CANADIAN WEEKLIES FEATURE "NEWSPAPER APPRECIATION WEEK", OCTOBER 1 - 8

500th Anniversary of Printing Industry Finds Worthy Product in Present-Day Town Weekly

Bulwark of Democracy, Their Facts A Safeguard Against Propaganda

Newspaper Appreciation Week is promoted by the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association — an organization with which The Watchman is actively linked. The observance is not, however, a vain-glorious gesture, a money-maker or a go-getter; it is not our purpose to pat ourselves on the back, but rather to take stock of our usefulness to the community, to evaluate ourselves fairly and squarely, and count ourselves worthy of 500 years of service to humanity which is the record of the printing craft. In the role which the weekly newspaper alone can fill, we desire to assure ourselves that we are aiming creditably to uphold the ideals entrusted to us.

That task, that duty, implies a grave obligation, not only to the publisher but to the reading public. To serve the newspaper's prime purpose — that of purveying NEWS — and yet, more important, to serve as a true community-builder in presenting only news that is wholesome and constructive . . . this would appear a delicate and difficult undertaking. It is, as it appears, just that; and only the continued co-operation of the reading public can make our efforts effective. For this policy we have endeavored at all times to pursue — to tell our readers the truth, but only to a point where morale and reputation shall not suffer; only to a point where fellow-citizens shall lose no whit of pride or courage in the misfortunes we feel called upon to print. Just to that point, no farther we dispense the news of this territory.

Together with the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association, we take pride in the role which home-town weeklies are playing in the national economy. The surest instrument to wield against unprincipled propaganda is the statement of FACTS by a free and unshackled press. Of all modern avenues of publicity there is no freer agent than the weekly newspaper. The typical weekly publisher is, we believe, a Canadian who will first fold up and quit before he lends his "sheet" to harmful and unpatriotic influences. This is our spontaneous challenge to ill-directed propaganda, the most treacherous weapon of these times.

Cost Accountants And Technicians Visit Ayers Ltd.

Group Entertained Here by Lachute Industrialists

A delegation of the Montreal Chapter of the Canadian Society of Cost Accountants and Industrial Engineers, paid a visit to the plants of Ayers Limited and Dominion Shuttle Company on Saturday. Arriving at 10 a.m., the party was met and welcomed by Mr. Thos. Milnes and Mr. Clement Tremblay, of Ayers Limited. They were escorted through the blanket and cotton mills in small groups, so that they might understand the intricacies of manufacture from the raw material to the finished product of blankets, cloth, printers' and paper makers' felts, and cotton rope all produced at the Ayers Plant. The spacious sample rooms where the finished goods are displayed proved of great interest to the group.

The Dominion Shuttle Company was next visited, and Mr. Gilbert Ayers personally conducted the guests through the plywood, shuttle and crossarms mills, explaining the varied processes.

The delegates were headed by President Jean Paul Rolland, Vice-Pres. Paul Kellogg and Sec. Randall Herron. Others present were: P. W. Wright, D. B. Peddie, W. J. Robitaille, W. Booth, S. Roseman, J. Christie, C. Belle Isle, P. Lefebvre, C. A. Ellis, L. Galipeau, W. D. Sanford, J. A. Crosbie, F. King, R. N. Dunstan, L. Kemp, E. J. Loiselle, Lloyd Adams, J. B. Merineau, C. P. Dumas, J. H. Paul, W. A. Marrison, T. S. Fergerson, S. McKean.

Following inspection of the two plants, the party, accompanied by company officials and department heads, motored to Carling Lake where a buffet lunch was greatly enjoyed, the appetites of all being sharpened by the 15 mile drive through the hills and dales to this beautiful spot in the Laurentians, gorgeously decked in its autumnal splendor of colored foliage.

It was delightful weather, quite warm and bright, and gathering on the front lawn the party were addressed by Mr. C. Tremblay, who gave a brief historical review of the rise and progress of the firm of Ayers Limited, paying just tribute to the founders, who in 1870 had the courage to brave the forest and lay the foundations of the present mill.

On behalf of the Society, Mr. Jean Paul Rolland expressed appreciation for the opportunity of visiting the plants and the party were deeply gratified to note the pleasing surroundings and spirit of contentment everywhere in evidence.

FARMER DROPS DEAD NEAR ARUNDEL, QUE.

NATURAL DEATH VERDICT IN PASSING OF AGED RESIDENT

Death due to natural causes was the coroner's verdict in the case of William Staniforth, who died suddenly last Thursday at his farm home, one mile from Arundel on the Rouge River Road.

Mr. Staniforth, 76 years of age, had gone to the farm stables at 6.45 a.m. standard time, and with his wife and son, was milking the cows as usual at that hour. The son later stated he had heard his father's pail crash to the floor and, hurrying to the man, found him slumped in the gutter behind the animals. Dr. R. B. Henry was summoned from Arundel, but he pronounced the man dead.

Acting Coroner W. F. McMartin, M.D., of Lachute, empanelled a jury. The jurors, on hearing the evidence and learning that the aged man had been under medical treatment for a heart ailment during the past three years, returned their verdict of natural death.

Red Cross Appeal Well Supported; B'burg Excels

Returns Not Yet Complete But Objective Surpassed

The Red Cross national appeal has met with a ready response in this county. Argenteuil has not only exceeded its previous collection by well over $2,000, but according to the campaign chairman for this county, Philippe Roy, the objective of $10,600 has been liberally oversubscribed in this territory.

Last year's collection figure was $9,465.36. In the current canvass, up to Wednesday afternoon the amount reported was $11,526.19, with additional returns of around $350 to be received from the collectors, making a total of $11,876.19.

Contributing notably to the success of this drive were the returns from Brownsburg, which exceeded last year's collection very considerably. The county areas were more thoroughly organized than in the last campaign, it is stated, but where district results are comparable with the previous canvass, the totals show little variation, with the exception of Brownsburg; here no doubt, in addition to fine organization work, the influx of population during the past year may be considered a factor in the excellent achievement.

Brownsburg — The second national Red Cross appeal was launched in this community on September 23rd. Mr. O. A. Peterson acted as campaign chairman, and the district has been almost completely canvassed by willing workers under the following team captains — Messrs. O. A. Peterson and A. J. Quinn (Special Names), John Chalmers, A. Brunelle, W. C. Louttit, E. Quesnel, D. Staniforth and H. C. Barry.

With returns still incomplete, and the objective set at $5,000, a sum in excess of $6,500 had been raised here up to Tuesday evening, Oct. 1st. Very hearty praise is due to all canvassers and workers, in attaining such excellent results. Their success proves the time-tried fact that Brownsburg residents never fail to give generously to any cause they believe to be a worthy one. Full details of the campaign in this village will be given in next issue of The Watchman.

Note for Newspaper Week: Lions Club Send Watchman To Local Soldiers Overseas

An interesting session of the Lions Club was held on Tuesday evening at a bi-weekly dinner held in Desjardins' Hotel. President W. M. Cottingham occupied the chair, and the various committees reported progress in the club's ativites — including the sending of cigarettes and The Watchman, home-town newspaper, to the Argenteuil boys overseas, and raising funds for donations to the Red Cross and other kindred organizations. Approximately $300 will be required to meet these obligations, and of this sum nearly $200 has already been raised.

Past-President Lion W.C. LeCras had the happy privilege of presenting Lion Philippe Roy with a gold pin, emblematic of the rank of Past President—his term in that office having been filled with marked distinction.

A number of members signified their intention of going to Magog in the near future for the inauguration of a new club which is being sponsored by Lachute, and on Oct. 10th a delegation from the local club are to attend the charter night of the Lions Club established in Hull.

THE WEEKLY NEWSPAPER INCREASES IN FAVOR

Recently a prominent writer on a New York paper, paid this tribute to the influence of the weekly press:

"With us the small town and country newspaper, which is most often a weekly journal, is more influential than the daily press. A weekly newspaper which is read and absorbed in the seclusion and comparative leisure of a small town or the farm is likely to exercise a greater pull on its readers than the daily paper, crammed with a bewildering array of reading matter and consumed amid the distractions of urban life."

The intimate relationship the weekly bears to its local readers, gives it a distinct advantage over the metropolitan daily, which, as the writer above says, must be read amid the distractions of urban life, and under confusing conditions arising from the "bewildering array of reading matter." Gradually the influence of the weekly newspaper is being recognized. The maintenance of a high standard of service to the public will ensure that the weekly must grow in popular favor, both as a medium for the sale of merchandise, and an influence in the trend of public policies.

Cushing Lady Is Elected President of the Quebec Provincial W.C.T.U.

Mrs. W. Usher, of Cushing, was honored by the Women's Christian Temperance Union with election to the provincial presidency, at their annual convention which took place in Huntingdon last week.

Mrs. A. Graham, also of Cushing, was re-elected provincial editor for Quebec portion of White Ribbon Tidings.

Expressions of loyalty and devotion to King George and Queen Elizabeth were despatched from convention through the State Department. . . . Letters from King George, through his secretary, from Lady Tweedsmuir, Premier King and Premier Godbout, to the Provincial Union, were read at the convention.

In her presidential address Mrs. James Mabon claimed that God is still the "Uplifting Ruler of the World," also that "the liquor traffic would do away with the Church if it could, and the Church could do away with the liquor traffic if it would".

Some of the highlights of the convention were given in temperance facts; one in particular was that — men admire women who do not drink or smoke more than those who do those things. Another fact given by the only charter provincial member, Mrs. Geggie of Beauport, who in her 87th year attended the convention, was that French-Canadians take willingly all temperance literature that is handed them, and more politely often than those of our own nationality.

The Rev. Orr Mulligan, of Westmount Presbyterian Church, in speaking of the folly of drunkenness, said, "No one wants to hire a drunken workman. Unemployment and degredation of the spirit come from drunkenness . . . Crime and drunkenness", he remarked," are social brothers". The Rev. J. B. McLean claimed that temperance work was the foundation of all the work done in the church; while the Rev. T. Knowles stated it had been proven that drunkenness had killed more men than war, and killed them more dishonorably. He berated those who were responsible for the "wet canteen" which got out of our soldier boys more than the $1.30 per day paid them as a soldier's wage, and made drunkards of them. Rev. Knowles' address was one well worthy of record.

Man Seen Jumping to His Death from Perley Bridge

Early Monday morning a young man was reported to have jumped to his death from the centre span of the Perley Bridge into the rapids of the Ottawa River.

Oscar Bodin, 72, of Grenville, a scaler at the Canadian International Paper plant in Hawkesbury, told Provincial Constable H. Jones, of Lachute, that at 6.15 o'clock in the morning he was on his way to work, and as he crossed the bridge over the canal this side of the river, he noticed a man, about 25 years of age, standing there. He later noticed that the man was following behind. He said that as he neared the Hawkesbury side he turned his head just in time to see the man leap from the railing.

Police, on investigating, reported that no one around that age has been reported missing in the district.

Girl and Pony Are Travelling Across The Dominion

Stop for Few Days' Rest With Friends in Lachute

Mary Bosanquet, who is horse-riding across Canada, arrived in town last week-end. She and her bay pony have travelled all the way from Vancouver together. With a pack of interesting stories and adventures, Miss Bosanquet says she intends to write a journal about her trip. Looking bonny and brown, she arrived in Lachute last Saturday evening after a day's travelling of something over 33 miles. After "Jontz" was comfortably bedded down at Lem Hammond's stable, Miss Bosanquet went to stay with Mr. and Mrs. Paul Reading, R. R. No. 3, friends whom she had met in Calgary last year on her way through Alberta. After a few days' rest, Jontz will take his pal to Montreal, where more friends will welcome the plucky travellers. Later, perhaps they will return to these parts; but first, in order to complete the journey, Miss Bosanquet feels she must see the beauties of the Eastern Townships, New England States and possibly visit New York City.

Local Traffic Officer in Escort for Premier

Traffic officer Albert Leger, of Brownsburg, was among the motorcycle escort for Premier Adelard Godbout and his party, who visited Northern Quebec last week-end to officially open the Mont Laurier-Senneterre highway.

The new road starts near Mont Laurier and winds on through undeveloped forest and lake region to the newly-opened mining area, the home of Noranda, Siscoe, Malartic and Val d'Or gold mines. It halves the distance by road from Senneterre to Montreal.

Landmarks Disappear While New Enterprises Develop

While industrial and residential construction is evident on all sides, a demolition crew are busy dismantling the C.N. Railway bridge just north of the Brownsburg Road crossing. The bridge, although off the beaten track, has been a landmark on the sky-line of Lachute. In contrast with this removal since abandonment of the local C.N. branch, is the construction of a modern auto service station by MacRae Motors, on the Brownsburg Road nearby.

Sees Rescue of His Nephew, Air Pilot, In Newsreel Here

English Channel Dogfight Is Shown on Local Screen

St. Andrews E. — A St. Andrews resident and his family were privileged last week to see a newsreel record of a thrilling incident — the rescue of his nephew, a pilot in the R.A.F., after he had baled out of his machine and fallen into the English Channel. The rescue was the sequel to a dog-fight over a naval convoy which had been attacked off Dover. The film gave a first-hand glimpse of the aerial battle, also a close-up shot of the rescue, in which the airman, Officer Patterson, (Pat) Christie, of Westmount, appeared almost within handshake of the movie audience. Previous to this adventure, Christie had been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross and promoted to the rank of Flight Lieutenant in a special all-Canadian section of the Royal Air Force. . . . He is the son of Prof. C. V. Christie, of McGill University.

The resident to whom this newsreel picture brought a particular thrill was the Rev. J. A. Mowatt, for whose special benefit, incidentally, the film was shown at the Rex Theatre, Lachute.

Interviewed on his impressions and the particulars of his nephew's adventure, Mr. Mowatt told a Watchman representative this week that the newsreel brought home the airman's hazardous work in a much more vivid way than would be possible by word of mouth. He said seeing the picture gave him as great a thrill as he got when listening one day to the B.B.C. news and suddenly heard his nephew's name mentioned as having received the D.F.C. for special bravery . . . . Mr. Mowatt also mentioned that Pat was the airman who, while on a photographic flight over the Mediterranean, seeing an Italian bomber below him, dived at it as if about to shoot —although he was without guns or ammunition. He continued diving at the enemy plane in this manner until it crashed into the sea five miles from shore.

No Weighty Issues Heard Before Regular Session of Lachute Town Council

The regular monthly session of Town Council was held last evening. Mayor W. S. MacKimmie, Aldermen D. Pharand, Z. Harbour, E. Prevost, F. S. MacGibbon, O. Laurin, A. Scott, Ross Muir and W. Morrisette were present.

Minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

An offer to purchase the judgment secured by the town for arrears of taxes against the Coutu property in Lachute Mills amounting to $1170.39, was received from Eddie Laurin. On motion of Ald. McGibbon, seconded by Ald. Morrisette, it was decided to secure legal advice on the matter and to act accordingly.

It was moved by Ald. Prevost, seconded by Ald. Pharand, that the town purchase for the nominal sum of $1.00 a strip of land from the Gatineau Power Company, to permit the widening of Grace Street.

Lester Thompson was granted permit for extension to his property at the corner of Water and Meikle Streets.

Hunting Fatality Occurred At St. Columban

Maurice Coulombe, 19-year-old Montrealer, was fatally shot in a hunting accident at St. Columban on Sunday.

Coulombe was on a hunting trip with two others from Montreal when the mishap occurred. According to Dr. Alfred Adam, the physician who treated Coulombe on the scene of the accident, the man was getting his shot-gun out of his parked automobile when the weapon went off.

Shot in the stomach, Coulombe died in an ambulance just outside Ste. Scholastique. The district coroner was notified of the mishap and disposed of the case without an inquest.

Origin of the Ayers Industries Dates Back to 1868

Visitors Hear Brief History Of Lachute Manufactures

Following is an interesting outline of the origin and growth of the Ayers industries, as presented by the Secretary Treasurer of Ayers Limited, Mr. Clément Tremblay, before a gathering of Cost Accountants and Industrial Engineers who were guests of the company last Saturday at the Mills and at Carling Lake. . . .

The man who took the most prominent part in the establishment of Hamelin & Ayers in 1868 was Mr. Thomas Henry Ayers. He was the son of the late Thomas Ayers who, in 1858 came with his family from Cornwall, England, to Columbus, Ont., and was employed there in the Empire Woollen Mills till his death in 1891. Thomas Henry, the son, served his apprenticeship in the same mills, then worked in different places until 1863 when he entered into partnership in Perth, Ont., with Mr. Felix Hamelin. They first conducted a carding mill in Perth. In 1870, they hired the McGill Woollen Mills in Hawkesbury, Ont. In 1876, they purchased of different parties here in Lachute about 20 acres of land and a water power for the mills they started on this site. At that time there was no road leading to the present property and the small village of Lachute was situated 1½ miles away. This part of the land was nothing but a thick growth of forest all along the North River, which is now Lachute Mills, or a part of Lachute, with a population of about two thousand, or nearly half of the whole town of Lachute which has a population of 5,000. There are several other industries in Lachute Mills and it would take too long to go into the history of each of them but this incomplete sketch is however sufficient to give you an idea of the creative powers of industry since the pioneer days in the Lachute district, somewhat over 60 years ago, and how a small village has been transformed into a town of 5,000. This story is of course the same as that of many other towns in this province where forest and bush have made way for thriving communities.

Now, coming back to the gradual evolution of Hamelin & Ayers, from 1876, mill buildings, a large dwelling serving also as a boarding house for the help, a dam and roads had to be built. There was no railway from Montreal or Ottawa at that time and with the increase of population which gradually took place, due to the Hamelin & Ayers industry and other mills which came into existence here, including flour, rolled oats and a paper mill, Lachute due to its strategic position became a central point to which the farming population came for supplies from a considerable distance away in horse driven vehicles. The Woollen Mills were doing a bartering trade, exchanging blankets, tweeds, etoffes, etc., against produce of the farm, carding wool for the farmers and also selling them yarns, the farming houses being then a beehive of industry and supplying their own wants in clothing, etc. (Those were the happy days.)

With the advent of the railroad to the great metropolis of Montreal, Hamelin & Ayers organized themselves to supply larger requirements for its products and, under the pioneering of Mr. Thomas Henry Ayers, who had the knack of invention in addition to his business ability, they acquired more machinery and adapted it themselves by alterations and improvements of their own initiative and invention to the manufacture of felts for use on pulp and paper machines, as they wanted to take advantage of this new market, the pulp and paper industry being then on a fair start to its eventual ascension in the world of industry. These felts had been previously imported and, after a difficult stage of experimentation, a lot of perseverance and energy, Mr. Thomas Henry Ayers succeeded in producing satisfactory felts, very ably aided in this by his wife, Miss Olive Paquette, a niece of Mr. Felix Hamelin, whom he had married in 1871. In fact, Mrs. Ayers, after painstaking efforts, discovered the intricate process of splicing the ends of the felts into endless felts, this art being formerly known only in England and at a place in the United States where they had English textile help. Thus, Hamelin & Ayers became the pioneers of the manufacture of woollen felts in this country for the pulp and paper industry, and are leading the field at this time in that specialty, at least in point of capacity of production. The firm then also branched into the manufacture of ground wood pulp, for which they erected a plant; and another dam, ¼ mile from the felt mills on the North River, where its main water power development is now located.

In the course of time, they also generated electric current and erected a transmission line to supply electric lighting to the Carillon and Grenville Canals, the Town of Lachute and the Villages of Brownsburg and Saynerville. The pulp mills were later abandoned in order to use all the water power for their electric lighting business, conducted under the style of the Lachute Electric System. This electric light business was later on sold to the Gatineau Power Company, and the mills retained their entire hydraulic development for enlarged manufacturing requirements.

At the same time Hamelin & Ayers, now styled the Hamelin & Ayers Co. Limited, operated a branch known as the Lachute Shuttle Co. Limited, making shuttles, handles, cross arms, insulator wooden pins and a variety of other woodenware, this firm being now owned privately by Mr. E. F. Ayers under the style of the Dominion Shuttle Co. Limited, with the addition of a creosoting plant and extensive works for the manufacture of veneer box shooks as well as the highest class veneer used in airplane propellors.

Mr. Thomas Henry Ayers died in 1917; his son John Thomas Ayers succeeded him as President, and under his presidency, the felt business made great strides to cope with the swift development of the pulp and paper industry. The mills were greatly enlarged, until his death in 1931 when Mr. William Henry Ayers became the president, his brother Mr. Ernest Ayers being the Vice-President. Mr. W. H. Ayers has three sons active in the business, Thomas Henry Ayers, Leonard and Richard Ayers. Mr. E. F. Ayers likewise has his only son, Gilbert, active in the business. All are directors and will perpetuate the name of Ayers in this private or family business.

Since 1931, there have been considerable additions to buildings and equipment to meet the increasing demand for Ayers products.

Woollen Textile Output Is At Present Over 80 p.c. For Military Demand

Mr. Tremblay gave a further outline of the present products of Ayers Limited, describing the purposes and properties of these goods, and also details on the plant, properties and personnel.

Principal Products

Felts, which can also be called blankets, of considerable width and length for use in Paper and Pulp Mills, these felts serving to convey the paper in its wet condition from the beaters, picking it up from the wire screens and putting it through a series of press rolls, the felts being made endless and running around the press rolls or cylinders with the wet paper adhering to same, sucking and pressing a good deal of the water out of the paper until it reaches another series of huge cylinders heated with live steam and covered by Cotton Dryer Felts or composite felts made of cotton with an asbestos face —called Asbestos Cotton Dryer Felts, all of these various types of felts being made here, so that Ayers Limited can meet the fullest requirements of the paper mills to clothe their machine cylinders or press rolls from end to end of paper machines from the smallest width to over 300 inches. We also manufacture a special cotton rope serving as a paper conveyor at the finishing end of the paper machines.

There is quite a variety of woollen felts made from crossbred wools to the finest merino wools to meet the particular requirements of paper mills producing all kinds of paper such as newsprint, board, wrapping paper, tissue paper, kraft in plain or marking types, also for the finest types of paper such as that made by the Rolland Paper Co., comprising book, letter writing paper and other fine specialties with which you are no doubt familiar. Some of the felts are specially constructed so as to leave stripe marks, on Kraft paper for instance, also letters; as for instance, the paper used by Quebec Liquor Commission shows letters QLC and CLQ these having been wet marked by the felts at the time they conveyed the wet paper through the press rolls.

The felts used in mills producing mechanical and sulphite pulp make it possible to roll it into sheets for convenience of handling or shipping before being used as raw material in the manufacture of paper.

We also manufacture bed blankets in white and colors, top blankets, also called overthrows, bound with satin at the ends, travelling rugs, etc, etc. In the course of the present year, we shall have manufactured nearly one hundred thousand 4 lb. grey blankets for military requirements.

Another important department of our production is the designing and manufacture of fabrics for the men's and women's wear trades, such as suiting, tweeds, flannels, cloakings, overcoatings and polo cloths. In this department we shall have manufactured this year about 325,000 yards of 32 oz. frieze in khaki and Air Force blue for overcoats required by the militia and Air Force. In blankets and overcoating materials, we have been considered as one of the largest key mills in Canada by the Department of Munitions and Supply, and there has been such pressure upon us for urgent requirements that our production has been from 80% to 85% military. It is expected that next year the requirements will be just as heavy if not heavier. We have been glad to do our bit in the Canadian war effort although this means quite a sacrifice of our ordinary civilian business of which we can accept only a part of what is offered.

Markets

Our principal market is Canada from Coast to Coast.

Exportation

Under normal conditions, we export felts to most paper making countries in the world including the British Isles, Newfoundland, the Scandinavian countries, Japan, Mexico, Brazil, Australia, New Zealand, Chili, Peru, Cuba. We export to all countries at this time excepting Japan and the Scandinavian countries.

Raw Materials

The high grade wools we are using come principally from New Zealand and Australia, a fair quantity from the British Isles, occasionally some fine Cape wools from South Africa and as large a quantity of suitable wools as we can possibly procure of Canadian origin. When Crossbred wools were in low supply a few weeks after the war started, we had to import a certain quantity of Argentine and Montevideo wools from South America.

Among the principal other raw materials, we use cotton yarns also composite cotton and asbestos yarns, the bulk being of Canadian origin, these being prepared here specially for weaving into cotton and asbestos-cotton dryer felts.

Labor

We employ at the present time about 600 people in shifts, day and night work.

Offices

Mills and Head Office at Lachute Mills, P.Q. Sample Room and Branch Sales Office for Wool Blankets in the Sun Life Building, Montreal.

Investment

Our investment in buildings, machinery and other equipment, including hydro electric plants, boilers, transmission line, is between $4,500,000 and $5,000,000.

They receive the deposits of millions of Canadians, and extend credit to individuals, governments, businessmen and marketing organizations. The small depositor is important to the banks. FREE PRESS—NOW AS NEVER BEFORE—A FACTOR FOR FREEDOM

There can be no blackout of democracy while there is a constant counter-attack of well-aimed facts! — And that is one of the essential functions of your weekly newspaper. It carries on the battle on the home front.

As custodians of a Free Press, the publishers recognize this vital issue : A Free Press and Democracy are inseparable. Silence one and you destroy the very foundation of the other.

We have tasted one bitter fact from the cauldrons of totalitarianism in which millions of lives have been sacrificed; dictators don't begin by using the sword to delude their people; they first use the pen, making the columns of their "news" papers the mouthpiece for their ill-directed lies and empty promises.

But such delusion is not for those of us who are honestly, fearlessly, wholeheartedly Canadian. Thanks to a Free Press, and a courageous and wisely directed weekly press, the Canadian people are the best informed in the world. Freedom of the Press is guaranteed to the people by our government and it shall not perish as long as the people maintain a Free Press!

Stand with the publishers of Canada's weekly newspapers in the battle for democracy. With a Free Press as your most powerful weapon against despotism, there shall be No Surrender for Canada and Canadians.

A Free Press constitutes the first line of defence in the battle for the maintenance of democracy. The weekly newspaper is an all-important factor in the upbuilding of the nation, because it has such an intimate touch with the homes in the smaller communities throughout Canada.

MOST OF US DON'T KNOW

Hardly anyone — not even the publisher — knows how important a newspaper is to a community. . . . Can we, for instance, accurately gauge the influence of this newspaper over its 60-odd years of existence? The influence of its weekly news on all good and constructive enterprises in this community — the schools and churches and service clubs, the farm and home associations, and the patriotic groups? Can we measure, at a glance, the effect of our banning of all harmful advertising; and our sponsoring of civic improvements and worthwhile ventures? Most of us don't know; few of even think about it.

The smaller the town, the more important the newspaper is in its economic life. Its news and opinions focus the interest of surrounding territory on the town in which the paper is published.

This force, and the force of advertisements by local merchants, build an ever-widening trade area. This means more business, a bigger Main Street, more money for schools, churches, and homes — a bigger and better village.

A town with a newspaper is a town with a future. The better the paper, the brighter the future. —We are trying to make The Watchman the best possible newspaper with the resources and the field at our command. Your help and suggestions are always appreciated.

To always carry on one's person their registration certificate is a warning that has been made to the public sufficient times now that there shouldn't be any doubt about it. You never know when you will be called upon to produce it and if you haven't it with you it may be a rather expensive mistake. Huntingdon Gleaner

CO-ORDINATING EFFORTS FOR TOURIST PROMOTION

With the object of co-ordinating all governmental activities which may have a bearing on tourist traffic in Canada, and also to develop a general tourist policy in co-operation with all existing Federal, Provincial and private organizations, an inter-departmental committee has been appointed by the Canadian Government, under chairmanship of Colonel V. I. Smart, Deputy Minister of Transport.

The economic importance of tourist traffic to Canada is more generally appreciated this year than ever before, and plans formulated by the new committee are expected to have an important bearing on tourist traffic of 1941. Colonel Smart stated that formation of the committee was not a new venture, but rather a step to unify the various agencies interested in travel. The Canadian Travel Bureau is the federal organization responsible for the encouragement of tourist traffic and has worked in close co-operation with all other tourist agencies in the Dominion. The adverse effect of the war upon travel generally, and precautionary measures incidental thereto, has made necessary the formation of this committee, representing departments dealing with customs, passports, foreign exchange and commercial intelligence.

"This committee," said Colonel Smart, "will welcome suggestions from the various bodies interested in the promotion of tourist traffic, to enable it to formulate a vigorous policy for the 1941 season. The committee is not intended to supersede any existing tourist bodies, but instead will attempt to co-ordinate and assist the efforts being made by all travel organizations, both public and private, throughout Canada."

A NEW UNDERSTANDING OF ADVERTISING

Elbert Hubbard once said that Advertising was telling people who you were, where you were and what you had to offer in the way of goods, talent or commodity. — And for twenty years, this served advertising men as a definition of advertising.

Today, we have a new understanding of advertising which might be defined as, "Advertising is making people realize that they NEED what you have to offer."

It is pretty generally understood that successful advertising must be written from the viewpoint of the buyer . . . we must either aim to talk of supplying a need of the prospective buyer and user, or, make the reader realize a need.

Telling people who you are and where they can buy your goods is essential . . . though a minor element.

Too many advertisements are prepared from the viewpoint of the maker or distributor . . . and too little thought is given to the 'Use-requirement' or utility angle.

Advertisers should study the buyer's problem. Tell him why he needs your goods and how he can use them. Aim first to get his attention, then to arouse his interest, and your advertisements will begin to produce more profitable results for you.

One of the tragedies of so many lives is that men and women are employed in some work they don't like and for which they have no aptitude. Through national registration an avenue of escape may be opened to many of them.

You Couldn't Read This !

The 500th anniversary of the invention of printing by Johann Gutenberg is being celebrated during the present year of 1940, stimulated by the various trade associations and graphic arts groups.

Printing has become as commonplace in our lives as the rising and setting of the sun, yet it plays a tremendous role in the lives of every one of us.

You are awakened each morning by an alarm clock which undoubtedly has a printed dial. You arise from bed and dress in clothes that were undoubtedly bought under the stimulus of printed advertisements. Your weekly newspaper was made possible by Gutenberg's invention of printing. The cereal on your breakfast table and the brand of coffee you drink were undoubtedly bought because of merits attributed to them in printed advertising.

You have arrived at your work . . . Imagine what chaos there would be in any office or factory if every piece of printing were suddenly taken away. Modern inventions which we have come to look upon as necessities could never have become so widely publicized nor so highly developed, had it not been for the service of the printing press.

The cost of enjoying these inventions has been constantly lowered because printed advertising has developed far-flung markets and made mass production possible. It is doubtful whether there would be automobiles, typewriters, airplanes, radios, or motion pictures in the present advanced state of their development which we know today, had it not been for printing. Every practical invention has been dependent on printing to further its adoption and success.

It is thus fitting that during the current year 1940 we should pay homage to Gutenberg, the inventor of printing, the man who gave mankind its choicest gift. Gutenberg's invention has even made it possible for you to read this editorial — a simple task which few people could have accomplished before the days of printing and rise of popular education.

An Age of Advertising

This is an age of advertising. People are no longer wandering through the woods trying to find a mousetrap maker.

Do you know of any success that has not been advertised intelligently?

You know of plenty of failures that have lacked proper publicity.

And what is true of the business proposition is equally true with reference to a personality or a profession.

Without proper propaganda — without intelligent advertising, a great artist would attract about as much attention as another fly in a boarding house kitchen. —Silent Partner

COLORS ALWAYS PRESENT

The color of leaves does not change in autumn, but it is there all the time, being obscured by the dominant green. The green pigment is caused to disappear by cool weather, allowing the other beautiful colors to come into view.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King Expresses His Sincere Appreciation

The celebration by the members of the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association of the first week in October as a Newspaper Week affords me a welcome opportunity to extend to the weekly newspapers of our towns and villages a word of sincere appreciation on the service they are rendering Canada at this critical time in the history of our country. As one of the great channels for the expression of public opinion and a powerful influence in the life of our people, they have an especially great responsibility. To this responsibility they have responded splendidly in the manner in which they have maintained the high standards of a free press. There is no surer foundation of the democratic way of life.

I extend to the members of the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association, my best wishes for the success of Newspaper Week.

Maintenance of the Laurentian Route This Winter

MINISTER OF HIGHWAYS SAYS RESORTS MUST CONTRIBUTE

Promise that the Provincial Government would be willing to co-operate in keeping the Laurentian highway open this winter between St. Jerome and Mont Tremblant and from Ste. Adele to Ste. Marguerite, "provided part of the funds required to do this be raised among the people interested," was given by Hon. T. D. Bouchard, Minister of Roads and Public Works at a meeting of the Laurentian Resorts Association held at Val Morin on Monday.

This statement was given by the minister in reply to a question by K. W. Harrison, president of the association. Mr. Bouchard added a suggestion that the association appoint a committee to give him a report on the situation as soon as possible to see whether the request is reasonable or not.

Mr. Bouchard also requested the association to give him a list of the principal resorts in the Laurentian district showing how far they are situated from the main highway and the condition of the side-roads leading to the various resorts, so that his engineers could study the feasibility of improving the side-roads with a view to aiding the tourist industry.

Few Employments Not Affected by Job Insurance

A WEEKLY REVIEW OF NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Ottawa — The government has appointed the commission which will administer National Unemployment Insurance in Canada. The chairman is Joseph Sirois, who was head of the Dominion-Provincial Relations Commission after W. N. Rowell took sick. Dr. Sirois gained experience while carrying through this monumental task which will be of great value to him and to the insurance commission. The Prime Minister when announcing the appointment said that there would be many occasions when provincial authorities would have to be consulted and Dr. Sirois was admirably qualified for this work. The other members of the unemployment insurance commission are R. J. Tallon, secretary of the Trades and Labor Congress, who will be labor's representative, Allen M. Mitchell of Montreal, who will represent the employers of labor.

The Unemployment Insurance measure was passed during the last session of parliament after the necessary change was made in the British North America Act giving the Federal Government the authority to deal with this subject. Under the new law, employees and employers will contribute approximately equal amounts to the insurance fund with the government adding a further amount equal to one fifth of the combined contributions of labor and employers. The Federal Government also pays administrative costs, which will amount to about five million dollars a year.

The application of the insurance plan will be widespread, but there are certain forms of employment to which it cannot conveniently apply. The following are among those excepted from the scheme; employees of farming, horticulture, forestry, fishing, trapping, transportation by water, air and stevedoring, teachers and government employees. The commission however may add to those to whom the law applies. There was a good deal of discussion in the session about Western lumbermen for example. It was held by B.C. members that these should be included in the insured class.

The commission will operate a national employment service. It will probably work in close collaboration with those in charge of the lists of national registration bureau so that unemployment is kept at a minimum. There is likely to be a steadily decreasing number of unemployed as war industries expand. The insurance scheme is a guarantee, however, that when war industry is curtailed at the end of the war, there will be a fund in hand to aid the unemployed in tiding over the time until they can get placed in new employment.

The demand for electrical power to drive the machinery of war industries to supply munitions and equipment has become so heavy that there is some fear that a shortage of this power may develop next year. A measure of economy has been instituted by requesting municipalities in Ontario and Quebec which have been on daylight saving time to continue on this basis during the coming months and not revert to standard time.

Printing, the Mother of Progress, Celebrates Its 500th Anniversary

The invention of printing from movable metal types is associated with the name of Johann Gutenberg, who lived on the Rhine during the first half of the fifteenth century. Other claims for the credit of the invention have been made, such as that on behalf of Lourens Janszoon Coster, of Harlem, in the Netherlands, but for which the evidence seems, in the most part, spurious. Block printing, that is printing from symbols carved in wood blocks, was known and practised much earlier, perhaps as early as the eighth century, in China.

JOHANN GUTENBERG

Movable types of porcelain, wood and metal were used in China from 1041 onwards, but knowledge of their use does not seem to have spread beyond the Orient. The Chinese, too, discovered how to make paper in the second century — and knowledge of this process was carried eastward at intervals through the centuries, till it reached Western Europe about a thousand years later. By the fifteenth century the Europeans, too, were printing from wooden blocks, large blocks on which a picture with a legend, or perhaps the words of a much used manuscript were cut in high relief, then inked and an impression taken on a sheet of vellum or paper. A number of these sheets printed on one or both sides and fastened together, was called a block book. Block books were just coming into use, when suddenly between 1535 and 1545 some one invented and perfected a process for making individual letters of metal. These letters could be "composed" into words, printed, then "distributed" for further composition.

Prior to the invention of printing, books had to be written by hand. For this laborious task, scribes were engaged by families, business firms, schools or court officials. To own a book was a mark of distinction, and there would be few families who would own more than one book. The education of children from books was exceedingly limited, since even the essential Latin grammar and any other texts would have to be written by hand. The researches of scholars had to be copied and recopied, with errors creeping into every copy. News was conveyed by word of mouth or by written message, and sometimes, with hazards of travel, it arrived garbled and late, perhaps too late. The enormous volume of printed material which we now use in the ordinary and extraordinary occupations of every day should scarcely be taken for granted without a thought of how it has come to us. It is the product of the inventive genius and painstaking industry of man, of the minerals, timber and power derived from our earth. An accomplishment of a relatively short period in the history of mankind, it is our inheritance to be cherished in further experimentation and development, and in use, to extend knowledge, and perception of beauty, and enjoyment of the comforts of modern life.

NEWSPAPER WEEK

"Where's the paper?"

How many times a week is this question asked in your home?

It is an indication of the fact that the local newspaper is a household necessity but in a larger sense it is a public institution. As a disseminator of news, particularly in smaller communities, it is without a rival. In its columns are found the day-to-day record of your "home town." Its unique function as the mirror of community life is so widely recognized that the newspaper, to a greater extent than the telephone or radio, is taken for granted. And when your local newspaper does not keep its weekly appointment with you, the question is again, "Where's the paper."

Great are the responsibilities which lie behind the publication of a newspaper. First of all, there is the responsibility of printing the news fully and impartially with as high a degree of accuracy as is humanly possible. The chance of error is so tremendous.

Democracy succeeds in proportion to the degree to which its citizens are enlightened upon the conduct if its political units and the acts of its public officials. As long as the press is free to inform and to criticize, there remains more than a hope that Canadian democracy will continue to point the way to a better social arder.

From the days of the first weekly newspaper in Canada, publishers have not lost sight of ther responsibilities to the welfare of their communities, and the nation. No group is more keenly aware of the shortcomings of the press than newspaper workers themselves, but instances of downright dishonesty and betrayal of the public interest are extremely rare in the history of Canadian Weekly Journalism.

Continue to take your newspaper for granted; you can pay it no greater compliment. Disagree with its editorial policies if you wish; no newspaper writer lays claim to a monopoly on truth. Criticize its errors of fact, but do not overlook the circumstances under which the newspaper is published and the continuous effort put forth in the interest of accuracy.

Above all recognize the responsibility which the newspaper cannot escape if it is to play its proper part in the functioning of a democracy. Newspaper Week is being observed to bring to the attention of the public some of the things beside type and ink which go into the making of a newspaper.

A MILLION NEW INCOME TAX-PAYERS

Due to the heavy burden imposed by the war, income taxes have been increased in many instances by as much as three or four times. Taxes are being paid now by over one million people who had never paid a direct tax to the Federal Treasury before.

ADVERTISED GOODS

People know more about advertised goods than about those that are not advertised. If you ask what is a good thing to buy for some need, people will usually quote some widely advertised article that everyone has heard of. If you ask about some competing article that is not advertised, they will usually say they never heard of it, consequently they are not likely to buy it.

People not merely buy the advertised goods they have heard of, but they are more likely to buy at the stores that are well advertised. These concerns appear constantly before the public eye by their widely read notices. A concern gets a big advantage over its competitors by the relatively small expense of advertising.

Premier Godbout States Weeklies Are "Treasure-Trove in the Household"

I wish to tell you how much I appreciate the intelligent and effective work of our Canadian weeklies.

These newspapers, of course, cannot be compared, as regards circulation, with the dailies. Nevertheless, their action appears to be more lasting on the readers, for a weekly paper caters more directly to the needs of the community it is published in. It is replete with local news and may be considered as the truthful mirror reflecting exactly the personality of a given city or region and expressing their needs. That is one of the reasons why weeklies are so often considered treasure-trove in the household.

I know some of the weeklies published in our sister-provinces, but I may safely say that I know all of those published in my own Province. They are well edited, their articles are sane and sound. The news they carry is both truthful and interesting.

My long experience has taught me to value weekly newspapers. They still deserve our encouragement and praise.

ADELARD GODBOUT,
Prime Minister of the Province of Quebec.

WEEKLY HEALTH ARTICLE

By DR. HERMAN N. BUNDESEN
President, Chicago Board of Health

OVERWEIGHT MEN ARE WARNED AGAINST OVER-EXERCISE

Persons who are weak, and athletes, as well as those who indulge in athletics regularly, commonly have trouble with their feet, ankles and legs.

In his new book, "The Foot and Ankle," Dr. Philip Lewin, of Chicago, gives excellent advice for athletes to keep their feet in good condition. In preparing for athletic contests, he suggests that massaging, exercising and supporting the feet, legs and ankles will be helpful.

There is a condition called tennis leg which is due to a tearing of a number of muscles in the leg by a sudden movement during the playing of tennis. Bleeding into the tissues may result from an injury to a vein or artery.

Golf particularly may cause foot and ankle strain. The beginner at golf, who does not "follow through" with his stroke but checks it, may suffer from strain of the lower part of the back.

In three cases of this disorder, the individuals were from thirty-five to forty-five years of age. All were right-handed, and the pain was always on the left side. The condition developed as a result of golf practices which involved a twisting of the trunk. It seems that practice is worse than playing, insofar as the development of this disorder is concerned.

Another disorder which golfers may develop is called "golfer's big toe." In this condition, these are bony outgrowths on the big toe and stiffness of the toe. There may be an actual rim of bone surrounding the head of the bone just back of the big toe, called the first metatarsal, ant there may be severe inflammation of the joint between the first metatarsal and the toe.

It seems that this disorder develops as a result of injury from excessive pivoting which began in childhood. During childhood, when the bones are growing, they are more susceptible to injury than later in life. The pain in the feet and legs of the golfer usually is due to over-activity, fatigue,, or a combination of causes.

Dr. Lewin believes that it would be valuable for many men, especially those overweight, if they played only thirteen holes of golf instead of eighteen at a time. Many golfers find the last four or five holes are hard on the feet and legs, particularly men who are overweight. These persons find no particular pleasure in the last four or five holes, and are glad when they reach the eighteenth hole. They could prevent much of the fatigue, overstrain and pain by shortening their walking stride, by resting for a few moments at every tee, and by not hurrying.

During the practice for golf, the same motions are often made, over and over again. This puts unusual strain on certain muscles without giving them a chance to relax and recover. During play, however, the individual hits the ball and then walks, so that during the actual playing of the game, much less strain may be put on the muscles than during practice.

In golf, as with any other exercise, individuals must avoid overeating. Should pain and discomfort develop in certain muscles or joints, there is need for a careful examination to determine the source of the difficulty. By slight adjustment, perhaps by alteration in the kind of shoes and by following the advice of an orthopedic surgeon, many of the difficulties arising during athletics may be avoided.

World Acclaims British Courage and Strength

THE CALM BRITISH

There is no alarm in England. In our opinion, the essential fact distinguishing English history and the history of other nations which explains the success of the British nation and the Empire is the anti-catastrophic conception of progress.

Britain has discovered the secret of transforming a discontented opposition into collaborators. No country is perfect, no regime is faultless, no history spotless, but in all the history of mankind no political history is comparable with that of the British nation and Empire.

—Diario Lisboa, Lisbon, Portugal.

MAGNIFICENT BRITAIN

There is a world of difference between warfare as it was in France and as it is being prepared in Britain. The whole population in Great Britain is ready and almost eager to meet the German invasion. In face of this threat the calmness of England is really magnificent. Morale is also really magnificent in Britain. The preparations to meet the emergency are extensive and thorough and will answer all possible aspects of an invasion.

There has never been such a united nation under undisputed leadership as in England today.

—New York Daily Mirror, U.S.A.

GRIM DETERMINATION

The grim determination of the English people in their present position is impressive . . . . It is evident that there will be no further attempt at peace parleying between Britain and Germany. In any case the British people would not want it. It seems that the British have already discounted the cost of resistance in manpower and financial sacrifices.

—"Ya", Madrid, Spain.

BRITAIN WILL HOLD OUT

It will be another six to eight months before the R.A.F. secures supremacy in the skies over Europe. Can Britain hold out until that time? Of course she can, and longer.

This is the unbiased view of observers who have seen Britain in the moments of her greatest distress, as at the time of the Dunkirk evacuation, the betrayal of Leopold and the collapse of France.

After all these disasters, which befell the British because they relied on others instead of doing things for themselves, nothing more can come. Whatever the German Press may say, time is still on the side of the British, and now they are on their own they are probably stronger than before.

—Novidades, Montivideo, Uruguay.

ROYAL NAVY STILL DOMINATES

"British seamen have risen to every emergency, whether they trod the deck of the merchantman or the man-of-war. The convoys still pass through seas infested with submarines, and constantly attacked from the air, tell the story . . . Naval victories — the Graf Spee, the engagements off Norway, the resolute spirit shown in the fight off Oran and the sinking of the Richelieu at Casablanca, and the defeat of the only two ventures the Italian Navy dared to make in the Mediterranean — all indicate the British superiority in morale and in the technique of the naval art.

And certainly the evacuation from Dunkirk by the navy and a motely fleet of volunteer small craft was an episode worthy of the best traditions of a seafaring people.

After twelve months of war, it is still British sea power which puts the greatest pressure on the Axis Powers. Without it there would be no blockade . . . And as Europe enters the second year of war, the unspectacular blockade, rather than any more direct showdown between sea and air power, may play the deciding role".

Admiral Wm. V. Pratt, U.S. N. Ret'd. in "Newsweek".

Research Council Leads Scientific Effort in War

Born and conceived during the last great war to compete against a scientifically highly-developed enemy power, the National Research Council of Canada was ready and equipped to renew the struggle against the same enemy at the start of the present conflict.

Virtually overnight scientists of the Research Council, with a minimum of apparent effort that suggested careful planning and preparedness, abandoned their peacetime pursuits to bend all efforts towards greater efficiency in the war effort. In many cases, however, peacetime activities, were found to be closely related to problems arising out of war.

Now well over 80 per cent of the Council's work is directly connected with the war. Hundreds of projects, tests, examinations and studies have been undertaken. Valuable assistance is rendered to the Department of Munitions and Supply in regards the equivalency of British and Canadian specifications.

So that no valuable war invention would be pigeon-holed, a special inventions' board was set up to examine innumerable ideas and inventions, which pour in upon the government at the rate of about 300 per month.

In the mechanical engineering laboratories, with equipment for the study of aeronautical and hydrodynamical problems, every war day is crowded with new research. Wind tunnels, engine testing apparatus, model testing basins for water crafts, are used for scores of studies on fighter aircraft, tests of fuel, plane engines, flying instruments, minesweepers, corvettes and other craft of the Canadian Navy.

A modern building to house aerodynamics laboratories is being rushed to completion. Planned by the Council when Major General G. L. MacNaughton was its president and inspiration, this new laboratory, of great importance in a war of aerial combat, has been espoused by Dean C. J. Mackenzie, Acting President of the Research Council, as a favorite enterprise.

The physics division has rendered particularly useful service through its metrology section, where a gauge testing laboratory has been set up. A supply of gauges, accurately tested and verified, has been built up and made available for industrial plants engaged in the production of munitions and war equipment.

This Strange World

At least ten times every day someone enquires of the information bureau at Niagara Falls whether there is any "particular time for turning off the Falls!" And the question is posed in all seriousness, too.

In encounters between motorists and chickens, the motorists usually win. Here is a case where the motorist lost . . . A driver bought a rooster, tied its legs together and threw it on the shelf behind his head in his coupe. As he drove homewards, the rooster wriggled free and flogged the driver on the neck and face in an hysterical attempt to get out of the car. The driver lost control of the machine which ran through a guard rail and down an embankment. The driver landed up in the hospital while the rooster got away.

The market town of Roscrea, Eire, was thrown into utter confusion on a recent market day, and all because a queen bee alighted on the number plate of a truck. A swarm of bees followed the queen and swarmed all over the truck. In desperation the driver drove his truck through the streets of the town dislodging the odd and angry bee here and there. Scores of people were stung and cattle ran amok . . . . A brave citizen finally brought relief to a frantic populace when he removed the swarm with a sheet and hive.

As the massive gates of Walton Jail, Liverpool, Eng., close behind prisoners entering for a "spell", the new arrivals now see right before them this poster, (advertising British War Bonds):

Lend to Defend
The Right
To Be Free!

Another chicken story, this time from Cornwall, Ont. Trying to dodge a chicken passing across the street, Herbert Malcolm's car smashed into one driven by Frank Alter. Three persons were injured, damage to the cars was $450 — and nobody got the chicken, which ran free.

Rodger - Hugman

St. Andrews E. — A wedding of great popular interest took place at the United Church on Saturday afternoon, Sept. 28th. The bride was Miss Beatrice Winnifred Hugman, third daughter of Mr. and the late Mrs. Chas. Hugman, of Verdun, Que. The groom was Douglas Alexander Rodger, younger son of Mr. and the late Mrs. W. J. Rodger, Lachute Road.

The Rev. J. A. Mowatt performed the ceremony, in the presence of a large gathering of relatives, friends and members of the church — to which both bride and groom belonged. Miss A. L. Wales, organist, played the wedding march.

The bride, attended by her sister, Mrs. Alex Mitchell, as matron-of-honor, was given in marriage by her father. She wore a travelling costume of blue silk crepe, with Burgundy hat and accessories, and carried a purse bouquet of white pompoms. The matron of honor was gowned in dusty pink crepe, with navy blue hat and accessories. The bride's aunt, Mrs. Winters, was dressed in black, with a shoulder spray of tea roses.

The groom was attended by his cousin, Mr. Ernest Rodger, of "Rodgerdale." The ushers were Mr. Stanley Rodger, brother of the groom, and Mr. Alex Mitchell.

The interior of the church was decorated with a profusion of lovely flowers and ferns, most effectively arranged. Thoughtful friends had protected their choicest blooms from the late frosts for this occasion.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of Mrs. B. N. Wales, where buffet refreshments were served. The prettily decorated table was centred by the wedding cake and connected by white streamers to a large white bell suspended above it.

Mr. and Mrs. Rodger received many handsome and useful gifts from their host of friends.

(Intended for last issue)

The Young People's Club of St. Andrews Presbyterian Church held a social evening in the church hall on Wednesday to do honor to one of their members, Private Dan Bryson, of the Black Watch Regiment, who was spending a few days' leave with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Bryson.

The chair was taken by the president, Paul Doig; after the devotional period, he called on Margaret Hamilton to read the address to the guest of the evening, and then presented Private Bryson with a purse of money. Short addresses wer made by the pastor, Dr. McMillan, and by Dr. Ballantyne. Private Bryson replied in a very pleasing manner.

The remainder of the evening was spent in games and community singing.

LACHUTE UNITED Y.P.S.

At the regular weekly meeting of the Lachute United Young People's Society, held last evening in the church hall, Mr. J. Angus Taylor gave an interesting paper on the subject of "Slavery". He dealt with the rise of the slave traffic in the Southern States, from its earliest beginnings until its abolition in the time of Abraham Lincoln.

The thanks of the gathering were expressed by their president, Mr. Douglas Gordon and by the Rev. W. B. Rosborough. The program was under the arrangement of Mr. Edward Hammond.

Deer Guided by Sense of Smell

The deer, like most wild animals, lives in a world where he is guided largely by a sense of smell. It is not a special sense, but highly developed, according to the American Wildlife institute. Deer blaze their trails through scent - secreting glands, above the hocks on his hind legs. When these glands are removed, the deer thus handicapped is easily lost. The mule deer, which has a high bounding gait in running and consequently covers great stretches of ground in one leap, has scent-secreting glands about six times as large and potent as the Virginia deer. The Virginia deer is on the ground more, so does not need to leave so powerful a scent each time he touches the ground.

HINTS FOR HOMEBODIES

By JESSIE ALLEN BROWN
Specially written for Readers of The Watchman.

JUST TWENTY MILES

Looking across from Cape Bald, in New Brunswick, we could see land, very vaguely, and what appeared to be white houses. We asked if this were land and were told it was the Island. In the Maritimes, Prince Edward Island is always "The Island". It was around twenty miles away and when we looked through the glasses we could see it and the houses very plainly. It brought home to us how close Dover is to France, and how quickly aeroplanes can reach England from the Channel bases. The way the English people generally, and those of London specially, are standing up to the steady barrage is marvellous. Aside from any natural fear, the loss of sleep must be hard to bear. We think it is bad if we do not sleep well for one night and if we have two nights of disturbed sleep we feel abused. As I write this, the people of London have had more than two weeks of it. The way they are taking it makes us proud to belong to such a nation.

AN EYE FOR AN EYE

The parents of the children who were torpedoed will always have a feeling of doubt to harass their grief. They will wonder if they did the best thing in sending their children to Canada and if they had kept them might they have been safe. There are many of us who feel there should be reprisals — an eye for an eye. I will be glad when the Channel ports are in such condition that the British can turn their attention to Germany. In the last War there was no destruction of German property; poor France and Belgium had to bear the brunt of it. No one wants to see life destroyed, whether British or German, but I for one hope there will be extensive destruction of German property on German soil. Let them have a taste of it.

THE BIG STORM

Storms are impressive at any time but somehow they come closer when you live near the sea. When you have seen many of the ships, or have seen their counterparts, news of their troubles seem to be a more personal thing. We had a storm last week which did a lot of damage in Saint John. It seems that the prevailing winds here blow in a certain direction (I am scared to say which way it is because I would be sure to be wrong), the wind in this storm blew in the opposite direction and the trees did not have the strength to resist it. Huge trees in King's Square and the Old Burying Ground, in the very centre of the city were uprooted. In fact, every section of the city suffered and that is a special hardship to Saint John as it has comparatively few trees. An apple tree right close to our house was split and part of a huge, old, elm is gone. We could hear the apples falling in the gusts of wind and I hoped the storm might go around the Annapolis Valley but it did not escape and the ground is carpeted with apples and many trees uprooted. When farmers lose their crops and fishermen their gear, storms are a disaster.

VITAMIN B ADDED TO BREAD

With all its evils, there is always something good comes out of War. The last war led to the discovery of Vitamins. It has remained for this war to get Government action. The English Government has ordered the inclusion of vitamin B. in all bread. This vitamin is to be found in the bran and germ of the wheat but with our present day methods of milling the white flour we lose it all. Vitamin B. is necessary to keep the nerves and the appetite in good condition. If you do not use whole wheat or other entire grains daily, it might be wisdom to use some wheat germ, which can be bought packaged. Add it to any kind of porridge or use it as part of any of the brown flours, used for biscuits or cookies or breads.

Since I wrote the above, the Canadian Medical Association has recommended to our Government that vitamin B. be added to Canadian bread.

SWEET PEPPERS

Usually I leave the pepper pickles until the last as we can get peppers later than most of the other pickling materials. Sweet peppers have blunt squarish ends and hot peppers are small and sharp.

PEPPER RELISH

1 doz. sweet red peppers, 1 doz. sweet green peppers, 3 cups vinegar, 4 cups brown sugar, 3 tablespoons salt.

Remove the seeds from the peppers and put through the chopper. Sprinkle with 3 tablespoons salt, cover with boiling water and let stand an hour. Drain and add vinegar and sugar. Boil for 30 minutes. Bottle in sterilized bottles and seal.

PEPPER PICKLE

9 sweet green peppers, 9 sweet red peppers, 1 large head of cabbage, 6 onions, ½ cup salt, ¾ cup white mustard seed, 1 tablespoon celery seed, 4 cups white sugar, white vine vinegar.

Chop the peppers, cabbage and onions, stir in the salt and let stand over-night. Drain well, and add sugar and the mustard and celery seed. Cover with vinegar and put over a very low heat until the sugar is melted. Do not boil. Put in sterilized bottles and seal.

BEAUTY

By Helen Jameson (Mme. Qui Vive)

WRINKLES? CATCH 'EM YOUNG

Women who have little tissue pleats in their faces aren't much interested in finding out what causes them. What they're looking for is a magic smoothing iron with which to erase them. But that's not so smart. If they know what brings them they won't be getting more. And wrinkles have a way of raising large families.

It's no fun realizing that one's beauty petals are falling. A woman hates to look faded. Many times it is unnecessary. She has lacked foresight. She should have known that Time is no friend to any of us as far as looks are concerned. She should have started early to give external care to her skin, to have taken excellent care of her health, to establish a system of emotional control.

Low spirits aren't good for our outsides or our insides and brave women are ashamed to indulge in them; indulgence shows weakness. They retard digestion, knock the appetite for a row, slow up circulation, interfere with the normal functioning of the skin and other organs of elimination. Keeping decently cheerful and being courageous is one way of warding off facial furrows.

Sometimes ill health is a factor, the soft tissues of the face starving for nourishment. Rapid reducing will bring lines. Loss of sleep retards tissue repair.

If the causes of wrinkles continue there's no use seeking a cure.

The first step is to endeavor to arrange a well ordered existence, to rest when tired, to sidestep emotional upsets, to eat properly, drink plenty of water, bathe daily. Exercise also is necessary since tissues depend upon active circulation for their repairs. Massage wakes up the tiny capillaries close to the skin and will do a world of good if done persistently.

At night, after the soapy face washing and a rinsing with warm water—never use cold when cream is to be applied — dry the flesh gently and spread on a heavy emollient, which is more effective than a light cream. Begin at the collar bones, smooth upward with flattened palms.

For eye lines, place the first finger on the upper eyelid close to the nose. Sweep outward to the temple and do several circles there. Come back under the eye to starting point and repeat.

For frowns, place the thumb at the lower end, first finger at upper point; keep the finger stationary, iron upward with the thumb, lifting the flesh out of the groove.

Treat forehead lines to a rotary motion, making little circles with the finger tips. Work from the center of the forehead outward.

Housewife, Know Your Lemons

By Betty Barclay

It would be difficult to find a fruit or vegetable that has so many uses and such varied uses as the lemon. We use it to garnish our fish, flavor our beverages, and make our lemon merangue pie. We call upon it when we are hot and when we contract a cold. We use it on our hands and on our hair. And this is only the beginning, my friends . . . . only the beginning. The lemon is really versatile.

This story is prepared for those readers who have never taken advantage of the many uses to which the lemon may be put. No one of you may be interested in all the uses given below but I am sure that each will find at least three or four new uses that will be very welcome. Read these paragraphs carefully and see if I am overestimating :

The lemon rinse will enable you to discover the true shade of your hair. For this add the strained juice of two lemons to a bowl of warm water. Rinse the hair well in this lemon water. The lemon juice cuts the filmy soap curd left by the shampoo and leaves the hair perfectly clean. It brings out the full luster and beauty of the hair, whether light or dark.

Whether you eat spinach for duty or pleasure, lemon juice makes the eating more enjoyable. Other greens and many vegetables are improved by lemon juice. Here's a chance to do a bit of experimenting for yourself. See what lemon juice does for each. You'll make many pleasant discoveries.

Lemon Juice added to cooking water (2 tablespoons juice to 1 quart of water) will keep cauliflower, corn, rice, and potatoes white. This is a valuable summer hint for those who have vacation guests upon whom a favorable impression must be made.

To clean copper or brass, rub with a cut piece of lemon and salt. Wash carefully with warm water and polish with a dry cloth. To clean aluminum pots that have become dull or black, fill with water, add a sliced lemon and boil.

Linen or muslin may be bleached by moistening with lemon juice, and spreading on the grass in the sun. To remove fruit, ink or rust stains on material that is washable and colorfast, rub spots well with lemon juice, cover with salt and place in the sun. Repeat process, if necessary.

For an excellent facial mask to make at home, inexpensive too, mix the white of an egg with the strained juice of a lemon and sufficient almond meal or powdered oatmeal to make a thin paste. Apply to face, leave until dry, then rinse well with warm water to which lemon juice has been added (half a lemon to a bowl of warm water).

Even double chins yield to lemon ice. Combine two parts of strained lemon juice and one part of water. Freeze into cubes. Rubbed on the skin this has an astringent action. It is excellent for firming a double chin. Rub a cube over your neck and chin a dozen times.

One of the most refreshing ways to start the day is to drink a glass of water, to which has been added the juice of a lemon. This is an excellent health rule, also.

For its laxative effect, many persons drink water and soda on arising. Squeeze the juice of a lemon into a tall glass of warm or cold water. Into another glass, put half a teaspoon of ordinary baking soda. Pour back and forth and drink when foaming subsides.

Rexall products are advertised each year by means of the "Original Rexall One Cent Sale." The dates should be remembered: October 16, 17, 18 and 19. Four days only.—Beaton's Pharmacy, Lachute, Que.

Women Visiting Model House First Want to Look at Kitchen

First place a woman heads for when visiting a model house is the kitchen, according to Miss Alice Wallace, who during the past three weeks has welomed more than 10,000 visitors to "Life" House in the Town of Mount Royal. Miss Wallace greets every visitor, finds out what they like or dislike about the home and keeps a daily record of their opinions.

First "Life" house to be built in Canada, the Mount Royal dwelling is modelled after design number eight in the recent portfolio of modern American homes appearing in "Life" Magazine. While the basic design is followed throughout, certain adaptions were made to make the house suitable for Canadian climatic conditions. A full-sized basement, with oil furnace and air conditioning unit, was added, for instance and some changes were made in materials used.

Of solid masonry construction throughout, with first storey exterior of stone and second storey of white painted pine clapboard, the picturesque home is topped by a deep black 240 pound asphalt shingle roof to provide contrast. The back exterior is of white stucco. Downstairs the house has a living room the full width of the west end of the house, a curved entrance hall leading to living room and dining room, planned kitchen and powder room. There are three bedrooms upstairs, all with cross ventilation and double cupboards. There is also a playroom in the basement. Decorations were carried out by a Montreal department store.

"First place every woman heads for is the kitchen" Miss Wallace says, and that is quite natural, for it is in the kitchen that she will spend the greater part of her home life. Careful planning for this room is essential. Comments on this kitchen have generally been that it is practical, colorful and easy to clean.

Housewife Leads Students

Finishing high school 15 years behind her class, after she gave it up for marriage and a business career, Mrs. Jewell Grimes, senior in Marion township high school, has been notified that she placed first among several thousand students in a national contest in bookkeeping.

Mrs. Grimes' instructor, R. L. Gallegly, was notified of her award from the Business Education World in New York which sponsored the contest.

Mrs. Grimes, wife of a filling station owner, returned to high school to finish her course after a secretarial career of several years during which she served a year as president of the Marion Business and Professional Woman's club. She pursued her studies with such diligence that when she receives her diploma next month she will have completed the four-year course in three years.

YOUR HANDSHAKE TELLS A GREAT DEAL ABOUT YOU

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Do you realize how clearly a handshake indicates character? The nervous person hardly puts his or her hand in yours before it is jerked away. The self-conscious person gives you a hand as lifeless as a dead fish. The over-enthusiastic person almost crushes you with the warmth of his or her cordiality.

Avoid these extremes. When you shake hands, do so cordially, with just enough pressure to convey appreciation, and just enough reserve to indicate poise. A perfect handshake, accompanied by a smile, is a social asset that no one can afford to ignore.

COURTESY TIP

I like very much the poise and helpfulness of some people who, under necessary circumstances (for example, at a large party) introduce themselves to you, a stranger, and give enough of their background to start a conversation.

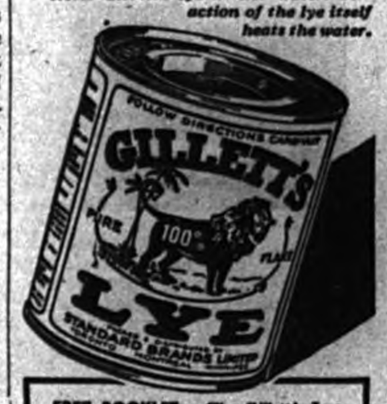

TABLE MANNERS

When you eat soup, you should dip the spoon away from you. When you eat ice cream, cereal, and indeed every-thing except soup, the spoon is toward you.

● Yes, that is exactly what BEMA Molasses is. From Barbados comes this delicious food product—as pure and zestful when it reaches you, as when it came from the sugar cane. Rich in vitamins, BEMA Molasses is also a valuable source of iron—an essential food element. That's why it makes an appetizing, healthful spread on bread—at the table and for between meals. It is also used by many housewives in cooking baked beans, making cookies, gingerbread, cakes, puddings, etc. It's good ALL WAYS! Your grocer sells it.

Interesting Sidelights of the War

The constant bombing of London and the obvious attacks on non-military objectives have aroused fierce controversy in Britain about reprisals on non-military objectives in Berlin and other parts of Nazi-land. Pros and cons waxed vehemently until, finally, a gentleman named C. Paley Scott wrote to the Times. "Sir", said Scott, "we all agree that only military objectives should be attacked, but now that Germany has attacked the oil tanks near Buckingham Palace', isn't it time we attacked the 'submarine base at Berchtesgaden'"?

When workmen were excavating a garden near Ramsgate (Eng.) for the erection of an Anderson air raid shelter, they came across an unexploded bomb . . . Upon examination it was determined that the bomb had been dropped over 20 years ago, during the last war.

A farmer in the southeast of England has invited soldiers to visit his orchards and help themselves to the "baked apples" on his apple trees. The apples have been cooked by the flames of a German machine which crashed down on his farm.

General de Gaulle's broadcasts to France and her colonies are having so great an effect that Hitler has ordered Goebbels to offset them by every means possible . . . The "Vichy" government has admitted that there is a widespread "tension" in all parts of the French empire. This means that more and more Frenchmen are beginning to see the truth of the capitulation by the "Vichy traitors".

War damage to French industrial areas has now been surveyed. Havoc is found to be so great that factories will be unable to resume for another year. Even then, according to Nazi estimates, they will be able to work at only 5 per cent capacity unless the flow of raw materials is assured, —and the British Blockade will see that that doesn't happen. Again, on the land, thousands of tons of chemical fertilizers will be needed — but will be unobtainable owing to the Blockade. Germany has gained considerably through seizure of various materials in the conquered countries, but she will have to pay the price in the inability to utilize many of their facilities.

ARMS AND THE MEN

A lathe claims the attention of men in one of the training centres set up in Britain to ensure that she will have a continuous flow of men to help make the world's mightiest Empire mightier yet.

Employment in Canada Reaches 20-Year Peak

Landlords Complain Over Rentals Control Order

WATCHMAN'S WEEKLY REVIEW OF NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Ottawa — There has been considerable complaint from landlords re the order of the Rentals Administrator and the Wartime Prices Board that rentals in 15 designated localities should not exceed figures in effect on January second of this year. These centres have suffered from house shortage and increased rentals through an influx of military and industrial population. The Rentals Administrator, Mr. Justice W. M. Martin, will investigate the merits of these complaints, and seek to adjust them on an equitable basis.

Through the steady expansion of war industries, employment in this country has now reached a twenty-year peak. During August, manufacturing plants increased their staffs by more than 20,000 persons. Skilled workmen are in demand and the government has warned employers to stop the practice of "enticing" workmen from one plant to another because this tends to disorganize industry.

Cost of Living in Canada

During the first year of the war the cost of living, including food, house heating, rentals, etc, has increased by 4.6 per cent. In the first two or three weeks of the war prices increased by about one half this amount; since then advances on the average have been very gradual. There is no doubt that the wartime Prices and Trade Board has been largely instrumental in preventing price "excesses". There has been a fairly big increase in the cost of certain meats. Investigations by board auditors show, however, that this increase is not being put on by packers or middlemen. The farmers are receiving in large measure whatever benefits accrue. The rise in the costs of anthracite coal has been caused, it is stated, by advanced prices at the pit head, by the difference in exchange value between the U.S. and Canadian dollar, and the ten per cent war exchange tax which is levied on imports from non-British countries. In the case of Welsh anthracite, ocean freights and war risk insurance, as well as increased prices at the mine, account for the rise. Wool, leather and sugar are among commodities controlled and prices have held steady during the past few months, while in the case of wool and sugar, stocks are replenished through the British organizations that have acquired Empire production of these commodities.

The object of the price regulation measures has been to prevent the excesses that were experienced in the last war, and to prevent the disastrous "balloon pricking" that took place after 1918.

The next session of the Dominion Parliament will open some time in January, probably in the early part of the month. In the meantime Parliament still stands adjourned and is subject to call at any time should any acute aggravation of the war situation demand it. The Prime Minister feels that the situation "is less anxious than when Parliament adjourned in August." Then an invasion of Britain seemed possible, if not probable; now it doesn't look as though there will be an invasion this year "although no one would venture a confident prediction on this subject". As originally arranged, Parliament will meet on November 5th, but only to adjourn again, and no public business will be transacted. Western members are not likely to attend the November meeting, because of the distance they have to travel. The Government will arrange that a quorum of members is present.

The Minister of National Defence, Col Ralston, will visit London before Parliament again meets in January, to discuss with Mr. Churchill and other British ministers the war program of the coming months. The late Minister of National Defence, Norman Rogers, made a similar visit last spring. Col. Ralston will be in a position to report fully to the Government and Parliament, thus rendering invaluable aid to Canada's end of the co-operative war effort.

The Minister of Agriculture and of National War Services, James Gardiner, will consult also with British officials in London on the British requirements of food and other essential war materials for the coming months and how Canada can aid most effectively in supplying these needs. Mr. Gardiner's report to Parliament will also be extremely important. Canada's farmers and other primary producers are playing a vital role in the war.

The Sirois Report

The report of the Royal Commission on Dominion-Provincial Relations has not been shelved for the duration of the war. There will be no attempt without a plenary conference with the provinces to consider the principal recommendations of the commission, but some features of the report may be reflected in legislation to come before Parliament in the next session. This has been explained by the Prime Minister.

While the nature of their decisions must of necessity remain veiled in secrecy, members of the joint U.S. - Canada defence board continue their careful survey of the Boston-Halifax coast line and of various strategic points which will advance the North American defence line several hundred miles to sea. With the new pact of Japan with the Axis powers, the provision of adequate joint defence of the West Coast has also become of vital interest. Measures for joint defence will be rushed on both seaboards.

SIDELIGHTS OF THE WAR

Blockade Notes: To prevent waste of rubber, German children owning bicycles are forbidden to use their vehicles except to ride to and from school . . . The British Blockade prevents the Nazis from obtaining further supplies of rubber.

■

Powdered blood for wartime transfusions is being sent from Canada to Great Britain, a unique new machine installed in Toronto enabling this to be done. The powder is made by freezing blood serum and evaporating the moisture content while it is frozen. Doctors can add water to the powder and dissolve it for transfusion use.

■

Already more than half the population of the U.S.A. is in favor of aiding Britain in every way possible, even at the risk of war, and the percentage is growing steadily. This is not hearsay . . . . it is authoritative. (It is also commonsense.)

■

Hitler's entourage notices signs of restlessness and stress in the Fuehrer. He has been dodging backwards and forwards between Berlin, the Brown House at Munich, his army headquarters on the French frontier and Berchtesgaden, his mountain retreat. His irritability is pronounced. Perhaps he begins to see the writing on the wall.

■

Germany's great aircraft factories have been so battered by the R.A.F. that the drop in production is frightening the Nazi leaders, say reliable neutral sources. British raids, driven home with bitter precision, have smashed dozens of buildings and wrecked factories filled with valuable machine tools. It is estimated that in some of the seven main Nazi plane factories output has fallen by as much as 40 per cent.

Orange Church Parade At Lost River

Lost River — Under the auspices of L.O.B.A. 722, Lost River, the Orangemen of Argenteuil County, under County Master Brother M. McGibbon, held a church parade on Sunday, October 5th, to the Lost River Presbyterian Church. Brother Rev. J. Herbison officiated at the service which was attended by a large representation of brethren from the entire county.

WE CAN BE THANKFUL that the sun and stars still shine . . . . . that the rich red has come to the apple's cheek, and choice fruits and vegetables are for the rich and poor alike. . . . . We can be thankful for the opportunity to be kind, for the privilege of labor — and love — and laughter.

AND THOUGH THERE BE DISCORD in the world, sorrow and tragedy and death . . . we can still be thankful for the courage of stalwart hearts . . . the vigor of our youthful warriors . . . the determination of our leaders . . . the example of our rulers. And above all we can be thankful for the faith which leads us doggedly forward, in the conviction that right will prevail and victory ease the burden of our trials.

Hockey League Taking Shape For Season

Lachute to Enter New Group of Ten Clubs

Plans are taking shape for the formation of a new hockey league of ten rural and urban teams, under a new title, the Montreal League.

According to Jos. Raymond, local promoter, who attended a meeting in the city Tuesday night, the teams lined up to date are — Mount Royal, Verdun, Don Juan, Lachine, Joliette, St. Jerome, Granby, Lachute, Valleyfield; and the last entry lies between Shawinigan and Sherbrooke.

Lachute has enthusiasts already slating a local committee and selecting likely players. The schedule of this new league will probably open around November 5th. As far as Lachute's activities are concerned, at this stage it is forecast about 20 games will be played here and the team will play 14 contests away from home.

Diamond Wedding Greetings from King and Queen

Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Neve Are 60 Years Married

St. Andrews, E. — The diamond wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Neve, of "The Pines" St. Andrews East, was celebrated on Oct. 5th at the home of their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Hodgson, West Hill Ave., Montreal, where a reception was held,—four generations being present.

Mrs. Neve is the daughter of the late William and Mrs. Singleton, of Montreal, and Mr. Neve is the youngest son of the late Rev. and Mrs. F. S. Neve, of Grenville, Que., one of the pioneer missionaries of the Ottawa Valley.

Mr. and Mrs. Neve were married at St. Jude's Church, Montreal, on Oct. 5th 1880, by the Rev. Canon Dixon. They resided and brought up their family in Montreal and Westmount, retiring to live in St. Andrews East about 26 years ago.

At the reception were the immediate family — Mrs. R. P. Read, of New York City; Mrs. Walter Windsor, of St. Andrews East; Mrs. H. E. Hodgson and Mrs. E. A. Say, of Montreal; and Mrs. D. F. McCallum, of St. Andrews East. Seven grandchildren were present also, Mrs. W. Nowers Asbury, the Misses Madeline and Frances Hodgson, the Misses Lorna, Muriel and Phyllis Say, and Miss Dorothy McCallum; also two great grandchildren — Gail and Elizabeth, little daughters of Mr. and Mrs. W. Nowers Asbury, of Thetford Mines, Que.

Out-of-town guests included Miss Edith Read, of New York City, and Mrs. R. J. Clarke, of Los Angeles, California.

Other members of the family in attendance at the celebration were — Miss Alice Neve, Miss Elizabeth Singleton, Mrs. Edward Still and Miss E. E. Everett.

Mr. and Mrs. Neve were greatly honored by receiving among other felicitations, a cable of congratulations from Their Majesties King George VI and Queen Elizabeth, and from the Prime Minister of Canada, William Lyon Mackenzie King.

CANNOT BE BEATEN

More than ever before, war is now a contest between whole peoples, not merely between opposing armies in the field, and we have not the slightest shadow of doubt that the British people will last out. British nerve and British endurance cannot be beaten. —Goderich Signal-Star, Ont.

BROWNSB'G FACES ACTION ON SEWER CONTRACT

Plaintiff Claims Contract; Asks Legal Judgment That Village Corporation Now Proceed or Pay Damages

Setback to Long Mooted Civic Improvement Scheme

Booming to prominence through the intensely active industries in its midst, Brownsburg has moved into the less favorable limelight of legal involvements, in connection with the contract for its sewerage and waterworks system. The village now faces an action for alleged breach of contract, instituted by A. Auclair, of Giffard, Que., who claims the municipality had already given him the contract for a sum of $118,240 when the council, at a later date, passed a resolution awarding contract to another bidder, Napoleon Lagacé, of l'Abord a Plouffe. In connection with this action, an injunction to halt all work on the project was granted to Auclair by Justice P. Cousineau, in Superior Court at St. Jerome last Thursday.

The action by Auclair, through his attorneys, Tashereau, Parent & Cannon, Quebec City, demands that the court declare null and void the municipal council's resolution awarding the contract to Lagacé; that the contract with plaintiff be declared binding, and that he be allowed to proceed with the work at the price of $118,240; or that, alternatively, the defendant municipality be ordered to pay him $25,000 in lieu of damages, plus all costs entailed.

The injunction has held up all progress with the work and Brownsburg's long-mooted waterworks and sewerage scheme has suffered another temporary setback.

Date of the hearing will be set in court session at St. Jerome today. Legault & Legault, Lachute attorneys, are acting as legal counsel for the village corporation.

Town Clerk Has Close Call In Automobile Crash

Proceeding to Brownsburg last Thursday afternoon, Germain Filion, town clerk of Lachute, had a narrow escape when his auto collided with a car driven by Wm. Boyd, auctioneer. Mr. Boyd, accompanied by his wife and family, was turning off the highway into his farm, when Filion approached from the rear and struck the side of the passenger-loaded car. Filion's machine, a 1939 Pontiac coach, turned over twice before landing on the grass at the left-hand side of the road. The driver miraculously escaped unhurt, the only toll being heavy damage to his automobile. The other car was slightly damaged, but the occupants were unhurt.

Ayers Ltd. Hosts to Junior Chamber Of Commerce

200 Visitors Afterwards Entertained at Golf Club

Following their policy of acquiring first hand information on Quebec industries, over 200 members of the Junior Chamber of Commerce visited Lachute Saturday afternoon to inspect the plant of Ayers Limited. The motorcade of 60 cars was escorted from Montreal by local Traffic Officers A. Leger and H. Jones, who accompanied the party until they left Lachute in the evening.

Headed by Roger Charbonneau, president of the Chambre de Commerce, and Antoine Dumais, president of the parent body, the visitors were welcomed at Ayers Limited by Mr. Clément Tremblay and other members of the personnel. They were then conducted in parties through the plant; they saw the great looms on which are produced the felts used in paper making, some of which are 300 inches wide. The manufacture of white and colored blankets was also witnessed, and the party viewed some of the 100,000 4lb. grey military blankets which have been made by the firm this year on government order. The designing and manufacture of fabrics for men's and women's wear were also explained, and samples exhibited.

Following their tour of inspection the party proceeded to the new Golf Club-house, where a buffet luncheon was served. Mr. Tremblay here introduced Mayor W. S. MacKimmie, who extended a welcome on behalf of Lachute Town. Also presented to the group were the Hon. Geo. E. Dansereau, Geo. H. Héon, W. M. Cottingham, president of the Lions Club, H. M. Lavigne, Grand Knight of the local K.C. Council, and L. W. Armstrong, president of the Hundred Club.

Warm thanks for the hospitality of this town and its leading industry were voiced by Mr. Picard, on behalf of the visitors; and Mr. Héon spoke briefly, describing Ayers Limited as a model manufacturing enterprise which fosters the true community spirit among its workers.

Painful Injury in Hunting Mishap At Thos' Gore

Montrealer Is Rushed to Hospital for Treatment

Suffering from a serious bullet wound in his left arm inflicted by a companion while hunting at Thomas' Gore, Harry Wyshinski, of Montreal, was rushed to the General Hospital on Sunday afternoon.

The accident occurred at 10.30 o'clock Sunday morning on the farm of P. Corriveau. A party of four or five had come from Montreal to enjoy a week-end hunting. Sunday morning they had proceeded to a likely spot to hunt for deer, about a mile from the farmhouse. In the woods overlooking a runway, Wyshinski was stationed on a rise of ground, and his companions stood nearby. Wyshinski came down from his post and happened to pull a handkerchief from his pocket, shaking it to unfold it. Watching through the trees Corriveau mistook the white flash for a deer, and fired his rifle from a distance of about 150 yards. Wyshinski was hit, the soft-nosed 303 bullet badly tearing his arm.

Friends rushed to his assistance. They applied a tourniquet to stop the flow of blood, and the victim was carried back to the farmhouse. Brought by automobile to Lachute he was treated by Dr. E. Christie and then driven to the Montreal hospital.

In a critical condition, he was given a blood transfusion, and according to reports is now out of danger. Wyshinski was judged to be around 37 years of age.

TOPICS AROUND TOWN

The annual Fire Prevention campaign has been stressed here this week by special efforts on the part of Lachute Fire Department. A parade of apparatus and personnel, displaying the Fire Prevention banner, was held in town Monday evening. Chief Geo. Y. Deacon also instituted fire drills in the local schools in connection with the campaign.

■

Dr. J. H. Maynard arrived this week to assume charge as county medical officer at the Argenteuil Health Unit. Succeeding Dr. E. Lalande, whose duties have now taken him to Montreal, Dr. Maynard comes from Ste. Anne des Monts, Que., where he has been provincial health officer for the County of Gaspé West.

■

Work has started on the retaining-wall bordering the North River at Main Street West, where a railing and light-standards are to be erected. Cement is being poured into the forms for pillars, into which the rail is set. It is planned to place the lights on 7 ft. iron pipes, with serviceable and attractive globes — at intervals of 80 feet, making nine lights in all between the C.P.R. crossing and the fire station.

Lachute High School and all the Protestant schools in this county closed last evening until after the Thanksgiving holiday. Scholars are jubilant, while the teachers have left for Montreal and other parts . . . . The annual convention of Quebec teachers opened this morning in Montreal High School.

Bedard Boulevard, after years of slow development, is now taking on the air of a select residential street, notably in the centre stretch between Elizabeth and Mary Streets. Since completion of the McRae home, L. Rozon's residence and that of Mr. Geoffroy Bedard (who was personally instrumental in opening up this thoroughfare) — houses are now being constructed by Dr. R. Dumais, Chas. L. Duncan, Dr. J. H. Theoret, Alex Denault and Rene Dion.

Thorough renovation of the Jas. MacKimmie property, Bethany Road, is nearing completion. Besides revamping of the exterior, the house is also being modernised inside. It is recalled this dwelling was badly distorted by a recent explosion . . . Cottingham Supply Company are contractors for the renovations.

FLATTENED CANS SAVE SHIPPING SPACE

Samples of a flattened can which ingeniously solves a formidable packing and transport problem are now on their way from Britain to Brazil in charge of the representative of an English firm who are the largest makers of metal containers in the British Empire. Other representatives are shortly leaving for the West Coast South American states, for Ecuador, Peru, Chili and Columbia.

The idea of the flattened can is simple. The cans are made to the normal cylindrical shape, with side seams properly soldered. They are then pressed flat so that, when packed for transit, they take up only one fifth of the space occupied by made-up cans. The great saving in freight age costs, (a heavy charge in these days) rapidly repays the small cost to the overseas customer of the three simple machines by which the flattened cans, when they reach their destination, are re-assembled to their normal cylindrical shape.

So completely has the idea been worked out that the lids and bottoms of the cans, which are packed separately, are supplied stamped and lined with sealing compound ready for use.

Assault Charge Settled Out of Court

The charge of assault laid against Ben Harovitch, manager of the Canadian Exposition Shows, was settled out of court last week. The charge arose out of a brawl in which several Lachute Mills men were beaten by the showman and his helpers, at an exhibition booth here on September 22nd. Cash settlement was made by Harovitch, the two plaintiffs, Simard Larocque and Willie Poulin, having to meet all the costs involved.

BACON FOR BRITAIN GROWN AT A PROFIT

Only healthy, vigorous litters grow into prime bacon, the kind that Britain expects of Canada and proves most profitable to the producer. The "runt" seldom repays the cost of raising it and never becomes a "select." Symptoms of diseases common to young pigs are hairlessness, rickets and anaemia. Prevention starts with the brood sow whose ration throughout the year should contain a well balanced mineral supplement providing calcium and phosphorus against rickets and nutritional disorders, iron against anaemia and iodine against hairlessness. To withhold the mineral supplement until the sow farrows is folly. These minerals are not transmitted in the milk to any extent but are to the embryonic young.

A suitable mineral supplement in the ration of the growing bacon hog will enable the animal to make better use of cheap homegrown feeds consisting largely of cereals with a source of protein added. A feeder who mixes his rations with brains said he could make a profit with hogs at five cents a pound.

SPRING PASTURES STARTED IN FALL

In Canada, during the past decade, many a farmer has revised his estimate of pasture and learned that with rational fertilizing and grazing management it may be made the most profitable crop on the farm, providing an abundance of palatable, more nutritious feed over an extended grazing season.

With the introduction of pasture improvement it was customary to make the fertilizer application in spring, a practice that still continues on many farms. But the results of experiments indicated a distinct advantage in the fall application of a mineral fertilizer, notably the O-16-6, while some relied on straight superphosphate for the heavier soils. Where the herbage consisted mostly of grasses the fall treatment was sometimes followed by a dressing of Sulphate of Ammonia or other nitrogen fertilizer in spring.

In the fall of 1939 pasture trials to determine chiefly the value of nitrogen in the fertilizer applied at this season were commenced at several points in Ontario and Quebec, the rate and weight of growth being estimated periodically during the season by the aid of protective cages placed at several sites in each plot. Although the records are not complete, it is possible to draw general conclusions from the data available.

The outstanding feature in every trial was the more advanced and vigorous growth of the fertilized herbage, noticed in early spring, and the marked superiority of the grazing throughout the season. In two or three instances where but little clover was present in the herbage the influence of the nitrogen in the fall fertilizer was quite marked at first but less so as the season advanced. The choice lay between O-16-6 and 2-16-6, the former preferable where clover or other legumes were plentiful, the latter where grasses made up the greater part of the herbage.

It is well known that clovers and alfalfa, possessed of the unique faculty for gathering their own nitrogen, share this valuable element of plant food with the neighboring grasses. The growth of clovers is favored by phosphate and potash and may be impeded by a large amount of nitrogen in the fertilizer, since nitrogen favors the grasses, and clover cannot endure being overshaded by them. This is one reason whoy clover tends to disappear from herbage grown for hay.

The latest evidence justifies the continued recommendation of O-16-6 fertilizer for fall application, at the rate of 400 or 500 lbs. per acre, to pastures, and indicates 2-16-6 as an alternative, especially where grasses predominate. For grass hay the O-16-6 may be applied in fall and supplemented in spring with 100 or 125 lbs. of Sulphate of Ammonia per acre, while for mixed hay either O-16-6 or 2-16-6, and for clover and alfalfa O-16-6, applied in fall, will suffice without supplementary nitrogen in spring.

War Cost to Families Is Put at $400 a Year

The war is costing the average Canadian family about $400 a year, Finance Minister J. L. Ilsley stated this week at Toronto. This amount is not paid in cash, but based on current estimates of increased taxation and government borrowings. It works out to about $85 per person.

Not all of this is spent on soldiers and ammunition. For instance, $900,000,000 is provided in this fiscal year's estimates as assistance to certain industries that lost export markets. Apple growers are an example, but Mr. Ilsley said this estimate does not include aid to wheat producers.

EYE FOR AN EYE

In the last World War the German civil population did not actually experience its horrors like the British did. If they had they might not have been so ready to go to war again at the behest of Hitler, the madman. The war should be fought out on an eye-for-an-eye basis, because neither the Germans nor Italians have any mercy on other people and they deserve none in return.

Man on Relief Pleads Guilty on Fraud Charge

In County Court at L'Orignal, Ovila Brault, 64-year-old-Hawkesbury resident, pleaded guilty to a charge of obtaining the sum of $315.95 direct relief by means of fraud.

After reviewing the evidence taken at the preliminary enquiry and listening to a strong plea on behalf of the accused by defence counsel, H. W. Lawlor, K.C., Judge A. Constantineau discharged Brault after placing him on a one-year probation. He had previously been at liberty on bail of $400.

The case aroused considerable interest throughout the district. Brault pleaded not guilty when he first appeared in court before Magistrate Labrosse of Vankleek Hill, and after several witnesses testified he was committed for trial. The charge was laid by Relief Administrator Conrad Dubois of Hawkesbury.

Evidence showed that Brault was receiving the sum of $51.55 monthly from a group insurance plan at the Canadian International Paper Company, and at the same time was on the relief rolls. He had signed several declarations during this time that the only revenue he had was that from relief. Authorities, however, began an investigation when it was reported that he was constructing a new house, on a lot near his home, and the fraud charge followed.

Making History in Argenteuil

Extracted from the Fyles of The Watchman

60 Years Ago

Friday, Oct. 8, 1880.

The freshmen of McGill College held a meeting on Monday at the reading room, and elected the following officers: Mr. Geo. Rodgers, president; Mr. F. W. Skaife, secretary; Mr. W. L. Murray, captain of football team.

There passed through Lachute on Wednesday two train-loads of 14 cars each of iron bridge work, for the Chaudière Bridge. These were shipped from Philadelphia, U.S., and consigned through direct without transshipment. Some of the iron pieces were so long that they extended the full length of two cars.

Several members of the Syndicate for building the Canada Pacific R.R. passed through here on Wednesday, journeying to Ottawa.

Brantford girls are coming into line, and hoops, or rather crinolines, are the fashion. Sidewalks will have to be widened or some people must take the road for a path.

Buying a nine cent loaf of sliced and wrapped bread, a housewife gets a little over one cent's worth of wheat. The rest of the money goes for baking, paper, transportation and other material and services.

Pte. David Wilson, (aged 18 years, 10 months), youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. David Wilson, of Rose Isle, formerly of Lachute, was killed in battle on July 17th with the Winnipeg Rifles.

Mr. Alex Pollock was treated to a pleasant surprise on Tuesday evening, when members of the Lachute East Mutual Rural Telephone Assn. met at his new home and presented him and his wife with a handsome chair in appreciation of services rendered.

On Wednesday, Sept. 29th, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Jas. Dwyer, Calumet, there passed away Mrs. David Sweeney, formerly of Chatham, Que., at the ripe old age of 98 years.

At the Lachute Town Council it was moved by Councillor Wilson, seconded by Councillor McGibbon, that tenders be asked for a new bridge over the North River to replace Barron's Bridge.

The death occurred in his East Ward home, of Mr. Simon McKimmie. Deceased came to Lachute with his father in 1851 from Scotland. He lived upwards of 64 years in Lachute, and celebrated his golden wedding in 1909.

An outstanding feature is the wide spread distribution of low priced power and light to domestic consumers.

IF YOU CAN'T SING, SHUT UP !

"Isn't the war news terrible! Three hospitals bombed in England" . . . "The war is going bad, very bad; it's hard to say how it's going to turn out! . . . These remarks were passed in our hearing within a very short time, one day recently. We made a note of them, for they are peculiar to a type of defeatist whose inherent pessimism can do more danger than a fifth columnist of the worst breed.

Certainly the indiscriminate bombing of London has been terrible. No one would attempt to minimize the havoc and tragedy inflicted among defenceless civilians. But it is not winning the war. The fact becomes more evident every day. The make-up of an Englishman is such that his determination to win increases in exact ratio to every bomb dropped on his countrymen.

History has the answers. Turn back the pages of the past, if you would know the reasonable certainties of the future . . . It is only 70 years ago that France was under the iron heel of Germany. England was not involved at that time, for the then Chancellor of Germany had learned the lesson of Napoleon; he warned Kaiser Wilhelm II to avoid a clash with Britain at all costs. Wilhelm, however, had ideas of his own, and dismissed his aged counsellor. He led his country into war with Britain in 1914 — the outcome of which is vividly remembered.

Over 125 years ago, England stood alone against the world, including what was then of the United States. Barges and ships were being assembled on the French coast for an invasion of England. And what happened? The boats never sailed: on June 18th, 1815, there was the Battle of Waterloo.

What is happening today? Another blood-drunk war lord has been feverishly assembling his mechanized barges and mechanized troops to cross the English Channel; they have been blasted from the air, night after night. Bismark knew the hopelessness of such a venture, But Hitler would succeed where Napoleon failed; yet history day by day indicates that he, too, is headed for his Waterloo.

Von Ribbentrop may boast that there are now 225 million people lined against Britain. But "There'll Always Be An England"; there are 625 millions beneath the flag, even if they do not all know the tune. And in Canada of all places — if you can't sing, folks, shut up. There is no room for defeatists here.

SMOKE BOMBS — AND THE MENACE OF INDIFFERENCE

In these war days, smoke bombs are employed to hide the movements of naval or military forces from the enemy. In Canada, smoke rises in clouds every day from fires started by careless smokers — fifth columnists in the fight against fire. Nearly 14,000 fires were caused by smokers' carelessness in Canada in 1939, involving a loss of over $2,000,000. Most fires from this cause originate in dwellings, but frequently they happen in factories, stores and business warehouses. In such cases the loss is often very high. For instance, a pier fire in one of our great ocean ports two years ago, which was attributed to the careless disposal of a cigarette, caused a loss of $770,000.

A dangerous habit indulged in by many smokers is that of smoking in bed. Drowsiness soon overcomes the smoker and he falls asleep. But his lighted cigarette doesn't. Soon there is a smouldering of the bed covers and the sleeper stands a very good chance of being asphyxiated or burned to death. Do your smoking before retiring and live longer.

Above all, be sure that your cigarette butt, match, cigar or pipe tobacco is out before throwing away. Many forest fires are caused by careless campers neglecting this simple practice. Motorists, too, are very indifferent about such matters. Every make of car is today provided with receptacles for used matches and cigarettes. Why not make use of them and conserve the beauty of the countryside through which we travel?

The tragic fate of overpowered European countries has been attributed to a laxness in personal habits. Smokers of Canada must plead guilty also to this charge. If we are to conquer the foe, we must overcome a lot of personal apathy and indifferenc. Why not start by being careful in our smoking?

AT THREE PER CENT

In the course of the war loan campaign, the minister of finance, the Hon. J. L. Ilsley, made a radio address urging all and sundry to buy bonds. It was a good speech, from a cabinet member who is a real asset to the country and his party.

Yet in some respects the remarks are worth comment. First of all was the argument that Canadians should "sacrifice" themselves to buy government bonds at 3 per cent interest, compared with 1½ per cent currently paid on bank savings accounts. Among the definitions of "sacrifice" we can find none which implies that investment of money in the prime security of the nation involves a sacrifice. "Sacrifice" as it applies to war would seem to be "to give up in favor of a higher or more imperative object or duty." Soldiers and sailors and airmen who daily risk their lives in warfare are at least prepared to sacrifice everything for a cause and in so far as military service interferes with the individual's normal work or ambition, mere service also involves sacrifice.

Lending money at interest is no sacrifice. The nearest approach to it would be if the individual who buys war bonds had a more profitable use for the money. There may be many such; one example of which we know is of an Ontario man who had $1,100 set aside to retire at 6 per cent mortgage, but the government got the money instead of the mortgagee. Sacrifice of $2.50 per month in interest is a small one.

Payment of income tax, on the other hand, is a genuine sacrifice, for, come April 30th next, a great many people in this country are going to find that to pay their taxes they will need to curtail expenditures in other directions. The new income tax will cause many a citizen to keep the old car another year. But that, too, will be a small sacrifice. Civilians in England not only run daily risk of their lives, but petrol is available only to those who have business reasons for using it.

A Passive Resistance by the Women of Occupied Belgium

By Isabelle Blume-Gregoire

Madame Isabelle Blume-Gregoire was born in 1892, the daughter of a Protestant clergyman. She has been a schoolmistress and teacher of history and is the mother of three children. She has been active in the Belgian Socialist movement since 1920, especially in educational work and women's organization, and a member of the Belgian Chamber of Deputies since 1935.

I know our womenfolk at home. I was almost going to say I know them one by one. I could point out to you their familiar gestures and their habits. Their voices sing in my ears. I know how they cook their dinner and the way they cut their bread. I could tell you the very words they use in this part of the country and in that, to hail birth or to mourn death.

I have seen them all, from the richest to the poorest, in the hours of national joy and sorrow. I know, as surely as if I were still among them, how they feel, what they think, and how they may be expected to act. I know what will push them on and stimulate them to resist.

There is one thing uppermost in their minds: they remember! They have known a German occupation before. Some of them remained for years indifferent in face of the progress of Nazism. But at the last minute, when Nazism took the definite shape of a German invasion, when the monstrous thing became a reality, they did not hesitate one moment to abandon home and comfort, to crowd the roads in strange lands and to face the gravest dangers rather than suffer the sight of the invader.

When I listen to the German-controlled broadcasts from Brussels, I imagine myself to be with the womenfolk of my country seated round the wireless set, and when I reply, I do so with them and for them.

The women of my country are housewives — good housewives. They have learnt to realize what effect Government policy may have on the realities of their home life.

Therefore, when they are told what great statesmen Nazi leaders are in preventing high prices and profiteering, and at the same time raise the rate of exchange of the mark from 8.25 francs to 10 and 12.50, then they recognize their old friend or rather bitter enemy, inflation. That dread thing means to them something very real, against which no propaganda tricks can prevail.

When the German-inspired radio announcer tells us that the Nazis will put our unemployed young men to work, we reply :

"Maybe, but they will have to work in Flanders, help to prepare the German attack against Britain! Instead of fighting in an army against the invader, they will be helping him.

"They will have to submit without defence to the necessary bombings by our British friends, torn between their desire to see those bombs work the greatest havoc among the enemy and the fear of their destroying innocent lives among our own people.

"There can be no joy and no profit in work intended to make good the destruction of bases held by our enemy and tormentor.

"And then, we have heard enough of these famous Nazi labor camps to know what awaits our sons in barracks where the young men are huddled together and deliberately removed from all normal human intercourse. We shudder to think how our own youth will come back from those institutions. For them, in any case, the Nazi labor camps are nothing better than deportation camps."

What do you think our womenfolk must feel at the sight of our shops getting emptier every day and everything carried away by the invader in exchange for worthless paper money as in the last war?

They may keep silent before their new masters, but in the intimacy of their homes and when closeted with their friends, they speak of nothing but the conqueror's violence, his prisons and concentration camps, his practices of robbery and his clumsy artfulness. Every night our women pray for his speedy defeat.

The invader's talk of a "new order" only makes them despise and hate him all the more. To our women, the "new order" meant something very different indeed. It signified new sunny houses with better equipped kitchens, healthy families and

FIRE PREVENTION WEEK . . .

STOP ! — THINK !

The world has passed through a year of the second Great War. The devastation wrought by means of incendiary and high explosive bombs has been both tragic and appalling.

. . Yet in the twenty years since Fire Prevention Week was first established in Canada, this country has recorded more than 800,000 fires involving a property loss of over $726,000,000 and a loss in human lives of more than 7,700. Our complacency in this respect is only matched by the complacency with which we watched Hitler attain power.

DID YOU GET YOUR SHARE?

Country general stores in Canada averaged 8 per cent higher sales in June this year over June 1939, according to returns received from almost 700 of these general merchandise stores located in the smaller towns and rural areas. All sections of the country reported increasing business ranging from one per cent for British Columbia to 17 per cent for the southern district of Saskatchewan. Have our local stores profited, too? . . . The recipe is: up-to-date goods, plus reasonable prices, seasoned with cheerful and friendly service, the whole mixed with judicious and consistent advertising in your local newspaper . . . Try this recipe.

THE ISSUE — OUR HAPPINESS

There is no doubt whatever that the issue being fought out by the British people with such immortal heroism is not only decency, and safety, but the daily bread and ordinary everyday happiness of Canadians and Americans in every province, every state, and every class. Matthew Halton in "Let's Face the Facts" series.

CALL THEM "MILITIA".

In "Non-Permanent Active Militia" there is not the slightest descriptive value at the present time that is not contained in the one word "Militia". The circumstance that the Press in general, with unusual docility, has accepted Ottawa's nine-syllable designation does not alter the fact.

Aged Resident of Arundel Is Laid to Rest

THE LATE GEO. MONCRIEFF

Arundel — One of the oldest and most esteemed residents of this district, Mr. George Moncrieff, passed away at his home on Oct 1st. The deceased, who had attained his nineteth year, had been in failing health for some time. He was born in Edina, Que., the son of David Moncrieff and Margaret Stanish, and moved to Arundel in 1894.

The largely attended funeral service, held in the United Church on Thursday, was conducted by the Rev. C. Cushing, assisted by Rev. Royle, of Grace Church. The pall-bearers were John and William Moncrieff, sons; Frank Staniforth, E. Gray, sons-in-law; Hugh Boyd, grandson; Jos. Loudin, step-son.

He leaves to mourn his loss four daughters — Mrs. Margaret Boyd, Arundel; Mrs. E. Gray, Mrs. Frank Staniforth, Gray Valley; Mrs. T. Henvis, Arundel; two sons — John and William, of Arundel; also two step-daughters — Mrs. J. Kennedy, of Brockville, Mrs. Arthur Kidd, Winnipeg; two step-sons—Mr. Robert Kennedy, High River, Alta., and Mr. Jos. Loudin, Montreal; also 35 grandchildren and five great grandchildren.

Burial took place in the Arundel Cemetery.

The "pom-pom" shells and "chain webs" recently used against Nazi raiders over England, were only two of the surprises planned for Hitler. Other British secret weapons are in production . . . Something else that's new is a queer-looking British plane that solves problems over which the world's experts have been puzzling for years. You'll hear more of it later on.

I like work; it fascinates me. I can sit and look at it for hours.

THIS STRANGE WORLD

Affection is the spice of life to most wives, but here is the story of one wife who thinks it can be overdone. It happened in a little middle western U.S. village . . . Her husband leaned forward to kiss her goodbye, lost his balance and fell forward with such force that he gave her a resounding bang on the jaw and dislocated it.

The waitresses at one Cape Cod restaurant are at least frank (and probably truthful, too). They now present customers with the meal check enclosed in an envelope on which is printed: "Here is the bad news!" We don't know if this item properly belongs to a column of Strange Happenings, but here it is . . . Rats prefer an alcohol-water mixture rather than pure water, according to prolonged tests made by scientists . . . . However, even rats, like their liquor mild, for they refuse a mixture of more than 7 per cent alcohol.

A negro woman of Milwaukee attempted to register as an alien during the recent alien registration in the United States. She explained: "I was born in Virginia." Turned down, she insisted, "but I married a man from Alabama, too" . . . .She went away without being convicted that both Alabama and Virginia were parts of the U.S.A., and that she therefore wasn't an alien.

STARK REALIZATION NECESSARY

The English woman who was shocked at the wastefulness in Canada, and declared that we "should be ashamed of ourselves", will make no enemies by such a charge. It is a well-known fact and proves further that the majority do not yet realize that Canada is definitely at war against powerful and unrelenting nations.

The Rt. Rev. Arthur Carlisle, Bishop of the Diocese, is at present making his annual visitation of the Deanery, and expects to be in Brownsburg on Friday evening at 8 o'clock and in Lachute on Sunday morning at 11 o'clock.

LACHUTE UNITED Y.P.U.

The regular weekly meeting of the Lachute United Young People's Union was held last evening in the church hall, with the president, Douglas Gordon, in the chair.

The business meeting dealt with the completion of plans for the Montreal district convention, which is being held here on Oct. 19th and 20th.

The program was under the convenorship of Harold Deacon. The Rev. W. B. Rosborough was speaker, and discussed the topic "Canada". He spoke on the beauty of the Atlantic provinces and of the Laurentians, the fascination of the prairies, the foothills and Rockies, and of the rivers and forests of British Columbia. "If Canada is to attain the high standing of which we dream, we must have social justice, and there must be a spirit of co-operation between the English and French peoples," Mr. Rosborough said, closing his address with a quotation from Geo. M. Grant, "The destiny of any country depends not only on material resources, but on the character of its people" . . . "Character — that's what a nation needs!" — a quotation from Mr. R. B. Bennett.

LARGE ATTENDANCE AT ANNUAL MEETING OF BIBLE SOCIETY

An illustrated lecture on the spreading of the gospel in China was heard last Sunday evening at Lachute United Church, the occasion being a joint gathering of the Protestant congregations for the annual meeting of the British and Foreign Bible Society, Lachute Branch. The lecturer was the Rev. James Adams, of Montreal, district secretary of the organization. Incidental to the topic were slides and explanations of the work of this society among the Canadian troops, to whom testaments and gospels had been distributed in large numbers, these volumes carrying a message from His Majesty King George as a foreword and an inspiration to the men.

Members of the local clergy took part in the devotions, and the session was under the chairmanship of Mr. Thos J. Barron, president of the branch. The business of the evening included adoption of the minutes of the previous annual gathering, presented by the secretary, Mrs. L. Morris, who also read a report of the activities and finances of the branch. All officers were re-elected, namely—president, T. J. Barron; vice-president, J. S. Giles; treasurer, C. Cunningham; recording secretary, Mrs. L. Morris; corresponding secretary, Mrs. W. A. Bradley.

Appreciation was expressed to the speaker of the evening, and to the collectors and helpers in the work of the organization. Special tribute was voiced also for the active interests of a past president, the late Dr. J. H. Mason, and a vote of sympathy to his bereaved family was passed, the congregation standing in reverent memory.

The collections for this year are reported as $191 by personal canvass and $20 from the offering at this annual meeting, making a total of $211 to be forwarded to district headquarters of the Society.

HAVE YOU NOTICED IT?

We are always struck by the difference wrought by weeks of army or air force routine when we meet boys who have enlisted. It is not all in the uniform. It is in their carriage, in the purposeful way they walk, in the uplifted chin and squared shoulders. There is a different look in their eyes, too, a look of pride and self-respect and determination . . . It is the inward change which really counts. These boys have a job to do and they are ready, willing and anxious to get at it.

WEEKLY HEALTH ARTICLE

SOME STOMACH AILMENTS DUE TO WEAKENED ABDOMINAL MUSCLES

When a high school boy or girl walks with a slump — shoulders bent over, flat chest, protruding abdomen — such a youngster should be examined by a physician to learn the cause of such poor posture.

Poor posture may be responsible in many young adults for what is known as ptosis. Ptosis means that certain of the organs within the abdomen have dropped downward out of their normal position because of relaxed abdominal muscles and poor posture.

When a person has some trouble with his stomach or bowels he usually thinks it is due to something he eats. However, doctors know that from fifteen to thirty per cent of persons who have symptoms affecting the stomach and bowel have some form of ptosis. Young adults have the disorder more frequently than others, but it may occur in elderly persons. In some cases the ptosis may be present without causing any symptoms.

According to Dr. M. G. Spiesman, of Chicago, ptosis may develop because of improper methods of dress, from injuries, and in women who have had a number of children. Poor nutrition and overwork help produce the disorder. Wearing a tight corset produces pressure and forces the intestine downward, out of position.

Another type of ptosis occurs in individuals who are usually slender and have weak, small muscles. These individuals suffer from weakness of the muscles in the stomach and bowel, and develop nervous dyspepsia, with such symptoms as a feeling of fullness after eating, sickness to the stomach, vomiting and indigestion.

Practically all of the organs within the abdomen and the kidneys as well may be out of their normal position. Or, the ptosis may involve only the organs of the right side or in the middle of the abdomen.

The patient may complain of a variety of symptoms. Some feel tired, have a dull headache, are unable to work, are mentally depressed, and feel generally weak. Such symptoms as a feeling of pressure or fullness in the stomach, belching or burning sensations in the stomach may occur. The appetite, as a rule, is poor. In women, particularly, there may be severe backache and neckache. As a rule, these persons look pale and give the impression that they do not feel well. They may be depressed in spirit. Their pulse rate is usually rather rapid.

A diagnosis of ptosis of the organs within the abdomen is usually definitely made by means of the X-ray.

There are a number of things which may be done to keep ptosis from developing. Women, after childbirth, should be kept in bed for a sufficiently long time to give the muscles a chance to regain their strength, and these muscles may well be supported by an abdominal bandage. Of course, exercise and massage are also quite useful for these women. Only a properly fitted corset should be worn.

Active treatment for ptosis includes a number of things. Dr. Spiesman advises the use of enemas or injections into the lower bowel to help overcome bloating, fullness, sickness to the stomach, belching and headache. While an external support, such as a corset, may help to keep the abdominal organs in their normal position, the only hope for permanent improvement is in increasing the amount of fat within the abdomen. In other words, in persons who are thin and underweight, it is necessary that such persons gain weight. It may be necessary to put the individual in a hospital for a time while this weight-gaining program is carried out. About two weeks of complete rest in bed, with the use of a diet containing plenty of fat, starches and sugars, will usually produce an adequate gain in weight. At the end of this time, exercises must be begun. Systematic exercise is one of the best ways for increasing the amount and strength of muscle tissue. If a person with ptosis is fat but with relaxed abdominal muscles reducing the weight, and exercising to strengthen the muscles will help overcome the trouble.

Ptosis, or dropping of the abdominal muscles, may be a disturbing disorder, and much can be done to relieve it.

HARDENING OF ARTERIES

"Can a person live very long with hardening of the arteries? —H.C.L."

Answer

Even though the arteries are hardened, a number of years of life are possible. An individual with this condition, however, should avoid overstrain, over-eating and worry. Plenty of rest is important. A well-balanced diet should be employed, one containing plenty of fruits, vegetables, whole-grain cereals, milk and butter, with meat and eggs in moderate amount.

Fire Prevention in the Home

The best place for fire prevention to start is in the home. Charity should start there according to the ancient saying, and certainly safety should come first. In order to safeguard the home, inspection should be made, not only Fire Prevention Week but periodically throughout the year. All heating and lighting equipment examined, chimney and pipes kept clean of soot. No smoke pipes permitted through combustible walls; disposition of ashes safeguarded. The fuse cabinet should be of metal or asbestos lined. Fuses should be in all fuse blocks, none of them bridged, and not over 15 ampere fuses used in branch circuits. All drop cords should be insulated, and not supported on any conductive material. Electric Irons always detached when not in use and kept on metal stands.

Matches should be kept out of the reach of children and the children should be regularly taught the danger of fire and not to play with matches. The safest type of match to use is the "Safety Match" which may be lighted only on the box.

Closets should be kept clean and all rubbish removed from the entire premises. Cleanliness is next to Godliness. Perhaps that is the reason it always plays such an important part in fire prevention.

This year again special emphasis is being placed on the inspection of dwellings during Fire Prevention Week.

HINTS FOR HOMEBODIES

By JESSIE ALLEN BROWN

A BROKEN BONE

There is a saying, "there is a first time for everything", and I have just had my first broken bone. An apparently simple stumble, and fall, off a step on to the drive way and the result a broken ankle bone. Never again will I pass anyone on crutches with an indifferent glance. How some of them can ever swing along at the pace they do is beyond me. I manage fairly well on the living-room rug but when it comes to the hardwood floors I am scared of every step I take, and bad as they are the tiled bathroom floor is even skiddier. I am trying to hasten recovery by eating foods with a high calcium content. It isn't a very serious break but it is a nuisance. Here I was looking forward to grand walks in the woods this Autumn.

GOOD NEIGHBORS

Even though I have always lived in cities I have always managed to have good neighbors, but there is something about the flavor and savor of the country neighbor that makes them closer. They slip in the back door with the freshest of beans and the crispest cucumbers from the garden. They bring plates of fudge and chocolate cake, and the very choicest blooms, the largest dahlia of all, and the pansies already arranged in a dish which just suits them and then refill it every other day. The boquet of flowers so generous it had to go in a large basket, so in it came basket and all, and was so large it had to sit on the floor by my dresser. It would have graced a funeral! Best of all was the neighbor who used to be a nurse. She came in a couple of times a day and gave me an alcohol rub, and didn't it feel good. I could not help but realize what a boon the Victorian Order of Nurses must be. Many people have the idea they are to be called on only in charity cases but this is a mistaken idea. If people who can afford to pay would employ them it would help everyone concerned. First the patient would be made more comfortable; the work of the family would be lessened; and the money they could pay would help finance the Order.

BOOKS

Among the many books I had lent to me were a couple which stand out. The first was R. C. Sheriff's "Greengates." It is the story of a man who retires, his difficulties, and the way he made a new way of living. The book is so human. The man retires but the wife cannot. She has plenty of trials even to little ones like not being able to sleep in her husband's chair for her nap after lunch. Her own chair was good for knitting in but not for sleeping. If she went to her room she needed a fire. They even had servant trouble. Perhaps you have read it as it is not a new book, if so I am sure you had some good chuckles. The other was Hendrick Van Loon's "The Arts". I have had opportunities to read this book a couple of times before but passed it up. Possibly because it looked too big. Not too long, because I like a long book as it provides more to read, but it seemed so heavy to hold that my laziness got the best of me. Even now I left it until I had nothing else. It is written for people who, like me, know little about Art. It is so readable and interesting Mr. Van Loon must have had a lot of enjoyment writing it. It is informative, but not statistically so, inspiring and quite amusing. He takes the same attitude towards the Arts as Deems Taylor does about music. Something to be enjoyed but not to be put on a pedestal and blindly worshipped. It is skilfully interwoven with History. As to its length, the author says he cut it down from 1800 pages to 800. What a slashing. Upon occasion I have had to cut down magazine articles and it was not easy. Once an American magazine sent me galley-sheets by Air Mail and Special Delivery and asked me to add 500 words by return mail. My mind was a blank and I could think of nothing more to say. However, the man of the house said, why don't you say———. Once I got the idea the words came easy. The fact that I was being paid a cent and a half a word didn't hurt my feelings either. But to get back to The Arts. It is a book to own as it will bear reading and re-reading.

Never having had an operation I have never been able to talk about one. A broken bone seems to be about as good.

BEAUTY

PIMPLES AND BLACKHEADS

Young girls who are beset with dust-filled pores and horrid little red pustules need a guiding hand to help them along the beauty way. Many times, in their ignorance, they make matters worse. There is the one who has heard that sticking to cold water treatments will cure her complexion ills. Cold water has no effect upon dust and oil that film the skin, and it is inclined to make the waxlike plugs in the pore even harder and more firmly established. There is also the misguided lassie who tries one cream after another in a futile attempt to clear up her complexion. What she does is to spread the infection.

Acne responds to warm soap suds, which is of antiseptic value and dries up the eruptions. Oils, unless of a medicated nature keep the skin moist and bacteria thrives thereon. Friction with the finger tips will cause the infection to start up in new areas.

Shaving soap is recommended because it makes a rich lather and by rubbing it into the skin it is forced into the pores. Any bland soap will serve, but the suds must be thick and crackling. Every bit must be rinsed away; warm water performs that service better than cold. After the thorough scrubbing, dip a heavy wash cloth in hot water, give the flesh a good steaming to heal pimples and dislodge the black points.

Applications of a soda solution after the drying has been found helpful in many cases. Dissolve one teaspoonful of baking soda in a cup of water, apply with a pledget of cotton, let it dry on. The soda combines with and softens the sebaceous obstructions in the pores.

This treatment should be given at night when the skin will not be exposed to strong winds or sunlight. In the morning use clear tepid water and the soda solution again. If the flesh feels dry and drawn, a tiny bit of cold cream can be used.

Medical men who deal with diseases of the skin and scalp have various methods of treatment and if acne does not respond to home treatment professional advice should be sought. Chronic acne burrows so deeply into the flesh that it is often difficult to overcome the infection.

The daily bath with warm suds and a heavy brush is a necessary detail because it helps the skin to function normally all over the body surface. A quick cold shower helps the blood to skip along at a brisk rate and a brisk rubdown with a course towel gives freshness and softness to the epidermal surface.

A friend's Thanksgiving: Thankful to God, I'm thankful too, just because of knowing you.

Fashions of the Day

By Jean Walsh

Every year, winter seems to creep up on us, and the first fall of snow finds us scurrying to dig out our furs and galoshes. However, before the snow comes, we should take a look at what we have left from last year, and see what we might add.

If you need a fall coat, you will be glad to hear that long-haired (and much warmer) furs are back in style. Close fitting high collars of fox, skunk, wolf and coon are shown everywhere. Fur often makes a band on the bottom of the coat, too, or big shaggy patch pockets. For the smoother furs, beaver, or its counterpart, a sheared sheep, dyed to a beaver color, is popular. Coats have that side-draped line which is also shown in the fall dresses.

If your face is young, your fall hat will probably be pushed back from your forehead, revealing piled up curls, or the new pompador line. Hats are much bigger, and given to sweeping flares. The berets, similar to those worn by the Queen when she visited Canada, are seen everywhere, worn pulled over to one side, and bigrimmed. If you feel better in a hat which you can pull down over your eyes, don't despair. Many of them are shown, and they are worn over the forehead rather than over one eye this year. The ever popular snapbrim is still a general favorite for every age.

Accessories are gay, and practical. Knitted angora and wool mitts will go from school or shopping through the day and through the whole scale of color to evenings, when they blossom out in white. Brilliant red, kelley green, gold, and the new winter blue . . . a duller-than-airforce shade . . . are bright accents in bags and hats.

Mrs. K.B.D., Hebron, N.S., has a black winter coat, with a loose back, and a wolf collar. She wore grey with it last year. She wants a change of accessories, and wants to know if this coat will be good this year, or how she could change it. She is 50 years old, has blue eyes and gray hair.

This style is perfectly good. I wouldn't change it at all, except perhaps to shorten it. With your coloring, you could wear the new winter blue in a hat and bag, and get black gloves and shoes. For the dress you mention, get a rich portwine shade in a sheer wool or crepe . . . lovely with blue.

Miss B. K., Montreal, is just starting her first job, and has only about $30 to spend on her winter wardrobe. She is 19 and is very dark, with brown eyes. A brown wool skirt, with a rust wool sweater set would be smart for the office. You could get a brown crepe blouse to wear with a wide gold suede belt when you wanted a change. A deep green crepe or fine wool dress, high neck, bell sleeves, shirred skirt could be worn with your brown accessories, with a collar for the office and a necklace for dates. Get a brown hat, not too dressy, and brown kid pumps. For evenings, a ruby red velveteen jacket could be worn over a black crepe skirt, and could also be worn with the brown wool skirt.

Miss D.B. is going to be married, and wants to know what dress she could get for her wedding gown . . . a short dress. She is 19, has blue eyes and brown hair. She has to wear it later for afternoons.

A deep blue crepe, made with round neck, and short sleeves, with a tucked bodice and a side-draped skirt could be worn with a blue off-the-face hat to match and wine accessories.

The worst thing about wisdom is that it can only be acquired on the instalment plan.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN
Famous Authority on Good Manners and Good Taste

GOOD BREEDING EVIDENCED IN CORRECT USAGE OF NAMES

How perplexing it often is to sense when it is just the moment to drop the formal "Mr." or Mrs." or "Miss" in favor of the informal "Tom" or "Betty". Social life today has become so informal that this question is not so bothersome as it used to be in the formal old days.

Yet, if we are to be considered well-bred, we must develop a sensitivity about the appropriate time to assume that we have the right to use the first name of a person. Sometimes it is fitting for you to be the one to change to the use of the first name of the other person; sometimes it is fitting that you wait for the other person to adopt the informal address. Almost always the other person's age and position and distinction are to be considered. We may be friendly and informal but we must guard against being thought "too familiar."

Another point about names: Even if we call Mrs. Preston "Anne" when we are with her, we speak of her as "Mrs. Preston" when we are speaking about her to someone who does not call her Anne" or perhaps does not even know her.

This is important in business: Even if you know your employer or business superior very well socially and therefore call him or her by the first name, you should use Mr. or Mrs. or Miss when addressing or speaking about him or her during business hours. This will call for self-control, but it will stamp you as well-bred.

GIRL GIVES DINNER ORDER TO HER HOST, NOT WAITER

I always feel sorry for the man who is trying to be a courtly host to a girl he has invited to dine with him when that girl gives her order directly to the waiter. The host is, of course, helpless in the face of this discourtesy. All he can do is take the impoliteness while the waiter takes the order. But if a girl or woman knew how men feel about this unmannerliness they would change ways; they would, when they had made their choice as to foods, tell this choice to the host and let him relay both orders to the waiter.

A letter in today's mail vociferously sets forth how one man feels about this:

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

I've just finished reading your "Good Manners" column, and here are three long heartfelt cheers from a man who has suffered the indignity of not being allowed to give the order to the waiter. Notice I say "has" suffered. Thank Heaven, I don't any more.

Thanks to my well-bred wife, I never have to tear my hair any more while desperate waiters resort to the same extremity trying to take orders from two or more people at once. But there was a time when this particular transgression enraged me as much as it enrages most men.

Some day, perhaps every young lady will realize that, no matter how impulsive or hungry she may be, it is fair to assume that her host is just as capable of dealing with the waiters as he is of picking up the check!

There! Now I feel better. Again three cheers — and I hope you'll keep up your crusade about who gives the order to the waiter. Faithfully, P.K.F.

The Germans display typical Nazi cunning in dealing with people in Holland, as they have already done with Denmark. Pretending to deal generously with the farmers, they buy all available horses and anything else the need, paying in Dutch banknotes at a higher rate, so they say, than Britain would pay. However, to cover the payments, they reimburse the Dutch national bank with a worthless kind of German "money" from the German Treasury, and this money will only be exchanged on "the day of victory" . . . . That means never.

More coal is being mined in Britain, more miners are getting grimier, and yet nearly 60,000 homes in the coalfields districts of Britain have been made cleaner as a result of the increased activity . . . Here is how this apparent paradox was achieved . . . From every ton of coal sold from British mines, two cents go to the welfare fund and all these cents amounted to a record income of £1,280,000 (approx. $5,600,000) last year. More than 50 additional pit head baths were built, providing accommodation for 58,000 miners — who now go home in clean clothes instead of in their working dress.

London's Heart

London's heart is made of Oak
True carved from British trees,
Deep soiled and strong
With roots that lived
E're Normans claimed the crown.
The mighty Oak whose branches
Spread beyond the seven seas,
Tho' wounds be deep and sore
'Wounds made by evil force'
When healed, but scars remain
To sanctify the memory of sacrifice and pain.
At Britain's feet the Bull Dog stands
Safe guard 'gainst ruthless hordes.
Britain's armies, millions strong,
Stand ready for the foes.
High overhead, on armoured wings,
As Gabriels in the air,
Intrepid, valiant, unafraid,
The gallant lads of Britain's planes
Drive fiendish emblems from the skies.
Around the shores the lion roars,
Its bristling mane of steel,
Proclaims with deadly skill
The might that's known as England's right
That 'Britain rules the waves'.
Aye, London's heart be made of Oak,
True carved from Britain's trees.

happy children preparing for a life of honest work. Flower gardens and modern schools, music and art, solidarity and progress — such were our dreams of a better future which we were to forge for ourselves in freedom and harmony.

Yes; we conceived this "new order" without war or violence. We women did not mean our boys to be soldiers at all. We wanted to bring them up in the arts of peace, and but for the Nazi conquerors, there was no reason why we should not have made our dream come true.

For us, the "new order" was the brotherhood of man. It had nothing to do with that hysterical and satanic creed of racial and national hatred.

That is why I know the indignation of our womenfolk at the enemy's ways and deeds is rising day by day, and their one desire is to rid themselves and their kith and kin of the grasp of his power.

I also know that our women, whether they be in exile or at home, will not fail in their duty of resistance to the invader. They will fulfill it even when some of their menfolk might falter in their purpose. In the past they have shown themselves to be lions at heart, whenever men seemed to lose courage. It would be thus again.

To deliver the world of a monstrous "order" which cannot even offer us the calm and silence of the cemetery, we are prepared to wait and to suffer for a while, but when the hour strikes, we shall act.

And, if need be, we shall give our lives for this cause.

Holiday Week-End Brings Chapter Of Accidents in Chatham District

Child Strays Into Pasture, Is Kicked by Horse

Three Highway Mishaps

Grenville N—On Saturday evening opposite the farm of Gilbert Arnold, Highway 8A, David Dumoulin, while driving with a horse and buggy was struck by a car. The buggy was smashed and the horse killed. Dumoulin was badly shaken up but not seriously hurt.

Grenville N. — A little child from Montreal strayed away from his parents and was found in a pasture with some horses. It is reported he had been badly kicked before being rescued from his dangerous plight.

Cushing—Late Saturday afternoon Mrs. Alvin Heatlie, while driving the cows from pasture along No. 8 Highway to her home, was struck by a car. She was removed unconscious to Dr. E. P. Kelly's Hospital at Hawkesbury, and is now reported to be making a good recovery. It is stated the driver of the car swerved to the side of the road to avoid another vehicle, and in doing so struck Mrs. Heatlie and threw her to the ground.

Cushing W.—Two young men from Grece's Point, sons of Louis Bertrand, met with an accident on Sunday which sent one to Dr. Smith's Hospital, Hawkesbury, with a broken leg, and gave the second a severe shaking up. It was stated the stearing gear of their car gave out as they were driving down the front road just above the stone school, and the car crashed into a telephone pole and overturned, pinning them both underneath.

A number of nearby residents and passers-by soon gathered around and managed to extricate the victims. Both were conveyed to the hospital; one was allowed to return after receiving treatment for numerous bruises.

Air Force Flier Greets Home Folks From the Air

A local R.C.A.F. pilot came home for Thanksgiving — but being on duty, could not stop off to visit his family and friends. Gerald Walker, on a routine training flight from Ottawa, circled over Lachute several times Monday morning. This is not the first time Gerry has viewed the familiar scenes from this dizzy angle —an experience which few of the home-town boys are privileged to enjoy. Walker has "won his wings", qualifying him for the rank of Flight Sergeant. On Monday he was flying solo on a cross-country flight between Ottawa and St. Jerome.

Gerald Walker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Walker, of Main Street, was an employee of the Cottingham Supply Company before he enlisted in the Air Force.

YOUTHS OF 21 BEGIN MONTH TRAINING PERIOD; 3,000 TANKS TO BE CONSTRUCTED IN CANADA

Military Training Scheme Will Not Interfere With The War Industries

WATCHMAN'S WEEKLY REVIEW OF NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Ottawa — Canada's war activities are steadily gathering momentum. Encouraging reports from government departments show that armed forces and the production of equipment and supplies are expanding to meet the needs of the hour and the future. In 39 camps throughout the Dominion youths of 21, with some slightly older, have begun their thirty days of military training. Just under 30,000 are in these camps; these are the first group called under the compulsory military training plan. They are receiving instruction in the handling of rifles and bayonets and the use of gas masks. They are taught how to march, receive instruction in discipline, have physical training and a general schooling in the fundamentals of military life. The second group of these "young defenders", will be called to camp on November 27th.

Arrangements are being made to prevent the military training schedule from hampering war industry. Care has been taken to postpone or advance the training of those engaged in seasonal operations such as farming, so that there will be no interference with these essential industries. There is also, however, the question of preventing key men being taken from munitions and equipment factories. The work of making a shell is as important as that of learning how to fire a gun. A list of war industries has been sent to the boards in the 13 administrative districts who have the duty of preparing the lists of those to be called out for military training, and these boards have been asked to "give consideration to representatives of certain industrial employers". A committee in Ottawa has been engaged in ironing out the difficulty. One of the great problems facing the munitions industry is keeping up the supply of skilled workmen as the industry expands. The solution is not alone in preventing men being taken out of plants for military training but in instructing new men for expert work in these plants. Schools operated by provincial governments with financial aid from the Dominion are turning out several thousand young experts, and these are being incorporated in ground crews in the Commonwealth Air Training Plan and in the personnel of factories. In addition the government and industrialists are seeking to inaugurate wider plans of instruction. The principal school of instruction is in the factories. Women are being drawn into expert labor ranks.

3,000 Tanks to be Made in Canada

Confidence in the day when the Allies will take the offensive on land against the axis powers is seen in the word that Canada will manufacture 3,000 tanks. Some tanks are being already manufactured in Montreal, but these are in addition. Designs are being completed for these new tanks, which will combine the best features of British and United States tanks. They will be medium sized and of the cruiser type. The cost will be about 150 million dollars. They are to be manufactured in one or more Canadian factories. Tentative arrangements have been made to incorporate 1,200 in the Canadian forces while 1,800 will be made for the British. Research is also being carried on perfecting designs for smaller, cheaper and faster tanks. Thus preparations for the mechanization in the most modern form of Canada's army proceed. Many of the 297 average tanks that have been bought from the United States have been delivered to Canada and men have already started their training in them.

Study Banning of Cyclists From New Quebec Highways

Banning bicycles from the new divided highways of the province, now being constructed, is under study by the Provincial Government, according to advices received by the Royal Montreal Automobile Club of Canada.

Attention of the Government has been drawn to recent action of the Government in Ontario prohibiting bicycles on the Queen Elizabeth Way, the province's new highway between Hamilton and Niagara Falls. Bicyclists were informed they could proceed at their leisure on the old road. When the arrangement, which has proved very popular with motorists, was drawn to the attention of the Quebec Government, a reply was received that the question was already under study.

These new highways are designed for rapid transit, and it is felt that bicycles would be not only a danger to the riders of them, but also to other vehicles on the road. Former roads are adjacent to the new highways and are regarded as more suitable and safer for the bicycles.

In the Province of Quebec, the new super highways include the lakeshore and Ile Perrot highways, the Cote de Liesse divided boulevard, the Montreal--New York State highway, and the new divided sections of the Montreal-Sherbrooke highway.

LACHUTE CENTRE OF WEEK-END MILITARY MANOEUVRES

Godbout Lauded for Fine, Patriotic Sentiment

Decries Sectionalism; Shows Himself in Worthy Role — as Patriot First and Politician Last

"CANADA OWES ALL TO BRITAIN", HE STATES

"Anybody who, in these days, does not recognize what we all owe the British Crown and who doesn't know that it is Britain, and Britain alone, who today is fighting the fight for liberty and Christianity is—a traitor".

—With this and other forceful statements, Premier Adélard Godbout presents the official stand of Quebec Province in its attitude to the Empire. It is a recognition which has been a long time forthcoming — one which even yet is not unanimous in the province; but let it reflect to the credit of Mr. Godbout, that he proclaims the patriotism of his government in a manner which all right-thinking Canadians have longed to hear. In these few words alone, Mr. Godbout commands the warm respect of his English-speaking fellows. He boosts the "racial unity" theme with sentiments far removed from petty politics.

The opening of the first co-operative apple juice plant in the district of Rougement, richly developed by a mixed population that has always lived harmoniously side by side—was the occasion for Premier Adélard Godbout to state that anybody in this country who preached disunity or raised the race cry was nothing but a traitor who should receive short shrift.

"As straight-from-the-shoulder a speech as has ever been delivered by a French-Canadian leader actually in office"—is a description of the Premier's address by a press observer . . . Godbout delivered an impassioned plea for greater understanding between the two major races in this province, warning that it was not by fostering sectionalism that the greatness of a country could be achieved.

"Let us stop whining", the Premier said. "Let us stop this everlasting—'the English have this, the English have that'. It's not through repeating this chant that we shall ever get anywhere, and it's not through petty jealousy that we'll improve the position of our country. Let us be brothers, let us work hand in hand for the greater good and development of this our Canada, yours and mine".

The Premier said that education should become more practical than it had been in the past. There should be, for example, what might amount to vocational training so that youth would be fitted for whatever particular calling he appeared best fitted to follow.

Mr. Godbout took the opportunity of asking the public at large to get over the old idea that politicians were nothing but "crooks", out to get what they could for themselves. Personally, he wished that the three weeks of political campaigning that preceded any election were more in the nature of a "closed retreat" when everybody would examine his conscience and decide how best he could contribute to the general improvement of the country.

He spoke, he insisted, not as a party politician, but as a man with an exacting administrative task in hand. That task he was fulfilling to the best of his ability and he cared little for plaudits or criticism so long as he himself felt that his general policy was for the betterment of the whole rather than the aggrandizement of the few.

The provision in the Defence of Canada regulations for search of premises upon suspicion of possession of a weapon contrary to the regulations, is clarified and enlarged by order-in-council made public recently.

"If any person is reasonably suspected of having in his possession or upon his premises, contrary to the provisions of this regulation any firearm for which a certificate of registration has not been applied for or has been refused or cancelled pursuant to this regulation, or if the Attorney-General of the province is satisfied that it is in the interest of the public safety or the safety of the state so to do, and so directs, he may be searched, or his premises or any place occupied or believed to be occupied by him may be searched, for any firearm by any peace officer without warrant, and if any such firearm be found upon any such person or his premises, or in any such place as aforesaid, the same shall be seized and forfeited to the Crown to be disposed of as the Attorney-General of the province in which such forfeiture takes place may direct."

B'burg Contract Suit Postponed Until Oct. 29

The case of A. Auclair, contractor, of Giffard, Que., versus the Village Corporation of Brownsburg, was aired before Justice P. Cousineau in Superior Court at St. Jerome on Tuesday — adjournment of the court, however, resulting in postponement of the case until Oct. 29th.

The action taken by Auclair through his attorneys, Taschereau, Parent & Cannon, of Quebec City, is for maintaining of an alleged contract for sewerage and waterworks installation, for a sum of $118,000, or alternatively, judgment for $25,000 damages on behalf of the plaintiff. An argument for the claimant was that he had incurred expense in connection with the work anticipated, on the strength of a resolution by Brownsburg council, and that the corporation should be bound by its resolution.

L. L. Legault, counsel for the municipality, countered this claim with an argument that said resolution was not legal, inasmuch as it did not concur with the civic by-law on the public works project; the latter, after a public referendum, authorized an outlay of $152,556 — whereas the plaintiff's tender of $118,000 plus $3 per cubic yard of rock excavation left the municipality uninformed on the total cost, since the engineers had made no soundings of the terrain. The ultimate cost, with expropriations, etc., might therefore have exceeded the sum authorized by public vote; and it was for this reason the corporation had cancelled its resolution and called for new lump-sum tenders.

Other angles of the contract were put forward. Conclusion of argument and decision of the judge were deferred, however, until the 29th of this month. Meanwhile an injunction of the court forbids progress with the work by Napoleon Lagacé, of l'Abord à Plouffe, with whom the municipality had entered into written contract since negotiating with Auclair.

Over 3,000 Men to Stage Tactics of Mechanized Warfare, 1940-Style

ENGINEERS, ARTILLERY AND INFANTRY ENGAGED, WITH SCOUTING PLANES

Military strategists are brewing mass manœuvres for this area next week-end, when mechanized infantry and horseless cavalry will converge upon Lachute for exercises approaching as near as possible to the action and movements of warfare . . . National Defence headquarters announce these manœuvres for Military District No. 3, with central administration at Kingston will open tomorrow, Friday.

From St. John's, Que., the Canadian Dragoons, riding in armored cars and motorcycles, will take their position hereabouts as an enemy unit. Their objective (as closely as one may gather from meagre outline of the plans) will be to obstruct the progress of a composite force of infantry, artillery, engineers and signallers toward Montreal. Somewhere in the Ottawa Valley the Dragoons will take their stand, and search for them will give the advancing force exercise in reconnaissance.

Out of Petawawa Camp, 110 miles west of Ottawa, tomorrow morning will roll three regiments of artillery, two field companies and a survey company of engineers. They will be joined by a detachment of signallers from Barriefield Camp near Kingston, The whole force will number 2,500 to 3,000 men travelling in 300 vehicles.

Near Ottawa the Governor General's Foot Guards, an infantry battalion, will join the force and the whole outfit will spend Friday night in Ottawa.

Saturday morning the force will move to the Quebec side of the river and travel to Lachute, where an extensive billeting site has been reserved for them Saturday night. The troops will advance to Montreal on Sunday.

The manœuvres are designed to provide truck drivers with exercise in driving and in travel co-ordination and to give all the troops practice in mobility in attack.

Near Lachute, in the vicinity of which the hidden "skeleton enemy", the Dragoons, will likely be stationed, the forces from the upper Ottawa will be joined by the Victoria Rifles of Canada and the 3rd Motorcycle Regiment from Montreal.

Exercises about this area are designed to provide experience in reconnaissance, in securing information about the enemy and in the use of all arms. The use of reserves to reinforce an attack will also be demonstrated.

The Royal Canadian Air Force is expected to participate in the manœuvres with aircraft from Ottawa stations.

These war games are also intended to give the troops a sample of "marching discipline", a Defence Department spokesman stated to the Press; — but nowadays "marching" is largely a matter of riding in trucks.

Canada's army has been put on wheels. Troops engaged in the week-end manœuvres will travel several hundred miles, but practically their only marching will be through cities.

One of the last two cavalry units, the Royal Canadian Dragoons, is taking part in the week-end war games, but it will use horse-power — not horses. The other remaining unit, Lord Strathcona's Horse of Winnipeg, has been turned into a motorcycle regiment in Canada's new armored brigade.

Harry Reid, Ottawa conductor of the Canadian National Railways, fractured his left arm when he fell from a slowly moving freight train at Hawkesbury on Sunday. Some years ago he fractured his right arm in a similar accident.

Interesting Sidelights of the War

Women in France are forbidden to use make-up of any kind — this in the country which has sent powder and lipstick all over the world.

Builders of Britain's bombers, like their aircraft, are in the news. Bristol Aeroplane Company, makers of Blenheim bombers which wreak havoc in Germany and enemy-occupied territories every night, have increased their trading profit by $1,346,920 in the past business year — but their shareholders are actually worse off. For the Government takes all the increase and an additional $220,000 as well, in Excess Profits Duty.

Germans can't even use soap with safety nowadays. The newspaper Boersen Zeitung prints a warning by the President of the Berlin Police cautioning people against mixing "sawa", an ersatz (substitute) soap with hot water because it explodes!

British soldiers now get an extra sixpence (12c) a day pay, increasing their daily pay to about 57 cents. This makes the British Tommy the highest paid European soldier, but still far behind Dominion soldiers (Canada, $1.30 daily; New Zealand, $1.35; Australia, $1.27).

Shock from a bomb explosion restored to J. Brooker, an ex-soldier, the sight he lost in the last war. His first act after regaining his eyesight was to do the shopping for his wife, who became seriously ill as a result of the same bombing.

The R.A.F. ace pilot, Flight-Lieutenant Robert Voas Jeff, who was the first British pilot to down a Nazi bomber in France, has just been officially posted as missing. The news arrived just a week after he had received the Distinguished Flying Cross and bar, and 11 days before his wedding date . . . His uncle, Col. Douglas Thompson, D.S.O., M.C., is a prisoner of war in Germany, as also is the colonel's son.

Searching investigation is being made in various parts of Britain about reports of light signals being flashed from the ground to airplanes just before bombs are dropped. One flashed from a room in a London block of flats overlooking an important railway line. The occupant was found to be a German refugee who arrived from Berlin little more than a year ago.

Man Arrested; Could Produce No Registration Card

Constable Chas. Perreault, of the Quebec Provincial Police, stationed here at Lachute, took into custody 50-year-old George Brunet, of Pointe Calumet, County of Two Mountains, for failure to produce a registration certificate. Brunet was arrested in Ontario and charged at L'Orignal Police Court last Thursday. He did not plead; and after hearing the facts of the case, the magistrate, P. C. Bergeron, of Cornwall, decided to turn the man over to the Quebec authorities.

According to the authorities the man slept in the town hall at Hawkesbury during the night of October 3rd, and, as is customary, the following morning before leaving he was asked for his registration certificate. When he failed to produce one he was taken into custody and lodged in jail at L'Orignal.

Truck Driver Killed on Laurentian Highway

Jean Legault, 39-year-old Montrealer, was instantly killed near St. Jerome on Tuesday when a truck he was driving hit a post and overturned.

The accident occurred about one mile north of the town. Legault was driving north on the Laurentian highway when he apparently lost control of the truck. The vehicle left the highway, smashed a wooden post and part of a fence, then turned turtle in a shallow ditch at the side of the road. When other motorists reached the spot, they found the driver dead under the truck.

Dr. J. R. Brais, district coroner, gave a verdict ofaccidental death.

Government Makes Study on Pre-fabricated Houses

EMERGENCY MEASURE TO MEET HOUSING SHORTAGE BEING CONSIDERED IN OTTAWA

Seriousness of the housing problem in communities where war industries are being established has led the Dominion Government to consider manufacture of pre-fabricated houses to meet urgent needs, it is reported in the capital. Study is now being given to experiments in factory-made housing, and some action may be expected before the snow falls.

In considering quick steps to supply the large amount of housing necessary, government officials are considering the experimental houses in the United States and also the Canadian materials available for mass production of homes.

Difference in climatic conditions between Canada and the United States must be considered; the new Canadian homes require heating equipment and adequate insulation.

In studying Canadian materials already available for large scale house construction, particular attention is being given to the use of asphalt impregnated wall sidings which combined with insul-board interiors, give double insulation combined with ease of construction.

Several Canadian housing developments are being investigated to check on construction speed and results, using this building method; especially in Quebec and Ontario, where there has been considerable building in the low cost field during recent months. Should this Canadian building method prove more practical than the American factory-built house plan, work could be commenced almost immediately since ample stocks are now available. Construction officials are assisting the government in securing information. The materials required for this type of housing development are all made in Canada, which is an inducement to the Government since it would not be necessary to purchase American exchange to secure materials.

TO COLLECT MEDICINE BOTTLES FOR MEDICAL CORPS IS NEW BOY SCOUT WAR JOB

A new wartime job given the Boy Scouts of Canada is the collecting of used medicine bottles to augment the supplies at military hospitals. The collection is being made at the request of Lt.-Col. J. S. Jenkins of the Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps, at Ottawa. Collections of many thousands of bottles already have been made at Saint John, N.B., London, Calgary and Victoria, B.C.

LORD, LADY BADEN-POWELL SAFE IN KENYA

In connection with the news of fighting and aerial raids along the borders of Kenya Colony in East Africa, there has been some concern regarding the safety of Lord and Lady Baden-Powell, the World Chief Scout and Guide, in retirement on their ranch near Nairobi. Answering this question in a recent issue, the magazine "The Scout" states: "Kenya is an enormous stretch of territory and as the Chief is residing in the south of the Colony he is hundreds of miles from the scene of fighting. The Chief is in good health, and we are receiving copy and sketches for his page regularly."

THE EARL OF ATHLONE APPEALS FOR MORE SCOUT LEADERS

A special message from His Excellency the Governor-General, the Earl of Athlone, Chief Scout for Canada, to adult leaders of the Scout Association throughout the Dominion, also calls upon available and suitable men outside the movement to come forward and take training as Scouters. The Governor-General's message, in the October issue of The Scout Leader assures such wartime volunteers that they will never regret having joined what "by common consent is the finest youth movement of modern times."

"Wherever I have seen Scouts since I landed, "declared His Excellency, "I have been impressed by their bearing, and I know that almost every boy in Canada would want to be a Scout if good leaders were available."

1940 Canada Year Book Now In Circulation

The publication of the 1940 Canada Year Book is announced by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. The Year Book contains a thoroughly up-to-date account of the natural resources of the Dominion and their development, the history of the country, its institutions, its demography, the different branches of production, trade transportation, finance, education, etc — in brief, a comprehensive study within the limits of a single volume of the social and economic condition of the Dominion. This new edition has been thoroughly revised throughout and includes in all its chapters the latest information available.

The 1940 Canada Year Book extends to over 1,200 pages, dealing with all phases of the national life and more especially with those susceptible of statistical measurement. A statistical summary of the progress of Canada is included in the introductory matter. This gives a picture in figures of the remarkable progress which the country has made since the first census of the Dominion was taken in 1872, sixty-eight years ago.

Illustrating the complete coverage of all departments of Canadian activity, it is noted that the chapter on Constitution and Government is now brought up-to-the-minute with an appendix on the Dominion General Election of last March; on the re-organization of the Cabinet; the Rowell-Sirois Report, and financial statistics on all governments in the Dominion.

Persons requiring the Year Book may obtain it from the King's Printer, Ottawa, as long as the supply lasts, at the price of $1.50, which covers the cost of paper, printing, and binding. By a special concession, a limited number of paper-bound copies have been set aside for ministers of religion, bona fide students and school teachers, who may obtain copies at the nominal price of 50 cents each.

WHY IS A NEWSPAPER OFTEN CALLED A GAZETTE?

The first newspaper was read aloud in public places and people were charged a "gazetta" for listening. This was in Venice in 1563. A gazetta was equal to about half a cent.

WHY CAN A FLY WALK ON THE CEILING?

It would seem that a fly or any other creature attempting to walk on the ceiling should fall to the floor. The reason it can remain inverted and so defy the law of gravity is that its feet are provided with a cavity which, when pressure is applied and the air forced out, forms a vacuum.

Other primary products of the plant are apple sauce and pie filler, while the by-products include pectin, vinegar, apple jellies, apple flour, concentrated nectar and cider.

"THIS IS ENGLAND — "

In our wanderings with the printed word, two friendly quotations have crossed our path this week. We pass them on . . . and, whatever be your estimate of the Englishman, you will warmly concede the truth of these opinions in this the hour of England's supreme test.

Our first is from a Canadian scholar, Col. Wilfrid Bovey; our second, from the words of the Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill . . .

"The people of England have had their faults but this is no time to talk about them. This is the time to admire the steadfastness with which they have borne their trials before, the courage with which they are facing their trial now. John Masefield describes the huntsman, Robin Dawe :

His face was of the country mould
Such as the mason sometimes cutted
On English moulding ends which jutted
Out of the church walls centuries since;
And, as you never know the quince
How good he is until you try,
So in Dawe's face what met the eye
Was only part; what lay behind
Was English character and mind;
Great kindness, delicate sweet feeling
(Most shy, most clever in concealing its depth) for beauty of all sorts;
Great manliness and love of sports,
A grave wise thoughtfulness and truth,
A merry fun outlasting youth,
A courage terrible to see,
And mercy for his enemy.

"That is the real England which underlies all others; that is the England which drew its ideas of freedom from the traditions of the North; which fought for those ideas under Cromwell, under Wellington and Haig.

"That is the England which sent Admiral Cochrane to Chile and Byron to Greece, that is the England which helped Italy to grow into a nation, that England has surely its place in the new world that is to come."

"I think myself fortunate to have been born a citizen in a liberal age in this great and free country and empire with its incorruptible officials and impartial courts; with its keen sense of humanity, fair play and good sportsmanship; where every office and career is open to talent; where man can rise from the humblest origin to the very highest stations, and with social services incomparably more complete than exist anywhere else in the world. I do not think there has been anything so good in all history. I am proud to be allowed to take some part in the affairs of such a society."

DEMOCRACY

Democracy begins with local government, and local government cannot be politically healthy and stimulating unless the problems set to those who conduct it are possible of solution. The essence of financial responsibility lies in the possibility of balanced budgets which permit of far-sighted planning, and this condition has been in grave peril in Canadian municipalities during the last decade. —Sirois Report

NEED FOR GOVERNMENT ECONOMY

Responsibility is upon all governments, Dominion, provincial, municipal, to exercise every possible economy in view of the unquestioned priority of the war effort — Hon J. L. Ralston, as Minister of Finance, has emphasized.

"The drain the war effort will cause on the man-power, equipment and resources of the country makes it vitally imperative that all governmental authorities not only Dominion — but, if I may go beyond federal bounds — provincial and municipal as well — should appraise, with a sense of national responsibility, the justification for the dollars proposed to be spent on narmal activities", he said. "Every such dollar must, directly or indirectly, come out of the pockets of the people. It ought almost to go without saying that to provide the enormous sums which must be spent by the Dominion this year for defence, the ordinary expenditures of governments — all governments — in Canada — must be decreased if they are not to restrict the amount that can be devoted to the driving task of defeating Nazism.

"In the federal field I have had the effective co-operation of my colleagues and their department officers in achieving the economies I have reported. The premiers or provincial treasurers of several of the provinces have discussed this problem with me, and I have also had the opportunity of conferring with a number, at least, of the mayors of our cities and towns on the same subject. The attitude of them all was so instantly and definitely co-operative as to convince me that all that is necessary is that the position be understood, to make certain that the response of all governmental authorities will be just as unhesitating and just as re-assuring."

THE DUTY OF A MAYOR

Professor F. A. Bland, of the University of Sydney, Australia, is convinced that the primary function of local government is not efficiency, but popular participation, that is the bringing of local government as close as possible to the people. At the same time, if the elected representatives think that it is one of their privileges to sell jobs for favors, then the whole morality and prestige of the system falls to the ground. If you can eliminate patronage and bureaucracy, he says nothing else matters very much. He was of the opinion that many mayors and heads of public institutions failed in their principal duty — that of leadership.

SOUND JUDGMENT ESSENTIAL IN VALUATION

It should be emphasized that valuation of buildings is not an exact science. Even the most approved methods or systems of valuation, to be effective, must be applied by those having requisite experience and endowed with rather more than the average share of sound judgment and common sense. Rules and systems are guides to judgment, not an absolute measure; but some system is required if a high degree of uniformity is to be obtained. —Citizens' Research Institute

Don't Be A Gawk

What is a gawk? They tell us that a gawk is a person who hangs around an automobile accident or wreck and makes himself a general nuisance. They hamper the work of police and only add to the confusion that attends a wreck. They trample down or pick up valuable bits of evidence, handle things they have no right to handle and in general make themselves obnoxious. These people know exactly what happened to cause every accident until asked by the officers, then the answer is invariably someone else told them. They are a thorn in the side of all investigating officers. Don't be a gawk. —Hanover Post

A record heat wave was recently experienced at the South Pole according to a radio report from Admiral Byrd's Antarctic expedition . . . Temperatures were at 18 degrees above zero.

Justice is itself the great standing policy of civil society; and any departure from it, under any circumstance, lies under the suspicion of being no policy at all. —Burke.

WHY BRITAIN WILL WIN

By ARTHUR WAUTERS
famous Belgian statesman and writer

M. Wauters has had a remarkable career. In the last war he won great military distinction in the Belgian Army. Since that time he has gained many academic honors and become a prominent figure in Belgian politics. He is a Professor of Brussels University. He has travelled extensively in Belgian Congo. He is a member of the Belgian Chamber of Deputies, and was for a long time political editor of the great Belgian newspaper, "Le Peuple."

Hitler's military victories achieved, for a time, a double psychological result. The German people were filled with faith in a magician who was reshaping Europe, as though invested with a mysterious power. On the other hand, some superficial neutral onlookers began to be convinced of the invincibility of Nazi Germany.

The Allies, perhaps unwittingly, contributed to establishing this childish belief by complacent descriptions of the war methods of the German armies. They did it, of course, with the praiseworthy object of stimulating resistance and sacrifice.

The psychological effect of the German successes has been increasing in geometrical progression. Hitler has kept his promise of victory with mathematical precision. He had announced that he would be in Paris on June 15. He was there.

But it may be doubted whether the process of collective bewitchment will have a lasting effect. Hitler announced that he would be in London on August 15. He failed to keep that appointment. He himself thus furnished the proof of the vanity of some of his boasts. Those who had been intoxicated by German propaganda are baffled. They are beginning to make historical comparisons. There is no need to go back very far in time. Kaiser Wilhelm's Germany collapsed almost immediately after achieving indisputable military triumphs.

The Fuehrer's thirst for conquest is now encountering some obstacles. The time for easy successes is past.

In the neutral country which I left for London a month ago, the most absurd stories found credence. It was whispered that Britain's fate would be sealed within three weeks or that 45 millions of starving and terrorized Britons were queuing up for a problematic crust of bread, and lived in underground shelters at night. Britain, it was said, was no more than a heap of ruins. The electric power stations were destroyed, the largest city in the world was plunged in darkness. Transport was paralyzed. A desperate people was in revolt against its leaders. The Empire was collapsing.

I am writing these lines in London where the roar of the greatest air battles in history reaches our ears. The German 'planes are being brought down at the rate of five to one, and sometimes of one a minute. The power of the Empire is unimpaired. In spite of the self-styled German "blockade", millions of tons of merchandise reach British ports week after week.

The shops are overflowing with goods. There is a certain amount of rationing, but it does not interfere with anybody's food supply, nor does it diminish any workman's productive capacity. Astonishing quantities of produce are accessible to all : coffee, oranges, bananas, grape fruit, tropical nuts, pepper, tobacco, olives, and what not.

There is something disconcerting about the calm and coolness of this great people. It is due neither to indifference nor to passivity. With it the sense of national co-operation reaches a prodigious degree. Each one is mobilized either organically or morally. Each is doing his work with orderliness, calm and discipline. There is neither haste, nor precipitation, nor panic. Everyone applies rules strictly and encourages everyone else to do likewise. Vigilance never relaxes. Britain is not invaded, but everyone behaves as though invasion might come at any moment. This people will in no circumstances be taken by surprise.

A sporting people, the British are counting the blows and taking stock impartially of their reverses and failings, not to be disheartened by them, but to correct them. Nothing is left to chance or to improvisation. Everyone knows what he has to do. And he, or she, will do it at the right time. There is complete, trusting and eager co-operation between the public and the authorities. German propaganda will not change this nor diminish in the least the calm and self-conscious force of this great free people.

It is a significant fact that, in spite of ephemeral triumphs, the German people need to be drugged by false news. In Britain, German communiques are published daily in full. Anyone can listen freely to Nazi broadcasts, if he happens to want to do so. The democratic liberties are fully respected. The Press comments on Government action with a surprising frankness. Parliament, whose powers are supreme, continues to sit whenever there is business to transact.

USING TRACTORS AS TRUCKS

(Amherstburg Echo)

There is a practice that is becoming more or less widespread in this vicinity and which is doing the government out of much needed revenue. This is using tractors on the highways of the province. Farmers do not have to buy a license for their tractors nor do they have to pay tax on the gasoline which is used, yet they are using the public highways just the same as trucks or autos. The new streamlined, rubber-tired tractors are as light and fast as some trucks and consequently can be used to haul loads of farm produce such as grain, hogs, tomatoes, tobacco, to town. When they do this they are competing with trucks, and the tractors should be treated and regulated as such.

Quebec Finds New Tourist Asset -- A Magnetic Hill

N.B. HAS NO MONOPOLY ON PET PHENOMENON

G. A. McNamee, manager of the Royal Automobile Club of Canada, reports that Quebec now has its own "Magnetic Hill". New Brunswick has a so-called magnetic hill, five miles from Moncton, where motor cars seem to defy all laws of gravity for they appear to go uphill without mechanical aid. It is, of course, an optical illusion, but such a convincing one that many visitors have been attracted to it.

Mr. McNamee says such an illusion is provided on highway No. 52 between Stanbridge and Dunham, where, when the power is shut off and the car halted, the vehicle appears to be backing uphill without power, whereas actually it is moving down a slope.

Bishop of Montreal Here on Annual Visit to the Anglican Parishes

The congregation of St. Simeon's Church, Lachute, at their morning service last Sunday, greeted the Lord Bishop of Montreal, Arthur Carlisle, on his annual visit to the parish for confirmation of new members. The rector, Rev. W. C. LeCras, conducted the service.

Taking his text from the 9th Chapter of Apostles, 6th. verse, "Lord, what will you have me to do?", His Lordship gave a simple, but inspiring and practical message on the conversion of the Apostle Paul.

"We of today are face to face with the greatest crisis of all time, not just the defence of our Empire, but in a war of ideals, fighting to defend the Christian way of life", the Bishop said, "and if Britain is beaten, all will be lost for a generation".

Asking the question of Paul, "Lord, what will you have me to do?", His Lordship said that God will give us a clear and definite answer, which he summed up in three exhortations, "Confess and Acknowledge Him", "Worship Him" and "Serve Him".

Speaking on "Service", His Reverence said, "If ever world peace is attained, it will not be by Leagues and Covenants, but by the gospel of Jesus Christ, and we are the ones to spread that knowledge, with a world-wide dissemination of the "Light of the World' ".

His Lordship also dedicated a silver communion tray, donated by a member of St. Simeon's Church.

The Right Rev. Arthur Carlisle, Bishop of Montreal, paid his annual visit to Brownsburg on Friday, Oct. 11th. at 8 p.m. He gave a most inspiring sermon from the text, "And the Lord added to the Church daily". While in Brownsburg he was entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Johnson. Rev. K. N. Brueton, of Grenville, and Rev. and Mrs. W. LeCras, of Lachute, were also their guests that day.

Account of Bishop Carlisle's visit to Grenville Parish is omitted due to lack of space.

Anglican Deanery Meeting

Grenville—The clergy of the Deanery of St. Andrews held their meeting here on Tuesday, Oct. 15th. Holy Communion was celebrated in St. Matthews Church by the Rev. K. N. Brueton. Following this a business meeting was held, presided over by the Rev. W. LeCras, Rural Dean. In the afternoon the Rev. J. V. Temple led a very interesting discussion on Baptism, dealing both with doctrines and practice. All the clergy present took part in the discussion, and agreed that it had been very helpful. It was decided that the subject should be taken up again at some future meeting of the clergy.

The clergy and their wives were the guests of the Rev. and Mrs. Brueton for the day. Mrs. Brueton was assisted by Miss Pearl Dawson and Miss B. Cummings. The Rev. C. W. P. Baugh expressed the thanks of the visitors.

Lakefield — The Very Reverend Arthur Carlisle made his annual visit to the Parish of Lakefield over the Thanksgiving week-end.

On Friday afternoon the Bishop preached in St. Aidan's Church, Louisa, on the celebration of the harvest festival. Following the service a reception for the Bishop was held in the Orange Lodge-room.

On Sunday afternoon the harvest service at St. Paul's, Dunany, was well attended, and the Bishop gave a most inspiring address on "Loyalty to God."

Both churches were decorated artistically with flowers and autumn foliage.

Memorial to the Late Archdeacon

Holy Trinity Church, Lakefield, was filled to overflowing on Sunday evening, when the Bishop dedicated a beautiful stained glass window in the west end of the church, "to the glory of God and in memory of the Venerable Archdeacon Robert Young Overing". The memorial window, which depicts a life-size figure of Saint Paul, was presented to Messrs G. L. Rogers and W. Sherritt, church wardens of the corporation, by the Rev. Hector Mount, of Foster, Que. The incumbent, Rev. C. W. P. Baugh, then asked the Bishop to dedicate the window, which was placed in the church through the generosity of friends of the late Archdeacon Overing.

For many summers the late Archdeacon had made his home in Lakefield, where he found rest and quietness from his numerous duties. Ordained to the priesthood in 1896, he served as incumbent of Valleyfield until 1897, when he was appointed to Buckingham, Que.

In 1904 he became rector of Stanbridge East, where he remained until 1913. During the following 15 years he labored with unceasing energy at St. Mary's, Hochelaga. In 1922 he was made an Honorary Canon, and in 1928 became Archdeacon of Saint Andrews and Clarendon, and Secretary of the Synod of Montreal. In this latter position he travelled throughout this deanery, and won many friends in religious and social circles.

On September 5, 1933, while at his home in Lakefield, he passed away suddenly.

Bishop Carlisle paid glowing tribute to the work of the late Archdeacon, and made mention of his long personal friendship with him.

The music for the dedication service was played by the Rev. A. E. Mount, organist and choir director. The service was conducted by the Rev. C. W. P. Baugh, assisted by H. G. Baugh, of St. John's, New Glasgow.

St. Simeon's Church

The Rummage Sale advertised by the ladies of St. Simeon's Church Guild, which took place on Friday and Saturday of last week, was a decided success, their objective being practically trebled. St. Simeon's A.Y.P.A. were given a treat at their meeting at the rectory on Tuesday evening, when Mr. A. Ward, of Montreal, gave an illustrated lecture on a Mediterranean Tour, leaving New York and ending in London. The pictures were particularly clear, including many historical places in the Holy Land. Mr. Ward was given a hearty vote of thanks by the President.

The afternoon session will commence with a period devoted to the interpretation of spirituals, led by Rev. David I Forsyth. The groups will then reconvene for further discussion.

HEAD OR NOSE COLD LIKELY TO INVOLVE SINUSES

Sinus trouble is a common condition. When a person has a head or nose cold, it is likely that the sinuses are involved. The sinuses are air spaces in the head which lead into the nose and are connected with the nose by tiny passage ways. An infection in the nose may easily spread to the sinuses, causing them to become infected.

A cold may lead to sinus infections. Thus, it is difficult to see, says Dr. Walter A. Wells, of Washington, D.C., how any one suffering from colds can ever escape having sinus infection at some time or other. But the sinus infection does not always become severe enough to cause severe symptoms.

As a rule, several of the sinuses become infected at the same time. The sinus infection often causes no pain.

The frontal sinuses, which are located in the forehead, may produce pain when infected. When there is a great deal of thick discharge, accompanied by a cold, it is likely that acute inflammation of the sinuses has occurred. When there is a discharge from just one side of the nose, it usually means that there is a chronic sinus inflammation.

One of the most typical symptoms of sinus infection is a discharge from the back part of the nose dripping into the throat. Other symptoms which sinus infection may produce are headache, fever and a feeling of tiredness or sickness.

The treatment for an acute sinus infection is different from that for a chronic or long-continued case. To begin with, in an acute case the individual should have plenty of rest and should not overeat. He is better off in bed. Cloths wrung out in hot water and placed over the affected region will often control discomfort. The breathing in of steam may also be helpful.

In chronic sinus infections, surgical operation may be necessary. X-rays are useful in telling when chronic sinus infection is present. The use of shrinking solutions in the nose, together with a water suction pump to help drain out the infected material, may serve to give relief from symptoms and help to clear up the infection. These measures should always be attempted before operation is carried out.

In acute sinus infections, the treatment is aimed at relieving discomfort, overcoming the infection, and securing adequate drainage of the nose. In chronic sinus infection, treatment has the same aims, but it is also necessary that local abnormal conditions in the nose, such as bending of the septum, be corrected, so that complete healing of the infection may follow.

Some Misunderstandings About Sleep

Dr. J. P. S. Cathcart, writing in the National Health Review, gives it as his opinion that most adults spend too much time in sleeping. He believes that six hours a day, rather than ten, form an adequate amount of sleep for the adult.

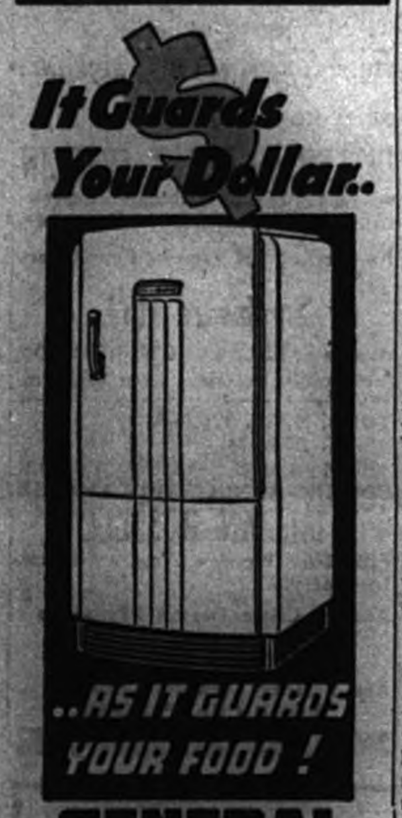

"Most patients," he says, "and not a few physicians, are still impressed by the admonitions of childhood that sleep, and lots of it, is extremely essential."

While this applies to children, Dr. Cathcart asserts that there is good reason to think that in adults the importance of sleep is over-rated, and that most of our patients are troubled not by lack of sleep but by over-concern regarding some little delay in getting to sleep, or of frequent waking, or of a tired feeling in the following morning. Most persons, unless kept awake by pain, sleep more than they think they do.

Apart from discomfort or pain, the most common cause of insomnia is some emotional situation, usually in relation to the past events of the day. It is frequently found that at the hour of retiring the mind is too active and that the thinking processes cannot be stopped.

Most of these cases of sleeplessness are the result of bad habits—encouraging the thoughts and troubles of the day, instead of pulling the curtain and leaving troublesome problems to the next day. But it is not so easy to do this. A hearty late meal, a day of excitement, or the use of a stimulant just before bedtime sometimes prevents sleep. Yet in elderly persons a stimulant, such as a small dose of whiskey, is often useful as a promoter of sleep.

It is a common observation among those who have charge of insane persons who awaken early, after two or three hours sleep, and then whoop it up until daylight or longer, that these persons will remain awake for 18 or 19 hours out of the 24, and thus consume an enormous amount of energy, yet they put on weight, look the picture of health and are well except for the mental state. There is a host of drugs which will enforce sleep. One should, if possible, avoid their use except under the direction of a physician.

PIT PROPS

Pit-props are a new development in the lumbering industry in the Maritimes. The props seem to be about six feet in length and they are not peeled as clean as the pulpwood, as only the outer layer of bark is taken off. You see them everywhere, in little piles in the bush, beside the highways waiting to be picked up, in wood-yards, truck load after truck load on the roads, on coastal boats, and on larger sea-going boats. War invariably makes a change in industry.. Some lines lose and then on the other hand there are entirely new industries. England imported her pit-props from nearer home before the war but those markets are closed and now Canada is able to supply her. I had never heard of a pit-prop before and now we see millions of them. No, I haven't any statistics but it looks like millions.

TEACHERS ARE PERFECT

My little six-year-old neighbor, who has just started to school, has come in to tell me that he has joined the Junior Red Cross. He says "I've got a button and I am going to bed at seven o'clock and I'm not going to spit on the floor or anything. Teacher says I'm not to". Poor Lamb! He is one of those pink and white, blue-eyed, little boys and so full of joy over school. I often wonder if teachers realize what faith their pupils have in them. Parents are not important by teachers are perfection in those first years of school.

CO-OPERATION

Most of us are anxious to help in the present crisis but we are not all knitters or sewers and it is difficult sometimes to find work which is needed. I believe one of the reasons for the high morale of the British women is that they are all working. I know of one woman who felt she was not much use with her needle but who had a way with children. Her neighbor was an expert with her hands but could do very little because she could not leave her children. So one woman kept an eye on the children and the other went to the Red Cross Rooms and did most of the cutting. There seems to be more difficulty in getting good cutters than anything else. So much time is lost in trying to re-vamp a poorly cut article. A test article should be made from a new pattern before quantities are cut. I wonder if instruction in cutting wouldn't be a good idea. Co-operation in looking after children could be worked out in various ways and it would be a real help.

SALISBURY STEAK

More than one person has been disappointed when they ordered high-sounding Salisbury Steak, at a restaurant, and found it was nothing but Hamburg. Some forty years ago a Dr. Salisbury got the idea that most human ailments were caused by yeasts in the blood, and that these yeasts could be starved out by not eating carbohydrates. He put his patients on a high meat diet, as much as a pound a meal, three times a day. He gave them the meat in the form of chopped or scraped beef — hence Salisbury Steak. Nothing of the treatment has lasted but its name.

OATMEAL SQUARES

½ cup butter melted, ½ cup brown sugar, ½ cup cocoanut, 1½ cups oatmeal, ½ teaspoon vanilla, pinch of salt.

Mix the ingredients in the order given and spread in a pan about 10 x 12. Bake at 350 degrees. Let stand for a few minutes to stiffen, then cut in squares.

VANILLA ICE-CREAM

Stir the sugar and water until the sugar is melted and boil without stirring until the syrup spins a thread from the tip of a spoon. Add slowly to the stiffly beaten egg whites and continue beating until the mixture is cool. Chill, then add the cream whipped and the vanilla. Pour into tray and freeze two or three hours.

An absent minded professor fell in love with a young graduate and married her.

They went on their honeymoon and in the morning the professor awoke, looked at the other occupant of the bedroom, and said in a shocked and incredulous voice: "Miss Grey, what are you doing here?"

Scottish Women's Institutes Present War Gifts

The generous response to the idea mooted by a member of a Scottish Women's Institute of having an ambulance fund raised in the W.I. in Scotland, speedily made the objective possible. Not only that, but as the money still came in it was decided to present one of the new mobile units for electrical treatments also.

These voluntary services on the part of rural women are a portion of the warp and woof in the web of national resistance to a common enemy.

The Nutritional Value of Whole Wheat Bread

That most of the bread consumed in Canadian cities is capable of considerable improvement in the interests of war-time health and efficiency, is indicated by an article appearing in the current issue of the Canadian Public Health Journal over the signature of E. W. McHenry, Ph. D., of the University of Toronto.

It is, of course, generally known that whole-wheat bread is of greater nutritional value than white bread, but the fact has not made the darker colored loaf popular. Dr. McHenry therefore proposes that the value of white flour be raised by adding wheat germ or yeast of high vitamin content. This can be done without affecting the color of the resultant loaf, he declares.

The special nutritive quality of whole wheat bread lies in the fact that it retains vitamin and mineral contents which, to a very large extent, are removed by modern milling processes. Vitamin B. complex, which is absolutely essential to health, is reduced to about one third of its original quantity in the course of milling, for instance.

A survey of 100 families of low incomes in Toronto, he says, reveals that even the best fed members fall far below the satisfactory margin in their daily intake of Vitamin B1, a condition which he finds reason to believe is general.

Dr. McHenry repeats that the intake of Vitamin B1 would be increased if people ate whole wheat bread, but since they decline to do so other methods must be found, and experiments have shown that bread containing five per cent wheat germ has noticeable effect on growth and nutrition.

It won't be long before a girl will have to produce a culinary diploma to get a marriage certificate. At any rate the vicar of Wolvencote, England, suggests a question like this in the marriage vows: "Wilt thou promise to cook the bacon slowly and see that it is not frizzled up to nothing?" That's fair enough, if the vicar will go a step further and make the young man solemnly promise to bring home the bacon.

"Who's that awful woman over there who keeps talking?"

BEAUTY

HAIR AND SCALP CARE

"Women have bigger and better heads of hair than flourished in the past," reports a beautician who has been prettying cash customers for many years. "The old girls did a lot of brushing in their young days, but because long hair was such a task to shampoo it wasn't kept as clean as it is now. Practically all women complained about dandruff; few have it these days. The strongest influence for silky, ambrosial locks is a clean, healthy scalp. Brushing doesn't do anything to the scalp; it gives a surface cleaning to the hair shafts. It puts on a beautiful polish, and shining locks have charm. I'm all for brushing, but in the old days it took the place of the weekly shampoo and it is the good old soapy scrubbing that does the most good. To my grandmother a shampoo was a great event, like getting married."

Nobody believes that cutting has had anything to do with improved tresses. It doesn't make hair thicker or thinner. Observe the growly sex. Some of them are bushy and some are bald. Just fate, maybe, or what they eat or don't eat. There's a pretty general belief among hair specialists that women don't go bald for two reasons: they give their hair better care and what they eat contains more varied food elements than what men eat.

How often the hair should be shampooed depends upon whether it is dry or oily, whether or not one lives in a dusty atmosphere. As soon as the silky threads look lanky and lose luster, they are yearning for lather. It is important that the soap should be bland and melted, that it should be removed with a strong current of fairly hot water. It is a nice idea to friction the scalp for five minutes before and after the ducking. If one hasn't a permanent, an effective treatment for stimulating the blood streams in the scalp is to finish up with a cold shower.

That heavy setting lotions, which make the shafts feel as if they were starched, are a serious mistake is not to be doubted. They are too drying and in time the shafts will become brittle, break at the touch of the comb. If the permanent is first class, often no setting lotion is necessary when the finger wave is executed and the ends done in pin curls.

This is a good time of the year to have a course of scalp treatments. They are well worth while. In the autumn there is a natural moulting and during that period the scalp is grateful for attention. Beauty shops have different methods of scalp toning; they are all good. Massage is the important part.

If the beauty budget does not warrant the indulgence, make it a nightly practice to spread your fingers and thumbs over your noble crown and give it a rousing mauling. Place the thumbs at the nape line, keep them there; move the scalp about with the fingers.

"Now, girls", said the restaurant manager to the waitresses, "I want you all to look your best today. Add a touch of lipstick and take a bit more trouble with your hair".

"No. The beef's tough."

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN
Famous Authority on Good Manners and Good Taste

IF YOU ARE SPOILING YOUR CHILD, CHANGE YOUR VIEWPOINT

All of us know some adults who are spoiled grown-up children. They show that they were brought up by indulgent and over-fond parents, and that they have never made the slightest effort to overcome this pathetic training. They usually aren't particularly happy people; they demand a lot of understanding and patience, and they usually aren't popular. They are unfortunate victims of incompetent training.

Parents can't bring up their children to be one thing and expect them to be something quite different when they are grown. "As the twig is bent" is a logical process.

In bringing up a child, love for the child isn't enough. That love must be tempered by wisdom. Besides love there must be a lot of commonsense, a lot of backbone and a world of patience. Weak submission on the part of a parent has no relationship to discipline. If a mother (for hers is usually the major part in a child's training) has this point of view about bringing up her child, she's being tragically unjust to that child. Such indulgence can't see beyond the minute. And her job is to prepare her child for the serious business of living, of living his own life richly and rewardingly, and of living comfortably and pleasantly with other people. The birthright of a child is a parent's clear perception of how to develop a child's character so that that child will become a good person and a good citizen.

There are two ways for a spoiled child to grow up. He may continue his spoiled way all his life, full of nettles, indulging in the same tantrums in which he was allowed to indulge whe he was a child, showing an irritating indifference to anybody who tries, however kindly, to make a dent in his all-absorbing ego, having a complete disregard for other people's feelings or comfort. He won't have a rational viewpoint about himself, but other people will have a viewpoint about him — and it won't be an endearing one.

The other way for a spoiled child to grow up is by the stern realization that he has been spoiled. In his heart he will blame his parents for this spoiling, he will resent the indulgence, he will see that his way of life doesn't make sense. Then, wisely, he will have to begin a session of self-training — and it will necessarily be a terribly difficult readjustment.

He'll have to undo what has been so mistakenly ingrained in him: that his ego, his wishes, are the only important thing in life. He'll have to defeat his tantrum and all other evidence of his early spoiling. He'll have to keep everlastingly on the job of trying to do what will make him an agreeable person to have around. He will see that being spoiled has no value except a nuisance-value.

As far as a beautiful and successful design for living is concerned, this business of spoiling children is a ridiculous and pathetic procedure. Spoiled children pay dearly for being spoiled. And their parents pay dearly for spoiling them.

Western Command Created

A Pacific Army Command, under Major General R.O. Alexander, which embraces the defence system of British Columbia and Alberta, has been formed. Some months ago a similar Army Command was created in the Maritimes under Major General W. H. P. Elkins, formerly Master General of Ordinance. The Western Command will control coastal defence, fort troops and all mobile forces, and will work in close co-operation with Headquarters of the Canadian navy and air force in Pacific coast areas.

Copper Export to Japan Is Banned

No further permits will be granted for the export of copper except to British Empire countries and possibly the United States. It is felt that all copper produced in Canada will be needed either in Canada or in the United Kingdom because of growing war demands. The announcement stated that "about 80 per cent of the output of Eastern Canadian producers goes under direct contract to the United Kingdom Ministry of Supply. The British Columbia producers, having in mind their higher production costs and freight rates, were not at that time in a position to share in filling a demand which was in fact adequately met by other Canadian and Rhodesian producers. No scrap iron has been exported from Canada since October 1939, except to Great Britain, no zinc or nickel except to Allied countries or United States since February, no aluminum since April and no cobalt since August.

Commonwealth Training Plan Works Faster

The intake of recruits and the output of airmen from Canadian air schools will be about 40 per cent higher than the previous schedule, according to Air Minister Power. There will be a shortening in the course taken by airmen in the schools, but this does not mean that the airmen will be brought into contact with the enemy with less instruction than originally intended. More of the time of training will be spent in Britain within sound of the air battles. This "operational training" in Britain might be described as more practical, as the men will be trained on the actual types of aircraft used in battle.

DAVE CAMPBELL WINS CHALLENGE GOLF CUP

Dave Campbell won the Rawdon Heights Challenge Cup with a net 70 recently at the Rawdon Heights Golf and Country Club, while Capt. J. W. Buckland tied with C. Osborne in the Laurentian Cup play with net 67's and will meet in a playoff at a later date.

Lachute Troop, Boy Scouts

(Contributed)

This week the Scouts enjoyed a game called floor-ball. In this game the players use a football, and try to put it in the opposing team's goal.

This week also, the troop had some practice in semaphore signalling.

The Scouts expect to hold a Hallowe'en party.

Why Britain Will Win

The officially inspired optimism of the countries living under censorship lulls the fighting spirit of the citizens to sleep. A flood of reassuring but often unfounded statements acts like chloriform upon them.

The British people are conscious of the fact that they have never been invaded for the last 900 years. They are not oblivious to the unsuccessful attempts made successively by Philip II, Louis XIV and by Napoleon. They know that 200 or 250 ships would be needed to land five divisions. They know that they will never be betrayed by that ally which always keeps faith with them — the sea. They know that their ships are sailing the seven seas and using thousands of ports all the world over, whereas the German and Italian mercantile fleets are confined to coastal traffic in the Baltic and the Adriatic.

They know that the Royal Air Force is daily delivering its blows on Germany, on Turin, on Milan, on Libya, wherever it cares to strike.

They also know that the United States is on their side.

They realize that those who were unable to prevent the heroic reembarkation of Dunkirk are now faced with the incomparably more formidable task of attempting the same operation in the opposite direction.

They know that the whole Empire, without exception, constitutes one solid rock.

Nor do they forget that two thirds of the peoples subjected by Germany are not Germans at all, and that the terrible fire of vengeance which is now smouldering in the hearts of the oppressed nations will burst into flame at the right moment.

As a citizen of an indomitable nation, I know that, in spite of professional traitors and place-seekers, the whole of Belgium constitutes a column in the service of democracy and liberty. The beloved spirits of Cardinal Mercier, of Burgomaster Max, of King Albert, of heroic workers who were deported for refusing to work for the Germans, accompany us in our effort and inspire us with hope.

Parliament to Meet in 'Somewhat Brighter Atmosphere'

Research Department Hard at Work For All Branches of the Services

Parachute Troops May Be Trained in Readiness For Offensive Move

Ottawa, Oct. 29 — A new session of the Dominion Parliament will open on November 7th. Between the opening and the Christmas recess, both Houses of Parliament will discuss all phases of Canada's war effort, the progress that has been made in arming Canada during the fourteen months since war was declared and the war program for the future. Such a debate may well cover an extremely wide range of subjects but the main interest will unquestionably centre on the growth in size and efficiency of the three war services, the Army, Navy and Air Force, and on the development of war industry. Since Parliament, adjourned there have been many changes in the war picture, which is shifting so constantly. There have been the almost unremittent and heavy air attacks on Britain, so magnificently withstood by the British airmen and the civilian population and the powerful counter attacks by the R.A.F. on the Nazi war machine in Germany and along the channel ports. There has been Japan's agreement with the Axis powers, and the measures of joint defence in progress between Canada and the United States. There has been the steady spread of sympathetic understanding among the people of the United States for the allied cause. All these things, some bad but most of them good, and of great importance, have strengthened confidence in ultimate victory and it will be in a rather brighter even if still heavy and anxious atmosphere that Parliament meets next week.

Among the many subjects which will come before Parliament for discussion will be the report of the Gardiner mission to London on food and other supplies from Canada, the wheat question, the St. Lawrence waterways project for which Canada has now appointed its committee, and the whole important question of financing the growing war expenditure.

Research Work for Air Force.

More than two million dollars have been donated for research in relation to Air Force problems. "After all" Major Power explained recently, "we are going to win the war by being more clever than the enemy, and we can do that by intensive research". Though the nature of their work is naturally shrouded in secrecy, Canadian scientists are hard at work on research to aid all branches of the services.

The expenditure by the Air Department may reach $260,000,000 for the year. An increase of about thirty million dollars has been caused by the gearing up of the Commonwealth Air Training Plan, the purchase of more aircraft from Canadian and United States factories (Britain was to have supplied these for the joint training plan) and for additional schools for Britain in Canada. Britain will later pay for costs which are rightfully hers to bear.

Seignorial Rents Are Abolished

The system of seignorial dues, which has existed since the first days of New France and through which landholders of Quebec paid a yearly rent to the seigneurs or landlords, will officially cease to exist on November 11th, according to Hon. T. D. Bouchard, Minister of Roads and Public Works. This is the result of the work of a commission named by the Legislature, of which Mr. Bouchard is the president. The commission is making arrangements with the banks for the borrowing of $2,000,000 to indemnify the landholders or seigneurs for the loss of their dues. The loan is guaranteed by the Government.

After November 11th the municipalities will collect from the landholders, together with the ordinary taxes an amount sufficient to repay their debt over a period of years. Thus ends a work undertaken years ago at Quebec, under the former Liberal regime, continued under the Duplessis Administration, and under the present Government. With Mr. Bouchard on the commission were Joseph Sirois, of Quebec, and Victor Morin, of Montreal, notaries.

Sisters Are Brides in Double Wedding

The Catholic Church at Hawkesbury was the scene, last Monday morning, of a double wedding of sisters, the Misses Cecile Bisson and Simone Bisson, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Hermas Bisson. The former became the bride of Mr. Donat Campbell, son of Mr. A. Campbell, of Pointe au Chene, and the latter of Mr. Wilfrid Villeneuve, son of Mr. W. Villeneuve, of Calumet. Rev. Father J. R. Guindon officiated.

Due to the illness of the brides' father, Miss Cecile Bisson was given in marriage by Mr. Raoul Sirois, and Miss Simone Bisson by Mr. Edward Seguin, uncles of the brides. Attired identically, they wore floor-length blue silk gowns and sleeveless grey squirrell jackets. They carried bouquets of Johanna Hill roses. They were attended by four bridesmaids, Miss Marie Ange Lauzon, Miss Emelie Lahaie, Miss Irene Deschamps and Miss Colombe Desforges, members of the Children of Mary, an organization to which the brides belonged. The grooms were attended by their brothers, Mr. A. L. Campbell and Mr. Arthur Villeneuve.

Take Measures to Prevent Epidemic In Brownsburg

Village Has Outgrown Its Provisions for Sanitation

Immunization for typhoid is being given by the County Health Unit to employees of the C-I-L at Brownsburg. This course was recommended to tne company by the county health officer, Dr. J. H. Maynard, in view of the precarious water supply and sewage disposal in Brownsburg and delay in municipalization of the system, through legal and other difficulties. Private sources of supply have been recognized as unsafe for some time, so that the town waterworks and sewerage were considered imperative. During the time this project has been maturing, however, the danger has been aggravated by a boom in the town's industries and consequent increase in the population. It will still be considerable time before the works project is completed and measures to safeguard the health of the community are felt advisable.

While the immunization scheme is advanced primarily for employees in the war industry, the county health officer advises it is also available to private residents. The treatment is free; it is by no means compulsory. Three inoculations against typhoid are given, one week apart. The subject suffers no ill effects, although in some cases there is a temporary reaction.

Announcement of the treatment was given out from the church pulpits on Sunday. Clinics are being held in the C-I-L Social Club premises on Saturdays from 2 until 4 p.m.

Lease With Glove Firm

At a meeting of Hawkesbury Town Council on Tuesday, it was decided to instruct the town solicitor to prepare a lease with the Solid Glove Company for a period of five years. The company established in the town some time ago and occupies part of what is known as the Hawkesbury Textiles Building. About 65 persons are employed.

Tonight's the Night !

All Hallows' Eve finds observance tonight in a custom which brings perennial joy to youngsters . . . And if the lighter aspect of this celebration obscures its holy significance, let's overlook it; we of older years are none too sure of its portent, either . . . And if the children rattle our veranda rails, ring our doorbells and drag us from our quiet perusal of the newspaper, let's grin and bear it. It is small sacrifice to humor them, to appear mystified by their grotesque make-ups, to laugh and pour a handful of peanuts into each dirty sack, then watch them depart in triumphant glee.

It is the spirit of the thing, once again . . . Whole sermons have been written on the tolerance of age for adolescence, the understanding of parenthood with childhood. The half-formed character scars so easily with rebuffs, and childish simplicity gropes fondly for the friendship and approval of its seniors.

There is frolic and fun for the kids, at Hallowe'en. But for men and women there's a lesson too. Let us not be too occupied, too worldly-wise to learn !

Brownsburg Case Set Back

The lawsuit on Brownsburg waterworks contract, which opened at St. Jerome on October 15th and was adjourned till the 29th, has again received a setback.

The case, due for resumption on Tuesday under Justice P. Cousineau, was postponed until next Monday, Nov. 4th.

Representatives of Red Cross H.Q. Visit Lachute

Explain Requirements and Details of Women's Work

After calling at all four units with members of the local executive, Mrs. J. F. Ransom Wilkes, vice-chairman of the Work Committee, and Madame Henri Beaudry, co-chairman of the Inspection Department, addressed a gathering of members at Victoria Hall.

Mrs. Wilkes explained the system carried out at Red Cross House of handling work from 160 branches in this province under their control.

Mrs. Beaudry addressed the workers in French and in English. She had brought with her many samples of work and introduced one or two new articles to this branch. She also showed a shapeless sock made from directions for finer wool previously sent out, which the knitter had followed without considering the size or shape of the finished product. This spelled wasted time and energy. Mrs. Beaudry emphasized the necessity for using one's own judgment about such things and assured her hearers that the Red Cross would not refuse any well-fitting garment.

Mrs. Wilkes contradicted the oft-repeated rumor that Red Cross articles are sold to soldiers. This never happened with the knowledge of the Red Cross Society, she said.

Canada's Sea Losses

The war comes closer . . . . With the sinking of the Empress of Britain, pride of the Canadian Pacific fleet, and the Canadian destroyer Margaree, the week has brought a costly toll.

In these two disasters, the first "by enemy action" and the second through a collision, the loss of life totals less than 200 — which is a low figure considering the joint capacity of these vessels.

Yet while the immense material loss can be replaced, this human toll is counted more grave to Canada. The Margaree disaster brought the largest single loss of armed forces the Dominion has suffered in the war. Many of these sailors were from Quebec Province. Many were survivors of the Fraser, sunk in action off the French coast, and they had acquitted themselves bravely. These officers and men — none can take their place in the hearts of their families and comrades.

But Canada is young in privation, unhardened to suffering. She must beware — for sorrow undermines the spirit; disheartenment is fertile soil for the defeatist and the propagandist. The Mother Country stands as a classic example of defiance; indomitable Britain — where blow upon blow, loss upon loss, "sorrow, blood and tears" have but steeled the determination of Britons to fight, and win.

Shall Canada be less worthy? Her losses are as naught compared with those of England. Shall we falter under such blows as these? . . . . There is but one answer : Canada carries on !

Death Removes A Well-Loved Figure In St. Andrews

Mrs. B. N. Wales, Widow of Argenteuil Historian

At an early hour Saturday morning, October 26th, death came peacefully and unexpectedly to one who was intimately versed in the early chronicles of this countryside — Mrs. B. N. Wales, widow of the late Benjamin Wales, historian of Argenteuil County and co-founder of the Historical Society. Mrs. Wales, cherished by her daughters and beloved by her neighbors in the little community of St. Andrews, was in her ninetieth year. Her mind was alert, and her memory remarkable for one of her advanced years. Physically well and active until the last hours of her life, she passed quietly away in her sleep.

Mrs. Wales was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wellington Osgood and the granddaughter of Capt. Josiah Sawyer, first pioneer settler of the Eaton Valley, whose name is perpetuated in the town of Sawyerville. Born in that community in June, 1851, Emma Theodosia Osgood attended the Sawyerville School and the Eaton Academy. Graduating with her model diploma, she taught for a time in her native town.

In the year 1878 she was married to Dr. Benjamin N. Wales, then a practitioner in the town of Bury, Que. After 28 years in the Eastern Townships, Dr. and Mrs. Wales came to St. Andrews East with their family.

The wife of a noted writer on historical themes, Mrs. Wales was the author, in her own right, of many beautiful poems and literary works, several of which have been published; one of these entitled "Memories", written in her eightieth year, appears in "Argenteuil Lyrics", a small volume of poems published more recently by the Wales family. She shared the interests of her husband, in medicine, history and literature — until his death a little over two years ago.

Of their five children, two sons are deceased and there survive three daughters — Julia Grace Wales, B.A., Ph.D., who is assistant professor of English at Wisconsin University, Madison, Wis.; Anna Letitia Wales, of St. Andrews East; and Margaret Evelyn Wales, R.N., who is nurse for the Protestant Schools in Verdun, Que. One brother is also left to mourn her passing — Mr. Herbert Osgood, of Sawyerville, who in his ninety-first year is still able to drive his own automobile.

Mrs. Wales was a member of the United Church at St. Andrews. Her pastor, the Rev. J. A. Mowatt, paid glowing tribute to her memory, at the morning service last Sunday. He mentioned her faculty of reciting entire chapters from the Bible; the study and memorizing of the scriptures had developed that retentive memory which was a source of wonder to her friends.

At the funeral service Monday afternoon in the United Church, there was a large attendance, and sorrow was evident in this loss so closely affecting the cultural and spiritual values of the community. Rev. J. A. Mowatt conducted the service, assisted by his son, Rev. Andrew J. Mowatt. Miss Ruth Todd, of Lachute, was organist. Beautiful autumn flowers surrounded the casket.

Pall-bearers were W. J. Rodger, Stanley Rodger, W. J. Pitcairn, Col. L. Hooker, A. Snowden and Ross McAdam.

Gunner N. MacRae Dies in Camp at Petawawa, Ont.

Member of Old County Family Won D.S.M. in Great War

Gnr. Norman MacRae, of the Royal Canadian Artillery, C.A.S.F., and a veteran of the last war, died suddenly at Petawawa, Ont., on Monday — death being due apparently to a heart attack.

A native of Lost River, Gnr. MacRae had resided in that community practically all his life, with the exception of his few years in overseas service in the last war and the past few years which he and his family spent in Harrington. He had been employed for many years at the Kilmar Mines.

He was a son of the late Donald MacRae and of Mary MacRae and was in his 44th year at the time of his death.

In 1916 he enlisted in the 229th Battalion, C.E.F., and served overseas with this unit and with the 11th Field Company, Canadian Engineers, returning after demobilization with the Distinguished Service Medal.

He joined the Royal Canadian Artillery six months ago.

Predeceased by his wife, the late Annie McTavish in 1934, Gnr. MacRae is survived by four sons, Pte. Grant MacRae, now with the C.A.S.F. in England, and Donald, Dougald and Farlin, of Harrington; and two daughters, Misses Norma and Phyllis MacRae, also of Harrington; his mother, three brothers, John, of Lost River, Donald, of this town, and Farquhar, of Montreal, and four sisters, Mrs. A. S. McBurney and Mrs. H. T. Lamb, of Montreal, Mrs. K. O'Neill, of Vancouver, and Mrs. Leslie Adamson, of Laurel.

The funeral was held this afternoon, Thursday, from the Margaret Rodger Memorial Presbyterian Church, the Rev. E. Orsborn officiating. The cortege proceded to Harrington Cemetery, where the remains were interred.

"Namesake" Fails Plea of Old Country Town

Edmonton, Ky. (CP) — The mayor of Edmonton, England, apparently believing this Kentucky town was named for the English city, sent a cable asking local officials to help pay for a Spitfire plane.

The plea fell on deaf ears. County Judge W. S. Kelly said he didn't even have the money to cable an answer. Besides, he addud, Edmonton, Ky, was named for Edmond Rogers, a soldier against England in the Revolution.

Blaze Destroyed Farm Buildings At Beech Ridge

Cattle and Horses Burned; Total Loss of $10,000

A disastrous fire occurred shortly before 8 o'clock Friday evening at the farm of Gordon Smith, Beech Ridge. The main barn, silo and stable were completely destroyed, but due to the efforts of Lachute Fire Brigade and farmers from the surrounding settlement, the dwelling house was saved, although situated in a radius of scorching heat. Reflection of the blaze was visible for many miles around.

The Smith family were absent in Lachute at the time, and the cause of the outbreak remains a mystery. There was no one left on the premises. It is learned also there is no electric light or power installation on the property.

Neighbors, seeing the blaze, raised the alarm and rushed to the scene. A number of pigs were released from the pens, and about 100 head of poultry, but the flames by this time had consumed the stable quarters, with 23 cows and three horses. Also destroyed in the burning barn was the season's grain crop and 65 tons of hay. A machine shop and working tools were saved, together with a truck which is used as a school bus, and the threshing machine.

Under Chief Geo. Y. Deacon the Lachute Fire Brigade applied water from the booster tank on their truck. Water was drawn also from a tank on the property, the supply being maintained by neighbors hauling cans from a nearby spring.

Total loss of property and contents was estimated at $10,000 of which between $2,000 and $3,000 is covered by insurance.

Christmas Parcels For Overseas

On advice from Postmaster H. M. Gall, all Christmas parcels for soldiers overseas, England, Iceland, etc., should be mailed not later than Nov. 12th. As mentioned before in these columns, the Postal Department will give no announcement of sailings.

It is recommended that parcels for the troops overseas be packed in strong containers and firmly tied. Parcels sewn up in cotton covering are least liable to damage or loss of contents. In additions all packages should be properly addressed with soldier's name, rank, number, regiment, etc.

War Orders

Among contracts for war material issued last week by the Department of Munitions and Supply, two substantial orders are listed for cloth and blankets from Ayers Limited, Lachute Mills — the amounts being $43,139 and $99,619 respectively.

Message From the Minister of Finance

"I hope there is no misunderstanding of the fact that Canada's war effort needs the financial support of every man and woman in this Dominion.

"Regular investment in War Savings Certificates provides an opportunity for the many to show how they feel about the few whose courage is winning the day for us all.

"Can any one of us forget for one moment of our waking hours what is taking place in England at this time; in London where millions count their waking hours almost as the sum of the twenty-four? No contribution that we can offer will compare with the sacrifices being made by those in the line of fire, including our own Canadian airmen, soldiers and seamen. But they need and must have all the help we can give.

"I urge all who are able to participate in this War Savings campaign to take their places without delay, and pledge their savings to the limit of their ability". Hon. J. L. ILSEY

AUTUMN FICTION FOR WINTER READING

By
CHRISTINA PALLISER CHAPMAN

(A paper presented before the Study Group of Lachute Women's Institute)

Now for the roast, the pièce de résistance, the important part of the menu, and the group in which you will find many of the titles you consider "required reading".

Our old reliable, Sir Hugh Walpole, is doing it again. You will remember his famous Rogue Herries series of four excellent novels some ten or twelve years ago. Well, this year he is starting another series of four excellent novels about the Herries family. The first one is called "The Bright Pavilions" (isn't that a lovely name? But then Sir Hugh is really very happy in his choice of names for his novels). This novel is filled with romance, daring, and high adventure. It is laid in the reign of the great Queen Elizabeth, in the teeming powerful young life of her England. Sir Hugh intends to link up this second series of four books with his Rogue Herries, the first of his other quartet. If there is a "must" book in this year's fiction — a thing which I am always reluctant to admit — I should consider "The Bright Pavilions", by by Sir Hugh Walpole to be it. This book is to be published in November.

R. C. Hutchison, the distinguished English writer whose books "The Unforgotten Prisoner", "The Shining Scabbard", "Testament", and others have placed him high in the esteem of English critics this year has written "The Fire and the Wood". It is a moving tale of love in Nazi Germany, long, and intensely interesting. The central figure is a Jewish doctor of great ability and fine character. I have not read it, but I do know that it is warmly praised by good readers, and what is more, that it is selling very well in both England and the United States.

Miss Willa Cather does not often favor us with a novel; her forthcoming book after nearly five years silence is called "Sapphira and the Slave Girl". Miss Cather is not so happy in her titles, but I am sure the book is worthy of your time and pleasure. It is a study in contrasting backgrounds and attitudes to slavery in Virginia in pre-Civil War days which does not sound very entertaining, but any novel by Miss Cather is a literary event.

There are other novels considered literary events, and Thomas Mann's "The Beloved Returns" is certainly one of them. People of critical taste ask for this book regardless of its subject. This book is a novel of Germany over a hundred years ago, in the time of Germany's greatest poet Goethe. It is a love story, and the subject is the return of The Beloved Woman to her lover Goethe after a lapse of many, many years.

Another literary event is a novel by L. H. Meyers called "The Pool of Vishnu", a sequal to "The Root and the Flower" of some four or five years back. The scene is in India and the characters, I think, are all East Indians. It is beautifully written, is an important book from a literary standpoint, and was the choice of the English Book Society for the month. Those who read the other novel will know what to expect.

A fourth "literary event" is Sigrid Undset's new novel called "Madame Dorthea". I am sorry not to be able to tell you anything about it — entirely to my slackness — but I am told it is good and I know it is important. If you read and like Sigrid Undset you will read and like this. Her name is high in European letters; you will recall that she was in 1928 a recipient of the Nobel Prize for Literature.

Fifth and last among the "literary events" I will place Thomas Wolfe's very long novel "You Can't Go Home Again". To those who have read and liked some of Wolfe's other long novels, such as "Time and the River", and "The Web and the Rock", I would say read this also; it is fully up to his best. Wolfe is now dead, and there is considerable guessing as to his place in English literature in the future. No one doubts that he will certainly have some place.

To leave the "literary events" and return to the big books which perhaps have a moral appeal, we shall consider Charles Morgan, one of England's most important writers, who gives us a novel only when he feels like it (which is about once in four or five years) and who has this year relented and written another for us. The English title is "Two Travellers", the American title is "The Voyage", but I know well what it will be called, "The New Charles Morgan", and that is title enough. Where he sits is very near the head of the table. (I quote from the advance notices, the book is not yet published). Mr. Morgan has here written a story of the interinfluence of two strong characters, disparate in temperament and environment, in France of the 1880's. These two travellers, a wine-grower and a famous diseuse join in a strange voyage of the heart. The scene is in beautiful provincial France where grapes are pressed and cognac distilled in vineyards on both sides of the river Charente, and in Paris where we see the uneasy glittering life which followed the fall of the Second Empire under Napoleon III and Eugenie. This is a big book, I feel sure, though not out yet.

Howard Spring's new novel is called "Fame is the Spur". You will recall his "O! Absalom!" of a couple of years ago. This is the story of John Hamer Shawcross, product of the poorer section of Manchester, who placed his wit and strength and handsome presence behind an ideal, made a lost cause his own, and proved that even in a world apparently run by wealth and power a poor boy's dreams could come true. This is recommended.

H. G. Wells' new book "Babes in the Darkling Wood" looks like a very interesting novel. It is very big and very long, but from what I could judge in a hasty glance, it seems human and interesting and, of course, brilliantly told. Wells is a good man, and he is worthy of your reading. This novel is much better than some of his recent ones. Don't let the heavy reviews frighten you.

Kenneth Roberts will on November 22nd publish "Oliver Wiswell", the story of the bitter struggle of the American Revolution seen through eyes of a man who was loyal to his own ideals. For many readers this will be the bright star of the season.

We have two other books dealing with the American Revolution, both important, and I might as well take them up right now. One is by Van Wyck Mason, called "Stars on the Sea". It is a continuation of his riproaring novel "Three Harbours". He is to have a third in this series.

The other is by Robert Graves, the English writer who years ago wrote "Goodbye to All That", and more recently "O! Claudius", and "Claudius the God". His new book is called in England "Sergeant Lambe of the Royal Welsh Fusiliers", and in America "Sergeant Lambe's America." Sergeant Lambe comes to America with his regiment to fight the American Revolution, and we have in this book a startling picture of the Revolution.

60 Years Ago

Mr. Harvey Matthews, of Centerville has grown on his farm a Swedish turnip weighing 10 pounds.

The new siding to the Lachute Paper Mills was commenced yesterday. Now is the time for St. Andrews people to bestir themselves about having the track continued to their village.

The Lachute Fall Fair is to be held next Tuesday, on the grounds opposite the store of Mr. G. L. Meikle.

At the Court of Assize for Prescott and Russell, held at L'Orignal, James Harrison was tried for the murder of John Morrison, in June last. The trial lasted all day, and a verdict of "not guilty" was returned.

Brownsburg — Mr. Daniel Smith, our energetic neighbor has at last got his Powder Mills in working order, and has commenced the manufacture of powder.

It is estimated that two million logs will be cut in the Upper Ottawa this winter, and there will be 75 per cent increase in square timber cut.

25 Years Ago

Parliament recently gave permission to the Post Office authorities to construct a miniature tube railroad for the purpose of carrying letters and parcels across London in half the time formerly taken. It will be 6½ miles long, and will cost $5,000,000.

Mr. Chas. McFaul recently joined the Heavy Artillery.

Beware! Now that the fishing season has closed, don't be too eager to fish illegally, as a warden is on the look-out for all culprits.

The excellent patriotic work of the File Indians at Balcarras, Sask., continues. Last October 33 of these colonists subscribed $502.10 to the Patriotic Fund, with each farmer giving a certain number of bushels of grain.

Sir Robert Borden brought back a message of confidence, coupled with an appeal for every Canadian to do his part, as fully as the men who are at the battlefront have done or are doing.

16 Months Retold in Two Exciting Hours

Crossing the Andes on Foot

A 16-month hike by the Toll Brothers makes good material for another rousing travelogue — which folks will be flocking to hear on Monday evening, Nov. 11th, at Lachute Auditorium. This talk, by one of the brothers in person, is entitled "Hiking Through South America", and is choicely illustrated with motion and still pictures. The event is sponsored by Lachute Women's Institute. (See advt., page 8).

Effect of Five Different Instruments Heard in New Piano Invention

London — A piano which gives the effects of five different instruments, has been designed by a British inventor and manufactured for the export business. The first of the new pianos is at present on the high seas and orders are being fulfilled for Malaya, South America, Penang and Iraq. Other orders are in hand for the Dominions.

By simply pressing a pedal, the pianist can achieve the effects of the harpsichord, guitar, banjo and harp, by means of an improved interceptor between the hammers and the strings. The piano itself, by virtue of its design, has improved resonance and tonal values.

It is neither an "upright" nor a baby grand but a combination of both. The shape is that of the grand, the sound board is vertical. The inventor, W. Evans, of Charles Challen & Son Ltd., the manufacturers, who plays only by ear, is confident that the comparitively small size will not make excessive and uneconomical demands on cargo space.

This Strange World

A British airman rescued from the sea by a lifeboat seven miles off the southeast coast of England has been identified as a descendant of Lieut.-Col. Sir William Hillary, who founded Britain's lifeboat service 116 years ago. When the Past meets the Present . . . .

Rev. J. A. F. Ozanne of Royston, Herts, Eng., has said a word for posterity. He appeals to parents to refrain from christening children born during air raids by names such as 'Siren'.

Few of us have not been caught for parking in 'no parking' areas, but in Britain they can also be punished for parking rowboats! Two men who left their rowing boats unattended, in the River Thames, with the oars ready for use, were fined the other day. They were taking no chances on parachutists.

A Polish pilot whose Spitfire fighter was set on fire after he'd downed two Nazi bombers, got the "last word". He headed back towards the German formation, took a "bead" on the nearest Dornier and leaped clear just before the collision. He parachuted safely to earth while the Dornier, with its entire crew, crashed to earth.

Coincidence . . . Captain Ole Meyer, middle-aged Norwegian skipper, said goodbye to his old crew of the freighter Tancred in Liverpool and went to Hull to take over another freighter, the Tricolor. Some days later, when his ship was 500 miles west of Ireland, bound for New York, SOS lights revealed three lifeboats containing 36 men — the crew of Capt. Meyer's old ship, the Tancred.

Even the horses in countries occupied by the Nazis have to learn German! A German newspaper urges drivers to use the "utmost caution" in handling horses which don't understand German, following complaints that many horses have been cruelly treated because the intricacies of German grammar have been making it difficult for the horses to understand "Gee up!"

MONTREAL'S CIVIC EMPLOYEES PLAN OWN RESIDENTIAL CENTRE

"Civic Employees' Village" is a new building project now planned by a number of Montreal city employees, as revealed by Henri Derome, chief draftsman of the City Planning Commission.

"There are a number of civic employees who have been dreaming for years of owning their homes," Mr. Derome stated, "and if the present scheme receives the co-operation of building firms the plan will be carried out."

Mr. Derome explained that a site on the outskirts will be selected for the project. The wholesale house-building scheme appeals to the civic employees on the ground that building materials may be obtained at lower costs owing to mass buying and to the good will of the contractors toward civic employees.

"At least 50 civic employees are planning to take part in this scheme and if conditions are favorable, we should be in a position to begin erection of the new village early next year," he said.

SECRETARY TREASURERS EXCELLED IN PENMANSHIP

On the nineteenth day of July, 1851, Daniel Shanks of Huntingdon, Que., sat down to write an account of the first meeting of the School Commissioners of the Municipality of the Village of Huntingdon. He was the first Secretary-Treasurer. Since that day hundreds of accounts of the meetings of the School Board have been recorded.

There is one thing about all of these minutes that one notices. In the early days writing was quite obviously an art. It is most noticeable that pains were taken to write neatly. Furthermore, all the Secretary-Treasurers were good writers. It was undoubtedly one of the prime requisites in those early days that a "secretary" be a good writer. How different from today, when the art of writing has become a lost art.

MEMORIES

(Written by the late Mrs. B. N. Wales, St. Andrews East, when 80 years of age — these verses appeared in "Argenteuil Lyrics", a little volume published a few years ago by the Wales family).

The changing scenes of fourscore years have led me
Yet sights and sounds of summer oft bring visions
Of happy childhood days.

And once again I wake at early morning
To song of robin blithe,
And through the long grass in the dewy meadow
The swish of mower's scythe.

The low of cattle — all the farmyard echoes—
I seem to hear once more.

Again I wander through the pleasant pasture
Beyond the maples tall
To fill my pail once more with berries growing
Beside the old stone wall;

While on the quiet air the sound of voices
Is borne across the way
From where in farther fields the cheerful toilers
Are taking in the hay.

And through the wide barn door,
And hear the rumble of the heavy cartwheels
Across the wind-swept floor.

The brilliant sunlight fails,
And soon, from yard and cattle shed, the milkers
Bring in their foaming pails.

On all around descends a peaceful stillness;
The bird has found its nest;
Now darkness falls — the long day's work is ended—
The workers are at rest.

NOVEL PROCEDURE IN SAFETY CAMPAIGN

A group of pedestrians started to cross Main Street, Campaign, Ill., just as the "go" light changed to red. All but one raced across the busy thoroughfare, anyway.

The lone observer of safety regulations, Mrs. Robert B. Browne, returned to the sidewalk, waited until the green signal flashed on and made the crossing in leisurely fashion.

When she reached the other side, a patrolman handed her a ticket. It entitled her to $15 in merchandise at a department store as a reward for her compliance with the laws.

The incident was an example of how the city reversed its old bawl-'em-out-or-summon-'em-to-court policy during a week's safety campaign. Instead of confining their efforts to "cracking down" on violators, the policemen gave prize tickets to motorists and pedestrians complying with the spirit and the letter of the municipal rules.

FOR PROPERTY OWNERS

The Toronto Telegram and Toronto Star have been enjoying one of their old-fashioned arguments. It is about the municipal franchise. The Telegram endorsed a suggestion from a weekly newspaper that owners of real property elect a portion of each municipal council and that this portion control the expenditure of money. The Star rises with some arguments in poignant English, to the effect that people are more important than property and that, in any event, tenants pay taxes through rents.

Something needs to be done and something reasonably could be done to improve the position of the owner of property. The tenant, as a rule, can move when rents become too high, or when the property becomes unfit for human habitation because the landlord cannot afford to keep it in repair with what rent is left over after he has paid taxes.

The need in nearly every municipality in Canada is a term of years in which the majority of members of councils will be pinching every penny. At present, in many instances, the property owner has no representation on civic boards for the reason that the majority of municipal electorates have no real appreciation of the appalling growth in taxes and, if they did, could move out when the load became intolerable.

Our thought is that it would not be necessary to curtail the franchise as regards tenants. But it might be feasible, politically and otherwise, to permit owners of real property in each municipality to elect by themselves councillors or aldermen equal in number to the number elected by tenants themselves. We would not give the property-owners' councillors any more power over the purse or otherwise than would have the tenants' councillors. But, in council meetings, each group in the community would have equal representation without either group having a veto power. The mayor might more often than at present have to cast the deciding vote.

This would, perhaps, meet the Star's objection that persons must be considered before property. And it would meet the contrary objection that, at present, property owners have not sufficient control over the spending of their own money. Letting the representatives of the two groups fight it out in council on an equal basis might tend to lower the cost of municipal government without curtailing any services essential to the health and comfort of the residents of the city whether owners or tenants.

Best Poem of the War

This poem of the war was written by Sergeant J. J. Rea, of Lancashire, who went through the last war and was in the recent fighting in France. His poem is an inspiring tribute to his mother country — England:

What will you give me, England,
That I may beat the foe?
A host of ships, a host of planes,
A host of guns, I know;
The wealth of mighty Empire?
These are no idle boasts.
All these you give me, England,
That I may reach the goal;
But, God! how meagre are these gifts,
Without a valiant soul.

What will you give me, England,
That nations may be free?
A sea of blood, a sea of tears,
War's wrath and misery;
The cries of stricken, weeping wives,
Of children at their knees;
The pillaged peaceful homesteads,
From whence our people flee?
All this you give me, England,
War's grim and bloody toll.
O, God! give me the strength to bear;
O, God! inspire my soul.

What will you give me, England,
When Victory is mine?
The right to live, the right to love,
And liberty divine;
The joy of countless human souls,
The downtrodden and the slave;
Man's joy at his deliverance,
From tyranny's foul grave?
All these you give me, England,
Land of the brave and free.
O, God! how much the nations owe,
Dear Motherland, to thee!

Man Who Won't Advertise Is Like the Fisherman Who Won't Fish

Imagine an angler who refuses to cast his hook into the water where the tise in the papers it reads, and it gone hundreds of miles to a good brook or lake; who took with him a fine rod with good flies; who clad himself expensively in fisherman's clothing; who knew precisely where fish were to be found; who had been well instructed in regard to the proper bait to use. An angler who refuses to fish — well — his case calls for the ministry of a psychiatrist.

But has not this imagined angler his counterpart in that merchant who refuses to use published advertising as a way by which new and more customers can be won? Canada has many merchants who are all dressed up, ready to go some place, yet who just won't start going anywhere. These merchants seem to believe that consumers should find them, yet they would laugh at the suggestion that the fish should jump out of the water into the angler's creel when a well-equipped angler arrives at their habitat.

The public in these days expects those who want its custom to advertize in the papers it reads, and it most certainly gives its custom, in largest volume to advertisers. Yet despite this perceived fact there are many merchants who absolutely refuse to do the very thing — and the only thing — which can and will get them a large volume of business.

Weekly Publisher Dies Of Injuries Received In Automobile Crash

The sudden passing of Mr. John Marsh, veteran publisher of the Amherstburg Echo, who died last week following a motor accident at Blenheim, is learned with deep regret by his confreres across the Dominion, and is a cause of widespread sorrow in removing, as it does, one of the most useful and constructive citizens of Ontario. But his memory will live for long years to come, a source of encouragement and inspiration to those of his fellow men whose privilege it was to know him intimately.

Deeply devoted to home and family, keenly interested in politics and all phases of Canadian life, his untimely death is a distinct loss to the community and our deepest sympathy is extended to his devoted wife, daughter and son.

The town of Petain in B.C. finds its name embarrassing, so in future it will be called Odlum, after the gallant officer commanding the Canadian Second Division.

Weekly Review....

Canada may train parachute troops, according to Mr. Power. Consideration is being given to the development of this branch of modern warfare "in preparation of the day when we can take the offensive".

The first class of air observers, fit and ready for service, have been turned out from the joint training school at Trenton, Ontario. Groups of air crew personnel will probably be going overseas at monthly intervals from now on. New groups of airmen are reaching Canada from Australia and New Zealand to receive final instructions in Canadian Air schools.

In a speech at Ottawa, General Crerar, chief of staff, said of Canada's fighting men that "no better material for a matchless force can be found in the world". He said further, however, that Canada had some distance to go before supplies of armament and equipment could be brought up to the level of the requirements of war or existing fighting manpower. The trained munitions worker was rendering a vital service to the defence of Canada. General Crerar spent some time in Britain, and he showed firm confidence in the outlook for ultimate victory. "Given something approaching equality in numbers and armament", he said "there is no reason to doubt that the British Empire forces in this war can meet and defeat the armies of Germany even more decisively, if that be possible, than they did in the Great War of 25 years ago".

Canada's defences on the Atlantic and Pacific, now under two "commands", will be influenced by recommendations of the joint defence board, and decisions of military, naval and air leaders of both countries. Recent word from Washington says that establishment of a new base in Newfoundland will shortly be started. The Prime Minister recently surveyed defences in the East, and Mr. Angus Macdonald those of the Pacific seaboard. The new Minister of Defence for Naval Affairs has brought dynamis force into the direction of Canada's naval forces. With new anti-submarine patrol vessels launched at short intervals, six destroyers from those delivered by the United States added to the fleet, and two others being made in British yards, Canada's navy is gathering head. During the next eighteen months 10,000 men will be added to its personnel.

Britain Gains, Whoever Loses U.S. Election

Both Leaders in Battle for White House are Pledged to Give Every Aid Short of War

Washington (CP) — Every four years Americans throw themselves into a frenzy of political fervor over the complicated business of electing a president and a part of their congress.

The campaign now going on with typical last minute fury ends Nov. 5 when the people will decide whether they will have the Democratic administration of Franklin D. Roosevelt for a third term, or turn to the Republicans under Wendell Willkie.

Whichever way the verdict goes it may be assumed that American aid to Canada and Great Britain will continue as wholeheartedly as it has begun under Roosevelt.

Both leaders are solemnly pledged to give the British allies every aid short of war in the effort to defeat ambitions of the totalitarian powers.

In fact to the man in the street, there seems to be little at issue between the two parties except the desire of one to stay in power and the desire of the other to get in after a long period in opposition.

Chief argument of the Republican party is that no president has ever served a third term and to re-elect Roosevelt would mean breaking a tradition of 150 years and enable him to set up a dictatorship.

Applause for Both

Apparently the third term bogie is not worrying the American electors greatly. They seem unworried about a third term so long as it is given to a man they trust and admire.

And it is obvious they do admire Roosevelt, even though he has not performed all the things he promised in 1932 and 1936.

But when the movies flash a picture of Col. Charles Lindbergh, former American aviation idol who has adopted a friendly and conciliatory attitude toward Germany and her allies, there are hisses and cat-calls.

The majority of United States newspapers are against Roosevelt, as they were in 1936 when he swept all states except Maine and Vermont.

Willkie has carried on a strenuous campaign throughout the nation for months. He has been pelted with eggs and vegetables but has come up smiling and late stages of the campaign saw an undoubted rising tide of sentiment for him. Roosevelt, busy with the daily sequence of grave events in Europe and the Orient, remained off the hustings until the last fortnight of the campaign.

"Bring on the champ", Willkie shouted from a dozen platforms throughout the east and west, trying to draw the president into debate. Last week the "champ" came out of his corner swinging with both fists. At Philadelphia he addressed a roaring crowd of 16,000, re-asserted his pledge to keep Americans out of war unless attacked and rested on the record of his administration.

Willkie replied with a declaration that if Roosevelt's promise to keep Americans out of the war was forgotten as readily as other Roosevelt promises of 1932 and 1936, American boys would soon be on transports bound for foreign battlefields.

So the fight was on and will continue to the end of the campaign. Democrats jubilantly declared that Roosevelt's final entry into the platform debate had stopped any tide of Willkie sentiment that might have existed.

Only one-third of the 96 senate seats are at stake and there is such a Democratic majority there that the outcome cannot give the Republicans a majority. But all 435 seats in the House of Representatives are to be filled and a Republican majority there is possible.

It took Mrs. E. Sley 58 years to make up her mind that she had married the wrong man, so she has divorced him in Tacoma, Wash. He is 81 and she is 74. . . . Not so long-winded was Mr. O'Brien, of Salem, Mass. He left his wife two hours after their marriage, so she divorced him too. . . . And to give this chapter of marriages a happy ending here come Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Wiley, who were recently divorced, found single life boring, so remarried a week later.

Four months ago, Mrs. E. C. McGinnis, of Raleigh N.C., lost three diamond rings value $7,580, down a drain. George Hamilton, a $25-a-week sewer worker, was given the job of salvaging the jewellery, but gave up in despair after ten weeks' search. Then, the other day, he had a dream. He dreamt the jewellery was under a manhole near the house. Going to the spot the next day he found the missing articles — and collected $800 reward . . . George is a firm believer in dreams now.

Thirteen-year-old Jean Powell, living in a London suburb, was blown out of her bedroom window during a recent air raid. She sailed through the air on her mattress and landed safely in the garden, still on the mattress and none the worse for her surprise flight.

SEIZED IN SPY CASE

"Well, came is hardly the word for it. She brought it with her."

Know Your Lines

New pavement markings on Ontario and Quebec highways represent a tremendous chemical and engineering achievement, climaxing two decades of effort by engineers, paint chemists and psychologists to adapt highways to the progressively higher modern speeds — says an article in the C-I-L Oval.

Paint on the pavement can hardly fail to attract the driver's attention in any kind of light, states the writer. Even in thick fog, when they may be the only visable guides, one needs only to follow the advice of the painted lines to ride in comparative safety. With this in mind, engineers of the Ontario Department of Highways have used various combinations of painted lines on the pavement, to supplement and reduce the number of signs on the roadside.

Site of the Governor's Chateau

On Youville Square, Montreal

Many sites of historic interest center in the vicinity of Montreal's Youville Square, for here Maisonneuve and his followers began in 1642 the settlement of Ville Marie, destined to become Canada's modern metropolis. For generations this neighborhood was the heart of the town which was a western outpost of New France. On an office building which looks across the corner to the monument commemorating the founding of Montreal, there is a white plaque marking it as an historic site in its own right.

Here stood the chateau of Louis-Hector de Callières, governor of Montreal during some of the most trying years of the colony's early history, and later governor of all New France. Born at Cherbourg in the homeland, Callières entered the army and came to Canada as governor of Montreal in 1684. He took part in the expedition against the Iroquois three years later and in 1690 his arrival at Quebec with reinforcements helped to repel the English attack on the capital by Phipps.

In 1696 Callières commanded the vanguard of Frontenac's great expedition against the Iroquois villages and later, as governor of New France, concluded a peace with those savage tribes which ended the worst terrors of frontier life for half a century. He had succeeded Frontenac in 1699 and proved to be a capable and energetic governor in Quebec, as he had been in the subordinate post when he ruled the Montreal district from the chateau on Youville Square.

Divine Service of Masonic Order At St. Andrews United Church

Members of Argenteuil Masonic Lodge held their annual church service last Sunday morning at the United Church in St. Andrews East, the Rev. Bro. J. A. Mowatt officiating. A masonic choir led the singing, and after the offering sang a favorite hymn without accompaniment.

The Rev. Bro. Mowatt gave a stirring message, throwing out a challenge to the church and adherents for a more aggressive spirit of Christianity. He reviewed the early Christian church, beginning with the teaching of Christ, when there were no creeds or sets of rules . . the time when Constantine was the power in the world, though the church had become sensual in practice . . . . how Savonola fought the evils of the then Christian church, paying for his courage with his life . . . when the men and women of England became indifferent to the church, before Wesley instilled greater power in their lives and in their apathetic Christianity.

Mr. Mowatt focussed his thoughts on the present conditions; the human society leaves much to be improved upon, as suffering and starvation are evident in a world of plenty, and respect for property and capital has fallen into discard. The speaker described the revolutions of France and Russia as a result of unrest among the people; and the condition in Germany is a symptom of unrest, where men thought of Christianity as a thing for themselves instead of for the whole world.

"If the church is to fulfill its purpose, it must be a force, a light to those in darkness", commented Mr. Mowatt, "and let us, as Christian friends, take heart and live a life of Christ in a realistic way".

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SERVICES

"Everlasting Punishment" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon to be read in Churches of Christ, Scientist throughout the world on Sunday November 3rd.

The Golden Text is from Proverbs 13:6. "Righteousness keepeth him that is upright in the way: but wickedness overthroweth the sinner".

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "Say ye to the righteous, that it shall be well with him: for they shall eat the fruit of their doings. Woe unto the wicked! it shall be ill with him: for the reward of his hands shall be given him." (Isaiah 3: 10,11).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "If sin is not regretted and is not lessening, then it is hastening on to physical and moral doom. You are conquered by the moral penalties you incur and the ills they bring. The pains of sinful sense are less harmful than its pleasures. Belief in material suffering causes mortals to retreat from their error, to flee from body to Spirit, and to appeal to divine sources outside of themselves." (Page 405).

CORRESPONDENCE TO THE WATCHMAN

Cushing, Que., Oct. 29, 1940

Editor of The Watchman,—

Dear Sir — Perhaps not all your readers are aware of the following matter, which has been brought before the Dominion Government during the last three months, and for which I hope you will give space in your columns. I refer to an interview granted by the Dominion Government on July 24th to a delegation comprised as below, representing Roman Catholic and Protestant churches and many other bodies:

Rev. Canon Philippe Casgrain, C.M.G., representing His Eminence Cardinal Villeneuve; Rev. L. E. Gagnon, O.M.I., representing His Excellency, Alexander Vachon, Archbishop of Ottawa; Rev. W. W. Judd, M.A., D.C.L., representing the Social Service Council of the Church of England; Rev. John Coburn, representing the United Church; Rev. J. B. Thomson, Chairman of Committee on Life and Work, Presbyterian Church; Rev. H. C. Millinoth, representing the Baptist Church; Brigadier Sparks, representing the Salvation Army; Rev. A. J. Irwin, D.D., representing the Canadian Temperance Federation, with which the Canadian Women's Christian Temperance Union is federated.

Dr. Irwin also spoke for the National Council of Women, which includes 20 district National Women's Organizations, the W.C.T.U. being one which represents a total membership of approximately 500,000 Canadian women. The deputation was courteously received by a committee of the Cabinet under the chairmanship of the Hon. J. G. Gardiner, Minister of National War Services. The following requests were presented:

1. That sale of alcoholic beverages in taverns, beer-rooms, wine shops, etc., be discontinued, and that sale of such beverages be confined entirely to Government-owned liquor stores.

2. That sale from Government liquor stores be permitted only between the hours of 3 p.m. and 8 p.m. and on week days only.

3. That all advertising of liquor in Canada be prohibited except in the place of sale.

4. That when the request in Item 1 is implemented, an order be issued from the Department of Defence closing all wet canteens in military establishments.

While this serious question is under consideration, it will be of great assistance in procuring these restrictions necessary for the efficiency of the national effort, both military and civilian, that the Government be assured by individuals and organizations of their support in the granting of these requests.

We therefore urge that the churches and their societies, temperance organizations and other bodies that realize the need of restrictions and recognize the advantage of this opportunity, communicate with the Prime Minister at once, urging action to grant the requests presented.

We also urge that individuals, especially those who are leaders in any field of activity — for the sake of their country, the Empire, and for the benefit of their fellow citizens, lend their aid to this movement by writing the Prime Minister personally in support of the requests made.

With thanks — Amelia E. Usher, Quebec Provincial President, W.C.T.U.

IF THERE WERE NO CHURCHES!

We wonder what the reaction would be if the announcement was made that all the churches of the town would close indefinitely; and yet only twenty per cent of our population are to be found in church at any given service.

This Strange World

Lovers in Minneapolis, Minn., can breathe freely — and make love freely, too. The city aldermen have thrown out a proposal to place parking tax meters along boulevards and lake parkways frequented by automobile spooners. The aldermen believe that Romance — in its early stages at least — should not be taxed.

We thought there were "representatives" for about everything in the world, but we were wrong. It has been left to the Rotary Club of Reidsville, N.C., to appoint a "negative representative". His job is to object to any proposal, however worthy, so that no hasty and misguided action will be taken.

Next time you go vacationing, a timely thought when "souveniritis" affects you (as it always does us!) is that souvenir-snatchers cost hotels on this continent over $10,000,000 a year, and range all the way from knicknacks, soap, silver and towels to blankets! For our part, we will try to remember!

"Japan is the most over-rated power on earth. She is not a first class power, nor second, nor third — possibly fifth".—Cornelius V. Starr, publisher of Shanghai Post.

Autumn Fiction...

and of the New World in the making. Not yet published.

Francis Parkinson who wrote "The Great Tradition", has a new novel called "Fielding's Folly", the story of a Virginia gentleman, very charming, married to a New England lady, very wealthy. Difficulties result, as one might expect from the different temperaments and bringing up of the two principal characters, to say nothing of their families and general environments. Her publishers say it is the most intimate story of a woman's love that this distinguished novelist has written. What that means we might all guess, but we had better read it and find out, after it is published.

And now for the second lot of important books, those which are by persons completely or almost completely unknown to the general reader, some of them first novels.

It is not only possible, it is more than likely that some book is on its way up the hill to success of which we at this time know little beyond its name and the name of its author. The author's name, if known, can assist us to judge the style, but the life of a book, its possibilities, its future, these can only emerge gradually from week to week as the book is recommended by one reader to another through that greater than all reviewers or advertisers, the Word of Mouth Club.

One new one by a completely unknown author which seems to me — I have almost finished reading it — to have individuality and charm, and to bring what I prize above all things, sincerity and freshness, is a novel by a Russian lady, Nina Fedorova, called "The Family". The scene is in Tientsin, in China of 1937. The principal characters are a family of White Russians, well educated, decent, and delightful, who are in the depths so far as lack of money goes, and who are trying to run a boarding house for people who are perhaps a little less poor than themselves. The book turns out to be rather a comfortable sort of old-fashioned novel of silver linings to the clouds. The author was born in South Russia, was swept in revolution across Siberia to North China, and is now comfortably settled in the state of Cregon.

Another big book by an unknown author is Henry Bellamann's very long novel "King's Row". I hardly know how to describe it, but I read it and liked it and remember it. The scene is a small town in the United States, might be Ohio or Illinois, or for that matter, Ontario or Quebec, or even some parts of England or of France. There are a few rather unsavory characters in the novel which tend to make it a little difficult to advise for general circulation. It is interesting, though, and that is the main thing.

Carson McCullers, a very young writer for such an achievement, has written "The Heart Is A Lonely Hunter", of which you may have heard. It is creating quite a sensation, and is most unusual. The central character is a deaf and dumb man, and I think the people all live on the wrong side of the tracks. The development of this novel is rather extraordinary, the story is well-built, and the writing beautiful.

A book which I would really urge you to read is "In Place of Splendour", by Constancia de la Mora. It is an autobiography by a Spanish lady, grand-daughter of the Spanish Prime Minister. The style is excellent, so easy and free and clear, and it is so full of event and experience that it reads better than most novels. Miss de la Mora is one of the younger Spanish generation, intensely modern, loving her country, and during Spain's Civil War (which ended so disastrously for her party) she was fully conversant with all that went on and we learn from her pages what we never could have found in our own or other newspapers.

That last book is counted as non-fiction, and with that in mind I shall give you one or two really important biographies, the very best of which is John Buchan's "Memory Hold-the-Door". I earnestly recommend to every one who can read that she beg, borrow, or buy this very fine biography of a great man. In my opinion — and I am not alone — John Buchan has written in this his very best book. The style and the English are absolutely perfect, they have the lovely simplicity which only the most highly educated seem able to use — that simplicity which we hear, for instance, in Mr. Winston Churchill's thrilling early life at home, at school, on holiday, and at Oxford, with the most delicious descriptions of his parents and his early friends. Then his life in South Africa as secretary for Lord Milner, his experiences in the Great War, his business activities, life in England as member of Parliament for his loved Oxford University, and his meeting and close friendliness with so very many of England's great and good. Sadly enough, the vast majority of the people about whom he writes are not among the living. Strict with himself only, he is tolerant and kindly toward all others. It is a beautiful book in every respect.

Lady Winifred Fortescue, the great historian and librarian at Windsor Castle, has written a lovely autobiography, completely feminine and charming. She too knew the great and the good. Every one loves Lady Fortescue's book; it is called "There's Rosemary, There's Ruf".

The Late Mrs. B. N. Wales

"The quiet severance of ripe fruit from the branch" well typifies the passing of Mrs. B. N. Wales, in her ninetieth year. A serene acceptance of physical frailty and full use of mental ability and skilful fingers made her latter years beautiful as the autumn foliage. An understanding affection directed all her household ministrations and services for church, Red Cross, and W.M.S., of which she was a life member

DO YOU KNOW?

Why Bridegroom's Presents to Bridesmaids?

At weddings nowadays the bridegroom usually presents the bridesmaids with a piece of jewellery. This is a survival from the long, long ago when brides had to be captured by force. The would-be bridegroom had to bribe the girls who were friendly with the unwitting bride. They would arrange for the girl to be at a prearranged place and the ardent suitor would carry her off! Incidentally, today's "best man" is the descendant of the ancient warrior who aided his friend to steal the bride.

CAMBRIA

PRIDE AND PREJUDICE

When a favorite book is made into a movie, one is usually disappointed. However, they have really made a good picture of Pride and Prejudice. Probably a good many of you have seen it by now. They have kept the feeling of the book very well and although there are many omissions, they have managed to keep in most of the important things. Elizabeth was very good, but Mr. Darcy was a bit too charming and not nearly haughty enough. The pompous Mr. Collins was a bit kittenish at times, but still he was fairly well in character. The flibbertigibbet Kitty was perfect. The one really false note was where Lady Catherine DeBourgh went to see Elizabeth to turn the tide in Darsy's favor. Mrs. Bennet was turned into a burlesque. She was a silly woman but was not a bit of slapstick comedy. The producers kept remarkably close to the exact dialogue of the book. I have read it at least three times a year since in my early teens, and I have found to my surprise that in many places I knew the book word for word. It is a picture worth seeing. If you have read the book you will not be let down; if you are not familiar with it, you will enjoy the picture and may be interested enough to read it, which will be all to the good.

FAT KEEPS YOU WARM

A proper layer of fat under the skin is a great help in keeping warm as it prevents a loss of body heat and saves the body burning fuel just to keep warm. The thin child lacks this subcutaneous fat and because of this and the fact that a thin child is usually very active it takes all the food it eats to provide fuel enough to stoke the engines to keep the machinery working,and to keep warm. So there is none left over to make fat and the child stays thin. A little extra fat would make a big difference in its comfort. A good breakfast starts the day right and it is surprising how many extra calories can be tucked away with a little planning and catering to the child's likes and needs. Cocoa made from all milk, a little cream on the cereal, a little extra butter and jam or honey will all help provide extra calories. Ten to one the child who does not need these, specially, will be fond of them, whereas, the thin child will want none of them. That is why one of them is thin and the other fat.

A JOB FOR THE WOMEN

Women are keenly looking for warwork. Buying War-Saving Certificates is a good way to help. Bonds and the larger savings are usually handled by the men, but women excel in the small day by day saving. We feel we are runing our home as economically as possible and we cannot save more, but it is amazing what we can do if we put our minds to it. We in Canada, are so much better off than most of the world, that we are able to do more than we are doing. It is a good plan to buy our stamps first, as, if we wait to buy with money saved, we are apt to not have it. Buy some stamps each week, and live on what is left. When we do this, we are not even giving—just lending. Prizes for all occasions could very well be limited to War-saving stamps. Many are already doing this, but not everyone. There are many social affairs beind held to raise money, so see to it that the prizes are the very suitable War-saving stamps. Give them as the theatres did, attached to the card, and that means the rest of it will be filled up. Women could put these stamps over in a big way.

OATMEAL SQUARES

½ cup butter, ½ cup brown sugar, ½ cup cocoanut, 1½ cups oatmeal, ½ teaspon vanilla.

Melt the butter and stir in the other ingredients. Spread in an 11" buttered cake pan and bake in a moderate oven of 350 degrees. The squares are quite soft after they are baked, so let them stand in the pan for a little while to stiffen. These are delicious crisp squares and very easily made.

JELLIED BEEF

3 cups minced cooked beef, 1½ cups stock, 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce, 1 teaspoon scraped onion, ½ teaspoon salt, 1½ tablespoons gelatine, 2 tablespoons cold water.

Add the meat and seasoning to 1½ cups liquid from the boiled beef and simmer for fives minutes. Soak the gelatine in the water and add to the hot mixture. Stir until dissolved. Pour into a mold and chill until firm.

GRAPE PRESERVE

Slip the skins from the pulp and boil the pulp until soft. Put through a colander to remove the seeds. Add the strained pulp to the skins and measure an equal quantity of sugar. Boil until the skins are cooked and bottle in sterilized bottles.

SPICED GRAPES

3½ lbs. grapes, 1¾ lbs. sugar, ½ cup vinegar, ½ oz. cloves, 1 oz. cinnamon. Squeeze the pulp into a saucepan. Tie the spices in a bag and add sugar and vinegar to the skins and boil gently. Cook the pulp and strain to remove seeds. Add the pulp to the skins and cook until thick. Remove spices and bottle.

Qualities in Army Nurses

Matron-in-Chief of Canada's Blue-Uniformed Sisters Tells of Them

By GLADYS ARNOLD,
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP)—Good health, education and professional background, character, adaptability and ordinary common sense are all part of the business of being a nursing sister in the Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps, said Miss Elizabeth Smellie, matron-in-chief.

If, in addition, the girl in blue is of medium height and build, between 25 and 35 and pleasing to the eye, so much the better, Miss Smellie added.

However, regulations state simply that applicants for enlistment must be: British subject, physically fit for military training, unmarried or widow under 45 without children, graduate of recognized hospital and accredited with provincial nurses' association.

Already Canada has 162 nursing sisters serving in England, each of them enlisted only after a thorough health examination that includes an x-ray of the chest. Thousands of applications have been submitted for overseas service, Miss Smellie said, and right now more than 4,000 names are on the waiting list.

"Letters come each day from highly qualified women in Canada and the United States as well who want to serve Canada and the allied cause", the matron-in-chief added.

Nurses today are highly trained and efficient, but not conspicuously better than those of a generation ago. Present facilities for training in Canada are much greater than during the First Great War, and the general educational level is higher, she said.

A nurse, like a soldier, must know the meaning of self-discipline, and not get rattled or emotional in an emergency. Just as in peacetime work, the army nurse must be quick, cool and efficient, able to work with others and possessing the human touch.

So far as appearances go, taking pride in their appearance as well as pride in their work, is desirable. Nevertheless, nursing sisters are not overwhelmed with minute regulations as to detail of personal behavior.

BEAUTY

LOOKING ONE'S BEST

Two qualities contribute to smart appearance — good taste and a highly developed sense of order. Both of these qualities are time and money savers. The woman who is blessed with good taste knows exactly what she wants to wear, picks out a becoming frock or hat with no trouble at all. The one with a sense of order goes about her affairs methodically. She can brush her teeth, take a bath, coddle her complexion, arrange her hair and burnish her finger nails in less time than the untidy woman can get herself out of a dressing gown and decide what she's going to put on. Efficiency, that's what it is. And a brain that is never befuddled.

The woman who is neat and fastidious is always dainty, and daintiness makes a wonderful appeal to the eye. Doesn't make any difference if a woman is shouting in the halls of congress, running a big business, doing professional work or carting around a tray in a restaurant, she should be in topnotch form — scrupulously clean, coiffure neat, nails groomed, feet properly shod.

There's nothing glamorous about a girl if she does not carry an air of vitality, alertness and freshness. The complexion should have that freshly washed, freshly powdered look that makes it qualify for beauty honors.

To be dainty one must bathe daily, never economize on laundry. The daily bath is of cosmetic value because it helps the skin of the entire body surface to function normally as an organ of elimination. It freshens the spirits. You can be dog tired, sick of the world, mad at everybody you know. Have a warm soapy bath and a brisk shower and your mind takes a cheerful slant. Some sort of miracle has worked. The warm water has a soothing effect upon the nervous system and that freshly washed feeling creates a sense of self respect.

Attire should be spotless. Better the $1.98 wash dress spick and span than the expensive one that is soiled. Tarnished elegance is an abomination.

The fastidious woman has no traffic with soiled powder pads; she uses absorbent cotton, throws it away after applying the complexion calcimine. She will wash her gloves if she has to stay up after her regular bedtime to do it. She doesn't depend upon nail polish to hide the fact that she has hangnails and broken nail eaves. She knows that when a woman looks scrubby she feels scrubby, isn't her brave best self at all.

Shaggy hair, ends uncurled, she will not tolerate. She has a regular date for her shampoo and nothing could keep her away from the beauty works at that time. Unclean hair means that a woman cannot step along with the beauty procession! she's out.

DO YOU KNOW?

Who Invented the Buttonhole?

At a public gathering young Queen Victoria presented Prince Albert, who was to become her consort, with a flower from her bouquet. Having no convenient way of wearing it, the prince borrowed a Highlander's dagger, slit a hole in the lapel of his coat, and inserted the flower. At once the tailors began to make bouquet buttonholes in all men's coats.

Etiquette for Clubwomen

By Alice Barber

Clubs, Committees, Executive Meetings . . . war's work amongst women goes on, and every Canadian woman wants a share in it! And yet some of them hold back because they are not sure just how to conduct themselves . . . they don't know just what to say or do at a meeting, they are afraid to hold office, and they aren't self-confident about meeting people, or making suggestions. Meeting people isn't as terrifying as you think, when you realize that the other person is probably scared, too. Remember to say, "How do you do", and not "Pleased to meet you", and to bow rather than shaking hands. Try to catch the name, and don't be embarrassed about asking to have it repeated. Try to relax, be ready and willing to act on suggestions, and listen to everyone's ideas, and people will go away saying "What a nice woman that Mrs. Jones is!" At meetings, address the chair as "Madam president" and rise while speaking. Speak clearly, and face the room. Don't interrupt when another has the floor. Don't despise anyone's suggestions, but try to point out flaws tactfully. If asked to serve on a committee be cheerful about it, and don't be afraid to admit ignorance. Everyone likes to help other people a little.

Mrs. McK., Nanaimo, B.C., wants to form a group of her neighbors into a knitting club, and would like to know how to do it. Should she name herself president? What other officers should she have? Should they have refreshments at the meetings? Who should bear the cost? What should they do about dues?

Gather the group at your home, Mrs. McK., and get them to elect a president, a secretary and a treasurer. The secretary writes all the letters, and takes notes at the meetings; the treasurer collects the dues; and the president plans meetings and work. The dues should be collected by the treasurer at each meeting and should be as small as possible. The meetings could be held at the different members' homes, and tea could be served. Ten cents from each person could be collected and given to the hostess to pay for the tea.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN
Famous Authority on Good Manners and Good Taste

BY THEIR MANNERS YOU SHALL KNOW THEM

Every girl or woman I've ever known has at least two or three ideas about her escort's manners, ideas to which she is particularly attached. By these personal yardsticks she judges a man's manners, for better or for worse. To some men these details of manners may seem trivial "notions", but to the girl or woman they are tremendously important, a source of special pride to her.

Sometimes a girl or woman is particularly sensitive to the way her escort acknowledges an introduction. Tom's gracious "How do you do" makes her proud; Bill's "Pleesedtermeetcher" makes her cringe. The right way Bob lifts his hat pleases her; Jim's half-hearted touch of the brim of his hat is a source of chagrin.

Phil signals his arrival at her home by honking the horn; Peter is the gentleman who knows that the doorbell, not the horn of his car, should announce him. Frank feebly lags behind to let her find the seats at the movies; John is the masterly gentleman who goes down the isle first and finds the best available seats. And so on — with the Big Little Things that make a girl ashamed or very proud of her escort.

Here's a letter from a worried escort about a girl who believes — and it's one of my pet enthusiasms too — that the escort in a restaurant, and not the headwaiter and not the waiter, is the one who should courteously stand behind her chair and "do the honors" of helping her take her seat:

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

One evening recently a girl friend and I dropped into a restaurant in our neighborhood. We were met at the table by a waiter with a menu-card. I stood until my friend took her seat and then I sat down.

Shortly afterward my friend told me, in a very nice way, that I had overlooked something that meant a lot to her. I had failed to help her into her chair. I have never seen this done in small places of this type, and I really don't think it was a breach of form or manners. —George.

Most authorities tell us that it's perfectly proper for a man to let a headwaiter or a waiter assume this privilege of helping a woman with her chair. But this girl friend of yours doesn't agree with this — and neither do I. It may be a "notion" but I too like to see a man in a restaurant do what he would do at a dinner in a home — take his place behind his dinner partner's chair and help her take her seat.

This isn't "high hat", no matter where the man and girl are dining, even if they are just having a snack in a neighborhood tavern. It's just a reasonable and pleasant bow to gallantry.

Retirement of Col. Thomas Sinclair Recalls Feat of Capt. Roy Brown

London, (CP) — Decision of Col. Thomas Sinclair to retire as M.P. for Queen's University, Belfast, recalls he officially credited the shooting down of Baron von Richtofen, German air ace, to Capt. Roy Brown, daredevil Canadian flier of the last war.

Richtofen's plane crashed in a dogfight. He was chasing a young British pilot when Brown got on his tail. The three planes dived earthward, within range of ground fire of Australian troops. The Aussies claimed the Baron as their victim.

Col. Sinclair, then consulting surgeon to the Fourth Army, officially examined Richtofen's body. From a study of the flier's wounds he concluded the German was brought down by Capt. Brown.

They are even suing Santa Claus now! A 9-year-old boy of Boston, acting through his father, has brought a $25,000 damage suit against a department store Santa Claus who allegedly stepped on the boy's foot and severely injured him 5 years ago.

Shocking Sharks

On the picturesque island of Grand Manan, largest of the Quoddy Islands at the mouth of the Bay of Fundy, dwell fisherfolk who control the world's herring market and whose daily lives are spent in supplying its needs, writes Priscilla Hazen in the October issue of C-I-L Oval. The gravest threat to the safety and prosperity of their trade is the shark.

In the past when a shark swam into one of the weirs about the island to plunder the nets of these New Brunswick fishermen, they shot or harpooned it to death. Neither method was without peril. Should the wound not cause instant death — and there must have been countless times when it didn't — the frenzied monster would tug the men in their small boat miles out to sea or, unable to find its way out of the weir, would thrash around inside breaking down the palisaded barriers and overturning the boats, frequently causing damage to valuable equipment and loss of life and limb.

No longer do the islanders fear the approach of this voracious creature! Dynamite brings death and destruction to the shark. Tied to the spearhead of the harpoon is a stick of dynamite into which has been inserted an electric blasting cap. Upon the application of an electric current, a fine platinum wire imbedded in the loose cap charge and connecting the lead-in wires is heated to incandescence. This causes the cap to explode, which in turn fires the dynamite charge.

Today, when this scavenger of the seas comes to satisfy its tremendous appetite, the men aim their lethal weapon at it. As the spearhead sinks into the flesh of its gigantic bulk, they connect the length of wire from the harpoon to a source of electric current in the boat and immediately there is a terrific explosion. A geyser of bloodstained water shoots high into the air and the huge carcass of the dead fish floats to the surface. Thus dynamite helps to maintain and promote still another of Canada's basic industries by preserving the herring market at Grand Manan.

Finds New Lore On Shakespeare

London, (CP) — Alan Keen, specialist in Shakespearian research, believes he has found several hundred annotations in the margin of an old book in the handwriting of the bard himself. The annotations were in a copy of Edward Halls "The Union of the two Nobles and Illustre Famelies of Lancastre and Yorke," found in a parcel of books Keen received from the country.

Keen, who said he was trying to trace the "pedigree" of the historic book, said the annotations "were clearly intended by the person who made them for use in the construction of a play, and, in fact, the greater number of them were actually used in Shakespeare's historical plays".

BOY SCOUT AID AT TRAIN WRECK

When a train was wrecked near Blue River, B.C., and a number of soldiers and others injured, two Boy Scout passengers were promptly on the job rendering first aid. The boys, Scouts Jerry Asmussen and "Scotty" Buchanan of North Battleford, Sask., were themselves slightly injured, but this did not prevent them going at once to the aid of their fellow travelers.

A NEW KIND OF BURGLARY

A new kind of wartime burglary was that reported by a Winnipeg soldier's wife. Returning to her home after a day's absence, a neighbor informed her that two boys had been seen leaving her woodshed, after screwing the door hinges back into place. Investigating, the woman found that a load of wood had been split and neatly piled. The "burglars" were two Boy Scouts who had taken on the job of looking after the soldier's home during his absence.

BOY SCOUTS LEAST COSTLY SOCIAL SERVICE SAYS HAMILTON'S MAYOR

That the Boy Scouts Association does a bigger work at less expense than that of any other organization was the declaration of Mayor Morrison of Hamilton, Ont., at a meeting of the Hamilton Board of Control at which the co-ordination of all local social services was discussed. Said the Mayor: "In my opinion the Boy Scouts are doing a bigger and better work than any other organization, and at less expense".

SCOUTS SNARE RABBITS IN WAR WORK INTERVALS

A competition in snaring rabbits is a spare time activity of Scottish Boy Scouts who are doing their bit at a war timber cutting camp. The tree falling is done by adult axemen, and the Scouts handle the timbers out to the roads ready for picking up by tractors. "Between logs" the rabbit snares are inspected, and the competition includes skinning the rabbits caught, curing the pelts and making useful articles of them. The rabbits of course are added to the Scout menus.
