HER MAJESTY QUEEN ELIZABETH PRAISES CANADIAN FUND FOR AIR RAID VICTIMS

Royal Patron Finds the Results Attained Are "Very Remarkable"

A message of commendation from Her Majesty the Queen has followed promptly upon the announcement that the Queen's Canadian Fund for Air Raid Victims has reached £100,000 in one hundred days, and passed the half-million dollar mark only 115 days after the appeal was opened.

The Queen's message, sent to the Fund's representative in London by Captain Arthur Penn, Her Majesty's private secretary, is as follows:

"Her Majesty desires me to tell you with what great pleasure she has learned of the very remarkable results already attained by the Queen's Canadian Fund for Air Raid Victims, of which Her Majesty is Patron.

"London has suffered little lately; but there is no reason to suppose that the respite will be more than temporary, nor that any sums which can be devoted to this cause will not be sorely needed."

The news of the Fund's achievement in passing the half-a-million-dollar mark was made public last week in the course of Montreal's biggest war demonstration, when the Lord Mayor of London personally addressed the Mayor of Montreal and the people of Canada in a trans-Atlantic telephone conversation, bringing to thousands of onlookers a close feeling of contact with Britain's capital and its brave people.

Lord Mayor's Tribute

Paying tribute to the generosity of Canadians and to the indomitable spirit of the people of Britain for whom he is administering the National Air Raid Distress Fund, the Lord Mayor spoke from London in these words:

"I have heard with the greatest pleasure that the Queen's Canadian Fund for Air Raid Victims has now reached the magnificent total of $500,000.

"This is further striking evidence of wonderful generosity on the part of the people of Canada. The raids by enemy air forces on crowded cities have wrought destruction and suffering to thousands of men, women and children; but the prompt, practical help that my fund is able to give is only made possible by such gifts as you send me.

"I visit all parts of London and hear everywhere magnificent stories of courage and uncomplaining endurance. It is your interest, your love, your generous help which has inspired so many with fresh confidence and hope.

"In their name I thank you and all those associated in any way with your fund. The need will continue as we face the practical certainty of more and heavier bombing."

While the Lord Mayor's stirring words brought London's message to the crowd of spectators, Montrealers themselves underwent a mock air raid, and by means of a recording made during an actual raid on London heard for the first time the wail of the sirens and the whine of planes and screaming bombs.

Londoners' Courage

The central feature of the demonstration was the battered mobile tea canteen, the "Iron Duke", veteran of 30 bombing attacks in months of front-line service, and now touring the Dominion on behalf of The Queen's Fund.

Following closely on the wailing of the sirens and the arrival of C.P.C. men, fire parties and first-aid squads, the "Duke" drew cheers from the crowd as it drew up in the centre of Montreal's Phillips Square, where the smoke of 'bombs' still hung in the air and the activity of firemen and C.P.C. Wardens lent a realistic tone to the city's war demonstration.

As the "raid" drew to a close, and before the crowd thronged round the "Duke" to see at closer quarters this scarred relic of Britain's greatest trial, M. Roger Quimet, Vice-Chairman of The Queen's Canadian Fund, praised in moving terms the staunchness and the courage of the British people, so strikingly symbolized by this veteran from their midst.

Youthful "Veterans"

"This great gathering," he said, "is a fitting tribute to the bravery of the man in the streets of Britain. It is also an unmitigated compliment to the staunch heroism of those veterans in our modern war; boys and girls, still in their 'teens or early twenties, who do their perilous jobs unflinchingly because they realize that in helping to preserve standards of honor and decency, they are shaping their own future and that of their children.

"There is nothing more vividly concrete, no better expression of the will of the British people to finish the job than this mute but strikingly eloquent witness of many an air raid.

"Thanks to your generous response, ladies and gentlemen, and to spontaneous contributions, such as that of the Iron Duke, the Queen's Canadian Fund has today reached a total of $500,000, and this only 115 days after our appeal was opened.

"We are now despatching a further £20,000 by bomber, for the Lord Mayor's National Air Raid distress fund.

"Only a Beginning"

"Let us hope it will be helpful in relieving the unfortunate victims of Sunday's raid.

"But this is only a beginning. We know the generosity of the Canadian people. They are in this fight to the end, because they fully realize it is their fight, as much as it shall be their victory!

"So please let me repeat this promise to the Lord Mayor: We shall go on with this work as long as the need exists; we will work harder still and send more and more money; so long as German bombers fly over Britain, so long will Canadian cheques fly across the Atlantic."

Tireless Watchdogs that Guard the Seas of Britain's Empire

British destroyers, driving through spray and rain, are seen in the "line ahead" formation. Night and day they maintain their unceasing watch over the ocean lifelines, bringing retribution to lurking German U-boats which would prey upon merchant shipping.

Look upon every day as the whole of life, not merely as a section; and enjoy and improve the present without wishing, through haste, to rush on to another.

Chlorination Plant Now Being Installed

Equipment Should Be In Operation Within A Week

WATER PURIFICATION, PASTEURIZATION OF MILK, PUT LACHUTE ON PAR WITH THE MOST PROGRESSIVE HEALTH-MINDED CENTRES

After a long series of delays, altercations and interruptions, plans for the chlorination of Lachute's water supply have now been put in effect to the final stage — the installation of the plant itself, in the building recently constructed east of town. Mr. Mercer, a representative of the Patterson Company of England with distribution centre at Toronto, has been in Lachute this week superintending the work. It is expected the plant will be operating within a week.

Reaching the plant in two mains from across the North River, the water supply is brought into the plant in a single pipe. It is treated with chlorine and again diverted into two mains to the town system. There is a special pipe in the outgoing main to provide for regular inspection, and a color test is employed to check the proportion of chlorine in the water at this stage. Inspection is to be made daily — this being a duty of the officer appointed, who will also care for the machinery and maintain the chlorine supply, which, in liquid form, will come in tanks from the C-I-L Chemical Division.

The chlorine is injected in a proportion automatically controlled by the speed of water flow. The injector pump is actuated directly by the pressure in a so-called Venturi tube, a device which raises the water speed to such extent that the slightest fluctuation affects the pump and the quantity of chlorine injected. Therefore, at whatever hour of the day or night, or whatever the variation in town consumption, the water will be chlorinated consistently to the same standard.

With this system in operation, and with the pasteurization of milk, now in effect, Lachute will be on a par with the most progressive towns and cities in its protective measures for public health.

Specialist Now Here to Make Installation

Easy on Gasoline

Shopping on foot is a little hard on the "dogs", but many women in cities across Canada are willingly leaving their cars in the garage and hoofing it to the shops in order to do their bit to make Canada's voluntary gasoline rationing plan a success.

INDIAN LORE TO BE THEME OF 2 DRAMAS

Program Planned Under Auspices of Argentl. Historical Society

Dramatic Presentations in Outdoor Setting

A program planned by Phoebe Erskine MacKellar for presentation at Carillon on August 23rd, includes two dramatic themes well suited to the historical setting — the stage-site, on the Carillon Museum grounds, being close to the scene of Dollard's memorable conflict with the Iroquois tribesmen. Those who witnessed a similar entertainment last year will recall the success which attended this pageant from a cultural viewpoint.

Presented again under auspices of the Argenteuil Historical Society, the program will include two plays. The first, entitled "Little Square Toes", by Rachel Field, is a tale of old Deer Field, Mass., at the time of the French-Indian War of 1705. Miss Marjory Borton, who collaborates with Mrs. MacKellar in these productions, has spent much time in research among the historians of Deerfield and Salem. The costumes will be accurate in color and design, and the properties used are replicas of articles used at that period.

The second play is a phantasy by Phoebe Erskine MacKellar entitled "Gloosecap and the Animal People". Gloosecap, the Micmac deity portrayed in Lady Roddick's play last year, is the central figure in a sequence of American Indian legends. This is a play to be acted by and seen by children, as it will give them a better understanding of Indian traditions. Griffith Brewer plays the title role.

Particulars of the entertainment will be duly advertised in The Watchman and through posters.

ARG'L DEPUTY RUMORED FOR UPPER HOUSE

Would Mean Vacancy for Local Seat, By-Election in this Constituency

'Political Wiseacres' View the Probabilities

To fill five existing vacancies in the Quebec Legislative Council, the Hon. Geo. Dansereau, M.L.A. for this constituency, is reported among the likely appointees. According to the Montreal newswriter who mentions it, mere "political wiseacres" are authority for this forecast, and lay observers may place their own estimate upon its accuracy.

The only appointee to a seat in the Council since October, 1939, when the present Government came into power, was the Hon. F. Philippe Brais, K.C., Government leader in the Upper House and Minister without Portfolio. Men in this category now considered as having the best chances of elevation to the provincial Senate (according to this source) are Frank L. Connors, Montreal, Cleophas Bastien, Berthier, and Geo. E. Dansereau, Argenteuil. In this event three more vacancies would occur in the Lower House, with consequent by-elections . . . And on this round-about speculation, local enthusiasts are already sizing up good candidates for the honors in Argenteuil County!

Fire Chief Petitions Council for More Adequate Grant to Brigade Personnel

HEALTH OFFICER SAYS TOWN SANITATION MATTER FOR MUNICIPAL ENFORCEMENT

The regular monthly session of Town Council was held in the civic hall last evening, at which were present Mayor H. Lamarche, Aldermen F. S. McGibbon, J. Speight, S. Holt, A. Scott, R. Muir and W. Morrissette.

Minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed.

One of the interesting sidelights of the proceedings was the report of L. W. Armstrong, Inspector from the County Health Unit, which indicated a serious condition menacing the public health in certain sections of the town.

The report raised the question of responsibility as to who had the right of enforcement. Ald. F. McGibbon felt that, as the town was paying upwards of $400 yearly, the responsibility lay with the Health Unit, and Ald. R. Muir backed him up — asserting he was ready to make a motion giving the Sanitary Unit full authority to act on their findings and enforce the cleaning-up process where necessary.

Mr. Armstrong stated his department was prepared to co-operate, but that it was a municipal problem. To which Mayor Lamarche replied that it required good will on both sides and felt sure that if they "got together" many of the complaints registered could be readily overcome. The secretary was instructed to notify both property holders and tenants concerned, that their properties must be made to comply with the sanitation requirements.

Fire Chief Geo. Y. Deacon, in requesting a more adequate grant, for himself as chief and to the members of the Fire Brigade, stated that during its record the brigade had raised or contributed close to $4,000 towards the maintenance and improvement of their equipment . . . (Basis of the Fire Chief's petition will be given in a review of the brigade's activities, in next week's issue).

The Mayor replied that the council would take the matter under proper consideration and assured Mr. Deacon that full justice would be given.

Ald. F. McGibbon brought up the matter of weed destruction in the town, and urged prompt action. He also moved for another salvage collection to take place on Sept 2nd, the proceeds to be devoted to war purposes.

Four lights were ordered for the better illumination of Grace Street.

Accidental Death Verdict Of Jury at Carillon

Omer Gauvin, a 51-year-old Montrealer, was drowned Sunday night while fishing in the Ottawa River below Pointe Fortune dam. Wearing rubber-soled shoes, he slipped from the rock on which he was standing and was swept down the rapids. He was accompanied by 11-year-old Robert Rousseau at the time. Gauvin had spent his week-ends at the Rousseau summer cottage at Pte. Fortune, and had been in the habit of fishing from the river shore.

Friends were summoned to his assistance, but according to young Rousseau, the man sank three times and disappeared in the current.

While fishing at 5 a.m. on Wednesday, Adelard Castonguay, of Carillon, recovered the man's body floating in the river 300 yards off the government wharf at Carillon.

An inquest was conducted by the district coroner, Dr. W. F. McMartin, at Martineau's Hotel, Carillon, yesterday afternoon. Evidence was given by young Rousseau. The jury's verdict was accidental drowning.

GRENVILLE DRIVER FACES CHARGE IN HIT-AND-RUN CASE

War Veteran Victim of Fatal Accident Near Vankleek Hill

Suspected as the hit-and-run driver of an automobile which knocked down and fatally injured Stanley King, 45-year-old war veteran of Grenville, on Friday night, George Daviau, 22-year-old son of Victor Daviau, of Grenville, was arrested Saturday by Traffic Officer H. Jones and handed over to Ontario Provincial Police, who are holding him on a charge of failing to stop after an accident.

The fatal mishap occurred about one mile north of Vankleek Hill. King, an employee on the farm of Kenneth MacDonald, was leading a horse along the highway when he was struck by the hit-and-run car, according to information gathered by Officer Gilmore, of the Ontario Traffic Police. His skull fractured, the victim was found dead on the highway late Friday night.

Spotted by Officer Jones in Grenville Saturday afternoon, young Daviau was lodged in jail at L'Orignal, Ont., and was arraigned before Magistrate Raoul Labrosse on Monday.

The Canadian National Exhibition has cancelled all motor boat racing at this year's show, as a move to join in the gasoline conservation effort being conducted by Canadians at the present time.

DRIVER HELD RESPONSIBLE IN FATALITY

Brownsburg Youth Killed, Three Injured

A jury investigating the death of Roland Forget, 18-year-old youth of Brownsburg who met his death in an automobile collision 6ne mile east of St. Philippe in the early hours of Sunday morning, laid criminal responsibility to Eugene Themens, of 465 St. Johns Street, Montreal, with whose machine a Lachute car bearing six occupants collided . . . The victim was the son of Douglas Forget, D. I. L. employee at Brownsburg.

The accident occurred at 12.50 o'clock Monday morning on No. 8 Highway. Forget was in an auto driven by Maurice Theoret, of Lachute, and which was coming east when it was struck by the Montrealer's westbound auto. Themens was alone in his car. Forget died of a fractured skull in Notre Dame Hospital, Hawkesbury, early Wednesday morning.

Themens, who suffered two cracked ribs and bruises, was brought to Lachute. Treated by Dr. McMartin, he stayed overnight at a local hotel. His car, a 1941 model, was badly damaged. Themens did not appear at the inquest, and Provincial Police were instructed to proceed in accordance with the verdict, and on Wednesday morning, summoned to appear by Provincial Police, Themens reported at Montreal headquarters.

Two other occupants of the Lachute car suffered injuries. Theoret was badly cut on the lip and Maurice St. Denis of Brownsburg required five stitches for a cut over the right eye. They were treated by Dr. Jules Lafleur, of Lachute. Other occupants were Laurier St. Onge, John Guenette and Urbain Paquette, all of Brownsburg. Theoret's car was wrecked.

Five occupants of Theoret's car, including the driver, testified at the inquest, held here yesterday afternoon at the town hall, that Themens was driving in the middle of the road when the crash occurred. This evidence was corroborated by Traffic Officer Howard Jones, of Grenville, who stated measurements taken on the pavement immediately after the mishap indicated the Montrealer's auto was considerably over the white line marking the centre of the highway when the accident happened.

GRENVILLE MAN DIES SUDDENLY, NATURAL CAUSES

Evidence Suggests Heart Attack Caused by Indigestion

A verdict of natural death was returned yesterday by a jury at Grenville enquiring into the case of Arthur Bornais, 52-year-old laborer, who died suddenly Wednesday morning at the home of Jos. Pilon, King Street, Grenville, where he resided.

It was learned at the inquest, conducted by Dr. A. R. Coté of Brownsburg, that Bornais had eaten a meal of canned beans before retiring Tuesday night. Mrs. Pilon, going outdoors early next morning, found the man prostrate and groaning on the veranda floor. Dr. Favier was summoned from the village but the victim was dead before he arrived. Evidence of the physician indicated Bornais had died of heart failure as the result of indigestion.

TWO INJURED WHEN CAR STRIKES A POLE NEAR PTE. AU CHENE

Farmer Smashes Window to Release Occupants of Car After Collision

Two persons were injured and five others escaped unhurt at 7 o'clock Sunday morning when a car owned and driven by Jean Bergeron, of Cornwall, crashed into a telephone pole and overturned in a ditch on Route 8 near the C.P.R. crossing between Pointe au Chene and Fassett. A local farmer had to smash the window with a crowbar to get the passengers out of the car.

Bergeron's mother, Mrs. Joseph Bergeron, of Summertown, R.R. 1, Cornwall, was taken to the General Hospital in Cornwall, where five stitches were taken in a cut on her head. Bergeron himself suffered a bad cut on the forehead.

Traffic Officer H. Jones, of Grenville, investigated.

COASTS HALF WAY HOME TO SAVE ON GAS

Commuter Profits by Long Downhill Grades From Lake Louisa

Also Coasts 16 of 35 miles, Arundel to Lachute

Among interesting experiments to conserve gasoline around this district, is a feat performed by George Graham, of Deacon Motor Sales, in coasting a record distance of eight miles on the 13-mile return trip from Lake Louisa, where he has a summer cottage.

With the engine of his car idle over half the journey, the driver calculates he can make a fair saving in gasoline on this particular run. An accurate knowledge of the grades is needed, of course, but Mr. Graham, like many others from Lachute who have summer camps at the Lake, knows this road very well.

On his first attempt he was able to coast six miles on the downward grades. The second time he made only four miles, but on the third attempt he coasted a total of eight miles.

Other trippers have since been following George Graham's example.

Returning from Arundel on Tuesday, a distance of 35 miles from Lachute, this driver stated he was able to coast his machine over 16¼ miles of the trip. He was surprised to find also that, on the drive from Lachute to Brownsburg which appears mostly uphill, one can switch off the engine for almost half the stretch.

A foreign, visiting prince, invited to a great reception in his honor, arrived, dressed in a commonplace frock coat. Behind him was a gorgeously-uniformed flunky. "Pardon me, sir," said the captain of police, stopping him indignantly at the door, "don't you know enough to let the prince in first? Haven't you any manners in your country?" He had mistaken the brilliantly-attired flunky for the royal visitor!

Monitor of Air-Waves Curbs Illicit Broadcasts

Operators of illicit radio stations haven't a ghost of a chance of survival as long as the FCC continues its alert watch — writes Gene Hodges in "The International Musician". To date, licenses of 13 amateurs have been suspended because the operators were communicating with foreign countries, although none of the 13 cases acted on proved evidence of unpatriotic activities. However, the commission is taking no chances.

An infallible system of monitoring the air-waves to meet national defense requirements has been worked out by the commission. Besides combing the United States ether-waves for suspicious material, a special unit has been perfected that records, translates and analyzes programs which are intercepted. By figuring out the beams on a map, the general location of the offending station can be fixed when two lines cross. From that point radio engineers take over with the monitoring units throughout the United States. Automobiles equipped with the most efficient type of detection equipment are used in the hunt, with the apparatus operated from the battery while the car is in motion or removed from the machine and plugged into the power supply of a building. If the unit narrows to an apartment house or any large building, the officers can, by using a small device hidden in his hand or pocket, proceed from door to door and determine the exact room in which the illegal equipment is being used.

Novel Balloon

This starfish-looking monstrosity is the new giant "Strato-Sentinel" barrage balloon, weighing 1,000 pounds, to protect United States cities in case of attack by bombers. It's seen during its demonstration by the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. at Wingfoot Lake, near Akron, Ohio.

ARP Training in Canada Provides Real Thrills

On a recent Thursday night at North Vancouver, B.C., the District A.R.P. Warden and his helpers had turned out for practice. Squads of auxiliary fire fighters, engineers, police, ambulance sections and stretcher-bearers were all set for a training demonstration when suddenly a violent electric storm broke. Lightning flashed and fires were started.

Reports of these fires came in immediately to A.R.P. headquarters and to the Fire Hall from wardens scattered all over the city and district. A.R.P. squads already assembled in Lynn valley swung into action, manned the fire truck and in a few minutes were on the scene of the first fire, at a sawmill on Seymour Pipeline Road. It was soon under control. Lightning started two small fires up Mountain Highway and these were successfully dealt with by Forestry and A.R.P. workers. The next move was to Seymour River where lightning had struck a tree and started a fire that appeared likely to cause serious trouble. The Greater Vancouver Water District squads had this well in hand.

Although primarily a war time expedient, A.R.P. training thus proved that the service can be adapted to cope with emergencies that would not ordinarily come within its province.

"The training these men have had in recent months stood them in good stead in this emergency" said Chief Warden Capt. G. R. Bates. "All of the squads acted like veteran fire fighters".

Power Alcohol Tested

Fuel Substitute Made from Alberta Wheat

Edmonton, August 3 — Tests conducted with a view of producing power alcohol from wheat grown in Alberta have proved "highly satisfactory," Hon. Solon Low, provincial treasurer, said Saturday.

The experiments followed federal Government appeals for assistance in the development of power alcohol from wheat, due to shortage of gasoline and the big wheat surplus in the Dominion.

The experiments were undertaken by the Alberta Liquor Control Board which is operated as a separate corporation under Government control.

"We have every reason to believe that we have a splendid sample of spirits," said Mr. Low. "We have submitted it to a leading Canadian analyst, who states it is a splendid sample. I am now waiting the detailed analytical report."

Breeders Enter Exhibits For the Ottawa Show

Ottawa—A representative entry of pure bred livestock which will ensure a show well worth seeing at Ottawa Exhibition, commencing August 18, is now assured. Most encouraging feature is the number of breeders whose stock will be seen at Ottawa for the first time.

The sheep show of over 250 animals will be outstanding. Some 15 exhibitors will have animals on display and the greater interest in sheep raising now being displayed throughout Ontario and Quebec should make this section of the fair extremely popular with farmers. Bacon hogs are being featured at Ottawa this year and there are no breed classes. The entry is very fair and the great importance of hogs in the war effort should attract many farmers to the pens.

New cattle exhibitors from Western Ontario and Quebec and two herds from the Maritimes will attract attention in the beef and dairy cattle tents. E. H. Horne, Enfield, N.S. and M. L. McCarthy of Sussex, N.B., will be showing. Ayrshire breeders will have the largest group.

Heavy horses, mares only this year, will be shown by prominent breeders from both Ontario and Quebec. Draft breeds will be shown the first three days of the Fair and light horses, for the horse show, the final three afternoons.

All the live stock will be shown under canvas.

Sugar Beet Factory Is Likely Soon in Quebec

Quebec — A sugar beet factory may soon be built in Quebec Province if the Provincial Government reaches an agreement with the Richelieu Sugar Beet Company.

Premier Godbout said that he believes the Provincial Cabinet will adopt an Order-in-Council authorizing the Government to sign an agreement with the company.

During the last session, the Legislature gave the Cabinet the power to authorize the Minister of Agriculture to enter into an agreement with the company and to spend up to $150,000 for machinery and tools. The Government had already purchased the machinery in the United States.

La Guardia to Run For Third Term

New York — Mayor La Guardia announced he would run for a third term as chief city executive but said his decision was "contrary to my preference".

In a broadcast he declared he had been formally requested to become a candidate by many organizations including the City Fusion Party but that he had not been offered the Republican nomination.

He said he had found the dual role of being New York's mayor as well as National Director of Civilian Defence taxing, but that it was not beyond "human endurance."

A number of mules had just arrived and a recruit made the common mistake of approaching too near the business end of them.

His comrades quickly placed him on a stretcher, and started off for the hospital. On the way the invalid regained consciousness, glared at the blue sky overhead, experienced the swaying motion as he was being carried along, and shakily lowered his hands over the side, only to feel space.

"Heavens, I haven't hit the ground yet," he groaned.

Provincial Transport Co. Changes in Personnel

Mr. W. S. Hart, president and managing director of Provincial Transport Company, has announced the retirement of Mr. Henry R. Mallison as vice-president and general manager of that company. Mr. Mallison, who remains on the Board of Directors, has long been identified with the transportation industry, and in more recent years has played valuable part in the development of motor coach services in Eastern Canada. He is president of the Dominion Motor Coach Association, and on the Executive Committee of the Canadian Transit Association.

With the retirement of Mr. Mallison, Mr. H. J. Curtis, treasurer of the company, has been appointed vice-president and treasurer, and Mr. J. R. Collins, assistant general manager, becomes general manager. Mr. R. G. Perry continues as passenger traffic manager and Mr. Roch Tremblay, B.A., LL.D., as secretary. Mr. Curtis, who has been associated with Provincial Transport Company since its inception, is also director and treasurer of Colonial Coach Lines Ltd., Kingston City Coach Company Ltd., and Sherbrooke City Transit Co., Ltd., and a director of Champlain Coach Lines, Inc., and Champlain Bus Corporation. Mr. Collins is also a director of Colonial Coach Lines Ltd., Kingston City Coach Company Ltd., and Sherbrooke City Transit Co., Ltd.

PROTECT THE SEED FROM GRAIN MITES

Damage to crops by insects and fungus diseases is measured in millions of dollars annually in Canada alone. In order to keep the ravages of these pests within bounds, the grower must be ever on the alert and ready to adopt control measures devised by the scientist whose investigations reveal new and improved methods and pesticides for dealing with the menace. Changing conditions bring new problems, and a pest which has been considered of minor importance in the past may become a formidable threat when new circumstances favour its activities.

In Western Canada the grain mite has become so serious a menace that a warning has been issued in poster form by the Division of Entomology, Ottawa, and displayed in every post office of the Prairie Provinces by order of the Postmaster General. The poster gives instructions for dealing with mite-infested grain in storage, the chief precautions to be observed being proper ventilation, turning of the grain and the use of the fanning mill if necessary. There is a special recommendation that an organic mercury dust treatment be given seed wheat and a caution against the use of formalin for the purpose, since formalin greatly weakens germination of seed damaged by mites, whereas the organic mercury dust improves it and, besides, will repel mites.

The reason why the mites menace has developed so acutely in the west is the hastily improvised storage bins and elevator annexes constructed to accommodate the overflowing wheat crop of 1940, also the rather moist condition of much of the grain going into storage. Consequently some heating occurred and favoured the development of the mites which, in turn, produce more heat by their operations. Since the damage caused by the mites extends to the germ part of the kernel and is therefore more serious in grain intended for seeding, the obvious means for protecting seed grain against smut, root-rots, as well as mites, is its treatment with an organic mercury dust in fall.

Already some progress has been made with laughing gas and tear gas — two extremes, one might say — and it is hoped that before the harvest of 1941 a cheap, effective treatment may be available. There is a saying that "big fleas have little fleas on their backs to bite 'em; little fleas have lesser fleas, and so ad infinitum". Of late years much progress has been made by the introduction of parasitic insects which prey on the larvae of others. There is also a cannibal mite that feeds on the common grain mite and smaller hairy mite, but unfortunately the cannibal is in the minority.

One of the problems to be solved is the discovery of an economic chemical treatment of grain for feed, which will eradicate the mites and leave no poisonous residue.

PULP AND PAPER FOR FREEDOM

DOING A WAR JOB!

ACROSS CANADA, from Nova Scotia to British Columbia, there are 83 pulp and paper mills. These mills are doing a war job. Their products are used directly for war purposes and for the Nation's business.

They are also exported to provide Canada with the money she must have to pay for munitions. Last year, pulp and paper exports were bigger than our exports of mined gold or wheat or nickel.

The owners of these mills are tens of thousands of individual investors. Back of the mills are the forests — a resource of the Nation. Working in the mills and the forests is the industry's army of over 100,000 Canadians.

In one way or another, every Canadian has a stake in pulp and paper. Every Canadian citizen and every one of the industry's workers, from forest camps to head offices, can be proud that this industry has a big job to do in the fight for freedom — and that the job is being done and being done well. Everyone has a duty to keep it rolling at full speed.

The Vital "Last Barrel"

New developments in Canada are making Dominion citizens more and more alive to the truth that this modern world war knows no front line. There are phases of this war which must be fought within the borders of Canada — and must be won here. Canadians are discovering that they can take part in active warfare even while carrying out their ordinary civilian lives.

The urgent necessity of cutting gasoline and oil consumption drastically is another factor in bringing us to that fuller realization of the fact that we are all in the war.

The statement made some time ago by A. G. Gardiner in "John Bull' now has a new meaning in this country. He said, "The war will be won by the side that has the last barrel of oil."

If we accept the truth in this statement, we will find it just a little easier to forego some of the comfort and pleasure to be derived from the operation of a passenger motor car.

It's An Ill Wind . . .

If one overlooks the high-speed accidents which happened last week-end, one might observe in other quarters a voluntary saving in gasoline; and one might further speculate how this trend should react, in slowing the hectic pace of leisure pastimes.

Three incidents came to our attention . . .

Our neighbor spent a very pleasant Sunday afternoon just sitting in his garden ! He admitted it was the first time this summer he had sought relaxation in this simple way. Perhaps reclining in the garden, with a good book, had never occurred to him before as a Sunday afternoon diversion. And probably he felt better for the experience.

Returning from the summer cottages at Lake Louisa, trippers have more frequently remarked on the time the journey takes them — thirty or thirty-five minutes flat being the best records. One good citizen, however, confided Sunday night that he had been told a motorist could coast six miles out of twelve, downhill on the homeward trip. He had tried it that evening — and proved it, saving considerable in gasoline.

Again last week-end, two motorists had family business involving a 200-mile jaunt. Happening to learn of each other's intentions, they linked up and drove one car instead of two.

A little more of this reasoning and we shall be entering into the spirit of the thing. A little less rushing around, and the Sabbath may fill a better purpose in restoring the equanimity and lowering the fever rate.

"A New Calendar for A New World"

The present calendar is an obvious bottleneck that is hampering the nation's defence program, declares The World Calendar Association in a pamphlet just issued. Revision of the calendar, so that payrolls, accounts, bills, purchases, working days, reports and schedules no longer must be constantly adjusted to one another to compensate for the calendar's deficiencies, is recommended as the remedy. The pamphlet, "The World Calendar, a New Calendar for a New World," discusses at length the advantages of the World Calendar of 12 months and equal quarters from the viewpoint of industry, labor, government, law, retailing, agriculture, finance, science, education, the home, religion . . . and everybody.

The work of every Government department would be expedited by the adoption of The World Calendar, the pamphlet points out. Data like tabulations of employment and industrial turnover, statistics of domestic and foreign trade, trends in crops and markets, all tax collections, and financial statements of every kind inevitably are affected by seasonal variations. To chart the trends based upon comparison of one year with another is a tedious and inaccurate job when the length of the quarters varies, or when, for instance, the number of Saturdays in a month may be four or five, producing a 25 per cent variation in Saturday figures.

The proposed World Calendar, as outlined in the pamphlet, consists of four quarters of 91 days, 3 months or 13 weeks each. Each quarter begins on Sunday; ends on Saturday. The first month in each quarter has 31 days; each of the other two months, 30. Each month has exactly 26 business-week-days, plus Sundays. Corresponding periods in any two years could be compared without adjustment of any kind. The calendar would remain the same year after year. That is, any given month date would always be on the same day of the week. To take care of the 365 days needed in an ordinary year and the 366 needed in a leap year, a World Holiday would be added at the end of December each year, and at the end of June in leap years.

Under a calendar of this sort, there would be no trouble remembering dates, the pamphlet shows. The first Thursday of November, for example, would always be the 2nd. The first day of school would always be the same date in September. Many holidays could be set so that they always came as part of a long week-end.

January 1, 1945, is the date when The World Calendar Association hopes to see the new calendar go into effect, as it could be exchanged for the present calendar at that time without inconvenience. In the 11 years The World Calendar Association has been working for calendar revision, 14 nations have given their official approval to the plan.

Uniforms for women enlisting in the auxiliary forces are expected to be similar to those worn by men. With the addition of suitable war paint, of course. —Exchange.

That carburetor which was said to enable cars to travel 100 miles to the gallon would be a mighty handy contrivance to have about at this time. —Exchange.

Salvage — in Song and Verse

The United States is following Canada's lead. She is going salvage conscious. She is planning to increase the army of people, numbering 300,000 who have in the past made a trade of diligently ferreting out waste, collecting it, preparing it, and channelling it back into the maw of industry.

The first of the United States salvage efforts is being directed at aluminum. The drive for collecting it is now under way.

Every housewife is contributing old kettles, frying pans, pots, picture frames, parts of disused vacuum cleaners and washing machines. As H. I. Phillips writes in his "Once Over" column in The Washington Post —

Mary had a frying pan,
A kettle and a pot;
But very seldom used 'em for
She ate outside a lot.

She gave them for the land's defence —
Now when a bomber wings
Its way o'erhead she claps her hands
And cries: "There go my things !"

American men are also being asked to contribute aluminum articles for the drive. Ash trays, golf clubs, desk implements, shoe trees, automobile accessories, may be contributed. Mr. Phillips has an idea here, too —

I had a cocktail shaker
For which I had much use
And oh, the deadly wallop
That shaker could produce !

But now it's joined the army —
It's in the Flying Corps;
If ever it hits Adolph
He'll know that war is war.

The war is the reason for the U. S. salvage drive. It has disrupted industry at home and shipping abroad. There is a threatened shortage of certain types of raw materials, partly due to decreased imports, and partly due to a switching of industrial effort. Canada is helping her neighbor start her salvage work.

"The United States Office of Production Management has been in touch with us several times," report Canadian Salvage officials. "It is watching how we go about the collecting of secondary materials and how we assure their return to industry, on a nation-wide scale."

Salvage is not a new thing in the United States. The annual salvage figures there are huge. Not less than twenty million tons of scrap iron and steel are turned back to industry each year. Reclamation of more than two million tons of waste paper is part of the annual salvage chore. Brass and copper stand high on the list with reclamation of a quarter of a million tons of those metals. The same amount of scrap rubber goes on the market each year.

But reports reaching Canada indicate that these figures have to be greatly increased if serious shortages are not to slow up United States war production.

Canada's own salvage work goes forward apace. The latest development is a special effort to round up aluminum. This aspect of the salvage drive is being handled by the Red Cross. It will centre on the large cities and on the rural areas tributary to them. While the work gets under way, Canadians should memorize another of Mr. Phillips' whimsical parodies —

Old Mother Hubbard
Went to the cupboard
To check on her pots and pans;
The aluminum ones,
She knew were like guns
In helping defensive plans.

Aluminum is an essential war material. It has a big role to play when 4,000 pounds go into a fighter plane and more than 28,000 go into a bomber. Well may Canadian housewives contribute their old and worn out aluminum kitchen ware. Well may they sing:

Frying pan, frying pan,
Where have you been?
I've been to London
And back again:
I'm part of a bomber
That flies o'er the sea . . .
Who'd ever have thought that Could happen to me !

Bicycles on Highway Dangerous

During the past week, at least two young men were killed while riding bicycles and another lad at Rougemont was badly injured. The wonder is that there are not more bicycle riders killed or injured.

In this province especially, the highways are so narrow that it is only due to extra care on the part of motorists that the accidents are kept as low as they are.

It is amazing the way that bicyclists go along, often two or three abreast, utterly unconcerned as to whether cars are going to hit them or not. It must be an acquired habit to be so totally indifferent to one's own safety.

No one is allowed to drive a car until they are eighteen years old, and have a knowledge of traffic rules. Yet many youngsters can take a bicycle and ride it on the highway without any regard for their own safety or the safety of others.

The argument is that a car can do greater damage if it hits anything. Yet without receiving so much as a scratch a bicycle can force a car to take to the ditch to avoid striking it, and thus cause damage to the car out of all proportion to the value of the bicycle as well as endangering the lives of the occupants of the car.

—Granby Leader Mail.

A health article states that three per cent of domestic accidents occur in the bathroom . . . Vocal cords — or dental plates ?

The service stations which for some years have been the "bright spots" on the streets at night, have moved into the blacked area for the duration. —Exchange.

Making History in Argenteuil
From Fyles of The Watchman

60 Years Ago
Friday, August 5, 1881

On Monday over 2,000 Roman Catholics passed through Lachute on their annual pilgrimage to Ste. Anne de Beaupré, via the Occidental Railway.

Potatoes cannot be procured in Lachute for love or money.

Sheriff Roussille, Returning Officer for Argenteuil, has issued a Proclamation of Election, to take place Aug. 15th.

Owing to difference of opinion regarding the building of a new Methodist Church in Lachute — there being already a substantial brick church and a large hall in regular use, and yet a few worthy members are not satisfied with the location of either of these places — it has been suggested that they build it on wheels, then they can move it about just as they please.

"What is the bore and stroke of your motor ?" was asked of a Maxwell owner . . . . "I don't know," he replied, "I don't buy cars on figures any more. I buy them on what they've done." Touring car $850.—From a Maxwell Motors ad, listing W. S. MacKimmie as Lachute agent.

In a severe electric storm the barn of Mrs. Wm. Hume, Bethany, with all machinery and 25 tons of hay, was burned; also two barns with hay, implements, poultry and pigs, belonging to Chas. Moore, were destroyed at Hill Head.

Mr. Jos. Palliser, whose son was recently reported misisng, was greatly relieved this week to receive a letter from him stating he is a prisoner in Germany.

The death is reported, from St. Andrews E., of Mrs. Ireland, widow of the late F. C. Ireland and mother of the Rev. J. Ellis Ireland, Pt. St. Charles, the Rev. A. Austin Ireland, Lachine, and the Rev. Chas. Ireland, Maisonneuve.

A family picnic of the McOuat, Pollock and Drew families was held Wednesday in Mr. J. W. McOuat's maple grove.

MAKING THE TOOLS OF MODERN WAR

Take a passing look at an explosive bomb — a 500 pound one. It is 36 inches high as it stands on end, and 13 inches across. It is made of cast steel, black and forbidding in appearance, shaped much like the churns seen in the country in the old days when dairy butter was an article of commerce, and before barrel churns were invented. Loaded with its proper complement of T. N. T. and ammonium nitrate, sealed, with the firing appliance and the directive fins attached, it is not difficult to see in the eye of the mind, the devastating power of this instrument of war produced in Canadian plants.

A filling plant is as clean as a hospital ward. It is absolutely clean. The visitor wears clean rubbers provided by the plant. These rubbers are used for nothing else but walking on clean floors. Matches, lighters, and other trinkets are left behind when the visitor starts on his trip of inspection. The clothes of the workmen are clean. They wear a standard uniform. The men leave their suits behind when they leave the plant. They are trained to quiet, efficient work. In a place where carelessness might mean loss of life and serious danger to property, carefulness becomes an ingrained characteristic. The enormous size of the plant, the extent of the operations, the movement of traffic in and out, gives a profound and lasting impression of the tremendous activity developed in Canada as a result of the war.

When shells leave the factory where they are made, they are clean. But at the filling plant they are cleaned again — they might have taken on some extraneous substance on the journey. They are then poured. This is done in several operations. A smoke box is added. The men who are watching the firing of these shells want to know where they hit. Smoke will prove the indicator. When the filling operation is complete, they are sealed, varnished, ready for shipment. They are stored in arsenals, ready for the journey to their final destination. When they explode on the field of battle they exert a pressure of 50 tons to the square inch.

All munitions plants have certain common characteristics. They occupy large ground areas. The buildings are low. They employ large numbers of men — 3,000 in a shift, — two shifts to the day in one plant. They are away from large business centres; but life seems to go on a good deal more calmly in a munitions plant or shell or bomb loading plant than in the ordinary busy hive of industry.

The guns of Napoleon fired one shot per half hour at Waterloo. The French 75's in the Great War ran 20 to 25 per minute. The Bofors anti-aircraft gun fires 120 per minute. Time, which brought these modifications, changed also the relative size of munitions plants from one war to another — put six men at work on the home front to one on the war front. These are the factors which have increased tremendously the material contributions to this war in comparison with the wars of the past.

BOOK REVIEW
By HOWARD S. ROSS, K.C., LL.D.

"HE RIDES THE SKY"
By Irene Baird

"The Gods we do homage to in this war are very young gods."

Mrs. Baird was born in Cumberland, England, and came to Canada in 1919. She lives in Victoria, B.C. Her first novel, "John", was published in 1937. It was a Canadian best-seller, and was published also in the U. S. A., England, Australia and Sweden. Her second novel, "Waste Heritage", came out in 1939. It is one of the first books to treat of Canadian economic problems in so blunt and fearless a fashion.

Mrs. Baird has been broadcasting talks on Canadian wartime affairs. She also lectures and writes for some of our newspapers. She would like to lecture in the United States upon Canadian-American relationships, and also to get back to England to report, for some Canadian newspaper, the activities of British women in connection with the helpful war-work they are doing.

The author knows the better sort of sophisticated slang used in Canada, Great Britain, and the U. S. A. and uses it with telling effect.

Here is a small sample: "The blokes I'm really sorry for are the wretched mine-sweepers, and there's a bunch of boys I wouldn't trade jobs with for a million dollars. At least, if we get ours it's the quick way and we've had the satisfaction of popping somebody, but in those rundown kipper cans they have time to watch the periscope appear, wait for the bang and next thing they know they're thrashing around in the blasted cold water, poor little mugs. Now if you want to knit for someone outside of the Air Force (who would want to do a thing like that?) you have my permission to snarl your worsted around these shivering bodies, but for gosh sakes lay off pampering the glamour boys that ride around in cruisers and still kid themselves that Drake saved England. What do they think would have happened if Queen Bess had got a load of the Air Force? She'd have said, 'Wow ! Come up and see me some time !' and scuttled the whole damn fleet."

Pete pays his respects to the censors as follows: "On the chance that low-down blighter who cuts out the best bits in my letters to improve his own dull efforts gets his clammy hands on this, we might fix up a little system. If I can't tell you where I am, I can at least let you know that Aunt Fanny has taken a run up to (deleted by censor) for her asthma and is sleeping two in a leaky tent. That ought to fool him, the old busybody. But just in case he doesn't fool easy, let me know if he has been at his dirty work and whether this arrives with any chunks gnawed out."

"He Rides the Sky" should and no doubt will find its way to many airmen in Canada, G.B., and the U. S. A., and how they will enjoy it. My review copy will soon be on its way (with the compliments of The Macmillans in Canada) to our son, Murray Ross, air gunner with an R. A. F. fighter squadron flying over England at night.

"Gosh, I don't see how I broke the whole dozen! I only dropped 'em once!"

It May Be A Lie !

It is a public duty and a matter of self protection for all Canadians to circumvent the enemy Fifth Columnist. German subversive activities were instrumental in the subjugation of various European countries and enemy organizations existed in all of them. It would be futile to assume that similar organizations do not exist in all free countries.

Canadians should be constantly on guard against enemy lies, false rumours and alarmist reports. If gathered in conversation, seen in print or heard on the radio, it is wise to check their authenticity.

If a statement is credited to the radio the following details should be learned: time and date, station, wavelength, language, where broadcast was heard and most important of all, by whom. If a report is credited to the printed word, the name of the newspaper or publication and its date should be established. If rumours are credited to conversational sources every effort should be made to trace the original source of the rumour together with the names of the persons present during the original conversation. Although it may be difficult to trace the origin of a rumour of this nature, the fact that it has originated through an individual, of a particular type, may in itself be of some value.

Rumours cannot always be officially denied — this is particularly true of reports on the loss of ships. An official denial frequently does more harm than good since it gives undue prominence to a rumour that would perhaps not otherwise have got into print. It may also provide the enemy with information which he is seeking, e.g. the disposition of the ship in question. An excellent example of this was the faked distress message from the Empress of Australia which was directed to a U.S.A. Commercial station. The enemy obviously hoped to obtain from official sources a statement as to the vessel's position. The best thing to do on hearing a rumour of this, or any other suspicious variety, is to report it immediately with all possible details as to the source, etc., to a service authority.

PAPER PLANTS SET MACHINE SHOPS TO AID WAR INDUSTRIES

Take Sub-Contracts to Speed Production

Pulp and Paper Mills Machine Shops Make Tools of War

Montreal, Aug. 4 — The sub-contracting of portions of war orders, highly developed in England under the term "bits and pieces", and coming to the fore in the United States under the term "farming-out", is rapidly becoming an important factor in speeding Canadian industrial production of war supplies. Sub-contracting brings into use reserves of idle equipment, including that sometimes to be found away from congested areas of population. As the war is plaeing an ever increasing burden on manufacturing facilities, this expedient of utilizing small units of production will be resorted to more and more.

An excellent example of sub-contracting is seen in the volume of business now being handled by the machine shops of the Canadian pulp and paper mills. These shops are operated to maintain machines and equipment at the mills. However, this only requires about 48 hours a week — leaving machine tools free for other work for some 96 hours in a 6-day week.

Since one of the most serious delays in war output is caused by lack of machine tools, the pulp and paper industry decided to mobilize its machine shops and place all available time at the disposal of war work. A special committee of the Canadian Pulp and Paper Association was formed to co-ordinate the different mills' shops and allocate orders where possible. The result has been highly successful. Several primary producers have been able to let sub-contracts, on portions of their orders to these machine shops, thereby speeding the job and easing the strain in their own plants.

It is understood that this plan of utilizing all possible machine tools available, is well regarded in Ottawa.

The Canadian pulp and paper industry has also instituted a training plan, whereby workers in the mills are able to secure short practical training in machine shop work. The mills have already supplied a large number of skilled workers to war industries.

The pulp and paper industry is Canada's largest employer of labor and the steps being taken to utilize all machine tools and to train skilled workers are regarded as a contribution to the war effort.

Careless Smokers Cause Most Fires

"Smokers' Carelessness" caused by far the largest percentage of the 46,629 fires in Canada which destroyed property worth $22,735,264 in 1940, and this fact again emphasized the need for greater vigilance in the battle against this needless waste by fire, it is asserted in a statement released by the Canadian Underwriters' Association.

Nearly 30 per cent of the total fires last year were attributable to this cause. The property lost as a result was worth $1,118,605.

Outside of fires originating from unknown causes, (5,876, involving the destruction of property worth $10,560,212), stoves, furnaces, boilers and stove pipes started 4,988 fires and the property loss from this cause totalled $2,057,428.

Third on the list of causes were defective and overheated chimneys and flues. Against this heading were listed 4,321 fires with property loss of $1,220,864, followed by explosions caused by fireworks, friction, hot grease or metal, steam and hot water pipes which were responsible for 3,670 fires causing property damage of $1,645,378.

Electrical wiring and appliances caused 2,826 fires and property loss of $1,760,276.

GODBOUT ANSWERS CRITICS ON QUEBEC WARTIME EFFORT

Premier Replies to Press Attacks Aimed to "Insult Province"

Quebec, Aug. 1 — Premier Godbout, replying to what he said were press attacks against Quebec Province's war effort, called on its citizens today to do their "full duty without paying attention to the extremists . . . who are of a kind both as to their methods and the result they aim at even when at loggerheads."

Mr. Godbout's statement to newspapermen read :

"In spite of their constant manifestation of loyalty and patriotism, the great majority of the citizens of Quebec are a prey to attacks and insinuations on the part of extremists of divers colors.

"The one furnishes arguments for the other. For questionable reasons, one daily and a number of weekly French-language papers are doing everything in their power to create the impression that we are but grudgingly doing our duty, and to little purpose.

"Naturally the fomenters of discord, in the throes of yellow journalism and a disgrace to some few English-language publications, seize the opportunity to confound the people of the Province of Quebec with the false interpreters of her national conscience.

"There are, amongst our neighbors, some who distort facts with an unwholesome pleasure, who put forth the most specious arguments to set the other provinces against us. For instance, there has just been brought to my attention the following: 'As to personal sacrifice, Quebec is far behind the other provinces. The work at high wages in some munitions plant is no sacrifice.'

"It is easy to reply to this scurrilous item which appeared in a small English-language sheet. It is known that most of the munition plants are refusing to employ bachelors who are fit to serve in one or the other of the three branches of our armed forces. It might also be added that it is an essential duty to keep our own and Allied fighting men supplied with all the munitions they need. According to Mr. Churchill and the Earl of Athlone, our skilled workers and technicians are rendering quite as important services to the cause of civilization as are our thousands of soldiers, who have been enlisting voluntarily ever since the outbreak of war to risk their lives on the field of battle.

"Every intelligent, right-minded citizen knows that, and I see no good purpose to be served in treating further with fanatics, on whatever side of the fence they might be. The people of the Province of Quebec, and the head of their Government, have something else to do with their time and their energies. I ask only that each and every one of us continue to do his full duty, without paying attention to the extremists in both camps, who are of a kind, both as to their methods and the result they aim at, even when at loggerheads."

On a voyage across the ocean, an Irishman died and was about to be buried at sea. His friend Mike was the chief mourner at the burial service, at the conclusion of which those in charge wrapped the body in canvas, preparatory to dropping it overboard. Nothing else being available, a large lump of coal was placed with the body to ensure its sinking.

Mike's cup of sorrow overflowed, and he tearfully exclaimed:

"Oh, Pat, I knew you'd never get to Heaven, but, begorry, I didn't think you'd have to furnish your own fuel."

Sydney, Nova Scotia

THE CAPITAL OF CAPE BRETON

On one of the best harbors in Canada stands Sydney, a busy coal and steel city which has been called the Pittsburg of the Dominion. But if such a designation brings to mind a dingy, uninteresting place the visitor to Nova Scotia's second city is in for a pleasant surprise. Sydney occupies a fine site and is the center of a great resort district rich in scenic charm. Yatching, canoeing, trout and salmon fishing as well as deep sea fishing for swordfish and other monsters of the deep occupy the visitor while the region also has a rich historic background.

Under the French regime Louisbourg was the chief town of Cape Breton. When English immigration reached large proportions following the Revolutionary War the island, said to have been visited by the Norse adventurers and John Cabot, became a separate colony Colonel Frederick Wallet Desbarres, a colorful figure who had won distincton in the British army, was the first governor. He fixed his residence at Spanish Bay, naming the place Sydney in honor of Thomas Townshend, Lord Sydney, British cabinet member who had been instrumental in creating the separate province.

In the following year, 1785, three vessels laden with Loyalists entered the harbor. Others followed and then in the first quarter of the nineteenth century came the great influx of Scottish settlement which so profoundly influenced the subsequent culture and development of the island. But in 1820 Cape Breton became a part of Nova Scotia and Sydney lost its status as a capital.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SUNDAY SERVICES

"Spirit" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon to be read in Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, August 10th.

The Golden Text is from Ephesians 5: 9. "The fruit of the Spirit is in all goodness and righteousness and truth."

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "No man hath seen God at any time . . . Hereby know we that we dwell in him, and he in us, because he hath given us of his Spitrit." (I John 4: 12, 13).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passages from the Christian Science textbook "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "God is individual, incorporal . . . He is all-inclusive, and is reflected by all that is real and eternal and by nothing else. He fills all space, and it is impossible to conceive of such omnipresence and individuality except as infinite Spirit or Mind. Hence all is Spirit and spiritual." (Page 331).

UNDULANT FEVER TOPIC DISCUSSED AT WOMEN'S MEETING

Frontier Women's Institute Addressed by Local Physician

Cushing — An interesting social and public health meeting was held by Frontier Women's Institute, in the Stone Hall, Cushing, on Tuesday of this week, with Dr. F. W. FitzGerald of Lachute, as guest speaker.

In speaking of Undulant Fever, Dr. FitzGerald said it was a comparatively new subject, with just a few paragraphs about it being found in the textbooks. This fever could come from three sources — cows, pigs, and goats. Dr. FitzGerald advised his listeners to see that their pork was always well cooked. As well as from drinking the milk of cows having the disease, persons could contract it by milking those cows, if they had any cuts or abrosions on their hands.

A presentation of silverware was made to a bride-elect, Miss Mary Starnes, whose marriage takes place in the near future . . . Mrs. FitzGerald was presented with a bouquet of gladioli on behalf of the Branch, by little Vivian Heatlie.

A jumbled-letter contest was staged. Three perfect papers were turned in by Mrs. J. L. Maw of Montreal, Mrs. J. Chretien of "Ingleside", and Miss Edna Young of Montreal, who with Mrs. FitzGerald all were given prizes. . . The verse when properly assembled read thus :

Public Health is more than wealth
A precious boon to man,
An asset grand, a fortune great,
And part of Creation's plan.

This verse was composed by one of the members.

A social was arranged for to be held Wednesday evening, August 13th, on Mr. D. McKenzie's lawn; the McKenzie homes on the Brownsburg-St. Philippe road.

WHY DO WE SAY "WORTH HIS SALT?"

In early Roman days, a soldier was given so much salt, every day, as part of his pay. Later, this custom was abolished and money was given instead. It was then called 'salarium', a word which has now become salary. Thus a man who is 'worth his salt' is worth the salary paid him.

PERSONAL REALIZATION OF DUTY WOULD BRING SPITFIRE CAMPAIGN TO CLIMAX

Have You Done A Worthy Share?

Bringing the realities of air warfare somewhat closer, the mock raid on Montreal, and eloquent messages on behalf of the Queen's Fund, were heard by many radio listeners here last week. From the scene of action, the Lord Mayor of London telephoned a forceful plea and impressed the great benefits conferred by Canadian generosity upon those in direct need.

Our aid to the homeless and afflicted goes hand in hand with our zeal to avert the tragedies that beset them. This we can do only by furnishing the material — war machines and aircraft—to beat off a relentless foe. Many are doing this in their daily task; they are making the munitions and armaments of war. Many are helping voluntarily, by donating to the free-will gifts of planes, ambulances and canteens . . . But still many have neglected this means by which the humblest may help.

— Have YOU done your share? Consider first — in terms of the sacrifices made by fellow Britishers fighting for your freedom — have you an adequate realization of what your share should be? . . . If your candid answer to these queries does not "measure up", you may still give material help in the final lap of the Argenteuil Spitfire drive. This is a local enterprise in which we may experience a local pride, and every citizen should count himself a part in the Spitfire effort.

Let everyone in Argenteuil — man, woman or child — be sure that he has done his best before the campaign closes.

Marriage

Lessard — Brigden

Calumet, Que.—In Trinity Anglican Church, Calumet, on July 30th, the marriage took place of Lillian Anna Maude, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. E. Brigden, to Mr. Geo. Henri Lessard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Mathias Lessard, of Grenville.

The Rev. Hawes performed the ceremony and Mrs. D. R. Kalbfleisch played the organ. The church was decorated with dahlias, gladioli, asters, phlox and baby's breath. The chancel steps were topped by an arch of bridal roses.

The bride came up the church aisle on her father's arm to the strains of the Lohengrin Wedding March. She was attended by her sisters, Miss Janet Brigden as maid of honor, and Miss Elsie Brigden as bridesmaid.

The bride's brother, Mr. Woodrow Brigden, of Maxville, acted as best man for the groom.

The ushers were Messrs. Ronald and Harry Brigden, brothers of the bride, also Mr. Geo. (Laddie) Foreman.

The bride was gowned in white pointe d'esprit net over white taffeta, made with sweetheart neck, short sleeves and full skirt, with a short train. Her finger-tip veil was of tulle illusion with a Juliet cap and orange blossoms. She wore long silk mittens and carried white lilies and bouvardia.

The maid of honor was gowned in pale blue pointe d'esprit net over blue taffeta, pink over-the-face veil fastened with pink flowers, and long pink mittens, and she carried a nosegay of pink flowers.

The bride's mother, Mrs. Wm. E. Brigden, was gowned in a cream crepe ensemble, a leghorn hat trimmed with bois de rose flowers and velvet ribbon, white accessories and a corsage of Johanna Hill roses.

The groom's mother, Mrs. M. Lessard, was dressed in black silk crepe Morocain with grey Wattris straw hat trimmed with black, and all black accessories. She wore a corsage of red Johanna Hill roses.

After the reception which was held at the home of the bride, the happy couple left by motor to tour the Gaspé Peninsula. For travelling the bride was dressed in heavenly blue sheer with white silk turban, white coat and white accessories. On their return they will reside in Grenville.

Out of town guests included Mrs. J. H. Black, great-aunt of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Eug. Lanthier, Mrs. Geo. White, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Brigden, Miss Alice Demers, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Mott and Miss Jeannette Chaban, all of Montreal; Miss Mildred Brigden, of Buffalo, the bride's sister, Mrs. J. British Motor Transport Penetrates Godjam

In pursuit of the Italians, British Army Motor Transport made a 700 miles journey through the Godjam area, the most difficult country that such transport has ever penetrated. On this nightmare trip the British force encountered jungle fires, rain, heat, bamboo forests and cold. When Dambacha was reached the natives, as is shown in this picture, were paid their wages.

NEW METHOD SIMPLIFIES TREATMENT OF PILES

One of the most disabling, bothersome and discouraging ailments is the condition known as piles. Anything that appears to be a simple, permanent treatment will be welcomed by those who have this trouble. Thus, new research from the University of Illinois Medical School seems to point to a successful treatment for piles.

Several methods of treatment for piles are used by various physicians. In some cases, the use of a preparation which may shrink the piles to some slight degree may have a temporary benefit. Operation for removal of the enlarged veins is often carried out and seems to bring complete relief.

Another method is the use of injections of various substances. Drs. Theodore F. Reuther and Carl O. Almquist of the University of Illinois have carried out treatment of this condition using injections of a solution of sodium psylliate.

Before the injections of the solution are given, the patients are carefully examined with the sigmoidoscope, an instrument made up of a tube with lights, making it possible to look into the bowel. After a careful inspection of the piles to note their size and location, the patient is placed on his left side and the solution injected with a syringe and needle. The material is not injected directly into the piles but rather into the lining membrane of the bowel around them.

If the piles are large, only one of them is treated at a time. The injection treatments are given at weekly intervals until the entire condition is cleared up.

Following the injection of the solution, there is some swelling around the piles. The area remains swollen for about three days and then begins to decrease in size. By the end of the second week after treatment, all of the swelling has disappeared. As a result of the injection of the solution, scar tissue forms around the piles and, as this scar tissue shrinks, the piles are obliterated or made smaller.

From the results they obtained, Drs. Reuther and Almquist believe that with the sodium psylliate solution less is required to bring about a good result than with other preparations. They also found that it was much easier to control any bleeding present when the sodium psylliate was employed. Furthermore, fewer injections were needed to bring about a cure than when other solutions were used.

It would seem, from the patients treated, that good results may be obtained by the injection of sodium psylliate solution. It is not probable that all cases can be treated in this way but probably a number can expect a great deal of improvement.

Blood Pressure

"Can a man fifty years old who is overweight have low blood pressure? I always thought that fat people had high blood pressure — A. G. F."

Answer

It is not unusual for fat persons to have low blood pressure. Just why the condition has occurred, however, cannot be stated. It may be due to some weakness of the heart muscle or to some glandular disturbance. A careful examination should be carried out to find the exact cause so that the proper treatment may be suggested.

Answer

Usually in a mastoid infection there is swelling behind the ear together with pain and tenderness in this area. Fever may be present. An X-ray of the mastoid may show some destruction of the bony structure and some cloudiness of this area. If a mastoid infection is suspected to be present an immediate examination by a physician is advisable.

SIGN THE PLEDGE TO Save Gasoline

Let Your Car Wear Proudly This Patriotic Sticker!

Go to your friendly neighbourhood service station or your local garageman today. A surprise awaits you. He has changed. He will be as courteous and thoughtful as ever —glad to see you—anxious to do anything and everything he can to help you. But he is no longer a gasoline salesman. He is a gasoline SAVER. He will urge you to buy less instead of more. He will point out ways and means of saving gasoline.

He will tell you all about the "50/50" Pledge to cut your gas consumption by fifty per cent. He will invite you to sign. This proud and patriotic sticker for your car will mark you as a member of the wise and thoughtful band of car owners co-operating with the Government to save gasoline.

This is entirely a voluntary movement. It is not rationing. This the Government hopes to avert. But we are faced with a critical shortage of gasoline due to the diversion of tankers for overseas service and to the growing needs of our Fighting Forces.

There is no call for panic—no need for alarm —but this war is being fought with gasoline and we are fighting for our very lives. Sign the Pledge today and continue to save fifty per cent of your gasoline consumption.

It is also vitally important that you reduce the use of domestic and commercial fuel oil.

REMEMBER: The slower you drive, the more you save!

SEEING CANADA

Canadians are going to know a lot more about their own country before this war is over. The Armed Forces are moved about to different sections and they seldom finish their training without having been some distance from home. Many of the camps are near little places where there is not much to do by way of amusement and the boys are inclined to blame everything they find wrong on the province. It is never as good as their home province. Their mothers and their sisters and their cousins and their aunts are doing a lot of visiting and are spending time in parts of the country they never saw before. There are quite a few camps in the Maritimes and I will see in the Ontario papers that so-and-so is visiting their husband or their son, at such-and-such a place in the Maritimes. It is a good thing as our country is so large; few of us are really familiar with it.

HAVE LETTUCE DRY

One of the frequent causes of poor salads is that the lettuce is wet. Any dampness remaining on the lettuce dilutes the dressing until it becomes sad and uninteresting. Lettuce should be prepared early so that it has a chance to dry and to crisp. If you are using head lettuce, cut out the core and hold the head under running water. The leaves will separate and you will have those perfect lettuce cups. However, if your aim is to get quantities of lettuce into your family for the good of their health, then the idea is not so good. Keep the head of lettuce whole and break it apart and then there is more lettuce in each piece and as it does not look so much they eat more than they think they do. Tricks in all trades. Lettuce of the leaf variety cut from your own garden is better if it is brought in ahead of time and washed and put in a cool place to crisp. If you haven't a refrigerator, put it in a closely covered can, a lard pail is a good one, and put it in the cellar. One of my friends has a lettuce bag. It is made of cheesecloth and she puts the washed lettuce in it then hangs it on the line to let the gentle breezes shake it dry. The main thing is to have your lettuce dry.

FROZEN MEAT

It is difficult to buy meat for a small family and buying in small quantities is usually more expensive. I have found I can freeze meat in the electric refrigerator to good advantage. Chops, steaks, or sausage are suitable. Sometimes I buy more than I need for use that day, or when I have a large roast, such as a loin roast or a leg of veal or lamb, I cut off a slice. I put these in the top tray of the refrigerator and use when needed. I do not thaw them out before using but pop them into a very hot pan. We find the frozen meat is usually more tender than the meat that has not been frozen. It is more convenient to cut steaks or larger pieces into individual servings before freezing. I have stored trout, smelts, and lobster, the same way

SHRIMPS IN MUSHROOM SAUCE

1 can shrimps, 1 slice onion, 1 can condensed mushroom soup, 2 tablespoons butter, ½ cup milk, 1 can peas.

Melt the butter and cook finely chopped onions until tender but not brown. Add the soup, milk, and peas, and heat. Drain the shrimps and remove the black line, add to the mixture and heat. Stir carefully to avoid breaking the shrimps.

HONEY

I heard this recipe for clover honey over the radio from a Maritime station. It seemed odd to me but another listener said her mother used to make it and they all loved it. Eating customs differ even in the different parts of our own country. One of the surprising things has been the difficulty in getting honey in the Maritimes. Come August, I long for the new honey. When we were in Halifax I blithely tried to get it but there was none to be had. I could not get any until well in October. What honey you do see is in glasses and you have to hunt around to find it sold in quantity, in pails. They even sell it in the drug stores. There should be a good market for honey from other provinces in the Maritimes but it needs advertising and education into the possibilities of the use of honey. Apparently there is little honey produced down here. Those six or eight ounce jars of honey seem strange to me.

CLOVER HONEY

50 heads red clover, 1 dozen rose petals or 50 heads white clover, 2 dozen wild rose petals, 5 lbs. sugar, 2 cups boiling water.

Put sugar and water together and boil exactly five minutes after it comes to a boil. Add clover and rose petals and boil 1 minute exactly. Strain through a wire strainer and then through a cheesecloth. Bottle.

"Currant" Events

By Frances Lee Barton

Keep up with your "currant events" as well as with current events. As the various members of the currant family appear on the market or ripen on your own grounds, roll out the jars, turn the fruit into jelly or jam, and later on you'll have a barrel of fun.

A combination of red currants and ripe apricots makes a very delicious jam. Here is a recipe that will take care of about eleven glasses — but when you taste this jam you will see to it that at least another batch is prepared.

Apricot and Currant Jam

4 cups (2 lbs.) prepared fruit; 7½ cups (3¼ lbs.) sugar; ½ bottle fruit pectin.

To prepare fruit, pit (do not peel) about 1½ pounds fully ripe apricots. Cut in small pieces and crush thoroughly or grind. Crush thoroughly or grind about 1 pound fully ripe red currants. Combine fruits.

Measure sugar and prepared fruit into large kettle, mix well, and bring to a full rolling boil over hottest fire. Stir constantly before and while boiling. Boil hard 1 minute. Remove from fire and stir in bottled fruit pectin. Skim; pour quickly. Paraffin hot jam at once. Makes about 11 glasses (6 fluid ounces each).

Sauce !

London — The secret recipes of Mr. Auguste Escoffier, one of the world's most famous chefs, are bringing dollars to Britain's war chest.

In London they have carried on making his sauces throughout the blitz with such success that twice as many bottles of his Sauce Diable and Sauce Robert have been shipped to the United States as in the days of peace.

WHY "EATING HUMBLE PIE"?

"Humble" in this case did not originate with the meaning "meek" or "modest". It is a corruption of "numbles" or "umbles", which signifies the offal of deer. This meat was made into a pie given to the servants who took part in the hunt. Thus to "eat humble pie" is to play the role of an underling.

Corn on the Cob

By Betty Barclay

Can you boil corn? Sounds like a silly question doesn't it? Of course every woman serves corn on the cob. Why shouldn't she know all about it?

All right ! Do you add a touch of salt to the hot water? Do you husk your corn the night before, and place it in the refrigerator? Do you boil your corn at least twenty minutes? Do you drain it and let it stand for a few minutes before taking it to the table? After you have answered these questions to yourself, read the following perfect directions for green corn.

Boiled Green Corn

To have this vegetable in perfection, the husks should be left on until just before it is to be boiled. Plunge the husked ears into boiling water and cook from seven to twelve minutes, according to size of the corn. Do not salt the cooking water, as this toughens the corn.

Lay a napkin on the serving plate. Pile the corn upon this in a pyramid, cover it with the corners of the napkin and send it to the table.

Never use salt in the water in which green corn is boiled. Either use plain water, or add a touch of sugar instead of salt.

SILK STOCKINGS IN ENGLAND !

The story of what happened to a pair of Canadian silk stockings, sent as a present to England, is told in a letter from Suffolk received by Miss B. J. Johnstone of Swift Current, recently. Canadian women who read it may appreciate their sheer stockings a little more.

Here's the letter from Miss Johnstone's sister: "You will be interested in hearing the latest chapter regarding those silk stockings you sent me. I happened to be in a shop last week where the saleswoman showed me a pair of awful looking lisle stockings that had just come in, at 3/11d (about 88 cents). I mentioned my present that I had thought of giving away. 'Oh! don't do it!' said the saleswoman, 'they are worth a goldmine now!'

"I explained that mine came from Canada, as all silk are not to be obtained over here. It gave me an idea. Every town and village throughout England has its 'War Weapons Week' as you have probably read, with whist drives, dances, raffles, etc. This happened to be our week, so I offered the silk stockings for a raffle to be held in the school. They were very gladly accepted. The woman who won them was not the 'silk stocking leg' type, but the schoolmaster's wife, having examined them previously (being a member of the committee) had set her heart on them. Her husband had won a War Savings Certificate for 7/6 (about $1.70) for a prize at the whist drive, so he gave the thrifty woman that in exchange for the luxurious silk stockings his wife so desired. Wasn't she delighted, as she was down to her last pair! . . . .

"I know you will be proud to think a gift from you—and a real Canadian article—played a little part in a village 'War Weapons Week' and will be glad I passed them on to this cause."

It's a strange kind of war, this, with everything topsy-turvy and women playing as important a part as soldiers at the front. In England they're giving up luxuries like silk stockings — an item which might seem unimportant to a mere man, but is an invaluable asset to femininity. Here in Canada women are helping by wearing sheer stockings, just as attractive and flattering as ever, but made of new materials and manufactured as part of the national war plan.

Should Child Have Tonsils Removed?

There is substantial evidence that in about 20 per cent of children the tonsils are either enlarged or diseased and therefore have an unfavorable influence on the physical development of the child. Such tonsils should be removed.

The tonsils have assumed an important role in the economy of the child during the last 30 years. The beneficial results following removal of tonsils in selected cases has well justified the procedure.

It has been shown that markedly hypertrophied tonsils and tonsils that are repeatedly inflamed, giving rise to attacks of tonsilitis and swollen neck glands, frequently impair normal physical development. When such a condition exists after four years of age it is advisable to have the tonsils removed, with the expectation that at least 50 per cent of children so treated will be materially improved.

It is undeniable that the child population of the country has experienced better physical development with fewer interruptions due to mild and prolonged illnesses in the last 30 years. Infant mortality has been reduced and fatal illness in the school age occurs less often. While the widespread application of public health procedures such as pasteurization of milk, the safeguarding of water supplies and care of foods, and the health education of the public has had the most influence in this direction, it must be admitted that eradication of unhealthy tonsils has played a considerable role in the physical improvement of the race.

The single question to be determined in respect to the tonsils of a child is: Are these tonsils diseased? If so, they should promptly be removed.

SPREADING HIPLINES

Poor Missus Hippy ! What wouldn't she give to be rid of her adipose panniers ! Of course, she should have fought fat cells when they first descended upon her, but how did she know that they would keep on multiplying? A few extra pounds one year, more pounds the next. Every year frocks a size larger. Dieting looked like a sore trial, exercise did not appeal. That's the usual story.

Repentance doesn't help; one must get active. Missus Hippy will tell you that she is a light eater, Maybe so. But what she eats is the kind of food that builds human suet; she can't get away from the fact. Occasionally overweight is due to some glandular disturbance, but those cases are rare. Stop feeding fat cells and they will evaporate. Eat just enough good chow to supply sufficient energy for the day's work, and no more. It is when one has more fodder than one needs that the body stows it away in the form of bumps and curves.

When layers of fat form they are pretty solid; that's why one should catch 'em young. To demolish this unnecessary upholstery requires a carefully planned diet, regular exercise, the spirit and courage of a Spartan.

The mid-section of the human frame is the favorite lodging place for excess flesh, possibly because that portion of the anotomy gets the least amount of exercise, legs and arms doing a certain amount of work each day. When the hips are large, there is usually a tummy roll and buttocks are extended. If such a state is your particular beauty grievance, heave to and be rid of them.

There are any number of simple exercises that will tighten up muscles, and on strong fibers fat cells will not linger. By changing from one exercise to another, one won't find the reducing task tedious. Before starting take measurements. Measure the waist, hips and thighs. Every inch deleted will encourage you to continue your crusade for the svelte and slender figure.

Begin with the jumping jack movement. Stand erect, feet fairly close together, hands at the sides. Leap into the air, lifting the arms, clapping the hands together above the head. Come down with the feet wide apart. You won't be able to do it very lightly at first, but don't lose heart. You will be conscious of a strong muscle pull on hips and thighs.

Lie on the back, hands under the waistline. Lift the legs high, so high that the buttocks are away from the floor. Then do a pedaling movement.

Have a regular time for this work out. Finish by twisting the body at the waistline, turning from side to side.

Cut down on fats, starches and sweets; they are your arch enemies.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

WHAT TO WEAR WHEN YOU GO DANCING

Dear Mrs. Beeckman :

1. When a young girl is invited to go dancing somewhere (not a special dance) how does she know if she should wear an evening dress? 2. If she does wear an evening dress, must she wear hat and gloves? —T.

1. It's the proper thing and now always taken for granted, for us to inquire about what type of dress we are expected to wear when we go to any kind of party. Don't have any hesitation about asking "What shall we wear?" If he says, "Let's dress. I'll wear my white dinner jacket", you'll know that you are expected to wear a summery dance dress and no hat. But if he says, "Let's not dress. I'll wear a business suit," you should wear a street-length afternoon dress and hat.

2. If you wear an evening dress (probably an informal one during these warm months), you wouldn't wear a hat or gloves.

MUST IDENTIFY SELF

Dear Mrs. Beeckman :

Please give me some advice on this business of signing one's name so as not to be taken for something you're not. I dislike always writing (Miss) by my signature on a note or letter, but otherwise I am always taken for a Mister. What's the rule? My name, you will admit, could be taken for a man's name as well as a woman's name. —Leslie.

I'm afraid, dear girl, that you'll just have to go on writing "Miss" in parentheses at the left of your signature when you sign letters to persons who wouldn't have any other way of knowing how to address a reply to you. There are many Marions, Sidneys, Shirleys and others with the same problem.

DRESSING FOR WEDDING

Dear Mrs. Beeckman :

1. Is it correct for me to use letter-paper bearing my husband's initials for business and general correspondence?

2. Is it proper for guests at a church wedding to wear long dresses? The ceremony is to be at three o'clock in the afternoon, with a reception following at the home. We are not relatives. —E.

1. Your husband's initials on use letter-paper carrying your own or business letters, indicates, of course, that the letter-paper is his. For your social letters you should use letter-paper arrcying your own initials, or else use plain white paper. The paper on which you wrote to me, with your name and address printed at the top, is appropriate for business and professional letters, for family letters and for certain informal types of letters.

2. In some communities we see many women wearing long dresses to afternoon weddings and receptions. In large cities, women customarily wear street length dresses to afternoon weddings. But anywhere a woman guest at an afternoon wedding will be correctly dressed if she wears a street-length dress of a material and color inclined to formality, with an appropriate hat and well-chosen accessories. In other words the type of costume that she would wear to a formal luncheon or to a tea.

(Mrs. Beeckman will pe glad to answer questions on Good Manners submitted by readers).

Tom: "My daughter has a queer way of getting her own back on the telephone people."

Dick: "What's her method?"

Anticipate Fine Weather For Lake Louisa Annual Regatta, Saturday, Aug. 9

The annual regatta will be held at Lake Louisa on Saturday afternoon, August 9th, when the usual aquatic events will take place. It has been customary to give small cups as prizes, but this year on account of existing conditions, war stamps will be given, together with small pennants.

Everyone is invited to attend and will be made welcome. Why not bring along a basket and make a day of it ! Refreshments may be obtained at Habib's Store.

Distribution of prizes will be made in the evening, when there will also be a display of fireworks.

Fine weather is anticipated for this event. However, should conditions prove unfavorable, the regatta will be held the following Saturday.

Coat of Many Colors Dyed in One Process

(By Mail)

London — A new synthetic fibre, making possible a novel range of fabrics, has been produced in Britain after four years' research.

As a result, color effects which could be had only by blending and weaving can now be got from a single bath of dye after the fibre has been woven into the piece with wool or with other viscose synthetic fibres. It is equally effective for knitting yarns and made-up garments, of both worsted and woollen types — for men's suitings and for cloths for women's costumes.

When blended in this way with other fibres, the dyeing properties of Britain's war-time discovery are, it is claimed, unique.

Summer Camps Become Year-Round Residences

Practical Canadians Cut Down Costs by "Winterizing" Country Cottages

Year-round occupancy of summer cottages is another direct result of the war and of the current housing shortage in Canada, according to reports from a number of popular resorts in the Dominion. While there is nothing in these reports to indicate a trend away from the cities to suburban centres, there is nevertheless a growing number of people who apparently have decided it is more practical to "winterize" their summer homes for year-round living than it is to close them up for the greater part of the year and pay rent in the city.

Undoubtedly one of the reasons for this practical decision is the simplicity and economy of weather-proofing and insulating cottages with modern building materials. Today any cottage with patent siding, clapboard siding or wood shingles can be surfaced with asphalt laminated insulated sidings and made as comfortable and cosy as any town house. Insulated sidings applied directly over wood or shingles serve a triple purpose at one labor cost. They insulate weather proof and do away with maintenance costs once and for all. Rock granule finished insulated sidings have colors glazed to the rock granules before manufacture for permanent brightness.

A variety of surfaces is available in these sidings and attractiveness is one of their main features. Insul-brick sidings come in 12 different colors and blends, with white or black mortar line, and there are numerous colors available in insulated shingle sidings as well as stucco and other designs.

By transforming a wooden wall into a weather-sealed insulated wall these sidings create a warm interior in which the heating cost is low and rooms may be evenly heated to every corner. Any carpenter can apply these sidings without disturbing the home occupants and the complete job, started now, could be completed long before winter comes.

"What qualifications are required to make a successful card player?" asked Mrs. Bowling casually.

"Well, it's hard to say," replied her husband, thoughtfully. "A man must be cool, calculating, crafty, cunning, and have a touch of meanness in his disposition."

A steward stood at the gangway of the liner and kept shouting for the benefit of the arriving passengers: "First class to the r.ght, second class to the left."

A young woman stepped daintily aboard with a baby in her arms. As she hesitated before the steward he bent over her and said in his most chivalrous way, "First or second?"

"Oh," said the girl. "Oh dear, it's — it's not mine."

Boy Scouts The World Over

THE AIR RAID SERVICE HABIT

When a night air raid warning sounded in a northern English town, members of a Manchester Scout Troop, in the district for a training competition, at once reported to the local control centre and offered their services. They stood by until the all-clear.

A STORY OF BRITAIN'S SPARTON BOY SCOUT FIRE FIGHTERS

Months of hard training put the 2nd Saltash Scout Troop in possession of an Auxiliary Fire Service trailer pump, for which their fire fighting team was made entirely responsible. In emergency it was to be hooked as a trailer to the Scoutmaster's car.

The air raid, and the call finally came. One of their number, Scout Edward Deacon, 17, was struck and rendered unconscious at the start of the raid. Recovering, he was about to follow his brother Scouts when a nearby garage burst aflame. He ran and assisted three women who were fighting the fire. Then he climbed to the roof, to chop loose a section in order to save the adjoining building.

Another A.F.S. Scout, Bernard Doidge, 17, with the fire pump party, received a severe shrapnel wound in the back, the bullet coming out below the stomach. He made no complaint, his only concern being for the other Scouts and his own family.

Two bombs straddled the fire the Scouts were fighting, and Scout Donald Cummings was killed. His brother Sydney, 16, was wounded in the arm and leg, but made no mention of the injuries as he set off for a stretcher party. He dragged himself half a mile through the height of the blitz, but collapsed and was himself picked up by an ambulance.

"Another boy at once volunteered to take Donald's place on our fire pump team," reported the Scoutmaster.

LADY CUBMASTER SHARES SCOUT AWARDS FOR BLITZ GALLANTRY

That the Lady Cubmasters of Britain are playing their courageous part alongside the Boy Scouts and Scoutmasters is evidenced in the citation which accompanied the presentation of the Scout Gilt Cross for gallantry to Cubmaster Esther Rosewarne:

An enemy plane flew low over the bungalow in which she was visiting a friend one evening and a bomb fell close at hand, bringing the ceiling down upon them. Freeing herself, Miss Rosewarne commenced the search for her brother and her friend, and a baby who was also in the house. Together they were making their way to safety when another large bomb fell nearby, again burying them in debris. Once more extricating themselves, Miss Rosewarne's friend took care of the baby, her brother commenced rescue work a short distance away, while Miss Rosewarne herself started to dig out a man who had been buried up to his neck.

Several times the plane returned and machine-gunned the spot while she was at work but she continued until she had freed the man with the exception of one of his feet, upon which there was a large piece of stone, too heavy for her to move. With the help of her brother the man was finally extricated and a passing car was stopped to take all the rescued people to hospital.

JUNIOR BOY SCOUT "WOLF CUBS" ADOPT A REAL CUB

Hearing that some of the animals in the local zoo were to be killed, as a war measure necessity, Wolf Cubs of All Saints' Cub Pack, Bloxwich, England, asked if they would be permitted to adopt a wolf cub. The request was granted, and junior Boy Scout Wolf Cubs are now helping take care of their little animal namesake. They christened him To-To.

Comedian George Formby Does Turkish Stuff for Film at Smyrna Fair

(By Mail)

London — A British Pavillon is duly to appear in the heart of the Middle East when Izmir's famous Fair opens on Aug. 20 at Smyrna, with battles by land, sea and air threatening or in progress at each point of the compass.

News films will be flown from Great Britain to give Turkey the latest news of the war. Britain at War is the main theme and the cinema its chief medium. In the cinema, audiences of 200 at a time will be shown Britain's fighting services, the war effort in industry and agriculture, the Empire's vast resources in raw materials, travelogues of Empire scenes, and "The Lion Has Wings".

All, of course, have been done into Turkish. George Formby will be in Turkish too. Among the lighter films is "Let George Do It"; for, in the Middle East as elsewhere, George has long since eclipsed Charlie Chaplin as the people's star.

Apart from the movies, Britain's Pavillon will give the story in photographs and books of life in Britain and the Dominions and of British achievements in industry, the social services, livestock breeding, education and war-time organization. A quiet and reasoned outline of the civilized alternative to Hitler has been specially written by Sir Wyndham Deedes.

As souvenirs for visitors to the Pavillion 150,000 picture postcards of Britain at War, her Royal Family and her Prime Minister have been sent out to Turkey.

Canadian Service Men Take Full Advantage of Salvation Army Centres

Organization Gives Good Account of Undertakings

Toronto — Canadians in uniform had stepped through the doorways of Salvation Army Red Shield service centres, huts, and canteens in the Dominion 13,717,394 times from the outbreak of war till June 30th last, according to the semi-annual report of Brigadier William Dray, War Department secretary, here today.

"These figures sound big — and they are, of course — but behind every one of them is a little human story. Our boys find the auxiliary services providing an intimate link between their new life in the navy, the army, and the air force, and the life they left only a short time ago in business, at home — in short, normal Canadian living. We know how much they appreciate it," declared Brigadier Dray in his report.

Asked what the 13,717,394 figure actually meant, Brig. Dray said: "It means that our boys in the various Canadian camps have walked into our centres that many times for a snack or a soft drink at the canteen, a game of ping pong or checkers, a 'session' in the library or chapel, to write a letter, to seek fatherly or Christian advice, to attend a religious service or see a movie, or perhaps just to 'drop in and see what the boys are doing."

The report shows that a total of 475,776 indoor recreational events have been offered the boys in these Red Shield centres, also 11,690 outdoor sports events, ball games, and so forth. Sixty-one libraries were operating on June 30th last, with 17,736 books in circulation, and 292,692 magazines available.

Since the outbreak of war, 2,195 religious services have been held in S. A. Red Shield centres alone, with a total attendance of 359,734. During the month of June this figure was 276 services and a total attendance of 31,708 for the Dominion. Movie programs show an attendance of 1,730,761 at 3,953 different shows, while 1,564 concerts, in the majority of cases sponsored by local volunteer citizens' talent, drew an attendance of 549,232.

A total of 96,887 cases under the heading of "personal services rendered" and 4,925 "family cases helped" are recorded in the report. Officials would not comment on these figures, beyond saying "It's generally pretty personal, and we don't publish details where the boys put their confidence in us."

Canadians are good letter writers. In the one auxiliary service, the Salvation Army, covered in this report, it is revealed that 8,857,209 envelopes and 11,245,173 sheets of letter paper have been used by men in uniform since war started. Articles of clothing mended or repaired total 38,557, and given away, 270,969 — the latter the work of thousands of Canadian women across the country who are knitting and working for Red Shield Women's Auxiliaries.

The latest report of the Overseas Supervisor, in charge of Canadian troops' recreational centres outside Canada, shows that 2,154 movie programs, 261 religious services, and 549 other concerts had been provided by Canadian Salvation Army officers up to April 30th.

The Overseas Supervisor also revealed that Canadians had written 2,980,569 letters home or to friends in England, and had used 5,286,040 sheets of stationery.

ARVIDA WITHIN RENT CONTROL AREAS

COST OF LIVING INDEX REACHES 111.9

Highlights in the Week's National Events

One of the most ambitious recruiting campaigns ever held in Canada has come to a close. After a series of successful demonstrations on Fletcher's Field the motorized column left Montreal almost seven weeks ago to tour Military District No. 4. Since that time an aggregate of more than 100,000 miles has been tallied by the 55 vehicles in the column, whose tour brought them to Lachute, for a demonstration at the exhibition grounds.

The efficiency of the drivers and mechanics with the convoy is proved by the fact that no damage was caused to any army vehicle throughout the tour. Driving over some of the roughest roads in the province, this is an enviable record.

The three mobile kitchens which accompanied the convoy have prepared more than 30,000 meals en route and as the column rolled into each night's camp, the 250 men found a hot meal waiting for them.

Leslie Powell, Montreal Gazette staff writer who visited The Watchman recently, tells anecdotes which reflect the marked impression achieved by this tour. Mr. Powell accompanied the convoy on certain sections of its itinerary . . . One week after visiting Ste. Agathe where a show was given, he recounts the column passed through that town en route to Mont Laurier. A group of youngsters was seen playing in a field, some engaged in unarmed combat, others with two play-wagons hooked one behind the other and an air rifle mounted in the rear one — their interpretation of the show they had seen a week previous.

In St. Jerome, the Greek proprietor of a restaurant insisted upon giving each of the men who had patronized him one night a large package of cigarettes and to the one married man, a box of chocolates for his wife. He told how he had not heard from his family in Greece for many months and his little gifts were no doubt his gesture of appreciation to the men who have volunteered to wipe out the brutish force which had brought such things to pass.

More than 30 two-hour shows and 100 40-minute demonstrations were given during the tour which gave thousands of Quebeckers a chance to see how Canada's modern mechanized army operates. Crowds of 8,000 and 10,000 were not unusual in towns whose population was not much more than that. Trainees in all the training centres of the district had the opportunity to see displays of artillery, machine gun, basic training, advanced training and other branches of army life.

One of the details arranged by this party was the parade of the convoy through the streets of each town upon arrival. In most cases the mayor, alderman, members of the clergy and civic officials joined Lt.-Col. W. E. Mackay, Royal 22nd Regiment, officer commanding the column, at the saluting base and reviewed the men and vehicles as they passed. Boy Scouts, Girl Guides, Civilian Protection Committee, Canadian Legion, Cadets and other organizations often turned out to control traffic and join in the opening march past of the show.

How many recruits can be traced directly to the efforts of the column it is impossible to say, but the officers and men of the show have one big point in their favor. They have given the people a fine opinion of Canada's Army.

With the tour completed, the men have been enjoying a well-earned rest. Today, Thursday, the demonstration will be given in Verdun. Following that the column moves to Ottawa for a week to participate in the annual fair, the final appearance.

TEST BLACKOUT IN MAJOR TOWNS AND CITIES OF QUEBEC PROVINCE

A test blackout will be held sometime between September 15 and October 1 next in "all cities and towns of any size" in Quebec Province, it is announced in Quebec.

J. Gordon Ross, provincial Air Raid Precaution officer who heads the Civilian Protection Committee, said a full list of the municipalities affected has not yet been completed, but that the blackout will cover all areas in which the CPC has organized groups.

The test will be the first general blackout held in the province. Quebec, Three Rivers, and Montreal, however, held a joint blackout last June 9 and the test was described as "a complete success".

LORD WILLINGDON, FORMER GOV. GENERAL OF CANADA, DIES IN LONDON

The Marquess of Willingdon, former Governor-General of Canada, died in London on Tuesday, at the age of 74. He had been ill with pneumonia.

The Marquess of Willingdon was an aristocrat with a fine appreciation of the virtues of democracy. That he was a first-class diplomat is amply attested by his success as Governor in succession of two of the three Indian presidencies; his term as Governor-General of Canada which left pleasing memories on all sides; and his appointment as Viceroy of India in delicate times for that Empire.

He was the first Governor-General in Canada to represent the Crown rather than the British Government. He took over in India when that country was in turmoil

YOUNG CYCLISTS HIT BY AUTO ON HIGHWAY NO. 8

Driver Failed to Stop After Accident

A hit-and-run driver struck two boys on a bicycle near Chatboro last Thursday evening around 8 o'clock, seriously injuring one of the lads.

The victims were Richard Roy, 13, of Chatboro, who was taken to Dr. Smith's Hospital, Hawkesbury, with a compound fracture of the left thigh, and Paul Emile Lafleur, 15, also of Chatboro, who escaped with minor bruises and shock.

According to information gathered by Traffic Officer Howard Jones, of Grenville, the boys were riding west, the Lafleur boy steering and the other sitting on the cross-bar of the bicycle, when an auto going in the same direction hit the bicycle and hurled both boys into a ditch.

Gifts from Kings In Indian Church

Montreal, August 11 — Visitors to Montreal display a keen interest in the Indian Reservation of Caughnawaga on the south shore of the St. Lawrence near Montreal. The majority are surprised on learning that these modern Iroquois are steel workers and have a keen interest in gadgets. In the village church there are numerous links with the old days. For instance, the altar now in use was brought from France in 1680, while two pictures within the edifice were gifts of Louis XIV and Charles X.

Watchman Represented At Quebec Meeting

The Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association, a trade organization of over 500 of Canada's weekly newspapers, is holding its annual convention in Quebec this week, commencing today. Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Giles of The Lachute Watchman are attending.

In addition to the pleasure of going to these meetings, we have found that meeting other publishers of the Dominion and talking shop has been of tremendous value in operating our newspaper.

We are endeavoring at all times to give Lachute the best newspaper we can put out, and we are going to take advantage of this opportunity to hear some of the finest speakers on newspaper problems that have appeared on our program for many years.

We note that our local business and professional men attend the conventions representing their respective lines of business, and we believe that the investment in time and money pays big returns. So we'll be away from home for a few days enjoying a holiday with other progressive weekly publishers, and at the same time studying how this paper can better serve its readers.

TWO KILLED AS TAXI HITS TREE AT ST. HERMAS

80-Year-Old Woman And Son, Residents Of Namur, Que.

Crash Occurred Early Monday Morning

Mrs. Emilie Gerard, 80, of Namur, and her 51-year-old son, Desire Gerard, were almost instantly killed on Highway No. 8 west of St. Hermas, when the taxi in which they were riding crashed into a large poplar tree on 2.45 Monday morning. Gerard's daughter, Jeannine, 16, and Miss Dora Desormeaux, 17, of Ste. Emilie de Suffolk, also passengers in the taxi, were only slightly injured, and Joseph Roy, of Ste. Emilie, the driver, was uninjured.

According to police officials, the driver was overcome with a dizzy spell and lost control of the car, which ran across the road and crashed into the tree immediately in front of the residence of Edmond Gerard, no relation to the victims. The taxi, which was owned by the driver, was travelling from Namur to Ste. Emilie when the accident occurred. The car was badly wrecked by the impact.

A verdict of accidental death was rendered by the district coroner, Dr. A. Pagé of St. Hermas, at the inquest held Monday afternoon.

THOUSANDS OF FISH POISONED IN OTTAWA R.

Ottawa, Aug. 11 — Game Overseer Wayne Robinson said that provincial fisheries authorities in Toronto are investigating the cause of the death of thousands of fish washed up in the last few weeks along the Ottawa River shore, particularly near Rockland, Ont.

Dr. H. D. Sparks, Chief Inspector of Foods for Ottawa Board of Health, said contamination of the water between Ottawa and Pointe Fortune made fish caught in that part of the river unfit for consumption. (By order of the civic authorities sale of fish from the lower Ottawa was banned in markets of the capital today, Thursday).

W. H. Werner, Assistant Biologist, Ontario Fisheries Department in the Ontario Fisheries Department, left Toronto for Ottawa to investigate reports of the dead fish being washed up on the shore.

The deputy minister of Game and Fisheries said he believed the fish may be victims of accidental flushing operations at Hawkesbury paper mills, adding that acid used in the manufacture of paper sometimes is diverted into rivers and causes death to the fish.

Rationing Scheme Would Take Three Months To Organize

From many sections of the country come reports that a large number of Canadian motorists want to be rationed by regulation rather than do it voluntarily.

Most of these have not yet grasped the situation. They do not understand that any form of rationing would require at least three months preparation and that it would not be sufficient to start saving gasoline and oil in October. They do not see that fuel must be saved during the peak consumption months of August and September. They do not realize that even if it were possible to put any scheme of rationing into effect immediately such a move would dislocate Canada's wartime industrial economy to an extent that would cause untold damage to our war effort.

On top of these considerations, it is evident that many of those who are crying for a scheme of rationing do not see the grave possibility that one feasible form of rationing in this country would be to take all passenger cars, except those used for business and professional purposes, right off the highways.

The appeal to the Canadian public to reduce the consumption of gasoline and oil arises out of dire necessity. Individuals in a free country have a right to offer suggestions in an operation of this kind, but none will feel that he has the right to ignore the appeal for a cut in consumption, just because his suggestion is not accepted.

ASKS BIGGER SUBSIDY FOR FIRE SERVICE

Fire Chief Deacon Finds Grant from Town Inadequate

Asks Increase from $1,000 to $2,000 A Year

A petition to Town Council, presented at the regular meeting last week by Fire Chief Geo. Y. Deacon, asks for an increase of yearly grant from the town, from $1,000 to $2,000.

This raise in subsidy, if granted, will provide for the following increases — Fire Chief's salary advanced from $300 to $600 a year; allowance to firemen (averaging $20 a year) advanced to $40, or from $400 to $800 for entire personnel; rent, heating and lighting of fire hall advanced from $300 to $600 a year.

Fire Chief Deacon substantiated this demand by the following reference to his services . . . He had to be consistently on hand, he stated, or entrust the fire hall keys to some reliable person around his premises. Air pressure must be maintained for the fire alarm siren at all times, and the Fire Chief must attend to the water pressure clock; must supervise drying of hose and replacing on fire truck; keep the pumps, trucks and complete equipment in efficient service; keep records of fires and losses; give time to the fire inspectors and adjusters when visiting town; and meet the personal loss of wear and tear on clothing. In addition, the use of his business and personal telephones was at public demand for fire protection, and the Fire Chief moreover had to pay extra life insurance premiums, to the extent of $100 on a $10,000 policy.

Recounting the achievements of the Lachute Volunteer Fire Brigade, Fire Chief Deacon stated that they had provided the equivalent of city service, never having missed a call in the past 20 years. They had been instrumental in having the fire insurance rates reduced several times in this town; and efficient fire protection must be kept up in order to retain these lower rates.

Mr. Deacon pointed out, in support of his demand, that in the town of Renfrew, Ont., comparable in size to Lachute, volunteer firemen receive $75 a year, two full-time firemen $1,200 and the permanent fire chief $2,000. He also cited the salaries in other towns.

In 1924, the Fire Chief stated, the Brigade boasted two hand-drawn hose carts.

A grant of $7,000 from the province and $4,000 from the town was received toward equipment in 1934, and in addition the following actual contributions have been made by the Brigade:

Paid by —	Town	Brigade
1925 — First fire truck	$400	$425
1925 — Dishes for Auditorium		163
1926 — Pump for fire truck 195		400
1935 — Installation of siren		309
1935 — Motor truck for ladder wagon		437
1936 — New 1936 fire truck		1,050
1936 — Fire hall, rent for 1½ years		350
— Rubber boots, coats, equipment		500
Total outlays by Fire Department		3,634

HOLD ANNUAL REGATTA AT LAKE LOUISA

War Savings Stamps Are Given As Prizes Instead Of Usual Trophies

Fireworks and Singsong in Evening Program

Fine weather favored the annual Lake Louisa regatta last Saturday afternoon. The competitions drew a strong entry list, and the events were witnessed by a good crowd of spectators at Louisa Beach.

The gala occasion concluded with an evening session, with a display of fireworks and a hearty singsong. Winners were presented with war savings stamps instead of the usual trophies. The awards were presented by Mr. Janes, past president of the Lake Louisa Fish and Game Club, Mr. Emo, president, and Mr. Montgomery, vice president.

High standings in the 50 different contests were won by Lorna Giles and Norma Caron in the ladies' classes, and H. Montgomery and J. Archibald in the men's events. Results are published on page eight of this issue.

CHARGE DISMISSED AGAINST B'BURG TAXI OPERATOR

Accused After Death of Lad Selling Berries On Highway

L'Orignal, Ont — A charge of dangerous driving laid against Rosario Turpin, taxi driver of Brownsburg, after the death of 12-year-old Yvon St. Jean near his home at L'Orignal on July 21st, was dismissed on Monday by Judge Albert Contantineau in County Court.

Several witnesses testified the boy, son of L. St. Jean of L'Orignal, who was selling berries at the roadside, stepped into the path of Turpin's car.

Appeals to Farmers to Burn Stubble and Abolish Pest

Mature Insect Can Fly Five Miles

Cushing, Que., Aug. 12, 1941

Editor, Lachute Watchman

In the little garden beside my summer cottage in Argenteuil County, I planted this year a small patch of sweet corn, in joyous anticipation of luscious repasts of my favorite vegetable. To my horror and disappointment I found my pleasures forestalled by a most repellant insect known as the European Corn Borer. However appealing a steaming cob of golden corn may be, its appetising value is not enhanced by meeting an horrific worm in the midst. Even boiled, these loathsome maggots fail to arouse enthusiasm as an article of diet. Now, I did not raise my corn to feed a borer. Wherever these obnoxious worms originated seems unknown, but from their totalitarian activities one would seriously suspect them of Nazi-ism.

The Government Agricultural Department assures me that these borers in the last few years have invaded 17 counties in Quebec and caused three million dollars worth of damage last year in the province. This may be true, but when finally they have infested my corn-patch, it seems to me it is reaching the limit; and it was time something was done about it.

The Experimental Farm at Ottawa tells me that if the corn stubble is burned in fall or spring the larvae will be destroyed. Maybe so, but my corn-stubble was burned last fall, and see what happened. We are told the mature insect can fly five miles, and if I am to undertake to burn all the corn-stubble within that radius, I would be a very busy little man.

Mr. Editor, I do not write these few words in a spirit of mere carping criticism, but, in the first place, to appeal to my fellow-farmers of Argenteuil County to arise in their wrath and abolish this pestiferous insect. In the second place, I wish to call attention to the very educational exhibition in the well-known Barracks Museum at Carillon, where all those interested may see the various stages of development of this pernicious insect, with illustrations of its ravages and suggestions for its control.

Knowing your interest in all matters concerning the welfare of the County, may I ask you to call these matters to your readers' attention.

NEW STRETCH OF LAURENTIAN ROAD OPENED TO TRAFFIC

The new Laurentian highway to Ste. Agathe came a step closer to completion over the week-end, according to Hon. T. D. Bouchard, provincial Roads and Public Works Minister, who was informed the asphalted seven-mile stretch from Val Morin to Ste. Agathe was opened to traffic Saturday. It is a 33-foot, three-lane, hard surface road.

Mr. Bouchard further disclosed that on the 5-mile link from Ste. Adele to Val Morin there remained only about two miles of base to be finished and the top to be put on. This section, he said, would be open to traffic — partly asphalted and partly gravelled — by the end of the autumn. It was hoped to build the run from St. Jerome to Ste. Adele next year, he added.

A prominent Montreal business executive has turned mathematician, to determine just how he will comply with the nation-wide appeal for 50 per cent saving in gasoline consumption.

"Everybody asks himself and his neighbor, 'How do I know that I am cutting down my car use 50 per cent?'" he said. "Well, here's one way for the owner of a new car. He knows when he got his car. He looks at the mileage today and simply divides the speedometer reading by the number of months he has had his car. That, roughly, is his monthly average. Armed with this fact, he has a fairly definite idea of how much he must cut, 'to go 50-50 with our fighting forces'.

"Even most people who bought second hand cars will remember the approximate reading of the speedometer when they bought the car and can work out their monthly average."

COWS HAVE CHANGED

— P. W. LUCE —
in The Imperial Lifeguard

When I accepted Joe Glebe's invitation to spend my summer vacation on his farm I did so under the impression that it would be nice to go back to the simple life for a while. I have been a city slicker for many years now, but I was country raised.

I know how pleasant it is to go to sleep in the hay mow on a Sunday afternoon when one is supposed to be doing a few odd chores. I well remember the tingling feeling that creeps up and down one's spine at six o'clock on a cold winter's morning when one is suddenly yanked out of a warm bed by an irate father. I have not forgotten how the gentle spring rains trickle softly inside a turned-up coat collar, nor how a hearty meal can be made out of boiled turnips and fat pork when the appetite has been keenly whetted by ten hours' very hard work.

In years gone by I did my bit behind the plough, and I could still throw as crooked a furrow as any man who has been as long out of practice as I have. I know the nigh side of a horse from the off side, and in an emergency I could talk to mules in language appropriate to the occasion. I might be able to feed pigs without getting too much swill on my trousers, but I am not keen to try the experiment. The pigs I ministered unto in my youth were a boisterous lot, and I much doubt if the present generation is any more decorous when dinner is in sight.

For me, though, the chief attraction on the farm was the cows. I liked cows. I still like cows. But it must be confessed, more in sorrow than in anger, that cows are not what they used to be.

Cows have gone modern. With a vengeance.

In a vague sort of way I knew that there had been some improvements in the dairy business in recent years, but the particulars of these various innovations had not impressed themselves upon me. If I thought of these things at all, I thought of them as matters that were attended to in the city: pasteurization, homogenization, vitaminization, decontamination, irradiazation, and such like. Something that the scientific sharks did to the milk partly to justify the existence of the health inspector, but chiefly to supply the copy writers with talking points for their advertising matter.

I didn't suspect that the cows themselves had been drawn into the orbit of this scientific mechanization. I still visualized them as somewhat stolid creatures that ate grass and — in a mysterious manned which nobody understands — transformed this into milk.

Joe Glebe's cattle still chew grass and turn it into milk, and it may be they are contented cows. They look satisfied enough, though it's hard to tell from the expression on a cow's face whether she's cheerful or merely resigned.

The first inkling of changed conditions came when I let it be known that I didn't intend to idle away my time while on holidays. I was, I pointed out, with a scarcely perceptible swelling of the chest, a competent farm hand. A little rusty, maybe, but fundamentally sound. Early training is never forgotten, and with a bit of mild supervision from the boss there was hardly a thing I couldn't do offhand. Tomorrow morning, for instance, I'd like nothing better than to get up early, grab a pail and a three-legged stool, and milk a few cows.

My host gave me a pitying look.

"What you don't know about modern farming conditions would fill the Encyclopedia Britannica," he declared, with brutal frankness. "We emerged from the dark ages of dairying a generation ago. You've just made four suggestions, and every one of them is as out of date as a buggy ride."

I blinked, hard.

"What's wrong with getting up early, grabbing a pail and a three-legged stool, and milking a few cows?" I wanted to know, "I've done it hundreds of times."

"Sure, gran'pa," he chuckled. "But we don't have to get up early any more. We don't milk in pails. There isn't a three-legged stool left in the whole township. And I don't keep cows; I keep pedigreed Jerseys all of which are qualified R.O.P. with an average production of 425 pounds butterfat per lactation period, if that tells you anything."

"Exactly how much milk is that?" I wanted to know, for in my day we measured milk by the quart, not by butterfat content.

"Exactly 7,312 pounds of milk," he specified.

I let it go at that. If his Jerseys wanted to have their milk measured by avoirdupois instead of liquid capacity, it was all right with me. Though I still contend the old-fashioned method of gauging a cow's production by the pailful had its points. Some of our cows gave a large pailful, some a middling pailful, some a small pailful. and some varied their performance so frequently that we never quite knew where to place them. We guessed the butterfat content by the cream line, and though Mr. Babcock's famous device may be more accurate up to a certain decimal point, we were near enough for all practical purposes.

Next morning, when I ambled down to the barn to learn how the modern cow is delivered of her milk, I found out why the three-legged stool has become a museum piece. The hired man who used to give Bossy an affectionate smack on the rump and then squat down on the stool to milk is no longer in evidence. A college graduate in a linen smock has run him off the place, and has pitched the old open pail after him. The cows are milked by machinery now. What used to be a comfortable barn has become a hygienic laboratory. There is the hum of enclosed machinery, the acrid odor of disinfectants, the snake-like lengths of rubber hose that stretch from laundered udders to sterilized receptacle, the weighing scales, the Babcock tester, and all the rest of the involved paraphernalia that has raised dairying from humdrum job to a highly specialized industry.

I had gone to the barn prepared to do battle with flies and bluebottles as in the days of yore, but there was nary a fly in sight. Ventilation fans shooed them away. The place was air-conditioned, thermostat-controlled, thoroughly distempered, and illuminated with indirect lighting. The floor was so clean that one had to go outside to spit. Highly efficient, of course, but, oh, how unromantic !

Our cows used to be tied to their mangers with stout ropes, but no such plebian attachment would do for Joe Glebe's Jerseys. They were restrained by stanchions, which is a fancy iron collar designed to give the animal freedom of action without loss of dignity. I have been place where she can admire it as she goes in and out on her lawful

RIVERS TO CROSS

— By Paul Winterton —

North and South, barring the German invader, run the great rivers of Russia. Always historically important, they today assume great strategical significance. The Red Army is fighting from river to river. However the fortunes of war may sway, it will continue to do — on the Dvina, on the Dniester and on the Dnieper.

The great land mass of Russia is as full of rivers as a leaf is full of veins. Nearly all have one feature in common — they flow from north to south or from south to north. This simple geographical feature may spell Hitler's ruin.

One of the most stubbornly defended rivers will be the Dniester. For 100 miles it is the boundary between the Ukraine and what was formerly Rumanian Bessarabia. The Dniester is very winding, and it flows very fast. Its average width is about 100 yards, but in some places it stretches for nearly a quarter of a mile from bank to bank. There are rapids about 150 miles from its mouth.

In short, the Dniester is a hard river for Panzer division to cross, even allowing for the Nazis' incredible skill in spanning water under fire. But the Dnieper is far harder. The Dnieper is a mighty waterway, ranking in Europe only after the Volga and the Danube. Its fame goes back into ancient history. It rises in the swamps of Smolensk province, hard by the sources of the Dvina and the Volga, and travels more than 1,400 miles before it reaches the sea. It flows through low, undulating lands, fertile plains and rocky steppes. Its banks, in the main, are high, particularly on the eastern side. At Smolensk, well over 1,000 miles from its mouth, it is 150 yards wide. Where the Pripet joins it from the famous marshes it is a quarter of a mile wide. In some places in the Dnepropetrovsk district it is one and a quarter miles wide. Not a bad tank trap ! Also, it flows at a tremendous speed in parts.

All these rivers are mere streams compared with the Volga. That will be a crossing for the Nazis. Two thousand three hundred miles it flows from source to sea, and it is rarely less than a quarter of a mile wide. It is no myth that the Volga boatmen sing their song there. May they go on singing it in peace for centuries.

Mechanized Army In Feature Demonstration At Ottawa Exhibition

Fighting Equipment of All Branches To Be Shown

Ottawa — Visitors to the Central Canada Exhibition here will have the opportunity of seeing in action fighting equipment and vehicles handled by men of the Active Force of the Army.

An Official of The National Defence Headquarters states a great deal of effort has been put forth to bring the Capital a showing of equipment and training representative of the services overseas.

Many of the men taking part are members of the Cameron Highlanders of Ottawa, and the balance are from all parts of Canada. Afternoon and evening demonstrations will be carried on in front of the Grandstand, and will include a Parade of Vehicles manufactured in Canada, in all a total of 50. Universal carriers, Tractors, Motor Cycles and trucks of all sizes with their complement of fighting personnel. Artillery weapons in action, mechanized machine gun units and infantry, demonstrating the versatility of the fighting man in a realistic display of bayonet fighting, unarmed combat, and precision drill, all culminating in a mock battle that for realism will leave little to be desired.

It is stated that the personnel will include members and equipment of the demonstration that has been on a 4,000 mile tour.

If you wish to walk around and inspect the equipment ample opportunity will be afforded, as displays will be set up in large marquee tents permitting the public to glimpse at first hand, men under training for trades, Army Medical Corps equipment and training. Army Dental Corps will operate a Field Clinic. Army Service Corps will have an interesting display of the rations available to the soldier. An Army Field Workshop will also be demonstrated by the Army Service Corps. Ordnance Corps will display clothing and equipment. The Signal Corps will have their equipment demonstrated as used. Other displays are at present being planned, and it is assured that the Fighting Forces will add much to the Exhibition.

"Yes; and I suppose you have a lot of desk room to rent in it, too."

Noxious Weeds Are Harvested in Britain

Nettles at £50 A Ton For Medical Use

(By Mail)

London — From England's shady woodlands and sun-drenched fields, Boy Scouts, Girl Guides and voluntary groups of women are gathering an unusual wartime harvest. They are picking stinging nettles, dandelion roots, meadow saffron and other herbs containing useful medicinal drugs.

Nettles are wanted for fibre extraction and green pigment (chlorophyll); dandelion roots contain digitalis; meadow saffron, colchicum.

Before the war most of such drugs were imported. Today, skilled gatherers can earn considerable sums by clearing the countryside of what to the farmer and the gardener are just weeds. For example, dried nettles fetch £30 to £50 per ton; dandelion roots as much as £5 per cwt. Hundreds of tons are urgently required.

The Medical Research Council has drawn up a schedule for chemists and manufacturers of drugs suitable for production in England. The Kew authorities (Royal Botanical Gardens) are issuing instructions to the squads and battalions of herb gatherers.

The whole country has been divided into areas for the reception of the crops for drying and preparation for the laboratories, and County School authorities are giving a one-day course of instruction in the proper methods.

TRANS-CANADA PILOTS JUST HAVE TO BE FIT

Toronto, August 11 — T. C. A. pilots must report to the company doctors for medical examination every three months. They get instructions from time to time regarding their general health, maintenance of proper diet and proper rest. Physical condition is something borne in on them constantly. Now they take electro-encephalograms — but it doesn't hurt. It is an electrical recording of certain brain reactions. It is a new study of pilot medical history being conducted in co-operation with the R.C.A.F.

Day Each Week Devoted To Overhaul of Army Vehicles, Save Gas

A full day each week is to be set aside by the Army in Canada for the care and maintenance of military transport vehicles as a means of reducing the amount of gas and oil used, and keeping the vehicles in better shape as that they will require less petroleum products. On this day only such administrative vehicles as are necessary to carry on proper routine will be permitted to operate, and the drivers of these will be provided with permits signed by their commanding officers.

No courtesy cards will be issued for any Army vehicle. Supply and Transport officers will provide gasoline and oil for automobiles expected to be in use during the time each day when filling stations are closed by law. Co-operation to the fullest extent possible in the Government's policy of conservation of petroleum products is to be the policy of National Defence Department.

Some people spend most of their time looking at themselves to see how clever they are. Others spend most of their time looking at themselves to see how stupid they are. And the trouble with both sorts is that they spend most of their time looking at themselves.

The Ful-O-Pep Plan Helps Poultrymen Save up to 30% to 50% on COST OF FEEDING NEW PULLETS

● Some have asked why a commercial feed manufacturer advocates a plan of restricted feeding. The answer is simple. By advocating this basic principle in the Ful-O-Pep Rearing Plan, substantial economies are possible to alert poultrymen, and at the same time he can raise a stronger, healthier bird than by limited feeding.

With Ful-O-Pep Chick Starter and Growing Mash—so exceptionally rich in nutritive value—as a foundaton of the Ful-O-Pep plan, poultrymen may complete the growing ration with whole oats and scratch grains, thus saving considerable money.

We believe this to be an important contribution to the practical poultryman's method of operation.

Can't Buy Much for 30 Cents

An enquiry into the cost of fire protection led us recently to an interesting observation on the matter of police service and public safety in Lachute.

For the services of Lachute Fire Brigade, outside of infrequent grants for equipment Lachute now pays $1,000 a year. On the basis of a 5,000 population, this is an annual per capita cost of 20c.

For police protection we, the people, pay $1,200 — or, allowing a margin for incidental costs, 30c per capita.

In other words, for police and fire protection combined Lachute pays 50c per annum per capita, less than 7c on the $100 property valuation, or less than one mill in property taxes.

No one is anxious to see a rise in these costs, but there is certainly room for argument as to whether the expenditure is proportionate to the need of our population. Fire Chief Geo. Y. Deacon has stated his case for a better-paid fire service. Similarly, community groups have from time to time urged the addition of another police officer. Yet the police force of this town is still a one-man band; and however efficient he may be, his services cannot be expected to meet the requirements of an entire community of the area and population of Lachute.

The town constable is on duty each afternoon, and from evening till early morning. In the afternoon, when not engaged on the pursuits of law and order he is assisting with tax collections, licenses and town office work. In the evening it is necessary that he should be on the beat until the crowd and traffic have dispersed, after which he must be on call at the town office.

A perusal of this program may illustrate why Lachute's civic statutes are a farce, why by-laws are passed and gromptly ignored. It may explain, for instance —

Why dwellings are condemned and, although the proprietors are duly notified, such houses remain inhabited and unrepaired.

Why the curfew by-law was a joke.

Why the streets are a bedlam at night, and wedding processions toot incessantly in defiance of our anti-noise by-law.

Why stop signs are still disregarded, and U-turns are made on Main Street through the central parking section.

Why dogs run loose, chase cats and trample gardens all summer; etc. etc.

These few misdemeanors are direct violations of Lachute's by-laws, council rulings or recommendations — and our impressions are much mistaken if an additional police officer would not help materially to enforce the regulations.

Not So "Thoroughly Canadian"

It is not often that a man of fair prominence in business takes time out to reply to "Letters to the Editor". Recently, however, the correspondence column of the Montreal Gazette carried a reply from Thornton Purkis, advertising executive, to certain firebrand sentiments which appeared in a previous issue . . . We take the liberty to reproduce Mr. Purkis' letter.

Britain and Canada

Sir — Your correspondent who signs himself "Thoroughly Canadian," leaves what I believe to be a false impression in regard to Great Britain and the British people. From his letter one might deduce that the Government of Great Britain has asked the Government of Canada to impose conscription for overseas service, I am very sure that the British Government has made no such request of the Government of Canada.

The next thing your correspondent says is: "Don't expect us to do more than the vastly wealthy United Kingdom, because we won't." Again I am quite sure that the British Government has made no such request of the Government of Canada.

The next statement that "Thoroughly Canadian" makes is "As partners of Great Britain in the Commonwealth we expect a much better post-war deal from British business men, industrialists and financiers, than they have given us in the past. We won't stand for any more humbug when we speak of trade." I have not before me at the moment the figures in regard to imports and exports between Canada and Great Britain, but I have always understood that the balance of trade between the two countries has been very much in favor of Canada, and I seem to recollect that a considerable amount of British money was placed in Canada for the upbuilding of the Canadian Pacific Railway, the Grand Trunk Railway, the old Canadian Northern Railway, and perhaps some other transportation and industrial ventures.

I am a Canadian but hardly consider it necessary to describe myself as "thoroughly Canadian." The adjective is just as absurd as that which is sometimes used by men across the line who describe themselves as 100 per cent Americans. It is, I think, most unjust of your correspondent to impute to the people of Great Britain sentiments and expressions reflecting upon Canadian war efforts which I don't believe any person or official in Great Britain has either entertained or expressed. From all I have been able to read in the British papers that come my way and from the dispatches of Canadian Press and other correspondents now in Great Britain, the people of that embattled island are indeed very sensitive to and grateful for Canada's war effort. What your correspondents appears to have overlooked is that a great many men in this country do their own thinking and arrive at their own conclusions, one of which is that if Britain goes down to defeat the ravages of may reach Canada, in which case every man who describes himself as "thoroughly Canadian" may have to prove that he is. —Thornton Purkis

Gas Lines

This gasoline economy drive packs a heavy wallop at the service station operators — perhaps not so much in their declining sales as in the incidentals that accompany the filling of the gas tanks . . . But — to their credit in this particular district — we haven't heard them complain yet !

* * *

"Only one occupant of an automobile was killed last week". — This was the report of the Motor Vehicles Registrar for the State of Massachusetts, in comparison with a death list of nine in the corresponding week a year ago. The drop in fatalities is attributed directly to reduction of speed in compliance with the request to save gasoline.

* * *

While we are saving gasoline to permit unhampered progress of the war effort, it is consoling to note that the Army is doing its bit with a weekly check-up on its motor vehicles to keep fuel consumption at the economy point.

The Picnic Season

Picnicking's chief value, sociologically speaking, is to teach people the comforts of home living, says the Christian Science Monitor. There is a ritual to be observed, however, if one wants to gain all the lessons possible from this form of hot weather entertainment. First, it ought to be discussed in family council for a week or two previous to the projected expedition. And when everything is settled, it's always possible to open parliamentary procedures again with an innocent question.

A conscientious housewife begins to get ready for the picnic day approximately one week ahead. Preparations commonly include washing the house curtains, sending the rugs to be cleaned, waxing the floors, and trimming the hedge.

On the morning of the day, it is decided to keep things simple. The usual peanut butter, jelly, and egg salad fillings are fixed up. A thermos bottle of milk and one of lemonade are filled.

Another major problem is where to stop to eat. Each member of the family is articulate about a place as the car rolls along. At long last, Father picks a spot and stops, amid general disapproval. The food is eaten with a sympbonic accompaniment of birds, ants, spiders, pine needles, sand and other expected impediments.

The best part of it all is getting home to a clean house and a cool porch. If more people would picnic periodically, the Nation's home life would be more appreciated. —Exchange.

When Will Quebec Act ?

For almost as many years as we can remember the people of Quebec have been trying to get our Provincial Government to pass two laws and do not seem to be getting anywhere.

The first, and most important, is to make it necessary for all wagons to carry lights after dark, and the second is to have compulsory insurance on motor vehicles.

A large number of the fatal road accidents are caused by no other reason than a wagon without lights, being hit by a car. Some farmers have enough sense to put lights on anyway; why others do not and why the Government does not compel them to is beyond us.

The second law would save a lot of worry and money for our car owners and would probably take a lot of the jalopies off the road, without horns, brakes, and in lots of cases without brains behind the wheel.

They speed along the highways risking nothing but their own neck, knowing that they can smash an expensive car without its costing them anything. They have no money of their own, earn very little and carry no insurance of any kind. Knowing that they cannot be taken to court successfully, the drivers of these cars often neglect the primary rules of the road and therefore get into a greater percentage of accidents than the careful driver who takes every precaution to protect himself and others.

Mr. Godbout could remove and curtail both these highway menaces by the simple process of law, and in our opinion now is the time, when he has such a large majority.

—Shawinigan Standard.

Soldiers' Dependents

A mathematical problem that might be given some attention by the Ottawa authorities on the cost of living is: "If the cost of living of a railroad employee earning $200 a month has increased to the extent that he needs a bonus of $1.93 a week, how much should now be paid to a soldier's wife, who, with assigned pay, separation allowance and allowance for two children, receives less than $100 monthly ?"

The scale of allowances for soldiers' dependents is better than it was in 1914-18, but is still far from an amount that will permit most of them to continue to enjoy the same standard of living as when their breadwinners were at home. Some soldiers' wives are in a position to accept employment to supplement their incomes, but the woman with one or two small children is tied to her home.

The problem is intimately connected with the success of recruiting campaigns. The single man, without dependents, can easily decide to sacrifice his civilian life in his country's service. The married man may be equally willing to make the same personal sacrifice, but he can conscientiously doubt his right to sacrifice others. Up to date the Government has given him little aid in solving his problem.

BOOK REVIEW

By Howard Ross, K.C., LL.D.

"THE LAW OF MARRIAGE AND DIVORCE IN ONTARIO"

M. Shelley Millstone, B.A., LL.B.

The author, a graduate of McMaster University, has for some years been writing literary criticisms as well as articles on legal subjects, some of which were criticisms of legislative enactments and others in praise of social legislation.

In this booklet we are given some of the most interesting parts of the law relating to marriage and divorce in Ontario.

Some of the chapters are: The Ontario Marriage Act, Legal Grounds for Divorce, Civil Marriage in Canada, When Is A Wife Entitled to Alimony, Custody and Maintenance of Children, Legal Questions and Answers on Marriage and Divorce in Canada.

As in Quebec, civil marriages are not legal, although permitted in Manitoba, British Columbia and Alberta. One of the persons about to marry must have had his or her usual place of abode in Ontario.

A person 18 years of age does not need the consent of parents, while in Quebec the age is 21 years. When a consent is necessary it must be verified by an affidavit, a safeguard which is not required in Quebec.

A marriage may not be solemnized in Ontario earlier than the third day after the date of the license. In Quebec one may be married as soon as the license is issued.

The source of the law relating to the annulment of marriages in Ontario is discussed. It is the law of England as it existed on July 15, 1870, such law being based on the Imperial Matrimonial Causes Act of 1857.

The Divorce Act (Ontario) enacted by the Dominion Parliament came into force on May 30, 1930. This Act gives the Courts of Ontario the right to grant divorce and annulment decrees on the ground of adultery. It further provides that a wife can obtain a decree for a dissolution of her marriage if her husband has been guilty of incestuous adultery, bigamy with adultery, rape, sodomy, bestiality, or of adultery coupled with cruelty, as without adultery would have entitled her to a judicial separation, or of adultery coupled with desertion without reasonable excuse for two years or more. This Act is subject to the Marriage and Divorce Act passed by the Dominion Parliament in 1925. The result is that husband or wife may obtain a divorce on the ground of adultery and the wife may obtain a divorce on the ground of rape, sodomy, or bestiality on the part of the husband.

The Ontario Courts when a divorce is granted to a wife decide as to the question of alimony and as to the custody and maintenance of minor children, questions which cannot be decided by the Senate Divorce Committee because they come under the jurisdiction of provincial legislation.

While intended primarily for Ontario readers there is much of interest for Quebec readers — laymen as well as lawyers.

"LET'S FACE THE FACTS" NOW IN BOOK FORM

"Let's Face The Facts" — the series of radio addresses arranged by the Director of Public Iinformation — is now being issued in book form by Thomas Nelson and Sons, Ltd., Toronto. Twenty of the addresses were first published in Great Britain by John Lane, the Bodley Head, Ltd., the arrangement being that all royalties on subscription sales would go to the Air Raid Distress Fund organized by the Lord Mayor of London. "The continuous help which we have been getting all the time from your great Dominion is very inspiring," the Lord Mayor wrote to the Director of Public Information, "and I am very grateful for this further evidence of friendship which you have, by your kind gift, provided. I am sure the knowledge that you have contributed towards the alleviation of distress and hardship will bring you a greater measure of thanks and satisfaction than anything I can add."

Scientists Lend a Hand In the War Effort

— By Ronald Garth —

British scientists are using the varied resources of the British Empire to strengthen Britain's war effort. On every convoy to Britain come strange little parcels — blocks of coral mud from British Honduras, penguin oil from the Falklands, cinnamon bark oil from the Seychelles. In the laboratories of the Imperial Institute, in the heart of London, research workers put these and other curious products of Empire under the microscope and discover new treasures and new uses for known resources.

Coral mud is turned into building blocks, coconuts into box board, seaweed into soup, leaf oil into soap, water lily seed from the Sudan proved to be a farinaceous foodstuff that could be used in the manufacture of cattle fodder.

A chip from the stump of a pine tree was sent in by a Canadian timber man. The institute intelligence section told him how resin, turpentine, camphor, liquorice and numerous unlikely substances could profitably be made from the pine-stumps that littered his ground.

A sample of horn-blende submitted by South Africa occupied weeks of intensive work before the scientists were satisfied that it could be used only for decorative purposes in colored cement mixtures. A chunk of rock from Eire, which the finder thought might contain cobalt, was shown to contain little cobalt but consisted largely of valuable copper, lead and zinc ores indicating a deposit well worth exploiting.

Quartz sands from Ceylon were found to furnish material for high-grade glassware, and plants growing wild in Kenya were found to possess important new medicinal values. Fragments of rock from Uganda have given the clue to a new minefield and the present shortage of certain drugs may be solved with hitherto neglected roots from Rhodesia.

From the arid central deserts of Australia have come chips indicating the presence of molybdenum, the rare white metal used in specially hard tool steels. In the green jungles of the Andamans were found new supplies of copra for use in high explosives.

As a final instance, the expert who escorted me on a tour of the laboratories showed me a recent letter from a manufacturer who wanted to know more about the growing use of rutile as an ingredient in the coating of arc welding rods. Now you or I may find that question unintelligible, but the Institute gave the manufacturer a list of Empire supplies of rutile, which are not of high grade as yet. As a result, the manufacturer is installing plant for the purpose of improving the grade and meeting a new and pressing need of Britain's war effort.

German Prisoner Had Been "Buying British"

(By Mail)

London — A new arrival at a camp for prisoners of war "somewhere in Britain" was being put through the routine search when the guard, to his astonishment, found in one of the German's pock-

The prisoner, who spoke good ets a folder from a roll of panchromatic British film.
English, seemed surprised when asked why he used British film. He said he always had done so because he liked it better than the German.

He probably got the film in one of the countries over-run by the Nazis. It had not been exported to Germany for several years but there were extensive stocks in France, Holland, Belgium and Denmark.

These lost markets have been more than made up for by bigger shipments to the British Empire, the United States, and South America. Another British firm which specializes in photographic paper reports that its exports were quadrupled during the first four months of the year, breaking new ground in North Borneo, Kenya and Thailand. Australia is taking nine times as much, Brazil five times, India three times — while supplies to South Africa, New Zealand and China have been doubled.

New Canada Speaks

"Slovenske Bratstvo" (Slovak Brotherhood), Slovak-language weekly, Montreal : —

Good and bad things have been said about the Red Army, but it is now fighting against world Fascism. It has become an ally of the country in which we live and consequently its every success will be our success. We trust that it is well prepared, that it is a very valuable ally and we wish it complete success."

"Der Courier", German-language weekly, Regina :—

Our duty lies clearly before us. We must follow the leadership of our government, the leadership of Prime Minister Churchill. They have taken everything into careful consideration and have found that support of Russia is necessary, even if we abhor Communism, in order to give Britain and the United States more time to complete armaments and then to start on offensive that must lead to victory over Hitler and Germany and to a just and lasting peace.

Germans Lose Tanks in Western Desert

One of the German tanks captured by the British in the Western Desert fighting. Tanks can be used to form a good defence position apart from their use in attack, and these captures are valuable acquisitions.

Restoring "Blitzed" Royal Autographs

Job for London's Police Chemists

(By Mail)

London — Signatures of King Edward VII and Queen Alexandra in a book reduced to ashes by Nazi incendiary bombs have been made legible again by a new chemical process discovered by research chemists of London's Metropolitan Police Laboratory.

The autographs were written in 1883, when the Royal pair were Prince and Princess of Wales, in the visitors' book of the City of London College, which since 1848 has been giving business training to young men and women employed in the City of London, many of whom have lately emigrated to the Dominions and Colonies.

Razed to the ground one night by incendiary bombs, the College lost all its possessions, yet resumed work next day in loaned premises without even a sheet of notepaper.

The blackened remains of its treasured visitors' book were sent to the Police Laboratory where the page bearing the Royal signatures was treated with chloral hydrate in a 25 per cent alcoholic solution and dried at 60° Centigrade. After repeating this several times, a mass of chloral hydrate crystals formed on the surface, and at this stage a similar solution, containing 10 per cent glycerine, was applied and the paper dried as before. It was then photographed, and the result was excellent. The process, which needs no special apparatus, is proving of great value where important documents in ink, typescript or print, are burned by enemy action.

New Canada Speaks

"Glas Kanada" (Voice of Canada) Croatian-language weekly, Toronto :—

Hitler insisted on the liquidation of the Balkans and of Jugoslavia, chiefly in order to render his future war against Russia easier and more successful. All respectable Serbians, Croatians and Slovenians realized this but not the Russian leaders who let themselves be deceived by Hitler's promises and by the great delusion that peace with Germany is a possible thing. Had Russia at that time grasped the meaning and importance of the Balkan war, of the German attack of Jugoslavia, that war would undoubtedly have taken a different direction and would have helped Russia to take advantage of her military position.

BOY LOST 24 HOURS FOUND BY SOLDIERS

Lad, 12, Spent Day and Night in Bush

Sought for almost 30 hours by farmers and 200 soldiers from the St. Jerome training centre, Jean Comtois, 12, was found Tuesday evening after a night and a day spent in the thickly wooded region of Lake Connolly, about eight miles north of the town.

The boy, son of a Canadian soldier now overseas, disappeared at 4 o'clock Monday afternoon from his grandfather's residence, where he and his mother had been living for some time.

Mrs. Comtois and members of the family were returning home from a swim in the lake when young Jean left the party to make his way home alone, saying he knew the way. Later Mrs. Comtois became alarmed and a search party of farmers was organized. News of the disappearance reached the military camp and 200 soldiers were sent out to aid in the search.

All night and throughout Tuesday the search continued until one of the searchers located the boy in a bush not far from the Comtois cottage. Though tired and weak and suffering from badly scratched legs, the boy was little the worse for his experience.

Dental Defects Cause Rejection of Draftees

Toronto — According to reports received by the Health League of Canada, defects of the teeth are the most frequent grounds for rejection of U. S. draftees, it was stated at League offices here recently. Among those accepted, the proportion not in need of some form of dental treatment was said to be only about one in 500.

While statistics on similar conditions in Canada were not available, said an official of the Health League, he believed that they would be fairly proportionate, allowing for the far greater number of slum dwellers and underprivileged rural communities in the United States.

He suggested that the remedy lay, not primarily with corrective dental work but with adequate nutrition. Many children, he declared, suffer from a deficiency of vitamins and mineral salts which lead to dental decay. In such cases, dental troubles began in childhood.

Another factor, he believed, was that among low-wage earners and workers with large families, the family budget allowed little for dental care, though all children would be the better for regular dental as well as medical examination. For this reason he believed there should be a concerted move to establish free dental clinics in large urban districts.

A properly balanced diet and periodical mouth inspection with a view to combating dental decay at its outset, were the best safeguards against conditions such as those revealed in the United States report he asserted.

Masonic Burial Rites for Late Wilbur R. Fraser

At Lachute Cemetery this afternoon the remains of the late Wilbur Ross Fraser were laid to rest with Masonic honors in the presence of brethren from Argenteuil Lodge 67, of which he had been a member in long standing. Mr. Fraser died Monday at his home, 4560 Hampton Avenue, Montreal, at the age of 52. His death followed a lengthy illness.

Born here in Lachute, the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Fraser, he conducted a butcher and provision store on Main Street in partership with his brother for many years, under the name of John Fraser & Co. He served overseas in the last war with the 73rd. Battalion of the Black Watch. In Edinburgh, Scotland, he met Miss Jean N. Yardley, to whom he was later married. After the war Mr. Fraser resumed business here in Lachute, and twelve years ago removed to Montreal where he was connected with the A & P Stores until ill health forced him to retire. He was a member of Remembrance Branch 75 of the Canadian Legion in Montreal. Mr. and Mrs. Fraser had a residence at Lake Louisa, which they have visited during the summer seasons.

The late Wilbur Fraser is survived by his wife and one son, Atholl; a brother, Guy Fraser, Montreal, and a sister, Mrs. Wellsford Cliff, Kington, Ont.

Funeral service was held at 1.30 o'clock today in the Mountain St. chapel of Jos. Wray & Bros. The Rev. B. B. Brown, of Wesley United Church, a former Lachute minister, officiated. The funeral cortege proceeded to Lachute, where Masonic rites were observed at the graveside in the local cemetery. Pallbearers were Messrs. Geo. Graham, Geo. Leggett, Chas. Duncan, John A. MacKimmie, F. E. Earle, and Roy Fraser.

Spitfire Contributions Reported This Week

Mrs. L. C. Barron — Drawing for Bedspread	100.00
Miss M. Kathleen Morrison	5.00
Irvin Warwick	1.00
Miss Elizabeth Tomalty — Afternoon Teas	25.35
Sale of Victory Stickers	19.00

Word received from Brownsburg indicates the canvass in that community has reached approximately $300 at this stage.

Auto Stickers Bring Welcome Returns

The seasonal interest and ingenuity displayed in efforts for the Argenteuil Spitfire have been rewarded, from time to time, by substantial returns to boost the drive. From an idea put into practice by the Jas. Duncan Service Station, which handed out "V for Victory" auto stickers, small contributions in exchange for these signs have brought in $20. This amount has been handed in to the Fund by Mr. Duncan.

Afternoon Teas in Aid of Spitfire Fund

Attended by ladies of the immediate community, and from Lachute, afternoon tea gatherings at Hill Head last week netted proceeds of $25.35 on behalf of the Spitfire Fund. The teas, given by Miss Elizabeth Tomalty, were held at "Hill Crest", and a home-cooking table and drawing for a Dutch doll augmented the profits. Miss Catherine McGibbon of Lachute was the prize-winner.

Appreciation is expressed to the ladies who contributed to the success of these events.

Memorial Service At New Glasgow

New Glasgow — A memorial service is being held in St. John's Anglican Church, Wesleyville, on Sunday, August 17th., at 2.30 p.m. (E.S.T.) in connection with the centenary celebrations of the Parish of New Glasgow and Kilkenny.

St. John's is a beautiful brick building in a very picturesque setting, but unfortunately through the years the congregation has gradually declined. And the remaining part of the congregation has moved largely into the Village of New Glasgow, where a chapel has been fitted up to hold the church services.

The service will be conducted by Mr. H. G. Baugh, divinity student, who has been in charge of the parish for the past year. Other events in the centenary program will take place in September, when Bishop Carlisle will officiate.

Christian Science Sunday Services

"Soul" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon to be read in Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, Aug. 17th.

The Golden Text is from Psalms 103: 1. "Bless the Lord, O my soul: and all that is within me, bless his holy name."

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "For as the earth bringeth forth her bud, and as the garden causeth the things that are sown in it to spring forth; so the Lord God will cause righteousness and praise to spring forth before all the nations." (Isaiah 61: 11).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Day may decline and shadows fall, but darkness flees when the earth has again turned upon its axis. The sun is not affected by the revolution of the earth. So Science reveals Soul as God, untouched by sin and death — as the central life and intelligence around which circle harmoniously all things in the systems of Mind" (Page 310).

Advises to Build Now, Avoid Delays Due to National Defence

The immediate need for houses — as well as planes, tanks, ships and guns for national defence — may soon present a difficult problem for Lachute's building material dealers and contractors, W. M. Cottingham, of Cottingham Supply Company, stated, in explaining why individuals considering any type of home construction or remodelling should do it now.

"Priorities on metals, raw materials and finished products which go into a home may in the near future cause delays in building and remodelling", Mr. Cottingham warned. "Already areas have been affected by shortage of building supplies and there is every indication that this condition will spread.

"Fortunately in Lachute at the moment there are enough building supplies and materials to meet all normal requirements, but it is probable that we will feel the pinch, too, within a fairly short time. When shortages do come, the ensuing delays will not be the fault of the manufacturer, or the dealer, or the contractor who accepts the job in good faith — but will be due to the requirements of national defence.

Mr. Cottingham, whose firm is distributor here for Canadian Johns-Manville products, outlined the unprecedented demand for building materials in the national defence effort. Not only must troops be housed here in Canada, but also in Bermuda and adjacent parts of the Empire. With more than a million men under arms, this by itself is a huge undertaking.

Construction of a military nature is, however, only one phase of the defence program for which the building industry is responsible. Workers producing defence supplies in factories, fields and mines must also be adequately housed, and this housing must be erected in the shortest possible time in order that there be an uninterrupted flow of armaments and material to our armed forces.

Again asking home owners not to criticize the manufacturer, dealer or contractor should future shortages of materials cause delays in private construction, W. M. Cottingham said it should be remembered that the materials unavailable are being used in the defence of the country, the most important task now before the nation.

over the Congress Party's civil disobedience campaign for independence. With a firm hand he broke up that campaign, and kept its leaders impotent until tension was eased and home-rule advocates agreed to carry on the fight by constitutional means.

RENTS "FROZEN" IN ARVIDA DISTRICT

Any attempt on the part of private business to capitalize on the present labor situation in the big aluminum area centering at Arvida, Que., will promptly be frustrated by federal action, it was indicated in Ottawa this week.

Already one important step has been taken with the establishment of rent control in the communities of Chicoutimi, Jonquiere, Kenogami and Arvida. The order was passed at a meeting of the War-time Prices and Trade Board.

Within the plant area at Arvida there is little difficulty in securing comfortable quarters for the workers and at reasonable rentals, but those who live in the other communities are now to be protected by federal control and the charging of exorbitant rentals will be prevented.

COST OF LIVING HAS RISEN 11.1

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics cost of living index for Canada advanced 1.4 between June 1 and July 2, to 111.9 the bureau announced in a bulletin this week.

"As in the preceding month the increase was due in part to seasonal increases in vegetables", the bureau said.

Other advances were as follows: Fuel and light from 110.3 to 110.5; clothing from 114.9 to 115.1 and home furnishing and services from 112.1 to 113.0.

The rent index remained at 109.7 and the miscellaneous group index also was unchanged at 105.6.

At the outbreak of the war the index stood at 100.8; thus the advance in cost of living since that time is 11.1.

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics cost-of-living index now is used by the labor department as the basis for determining cost-of-living bonuses for workers who, dissatisfied with salaries as they relate to prices, petition for a board to investigate their complaint.

HEALTH ARTICLE

By Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, Pres., Chicago Board of Health

EXCESSIVE USE OF LAXATIVES IS HARMFUL

Laxatives are often used recklessly, sometimes very harmfully. Many an appendicitis case has ended fatally because someone took a drastic laxative for a "stomachache". Most persons do not seem to realize that the physician nowadays does not always include laxatives in treatment of all disorders.

In the treatment of an acute infection, such as pneumonia or scarlet fever, it formerly was the custom to use laxatives. Also, at various times during a prolonged sickness with fever, laxative drugs were used frequently. However, it is well known now that the constipation which accompanies such illness is harmless and when the illness is over, as a rule, no difficulty is found in getting the bowels to function normally again.

There is no evidence that the giving of laxatives has any particularly good effect in any acute infection. It has also been the custom to give a laxative in the treatment of heart failure. But it has been shown that this too can be omitted.

Many parents have the idea that the child is a great deal better after the strong laxative preparation is employed. But, many times, these children who are sulky really are suffering from some pain in the abdomen. However, they are afraid to complain about such pains, because they know that to do so will cause their parents to give them a strong and unpleasant laxative.

In fact, it is best for parents not to employ laxatives for their children except when the physician directs. The continued use of laxatives may lead to bowel inflammation and chronic sickness. If constipation should occur, in most cases the condition can be overcome without the use of laxative drugs.

According to Dr. R. H. Micks of Dublin, Ireland, the person with chronic constipation often fears that the condition which he has will lead to poisoning of the blood or to cancer. But, of course, there is no evidence to show that constipation causes either of these things, although constipation is an inconvenience. Furthermore, these patients with constipation must be made to understand that plenty of food and water are not dangerous to them and will not produce blocking of the bowel but, rather, are Nature's method of insuring regular bowel movements.

If, with the taking of plenty of fluids and the proper foods, and with attempts to form a regular habit, constipation is not overcome, certain of the medically acting laxatives may be employed as the physician directs. Mineral oil may be used, but it should not be taken in excess. Certain dried seaweed preparations, such as agar-agar, may also be employed to add bulk to the intestinal contents. These two simple preparations are usually sufficient. Stronger laxatives need rarely be used, and the physician will advise just when they should be used.

Of course, it is possible to keep constipation from developing by starting early in life to form the habit of regular emptying of the bowel and by employing the proper foods, including vegetables, fruits and whole-grain cereals, to add bulk to the diet.

Constipation is rarely a serious condition and, as a rule, need cause little concern.

Chronic Indigestion

"Will you please tell me what causes chronic indigestion? This is evidenced by griping pains after meals. — Frances K."

Griping pains occuring after meals might come from a variety of causes, such as gallbladder disease, ulcer of the stomach, excessive acid in the stomach, or some bowel disturbance. A complete examination, including X-rays of the stomach, bowel and gallbladder would be necessary to tell the cause of the trouble before proper treatment could be suggested.

Cows Have Changed !

informed that the style in stanchions changes every spring, all-same ladies' hats, but this may be an exaggeration. City slickers shouldn't believe everything they hear on the farm, especially if it is told to them as gospel. A straight face is no assurance of authenticity.

Fifty years ago the favorite cow name was Bossy, with Daisy a good second, and Buttercup and Brownie running neck and neck for third place. Those were good names. When Bossy flicked you in the eye with her tail at milking time you could address her with promptness and despatch, but modern nomenclature has made that impossible with up-to-date Jerseys, Holsteins, or Ayrshires. A cow that cannot boast some such name as Colantha Marvelstein Pandora Wickfield's Predecessor's Eglantine the Third is practically an outcast in bovine society. A cow with fewer than four names invariably suffers from an inferiority complex as a result, and many shrewd dairymen have materially increased their lacteal production by rechristening animals that had been unfairly treated when first registered.

All the same, it's a bit tough on the herdsman when a heavy brute clomps her hind foot squarely on his instep and he has to say :

"Ouch ! Would you please move back a trifle, Colantha Marvelstein Pandora Wickfield's Predecessor's Eglantine the Third? That hurts!"

Each of these superior cows has the record of her name and pedigree nicely inscribed on high-grade art paper, neatly but not guadily framed, and hung in a conspicuous occasions. Certificates of merit won at the district exhibition also adorn the walls, and there will probably be a few chaste silver cups and a fine showing of red and blue ribbons captured by the herd champions.

Radio? Cows? Certainly !

Joe Glebe's barn has a hundred-dollar radio installed for the special benefit of his prized animals. Some university graduate seeking material for his M.A. thesis a few years ago discovered that cows milked to music yielded more and richer fluid than when they were stripped in silence. Up to then the bovine IQ. had been rated very low indeed in matters musical, but there was the extra butterfat to prove the scientific theory. Dairymen found it paid to milk to music, but it had to be the right kind of music.

Cows show a great liking for symphonies. They'll give their last drop of milk for an organ recital. Chamber music is always good for an extra two or three gills. A violin solo increases the butterfat content from .0379 to .0386 if there is no applause, and a rousing military march will speed the yield by as much as fifty-three seconds, though without increasing either the quality or the quantity of the product.

On the other hand, the cows can't abide jazz. They are allergic to musical saws and saxophones, and the less they hear of child prodigies the better they like it.

Barn programs have to be carefully selected. A careless twist of the dial that brings on a political speech might make the whole milking go sour, and no wonder. Up to now the cows have been more or less at the mercy of the broadcasting stations, but better days are in sight. A manufacturer of concentrates is buying milking time on one of the big chains, and his offerings will be especially chosen for the particular benefit of Colantha Marvelstein Pandora Wickfield's Predecessor's Eglantine the Third and her companions. He plans to call his program "Moo-sic for Moderns", which is punny enough to please the cows.

Until I made this first inspection of Joe Glebe's barn I had always considered the cow as a self-sufficient animal whose hide was her sole defence against the elements. Now I know that the modern cow has a wardrobe that consists of (a) housecoat for ordinary wear, (b) dustcloth for vacuuming time, (c) milking dress, (d) nightslip for sleeping hours, (e) wool rug for cold days, (f) raincoat, (g) windbreaker, (h) gala outfit for exhibitions, and (i) fly net throwover for pasture wear on hot days.

All she needs to complete her wardrobe is a panama hat and two pairs of galoshes, and she'll have that just as soon as some bovine outfitting firm thinks of it. She's welcome to them, but for my part I prefer my cows raw, plain, untrimmed, and unsophisticated. I guess I'm getting old and out of date.

William King Dies In California

The many friends of Mr. William King, of Montreal, will be grieved to hear of his death in Pasadena, Calif., recently, at the age of 74.

Mr. King was a valued employee of the C.P.R., entering the Telegraph Bureau soon after coming from London, Eng., with letters of recommendation from an English Railway company.

He had served in the Telegraph Auditors' Dept. at Windsor Station since he was 21 years of age, until his retirement, a few years ago on pension. Since then he has lived mostly in Pasadena, coming home for the summer seasons several times. And at the time of his death he had been planning to revisit Montreal.

He was an ardent worker in the Baptist churches and Sunday Schools of Montreal, also in educational work.

Mr. King was married to Miss Sophia Morrow, of Grenville, a few years after coming to Montreal. She predeceased him, leaving one daughter, Miss Dora King, who has been employed with the C.N.R. for several years. Three sons, Ernie, Lawrence and Albert, also his second wife, residing in Pasadena, and six grandchildren survive him.

ROBBED AGAIN

Your telephone says you are busy, but it isn't true!

Maybe you are robbed of an evening's fun. Perhaps an important business call can't reach you. Your telephone is gagged because of the "off the hook" habit.

Last year, Bell Telephone repair men found 120,400 trouble calls in the seven largest cities of Ontario and Quebec to be just plain "off the hook" troubles!

It's a real menace to efficiency, especially in war-time when telephone service must be fast and dependable. You can help by always replacing the telephone carefully. Let's keep our lines of communication clear!

BOMB SPLINTERS

The Londoners do not seem to miss a trick in their exports. One of the New York stores is quite excited over a shipment of paper-weights made from splinters of bombs from London. They are mounted on blocks of wood. There are paper cutters too made from sharpened bomb splinters. Whether these have reached Canada is more than I can say but it is quite an idea for those who like souvenirs.

BE LAZY AND LIKE IT

I have just had a letter from another writer who tells me she likes my column because it is informal and informative. She couldn't have pleased me more because that is what I aim at. But who wants to be informed about anything in these lovely summer days. All we need to learn is how to enjoy them to the full. Live and loaf. We do have to eat but meals are not such a problem as there are so many good fresh fruits and vegetables to have. If you are one of those women who is possessed by her work, turn over a new leaf and boss it for a change. We do have to work but most of us could lessen the housework if we only thought so. Put away most of the things that need that daily dusting and make yourself believe that the summer is a nice clean time and the house does not need nearly as much cleaning as you have been giving it. Glory in your laziness and spend your time out of doors.

PEANUT BUTTER

Most children like peanut butter and that is a blessing. It is well stocked with vitamins and even has the elusive vitamin B. If we give them plenty of peanut butter sandwiches we need not feel guilty even if we have used it often because it is so little trouble. If you add something crisp it cuts that stickiness. The older children can have sliced gherkins and they certainly give that certain something to the peanut butter sandwich. Crisp sliced cucumbers are good too. If I use cucumbers I add a dab of salad dressing to each slice and a bit of salt and pepper. Coarsely cut lettuce is another good idea. By introducing the vegetable motif, you can make a balanced meal with peanut butter sandwiches. We were at a Sunday tea and peanut butter and orange marmalade sandwiches were one kind served. Always curious about the ways of people with food, I noticed the way the men went for these sandwiches. Most of them ate more of these than any other variety. Peanut butter is good for you: is cheap; and easy to serve. What more could you ask? If you really are craving to know, two tablespoons of peanut butter has 25 units of vitamin B.

THE COOL MARITIMES

It is usual to write about foods for hot weather and about tricks in keeping cool. Usually the hot weather brings these to mind and it is no trouble to think of them. Maritime weather is different — at least that part of the Maritimes which is near the sea. So far this summer we have had one hot day. We have had warm, sunny, days, but by no stretch of the imagination could they be called hot. The Ontario papers are full of hot weather stories. This has been a week of fog and the wash which went on the line on Monday morning is still on the line on Thursday afternoon. How much longer it will stay there I cannot say. It is not quite so foggy now but it is still dull. The nights in the Maritimes are never hot no matter what the days have been. There is never an evening that one can do without a coat. Even on the hot day by eight-thirty I had to put on a jacket—and that was Daylight Saving time. We have had our furnace on a part of the day, every day this week, and this in July. Even at that things feel damp. That is one of the blessings of an oil furnace, it is so easy to have heat when it is required. It is no wonder the Maritimers feel the heat so much when they go to other parts of the country for they are not used to it.

PEANUT BUTTER COOKIES

1 cup white sugar, 1 egg, 1 cup brown sugar, 1 cup peanut butter, 1 cup shortening, 3¾ cups flour, 2 teaspoons soda dissolved in 1 tablespoon cold water.

Cream shortening and sugar and peanut butter, add beaten egg, then soda dissolved in water. Sift in the flour and mix thoroughly. Pinch off pieces the size of a walnut press down with a fork both ways. Bake 10 minutes in a moderate oven of 350 degrees.

BAKED BEAN SCRAMBLE

1 tablespoon butter, 1 can baked beans, 3 eggs, salt.

Melt butter in frying pan over a low fire, add the beans, and break the eggs over them. Add the salt and stir lightly until the eggs are set and the mixture is hot.

Bakery Restrictions In Effect This Week

Ottawa, Aug. 5 — Sale of sliced loaves, special deliveries of bread, and the use of either multi-colored or double wrappers were forbidden today by an Order of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board which becomes effective August 11.

These measures are being taken, according to the Board's statement, to conserve materials, power, and labor which can be used more effectively in the national defence program.

No bread company or retailer will be permitted to make a special delivery of bread to householders. Double wrapping and slicing must also cease on that date. Bakers will, however, be permitted to use up current supplies of multi-colored single wrappers. Hereafter wrappers must be printed in not more than one color on a single colored paper.

The removal of the wheat processing tax announced late last week and these new economies in manufacture and delivery should, in the opinion of the Board, render unnecessary any increase in the retail price of bread.

Canada Appeals to The Housewife

Dominion-Wide Round-Up of Disused Aluminum

Ottawa, Aug. 11 — The women of Canada are being afforded an opportunity to emulate their cousins in Great Britain, the United States, Australia and New Zealand, by giving worn out and broken utensils and otherwise useless aluminum articles to help the Canadian Red Cross Society. The National War Services Department is launching a Dominion-wide drive for this material, needed in the manufacture of airplanes and other war equipment.

Concentration points will be compounds in the parks and school grounds of every town and city. Citizens will be asked to bring material to these compounds. All worn out, broken or useless aluminum articles should be cleared out of each home and brought to the community pile. The National War Services Department points out that useful articles, which would have to be replaced, should not be given. Appropriate articles would be leaky pots, pans which burn only in one spot, old shoe trees, broken shakers, golf clubs that will not be used again, and broken parts of washing machines and sweepers. The Department asks for all aluminum articles which are not required in home or shop.

The material collected in this campaign will be rushed to Canadian factories engaged in manufacturing airplanes and other essential articles of war. 28,000 lbs. of this aluminum will build a modern bomber plane and 4,000 lbs. a modern fighter plane.

Every Canadian woman is anxious to do her utmost to assist in the successful prosecution of the war. Here is an opportunity for her to make a most valuable contribution to the war effort. Those old pots and pans, which she can so easily collect and bring to the community pile will make bombers and fighters. Those very bombers and fighters may be the deciding factor in winning the war.

The National War Services Department will lose no time in making the material collected available to Canadian manufacturers, and the money collected from the sale will be turned into the wonderful work which the Red Cross Society is doing for Canadian sailors, soldiers and airmen. Thus the giving of useless aluminum ware in this campaign serves the double purpose of providing much needed material for war vehicles and of assisting one of the noblest of the war charities.

The aluminum drive will be conducted on specific dates, set to afford proper marketing arrangements. In Ontario and Quebec the drive will be held on September 5th and 6th.

Canada counts on each and every Canadian woman to do her share in the campaign for salvaging useless aluminum ware.

BEAUTY

—Helen Jameson, Mme. Qui Vive—

HANDS THAT WANT TO BE HIDDEN

Come out of the garden, Maud, and give your hands the once-over. We've seen you, combing worms out of the dirt, using your lily white fingers for the purpose, and we'll say that's no way to treat yourself. Where are your gardening gloves? Right there, on the ground, beside the perennials you have been transplanting. What if they are clumsy? Those pink finger nails are the only ones you've got, and nobody should have to tell you that dirt and the hard washing necessary for its removal are going to play the dickens with the pretty shells not to mention the fabric of the hands, which will feel like leather before you are half way through the summer.

Hand care is fifty per cent protection. The rest is a matter of creaming and massaging. Grime and dirt take a terrific toll. The busy housewife finds that out; give her a month's vacation away from the pots and pans and the dusting job and her mitts are three shades lighter, three times smoother.

A hard worker can console herself with the thought that capable hands are in fashion now, when every woman's shoulder is at the wheel. Lazy women must take a back seat. But, even so, capable hands like to take time off, sit in at the bridge game. And it is a shame when they look as if they wanted to be hidden under the table.

In any kitchen cabinet will be found two stand-by beauty aids for hands, corn starch and corn meal, which should be used after rough work has been done. Girl gardeners will find them priceless after they have been troweling and transplanting.

Fill the wash bowl with warm water, add a teaspoonful of cornstarch to make the water soft and milky. Fluff up a rich lather in the palms of the hands, add about a tablespoonful of cornmeal — just chuck it out of the container. Rub soap and meal together into a foamy paste. Use it vigorously, especially on the knuckles.

So far, so good. Rinse away the pack, dry gently, trot out a tube of toilet lanoline, give the hands a rousing massage, forcing the flesh to accept plenty of the lanoline. The foregoing is a perfect hand treatment.

You can make a hand lotion, suitable for use all the year round; it is a sure chaser-away of chapped conditions. Soak sixty grains of whole gum tragacanth in fourteen ounces of stronger rosewater for three or four days. Add one ounce of glycerin, one ounce of alcohol and a few drops of the favorite perfume. This cosmetic jelly disappears quickly. If Time is chasing at your heels you will lose scarcely a minute from your domestic chores.

There is no chance of disappointment in compounding the jelly. It is bound to turn out in grand shape.

Tommy: No, ma'am, I can't.

Caller: Why not?

Tommy: 'Cause we're going to eat dinner as soon as you're gone.

Correct Sitting Posture

Helen Jameson (Mme. Qui Vive)

Said a commercial photographer, whose business it is to take pictures of pretty ladies: "Almost all professional models take graceful standing poses. They know what to do with their bones and their muscles. They look alive and vibrant. They're splendid and regal, assume engaging lines. But the one who appears really distinguished when sitting is a rare find. Too many of them slump, one way or another; the silhouette is not clear cut, but crimpy. A fold of flesh here, a poor line there."

Take a critical survey of your friends as they sit around at the next party you attend and you will discover that the gentleman knows what he is talking about. Sitting pretty just isn't being done. The average Young Thing who affects the debutante slouch folds up like a camp chair. Shoulders fall forward, a habit which deflates the chest, gives an awkward pose to the head.

Now and then a lovely creature sinks into a chair beautifully and gracefully, keeps her backbone on the job, arranges her hands, legs, feet and torso as they should be arranged. She is a treat to the critical eye. Hands are folded in her lap, with fingers intertwined or they rest easily on the chair arm. She crosses her ankles, but not her knees.

The wise girl will exercise body discipline, will be conscious of pose. She will not sit so that her feet have the sides resting on the floor. That's terrible. Feet should be placed fairly close together, the soles of the shoes never revealed. Knees should touch; that means that sprawling attitudes are avoided. Sprawling is a dreadful word, but no other word will do.

We wish to add, for the benefit of certain offenders of lady-like conduct, that there's no point in having the skirt pulled above the knees. Too often there is a display of bare skin above the stockings. Heavyweights must be especially mindful of sitting habits; poor posture makes them look thicker of build.

Sit far back in the chair seat. Keep that natural inward curve at the back of the waist. As soon as you lose that the upper portion of the torso folds, the abdominal muscles go slack and, if you are a calorie counter, you will have a little shelf below your belt.

Please do not perch on one side of the chair. Settle yourself comfortably, make an effort to be graceful and presentable. Carry the head high; the drooping chin is no help.

Good posture must be maintained at all times, standing, walking, sitting. If it is not the spinal column will not follow its natural course, one hip and one shoulder may be higher.

The caveman used a club to secure a wife. The modern man often uses a club to escape a wife.

Planning for Regional Conf. of Countrywomen In Ottawa Next Month

Notices and invitations to the Regional Conference of Countrywomen of North and South America, to be held in Ottawa September 3 to 10 with headquarters at the Chateau Laurier, have been widely distributed, drawing interested attention from officials, administrators and government members in the two Continents.

Lists of speakers and subjects are already in the hands of a competent group who are daily adding to their numbers.

As the general theme of the Conference has special reference to the work of countrywomen, rural interests will be kept to the fore, and the speakers and subjects are being arranged with special reference to this fact. Mrs. Alfred Watt, President of Associated Country Women of the World, is the moving spirit of the Conference, which promises to be a great success from every standpoint.

A partial list of speakers as arranged to date includes: Hon. J. C. Gardiner; Mary I. Baker, Expert Food Consultant to the Sec. of War, U.S.A.; Lt. Col. Webb; Miss Harriett Elliott, Asst. Administrator Civilian Supply U.S.A.; Miss Laura Pepper; Miss Helen H. Mitchell, Dept. Health, Ottawa; Hon. Mr. Thorensen; Mrs. Ferguson, Winnipeg; Mrs. H. H. Doddridge, U.S.A.; Mrs. Wagenblas, U.S.A.; Mrs. Godwin, U.S.A.; Mrs. McGregor, Pres. F.W.I.C.; Mrs. C. E. Dow, Pres. Q.W.I.; Mrs. Duke, Ontario W.I.

Insufficient Vitamin B2 Cause of Eye Trouble

If your eyes tire easily, are watery and uncomfortable and you suffer from headaches, the trouble may be that you are not eating enough riboflavin, or vitamin B2, suggests Doctor E. Chant-Robertson in the current issue of "Health", official organ of the Health League of Canada.

Recent investigations show that persons receiving an insufficient supply of this vitamin show changes in the small bloodvessels at the surface of the eyes, declares the writer, and the remedy is to eat more of such meats as liver and kidney, as well as of cheese, eggs, wheat germ, beans and peas. Milk also is rich in vitamin B2, she states.

Pointing out that sickness cost the Board of Education of one Canadian city alone $100,000 a year, while it cost the teachers affected another $50,000, Doctor Chant-Robertson asserts that most of the sickness could have been prevented by a more efficient diet. She quotes figures obtained from the Bureau of Statistics at Ottawa to show that from 44% to 53% of the average Canadian's diet is made up of such foods as white flour, sugar, molasses and honey, all of which are practically devoid of minerals and vitamins.

The Lady Next Door returned from her vacation immensely pleased with the progress her house-plants had made during her absence, but was disillusioned when the man of the house failed to sneak the florist's bill out of the mail.

COURTESIES SHOULD BE APPROPRIATELY ACKNOWLEDGED

Every gesture of courtesy that is made to you demands some kind of acknowledgment. This is a basic rule of good manners. The person whose pleasant habit it is to respond spontaneously to any act of kindness, no matter how small, shows proper mannerliness. The person who accepts courtesies and does not express appreciation for them, is rude.

If, for example, someone does something helpful for your comfort or convenience — holds a door open for you, rises in a theatre to allow you more comfortably to pass to your seat, or hands you something you have dropped, or gives you a direction — you should acknowledge this kindness with a gracious thank-you.

When someone calls on you — perhaps to welcome you to a new community — the acknowledgment should be a return call.

When someone sends you a gift or writes a letter of congratulation or recommendation or sympathy, you should, of course, write a letter of appreciation. Sometimes a favor is acknowledged by a gift.

Appreciative people make an effort to reciprocate for hospitality. They may write to the hostess to thank her for her party. They must, of course, write a bread-and-butter letter to thank for a visit, and perhaps send a gift as well. Often they "say it with flowers" to express their appreciation for some courtesy.

The important point about reciprocating is that, no matter what our resources are, we can, if we have that golden gift of appreciation, find some way to show our gratitude. If we cannot return hospitality in kind, we can make charming assets of the kind of hospitality we can offer. And if we cannot be as generous in material gifts to our friends as they are to us, we can generously give gifts of time and attention and consideration.

Very often more valuable than a material gift is an understanding attitude that a friend can give a friend; encouragement when encouragement is sorely needed, sympathy when sympathy is a priceless gift to a friend's heart and spirit, "little acts of kindness", ingenious thoughtfulnesses.

Cook: Did they say anything about the cooking?

New Maid: No, but I noticed them praying before they started eating.

Quiz League Between Brownsburg Teams Is Under Consideration

Brownsburg, Aug. 12 —

Seeking revenge for the smarting defeat suffered at the hands of the D. I. L. Supervisors on July 3, the Cost Department team of Maurice Thomas, John McKechneay, Harry Hallsworth and Les Preece, came back with a vengeance on Thursday night July 24 to outpoint the Supervisors by the score of 198 to 165 and even the series between these two teams. A return engagement later in the season to break the tie should revive friendly rivalry between the two factions and provide a real battle for the audience.

The first all-girl Quiz brought together the Timekeepers and Women Technicians, July 10. The Timekeeper team of Marjorie Laviolette, Orpha Nobla, Myrtle Cummings and Delia Cleland (all comptometer operators, by the way) went out in front during the first round and their position was never threatened by the opposition team of Emily Plunkett, Earline Freeborn, Doris McOuat and Jean Gordon. Current event questions were included as an innovation.

A schedule for a Quiz League is now being seriously considered. Already twenty-eight teams, representing one hundred and twelve contestants have participated in this popular Thursday night feature, and they have been representative of a cross-section of the Brownsburg industries.

Current Events Discussed On Sunday Programs

Brownsburg, Aug. 12 —

The second Round Table Discussion on current events featured the Sunday Evening Fireside of July 27. Covering a multitude of facts gleaned from numerous news releases, the participating group of Doug Brown, Ed Hendry, Alex Holden and Fred Soughton, covered the latest developments in the Russo-German conflict, the far eastern situation, and the expansion policy of the U.S.A. with emphasis on the extension of zones of influence to Iceland and the Philippines. As events move rapidly these days, this type of program is a valuable educational contribution to those who wish to keep abreast of the times. Scheduled for once a month, interest in Round Table Discussions should continue to increase.

Classical Music

The first "concert of light classical music" was well received and appreciated by the audience on August 3. The group was under the direction of Mr. Arthur Davidson, violinist and song leader, who delighted the crowd with his violin solos and his energetic leading of the sing-song. The other members of the group, Mrs. Forest at the piano, Miss MacFarlane soloist, and Mr. Curtis with his renditions of "My Son" and "Gunga Din", made splendid contributions to the program.

He Grumbles For A Living!

Here's the story of a London man who earns a living by going round the city finding fault with everything. And it's quite true.

One day he went into a big tea shop and found that the shape of the teacups they used was clumsy. It was impossible to drink out of them without spilling the tea. So he wrote to the company about it and the cups were changed.

Upon occasion (in pre-blackout days) he saw that a big sign in the West End of the city was not working properly. He told the company owning it that anyone standing on the other side of the street could not read it. It was changed.

It was a life-long habit with him. If ever he saw anything was wrong he used to write to the owner about it. When he fell out of a job, he suggested that if his criticisms were of any use, he should be paid for them. Now he makes a handsome income from being a grumbler!

Many Contestants for B'bg Amateur Nights

Brownsburg, Aug. 12 —

Monday night Amateur Programs, revived in the new Recreation Hall eight weeks ago, have now to their credit the appearance of more than forty different artists who have performed behind the footlights, many of them on more than one occasion. Audience interest is definitely on the increase so far as these Amateur Hours are concerned and the hearty applause that greets each performer is responsible, in no small measure, for the increase in participation on the part of those who have ability. Appearing on Amateur Programs July 28 and August 4 were Muriel Davidson, Pauline Blais, Lucille Gordon, Marie Paquette, Cecile Chenier, Beatrice Vinet, Jim Gallagher, Guy Viau, Carmel Malo, Dick Whitie, Allard Sicard, Cameron McKenzie and genial Michael Malone who acted on both occasions as accompanist.

Stardom Delayed

"BOY SCOUTS KNOW WHAT TO DO !"

A tribute to the value of Boy Scout training was the response of Canon A. F. C. Whalley to congratulations upon a triple swimming rescue at sea performed by his son, and former King's Scout, Sub.-Lt. A. G. C. Whalley of the R.C.N.V.R., during a bomber attack upon a British destroyer. Wrote Canon Whalley: "There is no lack of courage on the part of bystanders in an emergency, but they don't know what to do or how to do it. A Scout does know. He is prepared, and acts promptly. I am sure that the best thing I ever did for my own three boys was to make Scouts of them."

Disney's Characters To Campaign for War Effort

To Make Films for the Canadian Government

The Honourable J. T. Thorson, Chairman of the National Film Board, said that the National Film Board has secured the co-operation of the Walt Disney Studios to make films for the Government of Canada.

Mr. Walt Disney has offered his own co-operation and that of his studio staff as a personal measure of support for Canada's war effort. Two representatives of Mr. Disney's studios, Mr. Robert Carr and Mr. Ub Iwerks, have arrived in Ottawa by plane from Los Angeles to discuss two project which the Disney Studios will begin work on immediately.

The first in a series of films for pictures will be short animated cartoons, done in Technicolor in the inimitable Walt Disney style. Disney's characters will stage a war savings parade on Parliament Hill, Donald Duck will obey his better self and buy a War Savings Certificate, the Three Little Pigs will show how to beat the Big Bad Wolf, and Snow White's famous Seven Dwarfs will hock their jewels to serve the national cause.

The second project is a military training film in the cartoon technique to be made for the Minister of National Defence.

Mr. Carr and Mr. Iwerks were sent to Ottawa by Mr. Disney to see Canada's war effort for themselves at first hand. They will remain in Ottawa for a week to consult with National Film Board and other Government officials.

There was a timid knock at the door. "If you please, kind lady," said the beggar, "I've lost my right leg."

WHEN WAS INCOME-TAX FIRST IMPOSED?

In these days when the income tax plays so great a part in national and provincial revenues, it is interesting to reflect that it was first imposed as a War Tax in 1798 by William Pitt, the English statesman. It was so unpopular, though, that it was abolished in 1816. It was again imposed in 1842 by Sir Robert Peel (famous for the introduction of Penny Postage and Policemen), and has remained a cardinal tax in Great Britain ever since.

PLAN FOOD PRICES CONTROL; MAYORS TO BRING OIL SAVING CAMPAIGN TO CIVIC DOORSTEPS

Democracies' Mastery of Sea Evidenced in Churchill-Roosevelt Atlantic Conclave

All Canada Mourns A "Captain of Industry"

Highlights in the Week's National News

A "Master Plan" to regulate the cost of staple food commodities in Canada is being worked out at Ottawa by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board.

Operations during the First Great War of the Canada Food Board, it is understood, are serving as a guide in the drafting of the new price regulations plan. Details of the plan are being guarded carefully.

There is good reason to believe the plan, as it now shapes up on paper at conferences of the inner circle of the Board, involves the placing of adjustable "roofs" on the prices of such basic commodities as bread, meat, butter, milk, eggs and domestic fruits and vegetables.

This general price "freezing" on food costs could only be done with domestic production. The plan should be drafted and in shape for formal announcement by September.

Meanwhile the Board is coming to the aid of Canadian housewives, as best it can, by arranging the marketing of substitute commodities in the food line where higher prices are beginning to hurt.

That prices are generally up is a point upon which housewives, store managers and Board officials have no argument.

Costs have advanced, a War Prices Board spokesman has said, because of reduced supplies resulting from certain foods having been placed by the Government on the restricted list to conserve foreign exchange, because of increased ocean freight rates and disruption of shipping schedules.

MAYORS APPROACHED IN OIL SAVING DRIVE

Mayor Stanley Lewis, of Ottawa, as president of the Canadian Federation of Mayors, has been approached by Federal Oil Controller Geo. R. Cottrelle, to enlist the active support of mayors and civic officials across the Dominion in the drive to conserve gasoline.

The Federation, it is reported, has agreed to give full support to the campaign, and mayors will be asked to make proclamations and exert their influence in other ways to curb the consumption of vital fuel oil supplies. Police Departments will also play an essential part in seeing that the restrictions are enforced. As a further measure to impress oil economy as a community responsibility, the mayors will be asked to "contact some person or organization to assume responsibility as the local representative of the conservation campaign." It is suggested that the president of the local Board of Trade should be invited to make the facilities of his organization available, and with the local press and the radio help to promote the voluntary conservation of gasoline.

As the early closing restriction on service stations becomes more generally known, it is interesting to observe that in Toronto the number of week-end motorists stranded by gasoline shortage showed a 70 per cent drop last week-end. Motorists are catching on to the new regulations and are filling up their tanks before the service stations close on Saturday or else are leaving their automobiles in the garage.

Calls from stranded United States tourists showed a 50 per cent reduction. Of the numerous calls, only two requests for gasoline supplies were granted, these being genuine emergency cases.

"CAPTAIN OF INDUSTRY" GIVES HIS LIFE

In the death of Rt. Hon. Arthur B. Purvis, the entire Dominion is conscious of a grave loss to its wartime personnel. Mr. Purvis died in a plane crash which claimed the lives of 21 others — technicians, radio operators and pilots of the Ferry Command, on a return trip from England to Canada.

The tribute of Walter O'Hearn, columnist in the Montreal Standard, crystallizes public sentiment in this calamity . . .

"'Died on Active Service' might well be inscribed above his grave", —writes O'Hearn. "He had money and success, but he had a lively social conscience and he was killed in the line of duty, just as those ferry pilots were who crashed to death with him . . .

"I think when somebody coined the admiring phrase 'captain of industry' he had in mind a man very like the late A. B. Purvis."

MASTERY OF ATLANTIC

Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt have safely disembarked from their ocean jaunt — a mission which, apart from its high significance in the closer knitting of wartime relations, was a venturesome and risky undertaking. If Britain's mastery of the seas was ever in suspense during the costly Battle of the Atlantic, this venture should dispel all doubt — for it proves not only the courage but the confidence of those who have their fingers on the pulse of Germany's sea-blitz. Britain rules the waves, indeed. And out of this epoch-making conference we may hope for things of greater immediate importance than that "post-war peace program" which was the published outcome of the voyage.

BUILDING FIRM HAS WARTIME HOUSING CONTRACT

25 Temporary Homes for Munitions Workers

Cottingham Supply Company Also Erecting Large Structure at Sorel

Brownsburg Development to Ease Tension Of Wartime Housing Problem

A housing scheme for Wartime Housing Limited is now under way at Brownsburg, where the local building firm of Cottingham Supply Company has a contract for the erection of 25 prefabricated and demountable houses on the Filion property.

The homes are being built to the order of Wartime Housing Limited for the Brownsburg branch of Defence Industries Limited, to meet the abnormal demand for living accommodation for married munitions workers and their families. Designed to fill only a temporary need, the houses may, however, be made permanent should the demand continue, or they may be dismantled and reassembled on a permanent site.

The dwellings are described as 1½-storey buildings, erected on cedar posts, each home to provide four bedrooms, a living room, a kitchen and dining-room combined, and a bathroom. They will be well insulated and of substantial construction.

Five "Precision Built" Homes Now Occupied

Of the nine "Homasote" or "Precision Built" homes already built this season at Brownsburg for private ownership, five are now taken up and the remaining four are still available.

Now Prefabricating Units for Building at Sorel, Que.

Cottingham Supply Company here has also undertaken a building contract at Sorel, Que., to erect an extensive structure to house war work inspectors in that busy centre. The foundation is now being laid, while here at the Cottingham plant the units for walls, floors, ceilings and roofs are being made in readiness for shipment, and actual erection of the building should start about September 15th.

The building is to measure 140 by 28 feet, of E-shape with three 56 feet wings.

Virtual Pioneers in Canada Of Prefabricated Housing

It may be noted that, while the "Precision Built" principle has been employed for some time in the United States, Cottingham Supply Company are virtual pioneers in any appreciable use of this system in Canada. The company has received ready collaboration from U.S. authorities on this trade development — which, in an interview with The Watchman, was compared to the mass production of the automobile turning out thousands of units and parts accurately manufactured for assembly. It was contended, similarly, that shop construction of houses makes for accuracy; there is no "cut and patch" expediency at the construction site of a prefabricated building. In its solid, weather-proof fitting, this type of building is claimed to be superior to houses built by the conventional method. The bench prefabrication idea employed by Cottingham Supply Company in its Brownsburg and Sorel contracts thus embodies a principle which holds immense possibilities for the building trade in Canada.

Soldiers "Digging For Victory" in Off-Duty Hours

APPRECIATION FOR GIFTS OF CIGARETTES

Two more appreciative letters from overseas have been received by Mr. Chas. Walker, who is in charge of the cigarette fund of Lachute Lions Club on behalf of local soldiers serving abroad. We quote extracts from these letters:

(From Sgt. Walter A. Cooper, Royal Montreal Regt.) —

"Please convey to members of the Lions Club my sincere thanks. Arrival of these gifts was hailed with delight, as here they are worth their weight in gold . . . All is well here, morale never higher, but memories of Lachute and the kindness of its people linger with me."

(From Gnr. Stephen May, First Med. Regt., R.C.A.) —

"We are still in billets and busily engaged keeping ourselves in fighting trim, so that we shall not fail your trust when our turn comes to tackle the Hun.

"During our off-duty hours there is a lot to be done. Some of us go out and help the gardeners with their 'Dig for Victory' plots. Some of our boys even have plots of their own and the results look very promising. Others are busy on the local farms making hay and looking after the livestock. Still others are busy improving their education with courses provided for them by the continued effort of the Canadian Legion War Services and the ladies of the I.O.D.E. So you see, there is plenty to do and plenty to be done; and if at any time you find there isn't any work to do, the Sgt. Major usually pops up and by some uncanny instinct always finds work for the idle.

"For the past month, the weather has been unbelievable. With the exception of two insignificant showers, we have had no rain and the sun has shone every day. It is quite hard to believe that this is real English weather.

"For some time now, Jerry has been pretty quiet, due perhaps to the surprising activity of the Russian steam-roller. However, the people over here don't mind it a bit and are still carrying on regardless of whether he comes or stays.

"They are as usual the same marvellous people, and that same unbeatable spirit which hangs a Union Jack on a pile of rubble and starts out to begin again, has brought England through this much of the war, and it will carry them on to the end.

"My thanks again, to the Lions Club . . . I had some very happy times in Lachute, and I eagerly look forward to the day when I can enjoy once again the kind hospitality you people afford."

Sports Veteran Re-enlists for Active Service

D. CAMPBELL COMMISSIONED AS LIEUTENANT IN THE ORDNANCE CORPS

STARTED HOCKEY CAREER HERE IN HOME TOWN

Dave Campbell, a native of Lachute and one of the best known figures in Canadian amateur sports, has gone on active service with Canada's armed forces, thus getting into his second war.

Campbell's record in amateur hockey has made a distinct contribution to the caliber of Canada's national sport. He was coach of the amateur Canadien team in the Quebec Senior Hockey League last season and also pilot of the M.A.A.A.A. club of 1930, only Montreal squad ever to capture the Allan Cup.

Dave Campbell, who had been serving with the 17th Duke of York's Royal Canadian Hussars of the reserve army, in Montreal, has now been commissioned as a lieutenant in the Royal Canadian Ordnance Corps. He served overseas with the Royal Canadian Artillery during the four years of the first Great War, returned in 1919 and played with the N.H.L. Canadiens in 1921. Later he regained his amateur status, only to turn professional once more with Philadelphia Arrows in 1928. He had a unique hockey record, losing his amateur card four times and regaining it just as often. He coached the Victoria Hockey Club from 1935-36 until that body disbanded and last year handled the Canadiens.

Campbell's departure leaves Canadiens without a coach and it is likely that steps will be taken this week to fill the vacancy.

London Humor in the Blitz

MISSES FRESH FRUIT

Humors of London are described in a graphic letter received at the Montreal headquarters of the Queen's Canadian Fund for Air Raid Victims. The writer is Mrs. Leonard Rees, "Pandora" of the Sunday Times, who was well known in Canada as a journalist under her maiden name of Molly MacLeod Moore. She writes:

"It is funny to see what we take down to the shelter for the night—a packed suitcase in readiness for having to bolt at a moment's notice, a gas mask, handbag with all sorts of things, including passport and identity card, eiderdown and pillow, extra coat and whatever books we want. Yet people are heroic and cheerful withal. Somehow, though I would hate to lose my nice things, I don't really care much: It is so small compared to all that is happening and to the cause.

"At present thank heaven, there is a lull in raids as they are busy with the Russians and also we are bombing them so heavily, but we do not fool ourselves that it is over. However, the rest is a comfort.

"It always interests me to see the way the bombed out shops at once hang out signs telling where they have moved. Some of them are on a sort of clothes-line across the street, which is barred to traffic. The shops themselves put out signs, some dignified and some funny. The best was a man whose shop was partly demolished. He said 'our shop may be litter, but—to hell with Hitler, business as usual.' One I pass often says pathetically 'No, business is not as usual, but we carry on.' A large panel outside a place of business printed that 'In time H.M. Forces will see that these attacks are paid for. Meantime, behind these battered walls we carry on our business with the same attention to the needs of customers though with a reduced stock and staff." Everywhere there are the signs telling people where to go and what to do if their houses are bombed. Every care is taken that they shall have help quickly; there are first aid posts, rest centres, places where they can register new addresses, etc, etc.

A.R.P. Acts as Nannie

"At first, as I said at the Air Raid Precautions post one day, people thought the A.R.P. was a joke and a nuisance. Now we are the Father and Mother and Nannie of the people, and they do appreciate it.

"One thing which will interest people is about the shop-windows. Where they have been smashed and may be smashed again, they cover the space with boards, except for a 'peep-hole' window in the centre and often the boards are painted with pictures of what is for sale inside—most amusing. One shop said laconically: 'Smaller windows, bigger bargains.' I like best the sign: 'Hitler breaks our windows, not our spirits.' Another amusing thing was outside a former ducal mansion, hardly more than a shell now, but at the top of the steps

Lachute Man Dead in Crash Near Capital

38-YEAR-OLD RESIDENT WAS ON BUSINESS TRIP

Ira W. Jamieson, 38, resident of Main Street and well known in this town, was killed in a highway crash Tuesday evening around 8.30 o'clock, while his elder son, Gordon, aged 9, and two other passengers were injured. The accident occurred on the Wakefield highway 25 miles north of Ottawa. The Jamieson family had been staying for two weeks in that district, the home of Mrs. Jamieson, while Mr. Jamieson, a traveller for the Glidden Paint Company, was working in the territory.

Scant particulars of the mishap are available here, but it is understood Mr. Jamieson was driving southward toward Ottawa. His son, who was standing behind him, said that in passing an approaching truck the car collided, and another truck following close behind the first, also sideswiped the two vehicles.

Mr. Jamieson was fatally injured, and his son Gordon received facial cuts and head injuries. Two lady passengers accompanying them on a trip to Cumberland — Mrs. Mary Johnston, 62, and Miss Mina McLaren, 60, were severely injured. Mrs. Johnston suffered lacerations of the forehead and a fractured nose; Miss McLaren, with an injured knee, fractured ribs and head injuries will be confined to hospital for some time. All four were conveyed to Ottawa by ambulance, but Mr. Jamieson died on the way without regaining consciousness.

Mrs. Jamieson and son, Gordon came to Lachute on Wednesday, returning for the funeral, the cortege leaving at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon from Ottawa undertaking parlors for interment at Buckingham.

Ira W. Jamieson, whose parents live at Masson, Que., came to Lachute with his wife and family two years ago. A host of friends in the community extend sympathy to his wife and family.

DEVOTEE OF MAPLE SUGAR INDUSTRY IS DEAD IN MONTREAL

John Grimm Founder of Well Known Company

The founder and head of the Grimm manufacturing company, Mr. Grimm was a native of Cleveland, Ohio, and came to this country as a young man. The Maple Syrup and Maple Sugar Makers of Canada Association owes its existence to Mr. Grimm, who throughout his lifetime devoted his interest to the maple sugar industry. He was also president of the Maple Tree Producers Association, Limited, of Montreal.

Business Premises Are Modernized

Keeping stride with the modernization of many local business properties, Lachute Lumber & Manuf'g. Co. Ltd., is greatly improving its offices and showroom on Chatham Street. This company has been closely linked with the recent growth of industrial and residential property in this county, having filled orders for manufactured lumber on many projects. Enlargement of the company's business quarters is consequent upon this added business.

The spacious showroom will give adequate display of the materials, paints, builders' hardware, plumbing and tools handled by this firm. The main office and showroom are panelled with oak-stained grooved plywood of B.C. fir, and with fluorescent lighting and large windows, the interior is bright, airy and attractive.

MELONS $7 APIECE IN GREAT BRITAIN

Chickens will not help to solve the problem of August Bank Holiday food for many housewives. Yesterday there was not a roasting chicken to be had in the shops at the controlled price of 1s. 10d. (44 cents) a pound.

But you could buy plenty of whole, cooked chickens at 20s. — ($5.) each.

Young birds, hardly a single portion each, were selling at 6s. 6d. ($1.50) each, roasted and stuffed.

Uncontrolled fruit was abundant in the West End. Melons were £1 7s. 6d. (nearly $7) each. Other prices: Grapes, $2.25-$3.00 lb.; red currants, 75c.; table gooseberries, 85c.; peaches, 60c-$1.20 each; nectarines, 80c.

300,000 CHILDREN IN QUEBEC CHECKED BY HEALTH UNITS

Quebec, Aug. 16 — Nearly 300,000 Quebec children in all parts of the province have come under supervision of Quebec Government's various county health units during the first half of 1941, it was stated from Hon. Henri Groulx, Minister of Health and Social Welfare for the province.

A total of 70,864 children under school age and 44,128 babies were visited in their homes by various doctors, hygienists and nurses of the Ministry of Health in the first six months of this year.

In addition, 78,619 school children were examined and 22,025 consultations were also given on pre-natal or post-natal cases.

The fight against diphtheria was continued throughout Quebec in the first half of 1941 when 10,620 children were immunized by receiving preventive injections against this dread disease.

Furthermore, 2,640 clinics were held and 44,128 babies were examined during the period under review, it was learned.

Convention of Weekly Editors

PREMIER A. GODBOUT AND DISTINGUISHED SPEAKERS ADDRESS SESSIONS

TRIP TO SAGUENAY AND HISTORIC SITES

— By R. A. Giles —

One of the largest conventions ever held by the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association since it inception 22 years ago took place in Quebec City on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of last week, with some 250 delegates in attendance from all over Canada, together with a number of visiting publishers from the United States.

Headquarters were at the famous Chateau Frontenac, the social centre of Quebec, that ancient and picturesque city of 142,000 inhabitants, a bustling sea-port and thriving industrial centre. Here every courtesy was extended and the splendid location overlooking the St. Lawrence made an ideal setting for such a gathering.

While impossible to go into detail on such a trip we will endeavor to give our readers a few of the highlights of our week spent in this historic spot.

Under the chairmanship of Mr. H. Rice, of Huntsville, Ont., the business sessions were carried on during the mornings, when topics of interest and benefit to weekly newspapers were ably handled by experienced speakers, from Canada and the States, and thus through interchange of thoughts many new ideas will be adopted by those privileged to listen, which in a general way will do much toward the improvement of our newspapers.

Historic Sites Visited

A visit to Ste. Anne de Beaupre famous as a great pilgrimage centre, gave us the opportunity of seeing the celebrated "cyclorama" of Jerusalem, the day of the Crucifixion, and recognized as a masterpiece of panoramic painting, the most real and most artistic on the American Continent.

Historical Kent House and Montmorency Falls, are also most picturesque and interesting, the height of the latter at 274 feet, exceeding those of Niagara by 109 feet. Kent House was the home of H. R. H. The Duke of Kent, father of the late Queen Victoria, while in command of the 7th Royal Regiment of Fusiliers at Quebec, 1791-1794. It still stands staunch and rugged, and at present is used as a summer hotel, and while modernized to some extent, the old fireplace and winding stairway remain just as they were in 1791.

Distinguished Speakers

Hon. Mr. Godbout was among those who addressed the Press gatherings, and in his remarks referred to Canada as a "well constituted family of provinces, with Quebec as a member, embracing sacrifice for the common good as an honorable, ennobling and satisfying duty."

"Look at her sons," he said, "vieing with their English-speaking compatriots in every branch of our armed forces and on every field of

Good Season For Resorts in The Laurentians

MOST RESORTS ENJOY BUSINESS INCREASE

The fear that war would prove detrimental to tourist travel from the United States into Canada, seems to have been unwarranted, on the evidence of many resorts in the nearby Laurentians which report a greatly increased business this season and a large percentage of their visitors from across the border.

A survey of leading resorts from Ste. Jovite down to Ste. Marguerite indicated the Laurentians have so far enjoyed the best tourist patronage on record. Many resorts have been filled to capacity, several posting up signs reading "no rooms available."

Most of the guests are Americans, one resort reporting U.S. vacationists numbering 80 per cent of the guests, another advising that out of 65 guests in the house 49 were Americans, and another reporting "more Americans than we've ever had."

Most of the Canadian guests hail from Ontario.

With several resorts already "sold out" for the Labor Day holiday and reservations coming in fast, resort owners are looking forward to what promises to be an unprecedented fall season.

American tourists are not complaining about gasoline rations, resort proprietors claim, and they add that most of the car-owners are using their vehicles only when necessary.

Only complaint to be found was that of lonely lady guests who appear to outnumber male guests three to one.

Maryland, American Fast Medium Bombers, for Britain

Among the bomber aircraft being supplied by America to Britain is the Maryland, manufactured by the Glenn L. Martin Company. It has two Pratt and Whitney R. 1830 engines, and is a low wing monoplane. Its undercarriage retracts backwards in the engine nacellos. It carries a crew of three. Span 61 ft. 4", length 46 ft. 8", height 9 ft. 7" . . . In the above picture a Maryland bomber is seen arriving at a British aerodrome.

Twelve Men Can Build Bridge in Six Hours

London — A bridge of sixty feet span can now be built by twelve men in six hours as a result of the application in a novel design of standardized bridge units by British engineers.

The basis of the construction consists of five standardized steel parts — a standard girder, a circular bobbin or drum to which all cross girders can be fixed, a U-shaped hanger plate, a cross girder (for roadway and heavy bridges), and standardized floor plates, 10 feet long and 2½ feet wide. In spite of the fact that spans 150 feet long can be built for heavy loads, all these parts are comparatively light. The components have been designed without projections and large numbers can thus be stacked and packed in small warehouse or ship space.

The aim has been to provide a series of simple standard components all interchangeable, from which every type of bridge can be built. In war, when bridges may have to be replaced with all speed the advantages of such equipment are evident. Equally important is the ease with which permanent bridges can now be built in difficult "up-country" territory where transport may be limited to native carriers using quite primitive appliances. Girders can be assembled with ease. The different parts can be immediately identified. Even the nuts and bolts which grip the structure are of a standard size throughout.

Indian Steel Workers Found New Tradition

Montreal — "Ask an Iroquois Indian of Caughnawaga what trade he intends to follow when he grows up, and he will probably look at you in dumb amazement," said burly Jim Mayo, foreman of all Indian employees presently working on the new hangar of Trans-Canada Air Lines at Dorval, Que. "You see, there is practically only one job known to the male Iroquois and that is steel riveting and construction rigging, that employment having become almost traditional."

"Indian boys first think of work at around sixteen years of age," Jim continued. "It is my job to employ this type of labor and the only qualification I insist on are a willingness to work and no shirking at high climbing, and very seldom am I disappointed. When a young chap from the reservation begins his trade, he, with other beginners, is put to work with a gang seasoned with old timers and it is really remarkable how quickly he picks up the work."

In addition to the new Air Lines hangar at Dorval, Indian riveters have been engaged on many steel construction jobs connected wits the C.N.R. The Montreal Terminal, the steel work of which was recently completed and the shops at Pointe St. Charles, are projects which employed many Indian riveters. The skill of the Iroquois on steel construction is internationally known. Agile afoot, they are equally at home working at dizzy heights as they are on the ground.

The world-famous Quebec Bridge, spanning the St. Lawrence River seven miles above Quebec, is another project which engaged many Iroquois Indians on the gigantic erecting and riveting job involved.

WORLD'S OLDEST COW

Was Twenty-Nine Years Old

(By Mail)

London — Thirty years ago a cow of the Ayrshire breed was exported to Australia from Scotland.

She had a calf named "Victoria", and this animal has just died at the age of twenty-nine years, the greatest age ever recorded for a milking cow.

At eighteen years of age, when she was bought by Messrs. Korff Bros., of Campbelltown, New Sydney, she produced 15,595 lbs. of milk and 473.35 lbs. fat. Two years later she was champion at the Sydney Royal Show, and even at the age of twenty-four, when she won second prize, she gave 13,313 lbs. of milk and 542 lbs. fat.

"Victoria's" only son, "Glengowan Victor", born when she was twenty years old, has sired some of the greatest milk producers in Australia, while a daughter of hers, "Glengowan Joyce" held the Australian record as a two-year-old, producing 53,433 lbs. milk and 2,296.9 lbs. fat in four lactations each of 273 days.

End of A Raider

Here's one bird that found attacking a friend doesn't pay. While driving a delivery truck through Cedar Valley near Hillsbury, Arthur Robinson, Guelph, saw a huge chicken hawk hit the front of his vehicle. He stopped to free the bird and as he attempted to do so the hawk attacked him. He killed it. The wing spread measured 44 inches.

"Blitz" Victims Wear Millionaire's Suits

And He Sends to London from New York, for New Ones

(By Mail)

London — Suits made in London for an American millionaire have gone back across the Atlantic. They will be handed on to London working men left by air raids with nothing but what they stand up in.

And the millionaire has given his London tailors fresh orders for five lounge suits and two sports outfits, so helping Britain to pay for U.S. aid in the war.

The business magnate who made this gesture has bought his clothes from London for over twenty years, and his tailors have made suits for Americans since 1861.

For forty years past their representatives have toured American cities every spring and autumn, with samples of suitings, shirtings, ties, stocks, dressing gowns and so on. Advising clients of this itinerary beforehand, they take rooms in well-known hotels, where the customer is received exactly as though he were visiting the Strand in London. Parlour E on the ground floor of the Murray Hill Hotel, New York, has been so used for every trip during the past twenty six years.

Mahomet, on the other hand, goes to the mountain too. In peace time more visitors arrive in London for its tailors from the United States, South America and the British Empire than for all Britain's ancient monuments, night clubs and even the Derby itself.

Victoria Bridge Medal Interesting Souvenir

Montreal — A Victoria Bridge Medal, struck eighty-one years ago to commemorate the opening of the bridge linking the Island of Montreal with the mainland, was recently donated by its owner to the Telephone Museum and Historical Collection in Montreal. The medal refers to the Victoria Bridge — the old tubular structure — as being "the greatest piece of engineering skill in the world," while on its converse side there appears data appertaining to the structure of the bridge and to its cost.

"You seem very quiet tonight, Roland," said the pretty girl. "Are you — are you sure you love me?"

"Love you !" Roland exclaimed. "Good Heavens, Rhoda, when we were saying goodbye at the gate last night your dog bit a piece out of my leg, and I didn't even notice it till I got home !"

Flying Typist From Yukon Visits Toronto For C.N.E. Marathon

[Lebarge,
From the far-off marge of Lake
Where they cremated Sam McGee,
A steno fair, typing in the air,
Wings toward the C.N.E.

—Robert W. Service, 3rd.

Toronto, August 18 — In step with this mechanized age the first passenger to arrive in Toronto direct by plane from the Yukon, the land of Sam McGee, will not be a sourdough with his bags of gold but pretty Anne McKenzie, speed typist, with her portable typewriter in her pack. She will alight at the Trans-Canada airport two days before the opening of the Canadian National Exhibition to take part in the Third International Typewriting Marathon.

She comes here at the invitation of the C.N.E. to complete representation of all the Dominion on the Canadian National Typing Team with representatives from all parts of the Dominion.

To reach Toronto in time for the marathon the flying typist will be in the air over 26 hours and will cover approximately 3,160 miles. In the three week period she is away from Whitehorse she will have written some 200,000 words and travelled some 6,320 miles. She has received special permission to carry her typewriter in her cabin for use on the plane to enable her to practice en route for the fast pace set by the speed typists in the marathon.

In Whitehorse, where Miss McKenzie works as a stenographer, for the Department of Transport in the Civil Aviation Branch, typists are few. In emergencies she acts as Court Reporter and records the findings of the Boards of Inquiry into sudden deaths. She has been in Whitehorse since last winter when she went into the North by plane, the only means of transportation into that country.

The 22-year old typist was educated in Regina and is a graduate of the Balfour Technical High School. Before going to Whitehorse her only knowledge of the Yukon came from Robert Service's "The Cremation of Sam McGee". Upon arrival she found that Sam McGee's ashes were still being sold to the odd and gullible tourist.

HEARD AT CAMP

She'd stood about as much as she could, but her enthusiastic partner in khaki seemed ready to go on forever. At last she became desperate.

"What's the difference between dancing and marching?" she asked him.

"I don't know," he replied.

"I thought so!" she said. "Shall we sit down for a while?"

4-Months Trainees Will Be Posted to Coastal Commands

Ottawa — Formal Order to give effect to the decision that men called up for four months' training under the National Resources Mobilization Act be retained in the Canadian Army for service within Canada was announced this week by the Hon. J. L. Ralston, Minister of National Defence. As a general rule men in training centres east of Sault Ste. Marie will be posted to units in the Atlantic Command, and those in centres west of that point will be posted to units in the Pacific Command.

Men now in the training centres completing their four months' training will have an opportunity to apply for postponement of their service to one of the National War Services Boards, who in most cases will proceed to the Training Centres to hear applications. For postponement it is necessary for those who apply to show facts and circumstances that will enable the Boards to determine the merits of the cases.

The grounds on which the Boards are empowered to recommend leave of absence without pay are similar to those on which the Board have acted in granting postponement of training. In cases where postponement is granted the man will report for duty on expiration of his leave. Those who are not granted postponement will commence their service as soon as their training period expires, but at the end of six months' service, which will include their initial four months' training, they may be granted two weeks furlough on the same basis as enlisted men in the Active Service Force.

Men called up for service this month and hereafter under the four months' training plan will not have the right to apply for postponement of service since they will have had notice of the intention to retain them for service on the completion of their training and will have had the opportunity to apply to the Board for postponement before their training began.

About 4,000 men have been called for compulsory training beginning July 31st. Of these 1,300 are men who have already had 30 days' training, and will be required to undergo another three months on completion of which they will be retained for service in Canada or its territorial waters as will the remaining 2,700 called for the full four months' training. Application for postponement must be made to the Divisional Registrar within eight days of the date the notice was issued. On being called out for additional training and subsequent service, the thirty-day men will be entitled to claim Dependents' Allowances on the same basis as men now undergoing four months' training.

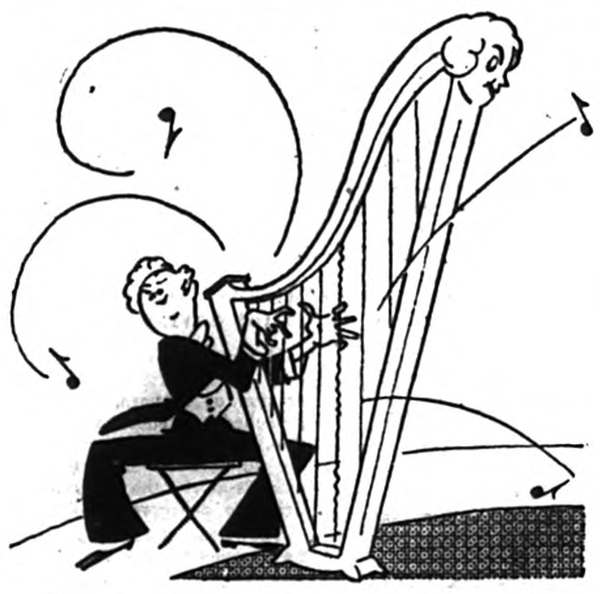

Motor vehicles registered in Canada during 1940 numbered 1,500,829 compared with 1,439,245 in 1939, an increase of 4.3 per cent.

Troops Now to Receive Full Training Before They Leave Canada

Ottawa — With the spread of hostilities and the possibility that Canadian formations may be sent direct to new theatres of war, the ultimate object of the Canadian Army system of training must be to ensure that such formations leaving Canada are trained to a standard which will enable them to fight effectively from the moment they land. This point was emphasized by Col. J. K. Lawson, M.C., Director of Military Training at National Defence Headquarters, in a national broadcast this week.

Differentiating between this war and that of 1914-1918, Col. Lawson pointed out that each officer, N.C.O. and man must be so highly trained individually that he is able to carry out his task in any circumstances without waiting for lengthy and detailed orders, and he must be absolutely fit. A further difference is the large number of skilled tradesmen (some 150 classifications), required today in the Army, few of whom can be recruited direct from civil life without interfering with war industry, and who must be trained within the Army. To meet these requirements a system of training establishments numbering over 60 has been set up for the training of individuals from senior and staff officer to rear rank private.

With regard to collective training, Col. Lawson said that while previously the higher stages had been completed overseas, this must in future be done before troops leave Canada, close liaison with the British Army being maintained by exchange of officers, and the periodic return of Canadian officers from overseas to take command in this country and to act as instructors.

Cash Sales for Canada

Some months ago The Watchman commended the practice of a few local merchants who retained a supply of war savings stamps in the drawer of the cash register. Coming within view of patriotic-minded customers, these stamps alone may inspire the buyer to take one or two in place of coin for change. A good-natured suggestion from the cashier may persuade many others.

In the bigger drives for War Loans and Victory Loans, the minor measures must not be lost sight of. Salary-deduction pledges must be fulfilled, and a constant effort maintained to boost the smaller sales, which mount up to big money.

A Call for Foresight

Canadians are not forced to fall back on blind faith to convince themselves that the battling people in the British Isles are working feverishly to prepare for an offensive operation in Europe. Our newspapers have been publishing dispatches which bristle with evidence that doughty Britishers are getting ready to strike back. But when the blow will be struck, none in Canada knows.

If the inner War Council did decide on a major operation, it could not "telegraph its punch". No one over there is in a position to send a message to Canada — "We are about to attack. We must have every drop of gasoline and oil you can rush across to us now."

But surely we in Canada have enough intelligence and imagination to foresee that a sudden favorable opportunity may present itself to the armies in Great Britain any time within the next few weeks. And that same intelligence and imagination should dictate the sharpest curtailment in the use of motor fuel for motor cars without a day's delay.

It would be a pity if the stamina of Canadian citizenry were to be judged by the spectacle of a few thousand leisure-time car drivers, for example, who knew that gasoline had to be saved for the desicive battles overseas, and knowing it, deliberately travelled thousands of miles for the long week-end holiday.

It would be too harsh perhaps to say that all of these motorists deliberately thumbed their noses at the Empire's war effort. The answer might be that they have not yet been sufficiently impressed by the seriousness of the situation. And if that is the answer, there is little excuse, for the newspapers of Canada are doing their utmost to make the matter clear. — And everyone reads the papers.

Bad Taste

A Toronto firm of publishers has issued a $3. book by a German flier, now in a Canadian internment camp, in which he tells how he helped bomb London and Coventry and the British troops at Dunkerque. Whatever the financial arrangements are, publication at this time is in bad taste.

The True Canadian

It is a pleasure to know that there are plenty of good people in Canada who for the sake of King and Country will respond to any appeal to help in these critical times. Without being compelled to, they will eat fewer oranges, use less gasoline or any other commodity that must be purchased in the United States, so that U.S. exchange may be saved for the purchase of essential war commodities. It matters not to them that others exercise no self-sacrifices; they prefer to do their bit regardless of others. Lovely, these people are. Happy is the nation that is largely made up of them.

—Simcoe Reformer.

To Economize in Rubber Next ?

One of these times we may be called to economize on the use of rubber as a war measure, as we now are being asked to cut the consumption of gasoline. Already there are indications of a move in this direction in the United States. Advice to motorists in the matter of saving on rubber, which is good it any time, is offered by the Minneapolis Star-Journal, as follows :

Keep tires at the right air pressure.

Never slam on your brakes except to prevent an accident.

Have wheel alignment, front and rear, checked regularly.

Give your tires personal inspection from time to time.

—Cornwall Freeholder.

Man's Seven Great Mistakes

Man's imperfections lead him to make many mistakes in life, and the pointing out of these frailties has engaged the attention of philosophers and reformers in all ages. A writer recently enumerated what he considers the seven greatest mistakes of man. Here they are :

1. The delusion that individual advancement is made by crushing others down.
2. Insisting that a thing is impossible because we ourselves cannot accomplish it.
3. The tendency to worry about things that cannot be changed or corrected.
4. Refusing to set aside trivial preferences in order that important things may be accomplished.
5. Neglecting development and refinement of the mind by not acquiring the habit of reading.
6. Attempting to compel other persons to believe and live as we do.
7. The failure to establish the habit of saving money.

EASTERN CANADIANS PLAN AUTUMN HOLIDAYS IN VICTORIA

Though the vacation season is now in full swing, the far-sighted easterner is already looking ahead to autumn days and planning to follow fleeting summer to its winter hideout—Victoria on the sunny southern tip of Vancouver Island, where winter is just a harmless word. Many find solace in Victoria's old-English atmosphere, fragrant gardens, and balmy sea air, while others find thrills in matching wits with scrappy Pacific salmon, stalking the wily cougar, or enjoying the less adventurous pastimes of golfing, tennis, yachting, sea-bathing, cycling, motoring, mountain climbing or trail riding.

These are a few of the year-round vacation delights of the evergreen island, accessible from Vancouver or Seattle by "Princess" liners of the Canadian Pacific coast fleet. The trim, luxurious vessels that also ply the Alaskan route and the west coast waters of Vancouver Island, treat the Victoria-bound tourist to all the delights of an extended ocean voyage during the four hour crossing through the island-studded waters of the Gulf of Georgia.

Victoria's artistic skyline is dominated by the ivy-covered Empress Hotel, whose quiet dignity and old world charms have endeared it to thousands of visitors. Centre of social and sporting activities of the Island Capital, the Empress offers ready access to leading golf courses, including the popular Royal Colwood, and to Butchart's Gardens, Beacon Hill Park, the Inner Harbor and the scenic Malahat Drive. The glass enclosed Crystal Gardens, adjacent to the Empress, provide indoor sea-bathing facilities all the year round.

Victoria is a city of surprises. Policemen are patterned after the London "bobby"; life moves at a leisurely pace, and at four o'clock "everything stops for tea." And thanks to the warming vapors of the Japanese Current, the city can turn a deaf ear to the calendar. Roses bloom in December, the Christmas spirit manages to flourish without snow, and the Island greatest golfing classic, sponsored by the Empress Hotel, is held in mid-winter! Small wonder so many heed the city's well advertised message on the British Columbia mainland—"Follow the birds to Victoria — a little bit of Old England."

POLAND OPERATES SECRET PRESSES

— By Czeslaw Poznaski —

One of the first things the Nazis suppressed in Poland was the Press. Pre-war Poland had 2,200 periodical publications, among them 190 daily papers. Today, in German-occupied Poland, there are only sixteen publications in the Polish language and they are all published by the Nazis. But alongside this Nazi controlled Press there is a network of illegal publications, a network amazing in its richness.

The full number of these illegal publications is not known, but it is probably not less than twenty-eight and their range is extremely wide.

First of all there are the daily papers; roneo-typed sheets which give the foreign news on the basis of the B.B.C. broadcasts — one must remember that the Poles had to surrender all their wireless sets — and inside information from Poland.

Then come the weeklies, normally printed. They contain precious inside information from Poland, foreign news and editorials. The standard of these editorials is unusually high. They deal not only with the analysis of the present situation, but also with the construction of the future. A regular feature of these weeklies is the analysis of important articles in the British Press. Some of these papers are illustrated, so that one may find in one of them, say a photograph of Winston Churchill and General Sikorkski inspecting the Polish Army.

There exist also monthly and quarterly reviews which contain synthetic analyses of the war situation. These reviews carry as many as thirty-two pages.

Special papers are produced for the peasants, for the youth, for the children. There is even a humorous paper, with anti-German cartoons and jokes. And in the Warsaw ghetto there is a Yiddish paper.

Scores of thousands of copies are thus issued, and it can be asserted that this illegal press reaches practically the entire population. Proof of this statement is provided by the fact that the whole population obeyed the order, conveyed by the papers on September 1, 1940, to stay indoors during the afternoon. It was also by means of the papers that the Polish petty officials were instructed, in order to avoid repression, to take the oath demanded by the German authorities.

Apart from these regular publications there are also occasional leaflets, short pamphlets and quite longish publications, one of which deals with the post-war reconstruction of Europe.

All these publications entail printing presses — probably concealed in the woods of Poland — well over a hundred editors and contributors, and hundreds of thousands of readers. Every person involved risks his life, for death is the penalty not only for working on an illegal paper, but even for reading it.

THE CONVOY SYSTEM

The convoy system, writes a special correspondent to the London Sunday Times (July 27), in spite of losses, has proved as effective a protection this year as it did in the first 6 months it was employed in 1917. The approximate comparative figures are: tonnage sunk, January to June, 1917, 2,250,000 tons; tonnage sunk, January to June, 1941, 2,500,000 tons.

When it is remembered that in the present war merchant shipping is assailed by bombers as well as by U-boats and that the enemy has now the immense advantage of working out from Atlantic bases on the Bay of Biscay, it is obvious, from these figures, that protection given by convoy is just as effective as it was in the previous war.

It has been suggested by some that faster cargo liners and vessels of 15 knots and over should be allowed more frequently to sail on independent courses — trusting to their speed to escape from attack by submarines. (A submarine can make only 15 knots on the surface under favorable conditions, less than 8 knots when submerged).

Experience does not favor this contention. When, last summer, owing to the damage done to destroyers during the Dunkirk evacuation, the authorities found themselves compelled to sanction a considerable number of independent sailings by faster merchant ships, the monthly losses rose rather steeply. In one period between July and October, the average size of ships lost was as high as 5,000 tons — which meant precisely that those larger and faster ships which were sailing independently were being picked off by the raiders.

NAVAL AND AIR HELP TO RUSSIA

The recent spirited British attacks on two Arctic ports near the Soviet border — resulting at Kirkenes in a double hit on the German warship Bremse, a fast well-armed sloop of nearly 1,500 tons, now armed as an anti-aircraft ship, and, at Petsamo, in damage to the only quay — once again demonstrated the long arm of British sea and air power. The importance of the German-held Norwegian port Kirkenes is the single road, recently built by Germany, leading to Finland. From the Finnish Petsamo, which there is some reason to believe has been used as a German submarine base, operations have been pushed against the Russian port of Murmansk, 75 miles to the east.

The stiff resistance to these British attacks, resulting in the loss of 16 aircraft, is a measure of the importance which the Nazis attach to this area.

FOR THE GROUSERS

Do those people who cavil at the Roosevelt-Churchill manifesto — and believe me there are plenty who do — know what they are talking about? Do they realize what the score is?

How on earth could they expect the two leaders of democracy to reveal the grand strategy of democracy to the public, to the world, including the Nazis and the Nazi stooges?

You hear the wordy few grousing that the Roosevelt-Churchill document was merely a talk on ideals and generalities, a talk about the future.

Of course it was. It was the outline of the broad war aims of a great nation at war and of another great nation which is backing it in this war. It was necessary to announce those war aims because hundreds of publicists and many other highly vocal people were howling for them, especially in the United States.

The eight-point program of the President and Prime Minister has been called too like Wilson's Fourteen Points. Well, there was nothing wrong with Wilson's fourteen points, it was the hash that statesmen at Versailles made of them.

We needn't suppose that Roosevelt and Churchill spent their whole time drawing up that single document. In fact we have been told that they did not. What they devised was grand strategy — and it would be a poor thing now to feed that strategy to a few vociferous, news hungry critics.

We shall know in full time what went on at that mid-ocean conference and pray God we find out nothing prematurely, for too much publicity might spell the doom of many men.

—Walter O'Hearn in the Montreal Standard.

What Would You Do ?

Montreal — You have an appointment with your lady friend at your favorite meeting place but find yourself, at the last minute, unable to keep it. There is no apparent way to let her know. What would you do? Well, here's what a Canadian National Telegraphs messenger received by way of an assignment recently: "Go to the corner of blank and blank streets (a busy intersection) and look for a short, nice looking girl, wearing glasses. Tell her that her boy friend said for her not to wait for him as he is unable to keep the appointment but for her to go to his mother's house. She will know where it is." The young lady was found and the message delivered, to the satisfaction of all parties.

The Nazis are said to have crossed a river by laying down an artificial fog. This seems to be the first use of a propaganda department in actual combat.

QUEBEC RED CROSS SHOWS FINE RECORD

Montreal — During the first six months of the present year the Quebec Provincial Division of the Canadian Red Cross Society shipped overseas or distributed to military centres in Canada a total of 966,212 articles valued at $219,800, according to the half-yearly statement issued in Montreal by officials of the Society.

These finished articles were made by the 35,000 women volunteer workers in the 183 Red Cross branches throughout the province.

The greater proportion of these articles — or 204,631, were garments for civilian relief in England. These included many hundred of "kits", which contained complete outfits of clothing for women and children bomb victims.

Slightly more than 22,380 articles were shipped overseas especially for members of the Women's Auxiliary Services in England.

The value of the garments for civilian relief and the Women's Auxiliary Services was $114,800.

Shipments totalling 238,156 articles, valued at $105,000, were sent overseas or distributed to military centres in Canada. These included hospital supplies and knitted articles for members of the navy, merchant marine, army and air force.

More than 501,000 surgical dressings were made in six hospitals in the Province of Quebec at the request of the national office of the Canadian Red Cross Society for shipments overseas.

During the past six months donations of 46,555 finished articles have been received at Red Cross House. These contributions included not only a large number of garments, afghans, quilts and knitted articles but also many hundreds of utility bags, containing such personal articles as sewing equipment, comb, soap, wash-cloth, and tooth-brush for women bomb victims in England.

Preliminary Hearing Postponed at L'Orignal

Appearing in police court at L'Orignal before Magistrate Raoul Labrosse, George Daviau, 22, of Grenville, was charged with leaving the scene of an accident and dangerous driving on highway 34, one mile north of Vankleek Hill, when Stanley King, 45, was killed after being struck by a car. No plea was entered by J. B. Woods, counsel for Daviau, and on request of the Crown, the case was remanded, bail being set at $1,000 cash.

Called into the case, Dr. T. R. Little, Ottawa pathologist, made examination of the car alleged to have struck Mr. King. Dr. Little later left for Vankleek Hill to exhume the body of the victim, for examination.

Preliminary hearing was started at L'Orignal on Monday of this week, and is to be resumed again next Monday.

If, instead of a gem or even a flower, we could cast the gift of a lovely thought into the heart of a friend, that would be giving as the angels give. —George Macdonald.

PRAISE FOR THE ALLIED SEAMEN

"What an immense debt we owe to the merchant seamen !" exclaimed Mr. Eden in a recent speech at Leeds — voicing the general feeling of gratitude which all Britons extend to the Allied sailors who, amid the ocean's dangers, keep the convoys plying between the ports of freedom. "The homes and families of many of these brave men," he continued, "are in countries occupied by the enemy. The service which they are rendering with so much courage brings nearer the day of freedom for their own people and for others."

Some short time before this, Mr. Herbert Morrison led the House of Commons in paying tribute to "the devotion, courage and gallantry" of these men who, with steady perseverance, are braving daily perils in the interests of a common cause.

Because you lack a noble and successful past, is no real reason why you should lack a noble and successful future.

LONDON HUMOR IN THE BILTZ

were square window-boxes growing tomatoes and lettuce. The rationing is something I suppose you in lavish Canada can hardly believe in. Half a pound of jam or marmalade, or syrup, per month per head; of course, you have heard what tea, sugar and meat are. Fresh fruit is what we miss most. I haven't seen lemons for nearly a year I think, perhaps not so long, and in six months I have had three oranges. I had strawberries last week-end which I spent in the country with a friend and she had them from her garden. Cherries are 3/6 per lb. Even dried things like prunes and apples are not to be had just now.

"Yon can't say too often and too strongly that the people are magnificent. No one whines, and no one even suggests that we should do anything but conquer or die. All of us would die willingly if that would help, but we can't choose.

"Did you ever hear about the woman who was bombed out and said: 'Well, there's this to be said. These raids do take one's mind off the war.' And a woman who had been bombed out of her house twice and was sleeping in a tube shelter. She said 'I did laugh when me and the old man got back from 'ere and found the front of the 'ouse was gone again.'

"The funniest story I know, though grim, was told me the other day. A lot of small houses were bombed and people injured, so the rescue and demolition squads were busy digging and investigating. Everywhere they went an old man pottered after them, watching and peering at the holes. After hours of this the foreman got cross and said 'Oi Mate, what's the idea of 'anging about after us, like this?' The old man said indignantly—'Me 'anging about! 'Oo's got a better right to? This was me 'ouse.' The foreman downed tools and said — 'Your 'ouse? Blimey, your 'ouse! And why in 'ell didn't you say so sooner? It's you we're digging for."

JEWISH SOLDIERS IN NEAR EAST

There are now ten thousand warriors of Judah in the Jewish military effort in Palestine. The same number were embodied in the Jewish Legion in 1918 but these were then recruited from the whole world. The pioneers in Cyrenaica have been highly praised by British officers. The first Palestinian Company of the Auxiliary Military Pioneer Corps accompanied forward troops from Sidi Barrani to Benghazi. Lieutenant General Sir Richard O'Connor stated in despatches that the capture of Tobruk would have been impossible without the help of the Pioneers at Sollum.

Christian Science Sunday Services

"Mind" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon to be read in Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, August 24th.

The Golden Text is from I Corinthians 2: 16. "Who hath known the mind of the Lord, that he may instruct him?"

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "For I know the thoughts that I think toward you, saith the Lord, thoughts of peace, and not of evil, to give you an expected end." (Jeremiah 29: 11).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "God is His own infinite Mind, and expresses all . . . The Scriptures imply that God is All-in-all. From this it follows that nothing posesses reality nor existence except the divine Mind and His ideas. The Scriptures also declare that God is Spirit . . . Spirit is divine Principle, and divine Principle is Love, and Love is Mind, and Mind is not both good and bad, for God is Mind; therefore there is in reality one Mind only, because there is one God." (pp. 310, 331, 330).

"The present is never our object; the past and the present we use as means; the future only is our end. Thus, we never live, we only hope to live. —Pascal.

W. M. S. Meetings at St. Andrews East

St. Andrews East — The monthly meeting of the Presbyterian W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. Proven McCulloch, Isle-aux-Chats, on the afternoon of Aug. 13th.

After the devotional period and business meeting, the Rev. John R. Heyworth, guest speaker, was called upon to address the meeting. This is an event anticipated with pleasure each summer season. Mr. Heyworth's theme on this occasion was "British-American Relations". He said he lived virtually in two worlds, both different; for nine months he lived in Chicago, the center of isolationism, and for three months at "Journey's End" here in St. Andrews.

He was proud of being an Englishman, he said, contributing the English spirit to the building of that American democracy. He was also proud that America was drawing nearer to this historic struggle in which democracy was the stake.

A large attendance was present.

A solo was sung by the daughters of Mrs. Stanley Hamilton, after which refreshments were served by the hostesses for the day.

• • •

The W.M.S. of the United Church held their August meeting on Tuesday evening, August 12th, in the United Church. The Rev. J. A. Mowatt conducted the devotional period. Baptist Church Mortgage Burned at Maple Avenue Congregational Gathering

Brownsburg — Members and friends of Maple Avenue Baptist Church met Saturday evening in the church basement for their annual congregational supper. About one hundred persons enjoyed a very fine meal, provided by the ladies of the church.

After supper the pastor spoke of the fine leadership given by the Ladies' Aid of the church in helping to wipe off the mortgage against the parsonage and property. A copy of the mortgage was produced and was burned in the presence of the gathering; this was followed by a minute of silent prayer. Appropriate passages of Scripture were then read and the pastor of the church led in a prayer of thanksgiving and rededication.

Anniversary Services Held

Sunday being the twelfth anniversary of the church, Rev. John Waltho, a former pastor, had been invited to preach the sermons for the occasion. Good congregations listened attentively to messages from the Word, morning and evening. Special music was provided by Mr. Arthur White, of Montreal, and Mrs. John Waltho, of Villa Nova, Ontario, singing solos, while Mrs. Waltho and Mr. W. Tomalty rendered a duet, and a double quartet was given by Mrs. G. Creswell, Mrs. W. Tomalty, Mrs. Jones and Mrs. Fred Barker. Mrs. Utter, of Arkona, and Mrs. N. E. Smillie officiated at the organ and piano. The services were conducted by the pastor, the Rev. James R. Simpson.

They Walked Back

The badge of the "Late Arrivals' Club," an exclusive body of R.A.F. pilots or air crew who have had to abandon their aircraft either in the air or on the ground as a result of enemy action, and returned to their squadron later than their estimated time of arrival, is the "Winged Boot." Many of the members had been given up for lost, and the majority walked at least part of the way back.

HEADACHE A WARNING SIGNAL

Headache is a sign that something is wrong somewhere in the body. The cause may be one of 50 different troubles. It may, for example, be caused by eyestrain, overeating, infection, or some food to which the person is allergic.

Although headache is one of the most frequent conditions affecting human beings, just what part of the head structure produces the sensations of pain has still not been determined. The brain itself is insensitive to pain. Of course, sometimes the pain may be on the outside of the skull, such as occurs in neuralgia or neuritis. Within the skull itself the lining over the brain, known as the meninges, or the blood vessels, may be responsible for the pain sensations.

Even though the exact source of the pain in headache is not known, a great deal has been determined about the various things which may produce headache. For example, in a study of more than 350 patients made by Dr. Cecil C. Worster-Drought of London, England, about two-fifths of the patients were suffering from migraine or sick headache. Others had their difficulty as a result of hardening of the arteries in the brain, high blood pressure, some head injury, brain tumors, near-sightedness, diabetes, kidney disease and infections of the sinuses or the teeth. Disturbances of the stomach and bowel account for most of the other headaches which occur.

Headache should never be treated just as a symptom which might be relieved by giving some pain-killing medicine. A thorough examination should be made in every case of headache to determine just why it is occurring and to find the underlying disease so that it may be properly treated. In many cases the cause for the headache may be a rather insignificant condition but in other instances it may be the first and only sign of some serious disorder. For such an examination to be complete it must include, in addition to the usual study of the blood pressure, the urine and the blood, a careful study of the nervous system.

It is a good idea to examine the back part of the eye, known as the retina. If it is suspected that the headache is produced by a disease of the nervous system, some of the fluid from the spinal canal should be withdrawn and examined. An X-ray of the skull may also sometimes give important information in cases of headache produced by a disturbance of the pituitary gland at the base of the brain.

There are certain things about the headache which may be of help in making a diagnosis. Attacks of pain in the head which come on at irregular intervals are frequently due either to migraine or neuralgia. Sometimes, however, the same sort of pain may be produced by a brain tumor. Pain which is of a dull, throbbing nature is most often produced by high blood pressure. Pain in the head which is produced by injury is usually made worse when the individual stoops and it usually is accompanied by dizziness. The pain caused by migraine is almost always on one side. However, pain produced by a brain abscess may also be limited to one side of the head. Pain in the back of the head is most often produced by a disease affecting the back of the brain, known as the cerebellum, or by some inflammation in the muscles of the neck. Pain in the front part of the head may be produced by some condition increasing the pressure within the skull.

The time at which the headache occurs also might give information about its cause. For example, headaches caused by infection are usually relieved when the individual lies down. If the pain disturbs the sleep at night or awakens the person in the morning, it usually indicates some more serious condition.

With a careful study the cause for headache can usually be determined. Once this has been done, measures to relieve the condition can usually be carried out effectively.

A THREE-MASTED SCHOONER

There is a fascination about a sailing vessel that no other can equal. Three years ago we saw quite a few in Nova Scotia. There was a scarcity of bottoms for carrying lumber and old schooners which had not been sailed for years were put in commission again. We saw many three-masted schooners, a few four and were lucky enough to see a five-masted schooner. But all of them had seen their best days. This week we were on a trip and happened to see a three-masted schooner. She was a beauty and much the best we have seen; a steel vessel and in good condition. She was not a Canadian boat but had come from one of the other British possessions. I saw her at an Eastern Canadian port but not where you think.

BUFFET MEALS

Buffet meals intrigue me. There is usually an assortment of things and it is fun to pick out what you like best. Even though I like them so much I seldom serve them because most of our company for meals are married people and men seem more comfortable when they can sit at a table. This summer I have adopted buffet meals but set the dining room table as usual. Usually I have a salad meal, and let my guests assemble their own. I have a big bowl of lettuce or have mixed salad greens if I can get them. Then I have something substantial. Often it was baked ham but we cannot have that these days. Now I frequently have cold salmon. You may have heard Saint John people boast about the Saint John Harbor salmon. All I can say is that it lives up to their highest boasts. Sometimes I have mixed sea-food salad, salmon, lobster and shrimps. They can all come out of cans if necessary. I have a very large glass plate and on it I arrange all the things I can find to go into the salad. In the centre I pile whatever there is most of, potato salad, devilled eggs, tomatoes or what have you. Here are some of the accessories to the fact I have had at various times; cucumbers; radishes; green onions; sliced onions separated into rings; rings of green pepper; cress; olives; gherkins; or sliced pickles. I pass the lettuce bowl first, then the other things and let each person make up their salad to their liking. My guests seem to enjoy it and it is interesting seeing the way the individual salads vary.

THIS AND THAT

This Buffet idea has its uses in an emergency. On Sunday someone suggested we ask the B's for supper. Now that was a good idea as we all like the B's. Woman-like I immediately thought what we would have to eat and it didn't seem as if we had anything. However given time one can always manage something. I raided the refrigerator and I found a number of odds and ends and not enough of any one thing to be of much use. So I devilled eggs to make a back log of plenty. These I piled in the centre of my big plate. There were a few slices of a canned meat that is being advertised so much these days. There wasn't a slice apiece, so I halved each slice and arranged these neatly on one side. There was part of a can of shrimps and I piled these on the other side of the plate. There were three tomatoes and part of a cucumber and these were sliced and neatly arranged, and in between I put a few slices of celery, a handful of radishes and some pickled onions. The plate was an attractive looking plate and did not look as if it had been made up of odds and ends. When we finished supper, Mr. B. said he did not know when he had enjoyed a meal as much as there was such a variety. Later Himself said that was a good meal you gave us tonight, I grinned to myself and no one knew there hadn't been enough of anything to go round.

SLOWER FREEZING

Every instruction I have ever seen for making ice cream in electric refrigerators tells you to freeze as quickly as possible. It may be our particular refrigerator, (although the instructions with it says fast freezing), but I can make much smoother, creamier, ice cream, by freezing it slowly. If I want it to be smooth I have to stop the freezing before it actually gets firm. Just as soon as it is really firm it begins to get ice crystals in it and that ruins if for our tastes. If it is not to be used immediately I put the tray in the highest compartment very early in the freezing or it freezes too hard and gets icy. I can make several varieties of smooth ice cream but none of them will be smooth if they are stiffly frozen. If you have been having trouble with your ice-cream, try less freezing and see what happens.

CUCUMBER SALAD

Pare large cucumbers, quarter and remove seeds. Dice, add a little finely chopped onion, and mix with enough salad dressing to moisten. Good with hot meats.

JELLY-MAKING HAS NO AGE LIMIT!

"Mother, what can we do that's new?" What a familiar request during holiday time. Summer vacations are long, and parents are often put to it, to keep their children amused and happy. As one Mother expressed it "Even children get tired of nothing but play."

They really enjoy work—particularly when they can see results. And what could show more pleasing results than making bright, sparkling jellies and jams with sun-ripened fruits and berries? Pitting cherries, hulling berries and cutting or peeling fruit may be turned into really constructive effort. Then when the young jellymakers see the labelled glasses in the jam cupboard — they feel a definite sense of achievement.

Explain to them carefully the new short-boil way of making jams and jellies . . . these instructions are included with natural fruit pectin in either bottled or powdered form. Here are two simple homemade spreads that will be a credit to any jelly shelf:

Ripe Peach Jam

3½ cups prepared fruit, 7½ cups sugar, 1 bottle fruit pectin.

To prepare fruit, peel and pit or core about 2½ pounds fully ripe fruit. Grind or chop very fine. If desired, 1 to 3 teaspoons spice may be added.

Measure sugar and prepared fruit, solidly packed, into large kettle, and mix well.

Bring to a full rolling boil over hottest fire. Stir constantly before and while boiling. Boil hard 1 minute.

Remove from fire and stir in bottled fruit pectin. Then stir and skim by turns for just 5 minutes to cool slightly, to prevent floating fruit. Pour quickly. Paraffin hot jam at once. Makes about 10 glasses (6 fluid ounces each).

Ripe Plum Jelly

(Makes about 7 medium glasses)

3 cups juice, 4 cups sugar, 1 box powdered fruit pectin.

To prepare juice, crush thoroughly, (do not peel or pit) about 3 pounds fully ripe plums. Add ¾ cup water, bring to a boil, and simmer, covered, 10 minutes. Place fruit in jelly cloth or bag and squeeze out juice. (If there is a slight shortage of juice, add small amount of water to pulp in jelly cloth and squeeze again).

Measure sugar into dry dish and set aside until needed. Measure juice into a 3 to 4-quart saucepan.

Place over hottest fire. Add powdered fruit pectin, mix well, and continue stirring until mixture comes to a hard boil. At once pour in sugar, stirring constantly. Continue stirring, bring to a full rolling boil, and boil hard ½ minute.

Love is blind, but there are plenty of people willing to make spectacles of themselves for it.

Fallacy of 'The Weaker Sex'

—Gunner Howard J. Rutsey in The Newmarket Era

"The Nazis may bomb us out of our homes, kill our children, rob us of all we hold dear, but they will never conquer us." These are the words that resounded in the ears of all who cared to hear them throughout the length and breadth of England and particularly in the city of London. To me, as a Canadian, who had hazily thought of Englishwomen as glib, cockney-talking persons, this spirit, this pride and strength of character, made me proud to call them sisters. Here were physically weak women, showing a courage and a defiance in the face of conditions that shook the hearts of the stoutest of men, setting an example of courage that will live forever when brave deeds are recounted. Should the world wonder, then, at the courage of the British seamen, soldiers and airmen, when they are bred by such women?

During a sojourn of three months in London, I had an admirable opportunity to study at first hand, this courage of the British women. In the east end, in streets of Tottenham Court Rd., Theobold's Rd., Stepney, where tenement after tenement was bombed down, burying women and children, I walked and talked with the women of these districts.

Never will I forget a day following a night of heavy bombing last December. I watched some elderly women soothingly talking, as only they could, to a young woman, who dry-eyed watched rescuers searching the ruins for the dead. "She has lost two children in this building," was the whispering that came to my ears. To me, this calmness in the face of her great loss, was a callousness, I thought, that was both bewildering and unpleasant. But when I looked closely at her, this terrible calmness was not callousness. It was all too indicative of the frightful agony this brave soul was suffering. Only her terrific will power held in leash her reeling senses, for all she held dear lay twisted beyond recognition beneath the wreckage of what she once called home.

Finally she spoke. "Yes, they are gone, poor lambs." She sighed. "But, but I'm not the only mother who has lost little ones." Her eyes gleamed for a moment and almost fiercely she said, "But I have Willie, and, wherever he is, I hope he gives those devils a good one for me and them." That was all she said and this Spartan mother returned to her calm watching as the rescuing squads went on with their grim work. Maybe Willie, her husband, who, in a British destroyer prowls the seas in search of the enemy, heard her. Maybe all the seamen in England's floating fortresses, maybe our intrepid airmen, too, have heard similar prayers of anguish from their womenfolk and with inexpiable hate are sweeping the seas and air of Germans and Italians alike, herding them to their predestined doom. So in the faces of these truly Spartan women I found the answer to the question "Is there a weaker sex?" No, definitely no, there is no weaker sex in England.

Here in these little islands girdled by the sea, the search for the race of women, Amazons in heart and courage, is ended. So much as we regret it, we must chalk up one good deed for Hitler. To him goes the honor of disclosing to the world the spirit of our English women. This war has revealed to the world that in the British mother exists a moral courage, a stoutness of heart, a nobleness of soul, a willingness to sacrifice in a righteous cause, entitling them — and surely the warrior gods will agree — to seats of honor in the famed Viking halls of Valhalla.

Has England to fear of success when she has such women to breed her sons? We know now, too, who is the weaker sex. They ride the skies and bomb civilians at the dictates of Hitler. They march into defenceless and neutral countries, ravaging and pillaging at the wave of his hand. They brutally manhandle all peoples who do not agree with their ideology. They strut about the countries of a bowed but unbroken Europe, these vain moral weaklings, guised in the habit of men. But their all too apparent weaknesses will and are being daily revealed.

The indomitable spirit of the women of England is like a tocsin bell, ringing round the world. Its music was heard in Greece and Jugoslavia and soon all freedom-loving people, with this example of courage in the face of terrorism before them, will rise in their united might and forever sweep these moral cowards, these Nazis of the weaker sex, from the face of the earth.

BEAUTY

EXCESSIVE PERSPIRATION

There cannot possibly be a less pleasant subject to talk about or write about than the baneful body odor. It is a trouble that is all too common, one that interferes seriously with social and business affairs. Sometimes it is due to disease of the sweat glands, more often the reason is lack of cleanliness. How any man or woman can endure it, we cannot even guess. Certainly the victim must be conscious of it.

If a woman bathes daily, as everyone should, if she changes her undergarments frequently, sends unwashable garments to the cleaner, uses a deterrent in the armpits and is still beset with body odor, it is high time for her to see her physician, have a though medical examination. She may be suffering from some slight organic or functional disorder that throws upon the surface of the skin certain chemical deposits that become offensive.

Rapid tissue waste that occurs during the process of weight reducing can be responsible for this condition, so the calorie counter must be on her guard. An inclination to nervousness or hysteria will create it, as will some forms of neuritis or rheumatism. Hyperidrosis, or oversweating, may be a symptom of some disease that is slightly devitalizing but of minor consequence. At any rate, it is disgusting and dreadful, and something should be done about it.

When the victim is in a state of perfect health, the trouble then having to do solely with overactivity of the sweat glands, quick hot showers followed by cold ones are recommended. There should be a vigorous rubdown with a coarse towel. A practice that has been found a blessing is the salt glow. Take a small bowlful of ordinary table salt, friction the crystals into the flesh, turn on the tepid water to remove them. The salt grinds away dead skin scales, leaving a thoroughly clean surface.

There is a theory that rapid decomposition of sweat may be due to germs, either vegetable or parasitic, and that the free use of soap will discourage these growths. There must be a strong, rich lather; it must be applied with a firm brush. The thing to do is to try out one treatment after another until relief is found.

Diet has its place in treatment of excessive perspiration. Onions and garlic should be avoided. Fibrous meats and fats seem to make matters worse. Fruit juices and crisp green salads should be taken each day.

Cosmetic chemists offer various deodorants; they come in different forms — liquids, powders and creams. They are highly effective. Some of them, applied to the armpits, need to be used not oftener than once every six weeks. They seal the pores. No harm results. Thousands of other pores carry on.

Neighbor: I've just heard an awful story about your husband.

Mrs. Brown: Do tell me—I need a new hat.

FASHIONS OF TODAY

— By Jean Walsh —

Today's fashions are interesting especially from one point of view. After years of factory mades, of standardization of styles, and of peculiar and sometimes not too becoming fads and fancies, we are at last coming into our own. We are seeing, we women, that there is more to a dress than a season's wear, than a slip hung with gadgets and nicknacks, made of sleezy stuff, and cut to fit no one in particular. Every fashion report, every style show, every big store, is turning from the "racks of little dresses" idea to the new ideals . . . quality and cut, — individuality rather than standardization.

Bear this in mind when you choose your Fall clothes. Clothes will be getting scarcer now. Factories are turning out war materials instead of pretty frocks, the great market to the South is closed to us for anything but ideas, and Canadian women must spend their money far more wisely and well this Autumn than they ever have before.

Quality means just what it says. Quality of fabric is important, so that your dress will not wear shiny, will not be outmoded because you have selected a material too extreme. Quality of workmanship, so that the garment fits you, and will go on fitting you. Quality of cut, so that the fabric will fall in the correct lines without bulging or wrinkling. A badly cut dress, which is slightly off the centre of bias or straight, will fit you for a week or so, and then will stretch out of shape. And after it has been cleaned, oh, woe is you! Quality of style, too, is important, which means today's lines in a not yesterdays, and yet today's day's lines modified to meet your get any more, but as something

This is the year to study fashions. This is the year to choose wisely of fabrics, for instance. There are interesting new ones on the market, such as the spun rayons, the Alpine cloths, Jersey materials, cashmeres, soft almost transparent wools, smooth matt crepes, and new in the fall picture, satin gleaming like a brave banner. Try the new fabrics. They have been woven for you, not as substitutes for something we can't get any more, but as something distinctly new and with definite advantages. They have uncrushable features — they have blends of wools and rayons in anything from 25% wool to 80% wool, and in weights which should satisfy anyone's climate or preference.

This is not done to substitute for unavailable wools, but to give women more comfort, more style and more practical wear in her busiest year.

Individuality does not mean "typing". Don't decide you are a type, and stick to it. It means selecting that which is most becoming to you out of prevalent styles, and wearing it. It means modifying a big brim here, narrowing a waistline there, slimming a skirt on some other frock, all with an eye to your figure and requirements, and also with a thought towards today's trends.

Don't go into your fall wardrobe in any scatterbrained way this year. Plan it to last, and plan it for quality rather than quantity.

ENGAGEMENT NO BAR TO DANCE INVITATION

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

A young man I know and I have had an argument which we would like to have you settle. He says that it is proper for an engaged girl to ask a young man to dance, providing she knows him, and that it is not proper for him to ask her to dance. Recently we met at a dance and he, not knowing my fiancé very well, did not ask me to dance, later giving me the above explanation. I cannot agree with him because I have always expected a man to ask a girl to dance, whether she be single, married or engaged. My opinion is that the young man should ask the girl in her fiancé's presence and then ask his permission. We will appreciate it if you will settle this argument for us. —E.

WHEN REPLYING TO MESSAGE OF CONDOLENCE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

Recently I had a death in my family and I have received many letters of sympathy. I am at a loss to know whether I should answer these.—S.

Yes, these letters of sympathy should be answered. It is not necessary for you to answer them at once, for any friend will understand a delay of course, and it is not necessary for you to write a long letter — just a sentence or two will be sufficient.

Dear Miss Robbins:

You were most kind to send me such a beautiful message of sympathy and I do want you to know how deeply I appreciate it.

Sincerely Yours,

Dear Mary:

Thank you deeply for the message of sympathy that you and Fred sent to us in our sorrow, and for the beautiful roses. You were most kind and we appreciated so much your goodness and friendliness.

Affectionately,

LADIES OF ICELAND TAKE TO LIPSTICK

London — Iceland has taken to lipstick.

Hundreds of pounds worth of it and of vanishing cream, cold cream, face powder and skin freshener are being shipped from Britain there and to the Faroe Islands.

The ladies of Iceland had just begun to use these things before the war. In the Faroes they were unknown until today.

Volunteer Nurses Given Opportunity to Serve In South Africa

Medical officers of the various military districts throughout Canada are in charge of applications. One year's service with an option of renewal is required. First class passage from Canada to South Africa and return will be provided. The nurses will wear the uniform of the Nursing Service of the Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps with South African badges, but will get South African rank, pay and allowances. Qualifications for enlistment include that the nurse be a British subject, physically fit, a graduate of a recognized school of nursing, and registered in her provincial nursing association.

DERBY WINNERS CROSS ATLANTIC

(By Mail)

London — The fourth Derby winner to be shipped from Britain in the last twelve months to earn foreign exchange for the war effort brings to something like £1,000,000 the value of thoroughbred horses sent overseas since war was declared.

He is the famous thoroughbred, Cameronian, who has won races to the value of £31,287, including the Derby and the Two Thousand Guineas, and has sired the winners of 77 races, valued at £62,000. Shipped to Buenos Aires, where he should breed great winners for his Argentine owner, he is the first Derby winner to be sold to that country since the last war.

Three other Derby winners are included in the 1500 thoroughbred horses which have been exported from Britain since war broke out.

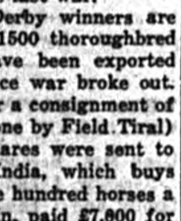

Early this year a consignment of four yearlings (one by Field Tiral) and six brood mares were sent to Canada, while India, which buys about four or five hundred horses a year from Britain, paid £7,000 for Tant Mieux and £2,000-£3,000 for several other horses. Breeders in South Africa received Blitz, Chesham, Nord Express and City of Flint.

Captain Buys Bluenose

Capt. Angus Walters, who piloted the schooner Bluenose to permanent possession of the international racing schooner cup, has bought the champion all for himself. He is reported to have paid $10,000 to the more than 100 shareholders for complete ownership. Today the Bluenose is on the Atlantic fishing banks, gathering harvest from the sea for the empire's war effort. Her 58-year-old owner is running a dairy in Lunenburg and has swallowed the anchor forever . . . he hopes.

Boy Scouts The World Over

Toronto's A.R.P. organization calls for the use of Scout bicycle and foot messengers at each of the city's 2,602 Warden Posts.

The Town Council of High River, Alta., has transferred to the local Boy Scouts a site adjacent to the town park for the erection of a Scout hall.

The Boy Scouts of Granby, Que., whose salvage campaign last summer produced $476 for the Red Cross, are in charge of the National Salvage campaign in that district.

Three small Wolf Cubs of the 17th Winnipeg Cub Pack called at the City Hall with a cheque for $21, "for the London Lord Mayor's Fund." They said the money had been raised by a Cub concert.

An Edmonton call for a number of young men as hospital orderlies in the R.C.A.F. specially mentioned former Boy Scouts well schooled in first aid.

A LUCKY B. C. SCOUT TROOP

Two truckloads of stage scenery, picnic benches, dishes and cutlery was the unusual but most acceptable out-of-town donation to the hall of the Boy Scouts of Cranbrook, B.C. The contribution came from Lumberton.

A HOT-DOG JOB

Some 75 Wolf Cubs and Boy Scouts were marched to the Newmarket Ont., salvage warehouse for an evening's hard work. It didn't prove so hard. A hot dog "feed," reward for good service.

SALVAGE CAMPAIGN'S STRANGEST CONTRIBUTION

Candidate for the strangest contribution to the National Salvage campaign is an ancient hearse. It was pulled out of retirement by a "six-horse team" of Boy Scouts, and created something of a street sensation. Demonstrating Scout ingenuity, two of its wheels are again rolling usefully, and presumably much more happily, beneath a Scout salvage-collecting trekcart.

Every shell fired across the English Channel is said to cost $3,000.

battle; see her individual citizens at home delving into their savings to swell the war chest of the nation; behold her government taking a vigorous lead in co-operation with the federal authority for the efficient prosecution of the war . . . and then ask whether there need be any misgiving as to where Quebec stands in regard to Canada and its other provinces."

Some people, Mr. Godbout, said, like to look upon Quebec's difference in language and racial origin as "spelling a knotty problem in national policy. They take it that Quebec's aims must necessarily be out of harmony with those of the other provinces, and that a crisis must always create misgiving as to what that supposedly refractory province will do.

"It does not seem to matter to such people that Quebec, ever loyal, ever co-operative, ever enthusiastically helpful, has a long tradition of having done constantly what has turned out to be the right thing to do, from the point of view of Canada as a whole.

"Let there but arise any sort of a crisis," he continued "and inevitably there will come in its wake the begging of the question of what might be termed 'winning Quebec over' to the national policy of the hour."

Finance Minister Ilsley also was a guest speaker and said that direct control of the production of consumers' durable goods would probably be necessary to secure the restriction that will be needed, but voluntary reduction will always be a necessary supplement to such controls and in the early stages should probably be relied on as far as possible. He urged public support to the drivers to cut down the use of gasoline for "pleasure purposes" and to curtail instalment credit sales.

Revealing figures which he said had never been published before, Mr. Ilsley reported that Canada's total war expenditures in July reached the "record figure of about $108,000,000." They now were running, he said, at a rate of $3,000,000 to $4,000,000 a day.

Other speakers were Justice P. H. Gordon, Judge of the Appeal Court, Regina, Sask., who as Chairman of the Red Cross Executive Committee enlarged on the splendid work being done by this organization; Roy D. Kerby, of General Motors of Canada Limited, whose subject was "Canada's Industrial War Effort."; R. W. Keyserlingk, General Manager of British United Press, who spoke on "Some International Aspects and the Weekly Newspaper Field."

International Tennis Tournament This Week At Seigniory Club

Seigniory Club — Gilbert Nunns of Toronto, absent from the Seigniory Club's annual international tennis tournament since 1936, will be seen in action here again this week-end, Aug. 22-24, when he will compete with ranking Canadian and United States net-stars in the three day competition for the Allen McMartin Trophy.

A strong aggregation of the leading players from the States will also appear on the Seigniory courts Friday afternoon, when the tournament gets under way.

The three day meet is one of the outstanding events of the Seigniory season and this year, with members and their guests filling the Log Chateau to capacity and the large numbers expected each day from both Montreal and Ottawa to watch the play, should create a record in tennis annals here.

RECRUITS FOR ALL UNITS STILL NEEDED

Recruiting for the Canadian Active Army is still going ahead under the supervision of Majors Walter H. Scott, M.C., and Robert Roy, joint recruiting officers for Military District No. 4.

In spite of the ever increasing number of recruits applying for enlistment in the Canadian Active Army, there is still a place for anyone of good character and physically fit. The Canadian Active Army requires men for Artillery, Engineers, Signals, Armoured Cars, Tanks, Infantry, Transport and Supply, Medical, Ordnance and other branches of the Service. The army is prepared to teach many trades and to train men to efficiently handle Canada's weapons of war.

Canada needs 40,000 more men this year, and although depending on Reserve Units to fill the gaps, the number derived therefrom will not be sufficient to meet the present requirements. It is expected that everyone able to serve will like to do his bit in the present struggle.

Go to your nearest military organization or apply to District Recruiting Centre, 1121 St. James Street West, Montreal. This office is opened daily till 10 p.m. on week days, and from 9 till 5 p.m. on Saturdays and Sunday. — Come in and talk it over.

FREEDOM OF CITY FOR FAMOUS COW

"Elsie" Goes to Canadian National Exhibition

Niagara Falls, Ont., Aug. 14— Elsie, famous character cow, is to be royally entertained here on August 20 when she stops to see the Falls while on her way to Toronto. In the person of "Wonderful Lady", a war guest cow from the Island of Jersey, Elsie will be given the freedom of this city by Mayor George R. Inglis and will be dined by Hon. William Houck, of the Niagara Parks Commission, and civic officials from border cities.

I.O.D.E. Chapters, local service clubs and the Chamber of Commerce have united to raise contributions to Elsie's "V" Chest for the aid of British war victims. Visiting Canada for the first time solely in the interests of war charity, Elsie will appear at the Canadian National Exhibition with the specially furnished boudoir in which she scored such a hit at the New York World's Fair. All donations to her "V" Chest will go to The Toronto Evening Telegram British War Victims' Fund, which already has sent nearly $1,000,000 to aid distress caused among British civilians by the German air raids on British cities.

"BLACKOUT" DEATH WAS EXAGGERATED

During a blackout practice at St. Andrew's, N.B., stretcher bearers, mostly Boy Scouts, brought in 13 "casualties," according to a press report, "and only lost one man. And his death must have been exaggerated as he was seen on the street next day."

RESOURCEFULNESS AT BOMBED FIRST AID POST

Birmingham Boy Scouts carried out "first aid" repairs at a first aid post during a heavy raid. But for their timely assistance it might have been necessary to close the post to the reception of casualties. The installation of emergency lights and the gas-proofing of doorways were two of the jobs efficiently done. Regularly these boys take turns as fire-spotters and fire-fighters at the post.

WINSTON CHURCHILL "ON THE RECORD"

4,000,000 Gramophone Records Of His Speeches

London — There is a world demand for Mr. Winston Churchill's speeches now recorded for the gramophone. They are being bought in Australia, in Canada, in India, in New Zealand and in South Africa; and again in their own homes American citizens are listening to his "Give us the tools and we will finish the job."

Mr. Churchill has joined the best sellers, among whom today are Paul Robeson with his "Trees", Richard Tauber, now a British subject ("Begin the Beguine"), Webster Booth ("I'll Walk Beside You"), Joe Loss ("You Say the Sweetest Things").

Great Britain shipped more than 4,000,000 gramophone records overseas last year, and matrices (the dies from which records are stamped out) are not included in this colossal total.

The most popular records of recent years are Paul Whiteman's "Rhapsody in Blue" which has sold more than 80,000 to date; Richard Crooks' "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life" (140,000); and the top score is Ernest Lough with 680,000 and still selling. He was a Temple choirboy when he made his lovely "Hear My Prayer". Today he is a stalwart fireman, training a choir from the Auxiliary Fire Service at Harrow-on-the-Hill.

VISIT VALCARTIER TODAY, HALIFAX NAVAL BASE CONCLUDES THE TOUR ON SATURDAY

A tour in which Canadian editors will see for themselves the working of Canada's military program, started at Hamilton on Saturday last, with an inspection of the Army Trade School. Later the editors visited the army's basic training centre at Brantford, Ont., and the National Steel Car Company's shell plant in Hamilton.

On Sunday's program was a visit to the Munitions and Supply Department exhibit at the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto, a visit to the Air Force Observers' School at Malton, Ont., and the army vehicles testing ground at Oshawa, Ont.

Monday the tour included the John Inglis Company's gun plant in Toronto followed by lunch and an air show at Camp Borden, Ont., and later a visit to the armored division in training and the army's basic training centre there.

The Royal Canadian Engineers and artillery was seen at Petawawa, Ont., Tuesday, followed by tea and a dinner in Ottawa. Wednesday the editors visited the Officers' Training Centre at Brockville, Ont., the Fairchild Aircraft plant in Montreal, the Montreal Angus Shops where tanks are being produced, and the Dominion Engineering Company's gun plant in Montreal.

Today, Thursday, the program includes a visit to Marine Industries Limited, at Sorel, Que., Valcartier Camp and the Dominion Arsenal at Quebec.

On Friday the editors will see Debert, N. S., army camp and a nearby Royal Air Force school and then move on to Halifax for "Navy Day."

Dwelling House Razed by Fire, Woman Is Dead

TRAGEDY OCCURS IN THE FARMING COMMUNITY OF GRENVILLE NORTH

Grenville N. — This community was shocked by the disaster which befell one of its residents, David Dumoulin and his family.

A fire which originated in his home totally destroyed the house and all its contents, Mrs. Dumoulin herself being so badly burned that she died a few hours after in a Hawkesbury hospital.

Boy, 12, Shot By Companion With .22 Rifle

A mishap which might have had more disastrous consequences happened at Fraser Lake Sunday evening, when Jack Walker, 12-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Walker, Lachute Mills, was accidentally shot by a companion with a .22 bore rifle.

Chas. Walker and his son had spent the afternoon at Fraser Lake. Mr. Whyte and his 10-year-old son, Robert, of Montreal, were with the Walkers and the two youngsters were shooting at a target from the veranda of the house. Jackie ran to examine the target, when the rifle held by the other boy accidentally fired, the bullet striking young Walker in the back of the neck and emerging at the top of his right shoulder blade.

Jackie was brought to Lachute and received medical attention at the office of Dr. W. F. McMartin, who found the bullet had torn through the muscle and missed all vital parts. The boy is making an excellent recovery.

Sheila MacDonald Praises Fund

Praise for the Queen's Canadian Fund was expressed by Miss Sheila MacDonald, sister of the Rt. Hon. Malcolm MacDonald, British High Commissioner to Canada, on a visit to Halifax.

Through her work in England for air raid victims, she has seen what benefits are brought through Queen's Fund donations.

"There is a great need for all the money and supplies we can possibly get from you . . . You have no idea how greatly we appreciate it. I think it's absolutely marvellous what you've done here," she said.

Local Nurse in Group Visiting Windsor Castle

LONDON HOSPITAL OFFICIALS ENTERTAINED BY THE KING AND QUEEN

A letter received this week by Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Fletcher, of Brownsburg, from their daughter, Miss Alma Fletcher, R.N., now overseas with No. 14 Gan. Hospital Unit, R.C.A.M.C., tells of her visit to Windsor Castle on July 5th, when staffs of the military hospitals around London were entertained by Their Majesties, King George and Queen Elizabeth.

Nursing Sister A. Fletcher went overseas in June last. Making mention, in her letters, of the food rationing in Britain, she states that cabbage and rice have taken a conspicuous place in her present diet.

MILLS IN OPERATION AFTER ONE-DAY STRIKE

Work Resumed This Morning As Agreement Reached Between Management And Employees

Ayers Officials Given Assurance of Orderly and Peaceful Procedure; Conciliation Board Future Arbiter

A general walk-out occurred in the Ayers Limited textile plant at 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon affecting around 500 of the workers. It is understood the strike was staged unannounced to the management and with negotiations pending for a conciliation board on which both management and workers would be represented. It was further stated many of the workers were unwilling participants in the walk-out, the key departments affecting the entire plant. Some of the employees returned to the factory gates Wednesday morning, but work was not resumed. The initiative in this strike was taken, it is believed, by members of Local Council No. 9 Lachute, of the United Textile Workers of Canada. The latter group with headquarters at Cornwall, Ont., is affiliated with the Trades and Labor Congress. Leo Sanson was here in Lachute with other representatives of the Cornwall organization.

No disorderliness or picketing accompanied the walk-out.

Notwithstanding a board of conciliation in process of formation as granted by the Department of Labor, a certain radical element among the textile group established in Lachute organized a walk-out at 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon unknown to and unauthorized by their own executive. As soon as the executive became aware of the fact they ordered the organized workers back to their jobs Wednesday morning, in compliance with the legal provisions of the board of conciliation which declare a strike illegal until the board has heard the case and made its recommendations.

The Ayers company, owing to radical action among some members of the group and fearful of sabotage or other subversive activities, requested the executive of the organized workers to obtain assurances that peace and order would prevail in the mutual interests and for the protection of both the workers and the company. Work would continue when those assurances were given, as there was no "lock-out."

* * *

It was further announced, last night at 6 o'clock, that a settlement had been reached and the workers would return to their employment this morning. The board of conciliation, moreover, would deal with any future representations between the management and the employees.

Lachute Firm Marks Twenty-fifth Milestone

Interesting Record in Family Enterprise of J.P. MacKimmie & Sons; Contrast Between Early Plant and Thriving Establishment Today

A gathering of business friends and customers, numbering around 25, assembled Saturday afternoon at the J. P. MacKimmie & Sons bottling works on Foundry Street to congratulate the firm on its quarter century of progress. Messrs. W. S. and Jas. MacKimmie, senior members of the firm, were presented by their staff each with a silver tray; and by their auditor, Mr. C. T. A. Hart, each with an engraved silver cigarette case.

It was 25 years ago last Saturday — August 23rd, 1916 — that William S. MacKimmie and his father, the late Jas. P. MacKimmie, took over the Cascades Bottling Works from A. G. Larue, who established the business in 1906.

Larue's soft drinks were so tasty that they have stood the test of popularity until today — no appreciable changes having been made in his formulae. William MacKimmie recalls in the early days they made Birch Brew, Iron Brew, Celery Tonic and Strawberry Soda; while these beverages have since been dropped, Coca-Cola is today the best seller and a big factor in their year's turnout of 150,000 cases. This latter figure, the 1941 estimate, compares with a production of 10,000 cases in 1916, their first year of business.

At that early date, Mr. MacKimmie recalls, they were equipped with a steam engine burning slabs for fuel, a hand washer and a foot bottler with a capacity of 20 cases an hour. It was customary to stoke up the engine at 5 a.m. to raise steam for the day's operations. The "rolling stock" in 1916 was limited to a latest model chain-drive Ford truck, in which they covered a territory from Calumet to St. Placide and as far north as Dalesville. In winter the rounds were made with horses and sleigh, a stable at the rear of the plant providing accommodation for the team.

Two of their customers, D. O. Daviau, of Grenville, and H. Lacombe, of St. Placide, have dealt with the firm consistently over the quarter century of its existence.

Today the scene is considerably changed. With a staff of 14, the business operates in extensive, well lighted, attractive quarters. Their equipment is the most modern obtainable . . . Two years ago a filter was installed to provide for the removal of chlorine from the water — this having been anticipated as a development in the town water system. The manufacture of soft drinks necessitates this removal of chlorine besides the impurities found in the average supply. At this stage the water is cooled to 33° F., carbonated and piped to the filling machine, which it reaches at 40° F. The fast, modern filling machine is completely automatic, with a capacity of 95 cases an hour. The washer has a capacity of twice that number, allowing for future increase in the bottling operations.

The delivery system of this company, handled now by three large trucks, extends from as far north as 35 miles beyond St. André d'Avelin down to the Indian reserve at Oka, and embraces Argenteuil, Prescott and Papineau County as far as Thurso.

This enterprising business is still registered under the name of J. P. MacKimmie and Sons. James and John entered the firm in 1925 but John later took over what is now the MacKimmie Bakery, leaving William and James the present proprietors of a concern which has made creditable progress in its 25 years of operation.

R.C.A.F. Men Are Listed As Missing

TWO FORMERLY EMPLOYED AT BROWNSBURG, QUE.

Two Brownsburg boys are reported missing in R.C.A.F. action overseas — Sgt. Pilot George Prosser and Sgt. Vernon Y. H. Sewell, wireless operator.

Prosser is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Prosser, Brownsburg. Only 21 years of age, it was his happy privilege last March to be among a party of 30 Air Force men welcomed by the King and Queen and the Princesses at Windsor Castle . . . Sewell, aged 26, is the only son of Rev. and Mrs. Mayson H. Sewell, Montreal.

WILLIAM BEAUCHAMP WELL KNOWN CITIZEN, WARDEN OF ARGENTEUIL

A well known county citizen, William X. Beauchamp, mayor of Grenville and Augmentation, and warden of Argenteuil County, was accidentally killed yesterday morning on the farm which he had recently sold to his son, three miles east of Grenville Village. Mr. Beauchamp was near the barn overhauling a corn-binder. The heavy machine was propped at the rear; while the victim was working underneath it, the prop became dislodged and the binder tipped backwards, crushing his head and chest.

Mr. Beauchamp left home to work on the machine at 10 o'clock. He was found dead, pinned beneath the machinery, by a farmhand, Armand Roy, passing near the barn after the noon hour. Two neighbors, Leslie Cowan and Russel Pilon, were summoned and the man's body was released from underneath the binder.

The district coroner, Dr. W. F. McMartin, of Lachute, was notified. He empanelled a jury, and inquest was held at the home of Mr. Beauchamp's son, Gerald. A verdict of accidental death was given.

William Beauchamp was a widower, 70 years of age, and leaves five sons and two daughters — one of whom is Mrs. Felix Touchette, of East Settlement. In addition to his mayoral office, which he had held for ten years, being now in his sixth term — he was also in his second term as warden of the county.

HOW PEARLS ORIGINATE

It is supposed that a grain of sand finds its way into the shells of the oyster. This causes the animal a certain amount of discomfort, and it proceeds to smooth over the rough particle of sand with a secretion which it possesses. This forms the pearl. Latterly, pearls have been made artificially by such an insertion in the oyster shell.

Activities in the W. I. Branches During August

Frontier heard an address by Dr. FitzGerald on Undulant Fever, and answered their roll-call by "How to keep children well". A presentation of silverware was made to a bride-elect. A contest of jumbled letters was held, with four prizes awarded. Funds were raised by an afternoon tea and sale of home-cooking. This Branch has decided to aid in the Queen's Canadian Fund.

Mille Isles held their meeting at the home of Mrs. Drury, the roll-call being answered by naming an article for refugees. An address on Immigration was given by the Rev. J. V. Temple, who in speaking mentioned that people have moved to obtain better living conditions for themselves and families since the times of the Bible. The Book of Genesis tells of the migration of Abraham into the Land of Canaan and the wanderings of the Isrealites . . . The British Isles and France have greatly contributed to Canada in politics, education, business, music and literature, he affirmed.

Pioneer visited Montreal in July. Immigration was their subject for the August meeting, the roll-call being answered by naming articles to be sent to the Red Cross for refugees. Miss Hooker gave a paper and current events were given by each member. Discussion and plans were made to enter a contest for subscriptions to Macdonald College Journal.

Upper Lachute - East End heard an address by Dr. W. F. McMartin on "Kinds, Causes and Treatment of High Blood Pressure." A donation was voted towards the Institute Mobile Kitchen Canteen Fund.

WHAT A TEACHER !

The big, burly truck-driver stopped his truck along a country road and asked some school children to get aboard. One of them, a little bigger than the rest, was told that she could sit on his knee. "Do you like going to school?" asked the trucker. "Yes," answered the girl. "Do you love your teacher?" "Yes," answered the girl. "Y'see —I'm the teacher." And it took a service truck from a nearby garage the better part of an hour to get that truck back on the road again. —Trenton Courier.

MAKING THE MOST OF THINGS AS THEY ARE

"It is not by regretting what is irreparable that true work is to be done, but by making the best of what we are. It is not by complaining that we have not the right tools, but by using well the tools we have. What we are, and where we are, is God's providential arrangement—is God's doing, though it may be man's mis-doing; and the manly and wise way is to look our failures in the face and see what can be made of them." — F. W. Robertson of Brighton (one of England's greatest preachers).

Whistler Billed On Radio Show

GEO. BELANGER, WHISTLING DELIVERY BOY; — HE'S IN THE ARMY NOW

Geo. Belanger of Lachute, now a private in the Maisonneuve Regiment stationed at Longueuil, Que., is attaining one of his long-felt ambitions tonight when he appears on a troop program to be broadcast by radio from Station CKAC, from 9 to 10 o'clock.

George, youngest son of Jos. Belanger, local painter, is well known to the housekeeping population of Lachute, having "whistled while he worked" delivering groceries for the Lachute chain stores. Latterly, however, he had been employed at the J. A. MacKimmie Bakery. He has been frequently heard on local amateur programs.

Belanger has two brothers also in the army — Gaetan, stationed at Camp Borden, and Bernard, overseas.

W.I. Collaboration With Health Authorities Urged

Miss Lucy I. Daly, Provincial Director of Welfare and Public Health for Quebec Women's Institutes, has outlined a suggestive program for work during 1941-42. The Branches are directed to co-operate with County Health Units in immunization vaccination and general health measures in rural districts.

The care, cleanliness and health of the people who handle milk supplies are live questions, as well as milk pasteurization, and Institutes are urged in Miss Daly's outline to help in the work of classifying milk supplies according to their quality as regards health.

Medical examination of school teachers is encouraged, and more physical culture in schools advised. Hot lunches having served such good purpose in the past, Miss Daly urged the Institutes to plan for them again during the coming winter.

Train Crew Captures Two Fugitives from Shawb'ge Boys' Farm

Two young fugitives from the Shawbridge Boys' Farm were captured by the conductor and train crew of a C.N.R. Laurentian train early Saturday night when they tried to steal a ride to Montreal. A third boy, also believed to have escaped from the Shawbridge institution, escaped on foot after a hot chase.

The train, on its way to the city from Lac Remi, was held up for almost 15 minutes, tying up the Laurentian rail route for that period, while the train crew chased the fugitives through the countryside about 15 miles south of St. Jerome.

The youngsters, all about 12 years of age, were believed to have sneaked aboard the train at St. Jerome and, when they were found hiding under the entrance platform of one of the coaches, they jumped off the moving train and took to their heels.

The train was brought to a stop abruptly and the conductor and other members of the crew went after the trio. The two youngsters who were recaptured were not hurt. They were taken to Montreal and handed over to officers, who in turn delivered them to the Juvenile Court.

Three U.S.A. Presidents Leave Their Impression

Have Their Footshapes in A London Basement

(By Mail)

London — Wooden models of the feet of many of the most prominent citizens of the British Empire lie in a London basement as yet unharmed by Nazi raids. Bombs have fallen all around, but these 20,000 boot and shoe lasts, from which footwear continues to be shipped to the world beyond Europe, remain a unique library of the feet of the great and wealthy.

The craftsmen who have built up this collection of footshapes, founded exactly 150 years ago, have been sending their representatives overseas since 1899. Almost every year since then these pioneering bootmakers have visited the United States and studied the footwear idiosyncrasies of three Presidents, as well as of such noted characters as the late Price Collier, Payne Whitney, August Belmont, Gouverneur Morris (who referred to the makers in his writings) John Drew and the Barrymores, Foxhall Keene, Governor Beechman, General Pershing, Clarence Moore, Jay Gould, General Andre Brewster and many others. Every graduate from West Point during the last 20 years has been interviewed for the supply of his boots.

Although Kings, Princes and Presidents do visit headquarters, many clients have never even seen England. They rely upon the reputation for workmanship and the good opinion of the great. One single order from an Indian prince was for 167 pairs of boots and shoes, each pair different and provided with a leather box. The invoice was just sent along in the usual way.

House Tested at Ten Below Zero in Recent August Heat Wave

Winter Weather Test Conducted on Model House To Prove Condensation Prevented

While the rest of Canada sweltered as the thermometer hovered around the 100 above mark, a Montreal research expert spent hot August days conducting an unique experiment in ten below zero temperature. The test, designed to illustrate the fact that insul-board, an asphalt impregnated insulating board widely used in Canadian construction, prevents moisture passage into walls to prevent condensation, was made in the research laboratories of the J. T. Donald Company.

A miniature house was constructed in the form of a cube approximately three and a half feet square, with interior walls lined with insul-board lath with the same proportion of lineal footage of vertical and horizontal joints as a typical construction wall. The exterior wall was then covered with insul-brick siding over ⅞ inch wood sheathing all exactly as used in standard construction. The interior of the model was equipped to heat under thermostatic control, and to maintain a temperature of 70 degrees and also to receive automatic humidification maintained at 40 per cent all controlled from outside the test box. The test equipment was then moved into a cold storage warehouse, quick freezing room, where a temperature of ten degrees below zero was maintained. Throughout the twenty-two days of the test the amount of water vapor passing through the wall amounted to an average of only 0.25 grams or .0088 ounces per square foot per 24 hours. Other materials tested registered as high as 4.19 grams. This test is believed to be the first accurate measurement of actual wall resistance to condensation under controlled test conditions in Canada. Complete copy of this test is available by writing Building Products Limited, manufacturers of insul-board insulation and other building materials.

GRENVILLE MAN SENT TO TRIAL

Preliminary Hearing Concluded At L'Orignal, Ont.

L'Orignal — Gorge Daviau, 22, of Grenville, was ordered to stand trial before the next General Sessions of the Peace following the conclusion Monday of preliminary hearing into charges of failure to remain at the scene of an accident and of dangerous driving. The charges were preferred following the death of Stanley King, 35, of Vankleek Hill, in a hit-and-run automobile accident on August 3.

Magistrate Royal Labrosse, of Vankleek Hill, presided over Monday's session, concluding the hearing started on August 18. The Crown was represented by C. W. A. Marion, of Rockland, and Daviau by J. B. Wood, of Hawkesbury.

Witnesses included a pathologist, Dr. T. R. Little, of Ottawa, who testified that spots of blood found on King's shirt, on the door of Daviau's automobile and on the highway corresponded with the victim's blood; Dr. G. D. MacIntyre, of Vankleek Hill, who was called to the scene of the accident and pronounced King dead; Constables Rene Labrosse and Arnold Gilmour, of the Ontario Provincial Police; Traffic Officer Jones, Chief Joseph Giroux, of Hawkesbury, W. Barton, Rene Laflamme and Evelyn Dupelle, of Vankleek Hill, and Constable Tom Kerwin, of the Vankleek Hill Police.

"What do you mean?" roared the politician, "by publicly insulting me in your old rag of a paper. I will not stand for it and I demand an immediate apology."

"Just a moment," answered the editor. "Didn't the news item appear exactly as you gave it to us, namely, that you have resigned as city treasurer?"

"It did, but where did you put it?—in the column under the heading 'Public Improvements'."

GROUP TO PLAN FOR RECONSTRUCTION OF BOMBED CHURCHES

Over the Wreckage of 3,000 Places of Worship

(By Mail)

London — Movements of Britain's population will be taken into account before decisions are finally made to build again the churches bombed by Nazi airmen.

More than 3,000 of them have been either destroyed or badly damaged and the Government will pay compensation for each.

Almost every Christian denomination in Britain has a member on the Christian Churches Main Committee now considering with the War Damage Commission the problem arising out of the wreckage of their places of worship.

Represented on it are the Church of England, the Catholic Church, the Episcopal Church of Scotland, Scotch Presbyterian Church, the Baptist and Methodist churches, the Presbyterian Church of England, the Congregationalists and the Church of Wales.

"A common misfortune has drawn the churches together" said Mr. E. H. Johnson, secretary of the sub committee which deals with the question.

"A church, like any ordinary building, cannot be rebuilt during the war; a licence is necessary even for essential repairs.

"Therefore we are looking further ahead to the time when the vast task of rebuilding must be undertaken. We shall need much help in addition to Government compensation."

The London Telegraph tells how crews of Blenheim Bombers returninfi from a successful daylight raid on Cherbourg brought back news of a remarkable demonstration of the intense pro-British feeling in Nazi-occupied France.

As they roared over the housetops to attack shipping and other objectives in the harbour area, they reported, the streets were crowded with people waving to them.

Famed Sangus Circus Is Closed by War

James Sanger, descendant of the man who founded Sanger's Circus in 1821, said he had continued shows despite the war until recently. Labor and gasoline shortage and lack of food contributed to the woes of the circus.

"I'm afraid it's all over", he said. "The blackout beat us."

Bomber Crews Growing Vegetables, Off Duty

(By Mail)

London — Between spells of strafing Nazi bases in Europe, Britain's airmen are growing vegetables for their own messes. And they are using American seeds, for a quarter of the consignment of vegetable seeds sent to Britain under the "Bundles for Britain" plan was allocated to the R.A.F.

One Fighter Command station near London, nest of Spitfire and Hurricane raiders, has ten acres of "waste" land under cultivation and another three or four acres are being sown with winter vegetables. The men there have planted 30,000 lettuces, 2,500 tomato plants, 5,000 cabbages, 2,000 brussels sprouts, as well as acres of peas, beans and potatoes. This station is meeting Britain's onion shortage with half an acre of onions.

The gardening movements is part of a plan by which R.A.F. stations throughout Britain will have fresh vegetables for their messes from spare corners of their airfields. The Air Council have appointed a gardening expert, Mr. A. H. Whyte, Horticultural Adviser to the Air Ministry, and it is his job to work in liaison with catering officers and County Agricultural Officers. He supervises questions of implements, seeds and fertilizers, and gives advice on cropping in relation to differing conditions of soil and climate.

The gardening work carried out by the airmen is quite voluntary, but, as the average Britisher is a keen gardener, there is no shortage willing hands. The vegetables grown are normally sold to stations' messes at current prices.

FACE CHARGE IN GASOLINE THEFT

Brownsburg Man Reported In Montreal Case

Allegedly caught in the act of emptying the gas-tank of a parked automobile, two men were arrested by detectives in Montreal early Monday morning, according to a city news item.

The detectives came across the suspects on Notre Dame street west at 4.15 a.m. Taken to headquarters they were booked as Hector Sergent of Brownsburg, and Roland Laramee, 2351 St. James street west. They were held for arraignment Tuesday on a charge of theft.

Once in Queen Victoria's time a famous medical professor at Oxford was called away before his class hour, and left the following notice on the classroom door:

"I regret that class cannot be held today, inasmuch as I had the honor to be called to attend Her Majesty the Queen."

Streets of Kiel Are Shattered by Bombs

London — The terrific damage caused by the R.A.F. in their sustained offensive against Germany is confirmed by a neutral business man who has just spent a fortnight in the Rhineland and coastal towns.

He informed a B.U.P. correspondent on the German frontier that the big port of Bremerhaven had been battered almost to ruins, making any useful activity there out of the question for the duration of the war.

He saw shattered streets in Kiel, the German naval shipbuilding centre, and declared that the military damage caused there was on a great scale. The Germans had cordoned off the devastated areas.

Members of the public in Kiel, he said, were refusing to aid the auxiliary services in clearing houses and cellars of the air-raid victims.

CARS COLLIDE ON GRENVILLE BRIDGE

Six Brownsburg Workers In Hawkesbury Auto

Nine persons escaped serious injury Tuesday night when two automobiles collided on the interprovincial bridge between Grenville and Hawkesbury.

Travelling northward, a car driven by Armand Crete, of Hawkesbury, collided with a machine driven by Roger Leblanc, of L'Orignal. There were two passengers with Crete, while Leblanc was driving five fellow workmen to Hawkesbury from Brownsburg.

Leblanc's machine turned over and landed on its side against the railing on the side of the bridge, but none of its occupants was thrown out. Crete's car was completely wrecked.

Traffic Officer Howard Jones, of Grenville, investigated.

Churchill Speaks Again

There is something infectious in the firm confidence of Mr. Churchill. When the British Prime Minister spoke into the microphone this week, listeners across the Empire expected great revelations. They expected a glimpse into the secrets of his ocean conference with President Roosevelt. They looked for the more momentous decisions veiled behind that post-war re-establishment program — a swift victory manoeuvre along some spectacular lines hitherto undisclosed.

The people expected much. Mr. Churchill gave them more; but what they heard was not what they expected. He gave them the force of his dynamic personality, displaying the fearless leader in a role which brooks no fear or hesitation. He revealed the United States as a staunch and growing ally, pledged with Britain to the ideals of godly living which in the end must prevail. And most of all he impressed the confidence of Winston Churchill, the confidence of Britain itself, in victory for the oppressed nations against a ruthless enemy.

Churchill has never under-estimated the dangers or the obstacles, never distorted the facts, nor encouraged a false sense of security. So that now, from his confidence, we may gather he has gauged the possibilities and placed his honest estimate upon the future. He slyly let slip the secret of new battleships afloat; others on the way. Churchill knows the facts; he has his finger on the pulse of Britain's effort, and while he cannot divulge all the things he knows, he has put his message of confidence across to the British people and the friendly democracies.

Let's Show the Way

The Governments at Washington and at Ottawa suddenly realized recently that the peoples of United States and Canada would have to curtail their consumption of gasoline and oil in order to keep Great Britain adequately supplied. The loss of tankers through enemy action and the ever increasing demand for motor fuel by the Empire flying forces could only be met by diverting tankers from American and Canadian ports to ports of Great Britain.

Both Governments elected to effect the necessary reduction in Canada and United States through the voluntary effort of private motor car owners, motorboat owners and by economies set up by business firms using large numbers of trucks and cars.

Because the majority of United States citizens are wholly in sympathy with Great Britain in the battle she is putting up against the dictators, there are thousands south of the border who are responding to the appeal made from Washington.

In Canada, the response has been generous. It is estimated that the gross consumption of gasoline and oil in this country has been reduced by about 15%. But Canadians will not likely be satisfied with this result. This country is at war, fighting for its existence and the realization of Canada's stake in the battle for Victory should produce, and will produce, a motor fuel saving which will set a real pace for her neighboring motorists in the Republic.

To Honor Men in Uniform

Wednesday, September 10, will mark the beginning of the third year of Canada's participation in the war.

In acknowledgment of that fact the Government, by proclamation, is setting aside the period September 10-17 as a week to "honor our men in uniform and re-dedicate ourselves to the service of our country and our cause."

The provincial governments, mayors, service and other clubs, churches and schools are all being asked to lend their assistance in making this week one of real national significance. The radio and the motion picture industry have already promised their full support.

Milk and Gasoline

On the surface there may appear no relationship between the consumption of gasoline and the consumption of milk. But it is a fact that, since Sunday sales of gasoline have been suspended, the Sunday milk deliveries have increased. Local dairymen report a very noticeable increase . . . Folks are spending their Sundays at home—which won't do them any harm either.

It's only a matter of time until some enterprising headline writer announces "R.A.F. makes mincemeat of Hamburg" says the Cornwall Standard-Freeholder. — One Cockney news-vendor, we note, is a step ahead. "Another R.A.F. Colognizing Raid", he chalked on his bulletin board.

Boos from the Boys

A good statesman was never stampeded from the public platform by heckling voices. Nor was Prime Minister Mackenzie King greatly dismayed when Canadian troops gave him a Bronx salute the other day in England. It was at a military sports meet; and Mr. King took the reaction with that same sportsmanship with which — at the age of 67 and never having ridden in an airplane before — he climbed coolly into a bomber aircraft for the ocean hop.

We doubt very much if he was even surprised when boos were mingled with the soldiers' cheers . . . Whenever a Canadian soldier overseas settles down to write a letter home, one can hear the champing of the bit; reading through the lines, one notes the desperation our soldiers feel in what looks to them like months and years of futile inactivity. The Navy has a chance; the Air Force gets into the thick of things; but the Army waits — and waits — for heaven knows what. No wonder the soldiers fret !

Then again, the Government has made mistakes. Plenty of them. There has been red tape, duplication and delay at every turn — or so it must seem to our ardent youths in uniform. Missing the wider perspective, our boys will naturally holler over the multitude of minor grievances. And the Government must answer; or the "biggest shot" from Ottawa who comes within hailing distance. — That was Mr. King. The boys have made themselves heard, good naturedly; and the Prime Minister has taken their protest in the same spirit.

Affection and Respect

A memorial service was held Tuesday afternoon at Christ Church Cathedral, Montreal, for the late Right Honorable Arthur Blaikie Purvis. The offices of Canadian Industries Limited, of which corporation he was the president, were closed to enable his associates and fellow workers to attend.

From Canadian Industries Limited comes a tribute to the more personal qualities of this great man, who has been aptly referred to as a "captain of industry". The branch of the company located in this particular community shares the tragedy of his loss, as well as the esteemed memory of his personality as reflected in the workings of the progressive enterprise at Brownsburg.

In the "C-I-L Tracer", issued this week among the Brownsburg workers, appears the following tribute to the late Mr. Purvis :

"The messages of sympathy and the moving tributes which have been received in Montreal since the announcement of the tragic death of our President, the Right Honourable Arthur B. Purvis, make abundantly clear the high place he held in the esteem of his fellow-men and how widely his death is mourned. It is with sorrowful hearts that we add his name to the Company's roll of honour of those who have died on active service in the execution of their duty.

"Those who were privileged to know him intimately can testify that despite the heavy and important duties he was called upon to perform for the British Government, his attachment to this Company which owes so much of its success to his energy and devotion, never lessened. His able leadership and warm-hearted concern for the welfare of all who served under him will never be forgotten, and we believe there could be no tribute to his memory which he would more greatly have cherished than the sincere affection and respect so deeply felt by all employees of Canadian Industries Limited and Associated Companies."

G. W. Huggett.

The Home-Town Paper

Most of the people who claim the home-town paper doesn't print all the news should be glad it doesn't, remarks the Montreal Herald. Quite true. In the archives of every newspaper are tales untold, which if ever given the light of publicity, would delight the curious and sordid-minded, please the envious, be food for the knocker — and sell papers. Canadian journalism, however — in the main, is not built that way. Construction, not destruction, is its mainstay, and up to date it is getting along very well on that basis.

Quite A Place !

Montreal, Aug. 25 — One thousand miles from the Atlantic, the harbor of Montreal thrives busily for eight months of the year. After New York, it is the leading seaport of the continent and the greatest wheat-exporting centre in the world. Its grain elevators can hold 12,000,000 bushels. Besides a floating dry-dock 600 feet long and 135 feet wide which can accommodate vessels up to 25,000 tons, Montreal harbor has 8½ miles of wharves and 65 miles of harbor railway track.

New Bible Published

Specially written to be read and understood by all, a new edition of the Bible has been published in London. It is the first Bible to be illustrated with pictures taken from the modern world. Its editor, John Stirling, has put into it scenes of marching armies, of airmen and airplanes, of war tanks and other modern military weapons as well as pictures of present-day architecture and industrial machinery. It contains the full text of the authorized version, printed in paragraphs and supplied with headlines, introductory remarks and footnotes by the editor, who calls it the "Bible for Today." The idea came to Stirling in the first World War when he was a Methodist chaplain in Palestine.

MINE-LAYING NO HAPHAZARD JOB

Perilous Work Executed to Detailed Plan

By A Mine Layer

London— Life aboard a mine-layer is one thrill after another. We never know how near death lurks ahead, so we try to make the most of life as we go along. Another thing, a mistake is never forgiven, for an accident in handling our death-dealing cargo may be the end of the man who makes it, and also all his mates.

On a mine-layer we know no eight-hour day. We have to work not by the clock, but by the job in hand. Sometimes we work 10, 20 and even 36 hours at a stretch, with hardly a break between to snatch a morsel of food and a drink.

I once worked 50 hours at a stretch — and after a long sleep, felt no worse for it. Then a day later I was detailed for another mine-laying raid that lasted a day and a half.

Due to the nature of our calling, mine-laying crews are always picked men, all used to the sea. And we know how to handle a sea-bomb or sea-mine so that there is little likelihood of it "going off" beforehand. This is important, for our ship has a capacity for carrying several hundred mines, the explosion of one being enough to send us to the bottom.

Mine laying under cover of darkness has its compensations as regards greater safety from observation. But it complicates the task of laying each mine strictly according to plan. On the other hand, daylight mine laying enables us to place each sea-bomb just where we want it, but we have to be on the lookout all the time for fear the enemy comes on us from all four quarters.

Contrary to popular opinion, seamines are not dropped about indiscriminately. They are laid according to plan. This plan is a conglomeration of what looks like noughts and crosses, the game children play. In reality it is a detailed plan.

Army Manufactures Its Own Soaps, Cleansers, From Waste Products

Instead of disposing of waste kitchen fats from Army kitchens to salvage concerns as previously practiced, larger military Camps in Canada are planning to use them to make their own soaps.

An experiment tried at Victoria, Headquarters of Military District No. 11, when no economic way for disposal of waste fats from camps on Vancouver Island could be found, and dating back to a year and a half ago, has been so successful as to justify investigation of similar plants where cooking is carried on for large Army groups.

Discovery of a former soapmaker, Sergeant F. B. Macdonald, in the ranks, helped the solution of the Victoria problem. At a cost of about $500, equipment including discarded Army ranges and oil drums was installed in an old building, Royal Canadian engineers cooperating with the conservation section of the Royal Canadian Army Service Corps.

Now soaps are being produced for toilet, kitchen and laundry use as well as auto soaps, mechanics' paste, windshield cleaner, floor-sweeping compound and refrigerator deodorants. About 12 tons is produced monthly with a potential net profit of about $1100, and depending on type, is stored in salvaged jam pails, coffee, baking powder and corn syrup tins, prune and butter boxes.

It is proposed to use the services of the Sergeant soap-maker in getting plants working at Camp Borden, Petawawa, Valcartier, Debert and Sussex, N.B.

Do You Know — ?

It means that an action is honest and straightforward, and comes from the custom of jugglers and magicians who stand at a table and arrange their tricks while their hands are below the table-top. Then they bring their hands above the board, or table-top, and work in a straightforward manner.

Why Does Sailor Wear a Wide Collar?

The sailor's square collar hanging down his back for some distance is a relic of the old days when seamen wore their hair in a pigtail, which was kept well greased. The grease soiled the back of the coat or tunic, and so an official order was given that all sailors were to wear detachable collars that could be removed and washed when necessary. The wide collar has continued to the present day as part of the sailor's uniform, although the need for it has passed.

What Are the "Nine Points of the Law"?

It is often said that "possession is nine points of the law." These nine points which ensure success in a lawsuit have been described as: a good deal of money, a good deal of patience, a good cause, a good lawyer, a good counsel, good witnesses, a good jury, a good judge, and good luck.

HOLLAND UNDER THE NAZI YOKE

Threats and Promises Fail to Win Support for Germany

By Prof. P. S. Gerbrandy, President of the Netherlands Council of Ministers

Economically, politically and socially the Netherlands people have to bear the full weight of the ignominious Nazi yoke. After barely fifteen months of occupation they have been reduced from a very high standard of living to the brink of starvation.

The famous ports, once throbbing with life, appear dead. The wheels of industry have stopped, and only those factories which fit into the Nazi war machine can survive. Those fishing trawlers and coastal vessels which could not escape to England lie idle, or have to work for the Nazis, endangering the lives of our seamen in the service of the foe.

Agriculture suffers from the severe shortage of labour, fuel and fertilizers; dairy-farmers see their best cows slaughtered to feed the occupying army, or exported to the Third Reich. The Germans descended upon the fertile Lowlands like a cloud of locusts; shops have been emptied by the huge purchases made by German soldiers and officials; trainloads of agricultural produce have disappeared into the German maw. A large army of occupation has to be fed, clothed and housed.

As a result the National Debt is increasing at a rate ten times greater than that reached in the Great War. The Treasury is selling astronomical amounts of government paper and there is plenty of paper money in circulation despite huge semi-forced loans. But goods are scarce, prices are rising in spite of attempts at control, and the standard of living has rapidly declined.

Almost everything is rationed, but the rations are so small that in some cases laborers feel too weak to continue work after four o'clock in the afternoon.

Such is the economic condition to which our people have been condemned. All classes are suffering and complaining alike. Industrialists have been reduced to mere tools in the hands of the Nazis; farmers work hard and earn little; almost 150,000 laborers have been blackmailed into toiling in German factories and shipyards.

But there are things worse than merciless looting, the dread of inflation, the shortage of food, clothing and fuel. The political and cultural tyranny of the Nazi overlords strikes at the very root of the people's character; the love of their liberties won in century-long struggles. The despised agents of the Gestapo lurk in every cafe.

Thousands of patriots have been flung into overcrowded prisons upon the flimsiest pretexts. Hundreds are suffering in the notorious German concentration camps. The liberty of the press and of association has been suppressed. Broadcasting has been taken over by the Nazis. All political parties, with the exception of the numerically negligible National Socialist party, have been disbanded.

A Londoner took a visiting New York friend to see "Hamlet." When it was over and they were moving out, the host asked:

"Well, did you like it?"

"Oh Yep, it's pretty good. But you're away behind the time here. I saw it in New York four years ago.

Duke and Waiter Had Met Before

Jasper, Alta., Aug. 20 — It was the breakfast hour in Point Cottage, the log bungalow used by H. R. H. the Duke of Kent during his recent visit to Jasper Park Lodge. After taking a second look at the waiter, Charlie Lambe, His Royal Highness asked whether he had ever seen him before. "I used to serve your dinner three times a week at Ciro's Club five years ago," replied Lambe. An interesting and intimate conversation followed and the two chatted over old times, mostly about the former personnel of the club, located in Orange St., London.

Back-Fence Sniping

People here wanted Mackenzie King to go to London. And he did. Nearing 67, he stepped into a plane for the first time and crossed the ocean. A lot of us who have been in planes before and who are many years off 67, wouldn't take to a bomber flight so cheerfully.

Whether Mr. King's trip will do any actual good or not, it will help Empire morale and it will end a lot of back-fence sniping. Sometimes after reading the public prints I have wondered whether Mr. King or Mr. Hitler were our enemy. Grousing is the privilege of democracy and sound criticism its spur. Sometimes the two get confused in a way that does nobody any good. —Walter O'Hearn in The Montreal Standard

A PERSONAL WAR AGAINST GERMANY

"Each of them seems to think he has a personal war to wage against Germany, and their one aim is to get into the air irrespective of weather or opposition. They are aviators without nerves" — such is the opinion of the Polish flyers expressed by a high R.A.F. officer who has trained hundreds of them. And once they get into the air, according to an American pilot, "for crazy, death-flying in battle the Poles are tops. They are like madmen and their boys operate their guns like hoses, cursing while they spray lead."

One of these flying fanactics shot down 3 Messerschmitt 109's in one day last month and badly damaged a fourth. Then, with his ammunition spent, he manoeuvred behind a fifth Messerschmitt and chopped off its tail with his propeller. He was blinded by blood from a wound caused by flying fragments from number 5, but he managed to bring his machine home across the Channel. He was obliged to make a forced landing and hit a telegraph pole, which put him in hospital. However, he is happily looking forward to being back in the air very soon.

Luxurious Informality On Great Lakes Cruises

One of Canada's most delightful holiday attractions is a Canadian Pacific Great Lakes Steamships cruise, an inland sea voyage from Port McNicoll through Georgian Bay, Lake Huron and Lake Superior to Fort William.

It is an ocean voyage in miniature — the word "miniature" being used in a comparative sense only, because the trip is 542 miles one way, the ship is completely out of sight of land at times and shipboard life and all entertainment are patterned on ocean-cruise style.

Canadians and Americans in increasing numbers have found joy in Great Lakes cruises in recent years, spending their entire vacations on cruises or using the lake route as a link in a longer trip. Sailing and arrival times of the ships are planned to coincide with train times on the Canadian Pacific's transcontinental line. Or, reduced rates for carrying automobiles make the lake cruise a delightful interlude in a long motor tour.

The regular passenger ships, the Keewatin and the Assiniboia, fine Clyde-built steamships with a gross tonnage of 3,880 and speed of 15 knots, have been outfitted especially for cruise service. They make 27 westbound and 27 eastbound trips in the summer months, westbound sailings being on Saturdays and Wednesdays from Port McNicoll and eastbound sailings being on Saturdays and Tuesdays from Fort William and Port Arthur. The round trip takes four days and a night. Half the trip, a return cruise between either terminal and the Soo, affords a pleasant two-day holiday. Special boat trains are operated between Toronto and Port McNicoll.

Another carefree cruise of more than 1,000 miles in five days can be made on the S.S. Manitoba, 2,616-ton steel-constructed ship. The cruise is from Owen Sound to Fort William and return, with calls at several interesting ports. The route is via the North Inside Channel of Manitoulin Island.

All three ships are equipped and staffed to make cruising easy and enjoyable. The cuisine is of a high standa.d, social entertainment includes dancing, moonlight parties and afternoon teas and ship sports include shuffle-board, deck quoits and other popular pastimes. Informality and luxury are found on every hand.

Boy Scouts The World Over

THEY STILL LAUGH AT SCHOOLBOY HOWLERS

That the German blitz has not been able to kill the British sense of humour is again witnessed by the picking out of "The Week's Howler" from a budget of Boy Scout war service reports. A sample: "We haven't done much national service yet, but during our War Weapons Week we distributed National Savings and Spitfires."

6,000 SCOUT CAMP COOKS SERVE 6,000 FLOUNDERS

The unique Boy Scout fish-cooking contest sponsored annually by the New York City Fishery Council was recently decided in the kitchen of the Hotel New Yorker. Each boy was provided a flounder, which he cleaned, prepared and fried under the critical eyes of Health Commissioner Shirley Wynne, E. C. Kessler of the Fishery Council and Chef Emil Wolat. Scout Teddy Arnheiter, 15, was declared winner, and awarded a week's trip to the Newfoundland banks aboard a banker. The other six Scouts competing received a water trip to Boston and return. Some 6,000 Scout camp cooks competed in the preliminaries. Later the champion Boy Scout is to meet the champion of the Girl Scouts.

BOY SCOUT TRAINING A BIG ASSET IN ARMY CAMP LIFE

Writes Mark Inch in the Regina Leader regarding the value of Boy Scout training in army life : "An officer tells us that the old Scouts at N.P.A.M. camps settle into camp life like veterans, while many of the others find it hard to adjust themselves to the rigors of camp life. While the fellows with Scouting experience do not know any more about soldiering than the rest, they certainly are much more adaptable, and make better progress. In camp a man's environment is completely changed, and it is hard for him to take the change in his stride, and successfully begin to absorb the teaching that begins as soon as he arrives at camp. The old Scouts, with sound camp training behind them, get right down to business the day they move in."

Many Classifications for Recruits in Canadian Women's Army Corps

Volunteers in the Canadian Women's Army Corps for which prospective recruits are now making application will be documented and will be assigned numbers the same as soldiers in the regular Army. They will have their own units in charge of Non-commissioned Officers, Warrant Officers and Commissioned Officers, and will come under military control and supervision although they will not be included in the Military Forces of Canada.

Officers Commanding Military Districts will be the final authority pertaining to personnel of the Corps in each district, where a staff officer of the Corps will be appointed in an advisory capacity.

Pay for Officers and other ranks will be two thirds of the per diem rate paid in the Army, and leave and furlough privileges will be equivalent. Medical and dental care will be provided and Army rations will be issued.

Where barracks or public quarters are not available, a living allowance will be granted. A group of 12 which will form a sub-section, with N.C.O. in charge, will be the smallest unit assigned to any station.

Officers on appointment will receive an allowance for uniform and equipment. Volunteers will receive an issue of clothing and equipment including uniform, shirts, tie, great coat, waterproof, rubbers, shoes, stockings, gloves and headdress. An initial allowance of $15 will be made to cover underwear and toilet necessities, with an additional $3 each quarter for this purpose. Clothing and equipment will not be issued until a recruit has completed probation and is enroled as a volunteer.

Regulations require that cosmetics when used be inconspicuous, and that hair be dressed so as to come well above the collar line.

Five percent of the daily rate of pay for both Officers and Ranks will be held as deferred pay until discharge. Volunteers on enrolment will sign up for the duration, and for service anywhere required.

Applications for enrolment available from the Department of National War Services list 36 occupations for which women between the ages of 21 to 40, free of dependents, and British subjects with complete Grade VIII educational standing or its equivalent may apply. They must be of medical category "A" or "B". Classifications listed include: canteen helpers and stewards; cooks; drivers for light motor transport; laboratory and dental assistants; hospital attendants and maids; waitresses; typists, stenographers, secretaries and accountants; telephone and radio operators; radiographers; sewing women; V.A.D.'s; clerks; messengers; cleaners and general duty help.

Mobile Canteens Are Needed in Gt. Britain

Mobile canteens are purchased by donations to the Queen's Canadian Fund. More of them are badly needed in Britain. Here is testimony from a reporter on the London Evening Standard :

Drivers and attendants risk their lives to take food to fire fighters while bombs are falling. But still firemen have been going hungry in London's battlefront. A London Fire Brigade officer said to me: "I was busy on West End fires for 17 hours, beginning at midnight on Saturday.

"All that time I had no food. No cafes were open in the district and I saw no mobile canteens.

"I had 150 men on the job. None of them had a bite to eat until they returned to the station."

A similar story was told by an A.F.S. girl driver who made the round of City fires for 13 hours.

A firemen stated that during his 18 hours of duty in the City he had found only one Y.M.C.A. canteen van. "It was very welcome and the man in charge did his best", he told me. "But it was a small van and there were only tea and biscuits on board."

German Guns Captured in Desert Fighting

A British soldier is seen familiarizing himself with a German machine gun captured in the fighting in the Western Desert. There is plenty of captured ammunition as well for weapons of this type.

Personality Parade

By Lawrence Hibbert

FORMER ERRAND-BOY

Another former errand-boy is a British Cabinet Minister — Mr. Herbert Morrison, whose father was a policeman. A great organizer, Mr. Morrison was chairman of the London County Council for some years until he joined Mr. Churchill's Cabinet last Spring.

When distributing prizes recently at his old school, he confessed to the boys that he never won a prize at school. "The only thing I received," he said, "was a certificate for religious knowledge, and I am bound to admit that it ought never to have been given to me."

A "Conchie" Last War !

During the last war, Herbert Morrison was a conscientious objector, and the story is told of him that after Compulsory Military Service passed the House of Commons a few months before the present war began, he dashed into the lobby bar of the House and said to the barmaid: "Give me a drink quick, and may God forgive me, I've just voted for Conscription."

A bulwark of the British Labor Party for many years, he is no theorist, and he has no love for Communism. Blunt and direct, he "pulls no punches". When Birmingham was badly bombed, Morrison made two quick visits to the town. The first time he inspected the damage and looked over the civil defences; the second time he "fired" the local fire chief and his assistant, and replaced them with two men he brought with him from London.

* * *

A REBEL AT THIRTEEN !

In a Welsh village some 65 years ago, a 13-year-old boy stood up in school and defied the combined anger of his schoolmaster, an Anglican clergyman and the village squire.

The Anglican was doing a "spot of catechising", supported by the others, whereas the little Welsh boy was a resolute Noncomformist, as were all his schoolmates. Alone among his class, however, the rebel stood up resolutely for his principles.

The small boy was David Lloyd George, Britain's brilliant Great War Premier, and this schoolroom encounter was the first of many bitter battles he was to wage.

Resembles Churchill

Winston Churchill has said of him that "no man since Cromwell or Chatham has left his mark more deeply upon the life, fortunes and laws of the British people." And it is interesting to compare these two War Premiers, both giants of endeavour and inspiration to their countrymen in a crisis.

Hitler, in "Mein Kampf," described Lloyd George's war-time speeches as "psychological masterpieces." We don't know what Hitler calls Winston Churchill's war-time speeches ! But we do know how invigorating and inspiring they are.

Every cloud has its silver lining !

"Here's the Mail !" Momentous Episode In Military Routine

Write the Boys "Hello", Says Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman, Authority on Social Custom

Blessings on the newspaper and news reel photographers for constantly showing us those appealing human-interest pictures of that dramatic moment in camp when the shout arises, "Here's the mail !"

"Smith", reads the address — and Smith's face beams. Other faces look eager, smile delightedly when longed-for letters are received. Then Jones, Brown . . .no letters. Tough going.

You wrote the chatty letter that made the corners of Bill Smith's mouth smile with delight and gratitude ? Good for you !

Or did you put off writing that letter that would mean such quick brightness flashing over the drab camp ? Or did you hug the excuse that Bill hadn't answered your last letter promptly ? Or are you falling back on the excuse that you're "too busy" during the day or "too tired" at the end of the day to write to your soldier relative or friend ?

Well, you couldn't be busier all day than Bill is, and you undoubtedly aren't as tired at the end of the day as Bill is !

So whip out your writing equipment and get the generous and joyous habit of writing newsy, sprightly letters to that letter-hungry soldier of yours, whether you're his wife, mother or father, sister or brother, his Aunt Mary or his best girl, "just a girl friend" or one of the boys in Bill's crowd back home.

If you haven't time to write a long letter, write a short one, and write oftener. Tell Bill all the cheerful news: What's happening back home or wherever you are News of his friends, their comings and goings and doings. Humorous, amusing incidents. If you haven't sent him a subscription to his hometown newspaper, read your paper with Bill in mind and send him clippings of things you know he'll enjoy. Enclose a story or thrilling article from a magazine. Perhaps enclose an amusing cartoon from his favorite comic strip. Perhaps enclose some snapshots, though not of things that will make him homesick if you know he's inclined that way.

Make your letters to your soldier a treasury of happy words, vital things merry incidents, encouraging words.

And — Warning ! . . . stop your pen when you're just about to write him depressing news; things that are worrying you and that therefore will worry Bill. The Army is doing its best to make your Bill happy at camp. You're not a very good sport if you shadow Bill's cheerfulness or effort at cheerfulness if you send him a fusillade of bad news, cheerless to you and to him. You can be as good a soldier back home as Bill is trying to be at camp.

The right kind of letters are like mercy . . . they bless those that receive them and those that give them.

Christian Science Sunday Services

"Christ Jesus" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon to be read in Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday August 31st.

The Golden Text is from Romans 1: 16. "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth."

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "No man hath seen God at any time; the only begotten Son, which is in the bosom of the Father, he hath declared him'. (John 1: 18).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Christ expresses God's spiritual, eternal nature. The name is synonymous with Messiah, and alludes to the spirituality which is taught, illustrated, and demonstrated in the life of which Christ Jesus was the embodiement." (Page 333).

Edward Hawkes, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Horace H. Hawkes of Montreal West. The Rev. Canon Lewis officiated. The church was decorated with white gladioli, baby's breath and cybotium ferns.

She carried a bouquet of sweetheart roses and bouvardia. She was attended by two bridesmaids, Miss Gladys Aiken, of Rosemere, gowned in blue chiffon with a cascade bouquet of pale pink gladioli and a coronet of the same flowers, and Miss Margaret Webster, of Lachine, gowned in pink chiffon and carrying a cascade bouquet of deep pink gladioli with coronet of the same flowers. Little Miss Jocelyn Arnold, of Grenville, cousin of the bride was flower girl and wore a white smocked dress of finest dotted Swiss. FOR CANADA'S WAR EFFORT HELP US TO

Mr. G. R. Cottrelle, Dominion Oil Controller, has requested the fullest co-operation from all users of gasoline and oil—to reduce consumption to an absolute minimum. We are most anxious to co-operate to the fullest possible extent.

Hundreds of gallons of much-needed gasoline can be saved if maximum running speeds are reduced. This may be done by the elimination of needless stops and delays. You, as a motorcoach passenger, can assist us in the following ways:

Purchase your ticket in advance at terminals and at agencies.

Have your ticket and baggage checks ready to hand the driver when leaving the coach.

Passengers will be picked up en route—but stops in villages, towns and cities will be reduced to a minimum.

HEALTH ARTICLE

"RINGING" IN EARS NOT IMAGINARY

There are more than fifty known causes for "ringing" or noises in the ears. These noises are real and not imaginary as many persons mistakenly believe. These are noises which may cause great discomfort and weariness. Of course, the only way to eliminate these disorders is to find the underlying cause for them.

According to Dr. Charles A. Hutchinson of England, tinnitus, or ringing in the ears, is a sensation of noise in one or both ears which may be due to one of a number of different causes. Tinnitus is rarely present in people who have perfect hearing. It is frequently found, however, in persons in whom the hearing has been completely destroyed. But it does not develop in all cases of deafness. It occurs mainly in grownups between the ages of seventeen and seventy-eight and is not common in those over thirty-five years of age.

The noise in the ears may vary with the air pressure, with the amount of moisture in the air and noticeable in a dry, high area and in warm climates. It seems to become worse when the weather is cold and damp.

There are a number of nervous disturbances in which tinnitus is a common symptom. For example, it develops in neurasthenia, a condition in which persons develop a variety of symptoms due to nervous overstrain. It develops also in those with certain mental disturbances and is found in epilepsy, a disorder in which there are convulsions and loss of consciousness.

Certain tumors affecting the brain, or bleeding into the brain may be followed by head noises. Certain disturbances affecting the nerve of hearing, such as tumors or skull fractures may be followed by ringing in the ears. Tinnitus may come from such a simple cause as an excessive amount of wax in the external ear canal. It occurs in patients who have sick headache. It may follow sunstroke or a middle ear infection. It is found in those who have low blood pressure, as well as in those who have high blood pressure.

Blocking of the tube which leads from the throat to the middle ear may also cause head noises. During pregnancy and in certain disturbances affecting the abdomen, ringing in the ears may develop. Such diseases as scarlet fever, measles, influenza and mumps, as well as chronic kidney trouble, the excessive use of alcohol and tobacco, or infections in the teeth, tonsils or sinuses all may contribute to the development of ringing in the ears.

Thus, it can be seen that when a person has head noises he must first of all have a complete physical examination made to determine, if possible, what is producing the disturbance. If a careful study of this type does not reveal the cause a special examination by an ear, nose and throat specialist is advisable. Careful tests of the hearing must be carried out and a general study of the sinuses in the nose, as well as a study of the ears, must be made.

It is true that in some instances even with such a careful study the exact cause for the condition may not be found at once and in many instances the cause may be some condition which cannot be easily cleared up. For example, in neurasthenia and in epilepsy treatment is not always successful, but in the great majority of cases some condition will be found that is responsible for the tinnitus and often it will be some disorder that treatment will relieve.

Export Fine Art for Britain's War Chest

$500,000 Dollars Worth a Year

London — America is a steady and increasing buyer of British fine art reproductions: mezzotints, wood-cuts, etchings, drypoints, colour-collotypes, lithographs and four-colour process work.

In the first three months of the present year one British publisher alone sent across the Atlantic 70,000 dollars worth of reproductions. Most of these went to buyers in New York, Boston, Chicago and Washington.

The total value of this luxury trade, the survival of which in war time, without any actual increase at all, would have been astonishing, is today in the neighborhood of half a million dollars a year.

Into the workshops of British publishers, in steady stream, are coming for reproduction by the collotype process works from outstanding American artists like Hovsep Pushman, Ethelyn Stewart, R. E. Bishop and Wayne Davis. Before the war Germany exported many collotype reproductions, a market which British publishers have now entirely captured.

Today Britain is the leading producer of mezzotints, paying her engravers one thousand dollars a plate and turning out work which is being collected by discerning American collectors. They are, today, paying as much as 60 dollars for a single reproduction. Rare impressions from fine mezzotint plates have realized up to 1,000 dollars for one impression.

Canada is also a buyer of British fine art reproductions. There the preference, shared by South Africa, Australia and New Zealand, is for collotype and four-colour process work.

Thumbs-Up, Shake

A novel suggestion for making a victory "V" is that we keep our "thumbs up" while shaking hands instead of turning them in the other person's hand. In doing this, the two "thumbs up" form a "V", as illustrated here.

Pigeons Go For Honeymoon Rice

Montreal, Aug. 25 — Not all the rice thrown at honeymoon couples boarding trains at railway stations is wasted, according to C.N.R. officials. Hovering around in the near vicinity are flocks of pigeons which for some reason seem to favor railway stations as roosting places. Possibly these free meals of rice have something to do with it. Pigeons are also to be found close to railway yards where they pick up meals from cereals that occasionally leak from grain cars. There seem to be ample pickings from this and other sources for the pigeons are usually plump and have a well-fed look.

ADVERTISING PAYS

When we see a product extensively advertised we are apt to wonder if the advertising does not increase the cost considerably. One of the largest packing companies says that because of the increased volume of business advertising brings, the cost to the consumer is actually decreased and that their advertising cost is less than one-tenth of a cent per cent, less than the price of the label. I seldom buy unadvertised products. I feel if a producer has not enough pride and faith in his product to label and to advertise them, there must be something wrong. On the other hand I take my advertising with a grain of salt. I believe there is very little false advertising, that is false statements made, but very often advertisements tell only part of the story and thus do not give a true picture of the whole. Apparently advertising pays both the customer and the producer — to say nothing about the publisher.

CAN ALL YOU CAN

The Government is asking us to put away all food possible for future use. I do not believe many of us need much urging and preserving kettles will be in more frequent use than ever before. We are a wasteful people usually but this year every effort should be made to preserve all fruits and vegetables for our own or other's use. We are asked to use as few zinc tops as possible, not to buy new ones, and to donate unused ones to salvage. Wax may be used or you may prefer the transparent seals which are wet and held in place with elastic bands. Fortunately there is no shortage of sugar.

BUTTER PREVENTS SCUM

Have you ever used a bit of butter to prevent scum rising in jellies or jams? Maybe you knew about it but I didn't and it is a grand thing to know. I have made a friend who is very much interested in foods and cooking and we are always comparing notes. She had just come from a kitchen where they were doing Red Cross canning. Another woman had come in and found her skimming away large quantities and she said she had been in another kitchen and they had put some butter in with their strawberries and there was scarcely any scum. I made my Currant Jelly in two batches. The first had so much scum it was discouraging. It stuck like glue and was so hard to get off. I suddenly remembered about the butter so I put a good teaspoonful in the next batch of jelly. There was scarcely any scum and what there was came off so easily. I was preserving some cherries the same day and I added the butter to them and there wasn't a particle of scum. If it works with everything it will be a saving of both time and material. The saving in the large quantities the Red Cross are using for their canning would be considerable.

SOUR CREAM DRESSING

1 cup fresh sour cream, 2 tablespoons vinegar, ¼ teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon sugar.

Stir the ingredients together and pour over sliced cucumbers. This is one of those recipes which may need a bit of doctoring as to flavor as so much depends on the degree of sourness of the cream. It is really a dressing for cucumbers but I find my friends dipping the dressing off and putting it on their tomatoes too.

SLIP THE PETUNIAS

Summer can be prolonged a little by taking up some of your annuals and potting them. Petunias, marigolds, and allysum are among those which will carry on successfully. If you slip petunias, you can have blooming plants all winter. Plants which were slips last Fall bloomed all the year in a sun-room, then this Spring were planted in the garden and they grew large and are a mass of bloom right now.

FAMILY ECONOMICS

"Do you like my new hat? Earned it myself."

"How was that?"

"I cut down on my husband's lunch and tobacco money."

Personal Problems

— By Anne Thompson —

The secret of getting along with people, just getting along in a normal everyday fashion, has been discussed and hashed over for centuries. Making friends, keeping friends, making people like you — these are the aims of a good many sterling souls who struggle along, worrying and stewing, wondering why so-and-so gets promoted and they don't, why this one gets to parties, and no one thinks of them, why the other one has more dates than she knows what to do with, and "poor me" sits at home night after night. No one can make your friends for you, but maybe we can give you a few tips to help you along.

For instance, you wonder why you are left out of things. Maybe you leave yourself out. Maybe you haven't got time to listen when Anne tells you about her new heart-throb. Perhaps you get bored when Jane asks your advice about her new job. Maybe there is some dirty-work to do in organizing, or phoning people or working in the kitchen when your club or sewing group is planning a "do," and because you can't receive the guests at the front door, you are "too busy." Maybe people aren't interested in people. Make it real, too. Don't just be waiting till they finish to cap their stories with a better tale of your own. Be interested, and you will be interesting.

How about a little happiness there? Maybe you have troubles, but yon don't have to wear a constant sign on your face. No one likes an old sourpuss around all the time, If you stop talking and thinking trouble, you'd be surprised at how fast you stop worrying about trouble. Try this too.

Don't be a knocker-downer. Mary might come in with a new hat that looks like nothing on earth, but after all, she bought it, she likes it and she is stuck with it. Tell her it is smart, cute, individual; tell her it does things for her and Mary will do almost anything for you. Praise instead of blaming. If you don't like something, tell a person how well she looks in something else, not how terrible she looks in that one thing. DON'T greet people with the remark that they are putting on a little weight, or aren't looking so well today.

Don't be cliquey. Don't just stick to a few people and let the rest go. You find good friends in strange places, so you don't have to be snooty about whom you associate with. The people themselves, those lucky ones you choose as friends, may not be so enthusiastic as you are, and you might be left without anyone.

Be a greeter. Say a cheery "Good Morning" to the people who serve you. The Postman, the elevator, boy, the girl who sells you stockings. Maybe your face will get set in a happy line, and people will say as you go by, "There is a girl I like."

Don't know everything. If some one offers to help you, be grateful and show it. A little humility is good for the smartest of us, and even if you know you could do it better, it makes people feel good to help someone. Your job is to make people feel good, and they can't help but like you.

Why Sliced Bread Cannot Be Sold

The order wihch ended the sale of sliced bread in Canada on Aug. 11 applied to bread in any form including bread rolls and any other rolls made from unsweetened dough, according to a statement issued by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board.

Cessation of the sale of sliced bread was ordered as a means of conserving labor and electric power and of avoiding the additional cost of double wrapping of sliced loaves. The purchase of slicing machinery is not only a factor in determining the retail price of bread but, as a considerable portion of this slicing equipment is manufactured in the United States, replacement would mean the expenditure of foreign exchange now needed for the purchase of munitions of war.

Realizing that food may be even more a decisive factor in the present war than in the last country homemakers, who form the largest part of Women's Institute membership, have stressed the importance of increased production and conservation of food, Mrs. H. Ducie. Dundurn, Sask., reported in her national review of W.I. agricultural activities for the past two years at the annual convention in Fredericton, N.B.

"The increased production is for home consumption, the surplus to be cured and canned and donated to Great Britain or the needy at home. Commercial supplies will not be disturbed, more vitalizing foods will result and a substantial reserve created," she stated. Production of certified seeds is an objective of institutes in British Columbia, Ontario, Prince Edward Island and Manitoba.

Alberta members have a food conservation campaign in full swing with the slogan, "Not an empty sealer in the pantry." Saskatchewan, Manitoba, British Columbia and Nova Scotia are "going in" for community canners. The Czech settlers near Prescott, Ont., are raising goats to start a glove industry.

Quebec and Ontario institutes have carried out successful rural home beautification projects. Nova Scotia is asking every citizen to enlist as a "soldier of the soil." Prince Edward Island is stressing the importance of better quality for produce.

In case you see any resemblance between the above cat, owned by Walter Witt of Chicago, and a certain Fuehrer of a country at war with England and Russia, it is purely coincidental. Witt won't say why he named the cat "Adolf".

BEAUTY

—Helen Jameson, Mme. Qui Vive—

WRINKLES AND SAGGING TISSUES

Blessed with health, a sweet disposition and a life not too beset with worries and cares, a woman should be able to stave off wrinkles until she reaches the sit-by-the-fire period. If she sticks to good eating habits, keeps active and loves outdoor life she a pretty good insurance against the ravages of the years. Of course, the big trouble these days is keeping one's mind off the sad affairs of the world. More than ever do we need self control, calm spirits, courage.

Let's get down to bedrock facts on this wrinkle business. In youth there is a firm rounding out of facial contour. The skin has an underpadding of fibers that are strong and resilient. If life brings along a lot of wear and tear — long hours of work, loss of sleep, anxieties — these delicate fibers loose tone and adipose tissues go into a state of dissolution. The skin, being too large a covering for depleted upholstery, falls into fine lines. This change may come along in the early thirties, though that is unusual.

The underpadding of the epidermis is dependent upon nutrition. It needs fats, sweets and starches in proper amounts. These are food elements that the plump girls avoid. So, often enough, we see the combination of a young figure and an old face, due to rapid reducing methods.

A common cause of wrinkles is found in loss of enthusiasm. A woman gets into a rut, ploughs through the day's job as if it were a weary grind. Well, thousands of us are doing that and still bearing up. Self-pity becomes established. Boredom descends upon one's head. The expression of despair on the down-in-the-month attitude causes facial tissues to droop and sag. There ensues a deplorable effect upon nutrition, because the digestive works are sympathetic. Appetite departs. A woman in such a state must find a way to put a little ardor into her thoughts, to break away from the endless grind, to find wholesome fun one way or another.

Unless a woman has mental health, keeps hopeful and cheerful, she is close to physical misery. One hour of good hard worry can produce headache, fatigue, a chilled skin surface and pounding heart beats. No woman can afford to indulge in that pastime.

Local treament will recondition the skin. After using soap and water freely at bedtime, rinsing with warm water, drying the flesh with gentle pats, friction in a heavy massage cream, one that will not permit the fingers to slip.

For crowsfeet, place the first finger on the eyelid close to the nose, sweep outward to the temple, come back underneath the eye to starting point.

Canadians Try Food Rationing

Several people I know have been trying an interesting experiment for the past few weeks. They have been living on the English food ration, just as if they were actually living in Britain, and had to present ration cards for the shopping.

They report that they are doing all right, aside from a certain sameness in diet. Surprisingly or not, the tendency is to put on weight rather than subtract it. I happen to know from letters that people in London have had the same experience. Probably the high percentage of starches accounts for it.

The voluntary rationers undertook their experiment out of an urge to "do something" about the war. Perhaps their idea is wacky and unnecessary. I don't know. But is does occur to me that if people generally tried to do something of the sort one week out of every month, it would bring them closer to our cousins across the water. It would help Britain more materially as well.

Corned Beef Cargo's Atlantic Adventure

To Show It Need Go Black No More

(By Mail)

London — Two lots of tins of corned beef have just finished a trip across the Atlantic for the benefit of stock raisers, meat canners and the housewives of Britain.

Canned meat sometimes goes black where it touches the tin. It need go black no more; blackening may now be stopped by a simple process perfected by British scientists in the laboratories of the Tin Research Institute in Middlesex.

The cans, or the tinplates from which they are to be made, are dipped for a few moments in a boiling solution which is both alkaline and oxidizing. The bath leaves an invisible film of oxide which has now been proved to be even better than the older and more costly method of lacquering.

Two batches of corned beef have just arrived in England from South America. The tins of one batch had been oxidized by the new process; the others were untreated.

Both batches were filled fifteen months ago and when all of them were opened on their arrival in England the untreated tinplate had developed black stains. The other was still silvery and bright.

Till We Meet Again

London — Seven hundred men and women recently gathered at the bomb-damaged Spurgeon's tabernacle, named for the noted 19th century evangelist, and took part in a farewell service — last to be held in the church until it is rebuilt after the war.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

APPROPRIATE WAY TO SHOW YOUR GRATITUDE TO HOSTESS

Most of us enjoy making generour bows of hospitality to other persons. But in some circumstances, we hesitate to make them, fearing our inclination may be more generous than appropriate.

Such a circumstance is when we are visiting, for either a short or a long visit. Our hostess and host have been the personification of hospitality. We have been so much on the receiving end that we long to make some gesture on the giving end. But, we wonder, will this be proper? Will there be any possibility that our hostess and host will misinterpret our suggestion that, for one occasion during our visit, we change our status from guest to hostess or host?

Have no misgivings about the propriety of inviting your hostess, or your hostess and host, to be your guest or guests during your visit. It's a proper thing to do, and it's a delightful step for you to make. And they'll take your invitation in exactly the spirit you give it.

However, this kind of invitation demands definiteness. Don't put it up to them what kind of party you will give. Make up your own mind what form of hospitality you wish to offer them, and present your invitation definitely as well as gracefully. That is, be explicit about the fact that you are to be the hostess (or host), and then be as explicit as you can be (for this may perhaps depend on the convenience of your hostess or host) about the time, place and the number of guests to be included in your hospitality. This puts everybody at ease, a fact particularly desirable in this kind of invitation.

If your visit is in the country, keep your eyes open, as you drive or walk about, for a delightful wayside inn or tea-room, to which perhaps to invite your hostess, or your hostess and the children, for lunch or tea, or your hostess and host to dinner, or the family for Sunday lunch or tea or mid-day dinner.

If you are familiar with the surroundings of the place where you are visiting, or if you are an adventurous soul, you will no doubt find a way to order the lunch or dinner ahead of time, and perhaps to pay check before the party.

Or let's say that you are visiting a hostess who lives in the city, or that you and she are planning to go to the city to shop. Then there will be many kinds of happy plans that you can make. Your suggestion may be lunch, either with your hostess alone, or with one or two of her friends whom you have met and especially like or who have given parties for you, or in other ways offered you charming hospitality. Or the party may be lunch followed by a matinee or movie, followed by a dish of tea. Or it may be possible for you to invite the host to join you and the hostess for lunch or dinner.

In any event, let me urge you again to make your invitation definite. Maybe something like this, "Anne, when we go to town on Tuesday, I'd love to give a party for you and Bill. Would you let me give an informal little dinner party at that nice restaurant that is such a favorite of yours? If you agree, I'd like to ask Mr. and Mrs. Allen and Mr. and Mrs. Graham to join us. We could perhaps have an early dinner after we've finished shopping, and take that ten o'clock train back here."

COURTESY TIP

These are days when you may have to make "military" introductions. So keep in mind that basic rule of introductions: present the person of lesser rank to the one of greater rank. That is, mention first the name of the one with greater rank: "Major Smith, may I present Captain Brown."

SPEAKERS AT B'BG FIRESIDE PROGRAMS

Brownsburg, Au. 26 —

Mr. Linton Armstrong, Inspector of Health for Argenteuil, spoke at the Sunday Evening Fireside on August 10. His topic was "Keeping Your Sunny Side Up". Mr. Armstrong referred to the moral effect that such an attitude had upon our personality from a psychological standpoint. The cultivation of humour was also stressed as being very important. As an outstanding example reference was made to the humour of the British people during the present conflict compared with that of Nazi and Fascist countries.

The August 17 Fireside featured an interesting and instructive address by Flight Lieut. Cook from the R.C.A.F. at Montreal. Flight Lieut. Cook was a member of the Sir Hubert Wilkins party, which in 1937 conducted a search for the Russian aviators lost in the Arctic on a flight from Mosoow to the United States.

With headquarters at Point Barrow on the most northern tip of Alaska, the search was carried out over a large area reaching almost to the North Pole. Much of the flying was done in the brilliant Arctic moonlight.

Movies were used by Flight Lt. Cook to illustrate the work of the party. The everyday life of the Esquimos and their bleak country, included in the movies, was also very interesting.

OPEN SPACES FOR YOUTH INSTEAD OF GAME BIRDS

That private land which hitherto has produced pheasants might, after the war, better be devoted to the raising of finer human beings was a plea by Dr. Ruth Fry, Chairman of London Juvenile Courts, in the course of a lecture on "The Ancestral Child."

"Apart from formal education," said Dr. Fry, "far more might be, should be, done to help our boys and girls to come not only unharmed, but developed and strengthened, through the primitive stage. The Scout and Guide movement, at its best, seems to have an almost inspired understanding of their needs at this time. When it fails I suspect that is where Troops are run by people who are not fully competent or sympathetic. Moreover, they are frequently run under far too great difficulties.

"If we are to mitigate the evils of an urban civilization we must be ready to give up tracts of ground, reached by free transport, for the training of our population. When at last England emerges inevitably impoverished in men and women, from the nightmare of war, might she not determine that much of the land which has hitherto produced pheasants might better be devoted to the raising of finer human beings."

He was quarrelling with his wife, and not doing any too well.

"You didn't have a rag on your back when I married you," he said, saidly.

"Anyway," she retorted, "I've plenty now."

For many years he had had a Chinese cook. One evening, after a more than usually good dinner, the boss decided it was time to raise the man's wages.

"Why you pay me more?" he asked.

"Oh!" replied the cook thoughtfully. "Then you have been swindling me for year, eh?"

QUEBEC PROVINCIAL EXHIBITION OPENS SATURDAY, AUG. 30

Quebec City — The Quebec Provincial Exposition, biggest industrial and agricultural exposition in the province, will open on Saturday, August 30th, and will come to a close on the following Saturday, September 6th.

This year marks the thirtieth anniversary of the founding of the Exposition. First organized in 1912, it has registered successive increases, and during this period has acquired a permanent organization which has played no minor role in its success.

The Exposition Grounds are located in the northern section of the city, and are easily accessible from all quarters by automobile, tramway or autobus.

On entering the grounds, the visitor crosses a vast lawn, intersected by wide streets, and shaded by big trees. These streets lead to the various exposition buildings. In the brackground, facing the entrance to the grounds, may be seen the Central Palace, an immense brick building, in which are located the administrative offices, banquet halls, halls in which various spectacles take place, floors where are held fruit, flower and vegetable shows, etc.; to the rear of this building are the grand stands where those attending the Exposition witness trotting races, concerts and other open-air performances.

On the right is to be found the Industrial Palace, in which are housed industrial and commercial exhibits. To the right of the Industrial Palace, and behind it, there is a large area given over to mechanical amusements and the tents, etc., of the Midway. To the left of the entrance to the grounds are to be found the Domestic Arts Palace, where are exhibited the various exhibits of domestic arts, executed by groups of farmers' wives; the Coliseum, where each day parades of pure-bred livestock take place, and where they are inspected by the different judges; and in the rear stables and accommodation for livestock and other farm animals.

Officials of the Exposition have prepared an elaborate program of attractions outstanding among which are the celebration of Labor Day, Monday, Sept. 1st, and Wednesday, Sept. 3rd, which is given over to the "Merite Agricole". On the latter date prizes won by farmers during the course of the agricultural competitions known as the "Merite Agricole" will be awarded.

Excursions between the principal regions of the province and the Ancient Capital will have been organized by the various railway companies, providing reduced fares for the Exposition.

RESCUE FROM SUBMERGED CAR WINS A BOY SCOUT SILVER CROSS

The recue of a young woman from a submerged and overturned automobile was the unusual rescue feat which has brought the award of the Scout Silver Cross, for gallantry at serious risk, to Patrol Leader MacRae Clouston, of the 1st. Huntingdon, Que., Scout Troop. The incident occurred last summer. Stated the citation:

"Patrol Leader MacRae Clouston was a passenger in an automobile driven by Miss E. Delisle on July 21, 1940. At about 10.00 p.m. on an extremely narrow road the car was drawn over the side of a bridge by a rut and soft shoulder after meeting another car. The car dropped ten feet, turned upside down, and landed in the water. The car top was so crushed that the doors could not be opened. Despite the rapidly rising water and darkness inside the car, Clouston dragged Miss Delisle, who was in a dazed, semi-conscious condition, through the water under the inverted front seat of the car to reach the rear window. He broke out the safety glass with his foot and knee and brought Miss Delisle to the surface and to shore. Clouston sustained a severe cut in the knee and bled profusely from a severed artery. He stopped the flow of blood with a tourniquet and then assisted Miss Delisle about two miles before reaching help."

SOFTBALL SEASON ENDS AT BROWNSB'G

War Workers' Leagues, Men's and Ladies, Play Final Games

Brownsburg, Aug. 26 —

With the playing of the softball finals between the Office and the Chemistry Lab in the men's League, and the D. I. L. Red Shift and the Office in the ladies' League, the softball season has been drawn to a close. From three leagues of twenty-two teams which entered the field at the beginning of June, two teams emerged victorious with the right to be called the softball champions of Brownsburg.

There were originally some forty-one teams who used to practice on the one diamond we had at that time up on the Picnic Ground. By the time the organized league began, however, the number of diamonds had been increased by two with the addition of one by the Recreation Hall and the other on the lower field behind the girls' camps, and the number of teams decreased by some nineteen.

Generally speaking there were no radical upsets in the league standing from the date it commenced until it finished. In League 1 the Office, Chemistry, Plastics and Metallics led all the way while in League 3 D. I. L. Red Shift girls and the Office Girls accompanied by Plastics headed their series. In League 2, the Machine Shop Reds and the Tool Shop Reds who headed this league, switched into League 1 half way through the series. League 1 ended in a 3-cornered tie between Metallics, Office and Chemistry and League 3 ended up with the Office girls playing off against the D. I. L. Red Shift.

Although there were problems to be overcome, namely to do with the different times of shift changes, and the fact that Plastics and C. S. F. closed down for holidays, two of the leagues were carried through as per schedule while the third was amalgamated. The leagues were composed of some 330 players who played 78 games. Spectator interest was evident, especially at the diamond by the Recreation Hall, where on occasions well over 150 people watched the games.

What it Meant by Wild Cat Scheme'?

Years ago, a certain bank in the United States became notorious because it failed as a result of a number of senseless or improvident dealings. The bank used the head of a panther as its sign. People thus refer to wild-cat schemes as meaning operations which are as stupid and far-fetched as those undertaken by the bank that used the panther (wild-cat) as its symbol.

Why Do We Raise Our Hats?

Nowadays, of course, as a mark of respect, but the custom arose in olden times as a sign of trust. They wore helmets in those days and kept them on even when ladies were present. Taking off the helmet was an indication that you trusted a man and believed him friendly. Helmets gave way to hats, but the habit of uncovering remained and became a symbol of politeness.

Don't forget the boys overseas. Letters and newspapers from home are always welcome, and mail day to them is the most important of all.
