issue for the next election, as imperial defence. This met a dubious reception from a large bloc of Quebec delegates, and Geo. Héon, newest Conservative member and representative for this constituency, stepped into the limelight on this issue with a speech at Tuesday night's banquet.

GEO. HEON PROTESTS

Mr. Héon took care not to specifically mention the subject of imperial defence but was generally understood to be alluding to Senator Meighen's declaration.

The Argenteuil member declared quite bluntly that if any delegate to the convention sought to dictate the party's policy he was really working toward the disintegration of the Dominion.

Mr. Héon said that as the banquet was in reality a family gathering he would avoid controversial questions, but he emphasized that when it came to deciding party policy this was something that could not be determined by any one delegate or any group of delegates but by the party as a whole.

It could not be inferred, though, that the people of Quebec were not ready, not anxious to co-operate in furthering the best interests of the Dominion as a whole. Their energies had always been exerted in that direction.

The French people in Canada now attending this convention came from three centuries of the life of their race in this country, were the offspring of fifteen generations and it was evident to all that they were genuinely Canadian, their views and aspirations were essentially Canadian, Mr. Héon declared.

THREATENED BOLT FROM CONVENTION

On Wednesday morning again, as spokesman for the Quebec members, Geo. Héon intimated that, in a caucus of the bloc there had been consideration of a withdrawal from the convention. Héon, and other supporters of Manion as candidate for leader, were loudly heckled. The Argenteuil member stated that he was committed to nominating Hon. Dr. Manion, but reserved the right to support a stronger candidate at the time of balloting if one should appear.

There was some demand for a vote to settle whom the Quebec delegates should support but the meeting was too hectic to permit the vote.

The Quebec caucus declared for provincial autonomy as defined in 1867.

Old Timer's Letter Recalls Industries of 60 Years Ago

WORKED FOR DORMER & SONS, LONG FORGOTTEN FIRM

LATER AMONG THE FIRST FOUNDRY EMPLOYEES OF McOuat & McRAE

Letters from old-time residents occasionally set the wheels of memory turning... but the annals of local industry are stirred at their very roots in a letter just received by Mr. Arthur McOuat.

Mr. McOuat, now proprietor of the firm of T. McOuat & Son, succeeded John McRae, entering business with his father Thos. McOuat, in 1903 when the latter assumed full interest in the old firm of McOuat & McRae. These names are interlocked with the earliest industrial growth of Lachute.

The letter received by Mr. McOuat is from one, John Clarke, of Ocean Beach, California. The writer was a moulder in the foundry even before the present owner first saw the light of day. It seems that he had worked as early as 1876 for Geo. Dormer & Sons, whose premises on Foundry Street were bought by McOuat & McRae, later by O. B. Lafleur & Sons, and are now in possession of the Farmers' Supply Co. McOuat & McRae started there under the name of the Victoria Foundry in 1878. The only power unit in their plant was a horse, which daily plodded around a shaft to drive the blower for the furnace. The firm moved to a stone building across the river from the J. C. Wilson Paper Mill about 1880, and later to their present site in the West Ward.

Mr. Clarke, now in his eighties, addresses his letter to "Mr. Thos. McOuat or Mr. John McRae" — both of whom are long since dead. The letter says in part: "I expect you will both have got to be pretty well

Dr. A. Rodrigue Re-Elected to Catholic School Comm.

At a meeting of the Lachute Catholic School Board on Tuesday, Dr. Alex Rodrigue, Mayor of Lachute, was re-elected for a further term as a trustee. The appointment for this vacancy and other business concerning the interests of Catholic education in this community were dealt with.

Demonstrating the power of advertising, is the question most prospective Canadian home builders ask when they first approach an architect or contractor. Before they discuss plans or lay-out, the big majority ask: "What about insulation?" Ten years ago, according to builders, most people didn't even know what the word meant.

along in years. You may not remember me. Your son was born while I was working for you, and he will probably have taken your place in the business... If you or any of the firm receives this, I would be pleased to hear from you — if God has been good and spared you. — Yours truly, John Clarke."

POLICE ATTACK ON ROAD PEDESTRIAN MORTALITY

The London "Bobbie" has come to the conclusion that a good many accidents involving pedestrians have been caused by pedestrians' lack of traffic sense, so the Metropolitan Police are now trying out a new and powerful loud-speaker on police cars to "holler" at pedestrians who are about to become tangled in motor traffic. Above is a picture showing the new loud-speaker beside the old type, during a test.

LIFE origination

How life began on earth is a question, the answer to which scientists and philosophers have been searching for hundreds of years. To the millions who take literally the Biblical account of the Creation it is no puzzle. Among others, opinions are divided between two theories of the origin of life.

Svend Arrhenius, a Swedish scientist, put forth the theory that life first came on earth in the form of tiny organisms borne from some other planet, by meteorites. A vast amount of scientific research has failed either to prove or disprove the theory.

The generally accepted belief of scientists is that life originated right here on the earth, by the chemical combination of non-living elements. This theory is borne out by study of the extremely simple structure of the lowest forms of life. Now a Russian bio-chemist, Dr. Oparin, has come out with a book in which he shows how it was possible, in the earth's beginnings, for the carbon which is present in all living matter and in all the stars, to combine with water to form hydrocarbons, the simplest of all organic compounds, and for those to combine with other elements to form the living matter from which all higher forms of life, including humanity, have descended.

EVOLUTION . . primordial slime

The theory of the evolution of all life, including man, from the primordial slime which was the earliest form of living matter, is now unanimously accepted by scientists. Science has traced the process step by step, almost to the appearance on earth of human beings as we are today.

In the evolutionary process many forms of life arose which were unable to survive, and their fossil remains are found all over the globe. Among these were many human-like creatures, while many kinds of apes with almost human characteristics succeeded in surviving until the present day.

No remains have been found of which it can be said with certainty that they belonged to the first type of primitive man. There is positive proof, however, that intelligent human beings, fire-builders and tool-users, have inhabited the earth for as long as 100,000 years.

SURVIVAL . . new discoveries

How long can animal tissue be kept alive after its removal from the living body in which it grew? Dr. Alexis Carrel started to find the answer more than 25 years ago. In 1912 he showed me in his laboratory a chicken's heart which he had kept alive and growing for nine months, in a glass tube. That heart is still beating, and will continue to survive so long as the necessary chemical elements are supplied to it.

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh has been working with Dr. Carrel now for some years. He applied his mechanical ingenuity to the invention of a pump-like device by means of which all kinds of tissues can be kept alive and experiments can be made upon them to discover what makes them grow, what retards their growth, and how various disease germs and injurious substances affect them.

Out of these and other experiments scientists are beginning to learn as much about death as about life. High hopes are being held that eventually ways will be found to prolong healthy human life far beyond its present limits.

DEATH . . . its phenomenon

The instinct to live is deep-rooted in the human spirit. "All that a man hath will be given for his life," is one of the axiomatic truths written in the Bible. To the young death seems an awful thing to contemplate; and it is, for the young who have still so much ahead of them to live for. As age comes on, the terrors of death diminish. Regardless of whether one looks forward to a life beyond the grave or believes that death is the ultimate end, the philosophical mind is ready for it when it comes.

A considerable group of scientific workers is engaged in studying the phenomenon of death and its causes. They agree that death is generally painless. Even sudden and violent death is usually only a surprising shock. The lower forms of life do not fear death, for they are unable to imagine it.

Greatly as mankind dreads death, however, the human spirit rises above fear when facing death in defending others or in fighting for their own and his own rights and liberties. Many have died from the beginning of things for their beliefs and ideals. That is, to my thinking, the greatest of all differences between mankind and the beasts.

IMMORTALITY . . human ego

One universal human inquiry to which science has so far offered no answer is: Does life go on beyond the grave? The survival of the spirit or soul, in one form or another, is a belief shared by the most primitive races, and taught by all religions. Yet none has ever come back to prove it, though many have pretended and some honestly believed that they have seen or talked with disembodied spirits.

I have read what many believers in Spiritualism have written. I have attended many Spiritualist meetings and seances. I have never read or seen any evidence that was convincing to me of communication with the spirit of the dead.

Nearly every one of the famous "mediums" has been exposed as a palpable fraud and trickster. It seems probable to me that the belief in a future life is generally accepted because the human ego cannot easily bear the thought of annihilation. And I am satisfied that if there is a life after death, it is on a plane with which the living can have no communication.

A Western farmer stopped at the bank to see if he could get a loan on his farm.

Banker — "It might be arranged. I will drive out with you and appraise it."

Farmer (noticing a huge cloud of dust rolling up the road) — "You won't need to bother, here it comes now."

Submarine Coal

Started by French sailors who took fuel in baskets from the outcroppings of coal on the Atlantic coast, the Cape Breton mines now rank as the world's largest users of explosives under the sea. What the French mariners started, says a writer in the C-I-L Oval, has developed into an enterprise that daily sends an army of 8,000 men almost four miles under the floor of the ocean to mine an average of 4,000,000 tons of fuel a year. The coal field stretches for a distance of 35 miles along the coast with the seams outcropping either close to the shore or else under the sea itself. Many millions of tons of coal can be mined from the submarine areas — enough for 100 to 200 years to come. About 150,000,000 tons have already been extracted. No submarine workings are allowed to come within 150 feet of the floor of the ocean and special types of permitted explosives are used, in which the temperature of detonation is lowered and the flame of the explosive dampened by cooling salts and other products of detonation, thus reducing almost to non-existence chance of the flame from the explosive setting off a larger blast by igniting the coal dust or inflammable gas in the air.

DELAYS IN SECURING HOUSING ACT LOANS

If a few hundred Canadians are wondering today why they are not getting their homes built under the Dominion Housing Act, they might do well to get out copies of their applications and find out just what they did wrong. Applications received by the lending companies are in many cases both comical and pathetic, officials state. Eager to build homes, but entirely inexperienced in planning, many people have sent in applications accompanied by house plans that would be impossible to follow. One such applicant designed his own home and failed to include a single window. Another had one door leading into the kitchen, the other into the basement. Some forgot roofs entirely, others had twice the floorspace upstairs that they had downstairs. And a large number forgot to put their names or addresses on the applications.

In cases where amateur plans are submitted, loan company officials endeavor to put the applicant in touch with a builder, advise him what to do and sometimes succeed in getting him a reasonable and practical plan. All this, however, takes time and some prospective builders, after two or three months, give up in despair. It is much better, officials say, if applicants can go to the lending company with well-prepared plans that are acceptable. Most people planning to build under the act cannot, of course, afford to employ the services of an architect, but the Dominion Housing Commission and at least one private building company have had architects prepare small homes that can be built under the act. In the case of Dominion Housing Act prize-winning homes, designed by architects across Canada, costs may be reduced by making use of special low-cost building materials, such as insulated sidings in place of wood, brick or stone. Other savings may be made by substituting less expensive fixtures and heating equipment.

Stepped Into Paint

Peterboro, Ont. — George Gillespie, felt like a character in a slapstick comedy here the other day when he stepped out of his automobile into a pail of paint. The green fluid covered his shoe and pant leg and spilled over the sidewalk. A painter working on the city had left the pail there.

Could Not Convince Them

("Diary," London Evening Standard)

I heard this story today from Northern Ireland. A member of the civil service, finding himself with little to do, and being extremely bored, asked his immediate chief for more work. He was told that such a request was out of order, but he was advised that if he were to apply for an increase in his salary he would undoubtedly be given more work.

Accordingly, he sent in a request for an increase. After some delay while his application passed through the usual tortuous channels, he received a reply from the under-secretary of his department. He was informed, with regrets, that it was impossible to grant him an increase, but that as he was apparently overworked an assistant would be appointed to help him.

Polk Confirmed Gold Discovery

On December 3, 1848, President Polk's annual message confirmed previous unofficial reports of the discovery of gold in California, nearly a year before. The first of these reached the East in a letter, dated San Francisco, April 1, which appeared in the New York Herald on August 19. Subsequent newspaper dispatches from California were eagerly awaited, and the posting of "gold" bulletins attracted vast crowds. It is significant that the same presidential message which confirmed this history-making news also reported that steps had been taken toward "extending" the benefit of our post office laws to the people of California.

The Bank of Canada bill provides for the nationalization of the central bank. Hitherto the Government has owned over fifty per cent of the shares of the bank. Now it will own one hundred per cent. There was very little opposition to the change in the constitution of the bank but many speeches were made in the Commons when the bill was before the House on what the policy of the bank would be. "Monetary reform" is a subject which at this time at least holds the imagination of many members of the Commons. Currency and credit matters form, of course, the basis of the social credit theory. Whether one believes in the principle of social credit or not and the majority of members in the House quite obviously do not, it is quite clear to people listening to speeches on banking and credit matters that these social crediters have given their subject a most thorough study. C.C.F. Members gave approval to the nationalization of the bank, claiming that they always urged the step, but their idea is that all banks should be nationalized. A few Western Liberal members strongly advocated currency and credit reform. On the other hand the vast majority of Liberals and Conservatives in the Commons, as evidenced by the speeches of leaders, are unalterably opposed to inflation. These speeches pointed to the dire effects of inflation in a number of European countries during the last two decades. The extensive use of "printing press" money was a disastrous illusion. The bank had been carrying on a healthy reflationary or easy money policy. The general objective of the bank and of national credit policy was to sustain the maximum possible level of prosperity and the minimum possible level of unemployment.

The measure for greater publicity, a close audit and control of party election funds to remove some present abuses in the electoral system has been left over until next session. This important measure needs further study by members of the House committee. The bill which has been passed in the last days of the session affects election machinery. It does away with the permanent list of voters started in 1934, thus repealing the Dominion Franchise Act of that year. Lists will be prepared in the method used prior to that year; that is, they will be made by the chief electoral officer and his staff after writs for an election are issued. Hereafter no candidate will sign any pledge to follow any course of action after his election. It will also be illegal to publish the result of an election in any part of a province before polling is completed in the entire province.

A penal reform bill was passed providing for the creation of a prison board to administer and improve the penitentiary system. The bill did not deal with the present administration of systems, nor did it attempt to put into effect the many recommendations of the Archambault Commission report. There is quite apparently a difference of opinion on some of these recommendations which will probably find expression in the House next session. Extensive amendments were made to the Criminal Code in another bill. One of these was to make reckless driving an offense whether an accident occurred or not.

Mr. Howe's transport bill, which brings under the control of a transport commission, air and certain water transport, passed the Senate with amendments. These changes, made by the Upper House, will not have the bill's provisions apply to inter-coastal shipping via the Panama between the Atlantic and Pacific; the "agree charges" provisions of the bill will not apply to water borne carriage in bulk.

The eyes of Canadians turn to the Conservative Convention at Ottawa, where the party will choose the man who will bear the mantle of leadership. It is a moment of import to all Canadians irrespective of party. With Mr. Bennett, according to his own word, definitely out of the picture, the names on the lips of those who have the duty of making the choice are Dr. Manion, Mr. Lawson and Mr.

LAUDS PACT

Describing the Anglo-Italian Pact as "excellent for both countries," Sir Ronald Graham, P.C., former British Ambassador to Italy, is shown above as he arrived in Canada on the "Empress of Britain" for a fishing holiday in Quebec. Sir Ronald was closely associated with Mussolini from 1921 to 1933 when he was ambassador at Rome.

A Modern Fable

(Detroit, Detroit)

Once upon a time, there was a farmer who sold two chickens. With the proceeds he bought two shirts.

So the farmer had two shirts and a city man had two chickens.

Then came along the New Deal, and told the farmer he should get more money for his chickens by making them scarcer. . . he must not raise so many, and then he would get more income.

The New Deal also told the working man in the city that he must work fewer hours and get more money for making fewer shirts. That, of course, caused shirts to cost more.

Then the farmer brought one chicken to market. He got as much money for it as he had previously gotten for two chickens. He felt fine. He wanted to buy some shirts, but he found that shirts had also doubled in price. So he got one shirt.

Now the farmer had one shirt, and the city man had one chicken, whereas without the New Deal, the farmer could have had two shirts and the city man could have had two chickens.

This, boys and girls, is called "the more abundant life."

MAKING CANADA A Better Place in Which to Live and Work

Letters from Distinguished Canadians on Problems Affecting the Future Welfare of Canada
Specially Written for Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association

LETTER NO. 9

It is very flattering to have a Canadian Weekly Newspaper Editor like yourself and one who has such a strong influence in his own community to ask me the question set forth in your letter. The question itself, however, would suggest that you are very much more an idealist than I could ever hope to be. I have long given up the idea that I have been endowed with any divine mission to reform the world. I doubt very much whether or not any man can do very much to make his community "a better place in which to live and work" except insofar as he can do a thoroughly honest, conscientious and able job in the place in which Providence has placed him.

If this formula holds good for the weekly newspaper editor, then he cannot possibly do better than to make his paper a good weekly paper. Now, whether one is merchandising a newspaper or an automobile, one does not get very far by trying to make one's public take something they do not want. In other words, no matter how high or progressive our ideals may be about the kind of merchandise people ought to want we would very quickly go out of business unless we actually gave them what they do want. Of course all people do not want the same things and the individual or group wants different things at different times and in different moods. This gives us a wide range of choice in satisfying the idealistic side of our own natures. We can cater to either the higher or lower ranges of our customers' desire.

Now, no matter how ignorant he may be of the actual job of publishing, every advertising man at some time or other has formulated what he would do if he were publishing a newspaper. I am no exception to the rule. Here is my own dream.

If I were publishing a weekly newspaper I would try to make it reflect all the joys, sorrows, desires, griefs, ambitions and happinesses of the people of my own town — of all grades and kinds of people in my own town. I would have no preferences. The local man of wealth would be no more interesting to me than the family in the claspboard.

Denton Massey, with Dr. Manion, at the time of writing, the one with the best prospects of success. But who would venture a guess in such a question?

shack. I would follow the careers of all of them with a detached but loving interest. I would take no part in any quarrel or dispute, political or otherwise, but would present both sides of every controversy. This, however, prevents me from sitting in my high editorial seat and expressing my own opinion about current events. In fact, I would be very emphatic about expressing my own opinion but in the editor's column only — not in the news columns and not by "colouring" the news. I would, in my column, put the Prime Minister on the back when I thought he had done well, and kick him in the pants when I thought he had done badly; and the same for every public character, group, or movement. I would be very careful to avoid any bias in headlining or in reporting of events. I believe that the partisan newspaper is very rapidly going out of date and that newspapers are coming to deserve and obtain the confidence of the public in proportion to their impartiality in presenting the news.

I would be for my own town and county, not too selfishly, remembering that my own people are part of a great Dominion whose various groups and sections have more interests and ideals in common than in conflict. I would be for any person or society which might be working, however imperfectly, for the education, progress and welfare of the community or nation. I would not myself be a crusader — but would let every crusading spirit have its fling in my columns, remaining on the sidelines as an observer, arbiter, general solon and friend of everybody.

My ideal in physical equipment would be to own my own little engraving shop and to flood my paper as far as possible with pictures of the people and the events of my own constituency. A small newspaper which tries to ape the metropolitan daily is fighting a losing battle. The small newspaper, however, which is weaving itself into the life of its own community in building a citadel which nothing can overthrow.

These are my thoughts — they are possibly quite foolish and impractical but if they are of any use to you I shall be happy.

Leonce Plante Replies to Implication That Cases Are 'Fixed' in Recorder's Court

Taking exception to a comment in The Montreal Gazette, which suggested "fixing" of cases was a prevalent practice in the Recorder's Court, Recorder Leonce Plante has written a letter for publication. In connection with the request for Recorder Semple's resignation, The Gazette had stated: "Prime aldermanic grievance, though one not often admitted, is said to be the Recorder's consistent refusal to tolerate 'fixing' of court cases for favored constituents. Not only does he pay somewhat less than no attention to Council 'chits,' those little notes introducing a friend; which in some quarters can pave the way to favored treatment. . ."

The letter from Recorder Plante replies particularly to this latter implication. It says, in part: "There is to my knowledge no such thing in the city court as 'fixing' cases. I consider it a most malicious and injurious insult. Since my appointment, I made it a strict rule to receive and hear any person in reference to any case at all times when I am on court duty, whether this person has been the most important and influential citizen or a poor down-and-out underdog without a friend in the world."

"In this last category I can place 95 per cent of our daily visitors. I have tried to treat with the same courtesy a Minister of the Crown and a forgotten political figure, who was a powerful man some 20 years back, and who, now, broke and tired, timidly knocks at my door. I have received in my room well-known gangsters who came to me with family troubles, after going straight; a daughter gone astray, a wife to bring back home.

"If 'fixing cases' means being courteous with plaintiffs, defendants, witnesses, interested parties and our court staff, I am afraid that my chief, Recorder Thoun, and my colleague, Recorder Leblanc, and myself have been guilty of 'fixing' many cases. If treating the public of this court of miseries like human beings; if, remembering you were a lawyer once, you respect your confreres who come before your court and you listen to them as it is their legal right to be heard; if giving a light or suspended sentence to a first offender, even at the request of an alderman; if granting a delay to pay a fine instead of locking the culprit in jail on the spot; if giving a young lad who has committed a traffic offence with his bicycle, a stern warning instead of snatching three weeks of his $3 pay, or a choice of Bordeaux jail; if allowing a lady to call her husband after a plea of guilty for a parking offence, because she had not the $10 and costs in her bag, and not locking her up in a cell until the frantic husband reaches court; if looking down at all the human weaknesses before you, you remember your own, then Sir, I for one have been 'fixing' cases for the last four years. I invite you to spend the afternoon in our midst on a busy day and see for yourself how we 'fix' cases in your Recorder's Court."

Horse Show Opens Today at Seigniory Club, Que.

Seigniory Club — With entries received from Montreal, Toronto, Ottawa, Hamilton and some of the smaller stables in Ontario and Quebec the program for the Seigniory Club horse show opening today (Thursday), includes some of the outstanding show horses in Canada.

The picturesque hunter field trials, to be run Sunday morning, the last day of the show, are always an exciting element at the Seigniory and are perhaps the most popular class of the show. They were won last year by Lieut. Colonel A. T. Paterson, of Cartierville, riding "Girlish Charm." Mrs. A. T. Paterson will act as judge for the seat and hands class at the show this year.

POWER-BOATS IN EVIDENCE LAST WEEK-END

Two yacht races, one for Express Cruisers and a free-for-all Efficiency Event, were run at the Seigniory Club during last week-end. Boats from Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto and from several yacht clubs in the United States, appeared in the Club's harbour in the Ottawa River. On Saturday morning there was a dress parade up and down the section of the river which faces the Club buildings.

Hours and Wages 400 Years Ago

Regulation by law of hours and wages is no new thing. A statute enacted in 1562, the fifth year of Queen Elizabeth's reign, worked so satisfactorily that it stood unchanged for 200 years, when the modern factory system began to develop.

"All artificers and laborers being hired for wages by the day or week," it reads, "shall, betwixt the midst of the months of March and September, be and continue at their work and not depart until betwixt 7 and 8 o'clock at night, except it be in the midst of breakfast, dinner or drinking, the which time at the most shall not exceed two hours and a half in a day, that is to say, at every drinking half an hour, for his dinner one hour, and for his sleep when he is allowed to sleep, the which is from the midst of May to the midst of August, half an hour; and all the said artificers and laborers betwixt the midst of September and the midst of March shall be and continue at their work from the spring of the day in the morning until the night of the same day, except it be in time afore appointed for breakfast and dinner, upon pain to lose and forfeit one penny for every hour's absence, to be deducted and defaulted out of his wages that shall so often."

There were other compensations for the workers in the Elizabethan statute, besides the frequent half-hours of time off for drinking.

Employment was by the year, and wages were regulated by frequent meetings of justices, in order "to yield unto the hired person both in time of scarcity and in time of plenty a convenient proportion of wages." There were provisions regulating to the terms of contracts between workers and employers, with the rights and obligations of each minutely set forth.

"Come Seven!"

There is a certain magic in the number seven. In "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" that seems to everybody to be exactly the right number of dwarfs. Somehow the human race, from time immemorial, has come to regard seven as a mystical number, with a peculiar significance which no other number has.

Great poets and authors have written verses and books based on the magic number seven. The Bible is filled with examples, from the first chapter of Genesis, when God rested on the seventh day after the Creation, to the Revelation of St. John the Divine, with his vision of seven angels with seven vials filled with the seven plagues. Almost as ancient as Holy Writ are the legends of the Seven Wise Men and the Greek myth of the Seven Pleiades. The Seven Wonders of the World have been traditional for thousands of years.

In the teachings and traditions of the Church we find the Seven Chief Virtues contrasted with the Seven Deadly Sins, the legend of the Seven Sleepers of Ephesus and the Seven Champions of Christendom. In the theological system of the Jewish Cabala there are Seven Heavens; and the list might be extended interminably.

We don't know, and we have never found anyone who does know, why the number seven should figure so prominently in the folklore and legends of all races. But we are firm believers in the magic of the Seven Dwarfs. To bring a fairy-tale to life and make real personalities out of colored pictures is something that even the legendary magicians of ancient days never did.

Paid Last Tribute to Lachute Mills Citizen

The Late John Cruise

A large number of friends paid final tribute last Sunday to the memory of the late John Cruise, Sr. The funeral service, held at his home in Lachute Mills, was conducted by Mr. Tompkins, assisted by Rev. F. Dyson of Windsor and Rev. S. J. Pike of Brownsburg.

Mr. Cruise was born in Dalesville in the year 1871, the son of the late Peter Cruise and Margaret Neil. He is survived by his wife and three daughters, Mrs. R. E. Carpenter of Buffalo, N.Y., Mrs. A. A. Muir of Lynchburg, Va., and Mrs. W. Hodge of Welland, Ont.; six sons, Robert of Carleton Place, Ont., Gordon Lawrence, Edgar and Lloyd of Lachute, and Roland of Granby, Que.; also three sisters, Mrs. A. Bennett of Dauphin, Man., Mrs. E. Bennett of Dauphin, Man., and Mrs. C. Merrill of Dauphin, Man.

Mr. John Cruise had been a member of Laurentian Lodge, I.O.O.F., for 44 years, and many brethren of the Order were present at the funeral. Beautiful flowers betokened the sympathy of neighbors and old friends. Pall-bearers were Mr. R. McArthur (honorary pall-bearer), Messrs. H. Barker, J. Forward (Ottawa), Peter Gordon, W. McFaul, A. Paul and J. A. Seale (Morin Heights).

Mourn the Passing of Young Rawcliffe Resident

Ernest James Stone

The death of Ernest James Stone, beloved son of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Stone, of Rawcliffe, Que., occurred on Monday, June 27, at St. Agathe Sanatorium, after a lengthy illness, borne with great patience. Deceased was in his twenty-fifth year.

Left to mourn the loss of a dearly loved son and brother are his parents, three sisters, namely, (Lottie) Mrs. G. Carr, of Ottawa, (Agnes) Mrs. F. Carrière, of North Bay, (Jean) Mrs. F. Carrière, of Kirkland, and five brothers, Earl, of Lachute, Jack, Eddie, Gordon and Alton, at home.

A largely attended funeral was held on Thursday from his home to Grenville Roman Catholic Church.

Solemn Requiem Mass was conducted by Rev. H. D. J. Brosseau. At the close, "Nearer My God to Thee" was sung by the choir.

Pall-bearers were his four brothers, Jack, Earl, Gordon, Alton, and his two brothers-in-law, Gerald Carr and Fred Carrière. Interment was made at Calumet Cemetery.

Victim of Prolonged Illness Buried Today at Montebello

Miss Alice Giroux

Miss Alice Giroux, a young lady whose personal charm and courage had won her many friends in the French-Canadian community of this town, passed peacefully away early Monday afternoon, July 4th, after an illness of nine years' duration. Through her long suffering she had undergone sanatorium treatments, and had returned from her last sojourn in hospital during April of this year.

The youngest daughter of Mrs. Arthur Giroux, proprietor of the Cosy Inn, Lachute, she is survived by her mother and two sisters, Mrs. C. Lalonde, at home, and Mrs. C. A. Lafrance, of Hawkesbury.

Miss Giroux had lived here for ten years, coming with her family from Pte. au Chêne. She was born at Montebello 28 years ago.

The funeral was held at 9 o'clock this morning, from Ste. Anastasie Church, the remains being taken to Montebello for burial.

MONTHLY SESSION OF BROWNSBURG COUNCIL

Mr. Diotte requested information from the Council as to the width of a new road at the back of the Catholic Church should be made to comply with the Council's regulations.

Mayor Ball: "We have no regulations governing making of new roads."

Secretary: "The road leading to this proposed road is 40 feet."

Mr. Wilson: "Well, the new road should continue on at the same width."

Mayor Ball: "Will some gentleman hand in notice of motion that in future all new roads be made to a width of 40 feet?"

Mr. Wilson: "It is very necessary, and I so propose — that at next meeting I shall cause to be moved all new roads be built to a width of 40 feet."

In accordance with notice of motion handed in at last meeting, Mr. G. L. McFaul moved to put into effect a by-law that blasting operations be carried out between the hours of 12 noon to 1 o'clock and after 5 p.m. only. — Seconded by Mr. L. Wilson.

A notice of motion standing in the name of Mr. Pariseau, that parking of cars on Main Street be restricted to the north side, was discussed. Mr. Pariseau was not then present.

Mayor Ball: "The gutter on that side has not yet been repaired and you cannot park there."

Mr. McFaul: "We should wait till it is asphalted, when the streets are being done."

Mr. Wilson: "The ditch is too deep at present and some water is pumped along there."

Mr. McFaul: "We have to do something about it. Cars parked in front of the gas station and, although the owner asked them to move so that he could supply gas, they refused to move."

Mr. Graham: "It is a poor deal if a man can't attend to his business."

Mr. Ouellette: "Why could he not put a 'No Parking' sign there?"

Mr. McFaul: "Who is going to obey it?"

Mayor Ball: "Not without the authority of the law behind it."

The Secretary reported he had written for portable parking signs, and was informed they are obtained from the States.

Mayor Ball: "We can get a piece of hardware and use it for a base."

Mr. Lapine: "It would be of little use. Mr. McQuat would cast them almost as cheaply."

Secretary: "I can get the signs all right, but the stands are hard to procure."

The Secretary was instructed to obtain further information.

The Secretary reported the valuation roll was now complete and open for revision for thirty days. Notices had been posted that complaints must be filed before next meeting, July 4th.

The tax collector handed in a list of names of dog owners who refused to take out a license. The Secretary was instructed to write them before taking legal proceedings.

HEON IN LIMELIGHT AT CONS. CONVENTION

On the defence question there were speeches in favor of the defence of Canada but coldness was displayed towards external obligations.

ASSAILS "CLIQUE" CONTROL OF PARTY

"Clique" control of the Conservative party all but caused a "collision" that would have sent the Quebec delegation home on Tuesday, Héon told the Convention.

Without openly mentioning the Meighen speech he told the delegates that they could "draw their own conclusions" as to what he meant, and declared that rule of the party by a clique would make it something different from what was intended by Macdonald and Cartier.

Mr. Héon's fiery speech was delivered extemporaneously in the midst of a quiet session.

"No man," said Mr. Héon, "has the right to pass judgment on French Canada until he takes into account first the history of the French-Canadians and the large contribution they have made to this Dominion. The French-Canadians were defending Canada for the British Empire against the aggressor a long time before some of those who reflect on us ever came to this country."

"If any of you are calling the French-Canadians separatists, you are all wrong, and you had better take it out of your minds right away. We are not separatists, because we appreciate British fair play and square dealing, and we expect the same fair play and square dealing in this convention that we are getting from the Empire at large."

"The purpose of this convention will be defeated if we are to be dictated to by one single person. The purpose of this convention is to evolve a policy that will be of benefit to all Canadians. The resolutions committee and this meeting are the ones who will have to decide on a policy. If the Conservative party is going to be the party of the clique, it ceases to be the party it was intended to be by its founders, Macdonald and Cartier."

"The French-Canadians here today came here with the full desire to co-operate with their English-speaking compatriots, to evolve a policy for the good of all Canada, and if we are broad-minded, we can find a happy formula. A dictator would be entirely out of place in the Conservative party."

"The danger of a collision that we saw yesterday is not passed. We are staying to the end of the convention."

Give us a policy that is good for all of Canada, a broad policy, and French Canada will respond."

No man, not even one who had been a Prime Minister, said Mr. Héon, could dictate the policy of the Conservative party.

In the English part of Mr. Héon's speech he dropped some reference to Mr. Bennett.

Golf Club Activities

Ideal weather again favored the large turn-out for last Wednesday's tournament, which took the form of a mixed two-ball foursome shingle competition. The prizes, donated by Mr. L. L. Legault, were won by Miss Margaret Scott and Rev. H. Cousens — with the runners up, Miss Shirley Hamilton and Mr. E. M. Jones, a very close second.

The Captains have decided to run a weekly men's tournament, commencing today, Thursday, at 6.45 p.m. sharp. The prize for today's event is being donated by Mr. J. R. Charron.

The Club extends a hearty welcome to prospective members. Join the crowd and Golf your cares away! Watch for further announcements.

July Meeting of the Lachute Town Council

The regular meeting of Lachute Town Council was held last evening, with Mayor A. Rodrigue, Councillors K. McQuat, J. Speight, C. Durocher, F. Deslauriers, W. J. Deacon, E. Prevost, O. Laurin and J. McGibbon present.

The following business was transacted:

A grant of $75 was made to the Lachute Brass Band.

By-law No. 146, levying a special tax to pay for the sewer built on Evelina and George Streets, was duly read and adopted.

The matter of laying a sewer on Millway Street was referred to the Board of Health, with a request that such sewer be diverted into the West River, in preference to purchasing rights in connection to the Ayers sewer system in Chatham.

There being no further business, the meeting was adjourned.

AMONG THE LOCAL CHURCHES

Christ Church, St. Andrews

St. Andrews E. — On Wednesday, June 29th, the Right Reverend John Craig Farthing, Lord Bishop of Montreal, visited this parish for the purpose of conferring the Apostolic Rite of Confirmation, which admits those confirmed into the full membership and privileges of the church.

There was a good congregation to welcome His Lordship, who were evidently impressed by the solemnity of the occasion, and by the words of admonition and instruction spoken by the Bishop.

The rector, Rev. Rural Dean Booy, assisted by the Rev. W. C. LeCras and Rev. T. Ball, conducted the service and presented the candidates.

The church was beautifully decorated by the ladies of the Altar Guild. Mrs. K. Dorion presided at the organ.

Before pronouncing the benediction, the Bishop presented each of the eight candidates with a beautiful certificate and gave a brief explanation of the emblems engraved on it. He also congratulated the rector and congregation for their work on behalf of the church and their support of the various missionary and other organizations in the diocese at home and abroad.

Fine Weather Prevailed for Presbyterian S. S. Picnic

The Presbyterian Sunday School picnic was held last Thursday afternoon on the grounds of Mr. John S. Pollock. The weather was fine and the event was a success in every respect.

A program of field sports and games began shortly after two o'clock, and lasted until five o'clock, when the summons to supper was given, and both children and grown-ups did justice to the good things provided. The ice cream stand was well patronized by the children. Small tots could be seen seated with their bottles of Coca-Cola and ice cream cones, while the old-timers found equal satisfaction in their tea and sandwiches.

After supper a baseball game was played, the smaller children enjoying a ball game of their own in another part of the grounds. Another attraction was the high swing, which was in constant use the whole afternoon. Thanks are due to Mr. Pollock for the use of his ideal picnic grounds; to J. P. McKimmie & Sons for donating the Coca-Cola; to Mrs. Robert McFaul and her staff, who so ably handled the refreshments department; to Messrs. Hugh Gall and George Calder, who directed and umpired the sports; to those who assisted with their cars to transport the children, and to all who helped to finance the prizes and other expenses.

Lakefield W.A. Picnic

Lakefield — The annual July 1st picnic, held by the Women's Auxiliary of Trinity Church, was a great success. A large crowd gathered at Tomalty's Grové, despite the threatening rain. The sports program went off in an excellent manner, with Horace G. Baugh as director. The events and winners were as follows:

Bottled News
The use of bottles to learn about sea currents is an ancient one, and it is on record that Queen Elizabeth appointed an official whose title was "Uncorker of Ocean Bottles." He was the only person allowed to open sealed bottles discovered on any English beach—and anyone else who ventured to do so did it at risk of being executed, according to a writer in London Tit-Bits Magazine. The office and title continued to the time of George III. There was a sound reason for Good Queen Bess' appointment. A bottle discovered by a fisherman on the shore near Dover contained the news that Nova Zembla, until then Russian, had been seized by the Dutch a long time before, and it was regarded as important that any such news in future should be communicated to the right quarters without any possibility of loss of time.

The Adventures of Marco Polo

Fictionized for the Screen Play by
Robert E. Sherwood

Gary Cooper in the role of Marco Polo, philandering
and battling his way to Golden China.

— In Four Chapters —

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Marco Polo, 13th Century Venetian Traveler, is sent by his father, Nicolò Polo, to the court of the Great Kublai Khan, Emperor of China, to obtain trade agreements for the Polo Brothers, Venetian merchants. Marco is a dashing, handsome young man with an eye for the ladies — and for a shrewd business deal. With his servant, Binguccio, a letter of introduction to the Emperor and a worn little bag which his father instructs him to fill with what he sees on his way, he sets out for Cathay.

Gary Cooper in "The Adventures of Marco Polo."

CHAPTER TWO

Travel in the 13th Century was slow and difficult. It was a long and perilous journey upon which Marco Polo and his servant Binguccio embarked from Venice to the Court of the Great Khan at Peking. Many months passed before their vessel reached its port of call, Acre. By camel caravan they continued on land across the vast deserts of Persia, pausing briefly to refresh themselves in the cool, fragrant climate of Balkh, which is now modern Afghanistan. From this point they ascended the plateau of Pamir, unseen before by Western eyes. Braving the difficulties and terrors of the Gobi desert — attacks by wandering border tribes, mountains, storms and snow blizzards — the Venetians pushed onward, across the Great Wall of China, toward their goal. In all, the journey took three years.

When at last they entered the gates of Peking, Marco Polo's heart filled with joy. But Binguccio's swollen feet refused to carry him further, and he collapsed in the street. It was a stroke of great good fortune that Marco and Binguccio were befriended by a kindly citizen of Peking — Chen Tsu, scholar, philosopher and chemist. He invited the weary travellers into his house to rest and share a modest dinner with his family. It was here that Marco Polo acquired two specimens for his bag of treasures — a few sticks of spaghetti, which had been staple food for the poor of China for generations, and a firecracker. The Emperor, Chen Tsu informed Marco, commissioned him to make thousands of boxes of such illuminations for holidays and festivals. But Marco Polo saw in Chen Tsu's fire powder a far different purpose: a valuable and deadly weapon in war.

To Chen Tsu's parting words of counsel Marco listened carefully. "Kublai Khan," he said, "is a good man, a just man. But he has an advisor named Ahmed, the Emperor's Minister of State. Watch out for him if you have come for any favors. It has been rumored that Ahmed seeks the throne of Kublai Khan."

Marco Polo thanked Chen Tsu for his hospitality and advice and with Binguccio proceeded to the Palace. He was astonished to find that their arrival was not unexpected. The Emperor's well-organized post system had long since informed him of their approach; swift eagle carriers had brought the news from afar. Marco and Binguccio were escorted to a luxurious apartment within the Palace to refresh themselves in sleep, to bathe and to await an audience with Kublai Khan.

Within the throne room of the Palace the Emperor was discussing with Ahmed the strategies of a proposed invasion of Japan. A huge mosaic map of the Tartar Empire was built into the floor and on it, like chessman, stood little wooden Chinese soldiers and model ships.

"We have a million soldiers and ten thousand ships," Ahmed was saying. "With you leading them, the conquest of Japan will be finished in a few weeks."

Kublai Khan was a small rotund man with a flowing mustache and fiery Tartar eyes. He was dressed in a robe of shining metal cloth heavily trimmed with sable. As he listened he munched a sweetmeat thoughtfully.

"But wait, Ahmed. You've removed our army from the West. We need it there for the rebellion in Kaidu's province."

Ahmed's lean face took on a crafty expression. "We need no army to deal with Kaidu," he said. "His Tartar barbarians can outfight our best generals. No — the greatest weapon we can use with him is — deceptive. Subtle poison!"

Kublai Khan smiled and helped himself to another sweetmeat. "I suppose you're right, Ahmed. Subtle poison. I know I can depend on you for that."

The Court Chamberlain advanced to inform the Emperor of the day's appointments. The first of these, the Persian Ambassador, was admitted. His errand was to remind Kublai Khan of the marriage contract, entered into many years previously, which stipulated that the Princess Kukachin, the Khan's daughter, would become the wife of the Persian ruler when she reached her seventeenth year. A startled look came over the Khan's face.

"I hadn't noticed," he said wistfully. "That she had ceased to be a child."

"She is a woman, Your Majesty," murmured Ahmed at his side. "A woman, may I say, of singular allure. She is fit to be a queen and — er — the mother of kings."

For a moment the Khan was silent. Then he spoke with decision. "Your Excellency, you may send word to your royal master that the Princess will embark for Persia at the seventh moon."

The Ambassador bowed low. "The Great Khan has spoken!"

The beautiful Princess Kukachin was at that moment in the palace gardens shooting with a bow and arrow. At the same time Marco Polo, dressed in a splendid suit of clothes provided by a chamberlain, was also walking in the gardens. Had he been less nimble, an arrow from the Princess's bow might have cut short a brilliant career. Marco was quick to see her fragile and exquisite loveliness. He hastened to introduce himself.

"Venice?" she inquired. "Is that one of our provinces?"

"No," said Marco. "It's a long way off. The journey here took me years. It was a terrible journey, too — full of perils and hardships that would have defeated any but the bravest, strongest man."

Kukachin regarded him with her inscrutable almond eyes. "You think you're rather splendid, don't you?"

Marco was on the point of asking the lovely haughty creature her name when the Chamberlain came to escort him to the presence of the Emperor. In the Throne Room his eyes were dazzled by the pomp and splendor of the court. At the steps to the throne he knelt in obeisance.

"You may rise, Marco Polo," said Kublai Khan. "I bid you welcome to Peking. This is Ahmed, my Minister of State. Ahmed is a Saracen — a descendant of the great kings of Babylon. He is invaluable to me in his diplomatic skill — his knowledge of the world — his uncanny ability to collect taxes. Whatever it is that you have come to Cathay for, Marco Polo, it is Ahmed's duty to see that you do not get it."

Marco smiled. "I've come for nothing, Majesty," he said lightly. "It is merely a trip — for educational purposes. Having heard of the wonders of your country, I wanted to see them."

Ahmed said dryly, "You will observe that it is very large and well fortified."

Kukachin entered the Throne Room and came to sit beside her father. "And this," said the Emperor, "is my daughter, the Princess Kukachin."

Marco could not restrain a start of surprise. Kukachin saw it and laughed.

"Yes, I know all about Marco Polo, father. He has told me everything." Kublai Khan's eyes twinkled. "Ah, Master Marco, you have already started to see the wonders of our Empire?" He rose. "Well, Ahmed, I leave Marco Polo in your care. See that his visit is interesting. And if there is any young lady of my court who captures his fancy —"

"Your Majesty is most generous," said Marco with a deep bow. He looked deliberately at Kukachin. She flushed deeply and followed her father quickly from the room.

Anthracite, Bituminous Popular Kinds of Coal

Coal generally is divided into two classes—anthracite, or hard, and bituminous, or soft. The main differences, states a writer in the Chicago Tribune, are in the amount of carbon and volatile matter each contains. The greater the amount of carbon the slower the coal burns; the greater the amount of volatile matter the faster it burns.

Anthracite coal was produced by nature in the eastern part of this country under greater pressure and heat than the bituminous coals found farther west. Pocahontas coal, one of the most widely used, is rated as a semi-bituminous coal.

The following analysis of representative grades of the various types are given by an authority:

Anthracite: moisture, 1.50 per cent; ash, 10.46 per cent; volatile matter, 3.63 per cent; carbon, 84.41 per cent; British thermal units b. t. u.'s, 13,291 per pound. In addition, there is 0.56 per cent sulphur among the constituents.

Pocahontas: moisture, 1.25 per cent; ash, 5.21 per cent; volatile matter, 19.25 per cent; carbon, 74.29 per cent; b. t. u.'s, 15,140 per pound; sulphur, 0.75 per cent.

High grade southern Illinois soft coal: moisture, 7.14 per cent; ash, 7.63 per cent; volatile matter, 32.85 per cent; carbon, 52.38 per cent; b. t. u.'s, 13,271 per pound; sulphur, 0.95 per cent.

Rhea, of Ostrich Family, Can Run 47 Miles an Hour

The rhea, a South American ostrich, which attains a weight of 50 pounds and can run up to 47 miles an hour, leads a polygamous life on the plains, according to a Field Museum authority.

Frequently there will be one male and several females in a colony. They will have a common nest in which the hens lay from 20 to 45 eggs.

Then these big matrons take turns sitting on the eggs, giving each other a chance to range for food and exercise themselves.

While the birds are not exceedingly rare, very few complete collections are to be found in museums of the world. The eggs average 1½ pounds each. The birds and eggs are unfit for human consumption.

The hoactzin is a marsh bird with habits similar to the English ringneck pheasant, except that it nests in trees.

The young of this bird, known locally as the "stinking Hannah," have two-jointed fingers or claws formed on their wing tips. These fall off after maturity. But when the young, still unable to fly, are frightened they will dive 20 feet out of their nests swim about for a few minutes, then climb a tree, with the aid of their fingers, and resume their places in the nest.

It might surprise us if we actually knew the number of people living in this community — who would make good friends if we only knew them better.

Rudolph Valentino Picture Shown in Ottawa Theatre

"The greatest lover in motion picture history," who established his right to that designation in the silent film days, was seen this week on the screen of the Elgin Theatre, Ottawa. "The Son of the Sheik," last film to be made by Valentino, is shown to the accompaniment of a new musical score, and Valentino, described as "the idol of the dreams of every boy and girl of a decade past," revives the atmosphere of desert romance and excitement, long before the noisy glamor of night-clubs and the racket of the underworld invaded the screen.

Stout Lady — I bought this dress for a ridiculous price. Neighbor — For a ridiculous figure, you mean.

"Who is that man over there snapping his fingers?" "That's a deaf-mute with the hiccups."

According to a medical man, tall slim people are the most energetic. Nevertheless, they are always longest in bed.

A famous banker says he would like to run a newspaper just for a day. And what couldn't a newspaper man do in a bank in just about an hour?

"Why did you state you were a physician when you are an undertaker?"

"I never said I was a physician. I said I followed the medical profession."

Manager: "What's the matter, Jodkins? Can't you help the customer?"

Assistant: "No, sir. He's trying to find two shoes that squeak in the same key."

Hearing someone prowling about downstairs, the timid husband bravely seized a candle and proceeded to investigate, whilst his even more timid wife buried her head under the bed clothes.

Suddenly her husband came upon a burglar, who covered him with a revolver.

"Oh, don't take any notice of me," protested the timid husband. "I'm only walking in my sleep."

BOY SCOUTS THE WORLD OVER

Rover Scouts of the Kenneth Murray Crew of St. Johns, Que., have for several years looked after the city's Great War Memorial.

A NOVEL SCOUT HEAD-QUARTERS

The Boy Scouts of Meductic, N.B., are using a novel headquarters for their summer Scouting activities. This is an old gravel pit, with corner shelters for the different patrols.

STRATFORD'S MAYOR ON SCOUTING

"In these strenuous times, when the world is constantly in a turmoil and business matters are pressing, any man who can find time to foster an organization such as the Boy Scouts is to be congratulated." Mayor Henry, addressing a conference of junior Scout leaders at Stratford, Ont.

A BIT OF STONE AGE SCOUTING

Boy Scout training in extemporizing first aid necessities again met the test when an 11-year-old Indian boy fell some 300 feet down the side of Mount McKay, near Fort William, and fractured a hip. Scouts, quickly, on the scene to render assistance, cut poles and fashioned a makeshift stretcher of their windbreakers. Lacking an axe, they cut the saplings down with sharp pieces of rock. Meanwhile, following standard Scout training, they had sent one of their number to telephone the hospital and the police.

SIR EDWARD BEATTY ON BOY SCOUTS' CONTRIBUTION TO WORLD NEIGHBORLINESS

"It is particularly pleasing to note that every year the Boy Scout Movement becomes increasingly effective as an instrument for producing better understanding between nations. It is unnecessary for a Canadian to point out to an American audience the importance of this. Our nations have set an example to the world in good-neighborliness and goodwill. No other nations can be as fully aware of the benefits which come from a thorough understanding of each other, and it is my sincere hope that the Boy Scout Movements in the United States and Canada will be blessed with good fortune in their constant efforts to bring the youth of many countries to understand each other, and substitute the goodwill which always arises from such understandings for the useless rivalries of nations." — Sir Edward Beatty in a message to the Annual Meeting of the Boy Scouts of America.

Patients Put on Feet Right After Operation

A method by which a Rumanian physician puts his patients on their feet directly from the operating table is described in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

"This new method is of inestimable advantage in time of war," the Journal's Bucharest correspondent reported on the work of Dr. Campeanu, lecturer at the University of Bucharest. "The evacuation of war hospitals thus becomes simplified by shortening the stay of patients in hospital."

The article said in the period from 1934 to 1938, 3,150 patients left their beds the day following the operation without experiencing any disadvantage.

Campeanu said patients operated on for appendicitis or hernia are dismissed from the hospital on the third or fourth day and return on the seventh or eighth for removal of sutures.

"All doctors who have experimented with getting their patients out of bed early have found motion is the means which prevents stasis (slacking of blood currents)" the article said. "Campeanu said that motion promotes leukocytosis (an increase in the white corpuscles in the blood) and that getting up immediately is a psychic as well as a physical stimulant which curtails the duration of disability."

"An assistant of Campeanu whose appendix had been removed, after having stepped down from the operating table, forthwith acted as assistant at the next operation and afterwards walked about. His recovery was prompt."

TOO MUCH PETTY POLITICS

Hansard is very informative reading, not only for the information but for the sidelights it gives on the members and the way the business of our country is done. One cannot help but realize the depth and the breadth of the knowledge possessed by both leaders. Most of the Cabinet Ministers and a few of the Members seem to know what they are talking about, but too many of them waste a fearful amount of time. Too much petty politics is played by both parties. How much you cannot know unless you read Hansard. Some of the talkative members cost the country an immense amount of money — they waste so much of the Parliament's time. When you get through reading some weeks' speeches, you ask yourself, "What have they done?" Not one single constructive piece of business. There are too many members whose chief aim seems to be to get something for their constituency instead of working for the good of the country as a whole. Small business.

A CRUSHABLE HAT

Those women with deft hands and ingenious minds who can do so much with so little, fill me with admiration. A friend showed me a hat she had just made. She was going on a trip and wanted a crushable white hat but lacked the wherewithal to buy it. Being one of those smart girls, she made one for herself. She bought one of the rolled bandeaux at the five and ten, that are so popular on the young girls to restrain their flying locks. Then she crocheted a centre with white warp and in an incredibly short time she had a close-fitting white hat that was very smart. There was a little warp left over, so she crocheted a matching bag. It was a straight piece, sewed up the sides and a zipper closed the top. The lining was a piece of white taffeta which she happened to have on hand.

EMBROIDERED BELTS

Just this week a girl showed me a belt she had bought when in Bermuda. It was made of canvas, the kind used for cross-stitch work, and embroidered in bright wools. It looked very smart with her sweater. A few days later, a sister of the girl who made the hat, showed me several belts which she had made. They were very like the belt from Bermuda, but were worked in different colors to match her several sweaters. All her belts would cost considerably less than the one which the other girl purchased and they were just as attractive. Some were patterned with bright flowers and some were worked in a conventional pattern.

WATERMELON

Somewhere in Canada we think of watermelon as a treat for picnics but seldom does it appear on the table at regular meals. It can have a definite place there, too, and as it is one of the early fruits, it should be very welcome to provide variety. Certainly you will have no trouble getting the children to eat it. If you have never used it for a breakfast fruit, just try and see if you don't like it. Don't whisper it above your breath, but it is a great help in overcoming one of the bodily conditions appearing in so many advertisements, which never used to be mentioned in polite society. See how polite I am. I didn't mention it either! It is acceptable as a fruit cup to start either lunch or dinner, or as a dessert for the same meals. If it is to be the starter, add a dash of lemon juice and a little sugar if the fruit is not dead ripe. Cut in cubes and served in a sherbet glass, is the most convenient form. As a dessert, cover the cubes with grapefruit juice, canned or fresh. Let stand in the refrigerator until thoroughly chilled. You may like to serve it with the white part removed and the red flesh cut in fingers and arranged around a mound of fruit sugar. Or you may like it in the familiar large wedges. Fill a salt-shaker with powdered ginger and perhaps some of the family may enjoy the intriguing flavor of ginger on their watermelon.

MINT JELLY

$\frac{3}{4}$ cup mint leaves, $\frac{3}{4}$ cups granulated sugar, $\frac{1}{2}$ cup vinegar, $\frac{1}{2}$ cup water, green coloring, $\frac{1}{2}$ cup pectin. Wash mint, and pack tightly in cup without removing stems. Press in the bottom of a saucepan with a masher. Add sugar, water and vinegar and mix with the mint. Bring to a boil over the hottest fire and add coloring gradually until the desired shade is reached. When the mixture boils, add the pectin and bring to a full rolling boil and boil for $\frac{1}{2}$ minute. Skim, strain out the mint leaves and bottle in sterilized jars. Seal.

SOUR CREAM RAISIN PIE

1 cup sour cream, 1 cup sugar, 3 eggs, 1 cup chopped raisins, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon cloves. Beat three egg yolks and the white of one. Add remaining ingredients and pour into an unbaked pie shell. Bake at 450 degrees for ten minutes, then reduce the temperature to 350 degrees and bake until the filling is set. Make a meringue with two remaining egg whites, beaten until stiff, then gradually adding 4 tablespoons sugar. Pile on the pie and bake until browned.

Place a hot iron to the under side of chewing gum stained fabric. When gum is melted it will wipe off with alcohol.

Leisure to Read Away

Miss Stella Floyd, who retired recently after 38 years on the Louisville, Ky., Courier-Journal, intends to spend her new leisure "reading all the books in the public library." She served the newspaper under four publishers.

Fourteen variety store chains operated 437 stores in Canada during 1937, and sold merchandise valued at $46,323,400.

AN ERRATIC PATIENT

Edward Diogenes Chase — he always insisted on being addressed by his full name, otherwise he would not reply to your question — was undoubtedly the most erratic patient whom I ever attended. He was tall, thin, and moved about with a peculiar loping walk that always attracted attention. It seemed to me that he was against the whole world. He was well read and able to bring up facts, giving dates to substantiate them, so that those who engaged with him in debates at the country store, invariably came out second best.

Gold had been found in Alaska, and Edward Diogenes Chase drew more than $2,000 from the country bank to join the great army of men who ventured into the frozen North in search of wealth. I, with others, saw him depart. Three years later, he returned with much money and the sum he deposited in the local bank caused the entire county to look upon him as the village Rockefeller.

BECOMES INVENTOR

He invented a diving-bell, with which he claimed he could go anywhere from 500 to 1,000 feet below the surface of the water, and the population of the county went broke financing it, only to have Edward Diogenes Chase drop out of sight. For twenty years no one ever heard of him. I was fishing one summer in Upper Canada when I read that Edward Diogenes Chase had wagered $5,000 that he could drop stark naked from a balloon, by parachute, in the middle of a dense woods, 300 miles from any habitation, burn the parachute after landing and with only a penknife, emerge in six months, clad in skins from animals killed by himself, and weighing fifteen pounds more than when he was dropped from the skies. I saw him sail away into space, and was told by the men in the balloon later that he dropped nude, with only two matches and a Barlow knife, and while they hovered over the place where he landed he set fire to the parachute. Four months afterwards, Chase appeared at a little Indian village clad as bargained, stronger than ever, and collected his wager.

ALONG BLOMIDON'S COASTLINE

BLOMIDON OF THE MINAS SHORE

From Wolfville, in the enchanting land of Evangeline, a wonderful drive leads to the "Look-off" on Cape Blomidon. This offers a memorable view of historic Minas Basin. To the observer at a far point on the shore Blomidon appears as a riven red bluff jutting out sharply from the coast. But from a boat on the Basin it assumes its true proportions as the outpost of a curving buttress that bears the brunt of wind and tide sweeping in past Cape Split.

Blomidon has stores of semi-precious crystals, but is richer by far in legend, and its amethysts were more prized as the beads of a god than as material for a gem dealer. On the summit Glooskap, the Micmac superhero, lived in the days of long ago. From the obscure land of his birth he sailed to Nova Scotia and landed here, anchoring his stone canoe which forthwith became an island. The entire region, we are told, owes its shape and its features to the deeds of Glooskap as he labored to defeat the plans of the evil spirits and bring blessings to Acadia.

But Blomidon, sleepily overlooking the bay of Minas, has seen no less stirring events in real history than in native folk lore. Within its view took place the early struggles of the French settlers, the later struggles between two great nations for Acadian mastery, and as a tragic climax the heart-rending scenes of the expulsion. Venerable, and laden with memories, is the promontory which the Indians called Plekteok, meaning a handspike. The name Blomidon is of rather obscure origin, possibly bestowed by early navigators long before the first settlement of Acadia took place.

SANDWICH RECIPES

Popular Sandwich

2 tablespoons butter, $\frac{1}{2}$ cup grated cheese, $\frac{1}{4}$ teaspoon paprika, $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon mustard, 1 pimento chopped fine, $\frac{1}{2}$ cup olives (chopped), salt to taste.

Cream the butter, add the cheese and seasonings and mix well. Lastly add olives and pimento. Spread between thin slices of buttered bread.

Bacon Prune Sandwich

1 cup cooked prunes, 8 slices bacon, 2 tablespoons chopped sour pickles, 2 teaspoons mustard, 2 tablespoons mayonnaise, bread and butter, lettuce.

Cut bacon in small pieces and fry until crisp. Drain off grease, combine bacon with prunes (cut in pieces), add pickle, mustard and mayonnaise and mix thoroughly. Spread between thin slices of bread, adding lettuce to each sandwich.

Egg Sandwich

2 egg yolks (hard cooked) 1 tablespoon cream, 4 tablespoons butter, 4 tablespoons grated cheese, 2 teaspoons mustard, $\frac{1}{4}$ teaspoon anchovy paste.

Mix all the ingredients and spread between slices of buttered bread, and press well together.

Toasted Mushroom Sandwich

1 lb. fresh mushrooms or 10 oz. can mushrooms, 4 teaspoons minced onion, 8 tablespoons melted butter, 12 slices bread, 2 tablespoons cream, $\frac{1}{4}$ teaspoon salt, $\frac{1}{4}$ teaspoon mustard, pepper.

Wash mushrooms and chop very fine, sauté in part of the butter until golden brown. Add cream, salt, mustard, salt and pepper. Combine thoroughly and use a filling for the bread. Butter the outside of each sandwich with some of the remaining butter and toast until golden brown in a sandwich toaster or broiler oven.

Peanut Sandwich

$\frac{1}{2}$ cup weak vinegar, 1 tablespoon flour, $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon mustard, $\frac{1}{2}$ cup sugar, peanuts chopped fine.

Combine the flour, mustard and sugar, stir it into the vinegar and cook until thick. Remove the shells and skins from peanuts and chop the meats very fine. Moisten with the cooked mixture.

HOUSE AND HOME

By Mary E. Dague
Author of Sister Mary's Kitchen

Gloves are one of the most important fashion accessories this season because they are chosen to match bags and shoes. And since the bags and shoes of 1938 are often gay and colorful the gloves perforce follow suit.

Keep your gloves immaculate with frequent washings. Of course you must be sure that the material is washable before you attempt to clean them in soap and water, but gloves that are stamped "washable" by the manufacturer can be kept fresh and soft with careful washing. Most washable gloves should be washed on the hands. Use lukewarm water and a mild soap to make a heavy suds. Rub the badly soiled spots with a soft brush. Peel off from the hands, turning gloves inside-out to wash the inside. Then rinse through two clear waters the same temperature as the soapy water, always squeezing instead of wringing to force out the water.

Roll up in a bath towel to remove excess water. Knead to work out moisture. Take out of towel, straighten out fingers and blow into glove. Pin by the wrists on a line in a warm, shady and airy place to dry.

Lucy M. Maltby has written a cook book, "It's Fun to Cook," that will help many a mother solve the vacation problem for teen age daughters. The book is written in story form and any girl who reads it will feel the urge to try the recipes. Practical suggestions and warnings scattered through the text forestall mistakes on the part of inexperienced cooks. While Miss Maltby wrote the book primarily for young girls, a bride will find the book "an ever present help."

There is nothing childish about the contents, which cover a wide range of subjects from recipes and menus to calories and diets. Illustrations and diagrams add much to the interest and value of the subject matter. The whole thing is very usable and worthwhile. A mother can feel perfectly safe in turning her daughter loose in the kitchen if "It's Fun to Cook" is part of the equipment.

Pen Friends

The idea known as the Pen Friend Scheme among members of Women's Institutes and other rural women's organizations has become so popular that a certain amount of organization has been necessary to handle the requests. From Australia, New Zealand, India, Poland, the United States, Scotland, England and Wales these connecting links of friendship are being exchanged, and better and more understanding relationships cemented. Canadian Women's Institute members are particularly favored in this interchange of correspondence, and the result is a better idea of Canada is being established in far-away lands.

IT'S A GIFT

"Mabel, dear," began her friend, "I was so sorry to hear that Mac broke off the engagement. Did you have a quarrel?"

"No," replied Mabel. "He met a girl from Aberdeen, whose birthday was on Christmas Day!"

Diviners Credited With

Finding Water With Twig

Many a farm has been saved from ruin by the aid of a man holding in his hands a bent hazel twig or even a thin bar of metal, asserts a writer in Pearson's London Weekly.

Water - courses are continually changing. A farm that was well supplied with water a few years ago may today be facing perpetual drouth. It is then that the diviner is called in. He walks slowly over the ground, the stick held bent into a bow in his hands.

Suddenly the rod twitches like a live thing, almost jumping from the hand of its holder.

"There's your water," says the diviner. He also tells you how far down you will have to dig. Boring machinery is obtained, and sure enough, at the depth forecast by the diviner, the precious liquid is struck.

Scientists are baffled by the diviners. Science can find no adequate explanation of their powers, powers which no instrument can imitate. Various theories have been put forward from time to time, but none of them satisfactory.

LAD'S FOOT ALMOST SEVERED BY KNIFE OF MOWING MACHINE

14-YEAR-OLD BOY, RESIDENT OF EAST SETTLEMENT, IS RUSHED TO HOSPITAL

Victim Reported To Be Making Good Progress

Allan Wilson, 14-year-old son of James Wilson, East Settlement, while mowing on his father's farm Monday afternoon, had his leg almost severed by the knife of the mowing machine. Young Wilson had dismounted from the mower when the knife became blocked. The team suddenly started ahead, and as the knife mechanism was in gear, the moving blades caught his left leg two inches above the ankle. The two large bones were completely severed and the lad was bleeding profusely from his injury.

Brought to Lachute, the victim was attended by Dr. J. H. Mason and later removed to the Royal Victoria Hospital, Montreal. At this stage he is reported to be making satisfactory progress.

London Firm Uses Canadian Paper Products, Says Visitor

Mr. H. E. Underhill, of Lachute, had a surprise visit this week from his brother, Mr. Frank Underhill, whom he had not seen for 29 years. Mr. Underhill came over on the S.S. Empress of Britain and returns on the S.S. Empress of Australia on July 19th. A native of London, he is a director of the New Century Publishing Company, and in a conversation with him it was learned that his firm in London are using the Canadian products of the Howard Smith Paper Company. These papers, incidentally, are made on the Ayers Limited felts fabricated here in Lachute — so there is more than a personal bond.

During his visit Mr. "Herb" Underhill is showing his brother as much of the beauties of Lachute and surrounding country as time permits.

HISTORICAL SOCY. PASS RESOLUTION OF TRIBUTE TO LATE DR. B. WALES

HEAR REPORT ON PROGRESS OF BARRACKS MUSEUM ENTERPRISE

A meeting of the executive of the Historical Society of Argenteuil was held at the Carillon Barracks, July 9th, with Dr. H. Cushing in the chair and 14 members present.

The president spoke of the passing of Dr. B. N. Wales and of the great debt the Society owes to his efforts on its behalf. The following resolution was read by Mrs. G. F. Kuhring, who moved its adoption, seconded by Mr. H. Crookes.

Resolved: That the executive committee of the Historical Society of Argenteuil County having learned with deep regret of the death of their Honorary President, Dr. B. N. Wales, desire to record their keen appreciation of all that this Society owes to the unselfish labors of Dr. Wales as founder and first president of the Society. That the members of the executive resolve, both individually and collectively, to endeavor by all means in their power to carry out in the near future the aims and purposes of the Society, to which Dr. Wales devoted the last years of his life, believing that by so doing they will erect the most fitting and lasting memorial to his work.

The president reported that Dr. M. Abbott and Professor Nobbs had had official interviews with Mr. Williamson of the Parks Division. Dr. M. Abbott, reporting progress in this matter, said that the Government was satisfied that Professor Nobbs should be engaged as architect. At a further interview with Mr. Spero, legal advisor of the Division, Dr. Abbott was informed that an agreement, with full specifications, would be sent to the president of the Society for signatures and execution.

Dr. Cushing then reported that copies of the agreement had been received by himself and Mr. Lanctôt, with a covering letter stating that, after execution of the above-mentioned agreement, and transfer of the property to the Government had been made, and the architect's plans

OPPOSES RAIL UNIFICATION OR OTHER FORMS OF MONOPOLY

Ottawa Spotlight — The National Conservative party has closed its historic convention in the capital, and its delegates from all quarters of Canada from the Yukon to Cape Breton have left again for their homes. The outstanding feature of the convention was the appointment of Dr. A. J. Manion to the leadership of the party, to succeed Mr. R. B. Bennett, who guided the destinies of the Conservative party for the last eleven years.

Dr. Manion won on the second ballot with a vote of 830, second in the running being W. A. MacPherson of Saskatchewan with 648 votes followed by Joseph Harris and Denton Massey, both with 49 votes. In the first vote Manion received 724 votes, MacPherson 475, Harris 131 Massey 128 and Earl Lawson, who retired at once from the contest with 101. The Province of Quebec solidly supported Manion.

The new leader of the National Conservative party (this is now the official title of the party) practiced as a surgeon in Fort William, served in the Great War, where he received the Military Cross at Vimy Ridge was the minister of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment in 1921. Postmaster General in 1926 and was Minister of Railways and Canals in the Bennett regime from 1930 to 1935. He is possessed of a charming personality, has the ability to make friends, has a full complement of courage, and is brilliant and lively in debate. He was considered a competent administrator of a governmental department. As to his powers of leadership, the

DOUBLE DROWNING TRAGEDY IN ROUGE RIVER

POWER DISRUPTED AND WIND DOES DAMAGE IN ELECTRIC STORM

The worst electric storm so far this season, accompanied by high wind and rain, broke over this area last Friday evening. The Gatineau Power Company's service was disrupted and part of Lachute was in darkness for an hour. Ottawa Valley towns, however, fared worse; due to a burned-out transformer and heavy branches falling over power lines, Grenville, Calumet and Hawkesbury were in total darkness all night. Several buildings were badly damaged by fallen trees, and Highway No. 8 was blocked in places west of this section. Crops were flattened by the high wind and a barn was reported badly damaged at Hill Foot, storm-center of the hurricane which swept over here a few years ago.

Season In Swing at Tyndale Camp Near St. Andrews

Tyndale House camp, run by the Presbyterian Church in Canada at Ile-aux-Chatons near St. Andrews East, is now in its full seasonal swing. A party of 36 girls returned recently to Montreal, and 48 mothers and children left the city to enjoy a camp holiday. Before the season is over hundreds will have had a similar vacation.

Since 1927 this camp has been operated in connection with the work of Tyndale House, Montreal, an evangelical social settlement of the Presbyterian Church. The present camp was bought by the committee in 1929 and the main house was built in that year. Each summer the camp

ACCIDENTAL DEATH VERDICT RETURNED BY JURY AT INQUEST

Holding an inquest at Huberdeau Sunday evening, a jury under Coroner Dr. J. H. Mason, of Lachute, returned a verdict of accidental death in the drowning of two children, Maurice Prevost, aged 13, of Huberdeau, and Jacqueline Nadeau, aged 8, of Montreal. Jacqueline arrived Sunday morning to visit the Prevost family, who reside 3½ miles north of the village. Half an hour later, at a spot behind the Prevost farm, the two youngsters had gone bathing in the Rouge River. The girl slipped into deep water and sank beneath the surface. It is reported that young Prevost went out to her assistance, but also got into difficulties. Jacqueline's brother, one of a party who were also going swimming, then plunged in to assist them, but the girl clutched him around the neck and struggling to get free it was only with difficulty that he reached shore, and he was unable to help the youngsters. Their bodies were recovered two hours later in eight or ten feet of water. The jurors heard the testimony of A. Labrosse, a young lad who had been on the river bank with the girl's brother when he attempted to rescue the children, and from G. Prevost, who had assisted in recovering the bodies.

gives holidays to those who would otherwise be without them, and men and boys as well as women and girls are included.

At Tyndale Camp the religious aspect is stressed. Campers worship at the church at St. Andrews East, and prayers are said daily both morning and evening. Campers leave with a fresh outlook of life, renewed health and strengthened character.

Among the camping activities are swimming, baseball, fishing, hiking and berrying, a camp fire every evening and picnics; three good meals a day hold a place of importance.

Through this institution children from broken homes have been brought under Christian influence and into Sunday School; youths led to the church, and adults established in the faith.

OLD RAILROADER HAS EXCITING EXPERIENCES AND A PROUD RECORD

FORMER ARGENTEUIL BOY RETIRES AFTER 48 YEARS' SERVICE WITH C.P.R.

Drove Trains Carrying Prince of Wales and Many Notables

Chapleau, Ont. — As he stepped down from the cab of Engine 2838 at the completion of his run on Wednesday of last week, Engineer W. R. McAdam, a former citizen of this county, was surrounded by friends, officials and members of his family gathered to offer congratulations at the termination of his proud record of over 48 years' service with the Canadian Pacific Railway — most of which has been spent in passenger train service. During this time he has been on the right side of the cab in practically every type of locomotive, from wood-burner to his latest charge, the semi-streamlined type used on crack trans-continental passenger trains of today.

Born in 1875 near Lachute, William Ross McAdam was the second son of another pioneer railroader, David McAdam, who had assisted in the building of the then Q.M. & O. Railway, now known as the Shore Line of the C.P.R., between Montreal and Ottawa. His brothers, J. D. McAdam and John McAdam, both of Chapleau, also have long and excellent records of railway service.

Mr. McAdam was educated here near his old home. At the early age of fourteen, he went to work on the farm in summer and in the lumber woods during winter. His first job was hauling cordwood to the Wilson Paper Mill in Lachute. He then went west to Chapleau, where in 1898 he started to work as wiper in the local shops.

ENGLISH DELEGATE AT CONSERVATIVE CONV. PRAISES FR. CANADIANS

W. BULLOCK PLEADS FOR A BETTER UNDERSTANDING BETWEEN RACES

Appealing to the Conservative Convention to foster a better understanding between the French and English-speaking peoples of Canada, W. R. Bullock, M.L.A. for Westmount, said he was one of the ten English-speaking members of the Quebec legislature and he represented about 75 per cent of the English-speaking citizens of the province.

"I would like at this time," he said, "to strike a new note — one which I believe is most essential to the development of unity and harmony — and that is the need for understanding among our people."

"The French-Canadian is tolerant, he has a respect for law and order, and has a desire to render justice to the English-speaking minority in our province. I speak from personal experience and as I learn their language, consider their views, appreciate their sentiments, I can say understanding develops, friendship increases, confidence is established, and co-operation is received, with resultant unity."

"In my capacity as a provincial member I have received nothing but kindness, and I am satisfied if this understanding continues and progresses. You, too, will find the French-Canadians a race filled with loyalty and respect towards all their neighbors in this Dominion of ours. . . . You will find a people filled with a love for their homeland, anxious to be friendly, loyal to their ideals, faithful to their friends, and awaiting an understanding with their fellow-Canadians. It is the duty and privilege of the Conservative party to build up this ideal so that the two great races shall afford each other the fullest co-operation in the development of our country."

New Record, Non-Stop New York to Paris Flight

HALVES LINDBERGH TIME

Howard Hughes, millionaire Hollywood movie producer and sportsman, on Monday completed the first uneventful stage of a world flight in his big silver monoplane "New York World's Fair 1939." Taking off from Brooklyn he landed at Le Bourget field, Paris, in 16 hours 35 minutes, less than half the time which it took Lindbergh on his solo flight across the Atlantic. Pictures show (above) the twin-motored monoplane, and (right) Howard Hughes standing between one of his navigators, Harry Connor, and his radio operator, Richard Stoddart.

submitted, the Minister is prepared to recommend to the Governor-in-Council that an agreement be entered into, under which the sum of $16,000 might be expended on the restoration and improvement of the Barracks property.

Dr. Cushing then read the agreement clause by clause, for discussion and approval. Several slight alterations were suggested and the matter was referred to Mr. Lanctôt for legal advice.

The work of choosing contractors, etc., is to be left in the hands of the building committee as appointed at a previous meeting of the executive.

Advisory Council Formed For Religious Broadcasts

Formation of a National Advisory Council on the broadcasting of religious services, scheduled to begin in October, has been announced by Gladstone Murray, general manager of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

The Council is to consist of two representatives of each of the following denominations: Baptist Church, Church of England, Presbyterian Church, Roman Catholic Church and United Church.

CBC plans to begin in October the Sunday broadcasting of half-hour religious services over the national network under the auspices of the Advisory Council, chairman of which is Rev. J. E. Ward, of St. Stephen's Church, Toronto. The honorary secretary is Rev. James Mutchmor of United Church headquarters in Toronto.

Canada's Radio Policy Is Sound, Believes Taggart

Program Executive Returns After Study of British and European Broadcasting Methods

Returning to Canada after six months' study of broadcasting methods in England and on the Continent, and as guest of BBC, George A. Taggart, CBC program executive, is convinced that the present system of nationalization is the only logical solution for the radio problems of this country.

"I feel that Canadians do not want a facsimile of any individual system," he told reporters who met him on his arrival. "Canada is sufficiently individualist and original to wish to build a system thoroughly Canadian in character," he said.

Mr. Taggart, exchanging places with Laurence Gilliam of BBC, who recently returned to England after being for six months a guest of CBC, and who is the first Canadian to go abroad on the new exchange basis between the two systems, believes that Canada has a wealth program material worthy of international broadcasting. "My study of British and European broadcasting methods," he said, "confirms a previous conviction I had that CBC is wise in concentrating on the interpretation of the distinctive personality of Canada and at the same time taking of the best in programs from other countries. The general impression abroad is that the CBC has already become a potent factor in furthering better relations both with the British Commonwealth and in the world at large."

Typhoid Most Prevalent

In the February 1938 issue of the "American Journal of Public Health," A. E. Gorman states that the Province of Quebec alone gives 66.7 per cent of all cases of typhoid in Canada — which means that of 33 epidemics 22 occurred in this province.

Nova Scotian Lights and Shadows

A lesson in the value of preserving natural beauty is written plainly across Nova Scotia's 21,000 square miles which retain an old-time charm not to be found in as great a degree anywhere else in Canada.

Three-quarters of the province remain forest clad, literally webbed with rivers and lakes; the eternal Atlantic and the mighty tides of the Bay of Fundy lap its sun-kissed shores; a wise programme of fish and game protection ensures sport for years to come; an inexhaustible supply of salmon from the ocean affords the world's best fishing in the coastal rivers each year.

The remaining one-quarter of the province is a beautiful blending of sleepy farmland, bustling cities, and secluded resorts, toned by the mellowness of age.

The province is rich in historic sites, which, because of their association with the early days of the Continent, are of peculiar interest to visitors. Annapolis Royal, Fort Anne, and the fortress of Louisbourg are among the carefully preserved places where important pages of history were written. The Park at Grand Pre shows the land of Longfellow's Evangeline as it was in the days of the Acadians.

Nova Scotia has still further appeals to the visitor—good railways, modern roads, and splendid hotels where provision has been made for all types of summer sport. Of these hotels, the best known are The Pines at Digby, open from June 24 to September 14; Cornwallis Inn at Kentville, open all year; and Lakeside Inn at Yarmouth, open from June 23 to September 8.

ENGINE FOR REAR AXLE IS PATENTED BY FORD

Henry Ford, still a prolific inventor, has patented a new "saddle" motor to be mounted over the rear axle of passenger automobiles.

The idea of a rear motor, which may result in drastic re-design of the automobile of the future just as bugs have been revamped by transferring the motor from front to rear, is not a new one, the automobile manufacturer declared.

However, he said in his patent application, the motor itself is a new development in that it can be placed in the rear of pleasure cars without upsetting their balance. In addition to being quieter, the new motor will be more efficient and will reduce repair bills, Ford contended.

In the new invention, he said, the cylinder block and crank shaft are mounted over one-half of the axle and the engine flywheel, clutch and other heavy parts are balanced over the other half with a rigid shaft connecting them.

The driving gears, connected with the two balanced halves of the engine, are located exactly at the middle of the axle.

Dust Storm Smash

Driving behind what he thought was a whirling dust storm on a Johnson County, Kansas, highway near Kansas City, Curtis A. Fisher gave his car the gas to rush through the dust in the shortest possible time. Instead, he crashed into a road sweeper and was painfully injured, cuts about his head alone requiring 10 stitches.

Worms Ate Steel Rails

Existence of a worm that ate up steel rails was reported in 1837 by a commission appointed by the German government to investigate a series of accidents near Hagen, says Steel Facts. The Cologne Gazette quoted the commission's report as saying that a thin gray worm, two centimeters long and the size of the prong of a silver fork in circumference, devoured 36 kilograms of rail in a fortnight. This voracious worm was reported to have softened the iron before eating by spraying it with a corrosive solution secreted by two glands in its head.

Longer Life for Fence Posts

Preservative treatment to prevent decay of fence posts is recommended by the Forest Products Laboratories, Ottawa. The life of fence posts depends on the species and conditions of service. Cedar is naturally durable and will last for many years, but most of the common woods are not durable and in contact with the soil soon decay. Investigations show that many years of service can be added by simple and inexpensive treatment.

Creosote oil is the best preservative and will increase the service life of non-durable posts 20 years or more. Posts may be treated (either full length or only butts) with creosote oil by heating the air-seasoned posts in hot oil, and then submerging them in cold oil. This is known as the "hot and cold tank" treatment. A cheaper, less efficient treatment consists of dipping posts in hot oil. Where a tank is not available, two brushes with hot creosote, well brushed in, will add two or three years to the life of the posts.

Twelve to thirteen years of life may be given air-seasoned non-durable species by treating the posts with a 3-5 per cent solution of a preservative salt (zinc chloride, sodium fluoride and copper sulphate) by the "hot and cold tank" treatment. This treatment is generally more effective than steeping the posts for several days in a salt solution. Freshly-cut posts may be treated by standing the butts of the green posts in a salt solution for a week or more.

OLD RAILROADER HAS

Occasional days firing the locomotive followed, and on January 2nd, 1891, he made his first main line trip firing on the old 444, taking about sixteen hours to make the trip to White River of 132 miles, this being considered good in those days.

Marred by no serious accidents, the intervening years have been replete with colorful and varied experiences. As might be expected from the characteristics of the territory through which his division runs, encounters with big game have been fairly frequent. A particularly thrilling encounter with a bull moose occurred in October some years ago. Westbound on the White River subdivision the train on which Mr. McAdam was engineer had just got into the straightaway when the headlight picked out a Monarch of the Forest crossing the track. He hesitated, glared at the onrushing train and charged straight for the unwelcome intruder. The occupants of the cab felt the impact, but the only damage was to the moose, which had every bone in its body broken. Subsequent examination revealed its tongue, one foot long, plastered to the buffer beam of the engine. Although Engineer McAdam, sitting in his cab, had seen an opposing train come to a stop within eighteen inches of his front coupler, he does not count this his most thrilling experience, but recalls an occasion when he was engineer on a train with silk and Chinese, and was approaching the wooden trestle which has since been replaced by a steel structure on the Nemegos subdivision.

Glancing across the cab he noted the look of surprise of his fireman, J. N. Burns, who yelled and jumped. Without knowing the cause he applied the brake in emergency, shut off, and saw the west end of the bridge in flames, being just in time to jump before the bridge was reached. The flames had not yet undermined the bridge, and the engine and part of the train went over, the cars containing Chinese passengers coming to rest over the burning timbers. Needless to say there was a hurried exodus of Chinese carrying their worldly possessions, and by the time Mr. McAdam had entered the car and gone through to regain his engine it was completely vacated. This was most fortunate as a moment later there was a terrific explosion from the illuminating gas used in those days, and a blast of flame shot out about 150 feet from the car. The train was later cut, and moved out of the danger zone. A bucket brigade was formed and further damage prevented. A humorous touch to the incident was provided by Brakeman Fred Mitchell, who swam the river in his clothes to notify Engineer McAdam to proceed to the next telegraph office and report.

Mr. McAdam is proud to recall that he has piloted the President's Special on many occasions, has served the company under three of its presidents, Sir William Van Horne, Sir Thomas Shaughnessy and Sir Edward Beatty, and has been engineer of trains carrying successive Governors General, the Prince of Wales, Premier Baldwin and many other notable Baldwin and many other notable Baldwin.

Engineer McAdam attributes his successful career in the main to his charming wife. "I have always maintained," he said, "that a choice of a life-partner has a great deal to do with a man's success."

"But," he added, "I could not have done much without the co-operation of those with whom I have worked. Employees and officials alike have made working for the Canadian Pacific Railway a pleasure."

Mr. and Mrs. McAdam have had eight children, one of whom, a daughter, died in her infancy, and another during the flu epidemic of 1919. The eldest, David, is one of the chief operators at Dundas station for the Hydro Electric; Percival Ross, an electrical engineer, is district superintendent for the Hydro Commission at Coniston; Beulah Matilda, a public school teacher at Birchcliff Heights, Toronto; William Lyle, an electrical engineer with Consolidated Smelters at Trail, B.C.; Lillian, a Bachelor of Household Science at the Civic Hospital, Ottawa; while Allan, the youngest, is a student in mining at Toronto University. Although he has served one term on the municipal council, Mr. McAdam has devoted most of his spare time activity to the cause of education, having served on Public, Continuation and High School Boards over a great number of years.

He was local chairman for the B. of L. E. for many years, Master of the local lodge, and attended the conventions at Milwaukee in 1906 and Columbus in 1908, later became Chief Engineer of the B. of L. E. local division, a position he still holds, and has been their representative to the Provincial Legislative Board for many years.

Since residing at Chapeau he has been a member of the Methodist and United Church, and has served on the Board for a great many years. He is also a member of the I.O.O.F. and A.F. & A.M. A sheaf of congratulatory messages from officials of the Company, and the well wishes of a host of friends follow him into retirement.

FIFTEEN SCHOOLBOYS
DISCOVERING CANADA

Winnipeg — En route to northern Alberta and British Columbia, fifteen schoolboys from eastern Canada, members of the Schools Exploration Society, passed through Winnipeg in a special C.N.R. car. The leader of the party, Nicholas Ignatieff, B.Sc., explained that the object of the trip was to acquaint young Canadians with the unexplored areas of the Dominion and to inspire them to take an active part in the further development of their country. They will be encouraged by actual contact to find their places in engineering, mining, colonization and northern development in general. From Prince George, B. C., the party will travel 400 miles by water to Whitewater Post and thence by pack train to the Cassiar Mountains, where the boys will spend three weeks. Some will go to Vancouver and some to Alaska. The group will return to Toronto on August 17.

"Ottawa Spotlight"

wheel of fortune has now given him the opportunity to put these powers to a searching test, and the record will be written from the present hour. Dr. Manion takes over the command of his party with the enthusiastic good wishes and high hopes of his friends, and subject to the limitations which are set by many interests, the good will of his political foes as well.

The resolutions endorsed by the convention, representing the basic planks of the party platform, cover a wide field. They hold that the defence of Canada can best be promoted by consultation and co-operation with other members of the Commonwealth. They oppose railway amalgamation or unification or other form of railway monopoly. They favor the institution of an unemployment insurance and retirement scheme. They are also in favor of the exclusion of Oriental immigration and the resumption of immigration from the United Kingdom, Ireland and from France when economic conditions warrant. The party will not take a stand on the question of amending the British North America Act until the Rowell Commission on Dominion-Provincial Relations has brought in its report. "This party," states one resolution re-affirming the fiscal stand of the Conservatives, "declares its continued adherence to its traditional policy of fostering and sustaining by fiscal protection Canadian labor and Canadian industry, especially the primary industries of agriculture, fishing, forestry and mining." The resolutions pledge the party to aid and encourage agriculture by preserving the home market for the Canadian farmer, by preserving the benefits already attained through the Empire, trade agreements, by restoring and putting into full operation the Canadian Wheat Board Act of 1935, and in other ways. The interests of Canada can best be served, say the resolutions, by enlarging the markets in the United Kingdom and other British Dominions. Trade agreements with other nations are also favored, but on a basis which will not impair the benefits of the Imperial pacts. To cope with the important question of unemployment, the platform endorses a comprehensive plan of federal public works, a self-liquidating housing program and a non-partisan department of the government to administer relief.

In such a large gathering, with delegates from all sections of the country representing the varied interests and points of view of the wide Dominion, differences of opinion arose on some questions before the convention. When it came to a policy of defence, a representative from Montreal offered an amendment to the proposed resolution. The amendment asked that a referendum should be taken before any troops should be sent from Canadian shores. This amendment was defeated by a standing vote, the majority of Quebec delegates and some others voting in its favor.

Mr. W. D. Herridge, apostle of monetary and economic reform, injected a sharp protest into the convention proceedings. He claimed that the platform of the party was out of tune with the needs of the times. The task of democratic government, he said, was to raise the purchasing power of the people to the potential level of productive capacity, and only in that way could economic security be achieved. This, of course, involved a measure of government planning and control of the economic and monetary systems. Mr. Herridge's amendment to the financial resolution which called for a "sane monetary policy" was defeated. The convention committee's resolution, which passed by an overwhelming chorus of "ayes" included with the sane monetary policy, the elimination of duplication in taxation and urged economy in government services.

In the main, the proceedings of the convention were characterized by a cordial unanimity of outlook, a sincere desire for a better understanding in all sections of the community and an aim for a stronger spirit of unity

ST. JEROME TO SEEK BETTER WATER SUPPLY, NORTH RIVER IMPURE

Six months' delay will be asked by the city of St. Jerome to study a scheme to use two springs to furnish drinking water to the city. The Provincial Board of Health ordered the city to stop as soon as possible using the water of the North River because it is not pure enough.

The city engineer was instructed to study a plan whereby two springs, at present furnishing part of the city's water supply, could be made to give the entire supply.

Council decided that the study of the plan would take time, and thereby instructed the secretary to write to the Provincial Board of Health asking for a delay in the execution of the inspector's order.

Property Man Will Consult Cowboys on Next Request

Unhappiest property man last month in Hollywood was a veteran at the Paramount studio who was getting together the things listed in the script of "The Texans."

The guns, hats, wagons and boot-jacks were easy, but what got him down was "Tucson bed." It seemed that the Brazos cowboys slept "Tucson bed," and there wasn't one in stock. He spent two weeks writing, telephoning, and probing in attics and junk-shops. Then he found that to sleep "Tucson bed" was to use "your back for the mattress and the ground for springs."

in the country.

During the proceedings Mr. Bennett, the retiring chief of his party, and for a five-year period Prime Minister of Canada, was presented with a portrait of himself. The portrait was unveiled on the platform of the convention before the throng of delegates in the coliseum.

Mr. Bennett, relinquishing the high office which he has held for eleven years, delivered an address which in force and scope was an impressive gesture of farewell.

CLOSING DATES FOR OTTAWA EXHIBITION LIVESTOCK ENTRIES

A complete classification for Belgian horses, now becoming more popular in the Ottawa arena, more classes for light breeding horses and farm draft animals together with a better classification throughout the live stock section of the show, feature the attractive prize list of the Central Canada Exhibition. The dates this year are August 22nd to 27th with pure bred entries closing July 30th and other entries on August 6th.

The Directors of Ottawa's big fair are making a special effort to stage an out-of-the-ordinary exhibition this year. Judging from advance enquiries and requests for prize lists, together with the experience of the early spring fairs, there is every indication that the big live stock Coliseum will be crowded to capacity. Already many new exhibitors have stated they will come to Ottawa, and more farmers in the Ottawa area than usual state they intend to exhibit.

Trotting races for five days will be a new feature and the stake class, entries already closed, promises to be outstanding in dirt track history in Eastern Canada. Seventeen horses have paid the first deposit, one of the best fields ever entered for such an event.

The famed Creatore and his band, for years so popular in Ottawa, will be back again with two free concerts daily. The same revue company that filled the grandstand to capacity last year and created the record breaking 10,000 single night attendance, will stage the 1938 "Revue of Tomorrow" each night.

Full information about Ottawa Exhibition and a copy of the prize list may be obtained by writing H. H. McElroy, Manager, Journal Building, Ottawa.

London First Introduced

Fingerprints in Trials

Fingerprints were introduced, "for the first time in history," as important evidence in a murder trial at the Old Bailey—London's famous criminal court—in May, 1905. Scotland Yard had been experimenting for ten years with them and had some 80,000 fingerprints in their files, but never before had this "new peril to law-breakers" (as it was referred to in the newspapers) been used in a murder trial.

The accused were two brothers named Stratton. They were charged with the murder of an old couple. One of the brothers had left a thumb-print on a cash box. When the prosecution announced that the police were going to try to convict on that evidence, "there was a thrill round the court," to quote the authors of "King's Counsel: The Life of Sir Henry Curtis-Bennett." Curtis-Bennett, then a young lawyer, appeared for one of the brothers.

The judge did not take to the fingerprint system wholeheartedly, and seemed to want murderers in the future to use ink when they left their impressions on cash boxes.

"When proper impressions are taken, the system is extremely reliable," he instructed the jury; "but it is a different thing to apply it to a casual mark made through the perspiration of a thumb. The evidence is not so satisfactory as if, for instance, the murderer had taken some ink and made a definite impression. But to a certain extent, the evidence is corroborative. The jury will not like to act on this evidence alone."

The brothers were hanged.

R.C.M.P. ASK DIRECTIONS, FIND PAIR IMPLICATED IN STILL AT ST. BENOIT

How they questioned two men in a truck to ask directions to a barn they wanted to investigate on suspicion of housing an illicit still at St. Benoit, how one of the men fled and the other was captured and the truck was found to contain parts of the still they were going to investigate, was told in court at St. Jerome last Thursday by officers of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. Joseph Dufour, alias Roger Dubois, was arraigned on charges of being in possession of parts of the still and illicit alcohol. He pleaded guilty to each charge and was sentenced to a fine of $200 costs, or three months, on the charge of having the parts of a still, and to a fine of $100, costs, or three months on the charge of being in possession of alcohol.

Constables Desaulniers and Fregeault, of the R.C.M.P., told the court they had gone to St. Benoit and were seeking a barn where they had been informed a still was hidden. On the road they stopped a truck containing two men to ask the way to the barn. To their surprise one of the men jumped out of the truck and fled. They held the second man, and searched the truck. They found the parts of a still which had been used. They also found alcohol.

Later they located the suspected barn and discovered that there had been a still there. When they reached the barn three men were inside. They entered and closed the door. To their surprise, however, the occupants vanished. Later investigation showed that there was a 40-foot tunnel under the rear wall of the barn to a nearby swamp where automobiles had been left. The constables said there would be other arrests in the case shortly.

Saw Oxford Group Film

The Canadian premiere of "Youth Marches On," a factual film dealing with a youth camp in Regina and an Oxford Group house party in England, was held recently in a committee room in the House of Commons. The picture follows a group of 25 young Canadians from the camp to England and shows the "new spirit" of the Oxford Group movement.

The film further demonstrates how work can be made a pleasure if one cultivates the Christian philosophy of life, and if "God rule" is given first place.

Letters of invitation to see this picture were forwarded to delegates and their friends attending the Conservative convention in Ottawa. A special morning showing of the film was given at the Capitol Theatre, and was enthusiastically attended.

CHAIN STORE TAX IMPOSED

In accordance with privileges granted in a bill by the last session of the Quebec Legislature, the town council of Drummondville, Que., has imposed a special tax on each chain store branch doing business in the town. The tax will be $200 per store from May 1, 1938, and $500 after May 1, 1939.

DISPOSING OF TIN CANS

What to do with tin cans in rubbish is a problem of concern in many cities. One method used is to "de-tin" the cans, recovering the tin, and baling de-tinned metal, both of which are sold. Another method is to bale the cans and ship them to copper smelters for use in the leaching process of extracting copper from the ore; the baled cans are sold as scrap metal. Some American cities sell their tin cans to salvage companies, while others put the cans to use in the manufacture of the deodorant, ferrous chloride, in which case the city may either do the manufacturing itself or sell the cans to a private concern.

NO TAX—NO SERVICE

According to the Christian Science Monitor, garbage removal was discontinued and fire protection withdrawn from forty-eight tax delinquent homes and business buildings in Fort Myers, Fla. The same source of information states that since the campaign started, two large property owners have paid a total of $20,000 in back taxes. Of the forty-eight properties listed, forty-two are owned by one realty corporation. The fire chief has notified the delinquents that no fire protection will be provided and the health department has stated that owners will be arrested unless their garbage is properly removed.

WAYS TO UNTANGLE TRAFFIC

A permanent ban on parking on Main Street may result from the nation-wide search by American cities for a way to keep busy thoroughfares free for moving traffic. While diverse remedies for the congestion caused by automobile traffic are being tried, several cities already have turned to off-the-street parking space as the best solution. For motorists who do not run their cars into commercial parking lots or garages, the various cities are now (1) using metered parking, at a small hourly fee which takes care of the short-time or transient parker; (2) requiring off-street parking facilities before issuing building permits for theaters, office buildings and apartments; (3) renting or taking over through tax-lien space for municipal parking lots.

PROTEST AGAINST USE OF FIREARMS BY POLICE

Necessity for use of firearms by police was questioned at a recent meeting of the board of directors of the Children's Service Association of Federated Charities in Montreal. Recent shootings by the police were discussed, particularly the case of two juveniles who were wounded while allegedly resisting or evading arrest.

The following resolution was passed unanimously: "The directors of the Children's Service Association . . . question the necessity for the use of firearms by police in order to effect arrests, except in cases where the officer's life is clearly endangered by the resistance of the suspect, and respectfully request that the Director of Police take this matter into serious consideration."

OBEDIENT

The amateur band practice was in full swing, but something had gone wrong. The conductor glared at the cornet player.

"Why on earth did you leave off playing just as soon as we got to the chorus?"

"Well," retorted the cornet player, "on my music it says, 'Refrain,' so I did."

NO SUNDAY TRUCKING

Four Philadelphia truck drivers were arrested for taking their families for a ride on Sunday. An ordinance enacted in 1794 and still in force makes it unlawful to do work of any kind on Sundays. Although the truck owners protested they were not working but merely out for pleasure, the arresting officer ruled the modern motor truck is built for work and anyone out in a truck on Sunday is, technically, if not actually, working.

LESSON TO NATIONS

A good example of international friendship and the desire to live together in peace and harmony is demonstrated by the towns of Calais and Milltown on the American side in Maine and St. Stephen on the Canadian side in New Brunswick. During 1937, the St. Stephen fire department, only one of the three towns having fire fighting equipment, helped put out 60 fires in the two American villages.

DRIVERS UNDER 18 HAD WORST RECORD ON ONTARIO ROADS

Drivers less than 18 years old were involved in more accidents and in more fatalities, proportionately, than those of any other age group in Ontario last year, provincial highways department officials have revealed. The second worst record is against drivers of from 18 to 24 years.

On the basis of fatalities in accidents, drivers rated as follows in age groups last year (No. 1, the best record):

- 1—Drivers between 41 and 54.
- 2—Drivers between 55 and 64.
- 3—Drivers 65 and older.
- 4—Drivers between 24 and 40.
- 5—Drivers between 18 and 24.
- 6—Drivers under 18.

MEDICAL ASSOCIATION SEEKS RULING TO STOP POLLUTION OF RIVER WITH CITY SEWAGE

Residents Threaten Suit

Insistence that the City of Montreal cease polluting the Riviere des Prairies through the dumping of sewage into those waters was the request made recently to Hon. Albini Paquette, head of the Quebec Ministry of Health.

The demand comes from the Montreal Medical Association, French-speaking section, which passed a unanimous resolution that the pollution cease; the Association fears that otherwise there would be an epidemic of infantile paralysis such as plagued Ontario last year.

It was pointed out that sewer water from a tubercular institution falls into the river and is a source of danger and infection. It was emphasized also that the small municipalities for some score of miles around the City of Montreal have consistently protested against this state of affairs.

A few years ago the City of Montreal was ordered by the Provincial Department of Health to take measures to stop pollution of the Riviere des Prairies.

The city bought a piece of land to build a sewage disposal plant, but the matter has not gone further. For some years, aldermen and city officials have made trips to various cities in the United States inspecting plants there, and there has been a report made to the city by experts on construction of such a plant.

Last year, residents of the district threatened suit against the city for damages if a plant were not built. In their notice to the city, reference was made to the provincial health order and the city's non-compliance.

Mrs. W. J. Todd, Respected Storekeeper for 45 Years, Is Called by Death

The death of Mrs. W. J. Todd occurred at her home in the West End of this town early Wednesday morning.

Born in Lachute in 1863, Mrs. Todd was the daughter of Hugh Fraser Sr. and Mary Todd, and had been in business for upwards of 45 years, until overcome by general weakness which had confined her to bed for the last six months.

Left to mourn her death are one brother, George Fraser, of Lachute; a half-sister, Mrs. (Rev.) Cliff, of Kingston, and her half-brothers, Guy and Wilbur Fraser, of Montreal.

The funeral takes place on Friday afternoon, Rev. W. B. Rosborough officiating.

Mrs. Maurice Champagne Paid Final Tribute

The funeral of Mrs. Maurice Champagne, née Ayers (Hattie Olive), was attended by relatives and friends at St. Julien Parish Church last Saturday. Mrs. Champagne leaves to mourn in addition to her husband, Mr. Maurice Champagne—four children; her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Ayers; her brother, Mr. Gilbert Ayers; her father-in-law and mother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Adélard Champagne; her uncles and aunts, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Ayers, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Bédard, Mr. and Mrs. Geoffrey Bédard, Mr. and Mrs. Aquila Bédard, and brothers-in-law and sisters-in-law, Messrs. Aurèle, René and Robert Champagne, Misses Rita, Pauline and Raymonde Champagne.

The pall-bearers were cousins of the deceased, Messrs. Thomas, Léonard and Richard Ayers, Léonard and Jacques Bédard, Ernest Deslauriers.

Rev. Louis-Eugène Cloutier, curé of St. Julien Parish, officiated at the solemn requiem High Mass and was assisted by the Rev. Father P. Laframboise, o.m.i., and Rev. E. Vézina, vicar of Ste. Anne of Ottawa, and among the clergy present were Canon J. D. Binette, representing the Archbishop of Montreal; Father Hector Leprohon, c.s.v., of the College of Terrebonne; Father P. C. Dumontier, c.s.v., Vice-Superior of Joliette Seminary; Rev. A. Bazinet, of St. Philippe; Rev. Cloutier, of Terrebonne; Rev. Ernest Labelle of Lachute; Rev. J. A. Champagne, of St. Francois Solano of Montreal; Rev. Roméo Raymond, Professor of St. Laurent College; Rev. C. A. Gareau, vicar of Terrebonne; Father Jean Jacques Corbeil, of the White Fathers.

The choir was under the direction of Mr. Arthur Lapierre, choir-master of St. Stanislas of Montreal, who executed Perosi's Requiem Mass. The soloists were Messrs. Georges Levesque, Alfred Parent, Angelo Auclair, Albert Lapierre, Emile Langlois, Germain Lefebvre, D. R. Drouin, Mr. Eugène Lapierre, doctor of music, assisted at the organ.

Last Member of Pioneer Dunany Family Died at Louisa, Que.

The death of John Murphy occurred at his late residence in Louisa, Que., on July 12th after a lengthy illness.

Mr. Murphy was born in Dunany in 1885, and lived there until 1931, when he moved to Louisa. He was the son of the late John Murphy and Jane Beattie. He lived alone after the death of his parents, and was of a quiet and distant disposition. One cousin, James Beattie, of North River, is left to mourn his passing. The funeral was held on Wednesday at St. Aidan's Church, Louisa, and was conducted by Rev. C. W. P. Baugh. Interment took place in Louisa Cemetery. The pall-bearers were James and Grant Beattie, Robert Gain, Andrew and Clarence Neill, and Orrin Gordon.

Orange Order Held Service at Thomas' Gore United

The 248th anniversary service of the Orange Lodges of this county was held in the Thomas' Gore United Church last Sunday. The Rev. W. B. Rosborough, B.A., B.D., officiated. Orange Lodges represented were the L.O.B.A. No. 943, of Lachute; L.O.L. No. 2818, of Morin Heights; L.O.L. No. 716, of Shrewsbury; L.O.L. No. 717, of Louisa, and L.O.L. No. 2231, of Lachute. Bro. Donald Fletcher, with his bagpipes, gave a number of musical selections. A parade was held before the church devotions, and an Orange Young Briton, Bro. John Galbraith, headed the procession, carrying the Union Jack. The Rev. Mr. Rosborough spoke on "The Fundamental Principles of Protestantism."

Lachute Bandsmen Attended Provl. Rally at Three Rivers

The regular band concert was held in the park bandstand here last Thursday instead of Saturday, to enable the bandsmen, under their director, Alex Guenette, to participate in the Quebec Provincial Amateur Bands Association meet at Three Rivers during the week-end.

Speaking at the Association's annual banquet, Premier Maurice Duplessis told more than 1,000 band members, representing 15 Quebec towns and cities, they "bring a few rays of sunlight to a hard-working people in times of stress."

The premier said the musicians were performing a work of social service and playing an "apostolic role in setting an example of success through harmony to our people."

IN MEMORIAM

McNEIL — In loving memory of our dear daughter, Alma, who passed away July 16th, 1937.

A shadow rests upon our home,
We miss her smiling face,
Where'er we turn, where'er we go,
We see her vacant place.

God is good, He gives us strength
To bear our heavy cross,
He is the only one who knows
How bitter is our loss.

Loved and remembered always by her mother, dad, sisters and brothers.

GORDON — In loving memory of our dear mother, Mrs. Robert Gordon, who passed away July 14th, 1935. "Gone but not forgotten." Inserted by the family.

recalcitrant students. How we cowed before that stern mien, as thoughts of the birching we were about to receive flashed across our guilty consciences. But the convention delegates soon woke up to the fact that they were no longer schoolchildren and were now in the long pants stage. Mr. Herridge was filled with pity for the leaderless flock and asked God to help them. We thought it was no going to be so bad after all. He next turned to results of the labours of the resolutions committee and termed them a pile of junk, and forthwith proceeded to add another piece to the pile. But we had regained some of our former confidence by this time, so we refused to let him add any more to our pile. His resolution on monetary reform may have had merits; but his approach had roused our ire and we would have none of it.

At last the big event arrived. As Mr. George Héon told us, "The leader does not make the party, it's the party makes the leader." I don't know whether George read that in Shakespeare or somewhere, or if it is original, but it sounds pretty good. So the party proceeded to elect a leader. We all crowded up to the platform to shake hands with Dr. Manion, and the 1938 Conservative Convention slipped away down the corridors of history.

For 1,800 years of the Christian era man was the more brilliantly costumed of the sexes.

When fretting the hardest we often achieve the least. We need to learn more how in quietness to let the universal life direct us.

Don't carry around a lot of opinions with which to start an argument. Facts are better.

Pretty Wedding at St. Andrews

Oswald-Woods

St. Andrews E.—A pretty wedding took place at the United Church on Saturday evening, July 9th, when Miss Bessie Woods, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Woods, was united in marriage to Mr. Michael Newton Oswald, of Rawdon, Que. Rev. J. A. Mowatt officiated.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a white satin dress and long veil and carried a bouquet of Johanna Hill roses. She was attended by her sister-in-law, Mrs. Geo. Woods, as matron of honour, wearing a blue sheer dress.

The best man was Mr. Ernest Woods, brother of the bride. During the signing of the register, a solo, "Oh Promise Me," was sung by Mr. Geo. Ross. The church was decorated with a profusion of garden flowers.

The bride's going-away dress was navy blue flowered georgette with white shark's skin jacket and white accessories. After a reception at the bride's home, Mr. and Mrs. M. N. Oswald left by motor for a honeymoon stay at Ste. Agathe, Que.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mrs. Oswald, mother of the groom; Mr. Albert Oswald, the groom's brother; Mr. Wilfred Oswald, of Rawdon, a cousin of the groom; Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Ross and son, Grant, of Montreal; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Woods, of Sherbrooke; Mr. and Mrs. George Woods, of Montreal; Mr. Elmer Tinkler, of Rawdon.

Golf Club Notes

The weekly mixed tournament was held on Wednesday and a two-ball foursome played for prizes donated by the president, Mr. R. C. Rogers. Two couples were tied, necessitating an extra hole being played, which provided a thrill for the gallery spectators. Mrs. J. Galbraith and Sydney Drew emerged the winners over Mrs. Hardie and Rev. H. Cousens.

Tonight is the weekly men's tournament and a large turnout is anticipated.

Saturday, July 16th, is the date set for the qualifying round of the Jones Cup. Handicaps will be allowed, and the lowest sixteen net scores move into the second round.

The next mixed tournament is scheduled for Wednesday, July 20th, and will be a putting competition for Mr. C. Tremblay's prize.

The Conservative Convention

The "Ayes" and The "Nays"

By a Delegate

Some individual with a flair for figures has established that four hundred thousand words were sent over the wires to the various newspaper offices, detailing the activities of the convention. I have no doubt. If one is to judge by the long lines of pressmen stretched on either side of the speaker's platform, the wonder is there were not more. Cameras twinkled like fire-flies, shooting from every possible and many impossible angles. Speakers came forward and strutted their brief hour before the assembled multitude, and presently faded to be forgotten, perhaps for all time, in the shifting scene which denied or affirmed their point of view.

Delegates were herded into sections or cubicals like the various breeds of stock at an agricultural show. Why the provincial segregation, I was unable to discover, but I have no doubt there was some good and useful reason. The selection committee — I suppose there was a selection committee — or whoever devised the system of demarcation, might have devised them according to their heights, and produced some very nice results. The speaker could then dramatically gesture to "my friends of five feet nine" while giving a severe castigation to the "mites of five feet six." The system has some good points, so I pass it on to the Liberals for use at their convention.

It's wonderful all the important questions which can be settled at a convention of this kind. Some young man from British Columbia settled the unemployment question, at least as far as it concerns Canada, in the amazing time of ten minutes. All that was needed was some action, and the whole thing was accomplished. Of course, he didn't say what action, but that was a mere detail. The general principles were all he was dealing with. The railway question was all settled too, but the chairman said the "Nays" had it, and the whole railway system was put into co-operation. Thus ended another pipe dream.

It's very strange how impressions which you have carefully built up over a number of years, and which you cherish so carefully and fondly, get all shot to pieces in a few moments at a convention. You can sit with a feeling of dismay when you realize the disillusionment which begets you. Personalities which your imagination conjured up as bordering on the supernatural become mere tinsel under the spotlight of closer association. On the other hand, a veritable beacon of enlightenment flashes before your view in the person of some individual, whom you had regarded as of very ordinary caliber. A convention is a series of resolutions and amendments. If you want something done, all you have to do is "make a motion," "pass a resolution" or "tender a proposition." Of course, the other fellow may not agree with you and he crosses your path by "proposing an amendment," then it's a question of "Ayes" or "Nays," unless some cross-grained individual says "a plague on both your houses" and hands in an amendment to the amendment — with the result that by the time the tangle is straightened out you don't know whether to say Aye or Nay. The chances are you go home and consider it and discover you voted against yourself. There is nothing you can do then but wait till the next convention, and perhaps you won't vote at all.

Such things had better be taken in good spirits. Humour plays a big part in convention doings. MacPherson pulled from away down the course into second place with one humorous speech. His approach was almost perfect. An illustration of the reverse effect was the speech of Hon. W. D. Herridge. Mr. Herridge came upon the platform in a manner reminiscent of the village school-master confronting a group of

Radio Shortens Crime Waves

The Public Enemy works fast and subtly, and the weapons with which the community fights him must be equal to the situation. The most potent weapon a city can place in the hands of its police force today is radio. Cities using police radio system in Canada report that: (1) Arrests have substantially increased. (2) Crimes have decreased in number. (3) Criminals are fleeing cities which use radio cars. (4) Economies have been effected in police service and higher efficiency has been established. . . . The above photograph gives an idea of the radio patrol development in Montreal.

The Adventures of Marco Polo

Fictionized for the Screen Play by
Robert E. Sherwood
Gary Cooper in the role of Marco Polo, philandering
and battling his way to Golden China.
— In Four Chapters —

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE:

Marco Polo, famed 13th Century Venetian traveler, is sent by his father to the court of Kublai Khan in Peking to procure valuable trade agreements. After a long and perilous journey Marco and Binguccio, his servant, reach their destination and are welcomed cordially by the Emperor and his crafty minister of state, Ahmed. Marco also meets Kukachin, the Khan's lovely daughter, and falls in love with her.

CHAPTER THREE

Marco Polo's interest in the Princess Kukachin did not escape the sharp-eyed Ahmed. It might be well, he reflected, to acquaint the Venetian with the dangers of such interest. Besides, he had plans of his own for Kukachin, and he was not the sort of man who liked to see his plans disarranged. Having been instructed by Kublai Khan to entertain his visitors, he took them first to his own apartments, connected with the palace by a drawbridge, and showed them his chamber of horrors. Here, behind a tapestry curtain, ravenous vultures were chained to a perch. A trap door in the torture chamber revealed a sheer drop of fifty feet where Marco Polo could distinctly hear the growls of hungry tigers in the cavernous darkness below. Ahmed watched Marco's face as the Venetian witnessed the death of a spy from the camp of Kaidu, the rebel chieftain. He indicated with pride his trusted executioners, two enormous, ugly-looking guards named Tootai and Bayan.

"You came here to be educated, Marco Polo," said Ahmed at length, smiling with satisfaction. "And this is the first lesson."

A week had passed since Marco Polo and Binguccio had come to the court of Kublai Khan. A week that had, with the exception of Ahmed's initiation into Oriental persuasion, passed smoothly and pleasantly. On the seventh evening Marco was amusing himself playing with some of the Khan's firecrackers.

"Binguccio," he said, "With enough of these one man could shake the earth."

"I don't doubt it," replied Binguccio, winking as the cracker exploded. "But don't you think we might shake ourselves — home? I don't like the looks of this fellow Ahmed."

"You must learn the Chinese philosophy about time, Binguccio. What is a day? One 365th of a year. What is a year? Only a hundredth part of a century. We have all the time in the world."

Marco rose and strolled into the Palace gardens. Here, at the edge of the lotus pool, he found Kukachin. Her robe was of silver cloth and there were flowers in her hair. She turned with a start when she saw him.

"Strangers are not supposed to come into these gardens uninvited," she said.

"But you need some one to protect you from the powers of darkness."

"I am a Princess. Even the powers of darkness are afraid of me."

"Are there," inquired Marco, "no men in this Empire who forget you are a Princess — who want to take you in their arms and make love to you? Do princesses in this country ever marry ordinary people?"

"Sometimes."

"Good!" said Marco. "And will you love and marry the man you choose?"

"I shall marry a king," replied Kukachin haughtily. "When I was in my cradle I became engaged to be married to the King of Persia. I shall start on my journey westward at the seventh moon."

Marco looked heavenward at the moon and sighed wistfully. "If I were the King of Persia, I should be very impatient."

They had been strolling, as they spoke, through the paths, and presently Kukachin stopped at the shrine of a white stone goddess. The night air was heavy with the scent of strange flowers. Strains of music floated out from the Palace.

"This is the Shrine of the Moon Goddess," Kukachin explained. "To whom all maidens pray that they may find a lover who is faithful and gallant and strong."

Marco watched the moonlight play upon Kukachin's delicate face, carved as though in white alabaster. "I think," he said, "that I should say goodbye now. There are warnings of danger sounding in my heart. I've heard such warnings before—though never so strongly. You see — you may be a princess—but when I look into your eyes, I see deep beauty—when I touch you, I feel warm life. And I've never been one to regard such things calmly."

His eyes looked deeply into Kukachin's. His hands closed on her arms. "Before I go — I wonder if you would grant me one small favor?"

"You want some token—my scarf, perhaps—for remembrance?"

Marco smiled. "No. I should like to be allowed to kiss you goodbye."

The Western custom of kissing was unknown to Kukachin but she agreed to grant the favor. Marco kissed her once, gently, and again, passionately. Kukachin thought it a delightful custom. She asked if she might try it herself. She put her arms about his neck and her eyes closed.

"Is this right? With my arms?" she whispered tremulously.

Marco said, "Yes — I — I think you're learning!"

Kukachin looked up at the Moon Goddess, then at Marco. He kissed her again.

Meanwhile, in Ahmed's apartments, the Minister of State was in conference with Tootai. Within the closely guarded chamber they could speak freely.

"The rebellion in Kaidu's province," said Ahmed, "is getting dangerous. We must put a stop to it — before the Emperor learns the truth about taxes we've — he paused and grinned — 'we've borrowed from those barbarians. Disguise yourselves as Tartar tribesmen and join Kaidu's army.'"

"And kill him?" supplied Tootai eagerly.

"First you will spread discontent in his army. Make him believe that he is the one who is stealing the tax money. Then — perform your specialty. With Kaidu dead, his army will split and the rebellion will be broken."

Tootai's beady eyes glittered. "And what of Kublai Khan? When can I perform my specialty on him?"

Ahmed said sharply, "I'll attend to him, Tootai. You start for the West at once. If all goes well I shall be your Emperor when you return — and the Princess Kukachin will be my wife. And you will be a nobleman."

It was one of Ahmed's proudest boasts that nothing happened within the Palace of which he was not aware. When Bayan brought him word that Kukachin and Marco Polo had met again in the garden, he hurried at once to the Emperor. Kublai Khan summoned the Venetian.

"You have an adventurous spirit, my friend, and I think I can provide exercise for it. I want you to go to Kaidu's camp in the West, enter it as an ordinary traveller, co-operate with our secret agents and help them to kill him."

Marco glanced at Ahmed, instantly aware that the scheme was of his devising.

"I have no experience in murder, Sire," he said with an impassive face.

"That is not necessary," said the Khan. "We merely wish to make use of your remarkable gifts for intrigue." As Marco was silent, he continued, "When you were twenty miles outside of Venice, Marco Polo, we knew your errand. And to put it in your blunt Western fashion, if you will do us this favor — upon your return, you will be that much nearer your trade agreements."

The audience, Marco realized, was at an end. He went immediately to Kukachin's apartments to say goodbye. She clung to him, trembling and frightened.

"Ahmed is trying to get rid of you," she said. "He'll never let you come back alive. He's afraid of you — because you're strong here —" she touched his arm, "and here —" she touched his forehead — "and here," she touched his heart.

Although he realized there was doubtless much truth in what Kukachin said, it was not in Marco to feel fear. His adventurous spirit laughed at dangers, even courted them. He Affectionate Horse Is Sought for Benny

Jack Benny's shoulder is going to be a resting place for the head of a tame horse in his next Paramount picture, "Artists and Models Abroad" — if the horse can be found by the studio property department.

Russell Pierce, of the property department, has had many a difficult assignment, but he thinks this one tops them.

The action calls for an equine which will trail after Benny wherever he and Joan Bennett go, according to Pierce, who disclosed that he will be open for "auditions" and demonstrations for the next few weeks, to any horses who care to come in.

If Disney Followed Advice He'd Still Be An Also-Ran

BUT "SNOW WHITE" CARTOON GOES OVER BIG

Walt Disney was advised not to attempt a feature-length production but he ignored the warning and produced "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," the famous cartoon which will appear here at the Rex and Capitol theatres next week. . . . But this warning practically assured its success, for the creator of Mickey Mouse has been advised against taking practically every successful step in his life.

Years ago, when he decided to go into business for himself, he was warned not to. When talking pictures arrived, people told him he'd better not do his animated cartoons in sound because it was just a passing vogue. He didn't think so.

When he started doing his short subjects in color, there were many who told him that he shouldn't do it — that it was an expensive and risky venture.

When he decided to do the story of "The Three Little Pigs," thought by many to be his most successful picture, his co-workers told him the thing would be a flop, but Walt went ahead anyhow.

Naturally, when he announced that he was going to make the first feature-length picture, not only many of his staff but also people outside the studio said it would not be a success.

But his co-workers soon became wildly enthusiastic about the seven-reel "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs." They worked on it for three years, and never has any motion picture received such universal and enthusiastic acclaim. Disney has since started on his second feature, "Bambi," the story of a deer.

Youth Hostel Movement Comes to Canada

New impetus is being given to hiking in Canada by a movement known as the Youth Hostels Association, already registered in a number of countries. The aim of youth hostels is everywhere the same — to enable young people to enjoy hiking and cycling in the beautiful outdoors of Europe and North America; to enable youth to find wholesome companionship along the road, travelling inexpensively and acquiring a knowledge of their neighbor's land and customs as well as their own. One of the codes of the hikers is that they pledge themselves to leave the countryside unmarred as a result of their travel in it.

The youth hostels idea began in Europe in 1911, as the practical dream of a German schoolmaster. Since its inception, youth in millions upon the open roads of Europe have advanced youth hostelling from a national to an international influence.

So far Canada has but a dozen or more hostels and a scant hundred members. The first youth hostel in Canada was opened in the foothills of Alberta, and a total of twelve now form a chain from the E. P. Ranch to the town of Banff in Banff National Park. In 1937 Canada was the twentieth country to be admitted to the International Youth Hostels Association, and extensive organization work is now being carried on to extend the movement from the Maritimes to British Columbia.

TOO MANY VISITORS

To the woman in a summer cottage or on a farm, summer brings its problem of casual visitors. Too many people are thoughtless and forget that they are not the only friends who may be visiting. We all like to see our friends but when we are worked to death trying to feed them, they are not so popular. There are friends we are always glad to see but others we sometimes wonder whether it is us they want to see or whether they want a day at the beach. If it is possible, do not come uninvited for that special time or at least do not come unannounced. There are some very thoughtful visitors and I have had my share of them. One such would write me, "We are coming to see you on Sunday and I will bring a cooked roast and a cake." I knew that I did not need to prepare meat nor cake. Most people bring along something but you never know what it is, you have to get things ready just the same. Another friend never knew beforehand just when she could come but she always brought along a picnic supper. Often she did not know herself in time to make any special preparation but she would pack cans of salmon or tuna and have lettuce and tomatoes and some sweet biscuits. Sometimes she brought veiners and rolls but it was always something that provided a quick, easy, substantial meal. Supplies are not always easy to get and the unexpected guest is a worry. I say "guest" but it is usually a car-full. The farmer's wife has the same difficulty. There is always the other side too. Many a Toronto family does not come home until after the Exhibition to avoid a houseful of country friends. Visiting is easier in this day of cars and we should all be careful not to impose.

MINIATURE TOILETRIES

A woman seems to need so many things to go away even for a week-end that the packing is often a problem. It is a good idea to assemble your toilet needs in the small sized packages available. The drug-stores or the five-and-ten carry what are known as trial-size. Many of them are put up in both tubes and bottles and for travelling tubes are more convenient. Collect the things you need in these small sizes and then assemble them in a box. It is surprising how small a box will hold all you need. If you keep these just for travelling, they will last a long time but for daily use they are not so lasting. Keep this box ready for instant use and your packing will be simplified.

CANNED SAUSAGES

Summer is a time of emergency meals. You may get home from a trip a little late for meal-time, or your drive may keep you too long to have time to prepare the planned meal. Then again a car-full of company may arrive just before dinner and you have that awful sinking feeling of knowing there is just one chop apiece and wonder whatever you are going to give them to eat. A few cans of sausage are a great help to have on hand. You may use them alone and have them browned by the time the table is set. If you want a real hearty meal, open a can of baked beans. Beans and sausage, and gherkins, with toast and coffee, taste mighty good when you are tired and hungry. And it is a meal that is so easy to prepare. When the meat on hand is not enough for the unexpected company just add some sausage as they are good mixers and go well with any other kind of meat. If you have a summer cottage, have canned sausage always on the shelf. The fish you expected to catch proved reluctant or the butcher wagon is late, but it is an easy matter to substitute the sausage. It is surprising the number of women who have never used them. If you are one of these, try them and see if you, too, do not find them a help in an emergency.

TOASTED ONION SANDWICHES

Onions aren't everybody's dish but I always feel sorry for the person who does not like them. Sometimes I think this dislike is just a pretence — they are too — too plebian. One of our friends who says she cannot eat anything with onions in it, always remarks on our salads and cannot see why they always taste better than hers. It is the dash of onion that does it, but if she knew the onion was there, she could not eat it. Onion sandwiches have always been a favorite around our house when we are especially hungry, but the other night we tried them made with toast and they certainly were good. Just separate thinly sliced Bermuda or Spanish onions into rings, salt and pepper them generously and place between slices of buttered toast. You can use the slice without being separated into rings, of course, but it makes it a bit oniony.

CUCUMBER SAUCE

Beat ½ cup whipping cream until stiff, add ¼ teaspoon salt, speck of pepper and stir in gradually 2 table-spoons vinegar. Pare, chop and drain a cucumber and stir into the cream mixture. Serve with fish.

Hollywood Launches New Sailor Fashion

Inspired by the Paramount production, "Give Me a Sailor," a variety of sailor styles is appearing around Hollywood. Betty Grable, who appears in this picture, is wearing a snappy slacks suit copied from the gob's uniform. The trousers swing gracefully about the ankles and lacings up the back insure a sleek, perfectly fitted line. The white blouse hangs loosely around the hips and has a square sailor collar with silver braid.

The DOCTOR Tells the Story
by W.E. Aughinbaugh, M.D.

HAIR DYE

Recently, medical journals throughout the country have had numerous articles relating to hair dyes and the dangers attending their use. Perhaps the ancients were wise, for before Christ many nations of prominence then had laws prohibiting the dyeing of the hair. Grey hair was supposed to indicate wisdom. A woman's hair was supposed to be her crowning glory and a man with a heavy head of hair was believed to possess an exceptionally fine soul. In St. Louis a woman has just recovered $9,500 damages because of having her hair dyed with the result that it fell out and she became dangerously ill.

AN IRISH PRANK

Years ago, as a young man, I practiced medicine in a small country town which was on the shores of the Chesapeake Bay.

For years a camp-meeting association maintained grounds there. After a nightly service, the worshippers usually went for a bathe before retiring. Patrick O'Mally, a young man, fell desperately in love with the presiding elder's daughter, proposed to her, but her parents declined to let them marry, owing to a difference in their religious views. This irritated O'Mally, who was forced to meet the young lady clandestinely. Finally her parents watched her so carefully that these little rendezvous were impossible. O'Mally decided to have his revenge, and he did so in a unique manner, which resulted in the parents finally giving their consent to the marriage. After the Sunday night services were over a wagon drove to the camp grounds. A young man extolled the virtues of a hair tonic which he represented, and to everyone present handed a four-ounce sample, suggesting that after their swim they rub their hair, face and hands with it, and thus experience its truly remarkable properties. This the campers did. In the morning, everyone was startled to find his or her hair, forehead and hands a bright green. Time finally cleared up their skin, and the color of their hair. "Sure I did it," said O'Mally, "because the only way I could get the girl was to make them all Irish subjects."

THE WOMAN'S PAGE

Interior Decoration in "Snow White" Is Termed Work of Craftsmanship

Home owners will note with interest the lay-out of the quaint dwarfs' cottage in Disney's "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," showing at the Rex and Capitol Theatres next week.

The artists who designed the backgrounds for the picture are in reality expert architects and designers in their own right, and months of research and thousands of preliminary sketches preceded the decision as to how the dwarfs' house should be constructed and furnished. For the house and every stick of furniture, as well as all the pots, pans, quilts and other knickknacks, had to give the appearance of having been made by the seven little men themselves.

The tiny house has interesting rough-beamed ceilings. The staircase is made of split logs. The furniture appears to be hand-made and hand-carved, with each piece a gem in itself. For instance, there is a wine barrel which fits into a standard, each corner of which is a block carved in the shape of an owl. The thick plank forming the seat is held up by short pieces of wood, the two front chair-legs carved in the shape of fat little rabbits standing on their haunches. The owl motif is further carried out above one of the cupboards, while the support of a little wall shelf is similarly carved.

The doors are framed with heavy beams, showing fantastic gargoyles' heads. Each dwarf's bed has his name carved on the footboard, and each has his own wooden chest with his name on it.

Practically everything in this fantastic but charming abode could be easily adapted to a modern country home or mountain lodge.

There's Nothing New; Ancients Had Kitchen Sinks and Hot-Air Heat

Modern home owners are hardly a step ahead of the ancients when it comes to domestic improvements — says an exchange. From ruins on the Island of Crete, explorers have uncovered marble basins which were used 500 years before the birth of Christ, Wilfred J. Funk relates in his book, "So You Think It's New."

In Egyptian Abusir, which flourished 4,000 years ago, limestone kitchen sinks were found, built into the walls and finished with metal trim.

Used Stucco, Too

Houses of Roman business men, about 1,800 years ago, were of concrete and stucco, Funk writes. In their construction and brilliant coloring, they were like those built today at Palm Beach and on the Riviera. Windows were of glass, and were adorned with flower pots.

Experiments with steam heating were made as early as the second century. In a house unearthed on the Island of Cyprus, heated air was routed from a cellar furnace through the ducts in the walls.

Purpose of the Mortgage

A mortgage is a written document pledging a certain piece of property as security for repayment of a loan. Accompanying a mortgage is a bond which is a written instrument acknowledging the debt and promising payment at a specified time. It also sets forth interest provisions. The mortgage is security for the debt, and the bond is evidence of it. The mortgagor is the person who borrows the money and gives the mortgage. The mortgagee lends the money and receives the pledge of the property as security. Because the mortgage is a form of contract, the mortgagor and the mortgagee must have the legal capacity to make a contract. Valid and legal consideration must also be given. Mortgages must not call for a rate of interest in excess of the statutory rate in the state where it is made or it will not be valid.

Author of Sister Mary's Kitchen

When you launder or dry clean knitted suits and dresses at home it's a good idea to draw a silhouette of the garments before you wash them. Squeeze the suds and rinse waters through the material and keep all the waters the same temperature — lukewarm. Rinse in clear water until every trace of soap is removed. Then shape the garment according to the pattern you drew of it and allow it to dry on a flat surface. When dry press lightly, using a press cloth, to give it a fresh finished look.

Guard against using too hot an iron when you do up summer silks and synthetic materials. A hot iron yellows and stiffens silks and actually melts certain synthetic fabrics. It's advisable to do the ironing on the wrong side but if you must iron on the right side use a press cloth. Such simple precautions keep clothes fresh and new looking and prolong their usefulness by many months.

Colorful table linens are ever so attractive for summer dining, but if you are like me you aren't inclined to invest heavily in this type of linen. So the other day when I wanted a particular color arrangement I dyed a set of crocheted white doilies a lovely warm yellow. I was serving luncheon in the "garden" as our English cousins say, and my table top is black iron.

I used pure white plates, flat ware with white catalin handles, crystal water glasses and for the centerpiece filled a low brass bowl with calendulas. Each iced tea glass enhanced the picture with a slice of lemon riding the rim and a gay nasturtium blossom stuck in a cellophane straw. You could use the nasturtium idea to serve old-fashioned lemonade, which has no equal as a refreshing and healthful drink on a hot day.

Evergreens, especially junipers and spruces, that look rusty and dull, may be afflicted with "red spider." These mites can be washed off with a strong stream from a hose or spray pump but it is more effective to spray the trees occasionally with lime-sulphur or oil sprays at mild strength.

The foliage of spring flowering bulbs including crocuses should not be cut until the leaves are brown. Neat-minded people should not plant crocuses in the lawn because the bulbs must go through a "ripening" period if they are to blossom the second year. Cutting the leaves with the lawn mower prevents this.

Girls Go Modern on the Farm (Baltimore Sun)

You don't have to go to the bathing beaches or the tennis courts to see the latest in feminine sports attire. I was riding along the other day in the upper reaches of Harford county when in a field by the side of the road I observed a handsome young lady on the driver's seat of a hay rake in attire which would have done credit to the pages of a fashion magazine.

Being a mere man, I shall not attempt to describe what she wore. Suffice it is to say that there were colorful shorts, a still more colorful kerchief about the head and some sort of harmonizing blouse. It was a very effective garb, and what is more the young woman who set it off seemed to have quite a way with the team of horses attached to the rake. She drove them around in thoroughly competent fashion and seemed to be getting the hay in that particular field well in hand.

This apparition seems to me to have social significance. Life on the farm has long been regarded as the apotheosis of drudgery for the feminine half of the agrarian population. One of the reasons I have always suspected was the absence of opportunity to wear attractive clothes about the farmhouse or in the fields. But here was a girl who overcame this handicap.

Baby Names on File

"What shall we name the baby," is a question that need not remain unanswered very long by Brooklyn parents. They will visit their public library, which has 460,000 names on file for just such emergencies. Every taste ought to be satisfied by this long list of names, odd samples of which include Cello, Earline, Hominous, Glamoureen, Nevertia, Shulamith, Zipperath and Flimptz.

NOUVELLES DE BROWNSBURG

Jeudi dernier environ de 25 jeunes filles de la Jeunesse Etudiante Catholique de la Côte des Neiges, Montréal, sous la direction de deux religieuses de la Congrégation de Ste. Croix, sont venues en excursion à Brownsburg. Grace aux religieuses de notre école elles furent reçu par "Jocistes" de notre paroisse, qui s'efforcèrent de rendre leur séjour aussi agréable que possible. La journée se passa en repas, champêtres, jeux de toutes sortes, petites promenades, etc. Bref, ce fut un succès, et il est à espérer pour le bien de notre jeunesse que ces petits voyages se renouvellent le plus souvent possible. Le voyage aller et retour se fit grâce à l'amabilité des Frères de Ste. Croix, qui avaient bien voulu prêter leur autobus pour la circonstance.

Nous avons eu cette semaine la visite de Monsieur et Mme. Henri Poulin et de Monsieur et Mme. Roger Poulin de New Bedford, Mass.

Monsieur et Mme. Geo. Blanchard, fils et Mlle. Simone Blanchard, étaient de passage à Ottawa cette semaine où Monsieur Blanchard a assisté à titre de délégué à la convention conservatrice fédérale.

LONDON INVITES NEW LEADER AS CONSERVATIVE CANDIDATE

Visiting Expert Will Discuss Flying School Idea; Price Spread on Radios Too High, Says Board

BRITISH AIRCRAFT ORDERS

Ottawa Spotlight — The aircraft manufacturing industry in Canada is soon to enter a new era of activity. A mission from London will shortly come to Canada to negotiate with Canadian factories for the production of large bombing aircraft for the Royal Air Force. At the head of the mission will be Sir Hardman Lever, director of Imperial Airways, and with him will be Marshal of the Air Force, Sir Edward Ellington, Mr. E. Handley Page and Mr. A. H. Self. It is quite clear that the British government would not send out such a representative mission as this unless they were much in earnest and ready to place substantial orders in the hands of the Canadian manufacturers. Much new equipment will probably have to be installed in the factories. This will take time. It will probably be a long term plan which will be discussed by the members of the mission with the aircraft industry in this country, but it is certain that the British Government is convinced from the report of the air mission which visited here a short time ago that Canada is in a position to turn out satisfactory aircraft. It has been said that orders totaling 100 million dollars may be placed in Canada, but that is for the future to show.

An expert from the Royal Air Force will also come to Canada to discuss the training of R.A.F. pilots in this country. The bitter controversy that raged about this question in the final hours of the session before prorogation, the speeches at the Conservative convention and the explanation of the government's attitude by the Prime Minister have been fully covered in the daily press throughout the country, and need no further mention. Nothing will be

New Hotel in Habitant Style for Ste. Adele

FIRST OF A SERIES OF FINE HOSTELRIES NOW UNDER CONSTRUCTION

Planned as the first of a series of new developments in the Laurentians and sponsored by a Montreal syndicate, a 45-room hotel is being built at Ste. Adele en Haut. Construction commenced this week and the contract calls for completion by the end of October.

In exterior appearance the new hotel will have numerous stone turrets, a French Belcast roof and hewn logs with white mortar for one of its wings. The interior will be finished in Habitant style with hand-wrought iron-work, handicrafts and hand-made furniture.

While the new hotel at Ste. Adele will be an important addition to Laurentian resort hotels, it is intended to be only the first of a series of developments of the same or a similar nature. The Montreal syndicate behind the developments will capitalize largely on the lure of the French-Canadian customs and cultural background and will endeavor to stress this phase of life in the district, believing that it has the strongest tourist appeal.

The new building is to be close to the shore of Lac Rond, near the village of Ste. Adele, and the syndicate has acquired a large stretch of land suitable for sports facilities. Extensive ground landscaping, a tennis court, a swimming pool terrace and other sports facilities will be added on completion of construction. A specially constructed ski run with cable return is also contemplated, and it is anticipated that the new hotel will be opened early in November.

"The vast majority of criminals are so because they have not the brains or the industry to do anything else."

— Sir Gervais Rentoul.

The executive of the London (Ont.) Conservative Association decided unanimously to invite Hon. Dr. R. J. Manion, new leader of the National Conservative party, to allow his name to go before a party convention, which will name a candidate for the London seat left vacant by the death of Major F. C. Betts, Conservative.

A statement issued after the meeting last Friday read:

"The executive of the City of London Conservative Association has unanimously decided to offer to the Hon. Dr. R. J. Manion, leader of the National Conservative party, the privilege of allowing his name to go before a convention to be held to select a candidate to contest the by-election made necessary by the death of the late Major F. C. Betts for the period of the unexpired portion of the term of Major Betts."

HOUSE IN CHATHAM BURNED BY LIGHTNING

BOLT IS CONDUCTED BY CLOTHES - LINE AND IGNITES WALL

During the severe electrical storm which struck here last Thursday afternoon, a small one-storey house outside the western limits of town was struck by lightning and the interior was destroyed by fire. The property, belonging to Cyprien Larocque, is in Chatham township. It had been newly constructed and there was no insurance against fire loss.

Lightning struck the pole which held the clothes line, and conducted by the wire line, ignited the house. Neighbors were soon on the scene to assist, and Lachute fire brigade responded promptly to a summons. The 200-gallon tank and booster pump on the fire truck were brought into play. Meanwhile a bucket brigade was formed and men dug a hole to collect rain-water from furrows in the nearby field, there being no other adequate supply of water. The truck was brought back to town to replenish its tank from a hydrant, during which time firemen used hand-pump extinguishers to keep the blaze in check.

Larocque's car, standing near the building, also caught fire. But the flames were soon quenched and the machine was removed from further danger. The interior and furnishings of the home were destroyed.

Historical Society Appeals for Support as Museum Plan Near Materialization

SEEK INCREASED MEMBERSHIP AND GIFTS OF SUITABLE EXHIBITS

It is with keen gratification that the executive of Argenteuil Historical Society is beginning to view the materialization of its efforts to establish a museum in this county. The object of this enterprise is to preserve relics and records that concern the growth of this country, as an object lesson for the present and future generations. It is proposed that some time this fall the public will be invited to the old barracks at Carillon which later filled its role as the Sovereign Hotel and is now to serve as the Society's museum.

It is duly recognized that, had it not been for the patriotic fervor of the late Dr. Benjamin N. Wales and the untiring zeal of Dr. Maude E. Abbott, this work would not have been undertaken, and the people of Argenteuil are immeasurably indebted to them for the ardor they have shown in the project.

Dr. H. B. Cushing is president of the Historical Society, zealously filling the office first held by the late Dr. Wales. Dr. Cushing has the support of an energetic executive, while Miss Beatrice Robertson and Mrs. Walter Windsor, of St. Andrews East, are actively associated as secretary-treasurers, in which capacity they are rendering good service.

AIRPLANE INVASION AT THE SEIGNIORY CLUB

Over a dozen privately owned planes making a mass flight in the Laurentian area descended upon the Seignior Club, Montebello, last Saturday. The group were joined by several prominent Ottawa flyers for luncheon at the Log Chateau.

Special moorings were arranged on the Ottawa River in front of the Club and refueling facilities were available at the Club's boathouse in the harbour nearby.

The planes returned to their home ports Saturday afternoon after a four-day flight which took them over the Hudson River and the New York State Barge Canal to Westport, N.Y., and from there to Lac Duimet, St. Jovite, via Lake Champlain, the Richelieu River, the St. Lawrence and Ottawa Rivers and the Riviere Rouge. They took off from the Seignior Club during Saturday afternoon on their return to New York.

Election of councillors in several municipalities of the county took place on Monday, and considerable enthusiasm was shown among both voters and candidates.

For Wentworth Township, H. Moseley was returned by acclamation in seat No. 3. Contestants for seat No. 4 were W. Furniss Clarke and Lionel Rose, Geo. Hoff having withdrawn. Mr. Clarke won with a 107 vote majority. In seat No. 6 Wilfred Morrison and Honoré Paradis were contestants, the former being elected by a majority of 41.

New Saga of the St. Lawrence; A Near-Disaster

TWO OTTAWA VALLEY MEN FELICITATED ON ESCAPE FROM YACHT MISHAP

Courage and Presence of Mind Averted Possible Tragedy

St. Andrews E. — Keith Pitcairn, son of W. J. Pitcairn of this village, was one of a party of eight rescued last week after six hours in the cold waters of the St. Lawrence, when a sailing yacht capsized in a sudden squall, near Pte. Claire.

The party, comprising four young men and four women, went for a sail late Thursday evening, from Valois. A sudden squall capsized the craft. All the occupants were thrown into the water, but managed to clamber to the side of the boat and held on. The lake was choppy, but there was bright moonlight.

George Brown, the owner of the boat, became unconscious. Finally at 6:30 o'clock Friday morning Frank Steffox, returning from Ottawa in a small canoe, spied the upturned boat and paddled to it. To his astonishment, he found people clinging all around it, and he paddled rapidly to the shore to give the alarm.

He landed at the Maples Hotel, Lakeside, near Pte. Claire, and called a cook and a boy, who had a small boat with an outboard motor. They went out to the drifting boat and picked up five of the victims. The alarm was spread and the Pointe Claire police went out with O. Mitchell, caretaker of the Pointe Claire Yacht Club, and picked up the remaining three.

It is reported that Pitcairn showed rare presence of mind and fortitude in handling the precarious position in which he and his seven companions found themselves, thus averting a possible tragedy. Though all of them could swim, they were two miles from shore and in comparative darkness.

Named Health Adviser to Quebec Department

Dr. P. C. Dagneau, dean of the faculty of medicine of Laval University, has been appointed technical adviser to the Quebec Health Department, it was announced this week at the Legislature.

OTTAWA DISTRICT MAP ISSUED BY DEPARTMENT

The Department of National Defence has recently published the Ottawa sheet of the National Topographic series on a scale of four miles to one inch. It includes the eastern counties of Ontario and the adjoining portions of the Province of Quebec. The principal cities and towns shown are Ottawa, Cornwall, Alexandria, Huntingdon, Lachute, Buckingham, St. Jerome, and Arundel. The roads are all classified by distinguishing colours, thus making it a very good road map.

The Ottawa River is shown from Lake Deschenes and the St. Lawrence from Cornwall to their point of confluence. Other information shown includes townships, post offices, railways, power lines, wooded areas, lakes, rivers and streams. Elevations at 200 feet intervals are represented by coloured tints and contour lines.

Copies of this map may be obtained from the Surveyor General, Department of Mines and Resources, at 25 cents per copy.

ACCLAMATIONS IN ST. JERUSALEM

In St. Jerusalem, three new councillors were elected by acclamation, as follows: Peter Gordon in seat No. 2, replacing Leonard Boyd; Felix Touchette in seat No. 3, replacing Leonard Boa; E. W. Smith in seat No. 4, replacing Alex Doig.

J. E. Walker, as mayor, J. S. Pollock, in seat No. 1, Jas. Clarke, seat No. 5, and Simon Wilson, seat No. 6, with the recently elected members, comprise the new council.

NINE CANDIDATES IN TOWNSHIP OF MORIN

For the Township of Morin there were ten nominated as contestants for the three seats vacated by R. J. Seale, Lawson Kennedy and Robert Goodfellow, who were due to retire. Mr. Goodfellow, who was again nominated, withdrew before the election, leaving only nine in the running.

Those elected were Amedée Legault, Christeville; Robert J. Seale, Morin Heights (re-elected), and A. B. Graves, Morin Heights.

The vote was one of the largest polled for many years. Over 170 citizens turned out to cast their ballot, this being about 25 more than usual number.

3 COUNCILLORS RE-ELECTED, IN GRENVILLE AND AUGMENTATION

At Grenville and Augmentation little interest was shown in the election, only 50-odd voters exercising the franchise. Neil McCallum, Wm. McGillivray and G. A. Lowe were all re-elected. There were four candidates in the field.

ness. As Pitcairn is an experienced skipper his leadership was tacitly accepted.

One comrade in distress was Mr. Irwin Smith, son of Dr. T. W. Smith of Hawkesbury and a second-year medical student at McGill.

The Ottawa Valley may take pride in the fact that her men of letters can measure up to an emergency and physical trial. These gentlemen modestly extol the courage of their companions, especially Miss Margaret Blair, of Westmount, whose constant flow of songs and stories whistled away the tedium and discomfort of their position while clinging to the edge of the boat.

Mr. Pitcairn became unconscious about 5:30 a.m., an hour before the party was rescued. He had exhausted much of his strength at the outset by diving down to cut away the main mast and in turning over the boat. Then, as the motor proved useless after being immersed, he unfastened and cast it away. All members kicked off their shoes and woollen garments to lessen the weight. After the first hour they took to slapping each other

ORANGEMEN CELEBRATE WITH LARGE RALLY AT LOST RIVER

GOOD REPRESENTATIONS OF BRETHREN FROM LODGES IN THIS DISTRICT

Arundel — A very enjoyable "Twelfth" was spent at Lost River this year. About 250 people were present, the colors and the music of the Orangemen being much in evidence. Mr. Donald Fletcher, of Lachute, with his selections on the bagpipes, brought to memory the great victory for all people which was achieved by William, Prince of Orange, at the Boyne in 1690. Mr. Fletcher was assisted by his brother, Norman, who played several well-loved melodies on the drum.

The weather being fine, the brethren, of whom there were good representations from Lost River, Arundel, Harrington, Ponsonby and elsewhere, assembled near the Lost River Orange Hall. There, with Mr. William Dewar riding the white charger, they began their parade.

The ladies of Lost River provided dinner in the Presbyterian manse, between noon and 2 p.m. The brethren and adherents of the Order then marched to the school grounds where the Rev. Charles Cushing of Arundel, and Mr. Jonathan McCullough Fletcher, of Ballymena, Ireland, addressed the people. Both speakers were introduced by Brother Jack Marshall, of Harrington, who was officiating chairman.

THE VICTORY AT THE BOYNE

The Rev. Cushing emphasized the fact that the victory at the Boyne was not for Protestants exclusively, but for all people; that it was the duty of Orangemen to live in harmony as much as possible with the different nationals among whom they reside. The speaker said that after he had considered the principles and tenets of the Orange Order, he not only entered its ranks, but deemed it a privilege and an honor to associate himself at all times with this praiseworthy work.

THE "TWELFTH" IN ULSTER

Mr. Fletcher spoke along the historical line, giving a sketch of the celebration of the "Twelfth" in his native Ulster. Drums and flutes and accordion-bands were not alone, he said, in stirring the hearts of the people; but the ladies also, with other musical instruments, made their contribution. He stressed the need of children receiving a thorough education, for by this acquirement would the men and women of tomorrow be the better able to appreciate their Protestant liberties.

A vote of thanks was tendered by the chairman, after which the members began a series of games. Both children and adults entered wholeheartedly into the sports, and an amusing episode occurred when the ladies ran in an egg-and-spoon race; it is not reported how many eggs were broken in this venture. A tug-of-war by the Orange brethren was then held, and how those Sons of William pulled! Both sides were loudly exhorted to do their best, but they exceeded all expectations by pulling the rope in twain. The married ladies were lined up against the single ladies in a second tug-of-war; the ladies put forth a very manly effort, for they pulled the rope asunder twice.

In the evening supper was given by the ladies, which was climaxed by an entertainment. All the proceeds, amounting to approximately $80, went to the Orange Brethren. All things considered, it was a very enjoyable and successful celebration.

Accidental Death Verdict Given In Auto Fatality

DRIVER, RECOVERED FROM HIS INJURIES, TESTIFIES BEFORE JURY

An adjourned inquest into the death of Jean Baril, 29-year-old Montrealer, who was killed in a highway crash just west of Lachute in the early morning of July 7th, was held here at the Town Hall at 10:30 a.m., on Wednesday. The coroner's inquest had been deferred until such time as Aimé Paquette, 31, of Buckingham, could appear to give his testimony. Paquette, driver of the car, was badly injured, and up till Wednesday had been an inmate in Dr. Smith's Hospital at Hawkesbury.

The jurors, under Coroner Dr. J. H. Mason, heard evidence from Paquette that he had been proceeding eastward at around 35 miles an hour. In the darkness he had not noticed the curve in the highway west of Simon's crossing, until running onto the side of the road he noticed a big tree confronted him ten or fifteen feet ahead. He jammed on the brakes, but was unable to stop. After the crash he was too dazed to know what happened, but Paquette informed the jurors his companion, seated beside him, never spoke or moved after the impact.

Retiring, the jury deliberated and rendered their verdict of accidental death.

to maintain the blood-circulation. At first they called in unison, but vainly, for help. Although they could see the lights of motors passing on the Lakeshore highway, evidently they were not heard. No other craft was in the vicinity.

Jewel Presented at Semi-Annual Scarlet and County Meetings of Orange Order

PAST COUNTY MASTER IS HONORED

Semi-annual meetings of the Loyal Orange Lodges and Scarlet Chapter No. 5, County of Argenteuil, were held at Morin Heights last Saturday, presided over by Wor. Bra. Victor MacVicar, County Master. A slight increase in membership was reported by the county secretary. The meetings were well attended.

The following brethren were appointed as an organization work committee: Rt. Wor. Bro. Stanley Holt and Rt. Wor. Bro. W. J. Cooper of Brownsburg, for the Lachute and Grenville Lodges; Wor. Bro. M. McGibbon, for Louisa, Dalesville and Shrewsbury; Wor. Bro. A. Hamilton for Morin Heights; Wor. Bro. V. MacVicar for Harrington, Lost River, Arundel and Avoca.

Past County Master Rt. Wor. Bro. Stanley Holt, of Lachute, was presented with a Past County Master's Jewel, having filled the office most creditably for the past four years and given much time and effort to stimulate the membership of the Orange Order throughout this county. The presentation was made by Rt. Wor. Bro. W. J. Cooper.

The meetings then adjourned and members of Lodge 2818 and the ladies of Morin Heights served supper. The next meeting will take place in Lachute on Saturday, January 14th, 1939.

THE PRAIRIES ARE GREEN AGAIN AFTER SEVEN YEARS DROUGHT

Home fields are greenest now for livestock on the Prairies, and after being shunted around from pasture to pasture or foraging in the dust for seven years, cattle and horses now find ample feed at the farmers' front doors. These horses grazing in the fields in Saskatchewan suggest that ample moisture will produce a good crop.

Stole Wood "In Error," Oka Indian Tells Court

Simeon Woodman, Oka Indian, charged with the theft of wood from the property of the Compagnie Immobilière Belgo-Canadienne early in the year, appeared before District Magistrate Donat Lalonde at St. Jerome and admitted he "had taken a small quantity of wood from the property by error."

Through his attorney he asked for clemency, pointing out that if he were convicted and sentenced he would be liable to extra punishment by his tribe. Also it was pointed out that he had been in the cells for several days owing to a misunderstanding in the amount of bail set by the court.

The district magistrate decided to be lenient and gave suspended sentence.

Acclaim comes to few, but a good job well done is possible for all.

Campbell McInnes to Discuss Works of English Writers

Letters, prose eulogies and verse of famous English writers will be read for CBC national network listeners by J. Campbell McInnes during the twelfth broadcast of "This English," tomorrow, July 22, from 4.45 to 5.00 p.m., D.S.T.

Mr. McInnes will present excerpts from the letters of Lewis Carroll, author of "Alice in Wonderland," the verse of Sir Henry Wotton and Sir Philip Sydney and one prose eulogy by Herbert Asquith.

These examples throw interesting light on the social, political and economic conduct of England from the time of Wotton (1568-1639) to the present day and carry forward Mr. McInnes' discussions devoted to the origin and beauty of English prose and poetry.

(What changes in 25 years!) — Money may be tight owing to world conditions; the stock market may be slumping; town lots may not be as saleable as they were — but Canadian factories are busy, labour is fully employed, and as an acute observer has said, thousands of Eastern Canadian workers "are getting overtime cheques in their pay envelopes." Everything is growth, development, confidence in the future. Factories long established and prosperous are installing new machinery. The signs, "Help Wanted," are numerous. Many manufacturers state they cannot keep up with their orders. No strikes are encountered. Workmen's homes are appearing in places where hay fields rustled a few years ago.

NIAGARA FARMERS GET BUSY WHEN CUTWORMS INVADE COUNTRYSIDE

The farmers at Queenstown, Ontario, had a busy time just recently fighting an army of cutworms which threatened destruction to crops for miles around. The "Black Plague," as it was called years ago, completely cleaned out a field of timothy and was on the march when discovered by farmers. It took a hundred farmers and helpers three days to get the worms under control by digging ditches and filling them with bran and paris green. There were literally millions of cutworms which poured into the ditches so fast that they had to be continually cleaned out to make room for other victims. The picture at the left shows the cutworms starting to fall in the ditch, while at the right some of the farmhands are digging a ditch around a wheat field to snare the invaders.

known of the number of men the R.A.F. want to train in Canada or the conditions under which the training will be conducted until the expert arrives and discusses plans with government officials here. The Prime Minister recently stated that his offer to the British government was gratefully received by the British authorities. With the spirit of co-operation which is in evidence it seems to the ordinary layman that there should be little difficulty for the R.A.F. to secure adequate facilities for training in this country under the discipline and with the wholehearted co-operation of the Department of National Defence. It may be assured that the air school would not be debarred from utilization of the best British instructional and technical skill available. However, all these matters will be included in the general arrangements.

The new leader of the National Conservative party, Dr. Manion, is not now a member of the House of Commons. He will naturally want to get a seat. There are now two vacancies in Ontario, in London and South Waterloo, and it is possible, according to a precedent that has been followed at times in the past, that one of these seats will be given to him by acclamation. The decision on this has to be made by the constituencies themselves. Both seats now open were held by Conservatives. The announced retirement of Gen. Ormond from the position of superintendent of penitentiaries in Canada, is the first step taken by the Department of Justice to carry out changes in penal administration suggested by the Archambault royal commission report. The legislation founded on this report which has recommended the appointment of three commissioners to supervise the penal system, passed the House of Commons but in the final hours of the session was defeated in the Senate. The reorganization of the penitentiaries branch will be carried out as far as this can be done without the passage of legislation. The Minister of Justice will shortly announce the general plan of reform. Next session legislation will again be placed before Parliament.

INTERNATIONAL WHEAT MARKETS

As Canada will soon be marketing her wheat crop, which promises to be a very substantial one, interest centres on the situation in the world wheat trade which has been under discussion at the World Wheat Convention held at London. The heavy crops both in importing and exporting countries naturally complicate the situation, and arouse the fear of price wars. The United States in particular with a winter and spring crop aggregating 967 million bushels, which, as domestic requirements are about 750 million, means an export surplus from this crop of 200 million bushels, overclouds the markets. It may well be hoped that the discussions at London will help the situation through co-operation among the exporting countries. Canada is fortunately situated because of her extremely small carryover, which will amount to about 25 million bushels or thereabouts on July 31st. She has another source of strength in the quality and careful grading of her wheat, and in the benefit of the imperial preference which she enjoys on the United Kingdom market.

The cost of radio sets in Canada and the difference between the prices in Canada and the United States have been the subject of lively discussions before the Tariff Board. While representatives of the industry brought forward arguments to explain the higher prices in Canada, the chairman of the board, Mr. Sedgewick, said he had difficulty in understanding why the spread should be so high. "In the automobile field," he said, "the spread is about 25 per cent, while the spread in radio set prices is from 35 to 70 per cent. That is hard to understand." The finding of the board will be handed later to the government.

The Feudal System

The feudal system prevailed in most of Europe during the Middle Ages, until about the end of the Fourteenth century, when the rise of absolute monarchy broke down the local system. The increase of communication and the growth of the towns, with the expansion of the economic world after the Crusades, did much to destroy the feudal classification of society. The system broke down gradually and in France it was not completely destroyed until the French revolution. Old usages persisted in Germany until the Nineteenth century and in Russia until 1917. Many relics of feudalism persist and it has left its impress on almost all institutions of western Europe.

Dale Carnegie

5-Minute Biographies

Author of "How to Win Friends and Influence People."

He Went to Jail — And It Added to His Greatness

Who do you suppose was the most famous short story writer who ever lived? You have read his stories. More than six million copies of his books have been sold; and they have been translated into almost every language on earth, including the Japanese, Esperanto, Czechoslovakian, Danish, Norwegian, French, German, Swedish and Russian. His pen name was O. Henry, and he was born about seventy years ago.

O. Henry's life is a striking illustration of a man who battled against tremendous odds and succeeded, in spite of terrible handicaps.

First, he had the handicap of very little education. He didn't even attend high school and he never saw the inside of a college; yet today his stories are studied as models of good writing in half the universities of the land.

Second, he was handicapped by the ravages of diseases. The doctor feared that he was going to die of consumption; so they took him away from his home in North Carolina, sent him down to Texas, and he got a job herding sheep on a ranch there.

Today, automobile tourists drive hundreds of miles out of their way to see that ranch; and as they approach it, they halt their cars and walk reverently over the ground where O. Henry once tended his flocks.

Third, he had the apparent misfortune of being thrown into prison. It happened in this way.

After he regained his health, O. Henry got a job as cashier in a bank in Austin, Texas. The cowboys and sheep men had a habit of walking into the bank when the clerks were busy and helping themselves to as much cash as they wanted, signing a receipt for it, and then going on about their business.

Suddenly, one day, a state bank examiner came to town, inspected the bank's cash — and found money missing. O. Henry, the cashier, was arrested. He was hauled into court; and although he probably had never taken a dishonest dollar himself, nevertheless he was sent to prison for five years.

That prison sentence seemed like a calamity at that time; but, in a way, it was most fortunate; for O. Henry began writing, in prison, the brilliant stories that were destined to make his name honored and loved wherever the English language is spoken. It is quite probable that he would never have written at all if he hadn't been sent to prison.

I was talking to Warden Lawes, of Sing Sing, recently; and he told me that almost every man in Sing Sing wants to write the story of his life. In fact, so many of the prisoners in Sing Sing want to write, that the prison school gives a free course in short story writing. Naturally, very few of them succeed, but nevertheless, it is a fact that many well-known men have written in jail.

When Richard Lovelace was thrown into an English jail, two hundred and fifty years ago, he glorified his dungeon by writing one of the well known poems of the English language. It is a love poem that he wrote to his sweetheart. It is entitled: To Althea from Prison.

Stone walls do not a prison make, Nor iron bars a cage, The spotless mind, and innocent, Calls that a hermitage, If I have freedom in my love, And in my soul am free, Angels alone that are above, Enjoy such liberty.

NAMES races

The commonest family name is still Smith, according to the largest list of names yet compiled. That is the list of 39,000,000 workers to whom Social Security numbers have been assigned in the United States. More than 470,000 of them are named Smith. The Johnsons come next, with 350,000 names. Next in frequency are Brown, Williams, Miller and Jones.

A man's name is no sure indication of his ancestry, since in America one's name is whatever one chooses to call himself. Most people, however, keep the names of their fathers and grandfathers. The preponderance of the names I have listed indicates that the dominant racial strains in America are still British, German and Scandinavian.

Smith is a name almost as common in Scotland as in England, though many Smiths are of German stock, their names having once been Schmidt. The names of Williams and Jones are distinctly Welsh. Johnson may be either Scandinavian, English or Scottish, Miller is English or German, and so is Brown.

JOBS ability

Speaking of unemployment, a friend said to me the other day: "The greatest area of unemployment is above the ears." He was trying to emphasize the truth that most people do not use their heads when looking for jobs.

A day or two later I saw a newspaper paragraph about a young college graduate who used his head so well that he got four jobs when he only wanted one. He took competitive examinations for engineering posts in the Army and Marine Corps and applied for Army service on the strength of his college record in the Reserve Officers Training Corps. Then he went out and hustled for a job in private employment, and got one. After he had gone to work he received notice that he had been appointed to the Army post and that he had passed both of his engineering examinations.

That boy, of course, had special qualifications. But the point is that he didn't sit down and wait for a job to come his way. He used his head and got four jobs! Almost everybody has some special ability. Too few use their heads to find where those abilities are needed.

WORK incompetency

A young friend of mine started in business for himself as a plumbing contractor about three years ago. He had no capital, but a lot of intelligence and moral courage. He knew his trade and was willing to work hard. He told me recently that he had jobs for a dozen good workmen if he could find them. The trouble with most workers, he said, was they tried to get by with poor work and take things easy.

A building contractor I know will not hire young workmen because, he says, they don't use their heads and don't take their work seriously enough to master their trades. I don't know how far that is true generally, but I have an idea that it is pretty general.

I think that the 'dea that boys should be kept in school until they are 16 or 18 has made white-collar loafers out of a great many young men who could have become first-class artisans if they had been allowed to work when they were young enough to learn a trade.

EDUCATION learning

There is a homely old proverb which says: "You can't make a silk purse out of a sow's ear." All the

Ontario Taking Lead in Fight Against Tuberculosis

Ontario is taking the lead in North America in the fight against tuberculosis, Premier Hepburn told municipal authorities in an address during a visit to the Brant sanatorium at Brantford.

The premier spoke particularly of provincial grants for hospital treatment of indigent tuberculosis patients and pending legislation making milk pasteurization necessary, effective Oct. 1.

A sanatorium was built and speedily overcrowded at Fort William, Mr. Hepburn said. Three Eastern counties have been induced to build another at Cornwall, "and now I am trying to induce Kenora to build another such institution," the premier added.

schooling in the world will not make a scholar out of a person who is not capable of learning. Those who are capable will acquire learning and often wisdom in spite of lack of educational "advantages."

I was re-reading the other night Rudyard Kipling's autobiography. What struck me most forcibly was his efforts at self-education. He was under 16 when he quit school to go to work on a small daily paper in India. Inside of 10 years his name was known all over the world. He was the greatest literary genius of modern times. No university could have given him the understanding of people and life which he learned at first hand from personal contacts and hard work.

One of the most respected leaders of the New York Constitutional Convention now in session never went to school beyond sixth grade. His opinions on public administration are eagerly sought. He is an educated man in the best sense of the word, but he educated himself. His name is Alfred E. Smith.

CHARACTER education

The older I grow, the more I realize that the qualities which we call "character" are more important than learning or technical skill. A man may know everything in the books, be a master of his craft, but if he lacks character he is heading for disaster, no matter how high a position he may reach.

The world thought highly of Richard Whitney. He thought well of himself. He had intelligence, ability and qualities of leadership far above the average. But he had, also, ambition and personal vanity which made him believe that he was not bound by the ethical codes which men of honor follow. He is in Sing Sing prison today because, when he came to the test, he did not have the essential quality of character.

New Lights for Highways

Most of the people who are killed every year in automobile accidents meet death on the open highways, where traffic is not unduly heavy but the temptations to take chances on speeding is the greater for that reason. A high proportion of fatal accidents are due to darkness, and the dazzling lights of approaching cars.

Experience has demonstrated that there are few serious night accidents on well-lighted city streets. Unfortunately, it has been impossible until now to light long stretches of country roads. The cost has been prohibitive.

Now two new systems of highway lighting have been invented and have given good results in practice, which are so inexpensive that any rural road district can afford them. One system, which is useful only for hard-paved roads, is based upon imbedding a reflecting material in the road surface, so that the headlights pick out the roadway and show clearly whether there are any obstructions ahead. The other system is an ingenious reflecting device placed on posts or telegraph poles along the roadside, which catches the beam of the headlight and projects it ahead, lighting up the road for half a mile or so. Two or three of these to the mile are said to light the highway almost as well as daylight.

Better-lighted roads and non-glare headlights, which have now been perfected and doubtless will be as compulsory as safety glass in a few years, will help cut down the ghastly toll of motor deaths.

Utilizing the Sun's Rays

If you set down the figure 4 and add 23 ciphers after it you get an incredible sum. It is so big there is no name for it. It is four billion trillions. And it represents the number of tons of anthracite coal that would have to be burned in a year to produce the amount of heat which the sun radiates in the same period.

Reduced to simple terms, the sun transmits to each acre of land in the temperate zone, in the course of the three summer months, an amount of heat equivalent to the burning of 250 tons of coal. Translated into energy, this comes to a horsepower to the square yard.

So far as human needs are concerned, most of this heat and power does not go to waste. True, the sun's heat is the primary source of all fuels, wood, coal, oil and gas, as well as of power derived from the wind or from falling water. But plants are notoriously poor converters of solar energy; they capture only a fraction of one per cent of the amount that falls on the land during the growing season.

For years scientists have been trying to find ways of converting the sun's energy to practical use. Dr. C. G. Abbott, secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, has devised a solar engine which holds some promise. Now Dr. Lowell Godfrey Cabot of Boston has given $647,000 to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology for research in the same field. This is in addition to $619,000 which he gave to Harvard University for a similar purpose.

It is Dr. Cabot's hope and that of the scientific researchers that within 50 years we may be able to run all the world's machinery and heat all our buildings by sun power. And that would be as miraculous as the project which, Dean Swift reported, Lemuel Gulliver found on the mythical Island of Laputa, where scientists were trying to extract sunshine from cucumbers.

Futuristic Road Plan Proposed for London

A scheme to replan the London metropolis on an immense scale is described in a report of the Ministry of Transport. The survey, which has been conducted by Sir Charles Bressey, prominent city planner, and Sir Edwin Lutyens, well-known architect, has taken three years to complete.

The most radical suggestion resulting from the study, which estimates London's traffic needs during the next 30 years, is a recommendation that a series of both overhead and underground highways be constructed. Densely packed London streets would be eliminated entirely under the new scheme. Instead, super-roads crossing modern London's 2,000 square miles from end to end would be substituted.

At the same time a system of ring roads laid out in concentric circles would be designed to surround the metropolis, simplifying passage from point to point by diverting through-traffic from the centre of London. The report advocates building in Outer London a number of new roads of the parkway type, through open country, while a special highway linking Croydon Airport with the fashionable west-end hotel and business district is also recommended.

The possibility of enemy air raids some time in the future is not forgotten by the planners, and tunnel roads are said to have been proposed because of this consideration. Twin-lane tunnel roads would be provided under Regent street and Charing Cross — more or less the most populated centres of the west end district.

WEIGHTY CIVIC PROBLEM

A dead whale, weighing 100 tons, washed ashore in San Francisco harbor, presented that city with a problem it had not encountered before. The carcass, beginning to send forth odors, nearly drove nearby residents from their homes. A rendering company offered $50 for the huge body for the fat it contained, provided it was towed across the harbor to its rendering works. The offer was accepted as an easy way to dispose of the carcass, but the city lost over $2,000 on the deal. Ropes needed to drag the whale off the beach into the water cost $885. Services of a tugboat and its crew ran up to $500. Riggers, a derrick and barge added $700 more. Something will be salvaged from sale of the rope, but city officials hope no more whales come through the Golden Gate looking for a place to die.

POLICE BATONS MADE OF LOCUST WOOD

New York City policemen carry night sticks 22 inches long, made of locust wood, states The Commentator. Locust is no heavier or tougher than other woods that could have been selected, but it has a distinctive ring to it rivalled by no other wood.

A policeman on a night beat has to be able to get hold of his side-kick on the beat on an instant's notice in case he gets into a jam. A policeman's whistle is all right, only too many kids are blowing them around and a cop can't be perfectly sure whether he's wanted or not when he hears one.

But no policeman ever mistakes the ring of a locust night stick when it's dropped on the pavement. He can hear it for 10 blocks and will come on the run every time.

BAD DRIVERS LABELED

Four-inch red stripes are now painted on the cars of motoring offenders at Santa Ana, California. This form of punishment is the idea of Superior Judge James L. Allen. He has ordered the lines to be painted on the cars of many drivers accused of drunkenness, reckless or hit-and-run driving. These drivers, after the cars have been "striped," are forbidden to park within 300 feet of any place where liquor is sold. Expressing his satisfaction at the success of his plan, Judge Allen said: "If they are ashamed to drive their conspicuous machines, they can stay at home."

There are three million people in the country who were not born in this Dominion.

Grenville Bay Resident Buried at Calumet Cemetery

Mrs. James Brechin

The death of Mrs. James Brechin occurred at her home in Grenville Bay last Thursday, July 14th, in her 79th year.

Mrs. Brechin was formerly Miss Mary Moncrieff, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. David Moncrieff, of Edina. Before coming to Grenville Bay she was an active member of the Fairmount Presbyterian Church in Montreal, and during her residence here since 1922, had taken an active part in the Presbyterian Church and Ladies' Aid at Grenville.

The funeral was held from her late residence on July 15th, conducted by Rev. A. J. Back, of Hawkesbury. Burial was at the Calumet Cemetery. The pall-bearers were Jack Moncrieff, Arundel; Geo. Moncrieff, Brownsburg; Geo. Moncrieff, Cushing; Sam Kerr, Avoca; Hugh Boyd, Arundel; Geo. Porteous, Montreal.

Those attending the funeral from a distance included — Mr. and Mrs. George Porteous, Mr. and Mrs. Jim McJennet and son, Gerald, Mr. and Mrs. Mahoney, Mrs. S. Bennett and son, Ted, Miss Keegan, Mr. and Mrs. R. Rice, Mrs. J. Grey, Mr. and Mrs. E. Grey, all of Montreal; Mr. Geo. Moncrieff, Mr. Jack Moncrieff and daughter, Velma, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Boyd, Jr., Mrs. W. H. Kerr, Mrs. E. Gray, of Arundel.

Floral tributes were sent from Grenville Lodge, A.M. & A.M., Mr. Hampshire, Mrs. Morrison, Mr. and Mrs. McJennet and family, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Rice, Mrs. Gray, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Gray, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Kerr and daughter, Dorothy, the Brewer family, Mr. and Mrs. George Porteous.

Latin Values Important

When Speaking Chinese

In pronouncing Chinese names the important thing to remember is that all vowels in the ordinary spellings have their Latin values and not their English values, that is, a, e, i, o, u are pronounced ah, eh, ee, oa, oo. There is a u with two dots on top (German umlaut), but that never gets printed in newspapers, being spelled like ordinary u, which is of course confusing to the reader, according to a Chinese authority in the New York Times.

Once in a while a Chinese spells his name according to English values, as in the case of T. V. Soong, but T. V. "Soong" (English values) rhymes perfectly with H. H. "Kung" (Latin values).

The Chinese make an important distinction between aspirated and unaspirated consonants: k and k', ch and ch', p and p', etc. But Americans can ignore this distinction, since they cannot make it, and especially since this distinction is usually ignored in newspaper spellings. Unaspirated ch in Chiang Kai-shek is very much like j, while aspirated ch' in Ch'en is pronounced like the regular ch, as in church.

Chiang Kai-shek: pronounced like Jeearng Kaisheck. (Don't make ee too clear.)

H. H. Kung: pronounced like Koong.

Chang Hsueh-liang: pronounced like Jarng Shiauleearng.

Soong Meiling (Mrs. Chiang): pronounced like Soong Mayling.

Feng Yu-hsiang: pronounced like Fung (as in fungus) Yu-sheearng. Disregard hs, and read it like sh.

Fu Tso-yi: pronounced like Foo Tso-i.

Sung Tse-yuan: pronounced like Soong Tser-yoo-an.

Li Tsung-jen: pronounced like Lee Dzoong-ren (always pronounce j as r).

Pai Tsung-hsi: pronounced like Bai Tsoong-shee.

Installation of Officers, Laurentian I.O.O.F. Lodge

The semi-annual installation of officers of the Independent Order of Oddfellows of Laurentian Lodge No. 14, was held on Tuesday last. Bro. Chas. Ed. Belanger, D.D.G.M., and staff, of Montreal, installed the following officers for the ensuing term: D. R. Bradford, N.G.; C. Leishman, V.G.; W. T. MacNaughton, Rec. Sec'y.; G. Demerse, Fin. Sec'y.; W. J. Deacon, Treas.; C. Fletcher, Warden; H. Townsend, Conductor; R. McArthur, R.S.N.G.; N. J. Boyd, L.S.N.G.; Rev. S. J. Pike, Chaplain; S. Murdoch, I.G.; J. A. Campbell, O.G.; G. Dixon, R.S.S.; A. David, L.S.S.; A. Murdoch, J.P.G. The Grand Master, Bro. H. R. McFayden, gave a short address on Co-operation.

Among other members to accompany the Grand Master upon his official visit were Bro. A. S. Decarrie, Past Grand Master; Bro. R. G. McKee, Grand Warden; R. Hare, Grand Conductor and several other brethren from the Excelsior and Lafayette Lodges, also Past District Deputy Grand Master, Bro. W. W. Jones, all of Montreal, and Bro. W. D. Stewart of Grenville Lodge No. 279, Kempsville, Ontario, now a resident of Lachute.

The Grand Master called upon Bro. G. Hardie, of Brownsburg, and Bro. W. S. MacKimmie, of Lachute, to receive their 25 year veteran jewels and there was a two-minute silence observed for the late Bro. Wm. E. Campbell, of Dalesville, who was also one of the members qualified for the 25-year jewel.

The visitors and members afterwards assembled in the banquet hall and a happy hour was spent in short addresses. Five more veteran jewels were to have been presented but the members were not in attendance for the gathering.

Arraigned in Arson Case, Setting Fire to Barns

Charged with setting fire to the barns of Fabien Gascon last February at Grenville, René Desforages, 25 years of age, of Grenville, was arraigned before District Magistrate Lalande at St. Jerome and pleaded not guilty. He was remanded till July 21 for enquete. His attorney had previously asked for mental examination and evidence was that he was fit to stand trial.

Historical Socy. Museum Plan Near Materialization

The Society now numbers around 500 members. The strong membership has lent encouragement to those who have worked hard through the past years, for their efforts have entailed much sacrifice, both of time and labor, toward the culmination of their plans.

Now that the Federal Government has accorded its support and will undertake the renovation of the old barracks building, the executive is issuing a timely appeal for increased membership. The fee is small, namely 50 cents per annum, while the payment of $20 will procure life membership.

For upkeep and maintenance of the projected museum, it is necessary that an endowment fund be created, and it is earnestly hoped that there will be a ready response to this campaign.

While money is an essential to success, citizens may collaborate in other ways. In the homes of this and neighboring districts there are relics and heirlooms left by the pioneer forbears. These are of intrinsic value to their present owners, but would fill a place of wider benefit among exhibits in the museum. Contributions of this kind will be appreciated by the Society; they will be carefully guarded and marked with suitable inscriptions, bearing also the name of the donor.

Credit to Paul Bunyan

Paul Bunyan, legendary giant lumberjack of Wisconsin, is credited not only with starting the cool summer breezes blowing, but also with the creation of the thousands of lakes. One fine summer day, so the story goes, old Bunyan was inspired to try diving from the summit of Rib mountain into the Wisconsin river. The depositing of great quantities of water in spots for miles around by the resulting splash is said to have been the beginning of Wisconsin's multitudinous lakes. Other Bunyan fans say the lakes are the rain-filled footprints of Paul's great blue ox Babe. Between the horns Babe measured 42 ax handles and a plug of tobacco. However they came and whether Paul Bunyan had anything to do with their origin or not (geologists seem to think the glaciers had something to do with it) there are more than 7,000 lakes in the state.

Combined Sunday Schools in Picnic at Grenville

Grenville — The annual picnic of the combined Sunday Schools of the Parish of Grenville was held on Tuesday, July 19, at Mr. James Stewart's grove. The children were taken to the grounds in trucks, kindly loaned by Mr. W. E. Bridgen and Morrow Bros. The weather was ideal for such an occasion, and the large crowd of boys, girls, and adults thoroughly enjoyed the day. Games were played in the morning and after lunch a number of races were held. The rector desires to thank all those whose help and co-operation made this delightful outing possible.

The races resulted as follows:
8 years and under (open) — Mavis McCallum.

9 and under 13 (S.S. only) — Boys, John Rayson, Neil McCallum; Girls, Helen Rayson, Florence McVey.

9 and under 13 (open), mixed — Rodney Dewar, Stanley Brazeau.

13 and under 16 (S.S.): Boys, Ronald Matthew, Garth Dawson.

13 and under 17 (open): Girls, Evelyn Cousins, Georgina McIntyre.

July Deanery Meeting Held at Seignior Club

St. Andrews E. — The July meeting for the clergy of this Deanery was held recently at Montebello in the beautiful grounds of the Seignior Club.

The proceedings commenced with a celebration of the Holy Communion in Christ Church at 10 a.m., the Rev. Cyril Earle, incumbent, officiating.

This was followed by two very interesting and instructive papers given by the Revs. J. A. Temple and C. Earle. The Rural Dean, Rev. Booy, presided.

After the business meeting, at which Messrs. Temple and Earle were thanked for their addresses, an adjournment was made to the dining room, where the clergy as guests of Mr. Cyril Chapman, the general manager, were entertained at luncheon.

Freedom of the sports activities, through the kindness of Mr. Hedges, who has charge of that department, were extended to any of the clergy who felt like limbering up stiff muscles by engaging in the royal and ancient games of golf and tennis. While the writer cannot report that anyone was fortunate enough to secure a 'hole in one,' he can say that he and three others had a most enjoyable foursome over the beautiful course. Following, the players and non-players enjoyed a splendid repast after their diversions. At conclusion a hearty vote of thanks was accorded to Messrs. Chapman and Hedges for their hospitality.

"The task of providing jobs to the existing labor surplus preimposes an investment by private industry that would be no less than twenty-five billions of dollars."

A Budding Politician

Aptitude for a political career appears at an early age, reports a Toronto amateur psychologist, whose reading of Hansard has convinced him that parliamentary skill is most frequently displayed in the parrying of awkward questions. As an example he cites the case of his five-year-old daughter on whom he was called to deliver judgment.

This young lady plays with her next door neighbor, Barbara, relations being usually very amicable. Nevertheless, on the day in question, a dispute over territorial rights in a sand-box had arisen. Instead of relying on diplomatic negotiation and arbitration, as their elders and betters invariably do, the young ladies resorted to direct action, and were vigorously assaulting each other with shovels when higher powers intervened.

As a one-man court of inquiry, our hero's father began investigations. "Why did you hit Barbara with your shovel?" he asked.

"I didn't, Daddy," was the reply, astonishing in the face of the evidence and her habitual truthfulness. "It was Barbara's shovel."

Royal Family's Name

The family name of England's royal family prior to the name of Windsor was Wettin, and this was changed in 1917 to Windsor. Queen Victoria's consort was Albert of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha and the family name of Albert was Wettin. Edward VII was related to the famous Wettin family of Europe through both his mother, Queen Victoria, and his father, Prince Albert. Victoria was a Guelph, and by her marriage to Prince Albert of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha she changed the family name to Wettin. But neither of these names has been recognized by the British government as the official name of the royal family, house or dynasty.

Golf Club Supper and Tournament Held

The Golf Club grounds were the scene of a happy crowd, as the ladies served another of their popular Wednesday evening suppers.

The putting competition which followed was very closely contested, the winners being Mrs. G. Walker and Mr. J. R. Charron, for prizes donated by Rev. H. Cousens.

A second prize was also very kindly offered by Mr. J. R. Charron. As the second place resulted in a tie, the playing of an extra hole was necessary between Mrs. W. M. Cottingham and Mr. Leonard Ayers, and Miss Margaret Scott and Mr. Hugh Gall. This proved to be the highlight of the evening inasmuch as Mr. Leonard Ayers sank his approach shot with a magnificent effort from a distance of about fifty yards and was given a great ovation by the on-lookers.

On Thursday evening the men's spoon competition will be held, and on Saturday next there will be the postponed competition for Mr. Gilbert Ayers' prize, further particulars of which will appear on the Club notice board. The usual weekly mixed competition will be held next Wednesday, when another large turnout is expected.

Ladies' Golf Activities

On July 12th a tombstone competition was played for a prize given by Mrs. Gavin Walker; this was won by Mrs. W. D. Stewart. On July 19th a handicap competition was played. The prize, given by Mrs. H. Cousens, was won by Miss Agnes McDougall.

Pretty Wedding in the Hungarian Style

Simon-Piroska

A pretty wedding took place last Saturday in The Church of All Nations, Montreal, when Miss Farkas Piroska, of Montreal, became the bride of Mr. John Simon, resident of this town. The Rev. Michael Feher officiated.

The bride wore a white satin dress with lace-work and a long veil with a diadem of mother-of-pearl. She had six bridesmaids, two flower girls, and two maids of honor.

After the wedding a dinner was served at the Hungarian Club, attended by more than a hundred guests. A Hungarian orchestra of six musicians and a talented young German accordionist provided the music. During the dinner the Rev. Mr. Feher expressed the good wishes of the gathering, speaking first in Hungarian and afterwards in English. He extended a warm welcome to the friends present from Lachute — to which Mr. Hugh Johnson responded with a few well-chosen remarks.

Following the dinner a dance was enjoyed to the music of the Hungarian orchestra, and a number of folk dances were executed. In accordance with the Hungarian custom, every guest danced in turn with the bride. A lunch was served before conclusion of the party.

The guests from Lachute included Mr. and Mrs. Norman Silverson, Mr. and Mrs. Hans Jacobsen, Mr. H. Johnson, Mr. Bob Miller, Mr. Chas. Walker and Mr. Martin Niederkorn. These friends were kindly escorted to the church by Mr. Szasz, president of the Club, who introduced them to the numerous guests.

The happy couple later left for Detroit, and on their return will take up residence here on the Brownsburg Road.

The Adventures of Marco Polo

Robert E. Sherwood

Gary Cooper in the role of Marco Polo, philandering
and battling his way to Golden China.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Marco Polo, famed 13th Century Venetian traveler, comes to the Court of Kublai Khan in Peking to procure valuable trade agreements for his father. There Marco meets and falls in love with the Emperor's beautiful daughter, Kuchukin, who is betrothed to the King of Persia. Their romantic meetings are spied upon by Ahmed, the ruthless and crafty Minister of State, who persuades Kublai Khan to dispose of the troublesome Venetian by sending him to the camp of the rebellious chieftain, Kaidu, to act as spy for the Emperor.

CHAPTER FOUR

Marco Polo was more than ordinarily alert as he and Binguccio rode westward toward Nung Po pass with a column of troops headed by Ahmed's guard, Bayan. When they reached the pass Marco could see that the mountain trail swerved into a narrow defile on the edge of a sheer precipice. Bayan suddenly gave the order to halt and Marco realized that trouble was at hand. The troops reined in their horses, all eyes turned into a tent and held there until morning.

Within another tent, Lord Kaidu was buckling on his armor. Nazama, his beautiful wife, reclined among the silken cushions and fur coverlets of her bed. She leaned towards him languorously.

"Kaidu, my beloved," she said. "Come to me and hold me in your arms." Kaidu, buckling on his belt, was preoccupied and annoyed. Are you my husband? Nazama inquired with vehement sarcasm. "Are you a man? Or are you nothing but a great hulking animal who can do nothing but work — like the oxen who haul your war machine?" Kaidu was still silent, and her voice rose shrilly. "Your belt's on crooked!"

Kaidu, a towering and war-like figure in his massive armor, cowered before his wife's displeasure. He sought gently to appease her.

"I love you, Nazama," he said soothingly. "I love you better than all the birds and all the flowers and all the stars in all the heavens —"

For answer, Nazama threw a piece of coal at him. Kaidu made a hasty exit, cursing under his breath. Outside the tent an officer made his

June Travels "Solo" And Likes the Trip

A little red-head six-year-old ocean traveller arrived in Vancouver recently on the C.N.R. Continental Limited. She is June Bryan, an orphan, who came alone all the way from Leeds, England, to live with her uncle and aunt in the Pacific Coast city.

"I had a fine time on the way," said June, who will be seven years old July 30. "Everybody was good to me." She became a little homesick when the S.S. "Antonia" docked at Montreal and she was told the remainder of the trip would be by train, where she would see new sights all along the way through the West. But everything was all right when she found her shipboard friends, a Vancouver Island man and wife, would be with her all the way to Vancouver.

Strasbourg Cathedral Is

Protector and an Emblem

Strasbourg cathedral, which has a tower 469 feet high, and many years ago was known as the highest in Christendom, has had a picturesque history. According to a Paris correspondent in the New York Times, it was built on the site of a Roman temple, and work was started as far back as 1015; it was burned almost to the ground on five different occasions. During the early Reformation years it was used for Protestant worship, being restored to the Catholic church by Louis XIV in 1681. But during the French revolution it became a temple of the Goddess of Reason.

Most Gothic cathedrals have two towers, but Strasbourg has been content with one. Towers, like individuals, have physical weaknesses, and this one has had its share of them. It has been "treated" across the centuries; the last "treatment" began in 1907, and was not completed until 1926.

Alsace and Strasbourg consider their cathedral as their protector and their emblem. Dominating the countryside and the Rhine valley, for nine centuries it has witnessed the joys and the sadnesses of Strasbourg, and watched over its destinies.

"Perhaps it is, my Lord. But not in the political sense. I have wandered over the earth looking for the greatest of God's creatures, a lovely woman."

Nazama began to purr. "And have you found her?" "I am your prisoner, my lady," said Marco pointedly, "And if I told you the truth —"

"Obviously, my love," said Nazama to Kaidu, "This gentleman is not a spy."

Kaidu looked from one to the other. "Oh, obviously, my love, obviously!" He was struck with a brilliant idea. He dismissed everyone but Marco Polo.

"You are no longer a prisoner, but you must not be impatient to get away, my friend," said Kaidu. "Here, have a drink. You see, for years, I have been looking for a man who could divert my wife's attention. You seem to be the one who can do it. You will be charming to her, and keep on being charming — until I tell you to stop."

"Suppose," said Marco squirming, "My charm gives out?" Kaidu smiled. "We'll keep the oil boiling."

Except for a rare trip, few of them had left the rubber plantation, but since becoming Scouts they go camping in other parts of Malaya. The estate provides the boys' uniforms, on condition that these are paid for by instalments out of their monthly wages. The troop is the 11th Ipoh.

SEA SCOUT SERVICE ON NELSON'S FLAGSHIP

A night spent in hammocks aboard the historic old 74-gun ship "Impregnable" and a Sunday service on the quarterdeck of Nelson's famous flagship "Victory" at Portsmouth, was the thrilling experience of 250 Sea Scouts from different sections of England. The service was the annual occasion for reaffirming the Scout Promise, and was held in connection with the opening of National Scout Week. The Sea Scouts were addressed by Admiral of the Fleet the Earl of Cork and Orrery and Commander in Chief, Portsmouth, who was introduced by Admiral B. S. Theagar, County Scout Commissioner for Hampshire. In his address the Commander in Chief reminded the Sea Scouts of Nelson's heroic death, and of that great sailor's wish that "Humanity should be the watchword of the British Navy for the world."

Yorkshire Mechanics Are Named for Their Trades

The word cobbler, Australian for "boon companion," did not originate with the Australians, although the sense given to it belongs to the people who live under the Southern Cross.

In England, states a writer in Literary Digest, cobbler is Yorkshire dialect—a corruption of cobbler. In Yorkshire, men are frequently called by their trade, particularly when the surname is unknown, or the person referred to is better known by his given name. So Butcher Tom and Cobber Dick are forms in common use when referring to the butcher or the cobbler. But cobbler also has other meanings—"a great lie," the greatness being derived from cob as used in northern England, Ireland, and Scotland for "the top or summit of anything, as a mountain or a hill"; also, "a leader, chief, or master." This word has yet another significance. Used as a verb, "to cob to or with" means "to cotton to," that is, "to take a liking to any one." Thus, in Suffolk, England, persons who take to each other are said to cob together, and it is probably to this association that the Australian cobbler owes its origin.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SUNDAY SERVICES

"Truth" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in Churches of Christ, Scientist, throughout the world, on Sunday, July 24. The Golden Text is: "Teach me thy way, O Lord; I will walk in thy truth: unite my heart to fear thy name." (Psalms 86:11).

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." (1 Tim. 2:15).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "That evil or matter has neither intelligence nor power, is the doctrine of absolute Christian Science, and this is the great truth which strips all disguise from error." (p. 454).

toward Marco. Bayan drew his sword. Marco glanced into the gorge below, grimaced, and whispered to Binguccio:

"I'm going to try to get out of this — if I can. Ride westward!"

There was a shout from Bayan and the troopers began to close in on Marco. He swung his horse around in an attempt to make a dash for the end of the pass. Binguccio's horse reared violently, throwing the startled little man to the ground. He picked himself up quickly and ran as fast as he could to the West. The converging troopers, their spears flashing, closed in on Marco, until they had forced his horse to the very edge of the precipice. The animal reared up and fell backwards. There was a triumphant shout from the troopers and Bayan's scarred and ugly face was suffused in a happy grin. He gave the order to march — back to Peking.

But Marco had not fallen into the ravine. As his horse fell he had caught the limb of a twisted tree on the sloping cliff and clung to it with the desperation of a doomed man. Presently he shook the dust of the avalanche from his face and clambered up a little so that one foot was firmly braced against the tree trunk. Then slowly, inch by inch, he began to make his ascent up the face of the cliff. Once he looked down into the gorge and shuddered. Sweat poured from his face.

Meanwhile, in Peking, Kublai Khan was preparing to lead the army in battle against Japan. Seated in his magnificent howdah, at the head of his army, he waved a last farewell to his daughter, Princess Kuchukin. From the Citadel Tower Ahmed watched the scene. He turned to the officer at his side and remarked significantly,

"The China Sea is a powerful adversary. One typhoon might end the glorious reign of Kublai Khan."

The officer smiled understandingly.

Night, black and cold, descended on the plains of Tartary. Marco Polo and Binguccio trudged westward toward the lights of a camp. When they reached it they crouched behind a bush to reconnoiter. A sharp voice behind them demanded to know their identity and their business.

"We are two citizens of Venice, on our way to Peking," Marco told him.

"Take him to Lord Kaidu," the officer ordered the guards.

Marco started. "Kaidu! Are you Kaidu's men?"

The captain laughed derisively. "You didn't know that, did you? Spy!"

KEEP CANADA CANADIAN

One of the reasons why people like to travel is to see places that are different from home. Most of the tourists in Canada are from the United States, and in a mistaken idea of pleasing them, American flags are used, and American names. This is foolish. Let us keep Canada distinctly Canadian and different. You can drive along and see such names as The American, Washington, Franklin Hotel or The New York Cafe and such like names. Why not use our own native names? Some of the Indian names are most euphonious and distinctive. It is no compliment to use the Stars and Stripes as a decoration. If we want flags that can be better than our Union Jacks. Unfortunately, we have no Canadian flag to accompany it. Nova Scotia is the only province that has its own flag, but we seldom see it. Quebec is to be commended in the way it has retained its own ways and that is one of the reasons Quebec is a delight as a holiday place, both for our American cousins and for the rest of Canada. If we want tourists — and we certainly do, let us attract them by staying Canadian. How about the weekly newspapers printing suggestions for distinctive names taken from their own locality?

TEA FOR BURNS

It is a most unusual family that does not have at least one case of sun-burn. No one means to get sun-burned but it has a nasty way of slipping up on you. The new tannic acid method of treating burns is good for sun-burn too. If you do not happen to have any tannic acid preparation on hand, there is always cold tea. If you are making it specially, make a strong infusion and let it cool. Bathe the burned areas with the tea and it will both soothe and cure.

EAT ALONE AND LIKE IT

There are few mothers who do not find it a relief to have a meal occasionally without their children — no matter how much they love them. Fathers must feel the same way. They come home tired and hungry and the noise and restlessness of the children may make them irritable. Did you ever think that children must get tired of having to behave always at the table? They must get bored with the constant admonitions to sit up and to eat this and don't fiddle with that fork and so on. A meal alone may be easily managed in the holidays and is good for all concerned. Give the children some sandwiches, fresh fruit, cookies and milk or perhaps malted milk or one of the many chocolate drinks, on a tray, and let them take a book and eat wherever they like. You may say "sandwiches — more work. Two meals to get ready instead of one." It isn't much work to make a few sandwiches and it is surprising how small a child can make its own, if the fillings are ready, especially when so many people use ready-sliced bread. One of the nicest things is that it lessens the dishes. The children's food may be wrapped in waxed paper and there need be only one glass per child to wash. Ain't that sumpin'? If you have never tried this method, try it and see what a pleasure it is all round. When older children are having their summer fun, it is hard to time home-comings to the minute and alfresco meals save a lot of grief.

SPICED GOOSEBERRIES

2 quarts gooseberries, 3 1/4 lbs. sugar, 1 tablespoon allspice, 1 teaspoon nutmeg, 1 pint vinegar.
Wash and stem gooseberries, add remaining ingredients and boil until thick, about an hour. Pour into sterilized jars and seal.

SANDWICH BREAD

1/2 cup butter, 1 cup granulated sugar, 1/4 cup cream, 1 cup vinegar, 3 eggs, 3 teaspoons mustard, 3 teaspoons salt, 3 teaspoons flour, 4 oz. package cream cheese, 1 can pimento, 1 small bottle stuffed olives.

Mix dry ingredients and moisten with vinegar, rubbing to a smooth paste, add beaten eggs, cream and butter. Put cheese, olives and pimentos through grinder and add to mixture. Cook in double boiler until thick, stirring constantly. This makes a quart of filling and keeps well.

Old Sol, The Scorcher

The extreme heat of summer is a real danger. Excessive high temperature is a similar danger to those who work in factories, engine rooms and other hot places and who fail to take precautions against heatstroke and heat exhaustion.

Heatstroke and heat exhaustion are radically different in their effect upon the patient and in the treatment required.

In heatstroke the face is red or purple, the skin is dry and hot, the temperature, measured by the thermometer, high, and the patient is unconscious. In heat exhaustion, much the opposite is the rule. The face is pale, the skin moist and cold and the temperature low; the person is usually conscious. Remember the differences. In heatstroke, a dry skin; in heat exhaustion, a moist skin.

What should be done in these cases? First call a doctor. Then remember that the hot body should be cooled and the cold body warmed. In heatstroke lay the patient on his back in a shady place and remove as much clothing as society will allow. Sponge body with cold water. Apply ice-bag or cold cloths to the head. Give no stimulants, but after the patient has become conscious, let him have all the cool water he will drink. In heat exhaustion lay the patient in a reclining position. Loosen clothing. Keep warm with hot water bottles, blankets or other handy materials. Give stimulants: tea, coffee or one teaspoonful aromatic spirits of ammonia in half a glassful of water.

clothing. Avoid unnecessary exposure to the sun or excessive heat either indoors or outdoors. Keep your head covered in the scorching sun. Drink plenty of cool water and to each glassfull add a tablet of common salt (gr. v) either with or without 5 gr. dextrose. Use a liberal amount of salt food to replace the salt lost through sweating.

HOUSE AND HOME

DRY OR OILY SKIN

If your skin is dry this summer try a light, fluffy powder. Use a soft creamy foundation to make it stick. On the other hand, an oily skin needs a smooth, clingy powder — one that holds its own against oil and moisture. Don't be discouraged, but try several kinds. You will know when you have found the right one for your face if your complexion has a soft even finish that remains intact for at least two hours after powdering.

New cabbage is a splendid vegetable to include in summer meals. You know, in the case of cabbage "new" doesn't mean immature like "new" potatoes. The heads are full grown but green almost all the way through. This greenness means that it's specially nutritious because the green color is a sign of its vitamins A and G and also iron content. The greener the leaf the more it contains as far as vitamins are concerned. All cabbage contains vitamins B and C, too, but it's new cabbage that's richest in the elusive C vitamin. Serve it raw dressed with lemon juice and a dash of salt or combine it with orange sections and use it to stuff tomatoes for enticing summer salads. If you cook it, use as little water as possible and cook it covered for not more than fifteen minutes. Of course it must be very finely shredded for this quick cooking.

To keep your house cool in torrid weather observe a few simple rules. Do your sprinkling of porches, steps, walks and house foundation after the sun goes down. This puts into effect that old law of nature involving the principle of evaporation. Follow the sun around your house, closing doors and windows and pulling down shades to keep out the sun and heat. Electric fans keep the air moving, which has a cooling effect.

Toothsome Triumphs

By Betty Barclay

"A luscious sauce makes the difference between 'plain Jane' dessert that chants the budget balancing blues and a toothsome triumph that winds up the meal with a round of applause. There's no need for jitters, even if the unexpected company is on the doorstep. You can glorify that left-over cake or pudding with a festive air in a twinkling if you use these short cut sauce recipes made with sweetened condensed milk. This magic milk guarantees a failure-proof triumph every time.

MAGIC FRUIT CREAM SAUCE

1/2 cup sweetened condensed milk, 1/4 cup lemon juice, 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind, 1 cup drained crushed pineapple, or 2 bananas, cut in small cubes.

Thoroughly blend sweetened condensed milk, lemon juice and grated lemon rind. Stir until mixture thickens. Add fruit. Makes about 2 cups. May be thinned with water to any desired consistency.

CHOCOLATE MARSHMALLOW SAUCE

2 squares unsweetened chocolate, 1 1/3 cups (1 can) sweetened condensed milk, 1/4 teaspoon salt, 8 marshmallows (quartered), 1/3 to 1/2 cup hot water.

Melt chocolate in top of double boiler. Add sweetened condensed milk and stir over boiling water 5 minutes until mixture thickens. Add marshmallows which have been quartered. Stir until they begin to blend but are not fully dissolved. Add salt and hot water, amount depending on the consistency desired. Makes 2 or 2 1/2 cups.

FRUIT SALAD IN ORANGE CUPS

(Serves 6)

6 large Sunkist oranges, 12 marshmallows (quartered), 1 cup diced pineapple, 1 cup banana slices (or other fruit; pears, peaches, strawberries, cherries, white grapes), lettuce.

Cut tops of oranges and remove pulp, leaving orange baskets. Flute edges if desired. Combine ingredients, fill orange cups and arrange on lettuce-covered salad plates. Serve with mayonnaise, mixed with 1/3 orange juice.

Choose a cloudy day to air your feather pillows. Pin them firmly on the clothes line in a breezy spot and let them stay out all day if there is no sun. Daily airing for an hour will keep your pillows light and fluffy.

Rural School Makes Model of Pioneer Home

A member of Quebec Women's Institutes, a teacher in a rural school, during the past year supervised the making of a model of a pioneer home by her pupils. Accuracy in every detail provoked much local congratulation, and after being exhibited in several schools and Women's Institute meetings, and the annual convention of the Provincial Association of Protestant Teachers in Montreal, it was sent to the Art Gallery, and to McGill University, and finally was sent to England to be exhibited there.

Women's Hair to Make Carpet Yarns

To free Germany further from dependence on foreign raw materials an announcement has been made of the perfection of a project for the manufacture of carpet yarns from human hair and artificial wool — cell wool or viscose.

Human hair, especially women's, has proved very satisfactory for rugs, and that branch of the National Socialist party devoted to the collection of junk is now collecting it also. Approximately 8 cents per pound is paid for it. Barber shops will be combed by scrap party squads to collect it.

Used Special Box to Carry on Shoplifting

Using a cardboard box, open at one end but the sides being covered with wrapping paper, apparently tied with string, Rene Pominville gathered in 31 pairs of socks from the store of R. J. Devlin Limited, Ottawa, and ran out of the store. He was followed by a clerk, William Blenkorn, and on Sparks street threw away the box and socks. Blenkorn kept up the chase, however, and caught the culprit.

In court, Pominville said he did not remember, as he was drinking, but Magistrate Strike said even if he was drunk that would not account for having the box specially prepared for shoplifting. He was remanded for sentence.

Health Units in Quebec

The establishment of Health Units in the counties in the Province of Quebec is being steadily extended. During the past two years several new ones have been established, notably at Brome-Missisquoi, Compton and Three Rivers, while other counties have the matter under consideration. The movement has the hearty support of Quebec Women's Institutes, and co-operation between them and the government health services is general all along the line.

SUPERSTITIONS

To us of the present age it may seem startling to learn that primitive man built up a remarkable series of superstitions regarding stones of all kinds and in various entirely different ways. And to me what is the more remarkable is that many people, especially those residing in rural communities, still observe some of these ridiculous notions.

As a young man I recall that in my town the Pfiel family had one possession which they cherished far above the value of any precious stone. It had been handed down from father to eldest son in that family for generations, until all their neighbors had about as much faith in the wonderful things it could accomplish as the owner. When a pet dog, which I was teasing, very properly bit me on the hand and arm, my mother rushed me to the Pfiels. Grandfather Pfiel took from a locked box, which was hidden in his trunk, a bundle which he unwrapped. When the covering was removed I observed that it contained a dirty stone about as large as a big walnut. This was wrapped about the most severe bite on my arm. "Don't remove the bandage," said the old gentleman, "but bring the boy to me on the third day." When I was brought to the Pfiel home, with much ceremony the bandage was unwrapped and the stone was found to be stuck to the wound, due, of course, to the blood drying and holding it there. "Now," remarked Pfiel, knowingly, "William will get well, because the mad-stone has sucked all the poison out of the arm." The fact that I got well only confirmed Pfiel and our neighbors in the idiotic notion that this dirty stone possessed mystic medicinal properties. The real wonder was that the filthy stone had not set up an infection, which might have resulted in me parting with my arm.

ILLS AND EVILS

Indians and men of the wild tribes of northern and southern Asia today wrap large, heated stones resembling babies and place them upon the bodies of expectant mothers. Yellow stones are carried to cure jaundice. Thousands of people still carry stones in their pockets today, as a protection against disease or trouble. Superstitions die hard.

DISTRICT NEWS

CUSHING WEST

The Misses May and Isabella Ross, of Kingston, also the Rev. and Mrs.
McDonald, are spending the week in Cushing, at Capt. T. W. Weir's.

Miss M. Barnard, of Niagara, Ont., with her sister, Mrs. Turbayne, motored down and are guests at the home of Dr. Cushing. Miss Marjorie Cushing arrived on Monday from a visit of ten days at Newport, Vt.

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Hartley and son, Kenneth, (who has just arrived from a week's stay at Camp Kanawana), spent Sunday here.

The Misses Grace and Katie Whelehan were visitors here on Sunday.

Mrs. Percy Nicholls and Miss
Gladys Motley, of Thorold, Ont., motored here and spent a few days last week as guests of Capt. and Mrs. T. W. Weir. Master Gordon Nicholls, who accompanied them, will spend the remainder of the summer vacation in Cushing.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Atkinson, of Montreal, were week-end guests of Mr.
and Mrs. S. Whelehan.

Miss Helen Lalumiere, of Montreal, arrived Sunday to spend two weeks as the guest of her aunt, Mrs.
Whelehan.

Mr. L. Dawson, of Brandon, Man., is here on a visit to his father, Mr.
Ed. Dawson, at Stonefield Heights, and on Monday, accompanied by his sister, Mrs. C. F. Watson, motored to Morin Heights and visited relatives.

Mr. Geo. Valley, of Sault Ste.
Marie, who with his family has been visiting friends at Vankleek Hill, is renewing old acquaintances here last week after an absence of over 30 years. Needless to say, he found many changes among the people and surroundings.

Mrs. James Watson had the pleasure of seeing all her family assembled together last week. They included Mr. Murray Watson of Detroit, Mich., Mr. and Mrs. W. M.
Watson of Maniwaki, Mrs. Norman
Dowd of Ottawa, Mr. and Mrs. C. F.
Watson of Cushing, and Mrs. Usher, whose home the reunion took place.
We regret to report that Mrs. Watson's health is at present a cause of much anxiety to her family and friends.

A number from this vicinity attended the funeral, at Grenville on Saturday morning last, of the late Madame Antime Rochon, who passed away at her home here last week after a long illness. The deceased lady was a former respected resident of Greece's Point. Much sympathy is felt for her aged husband, who, with a large family, survives her.

CAMBRIA

Mr. and Mrs. Walker Dawson and son, Keith, of Lachute, visited friends in Mille Isles last Sunday.

Mr. Milton Dawson, of Montreal, motored to Mille Isles for the weekend.

Miss Lily Pollock, of Montreal, spent the week-end at her home here.

Mr. Phillips' sister, Mrs. R. D.
Grimmer, accompanied by her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Grimmer, Jr., motored from New York and are spending some time visiting Mr. and Mrs.
A. B. Phillips.

Mr. L. Dawson, of Brandon, Man., and Mrs. C. F. Watson, of Cushing, visited their uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Dawson, on Monday, also calling on Mrs. J. Walter Maxwell. Mr. L. Dawson has been visiting his home in Stonefield Heights.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Strong, of Winnipeg, formerly of Mille Isles called on friends last Thursday, also visiting their former home. It is a number of years since Mr. and Mrs.
Strong and family left Mille Isles to make their home in the West. On their visit here, Mr. and Mrs. Strong were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs.
Harry Scott, of Lachute.

Death by Fright

(Time Magazine)

Minks are famed for their ravenous appetites, their expensive pelts, their cannibalistic habit of devouring their young when frightened. Last week in Astoria, Ore., William and Emil Urell, operators of a mink farm, appearing before a board of officers from a nearby Coast Guard station, claimed the U.S. Coast Guard owed them $6,750 for damages.

Right after the whelping season, they testified, a Coast Guard amphibian plane whizzed over their farm within 150 feet of the ground.
The mother minks, terror-stricken by the drumming racket, dashed wildly about the cages, seized their 270 mink kittens and gobbled them up.

Mother: "Have a good time at the dance tonight, dear, and be a good girl."
Daughter: "Make up your mind, mother."

GRENVILLE

Misses McKenzie and Armstrong, of Montreal, were recent guests of Miss Vera Gauley at her home here.

The congregation of the Grenville Baptist Church was augmented by a large number from Brownsburg who attended the morning service on July 10th. Three of the young men took charge of the devotions and one sang a solo. It is expected these visitors will also be present for the service at 10:30 a.m. (S.T.) next Sunday.

Rev. J. R. Simpson, of Brownsburg, called upon Mr. and Mrs. T. H.
Gauley last week.

Mr. George Clerihue, with her daughter and son-in-law, of Montreal, were week-end guests of Mr.
and Mrs. Russel Owens, and of Mr.
and Mrs. W. Bradshaw.

Miss Lois Cooke and Mr. Clifford
Cooke motored from Pogan Falls last Saturday and spent the week-end here.

Sympathy is extended to Mr. James Brechtin in the loss of his beloved wife. The funeral was largely attended and numerous floral offerings showed how highly she was esteemed.

John Moncrieff attended the funeral of Mrs. James Brechin in Grenville Bay last Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Falconer, of Lachute, paid a visit to Mrs. Jos. Scott on Sunday.

Miss Cunningham, of Montreal, was a recent guest of Mr. and Mrs.
J. Alexander.

Miss Stella Cooke returned home from Sudbury, Ont., on Sunday. She was accompanied by Mrs. Wilbur Bennett and baby son. Mrs. Bennett will spend some time here visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Cooke.

Mr. and Mrs. Homer Cooke, of Ottawa, and Miss M. Henderson, of Montreal, were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Herb. Cooke.

Mr. and Mrs. Val Swail and Mr.
Robert Simon visited Mr. and Mrs.
Stirling Simon, of Hudson Heights, on Sunday.

Miss Lulu Dubeau spent a few days in Montreal last week.

Mr. Stan. Cooke spent the weekend at his home here.

Mrs. S. MacGrandel, with her son and daughter, paid a visit to Mr.
and Mrs. Jack Alexander recently.

ST. ANDREWS EAST

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Reddington, of Mascouche, Que., were the guests of their sister, Mrs. Thos. Webster, on Monday, also Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Reddington and daughter, Audrey.

Mrs. Beryl Code and Miss Dornacilla Drysdale, her daughter, of Ottawa, are guests of Miss H. Wales.

The W.M.S. of the United Church meeting was held on July 12th at 8 p.m. The devotional period was taken by Miss J. Grace Wales, Ph.D.
Lantern views of Mrs. G. E. Forbes' trip to the Orient were shown; the accompanying notes were read by Miss M. Green. Thanks are due to Mr. M. Yale and Lloyd Lilly for their assistance in putting the lantern in order and operating it.

The sale and supper under the auspices of the Women's League of the Presbyterian Church was a decided success. The proceeds amounted to over $200. Great credit is due to Mrs. Wm. Watson and her splendid band of workers. The play given by the Trinity Players of the Anglican Church, Hawkesbury, with the minister's wife, Mrs. Garrett, as coach, was well acted and much enjoyed by the audience.

Mr. and Mrs. Heckerman and daughter, Joan, Mrs. Chatterton, Mr. and Mrs. Small and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Snow and two children, were guests of Mrs. Bernard Snow on Sunday.

Miss Phyllis Watson has left to join her parents at Newago, Que.

Mr. Buzz Yale, who motored from Montreal to spend Sunday with his parents, was accompanied by Mrs.
Yale's sister, Mrs. E. Caulin.

Miss Evelyn Wales and a party of friends motored to Camp Macaulay for a visit on July 12th.

Mrs. F. McCallum, Miss D. Mc-Callum and Mrs. W. Windsor motored to Montreal, accompanied by the nurse who has been on duty in their home during the past week. We are glad to report that Mr. Neve is much better.

Miss A. Booy, of Montreal, was the guest of Mrs. E. N. Draper during the week-end.

Mrs. R. Read, of New York, arrived on Wednesday for a few weeks' visit with her parents, Mr.

and Mrs. E. Neve.

Miss Joan Willett entertained the Anglican W.A. at her home on Thursday last. Arrangements were made for the coming sale and tea.
Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting.

(Too late for last issue)

The baptism took place on July 4th, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Stuart MacAdam, Riviere Rouge, of their infant son, who received the names Rodger Thomas. Rev. J. A. Mowatt performed the ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. Larminie, the former organist of St. Simon's, also Miss Stewart, of Montreal, were guests for several days of Rev. and Mrs. J. A.
Mowatt.

Miss Lois Perks is spending her vacation at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Perks.

CHATEAURO

Recent guests of Mr. and Mrs.
James O'Brien, of Chathoro, were Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Nicholls and family, of Asbestos, also Mr. James Nicholls of Asbestos and Mr. and Mrs. J. S. McAdam of Ottawa.

Mr. W. R. McAdam, of Chapleau,
Ont., was the guest of his sister, Mrs.
Jas. O'Brien last week and also visited other friends. Mr. and Mrs. Mc-Adam will leave shortly for a trip to the western provinces—Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba and British Columbia. Congratulations are extended to Mr. McAdam on his retirement after 48 years' service with the

A PRAIRIE GIANT

UNIVERSITY BRIDGE, SASKATOON

The city of Saskatoon was founded in 1882 by the "Temperance Colonization Society" of Toronto, which had purchased 100,000 acres on the South Saskatchewan river for $200,000. John N. Lake, the chief promoter of the venture, travelled with a group of associates to the end of steel at Moose Mountain Trail in 1882 and trekked to Clark's Crossing. The townsite was located as headquarters for the new settlement. Someone suggested the name "Minetanka" but at the psychological moment the party found some Saskatoon berries and, as Lake said, "That settled it."

Two days later the first church service was held with ten people present, and within a year the town had been laid out. By 1890 Saskatoon boasted "a first class public school" while two other centers of learning were to be found within a twenty-mile radius, indicating a considerable population for a northern prairie district in those days. In the same year the coming of the railway was celebrated in suitable fashion with a torchlight procession.

The coming of the Barr colonists, who encamped for a time at Saskatoon, gave the town its first impetus towards rapid growth.
Between 1901 and 1911 the population jumped from 113 to 12,000.
Now it is some 50,000, as Saskatoon has been consolidating its position as chief market and distributing center for a large section of the province. The city's industries are also of growing importance, and it is Saskatchewan's educational center. Here are found the provincial university, normal and agricultural schools and other important institutions.

Seven Injured In Spectacular Crash on Brownsburg Road

Four Occupants of Parked Auto Missed Death by A Narrow Escape

Seven persons were injured — three seriously — and two others escaped injury when an automobile loaded with nine Montrealers crashed into a parked car on the Brownsburg highway at 10.30 o'clock Sunday morning. The crash occurred near the Sinclair Road which joins the highway a little west of Ayers Orchard, two and a half miles from Lachute.

Mr. and Mrs. Adela Mainville, 48 and 43 years of age respectively, and their five children, Marie, 21; Noella, 18; Mireille, 17; Jean Marie, 5, and Jean Guy, aged 4, were injured. Mr. and Mrs. Mainville and their eldest daughter, Marie — most seriously injured of the seven — were taken to the central division of the Montreal General Hospital, where both Marie and her father were reported to be suffering from probable skull fractures, while Mrs. Mainville was in a serious condition from severe lacerations, bruises and shock.

The youngest child, Jean Guy, was removed to the Western Hospital, where his condition was not regarded as serious. The other three were sent to St. Luke Hospital, where Mireille and her five-year-old brother were under observation for severe cuts and bruises. Noella was sent home after treatment.

The car, a Franklin rented from a Montreal garage, was driven by Napoléon Sarazin. The driver and a lady passenger in the front seat escaped unhurt. The vehicle was travelling west on the way to Brownsburg, when it left the road, and proceeding for 240 feet partly in the ditch, struck a culvert. Here the machine catapulted into the air and landed upside down on a car parked off the road.

Popular Couple Married at Arundel, Que.

The marriage of Bertha, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Staniforth, of Arundel, Que., and Mr. Ayton Dixon Lennon, son of the Rev. Dr. and Mrs. W. S. Lennon, of West Shefford, took place Tuesday afternoon at the bride's home, the Rev. Dr. Lennon, father of the bridegroom, officiating, assisted by Rev. C. Cushing. Miss Stella Cooke played the wedding march, and during the signing of the register Miss Margaret Cooke sang "O Promise Me." The decorations of the house for the occasion were arranged with ferns and summer flowers.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gowned in white satin, made on princess lines, buttoned down the back with white satin buttons, the sleeves ending in points over the hands, and the skirt continuing into a short train. She wore a finger length veil of pointed d'esprit net, with wreath of lilies-of-the-valley, and she carried a bouquet of Johanna Hill roses and lilies-of-the-valley. Following a reception, the bride and bridegroom left on a motor trip, the former wearing for travelling a periwinkle blue wool crepe dress with navy blue accessories. They will reside in Quebec City.

Out-of-town guests included: Rev. Dr. and Mrs. W. S. Lennon, of West Shefford; Mr. and Mrs. Lindsay Lennon, Miss Reta Boyd, Mr. D. Staniforth, Mr. and Mrs. W. Paul, Miss Margaret Paul, all of Montreal; Mr. and Mrs. A. D. McGibbon, of Quebec; Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Miller, of Lachute; and Mr. and Mrs. Eric Lennon, of Lennoxville.

Extensive Bush Fire on St. Adolphe Mountainside

A bush fire broke out on Calvary Mountain, one and a half miles from St. Adolphe de Howard, last Thursday night and threatened to spread to the entire side of the mountain.

Men were called from various points in the district to fight the flames and to throw up earth walls to check the advance of the fire before it assumed dangerous proportions.

There is no danger for the village, as the flames, destroying the heavily wooded mountain slope, were not heading in that direction. There were no houses on the mountain.

Interesting Golf Tournament Held at St. Andrews

Over twenty or more of the local club members journeyed to St. Andrews East last Saturday to participate for Mr. Gilbert Ayers' prize.

The tournament proved highly interesting and produced some very good scores and not a few high ones — the well known "Sahara" living up to its reputation on several occasions and quite a few balls finding their last resting place in the pond.

After the tournament, the members gathered in the dining room, where supper was served.

Mr. Gilbert Ayers then donated the prizes to the lucky winners, in the persons of Mrs. W. Stewart, with a gross score of 50, and Mr. J. R. Charron for the men. Two consolation prizes were also given by Mr. Gilbert Ayers in the unique form of a free lesson each by the golf pro. at St. Andrews, for the lady and gentleman with the highest score, Miss Freda Mason and Rev. W. LeCras taking the honors.

After supper had been served, the majority of the members played a further nine holes and all present agreed that they had a most enjoyable time.

The weekly tournament on Wednesday, in the form of an approaching and putting competition for Mr. Clement Tremblay's prize was won by Miss Margaret Scott, while the men, after three ties had been played off, resulted in Mr. Leonard Ayers emerging the winner after sinking one of his famous puts from the edge of the green.

The regular weekly Wednesday mixed competitions continue throughout the summer months and members are asked to kindly keep this night of the week open.

Until the end of the season, prizes won in the weekly mixed competitions will be distributed on the Field Day, scheduled to take place one week after Labor Day.

ATTENDS CORPS CONVENTION

The self-styled "French contingent to the Canadian Corps Reunion at Toronto" L. B. Davis, of Paris, France, arrived at Quebec on the Empress of Australia, above with a double mission. In addition to attending the Canadian Corps Reunion he will attempt to bolster the financial condition of the French branch of the Canadian Legion, which he heads.

Military Funeral given the Late J. Gallery

The funeral of the late John E. Gallery took place on Tuesday, July 26th, from Tees Undertaking Parlor, Montreal, interment taking place in the Field of Honor at Point Claire, where "Last Post" was sounded.

Mr. Gallery, 51 years of age, was accidentally drowned at Waredale Camp, Lac l'Achigan, near Shawbridge, on Sunday July 24th.

He leaves to mourn his death, a loving wife and daughter Doris; his mother, Mrs. J. Reid, of Concord; also five sisters, Mrs. Wyman McGibbon, of Brownsburg, Mrs. R. B. White, of Quebec, Mrs. E. Laurie, of Concord, N. H., Mrs. A. Campbell, of Perth Ont., Mrs. Charles Muth, of New York, and one brother, Leslie, of New Jersey.

More Private Trout Lakes Will Be Open to Public

Without departing from the principle that fishing must be conserved, Hon. Onesime Gagnon, Minister of Mines and Fisheries, is planning to open up some of the fine trout lakes in this province for the average angler who has not the means of maintaining a lake himself — reports Abel Vineberg, The Gazette's Quebec commentator.

The co-operation of the Federal Government is being sought in this connection. As a practical commencement of the new policy, Lake La Montagne Noire, in the counties of Terrebonne and Montcalm, has already been thrown open to the public. This lake is abundantly stocked with trout. The Minister refused to renew the lease which has existed for many years, and as a result thousands of fishermen have thronged there. At the same time, points out the Minister, there is no desire that the lake shall be ruined because of its being thrown open to the general public, and wardens have been specially appointed to enforce the regulations. Also, the Hon. Mr. Gagnon has written to the Federal Minister of Fisheries asking that the Government pass a regulation that there shall be no fishing in this lake from September of this year through the 1939 season.

Other measures will be taken to control fishing and assure the permanence of the anglers' sport.

Grenville Man to Stand Trial on Arson Charge

Rene Desforges, 25, of Grenville, who was accused of arson, was sent to trial by District Magistrate Donat Lalonde at St. Jerome last week. Bail was set at $500.

According to the evidence of Anthime Charbonneau, bartender in a Grenville hotel, Desforges on February 24, 1938, the date of the fire which destroyed a barn and contents belonging to Fabien Gascon at Grenville, told Charbonneau: "I am mad with someone."

Charbonneau had asked who the person was and the reply had been: "Never mind, before the night is over, you will know." The fire broke out some time later.

Other witnesses testified that on the date of the fire, Gascon and Desforges had been together and were to have come to Lachute in the evening but at the last minute Gascon refused to go. Desforges became angry. The pair divided and Desforges went to the hotel where he allegedly entered into the conversation reported by Charbonneau.

Investigator Malo, of the Provincial Fire Commission, testified he had obtained a confession from Desforges. This was not read in court, but was placed in the record.

Results of the trial will be eagerly awaited by many who are interested in this case, as both parties are local residents and well known in this district.

B - A Oil Company Limited give Movie Entertainment

About 100 employees and guests were entertained by the British American Oil Co., Ltd., at Desjardins Hotel, on Friday evening last, when moving pictures were presented showing the growth and development of both Gas and Oil industry.

Of special interest was the first idea of wheels, which in the inventive stage were seen from huge round logs. Then also came the first motor, with its deafening knock noise, which set engineers working on a silencer. This was eventually overcome by the use of "Ethyl," a solution which when added to the gas eliminates the dreaded knock.

The process of oil and gas refining was shown in detail from the time it is taken from the wells, until ready for distribution.

Special attention was drawn to the extensive use of B-A Products, which have been chosen by leading Canadian Airlines, were made in Canadian refineries and especially shipped to Washington, U.S.A., at the request of the winner and runner-up in the National "225" Speed Boat Championship for use in these races, were the choice of the winners in practically every speedboat race in Canada and are every year the choice of more and more Canadian motorists.

The gathering was honored by the presence of Mr. G. Héon, M.P., Mr. G. Dansereau, M.P.P. and Mayor Rodrigue. Officials of the company present, included, Messrs. Geo. Methot, District Sales Representative; R. E. Wager, Montreal office Sales Manager; K. Rice, Montreal, Office Manager; H. Hunt, District Sales Manager; N. Jester, Mechanical Engineer of Toronto; and G. Connors, who demonstrated the different kinds of gas used in motors to prove that "Ethyl" compound, when added, saves knocking.

Refreshments were served and appreciation expressed by the sponsors.

Argenteuil Women's Institutes Report Varied Activities

Brownsburg Branch heard an interesting paper on Canadianization and National Events by Mrs. N. E. Smillie, and enjoyed community singing under the leadership of Miss Roberts in the absence of Mrs. (Rev.) Pike. Their convenor of Canadianization and National Events being on a visit to the West, Mrs. Smillie gave her paper.

Frontier heard an interesting paper on Immigration and Colonization read by Miss Margaret McKiddie for the convenor, Mrs. I. Fuller. This branch planned their annual tea in the Stone Hall for August 5th and heard convention reports from Mrs. J. Beattie and Mrs. R. Dobbie.

Lachute Branch heard an interesting paper by Mrs. (Dr.) McMartin, "No nation can rise above the level of its homes." This was a feature of Canadianization. Reports of delegates to the annual provincial meeting at Macdonald College were heard, also of the picnic visit to Ottawa Experimental Farm. A report of work done in connection with the County Fair was given and mention made of the praise received, due to the courteous service rendered by the members in serving meals and lunches, thus helping make the fair a great success. Magazines were sent to the Sanatorium at St. Agathe and fifteen dollars sent to Farnbow for milk for babies.

Lakefield reports proceeds from an afghan amounting to $18.60, also hearing a very interesting report of Macdonald College Convention given by Mrs. A. Kerr.

Pioneer discussed an exhibition of handicrafts, heard a very full report of the convention by Mrs. John Bradley, decided to hold an Amateur Night in August, gained one new member and heard a very interesting paper on Canadianization and National Events, read by the convenor, Mrs. Jas. Drew, also heard Current Events, prepared by Mrs. Jas. Thompson and read by the secretary.

Upper Lachute-East End reports for June and July. In June an interesting and instructive demonstration on bed making and care of patients by trained nurses, was given and an instructive lecture by Dr. McMartin on "Pre-natal care, feeding of babies and contagious diseases. Sixteen members and five guests were present at this meeting, which was held at the home of Mrs. T. Hume. Their roll call was Helpful Hints for the sick room.

July was a general business meeting with an interesting convention report by Mrs. T. Hume. Fifteen members and guests comprised this meeting, held at the home of Mrs. B. Rodgers.

Scottish Travellers to Canada Visit Relatives Here

On Monday, July 25, Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Gibb, of Aberdeen, Scotland, sailed for home on the S.S. Athenia. They have just completed an extended visit of over two months in Eastern Canada.

Earlier history reveals that the Robertson family came from Scotland to Canada. One daughter, however, returned to the old land and was married to Mr. Wm. Mackie. Mrs. Gibb is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mackie and consequently first cousin to Mrs. J. H. Black, Mrs. Alex McPhee, Mrs. Wm. Scott, Mrs. W. H. Gordon, and Mr. Wm. Rodger.

While here, these Scottish friends were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Gordon, of Lachute; of both Miss Mabel Robertson, and Mr. and Mrs. John Robertson (of St. Petersburg, Fla.) at Ottawa; of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Robertson at Toronto; of Dr. and Mrs. Cowper at Buffalo, N.Y.; and of Mr. and Mrs. George B. Gagnon at Westmount. They also visited with other relatives and friends in Lachute and vicinity. On Saturday afternoon, July 23, a "bon voyage" garden party was given in their honour at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Black, in East Settlement. About fifty relatives, old and young, participated in a happy and pleasant family reunion.

These genial Aberdonians appreciate exceedingly the kind hospitality extended to them during their stay. They speak highly in praise of Canada, and note marked improvements in agriculture, manufacturing, and communications since their last visit thirty years ago — especially in Lachute and neighborhood. They greatly admire the beauties of rural Canada. They enjoyed playing golf at Ottawa, sailing among the Thousand Islands, visiting Niagara Falls and Peninsula, sight-seeing from Mount Royal, and a week's visit at Deer's Head Inn, Lake Macdonald, in the Laurentians north of Lachute.

HAS NOTABLE CAREER

Dr. George Hilton, Veterinary Director-General, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, is about to retire after 33 years distinguished service. Born at Verkator, Russia, of English parentage, Dr. Hilton was educated in England. For fourteen years he was the Canadian representative on the Executive Board of the American Veterinary Medical Association, and on several occasions has represented the Dominion at international conferences.

Safety League Urges Investigation of Mishap

The fact that an investigation had not yet been called following the recent sinking of a small boat at Val d'Or, where one life was lost, was deplored by Vice-President George A. Savoy at a meeting of the public safety committee of the Province of Quebec Safety League.

Committee members denounced the fact that an accident of that type, that might have had a much more tragic aftermath, had not been instantly followed with an official inquiry.

Instruction was given the secretary to write at once to the competent authorities in order to discover why 32 passengers had been taken on such a small boat. It was claimed that stricter rules should be adopted so as to prevent a repetition of such an accident.

THE MINIMUM PRICE OF WHEAT

Ottawa Spotlight — There is a good deal of speculating these days on what will be the minimum price for wheat set by the Government. It will be known shortly. Setting the price, which means the price guaranteed, isn't an easy matter. You have on one side the interest of the farmer who has suffered from drought for a number of years and who now sees an opportunity of rehabilitating himself through a good crop; on the other, the interest of the taxpayer, who might have to dig down in his pocket for a substantial amount if the guarantee price turned out to be well above the average market price during the coming season. In a recent letter to the Minister of Trade and Commerce, Mr. Bracken, Premier of Manitoba, made a strong plea for a generous price. Pointing out what a good crop with favorable returns will mean to the farmers, to the railways, to federal expenditures for drought relief and unemployment, he urged the Government, with the advice of the Wheat Board, to "follow the course of action which will make the 1938 crop an instrument of long awaited recovery of the whole of Canada and less directly an agency of further recovery of the whole Canadian economy." The people of Canada, as a whole, as well as the Dominion Government, are taking the deepest interest in the outcome of the western harvests and in its successful and profitable marketing.

The heavy crops, not only in Canada, but in the United States and in several countries of Europe, have caused anxiety over the future trend of prices. It is this that makes the government's task of fixing a minimum price an unusually difficult one.

C.B.C. to Broadcast Opening of Thousand Island Bridge

The opening ceremonies at the Thousand Islands International Bridge, which will join Canada and the United States across the St. Lawrence River at Ivy Lea, Ontario, will be broadcast over a coast-to-coast radio network on Thursday, August 18, 2.45 to 4.00 p.m.

The Canadian and American parties who will meet at the exact boundary, on Wellesley Island, include President Roosevelt, Lord Tweedsmuir, Governor-General of Canada, Lady Tweedsmuir, Prime Minister Mackenzie King, and Governor Herbert H. Lehman of New York.

The Governor-General and Lady Tweedsmuir and their entourage will travel from Quebec in a special railroad car, and arriving at Brockville will board a private yacht which will carry them down the St. Lawrence to the scene of the ceremonies. Canada's Prime Minister will be aboard with the vice-regal party, sailing under the Canadian channel-crossing of the new five-span bridge.

President Roosevelt will arrive at Wellesley Island near the 90-foot span crossing the boundary, where the actual dedication will take place. With a twenty-one gun salute as the signal, the King's representative in Canada and other Canadian officers will proceed to the centre of the bridge under military escort.

Important Canadian and U.S. church dignitaries will deliver the invocation and benediction and martial music will be played by military bands of both countries. The broadcast will commence with descriptive commentary at 2.45 p.m.

The bridge, linking New York State and the Province of Ontario, extends from Collins Landing, near Alexandria Bay in New York State, to Ivy Lea, near Gananoque, in Ontario.

Storm Hits St. Jerome Causes Slight Damage

Slight damage was reported in St. Jerome and district by a severe electrical storm which broke there at 5.30 o'clock on Tuesday. The Gafineau Electric Co., Ltd., reported some wires broken at Le Cordon on the northern limits, while a few trees were damaged in the district.

There was loud thunder, lightning, heavy rain and hail. The storm lasted 15 minutes and seemed to swing northwards.

Trail Riders Plan Perfect Mountain Holiday

THE Trail Riders of the Canadian Rockies have an unusual holiday tithed set aside for the end of July when they will make a five-day exploratory trip through the picturesque section of the Rocky Mountains northeast of Banff.

The society, which was organized to open new trails through the mountains and give members an unrivalled mountain holiday at the lowest possible cost, has made many interesting trips in the past, but few with more promise than this year's from July 29 to August 2. They will ride over high passes and down into deep valleys in the shadow of 10,000-foot peaks; they will find time for fishing, or camera studies of the beautiful scenery or the big game which is found in such large numbers; they will enjoy campfire sing-songs and a bang-up Pow-wow at the end of the trip. These outings have become so popular that many Americans plan their holidays at Banff Springs Hotel, Chateau Lake Louise, or any of the several attractive bungalow camps every year to coincide with the official Trail Hike or Trail Ride.

It is a trip which will attract the novice rider as well as the experienced horseman, for the horses used are mild, sure of foot, and easy to handle. Experienced guides, cowboys, and cooks will be along to smooth the trip, while arrangements are well under way even now for the Trail Riders to find a comfortable camp and a warm meal waiting at the end of each day's ride. Two nights will be spent at one of the camps — the one nearest to the best fishing and most spectacular scenery.

Interest in this year's outing is keen, according to J. Murray Gibbon, Windsor Station, Montreal, the secretary-treasurer, who said that he expects there will be many new members in the party leaving the Banff Springs Hotel for the start of the ride on July 29. Photographs show scenes from the rides of former years and clearly indicate the joys of the mountain trails.

Election Promises in Low Gear, Says Correspondent

Grenville, Que., July 22, 1938.

Editor, The Watchman, Lachute, Que.

Dear Sir:

What on earth ever happened to the gang that did such terrible things to our money back in the good old days before the election?

What was all the shouting about? It begins to look as if there was more shouting than shooting. We used to hear about the most awful things that were going to happen to them fellows, but so far if anyone has been sent to the coop it has escaped me. Can it be under our pure and noble Government that there is one law for the rich and another for the poor? It is now going on three years since we began to hear of those wolves in human form who devoured our hard-earned money. (I hope it gave them indigestion). But no, perish the thought! If we live long enough some of these fellows will get theirs, and be sent down for, oh, so many years. Thus will Justice triumph even if a little delayed en route. Three cheers and a tger for Justice.

Then there is the little matter of reductions in the auto licenses, not to mention the toll bridges. I am still paying the same old $24.90 that I did ten years ago. Mr. Duplessis, being a very busy man, cannot be expected to remember such trifles. For shame to bring up such awkward subjects. A man like Mr. Duplessis, who has to keep an eye on bold fellows like Paul Gouin and that Adelard Godbout, besides running a few odd Departments and opening a pulp mill or two every so often, can't think of everything. And besides, these fellows need watching. You can't tell what they'll be up to. Then, hasn't he got to see Hepburn once in a while to see if they can't frame something on King?

Of course, when everything is going along so nicely, outside of an odd kick from those pesky Liberals about so much unemployment (which should never be mentioned as it was all the other fellows' fault when they were in power for ever letting it get started), it does not seem right to have people kicking about such disagreeable subjects, and toll bridges, even if Ontario gives licenses about sixty per cent less than ours. It only shows how Ontario fellows must be really.

Of course, Mr. Hepburn makes up for it by digging into dead men's estates way back to 1916, and making the heirs pay a whole lot of money they don't want to pay. So with the help of all this, and about ten million he makes out of the whiskey, he builds fine roads and gets nearly all the tourists, when everyone knows that Quebec is a much nicer place and those tourists should come in here, just the same even if they do break a spring or two. They should be glad they don't break their necks. A little thing like a spring! Phooey! Besides, isn't it good for our garages? Of course, the well-known worm will turn and put up a feeble kick. Ask Mr. Taschereau. Our experience in the last elections shows that when the aforesaid worm does get up on his hind legs and roar, the mortality among politicians is high. But that is all past now and should never be referred to until the next election, when it might come in handy for some of those fellows who are trying to climb back on the water wagon again.

Look what we are getting now! Nice promises, enough to satisfy almost anybody, and some of them may actually be fulfilled. All we need is some patience and not be in such a hurry. Just wait until Premier Duplessis is not so busy with things like appointing new ministers and such. Why, it was only the other day he appointed a new man to run the Lands and Forests Department, leaving himself with only a measly two or three others. Why, he can run a Department with one hand as easy as you can run the old Ford. He even keeps the Roads Department, which everyone knows is a tough job, so he deserves lots of credit for working so hard in our interest. Then again, some people are kicking about the summer being half gone and some contracts not even let yet. This only shows their ignorance. How can you expect everything all at once?

P.S. I nearly forgot to tell you that Premier Duplessis has to watch out and see that the drafted Germans don't get Anticosti. Where would we be if he didn't look out for things like that?

Yours truly,

W. R. Mackan.

Editor's Note: Patience, brother! The wheels of progress turn slowly.

Young Pirates Ordered to Learn Ten Commandments

Three juvenile "pirates" who sailed away in a "borrowed" $25,000 yacht last May must go to church and learn the Ten Commandments.

Judge I. B. Maxey, of Santa Cruz, sentenced trio to a U.S. reformatory, but suspended commitment on condition the "pirates" use no liquor or tobacco, attend religious service weekly, learn the Ten Commandments and make no public appearances.

Judge Massey also barred the voyagers from writing or authorizing any articles or permitting pictures to be taken.

The youths got as far as Peurta Valarta, state of Jalisco, Mexico, when their projected South Seas trip ended.

WHO WOULD?

A red-haired boy applied for a job in a butcher shop. "How much will you give me?"

"Three dollars a week; but what can you do around a butcher shop?"

"Anything."

"Well, be specific. Can you dress a chicken?"

"Not on $3 a week," said the boy.

Lachute, July 27, 1888.

Messrs. Bampton, De Salabery and Page returned on Tuesday from their trip to St. Jerome, by boat, up the North River.

The 8th annual picnic of the employees of J. C. Wilson & Co. will take place tomorrow, Saturday, from Montreal to the grove below the paper mill. A large attendance is expected.

Owing to the cloudy sky on Sunday evening last, the total eclipse was totally spoiled, as far as Lachute was concerned. It began at 9:55 and continued until 3:34. The total eclipse proper commenced at 11:54 and ended at 1:36 a.m.

Half of the plank walk on Foundry Street is built and appears to be a first-class job. If Mr. Lafleur had commenced where we recommended last week, he would have met the wants of a long suffering community. However, we trust that before next week new walks will be built in the West End.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Carpenter, of Buffalo, N.Y., are guests of Mrs. Geo. Carpenter this week.

The residents of "Ivan Bower" purpose giving a grand concert in the Town Hall, on August 9th, in aid of the Baptist Parsonage Fund.

The afternoon tea served by Mrs. R. D. McKenzie at her pretty home on the banks of the North River on Thursday last, passed off very pleasantly indeed. There was a goodly attendance, many of whom took advantage of the spin up the river by launches, while others drove. The proceeds of the tea were given over in aid of St. Simeon's Church funds.

Messrs. A. G. Lemoine and J. Stewart, of Montreal, also L. McArthur, of Lachute, were week-end guests in town.

Messrs. Wm. and Peter Gordon spent a few days last week in Vank-leek Hill.

THE NATIONAL HOUSING ACT

The Government has proclaimed and is now bringing into full operation Part One of the National Housing Act. The other sections of the Act became operative when the bill passed Parliament and received royal assent. Part One of the Act deals with low cost housing construction. It provided for Government loans aggregating 20 million dollars, for the construction of inexpensive but well built houses. In combination with lending companies (the Government advancing one dollar to every three dollars advanced by these lending companies) the Government will lend from 70 to 80 per cent of the cost of 2,500 dollar houses and those costing less, and from 70 to 80 per cent on higher priced dwellings. In the case of houses built in remote districts the Government will guarantee from 20 to 25 per cent of the amount lent by the lending companies.

This section of the National Housing Act supersedes the Dominion Housing Act of 1935. A great deal of work is going on this summer under the low cost housing plan and inquiries and applications are pouring into the department. There is no doubt of its success.

It is also reported that there has been a very encouraging interest shown in the second section of the housing act which provides for loans by the Government aggregating 30 million dollars to municipalities and other qualified local housing authority for the construction of low rental housing. The money is advanced by the Government at very low rates, from 1 1/2 to 2 per cent per annum. Another act which is also aimed at encouraging the building industry and helping the employment situation is the one which authorizes the advance of 30 million dollars at the rate of two per cent to municipalities for renewal and improvement of waterworks, electric lighting plants and other "self liquidating" enterprises. Many applications for loans under this act have been received. The provinces in which the municipalities are located must guarantee the loans. This provision must be settled before the act is in full operation. As urged by the Minister of Finance when these bills were being discussed in the Commons, the full measure of benefit can be derived from these acts only when the building trades, municipalities, the provinces and all other interested sections of the community lend their full co-operation. The primary stages in the operation of these acts, however, are encouraging.

TRAINING R.A.F. PILOTS IN CANADA

Captain J. M. Robb, commander of the Royal Air Force Central flying school, is coming shortly to Canada to discuss with Canadian Government officials the question of training R.A.F. pilots in this country. The Prime Minister, Mr. Mackenzie King, recently wired the British Government that the facilities of the National Defence Department were available for the training of R.A.F. pilots here, and the British Government gratefully accepted the offer. The impending visit of Captain Robb is the result.

BUYING AIRCRAFT IN CANADA

Very shortly also will arrive the air mission from London which will arrange the purchase of aircraft in Canada for the R.A.F. The kinds of craft to be built in Canadian factories, it is believed, will be torpedo bombers, flying boats and other heavy service machines. The extent of the purchases will only be known when negotiations are concluded, but naturally rumors are afloat about one or two hundred millions of dollars. Some estimates have gone to 250 million, but this can only be guesswork until something definite is arranged, by the air mission and the Canadian industrialists. Canadian aircraft manufacturers, in the meantime, have been perfecting arrangements among themselves to work in some sort of co-operative pool so that the work of producing and delivering the orders will be done in the most efficient way possible.

TRADE PACT WITH THE UNITED STATES

The present word is that in September the long awaited pact with the United States will be signed. The department officials who have the negotiations with the Western government in hand have been working diligently for months, settling points in dispute and generally arranging the details of the reciprocal bargain. It is said that lumber duties into the United States and cattle quotas were points of serious discussion but that while likely enough, does not bear the stamp of absolute authenticity. It is probable that the correlated pact between the United Kingdom and the United States will be ready for signature at the same time.

We nicknamed an ardent fisherman "The Grasshopper King," and he came around and gave us his opinion, which wasn't complimentary. Other little references of a humorous nature have caused a near fight at times, simply because we are so convenient to be got at that almost before the ink on the paper is dry someone comes around with revenge gleaming in his eyes and threatens to clean up the whole gang in the print shop. We usually keep the type metal within range so that if the callers become too threatening we can take up arms in defence of the liberty of the press.

Pursuant to the above petition at a session of the Municipal Council of the Township of Gore, held on the 4th day of July, 1938, the following notice of motion was given:

"That at an adjourned meeting of the Municipal Council of the Township of Gore, to be held on the 18th of July inst., at the usual place of meeting at Lakefield, in the said Township of Gore, the following By-Law will be proposed for adoption:

"That the sale of alcoholic liquor and the issuing of permits therefore be prohibited within the limits of the Municipality of the Township of Gore, under the authority and for the enforcement of the Quebec Temperance Act."

At a session of the Municipal Council of the Township of Gore, held on the 18th day of July 1938, the following by-law was adopted:

TO THE MUNICIPAL ELECTORS OF THE MUNICIPALITY OF THE TOWNSHIP OF GORE

Take notice that the above temperance by-law will be submitted to the municipal electors of the Municipality of the Township of Gore, and that a vote by ballot will be held in the Municipality on the 27th of August, 1938, to decide whether the said by-law is approved or disapproved by the municipal electors of the said municipality.

The Poll to be held at Lakefield school house No. 1, and to open at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, and to close at 5 o'clock in the afternoon (Standard Time).

PLUG . . . its origin

The Duke of Devonshire died recently. He would have been a great personage in his own right, even if he had not descended from one of the oldest families of British nobility. The family name of the House of Devonshire is Cavendish. One of the Duke's ancestors, Sir William Cavendish, who was one of Oliver Cromwell's aides, won immortal fame by inventing plug tobacco.

Sir William hit upon the simple, practical way of making it easy to carry the newly-introduced weed by moistening tobacco leaves with molasses and pressing it into plugs. That was the origin of chewing-tobacco, which came into wide use among Cromwell's soldiers in the English Civil War. Matches had not been invented and clay pipes were easily broken in the field, but plug tobacco could be carried easily, chewed if one had no pipe, sliced and rubbed for smoking purposes.

The popular kinds of smoking tobacco which we call "cut plug" are still known in England as "cut Cavendish," perpetuating the inventor's name.

ASSENTS . . . government

Some of the bright minds in Washington are toying with the idea of changing the Government's system of bookkeeping so that it won't show Uncle Sam so deep "in the red." The idea is to set up a list of assets to offset the expenditures and the public debt, as if Government were a business concern.

The principal trouble with that scheme is that nobody can put an honest cash value on the things Uncle Sam has been spending so many billions for. True, there has been a good deal of face-lifting of the general landscape; there are a lot of new roads, bridges, battleships, schoolhouses and public buildings, but the U.S. couldn't sell them if they wanted to raise money. Who'd buy a second-hand Post Office? Those things no more offset the national debt than do the war debts which nations still owe the United States.

Only careless thinkers compare the Government with a business concern. The only object of a business is to earn profits. It is Government's concern to serve all the people and make all the people pay for the service given. It can't be put on a business basis.

DOGS . . . St. Bernards

Everybody who has heard or read about the dogs of St. Bernard will be grieved to learn that they have been banished from their Alpine home to the Himalayas. No more will snowbound travelers crossing the dangerous mountain pass between Switzerland and Italy be rescued by these great beasts, trained to find them and lead them to the shelter of the hospice which the Brothers of St. Augustine have maintained for more than 900 years.

Innumerable lives have been saved by these dogs, but last Winter two of them attacked and killed a little girl who had become separated from her parents, and the order of banishment followed. Tunnels and improved modern transportation have made Winter travel through the Alpine passes unnecessary, and in Summer the work for which the St. Bernard dogs are trained is not needed.

So the picturesque and romantic St. Bernard dogs are on the way to Tibet, under the escort of an aged brother of the order.

MARX . . . class war

The early Socialists, Owen, Fourier and others, taught that there should be no class distinctions. Karl Marx, the German whose book "Das Kapital" is the Bible of modern Socialism, taught that there were two classes into which all mankind naturally divided, capitalists and workers. Between those two classes, he taught, there was eternal and unreconcilable war.

The absurdity of the Marx doctrine was pointed out recently by Dr.

When both fully understood that, we can make progress.

Never Two Alike

Snowflakes fall by uncountable, unimaginable billions, in every snowstorm that blows. Sometimes they are big and moist, sometimes little and hard and dry. They always have six points, so they are always alike in that way. But they are not alike in any other way. No snowflake has ever been seen that was an exact twin of any other snowflake, and scientists have carefully examined and photographed thousands of them. Snowflakes are complete individualists; every one is a pattern unto itself.

Banned Game of Cricket

England's kings banned the game of cricket because they feared it would interfere with archery practice. "A dishonorable and useless game," Edward III denounced in 1365. Not until 1748 was the royal restriction lifted, although betting on the game was still deplored. With the Eighteenth century, cricket's popularity zoomed. Aristocratic clubs were formed. Nobility he came ardent players.

Cornelius Vanderbilt

He Slept With Each Leg of His Bed in Salt to Keep Evil Spirits Away

How would you like to have some one hand you forty million dollars? Well, that is precisely what happened to young Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt on his twenty-first birthday.

Strange as it seems, this young man, who was heir to one of the largest fortunes in America, has never gone to college.

He doesn't give two whoops for society; but, like all the Vanderbilts, he is intensely interested in horse-racing, and he inherited one of the most valuable racing stables in America.

His father, Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, Sr., went down on the Lusitania when it was torpedoed by a German submarine during the war. Although he was a noted sportsman, he was unable to swim. As the Lusitania was sinking, he was given a place in one of the life-boats; but after he had taken his seat, he got out and gave his place to a woman. Shortly afterwards, another hysterical woman ran around the deck, tearing her hair and screaming that she had no life-belt. So Vanderbilt took off his life-belt and gave it to her.

A few minutes later the ship went down; and Vanderbilt died like the true sportsman and gentleman that he was.

The Vanderbilt fortune was founded by old Cornelius Vanderbilt. What a funny coddler he was! There still is a bronze statue of him on the front of the Grand Central Station, on Forty-second Street, New York.

Born on a farm in Staten Island, about a hundred and forty years ago, he borrowed one hundred dollars from his mother, bought a small ferry boat and started carrying passengers from Staten Island to New York.

How much do you suppose he made out of that one hundred dollar start? One hundred millions, that is all. How did he do it? Largely by investing in ships and railways.

When he was first married and struggling to get a start, his wife ran a hotel in New Brunswick, New Jersey; and, in her spare time, she raised a family of eleven children.

When old Cornelius got rich, he wanted to move to the city, but his wife was an old-fashioned, home-loving person; and she objected. They quarreled, and he told her she was crazy; and, in order to prove it, he had her shut up in an insane asylum for a year.

The old man had a lot of eccentricities. He never used a check book. He always wrote his checks on half-sheets of ordinary writing paper. And he hadn't the slightest respect for the opinions of others. Even when he was eighty-four years old and prostrate on his death bed, old Cornelius Vanderbilt refused to be bossed. When the nurses and doctors tried to make him do things, he threw hot water bottles at them. For weeks before he passed away, newspaper reporters swarmed about the house waiting for news of his death. That made him angry; and one day, when one of the reporters rang the door bell, he crawled out of bed, dragged himself to the head of the stairs and shouted: "I hain't dead and I hain't goin' to die."

With his vast wealth, he was one of the most powerful men in America. He was afraid of no one. Yet he had each leg of his bed set in a dish filled with salt, to keep the evil spirits from attacking him while he slept.

Stress Importance of Immediate Entries for The Ottawa Exhibition

Exhibitors and those intending to enter the various sections of the great program planned for this year's Central Canada Exhibition, August 22nd to 27th, inclusive, are reminded of the importance of getting their entries in on or before the closing dates set for the reception of these entries in order that confusion and disappointment might be avoided.

Entries have been coming into the exhibition office steadily and there isn't any doubt that patrons of the big show will be more than satisfied with the caliber of the 1938 Fair. It is pointed out that entries must be in the hands of the manager accompanied by the required fees on the dates set for closing or must bear the postmark of the date. Entries for which fees are not received before the closing date, or entries which are late, will not be accepted but will be returned to the sender. Entries close at 9 p.m., Daylight Saving Time, on the dates specified.

Horses, classes 1 to 88, July 30; horse show, classes 101 to 155, August 6; trials of speed, August 18; cattle, sheep and swine, July 30; junior agriculture, poultry, agriculture, horticulture, dairy and other food products, handicraft, August 6; women's institutes, hobby show, school children's department, dog show, baby show, athletic meet and Highland dancing, August 13.

All exhibits must be on hand and placed in their proper departments by the opening day of the exhibition or at a time stated in the rules and regulations of each department.

The Right Way to Treat Drunken Drivers

That drunken drivers are not tolerated in the City of Westmount, Que., is indicated in the following editorial from the Montreal Gazette:

"Recorder Charles Hale, in the Westmount Police Court yesterday, passed sentence of seven days' imprisonment, without the option of a fine, upon a defendant convicted on a charge of being drunk while in charge of an automobile. The Recorder's judgment, based on proof furnished by the police, was correct and judicious. It is one that will be applauded by all law-abiding citizens, inclusive of motorists. Good advice and monetary penalties are vainly given and imposed on individuals who, in a too-easy addiction to drink, have such a poor sense of responsibility and are so indifferent to the potential dangers of the machine of which they take control that they will not learn from the sufferings of others. They need to be made to suffer themselves through the experience of a term in the common jail. It is the only way to deal effectively with them. A few stern court rulings like the one handed down in Westmount yesterday, automatically carrying, as in this instance, cancellation of the offender's license to drive a motor car for a period of twelve months, and strictly sober automobile driving very soon would become a definite rule, without single exception."

MUNICIPAL POLICE DISBANDED

Kamloops, B.C., has abolished its police force, whose duties will be assumed permanently by the provincial force. City council entered into a one-year contract (that may be renewed from year to year) with the provincial police. The Attorney-General of British Columbia agrees to police Kamloops with a force at least as adequate as the municipal force, for a sum of $7,969.75 for the contract period of one year.

Kamloops is the fortieth municipality in British Columbia to change from municipal to provincial police.

ALDERMAN CHASES COP FOR SPEEDING IN WARD

In St. Michael's ward, City of Montreal, Ald. Dave Rochon chased a speeding motorcycle cop, forced him to the curb and reported him — to the police.

Complaints from irate citizens that motorcycle police were speeding through St. Michael's ward, spurred the alderman to lay a trap, in best police fashion.

Parking his car unobtrusively on a cross street, he soon heard the roar of a motorcycle and a cop flashed by at high speed. Ald. Rochon set out after him, drew abreast and forced the astonished rider to the curb, where he made known his identity.

At department headquarters the speedster admitted he was going 60 miles per hour, but pleaded there was illness at home and he was in a hurry to get there. Ald. Rochon in this circumstance interceded and the constable was reprimanded without punishment. Previously two police officers had been suspended a fortnight for speeding without reason.

Ovila Savard, of Montreal, had experienced trouble with his steering wheel. With his mother and father and a lady friend, he had got out of the car. The party had been picking up passengers and were about to re-enter the auto when the other machine crashed on top of it. Both cars were completely wrecked. The quartet who had stopped beside the road counted themselves fortunate to have escaped almost certain death.

Dr. J. H. Mason, of Lachute, and Dr. A. R. Côté, of Brownsburg, were summoned, and rendered first aid. Four of the injured were unconscious; the others were dazed with shock and bleeding from numerous cuts. Mr. Mainville, with his two daughters and four-year-old son, was taken to the Western Hospital by ambulance.

Traffic Officers Albert Leger of Brownsburg and Howard Jones of Lachute investigated.

PREVENTION OF ACCIDENTS

The Quebec Association for Prevention of Industrial Accidents reports that there is a slight decrease in claims, which is a good sign. Accidents are like a disease with no respect for persons or plants, breaking out as they do in what might have been considered most immune quarters. This only goes to prove that constant effort, vigilance and attention must be given to every situation in which men and machines are involved.

Canada Leads in Telephone Usage

World-wide figures of telephone development and usage, compiled from official sources by the Statistical Department of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, have just been made available, bringing the record down to January 1st, 1937.

Canada continues to lead the world as the greatest telephone-using country with 222.4 yearly conversations per capita. The United States follows, with 209.9. Next in order come Denmark with 177.5; Sweden, 159.8; Austria, 95.5; Norway, 87.5; Australia, 76.1; Finland, 68.7; Japan, 68.1. Great Britain is still well down the list with 42.6 yearly conversations per head of population, but leading Germany with 38.

The United States is world leader in the matter of telephones per hundred of population, with 14.39, and Canada is in second place with 11.48, followed by New Zealand, 11.25; Sweden, 10.97; Denmark, 10.89; Switzerland, 9.86. Great Britain (and Northern Ireland) with 5.93 telephones per hundred leads Germany with 5.08 and France with only 3.51.

Of Canada's most important cities, Vancouver leads with 29.64 followed by Toronto with 25.35.

Approximately one-half the world's population is found in China, British India, and Russia, but taken together they had only three-fourths the number of telephones in the City of New York alone, where on January 1, 1937, 1,569,337 instruments were in service.

TO MODERNIZE OTTAWA CITY FIRE ALARM SYSTEM

Following a report received from J. Grove Smith, Dominion fire commissioner, and W. L. Clairmont, senior fire prevention engineer in the Department of Insurance, Dominion Government, the Ottawa Board of Control decided on an application to the Ontario Municipal Board for authority to construct a new building and install a modern fire alarm system at a cost estimated at $200,000 to $225,000.

Both fire commissioner and the fire prevention engineer agreed that the fire alarm system is inadequate, obsolete and unreliable and has been kept in operation only by zealous care of those in charge.

DELAY IN NOTICE NO BAR TO ACCIDENT CLAIM

The law which requires that notice of intention to sue the City of Montreal after an accident be given within 10 days of the mishap, is "drastic legislation which should be interpreted generously by the courts," Mr. Justice Forest ruled in Superior Court. His Lordship mentioned the point in refusing to accept the City's defence of failure to give proper notice on the part of Phillip Feigelman, who claimed damages after a sidewalk fall.

While he was in the hospital and unable to give notice to the City of the accident, as required by law, his wife visited his attorneys, and reported the accident. They gave notice accordingly, but there was a slight error in naming the scene of the accident. The error was later corrected, but the City denied liability partly on the grounds no proper notice had been given.

His Lordship found the error caused the respondent no prejudice. Under the circumstance, he said, he must dismiss this defence.

The street was slippery. His Lordship found, and the slight snowfall which occurred just before the accident did not relieve the City of its duty of sanding the streets.

The plaintiff suffered a permanent incapacity amounting to 20 per cent, the court found, and awarded damages of $3,353.

Hit by Train, Man is Killed at St. Jerome

Jumping in front of a moving train, apparently in the belief that he was leaping out of the way, Rene Charbonneau, 22-year-old resident of St. Jerome, was run over and killed on the C.P.R. tracks half a mile south of the St. Jerome station last Saturday. The engine and six freight cars passed over his body.

Inquest was held by Coroner J. G. Latour, M.D., of St. Jerome, and the jury returned a verdict of accidental death.

Evidence showed that Charbonneau was an employee of the Eagle Lumber Co., whose plant is some distance out of town and was walking home on a siding. As he walked, a freight car came along the main line. Engineer Joseph Legault noticed the man on the next track; when at a distance of 500 feet, the walker suddenly started to cross over to the main line. Members of the train crew believed Charbonneau had heard the train, was under the impression it was on the track on which he was walking and decided to cross on the other track. When he heard the whistle he jumped on the track he believed safe, only to leap to his death.

St. John's Ambulance Ass'n Tries for Banner Year

The Quebec Provincial Council, St. John Ambulance Association, striving to make this a banner year in the qualification of 15,000 First Aiders has, to date, reached over fifty per cent of its objective by passing 8,226 students, declared Col. Arthur Gabor, executive director of the Council recently. With classes being carried on at several summer camps, including Camp Kanawana, organized by the Y.M.C.A., Camp Lake Superior, etc., plus daily reports of examination from various points throughout the province, there is an added assurance that the objective will be reached before the close of the year.

Arrangements have been made where, following the school holidays, seventy-five French schools each will furnish at least three or four groups of thirty pupils while plans are also well in hand to cover the English schools in order to assure a success equal to those already qualified among the French schools at the beginning of the year.

The executive director declared that it was the desire of the directors of the Council to give the Association the necessary moral and financial support in order to bring the work of the Council to the highest standard.

TENNIS ACTIVITIES

The tennis grounds have been well patronized during the summer months and much enthusiasm is being shown by the various players and spectators.

On Thursday last the local team played a most pleasant but losing game with Notre Dame de Grace, and on Thursday next (Aug. 4th) a team from St. Hubert is expected to visit Lachute for a friendly match.

Of special interest, however, are tonight's finals for the Héon Cup, which will be played off at 8.30 o'clock and comprise the following games: — one man single, one lady single, two men double and two ladies double.

A large gathering is expected to witness this annual competition.

CONVENTION ARRANGED

Canadian Commerce Chamber Meets at Seignior Club

The 12th annual convention of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce will be held from September 27 to October 1 at the Seignior Club. On the opening day of the gathering there will be a joint committee meeting of the United States and Canadian Chamber of Commerce. Tuesday, September 28, will be devoted to discussions on international business relations and in the morning the president and chairman will deliver addresses. The delegates will attend the annual dinner of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce on Friday and on Saturday, the closing day of the convention, the election of officers will take place.

BETTER WIDTHS AT BAYSIDE MALARTIC

The Bayside Malartic property in Launay Township is being explored with some success, and news received by the Quebec Miner would indicate that a promising mine bet is being opened up.

The extension of the main vein, located some 800 feet south on the line of strike, is widening out considerably. Recent work has uncovered 12 feet of well schist and highly laminated ore, while a further 20 feet of quartz is well mineralized. Pannings of the schist has revealed good gold tailings. The occurrence has been channel sampled across the width of 32 feet, and assays should be available in a few days, the mine manager advises.

Interesting results are also being secured in the surface exploration. Sampling of a new showing was completed a few days ago.

J. A. Robar, mine manager, advises that assays taken at four foot intervals for a width of 12 feet, all in the hanging wall section of the vein ran $2.80, $39.20 and $36.75.

METHOD OF CONTROL FOR GARDEN SLUGS

Garden slugs are frequently numerous on heavy land where they do considerable damage to beans, lettuce, cabbage, cauliflower and similar crops. Like other pests, slugs can be more easily controlled if remedial measures are applied when the animals are small and few in number. To control them, the infested plants (and the slugs) should be dusted with hydrated lime in the evening when the sun has gone down and feeding has commenced. Care should be taken to cover the upper and lower surfaces of the leaves and the soil immediately surrounding the plants. Hydrated lime is effective only when in the form of a light, dry powder.

Lime becomes hard when subjected to moisture and in that condition is non-injurious to the slugs. For this reason, a few light applications of lime at intervals of three or four days are much more effective than one heavy dose. Another method of control frequently recommended is to spray the infested plants thoroughly with Bordeaux mixture. This material is repellent to slugs, and if the foliage of the plants is completely covered by the mixture, the slugs will confine their attention to weeds growing in the field.

NO INVITATION NEEDED FOR VISIT FROM KING

No invitation would be needed for a visit to Canada by the King and Queen of England, Prime Minister Mackenzie King told questioners. "This is their House and they need no invitation," he said.

All Canadians would rejoice if their Majesties could so arrange it that they could visit the Dominion, the Prime Minister said, and he hoped they could arrange it in the near future. But they had obligations to all the dominions and such matters could not be hurried.

WANT STIFF TAX ON PEDDLERS

United Counties Hear Request From Merchants

Complaining of unfair competition of door-to-door salesmen, "who often sell inferior goods at a higher price," 167 rural and small town merchants of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry counties recently petitioned counties council to pass a bylaw imposing license fees upon peddlers. They suggested a sliding scale from $60 for foot peddlers, $100 for a peddler with one horse vehicle, $200 for a peddler with a two-horse vehicle and $500 for peddlers with motor vehicle. Council promised consideration.

Frank T. Shaver, Aultsville, ex-M.P. for Stormont, and A. A. MacDonell, St. Raphael's, former warden, acted as spokesmen for the delegation. They declared they were not seeking to cut off competition in order to raise prices, as city stores, chain stores and mail order houses are in stiff competition and keep prices down. At the same time, they felt they were up against unfair competition from door-to-door salesmen, "not residents of the counties and often not even Canadian citizens."

They declared if council would grant uniform peddlers' licenses for the three counties they would ask township and village councils to rescind conflicting bylaws.

(CORRESPONDENCE)

Dear Mr. Editor:

Thank you for the copy of the letter sent to various Canadians in connection with a possible policy for the weekly newspapers to follow.

My answer to the question would be that the most important thing to work for is a national spirit. Today provincialism is growing at such a rate that the Dominion is almost a collection of nine independent states. We can never be a nation until we learn to think like a nation, and we can never think like a nation so long as we think only of one section of a country.

We need a reduction of government machinery and a reduction of taxation.

We need to eliminate party patronage.

We need to improve our educational system.

And, in my opinion, we need to cultivate and emphasize our British connection.

These are the things for which Maclean's stands and is working for year in and year out. With the weekly press standing unitedly for all or part of such a programme I think their influence would produce results.

Very sincerely yours,

H. NAPIER MOORE,
Editor,
Maclean's Magazine, Toronto.

Federal Election Hinted for 1939

Date Will Be Influenced by Provincial Vote in Quebec

When Prime Minister Mackenzie King on Tuesday night brushed aside the idea of a general election this fall, reports the Star correspondent, something which no one at Ottawa has ever expected, he might have gone further and said that next year the election is probable. It has not been decided on for then, it has not been discussed but, in the back of the heads of the ruling powers that is the time which is favored. Policies and preparations will be shaped to that end but always with the continuance of change.

The date, in part, may be influenced by events elsewhere. For example, it will mean something to the Government here whether the Quebec Provincial election precedes, or follows the Dominion election. The next Quebec provincial contest may be next summer or in the following year.

In any event one result, read into the recent Conservative convention, is that in the next Dominion election Conservative candidates will be run in all Quebec constituencies. At one time a break in the convention was mooted. Had Quebec delegates withdrawn, it was openly said that it would presage the formation of a Federal Nationalist Party. That, it is now thought, has been averted completely.

For all present plans and indications the next Dominion elections will be in the fall of 1939.

Intimation by the Prime Minister that the Parliament will not likely meet in the fall sustains the recent forecast that whatever trade agreements may tentatively be concluded by September may not be promulgated till after the congressional elections in November. The present agreement with the United States expires on January 1, which would be a rather natural date for the operation of a new one, subject to ratification by Parliament during January.

Pick-A-Back Seaplane Completes Round Trip

Southampton, England, July 27. — The British pick-a-back seaplane Mercury tonight completed an 8,000-mile transatlantic round trip during which she never deviated from her schedule.

The Mercury, smaller unit of a unique composite aircraft, landed here at 8.12 p.m. (3.12 p.m., E.D.T.) and eight minutes later was moored to her base here, from which she set out for North America a week ago Tuesday. She had left Lisbon, Portugal, at 2.43 p.m., on her last leg.

The parent ship, Maia, larger unit of the twin craft, which launched the Mercury in mid-air from Foynes, Eire, last Wednesday, was here to welcome the smaller craft.

The Mercury averaged a speed of more than 150 m.p.h. for the complete transatlantic cycle, which included stops at Foynes, Montreal, New York, Botwood, Horta, and Lisbon.

The plane is to be sent across the Atlantic again soon.

Army Worm Pest Now Reported in Hawkesbury Area

The army worm plague not heard of since 1914 and which has given farmers a great deal of worry in parts of Ontario farther west, is now reported to spread to the Hawkesbury district. The army worm, although in no great number as yet, have appeared on some of the farms south of the town.

Farther south in Glengarry county they have also been seen as well as around St. Eugene. One prominent farmer in West Hawkesbury said he could actually hear the grain falling as the worms went about their work of destruction. They are generally at their worst in late afternoon from 4 o'clock until sundown.

The Department of Agriculture at Quebec are issuing warning to farmers to ally the onrush of the army worm that is devastating the crops of our province. The following poem sent in by "Frightened Farmer" is quite timely:

Oh, Argenteuil farmers beware of the day
When the Army Worm comes, eating all in its way!

Ontario's fields are laid waste by this blight

Which, after it's eaten all fodder in sight

In Mitch Hepburn's domain, will descend on Quebec

And then 'twill be too late to stop it, by heck!

So heed ye this warning, and husband your hay

To keep the dire spectre of famine away.

The Army Worm's legions are going to town

And a mere "Tut! Tut! Tut!" will not put these pests down.

They will cross on the Bridge, swing from girder to beam,

O'er Chatham's fair fields in their millions to team.

(Though little we thought when 'twas opened in state

That the new Perley Bridge would bring such a dire fate).

So gird for the battle, ye farmers of Chatham!

It's time to be up and it's time to be at 'em!

Trenches

When army worms are seen proceeding in a certain direction they may be stopped by opening a trench with a plough or a shovel. The depth must be at least 10 inches and the side, opposite to the field to be protected, should be vertical in order to prevent caterpillars from climbing. In the bottom of the trench holes are dug every 10 or 20 feet where army worms will fall and are easily crushed. A good trench may act

The Adventures of Marco Polo

Robert E. Sherwood

Gary Cooper in the role of Marco Polo, philandering
and battling his way to Golden China.

Marco Polo, famed 13th Century Venetian traveler, comes to the Court of Kublai Khan in Peking and falls in love with Kukachin, the Emperor's daughter. Through the machinations of Ahmed, the ruthless and scheming Minister of State, Marco is sent to the camp of a rebellious chieftain, Kaidu, to act as a spy, but en route an attempt is made upon his life and that of Binguccio, his servant. They escape and make their way to Kaidu's camp. Marco charms Kaidu's wife, Nazama, who saves him from being boiled in oil. Kaidu warns Marco he is safe as long as he can keep the jealous Nazama amused.

CHAPTER FIVE

Kaidu was a happy man. The problems of war were as nothing compared to the problems of appeasing his jealous wife, and he no longer had those problems. Marco Polo, the Venetian, had the extraordinary ability to charm and divert her. Now Kaidu had time for other things and naturally, one of the things he found time for was the pretty serving maid. And in another tent in Kaidu's camp, Marco Polo exerted every effort to entertain Nazama. If for one moment he allowed her interest to lag, Kaidu's cauldron of boiling oil awaited him; he was very charming indeed. When he returned to his tent that night he found Binguccio fretful and impatient.

"I hope," sneered the little man, "you're pleased with yourself. Made another conquest, haven't you?"

Marco was fingering a piece of black stone and paid little attention. "Are you crazy?" screamed Binguccio. "This is nothing but a dirty stone."

Marco smiled. "But it burns, Binguccio. They call it coal."

Binguccio sniffed derisively. "Fine presents for your father! A dried-up white snake, a child's firecracker, and some dirt that burns! It would be better if you put aside this foolishness and began to think of our escape."

Marco turned on him angrily. "Listen to me, Binguccio. I'm not staying here because I want to. But the instant that lady becomes horrid, you and I will be popped into a big kettle of boiling oil. So you'd better be grateful to me for keeping your miserable body and soul together and be patient until I can think of some way to get back to Peking alive."

Many leagues away, in Peking, Ahmed was gradually beginning to usurp the power he had long coveted. He made public proclamation of higher taxes upon paper, silk, shoes and rice. He announced a new door tax of ten pieces of silver. The people listened dully and looked heavenward for deliverance. When the news reached Ahmed by eagle-carrier that Kublai Khan's army had been destroyed by a terrible typhoon in the China Sea, he grew bolder still. He was seated on the Emperor's throne when the Court Chamberlain came to inform him that the Persian Ambassador requested an audience.

"I'm getting a little tired of the Persian Ambassador," remarked Ahmed. The Ambassador entered, followed by a page carrying a jewel casket. "His Majesty, the King of Persia, bids me remind the Minister of State that the night is but a week hence when the seventh moon will shine in all its mellow magnificence. In expression of my Majesty's impatient affection for his future bride, the Princess Kukachin, he bids me present this token."

"A most gracious gesture," murmured Ahmed. "I will escort you to her."

At the door to Ahmed's quarters, the Persian Ambassador was seized by Ahmed's guards. His frantic protestations fell on deaf ears and the door closed. Ahmed took a beautiful necklace of diamonds and star sapphires from the casket and went directly to Kukachin's apartments.

"I bring tribute to Your Highness," he said, fastening on the necklace. "And whom do I thank for this tribute?" inquired Kukachin coldly.

"Please say no word of thanks. This is only a hint of my devotion."

Kukachin unfastened the necklace and returned it to Ahmed. "I return the hint, Ahmed. Take it and yourself away."

Ahmed's eyes glittered angrily but his voice was soft and insinuating. "I'm grateful for your superb hospitality. It will be all the more pleasant to watch the cold moon of your hatred as it gradually yields to the brilliant hot sun of love in your heart."

Kukachin stamped her foot. "My father will punish you for your impudence!"

Ahmed thought this an excellent time to tell the Princess the unhappy news that her father and his army had met with disaster. And at the seventh moon, he added, he would make her his wife and proclaim himself Emperor.

"You don't at this moment think me qualified to be your husband," he said suavely. "But time will convince you of your error. I have had seventy-eight wives already — and I assure you, I have profited by experience!"

Although she refused to believe that her father was dead, Kukachin was thoroughly alarmed. She sent Vishahka, her maid, to the Tower of Eagles, with a message. Inside the cannister was a note for Marco Polo. The Imperial bird, flying swiftly westward, was sighted by some Tartar horsemen and brought down with an arrow. Thus it reached Kaidu — and finally, Marco Polo.

"Kaidu!" cried Marco. "Let me go back. She is in danger — desperate!"

"Not so desperate," smiled Kaidu, "as others I could name." He rose and his voice was sharp. "We will see you at dinner. And I give you friendly warning, Marco Polo, don't try to escape."

Nevertheless, Marco searched frantically for some means to return to Peking. Good fortune smiled upon him again, for he made a startling discovery. The night guard at Kaidu's tent was Tactai, Ahmed's spy. Marco took Tactai aside and confided that he, too, was a spy of Ahmed's and that they must work together toward Kaidu's destruction. Tactai insisted the privilege of killing the Chieftain be his, and Marco reluctantly yielded the point. But he insisted, they must strike tonight. They agreed on a plan of attack.

That night in Kaidu's tent Marco entertained his host and hostess with music until the time when he knew Tactai would be on guard outside. On a pretext of showing them a game, Marco took up Kaidu's shield and gave Tactai the signal to strike. Tactai threw his javelin at Kaidu — but Marco stopped it with the heavy shield. Two guards rushed in and seized Tactai.

"That is one of Ahmed's men!" cried Marco.

"You — you traitor!" screamed Tactai. "You trapped me —"

When he had been dragged away, Kaidu said, "You saved my life. I thank you, Marco Polo. How did you know that man was going to kill me?"

"I, too, have been doing a little spying," replied Marco. "And now let me ask you something. Why are you in revolt against the Emperor?"

"Because my people have been taxed to the point of starvation."

"I don't blame you. But why don't you do something about it? Take your army to Peking — storm the Palace!"

Kaidu laughed. "My army — against all the forces of Kublai Khan?"

Marco leaned forward tensely. "Kublai Khan and his forces have gone to war against Japan. And with the Emperor away, Ahmed is in command in the Palace. He is going to marry the Princess Kukachin and proclaim himself Emperor."

"Ahmed! Emperor of China! Better the black plague!"

"You can prevent it. The road to Peking is open to you."

"You'll have to leave it to me to get you through the walls."

Kaidu was thoughtful. "I owe you a debt which must be paid. You saved my life — and you can name three wishes which I will grant if it is in my power."

"First," said Marco, "Give me the swiftest horse you have. Second, give me an hour's start at daybreak — before you tell your wife I've gone! And the third — I'll reserve till later!"

At daybreak Marco Polo was galloping toward Peking on Kaidu's fleetest horse, leaving Nazama behind to fret, alone and unloved once more.

BOY SCOUTS THE WORLD OVER

SCOUTS RAISE FUNDS

Flags, national emblems and buttons were sold by Calgary Boy Scouts in order to raise funds to ensure a camp holiday for boys of families unable to send them.

STILL ANOTHER USE FOR SCOUTS

Still another use for Boy Scouts was found by the Police Chief of Chesley, Ont. This was the task of keeping people off the new cement sidewalk and the freshly painted floor of a new theatre.

SCOUTS FORM "HUMAN RAKE"

A "human rake" of Boy Scouts swept backwards and forwards across the playing field of the Glace Bay, N.S., Baseball Club, to clear it of stones and other debris in preparation for the season's games.

SCOUTS AND GUIDES PLANT CENOTAPH FLOWERS

Flowers provided by themselves were planted about the base of the Great War cenotaph at Campbellford, Ont., by the Girl Guides and Boy Scouts of the town. The ceremony was preceded by a procession headed by the Campbellford bugle band.

BRITISH SCOUT AWARD FOR EGYPTIAN LEADER

On the 25th anniversary of the British Boy Scouts of Cairo, His Excellency Sir Miles Lampson presented the Silver Wolf, the highest British award for outstanding service to the Scout movement, to Mohamed Khaled Hassanein Bey, Vice-President of the Egyptian National Boy Scouts Association.

ALBERTA SCOUTS TRY OPEN-FRONT CAMP SHELTERS

Something new in Canadian Boy Scout camping is being introduced this summer at Camp Woods, Alberta's provincial camp site on Sylvan Lake. This is the open front log camp shelter for many years used in winter as well as summer in the Adirondack mountains of New York State, and known as the "Adirondack shelter." Six such log huts, each 9 by 20 feet, were built by a party of Alberta Scouters and Rover Scouts, aided by two experienced Finnish log house builders. The shelters will be used instead of tents by Scoutmasters attending the Northern Alberta Gilwell training course, and later by the Scouts and Rovers.

WAGING WEED WAR WITH NEW WEAPON

"Ilka blade o' grass keeps its ain drap o' dew" is a Scottish proverb which Burns may have had in mind when he wrote "At morn when ilka grassy blade droops wi' a diamond at its head." But there are other plants, broad of leaf and sometimes hairy too, which catch more than their share of the morning dew. Among them is wild mustard now flaunting its golden florescence in many fields, concealing almost entirely the verdant foliage of the grain crop.

The problem of weeds in lawns seems to be a matter of more general concern, says B. Leslie Emslie, well-known agronomist, judging by the numerous requests for advice on the subject. That the same treatment which had proved effective in the eradication of wild mustard in the grain field will control weeds on lawns is vouched for by a prominent government official of the Maritime Provinces, who proved it in general tests.

He does not mention dandelions, however, those universal perennial pests against which so many poisonous attacks have been launched in the form of iron and copper sulphates, sodium arsenate and even copper nitrate, with the too frequent

Berlin Women Crowd To Sales in Jew Shop

That Berlin housewives have not been completely persuaded not to buy in Jewish-owned shops is charged by the newspaper Angriff in connection with the storming of "non-Aryan" shops during mid-summer sales. It was necessary to summon police to keep bargain queues orderly.

The newspaper excuses what happened as a lack of thought on the part of German housewives preoccupied with bargain visions. It is necessary, therefore, after careful observation of these events, says Angriff, to warn German women not to buy from Jews during midsummer clearance sales.

MONKEY BUSINESS

Some months ago a cage of monkeys en route from the Far East to New York became opened and the monkeys escaped. There was great excitement on the water-front as the twenty-odd monkeys were freed. Some of them were easily caught. A quick-witted doorkeeper at one of the large hotels caught two of them in the revolving door. The ship finally sailed without about six of their monkeys. A couple of them were found dead in the park. It is a wonder that more did not die as the weather was cold and there still was snow on the ground. We saw one playing about in the park but had not heard of them since. Not until this morning. Sitting up in bed and looking out the window, we saw a monkey a few feet away from us on a telephone wire. It sat there a few minutes, then went hand over hand and onto a low roof. After fooling about on the roof, it made quite a jump into a large tree. And weren't the birds cross! They scolded and chattered at a great rate. Perhaps they were too much for the monkey, at any rate it did not linger long in the tree but ran down and along the ground, then up on a high fence and along the fence out of sight. We are living in a hotel near the Public Gardens, with a couple of smaller parks nearby, and houses with large gardens and plenty of trees. So it is a good district for a monkey at large. I wonder what it eats. Even monkeys in cages are interesting but to find one so close was quite thrilling.

THE CIRCUS

There is something about a circus. As I write, I hear school-children cheering. They have been dismissed at ten-thirty to watch a circus parade. The parade will pass this hotel and the grown-ups in the place are just as excited about it as any of the children. There are so many things which lose their glamour when we get older but somehow the circus keeps us perennially young. Is it the horse, the elephants and the other animals; is it the clowns or the acrobats; is it the glitter or the wandering life of the circus people; or is it the callopie, that thrills us? Maybe it is a combination of them all, but whatever it is, three cheers for the circus!

EAT TO SATISFY

Vegetable plates and salad meals are popular in the summer but they have one disadvantage — they do not stick to the ribs. Most of us have eaten meals of this sort and have found that although we had eaten plenty, we were hungry too soon afterwards. Foods differ in satiety value, that is in their ability to satisfy. Vegetables are quickly digested and pass through the stomach in a short time, leaving us with that empty feeling. Fats, proteins and sweets take longer to digest and leave us satisfied. When you serve a vegetable meal, add some form of fat and protein. An egg or cheese sauce with hot vegetables is a help. Garnishing the vegetable plate liberally with bacon has more than appetizing value; it gives the desired satiety. Always add something to your salad meals for this purpose. Hard-cooked egg, a wedge of cheese, or a hearty sandwich. The many varieties of canned fish make satisfactory additions to the summer salad. Most people like the desserts. They like them because they taste good but unconsciously they crave them because they are satisfying. Sugar is slow to digest and gives us that pleasant satisfied feeling.

TONGUE SALAD

Chill a can of tongue and cut in cubes. Mix with chilled cooked vegetables. Peas, beans, carrots and asparagus are all suitable. Add a half-onion chopped finely, moisten with salad dressing and serve on lettuce.

SARDINE SALAD

Cut tomatoes and Bermuda onions in thin slices and arrange on lettuce. Drain sardines and place them on the onion slices. Serve with salad dressing. To my way of thinking, this salad served with French dressing is a grand one when it is too hot to feel hungry, as it seems to create its own appetite. Any dressing may be used but the French is specially suitable.

MAPLE PUDDING

2 eggs, 1½ cups milk, ½ cup maple syrup, 2 teaspoons gelatine, 2 tablespoons cold water, a few grains salt, ¼ teaspoon vanilla.

Beat the eggs and stir in scalded milk. Cook over a very slow fire until the mixture thickens slightly. Add the gelatine and vanilla. Cool slightly, then pour into sherbet glasses and chill until set. Garnish with whipped cream if desired.

DATE DROP CAKES

½ cup butter, 1 cup brown sugar, 2 eggs, 1¼ cups flour, 1 cup dates, ½ cup walnuts, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, ½ teaspoon nutmeg, ½ teaspoon soda.

Cream the butter and sugar, add the beaten eggs, then sift in the dry ingredients; add the dates cut in pieces and the chopped walnuts. Mix thoroughly. Drop from a teaspoon and bake in a fairly hot oven of 400 degrees. If I had a dollar for every one of these cookies I have made, it would take me round the world in state.

THE WOMAN'S PAGE

Women's Institutes Generally in Favor of Compulsory Lighting of Vehicles

In keeping with a sentiment voiced at the last annual W.I. meeting of this county, Quebec Women's Institutes appear, as a whole, to be in favor of lights on horse-drawn vehicles. As most of the members of Quebec Women's Institutes are rural women, and know the dangers of dark roads at night when car drivers cannot see teams until too late, their opinion should have considerable weight in deciding this somewhat vexed question. In justice to both parties a law demanding the carrying of lights on horse-drawn vehicles is much needed.

Way to Treat Gossipers

(Granby Leader)

There will be much sympathy to the correspondent of the Swanton Courier who writes the editor of that paper as follows:

Mr. Editor:

Seeing as Swanton is not to have a band this year I suggest we use the money appropriated for music to build an old-time Puritan Ducking Pool for our "Gossipers."

First offenders will be ducked twice.

For the second offence duck them three times.

For the third offence duck them three times and take them out twice.

I believe this would not only furnish us with a pastime Wednesday evenings but would also make this a better community to live in.

Thanks for your time and space.

Don't Growl at Hash

By Betty Barclay

Hash may be an old boarding-house favorite to a few and a boarding-house bugbear to many, but hash, when properly made, is a pretty good fish. Here are two hash recipes that will please you:

BEEF HASH

2 cups chopped cold roast beef or steak, 2 to 4 cups chopped boiled potatoes, 1 cup beef gravy or hot water, 4 tablespoons butter. Salt and pepper.

Put butter (or substitute) into a frying pan and then put in the meat and potato, salt and pepper, moisten with beef gravy or hot water and cover. Let it steam or heat through thoroughly, stirring occasionally to mix it evenly and also to keep it from sticking. When done it should be neither watery nor dry, but just firm enough to stand well when dished. If onion is liked, fry two or three slices in the fat before the hash is added.

CORNED-BEEF HASH

2 cups chopped corn beef, 2 cups cooked potatoes, ½ cup milk or water, 2 tablespoons butter or fat. Salt and pepper.

Mix beef and potatoes together together and season. Pour the milk into a frying-pan with half the fat and when this is warm, turn in the hash, spreading it evenly and placing the rest of the fat, cut in pieces, on the top. Cover the pan and place it where the hash will cook slowly for half an hour. There should then be a rich, thick crust on the bottom. Do not stir the hash. Fold it as an omelet is folded and place it on a warm platter. This slow process of heating the hash gives it a flavor that can not be obtained by hurried cooking.

A woman went to see a doctor. "Doctor," she exclaimed, "loudly, bouncing into the room, 'I want you to say frankly what's wrong with me.'"

He surveyed her from head to foot in his best professional manner.

"Madam," he said at length, "I've just three things to tell you. First, your weight wants reducing by nearly fifty pounds. Secondly, your beauty would be improved by freer use of soap and water. And, thirdly, I'm an artist; the doctor lives on the next floor."

Author of Sister Mary's Kitchen

After you clean and polish your candlesticks and andirons or any other brass and copper pieces, try covering them with a thin coating of colorless lacquer. Then, instead of spending hours this summer keeping them bright and gleaming you will only need to dust them. Use a good metal polish specially recommended for the metal you are cleaning. Rub well with the cleaner and let dry. Then rub off all the polishing material and at the same time bring up the luster of the metal. Wash each piece in a hot light suds and wipe perfectly dry. Rub with a soft cloth dipped in denatured alcohol and then apply a thin even coat of the lacquer with a fine paint brush. I do this every spring to every piece of brass and copper in my house and it never tarnishes all summer. You can treat pewter the same way if you like this metal to shine.

Here's a secret for you who love wild flower gardens tucked into your evergreen borders. Use peatmoss in the soil about the roots of the plants. This produces a loose, moist soil much like that of the woods, so of course the wild things feel at home and thrive happily in their transplanted state. Evergreens, too, like peatmoss dug in around their roots.

The bride who has now moved into her brand new home will discover that mirrors judiciously placed will create amazing illusions of space. Mirror-back shelves in the dining room will double the effect of silver pieces. A long narrow living room gains a feeling of width from a mirror panel hung to reflect light and the full depth of the rest of the room.

Just as mirrors can create an illusion of space so can perfect grooming create an illusion of coolness on a hot day. Of course you are bathing as often as time will permit just for the absolute comfort of it, but if you are dressing for any kind of an occasion add some fresh smelling bath salts to the water. Then indulge in a light dusting powder and relax completely. Be untiring in the use of a perspiration check under the arms and don't neglect to dab on deodorant before you dress.

White Persian Cats Deaf

About 90 per cent of all white Persian cats are deaf, as are other white cats which have been bred from white stock. Deafness and albinism are associated in all animals. "Albino," from Latin "albus" (white), is the biological term applied to a pigmentless individual of a pigmented species. It is the condition in which the dark pigment is absent and the yellow nearly so. The absence of these pigments, for some unknown reason, affects unfavorably not only the vision of the animal but the hearing as well. Some cat fanciers say that pure bred white Persian cats with two blue eyes are generally stone deaf, while those with one blue eye and one pink eye usually can hear.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SUNDAY SERVICES

"Love" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in Churches of Christ, Scientist, throughout the world, on Sunday, July 31.

The Golden Text is: "The Lord is good to all; and his tender mercies are over all his works." (Psalms 145:9).

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want." (Psalms 23:1).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Divine Love always has met and always will meet every human need." (p. 494).

For a person of average height, a kitchen sink should be placed thirty-six inches from the floor.

Hymn by Mrs. Phoebe Brown Subject of CBC Dramatization

Circumstances that led to the writing of the hymn, "I Love to Steal Awhile Away," by Phoebe Hinsdale Brown, will be dramatized during the CBC program, "Romance of Sacred Song," to be presented over the national network from Vancouver on Sunday, July 31, 2.00 to 2.30 p.m.

Mrs. Brown was left an orphan and was taken into the home of her grandparents, where she remained until she was eight years of age. Upon the death of her grandparents she went to live with a married sister whose husband was keeper of the county jail in New York State. There she was ill-treated although she stayed for ten years. Finally she married Timothy Brown, a house-painter, and, though very happy, was always poor. Her children and a sister who was ill were her chief cares.

In the cool of the evenings Mrs. Brown would walk up the road to a house surrounded by a beautiful garden, there to "steal awhile away" from her tasks and, as she expressed it, "to commune with God and find rest and peace." The inspiration she derived from these evening meditations led her to write the hymn which, in some books, is referred to as the "Apologetic Hymn."

"Love" Is No Longer Tenth Word in Wire

From away back in the 1850's when a professional jokesmith hung a pair of muddy boots on a telegraph pole and pretended they had just been received by that new-fangled device called the telegraph — writers, cartoonists, radio jokesters and others have twanged the telegraph wire to produce smiles and chuckles that have contributed their bit to the color and cost of living.

"The one hoary joke which has it that 'love' is the tenth word in a telegram has now been laid away in moth balls and forgotten because present-day users of telegraph service are aware that telegrams are not limited to ten words since extra words may be added at a cost of only a few cents," stated Donald Ross, manager at Montreal for the Canadian National Telegraphs.

A decade or so ago, the editor of a popular humorous magazine conceived the plan of conducting a contest which he named "Scotchgrams." It was a game designed to test the skill of the writer in the use of euphonious words and its purpose was to make a telegraph message convey more words to the reader than were actually written. Getting an idea from this, a Scotsman telegraphed his friends "Isaiah 9:6" (For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given) to announce the birth of a boy. "The low cost of the telegram these days for business and social correspondence," stated Mr. Ross, "makes it unnecessary to unduly economize in words."

Couple Get Six Months For Deserting Children

William Lafontaine and his wife appeared in court at Hawkesbury before Magistrate Raoul Labrosse, charged with desertion and neglect of their four children, ranging in ages from 7 to 14 years. Each were sentenced to six months in the county jail at L'Orignal, and Joseph Lacasse of the Children's Aid Society, who laid the charge, was instructed to see that the children received the proper care.

Eleventh Enough

With a child in every class in the grade schools of Tonawanda, N.Y., and two at home, Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Rollain decided a family of eleven children would be enough. When the eleventh appeared recently, she was named Evelyn Enough Rollain.

HAIR EATING

The custom of hair eating, especially among adolescent females, is not uncommon, and was much more prevalent when women and girls wore their hair longer than it is today. During the period when women wore their hair in braids, twisted about their heads or hanging over their shoulders, it was customary to pull the hair through the teeth or bite the ends of the braided tresses, and swallow them, either intentionally or accidentally. These hair eaters were usually girls and women of normal mentality but inclined to be more or less nervous.

Insane persons, it should be observed, have a decided preference for more solid objects such as nails, needles, pins, tacks, bits of wood, small keys and the like, and the amount of this miscellaneous junk they can swallow without any apparent discomfort is beyond belief. Animals with long hairs have the habit of cleansing their bodies by licking with their tongues. In time they too accumulate enormous balls of hair in their stomachs which, when found, are considered to possess great value as charms and for which butchers received relatively good prices.

Operations Necessary

In time the accumulation of these hair ends in the human stomach causes distress and often necessitates a surgical operation. I have had several cases where the stomach was positively distended due to the amount of hair ingested for many years, and have known of instances in which the hair passed from the stomach into the small intestines and perforated them, resulting in death. One of these hair balls removed from the stomach of a woman of 35 years weighed 16.5 ounces and represented the accumulation of twenty-five years. Seamstresses frequently have similar balls of hair in their stomachs, due to biting off ends of thread, incident to their occupation. The great trouble experienced by the physician or surgeon is in making a diagnosis, inasmuch as most of the symptoms complained of are typical of numerous other diseases such as carcinoma, displaced spleen, floating kidney, fecal impaction and tumors.

Veteran of Fenian Raid Succumbs at Grenville

The death of Edward Dawson, Grenville, Que., marks the passing of an old and respected resident of Argenteuil County. Born at Mille Isles, Que., in 1851, the son of William and Rachel Dawson, who with the Woods and Beates were among the first settlers there from Northern Ireland, the deceased served in the Argenteuil Rangers during the Fenian Raids of 1871, and holds a medal marking that event.

Returning, he engaged in the construction of the Grenville Canal, becoming manager for Geo. Goodwin of Ottawa, and during the next 30 years was connected with construction of the Trent Valley Canal, the Port Arthur break-water, the Soulanges Canal and the Museum at Ottawa.

In 1875, he married Elizabeth, the daughter of John Canning, of Stonefield, and Sarah Hammond, of North River, and purchased a farm in Stonefield, where their family was brought up.

He was a man of sterling character and ability and always maintained that the rule of three taught him to think clearly. In religion, he was an Anglican and was for years a member of the Synod of Montreal, serving on its Executive Committee. In politics, he was an Independent Conservative, proud of his British Allegiance and an old friend of the late Hon. Sir George Perley.

The family include the Rev. E. E. Dawson, of Lacolle, Arthur A. of Montreal, Clarence of Belleville, Ont., Lenus of Brandon, Man., Harris of Iroquois, late Grand Master of the Orange Grand Lodge of Western Ontario and C. Ray Dawson, who now operates the home farm; also two daughters, Mrs. C. F. Watson, of Cushing and Miss Pearl, who since her mother's death, has remained his close companion.

The funeral will take place from his late residence to St. Matthew's Church, Grenville, on Friday, July 29, at 2 o'clock after which interment will be made in the old Church Cemetery.

Travelling Orchestra Survives Odd Crash

Six members of Bill Bushell's travelling orchestra had a close brush with death Saturday night when the car in which they were riding to play at a dance at Morin Heights left the highway half a mile from this village and plunged over an eight-foot embankment, coming to rest on its top in a small creek.

All occupants of the car escaped with minor cuts and bruises and continued to the dance. This accident happened at 8.12 o'clock and traffic was tied up for 25 minutes. Due to the slippery condition of the gravel road in the district a tractor was necessary to return the car to the road, towing trucks being unable to get sufficient traction on the greasy surface.
