Conjecture on Cabinet Shift And Quebec General Election

Legislature Session Ends, at Quebec

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL.
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Quebec, June 30 (CP) — Political life in this ancient capital has been practically at a standstill since the fourth wartime session of the 21st Legislature ended quietly last week.

Government ministers and members returned to their homes for a rest after the four-month grind, but even so there was little let-up in the flow of conjecture around the Legislature.

Talk of an autumn session prior to the calling of general provincial elections and of a cabinet reshuffle still held the spotlight as the political dopesters tried to guess what Premier Godbout has in mind.

An autumn session, they say, would give the government the opportunity to bring in pre-election legislation such as the redistribution of electoral districts. The number of seats is scheduled to be increased from 86 to 90.

The government would also likely deal with the plans for refinancing the debt of the City of Montreal, which has been under the control of the Quebec Municipal Commission since 1940.

The refinancing plans have been discussed by the city officials for more than a year and unless some agreement is reached by fall the government is expected to offer a solution to the problems. A bill that would have made several amendments to the City's charter was prepared by the Council during the session just ended, but the Legislature was never called on to study it. The bill is another measure the government might introduce at an autumn session.

The codification of all municipal laws may be completed by autumn and the government would be in a position to put all municipalities under uniform control. Now, some municipalities are governed according to the Cities and Towns Act and others according to the Municipal Code.

The uniform law would likely contain a clause authorizing all municipalities to collect a two per cent sales tax. Many municipalities already have the taxation right. The government extended the right to collect the levy to all municipalities which asked for it during the past session.

But the fall session, some political circles say, will come only after Premier Godbout has reshuffled his cabinet. J. A. Beaulieu (Lib. Temiscouata) is listed as a possible successor to the late Cleophas Bastien, who died last winter shortly after being appointed Minister of Colonization. Hon. Cyrille Dumaine, Speaker of the Assembly, is mentioned as successor to the late L. J. Thisdel, minister without portfolio, who died shortly after Mr. Bastien's death. Alexis Caron (Lib. Hull) might be asked to succeed Mr. Dumaine.

These changes, like the possibility of a fall session prior to general elections, are neither confirmed nor denied by the government. Some circles say that the government is already to hold elections as soon as it can complete plans to gather the votes of members of the armed forces.

"It is not like 1916," one commentator said, "when we simply disfranchised some 16,000 soldiers from the Province of Quebec. Today there are possibly more than 200,000 Quebecers serving in the armed forces and we cannot deny them their right of vote just by snapping our fingers. I believe that once the government completes its plans to collect the soldiers' votes elections won't be long in coming."

Boys' Brigade and Scouts Join for Church Parade on Dominion Sunday

Brownsburg — Dominion Sunday was observed fittingly at the United Church when the Boys' Brigade from Montreal — now camping at the Boy Scouts' grounds on Frank Vowles' property — attended together with the local troop of Boy Scouts under the direction of Scoutmaster Robinson, and the Wolf Cubs under Cubmaster Elliott and Assist-Cubmaster Haiter. The boys of the Brigade were accompanied by Capt. Alex Lough and Lieut. Albert Robinson. Dominion Quartermaster R. N. A. Kidd was in charge of the bugle and drum band, while Capt. Smyth was in charge of the colors.

All three troops met at the Consolidated School grounds and paraded to the church, where they occupied the front pews — the Brigade boys some 40 in number, with the Scouts and Cubs on either side balancing the centre group.

Following the choir as, they entered the church, the Rev. S. J. Pike continued to the front where Capt. Smyth and two senior members of the Brigade awaited him with the colors and then followed him to the rostrum where the minister received the colors for placement, announcing as the Doxology the opening verse of "O Canada".

The service throughout was characterized with appropriate features. The "Dominion National Anthem" was sung following the psalm response by the choir, which led the musical parts of the service under the direction of Mrs. C. J. Wheeler, organist. Mr. Frank Steer rendered a solo, while the congregation joined with the boys in a special hymn number, "Land of Our Birth."

The Rev. Mr. Pike introduced Capt. Lough, who, after expressing the gratitude of the Brigade for favors and accommodation on the part of the Brownsburg folk, in turn introduced Dominion Quartermaster Kidd, who gave a resumé of the Brigade's history, this year being their jubilee, and the part William Smith (later knighted "Sir") played in its founding. . . . In addition to the welcome extended, the minister also gave a brief address.

The impressive service was brought to a close by singing the Brigade hymn, "Will Your Anchor Hold," followed by the benediction and the returning of the colors to Capt. Smyth, who, with his senior boys, called the congregation to attention for the singing of "The King." The congregation remained standing while the boys retired and re-formed outside the church. Headed by the band they paraded through sections of the town back to the school grounds.

A drum-head service was held by the Brigade at their camping site in the evening, attended by a good number from the various churches. Preacher was the Rev. Mr. Patridge, of Montreal.

"PAPER AND OFFICE" WAR

Bexley, Eng. (CP) — Admiral Sir Edward Evans (Evans of the Broke), commenting here on the number of circulars sent out to civil defence personnel, said, "we have nothing to be afraid of in London except these circulars, which have to be filled in triplicate, and must create the impression that it is a paper and office war."

NEW PRINCIPAL FOR CONS. SCHOOL, ST. ANDREWS E.

St. Andrews E. — There were no closing exercises at the Protestant Consolidated School, but a Parents' Night will be held in the autumn. The Rev. Dr. William MacMillan assisted the teachers as examiner during the writing of examination papers. The only change in the staff, is the resignation of Mrs. Carrie Spicer, the principal. Mrs. Genevieve Dawson has been engaged for next term as principal.

WHAT BRITAIN'S READING

London (CP) — Hilary St. George Saunders' "Battle of Britain," "Bomber Command" and "Combined Operations", which are war records, already have sold more than 10,000,000 copies, a figure which overshadows Hitler's 5,000,000 sales of "Mein Kampf."

Over $1,000 Subscribed in Brownsburg for Greek Relief Fund

Brownsburg — Upwards of $1,000. has been reached by Brownsburg in contributions to the Greek War Relief Fund — another evidence of the way in which this community responds to national appeals for matters of urgent need. Just a few weeks ago Brownsburg led Argenteuil County in the Fourth Victory Loan campaign.

If the Federal Government, as reported, is going ahead with a redistribution bill, it means that an election before the legal expiration of the present Parliament is something very probable.

STOREKEEPERS CLOSING HERE NEXT MONDAY

After considerable confusion — due probably to changed announcements from government sources — the Dominion Day holiday is being observed by Lachute retailers and business firms next Monday. This was generally agreed upon by the local merchants early in the week.

It has been customary for this public holiday to be celebrated on the Monday nearest to July 1, thus affording a long week-end to workers. The government decision that today, Thursday, should be set for the holiday, was made doubtless with a view to curtailing week-end travel, but the earlier uncertainty found many communities taking the decision upon themselves, as in the case of Lachute.

The Brownsburg industries are observing the holiday today. The local banks and professions are also generally closed today, in accordance with the statutory order.

Production Tripled On Poultry Front, Oversized Egg

Something unusual is reported by one of our lady residents. . . . An egg, which from its size appeared to be double-yolked, when broken open produced three perfectly formed yolks — supplying a triple calcium quota for our informant's breakfast.

This egg was laid by a White Leghorn hen owned by Wilfred Oswald, Petit Brulé.

Bus Runs Amok in West End Shopping Centre, One Injured

Auto and Store Front Damaged

The condition of Robert Gordon, 16-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Archie B. Gordon, Dunany, sole victim of last Saturday's spectacular bus accident at Lachute west end, is today reported as satisfactory. The boy, seated on his bicycle talking to relatives on the veranda of their home, was struck from the rear by a Provincial Transport bus and hurled against the building. The bus ran over his bicycle, dragging it until, having plowed a path of destruction, the vehicle nosed into a show-window and came to a standstill.

The accident occurred at 6.10 p.m. on Saturday, and at this busy hour it is considered miraculous there was no heavier toll of life and limb. Failing to negotiate the curve on Main Street past the fire station, the bus, driven by Joseph Dion, employee of Provincial Transport for the past seven years, climbed the sidewalk, striking young Gordon and narrowly missing his cousin and grandfather. The latter, Robert Gauley, fell to the ground in the scramble for safety while the little girl, with a fractured foot in splints, managed to enter the house when warned by her mother who had seen the bus approaching. The chair on which the girl had been seated was broken by the impact.

Meanwhile the heavy bus sped along a length of the sidewalk, swerved back into the street, the rear skidding into a parked automobile and sandwiching it into a telephone pole. The vehicle then headed between two gasoline pumps outside Geo. Y. Deacon's store on the opposite side of the road, plowed through an electric light pole and crashed into the store window, breaking three sheets of plate glass. The damaged car, the property of Jean Brisebois, was standing at the kerb in front of his store. The bus, which according to eyewitnesses almost overturned, was practically undamaged. Besides the driver, the only other occupants were another employee of the company and a girl passenger.

Geo. Y. Deacon, witnessing the accident from the door of his premises, rushed with other bystanders to assist the injured youth and his grandfather. He then returned to his store to summon medical aid, but the phone circuit had been broken by the falling pole, and he was obliged to drive east on Main Street to establish phone communication. Dr. R. Percival and Dr. R. Rodrique attended the victim, the former accompanying him later in an ambulance to the Montreal General Hospital; the boy was reported to be suffering severe shock, a fracture of the shoulder and lacerations of the head, back and one hand. . . . Robert Gordon is well known around town, having served as clerk in the J. D. Campbell store for some time.

Repair men were soon on the scene restoring the phone circuit and replacing the electric light pole. Traffic Officer Albt. Legault of Brownsburg and Town Constable G. Ampleman investigated the circumstances of the accident, Det-Maurice Valiquette arriving later from Provincial Police headquarters. A large crowd of spectators gathered in quick order as news of the accident became known.

Damage to the Deacon store property has been valued at $600.

The west-end detour had been in regular use by buses since repairs to Barron's Bridge had closed the direct route to Brownsburg a week previously.

Legion Groups at Lachute and Brownsburg Behind 'Stamp-Out-the-U-Boat' Campaign

A Stamp - Out - the - U - Boat Campaign will be held throughout Canada from July 4 to 31. During this period it is hoped that the public will buy sufficient War Savings Stamps through specified outlets to purchase 15,000 depth charges at a cost of $90 each.

Branches of the Canadian Legion in Lachute and Brownsburg will sponsor the campaign in their respective towns. These organizations have kindly consented to do all the spade work and to provide supervision by their members.

The drive will be centred around an objective poster, called a tally-ho sheet. This is a large bilingual poster in two colors with a basic illustration of a depth charge surrounded by action shots of Canadian corvettes. The depth charge is divided into 90 squares, each representing $1 worth of War Savings Stamps. When a person buys four stamps ($1) he or she will be given a stamp-o-gram to stick on one of the squares. Each stamp-o-gram contains a message and some in blank will be available for any customer who would like to use his imagination.

When any one poster is completed—i.e. the 90 squares filled—it will be forwarded to the provincial headquarters of the National War Finance Committee and will in time be delivered to the Navy with a depth charge.

CLOSE SCHOOL FOR EVACUEES AT ST. SAUVEUR

Farewell Presentation to Chaplain as Year Terminates

MANY OF CHILDREN HAVE RETURNED HOME

Morin Heights — A farewell gathering was held at Rydal House School, St. Sauveur-des-Monts, on Friday afternoon, when Mr. H. G. Baugh presented prizes won by the scholars during the past year.

Mr. Baugh was the recipient of a beautifully bound edition of "I have loved England," by Alice Miller. Each one of the 40 children had neatly autographed the frontispiece. The school, a branch of the Parents' National Education Union, is distinctly for children evacuated from England. Many of the children have already returned, and others intend returning to England this year. Those still remaining when the fall term opens will reside in Westmount and attend "Trafalgar" and "The Study".

Mr. Baugh has acted as chaplain to the school for the past two years.

PARISHES HOLD PROCESSIONS ON CORPUS CHRISTI

Religious Feast Celebrated in Catholic Communities Throughout Quebec

COLORFUL PARADES ARE WITNESSED IN LACHUTE

In full strength the parishioners of Ste. Anastasie, St. Julien, and all the surrounding Catholic communities, joined in their respective observances of the feast of Corpus Christi last Sunday morning. The procession witnessed in Ste. Anastasie Parish, and the rites conducted at the repository, formed a colorful ceremony in which many hundreds took part.

The occasion was favored with fine weather. The objective of the procession this year was a dais set up before the residence of J. Constantineau on Foundry Street. The parade, starting from the church, followed a route down Bethany, west along Robert Street to the river and east again along Foundry Street.

A similar parade was held in the west-end parish of St. Julien, where the faithful walked in a long procession to the new Providence Hospital, circuiting the Ayers residences and returning again to the church.

Many groups and organizations of the two Catholic churches were represented. The order of the procession in Ste. Anastasie, preceded by police officers and moving at a slow and dignified pace, included the following: the cross, followed by groups of communicants, convent pupils and college pupils in their respective regalias; Enfants de Marie, Dames de Ste. Anne, Tertiaires and Crusaders; the Knights of Columbus third degree, preceded by the Grand Knight sword-bearer; representatives of Lachute Town Council; juvenile choristers; the clergy of the parish (Rev. Fr. Lacourse, Revs. Rodrique and Savage), beneath a canopy borne by 4th degree Knights of Columbus; finally, the choir, the Sacred Heart league and male parishioners.

A similiar order was followed in the St. Julien procession and the parades made an impressive spectacle.

TO ESTABLISH FRUIT FARM AT ST. ANDREWS E.

St. Andrews E. — Mr. J. Grenier, of Montreal, having purchased 50 acres from St. Andrews East Estates on the River Road, for raising small fruits, has erected an air-conditioned storehouse at a cost of over $4,000. Cottingham Supply Company, Lachute, was the contractor.

Building to Beat the U-Boat

"Progress is being made in the war against U-boats. We are holding our own, and more than holding our own", said Mr. Churchill when he announced that the Allied fleets were 1,250,000 tons bigger than six months ago, and that new building had exceeded all United Nations losses by that amount. Men and women of Britain's shipyards, working at high pressure to defeat Germany's most potent weapon of war, played their full part in making this unprecedented building progress possible. . . . Picture shows one of Britain's growing fleet of new victory merchantmen nearing completion.

Slave Labor from South Imported For Early Carillon Canal Project

Harry J. Walker, in his weekly articles to the Ottawa Farm Journal, has frequent recourse to C. Thomas' now famed "History of Argenteuil and Prescott". From this source the writer gives another sidelight on the early construction of the Carillon-Grenville Canal. We quote the colorful paragraphs which have particular reference to this phase of local history:

"Having done homage with uncovered head, and on one knee, without spur or sword, and having sworn fealty to His Majesty . . ."

Thus, C. Thomas, the veteran chronicler of the Lower Ottawa, records the taking of the oath of allegiance which restored to the Treadwell family the Seigniory of L'Orignal. But behind that ancient feudal acknowledgment of fidelity to Sovereign power is the story of a belated restoration of lands; of a perseverance that never wavered; of passions and prejudices that warped the minds of men in high places; and of the labors of an Ottawa River pioneer in his colonization of the only seigniory in Upper Canada.

The building of the first Grenville canal in 1819 by the Sappers of the Royal Staff Corps is crowded with action and splashed with color. Great and distinctive personalities of more than a century —such as Charles John Forbes, gallant British veteran of New Orleans and Waterloo; Captain Thomas Kains, naval veteran and noted pilot, and Nathaniel Hazard Treadwell, pioneer colonizer — lived, moved and had their being close by that stretch of rapid water from Grenville to Carillon. They come and go across the stage of that period in a swiftly moving and fascinating pageantry. For us they visualize the past, and again we see the "Barracks" at Carillon, and the distillery of Hughie Chisholm where he took the farmers' grain in exchange for "whuskey". Hughie, after selling plenty of liquor, is said to have become an ardent temperance crusader! And so we come to the story of the Treadwells.

Imported Slave Labor

Nathaniel Treadwell is credited with being the sponsor of the first attempt to improve the treacherous waterway of the Long Sault in that stretch of the Ottawa between Grenville and Carillon. Treadwell imported about 50 of his father's slaves, gave them their freedom, and set them to improving navigation by the digging of connecting trenches. It is said that vestiges of this work still remain.

Treadwell came first to the Ottawa River about 1794 in the employ of the Hudson's Bay Company, but later transferred his services to John Jacob Astor. He was the first white settler above the Long Sault and built the first mill on the Ottawa. The germ of colonization seems to have been early implanted in him, possibly by the successful example of his wife's people, the Platts, an old Long Sault Island family, who had been granted a large tract of land in New York, and who had emigrated there with settlers to what is now called Plattsburg. Here they successfully colonized that section of the country, and the Treadwells came with them.

Mabel Couple Feted On 40th Wedding Anniversary

Have Three Sons in the Armed Forces

Mabel — The home of Mr. and Mrs. James Murdoch was the scene of a happy event on Saturday evening, when their family gathered, as a surprise, to celebrate with them their 40th wedding anniversary. Mr. and Mrs. Murdoch were presented with a set of beautiful dishes, and a supper was served by the seven members of the family who were able to attend with their families. Five others living at too great a distance were not able to be present. Three boys of this family are in the armed forces — Percy, with the United States Army in Texas, Perley, who has recently joined the R.C.A.F., and Harry, with the Canadian Army overseas.

The community joins in congratulating Mr. and Mrs. Murdoch and wishing them many more years of happiness.

CAN. PACIFIC HAS MET OBLIGATIONS TO GOVERNMENT

Montreal, June 29 — Statements recently made in the House of Commons show that the C.P.R. has been a good client of the Dominion Government insofar as the latter has gone into the business of lending money to assist vital and essential industries.

Between 1931 and 1941, the Government advanced loans to the Company for various purposes, as follows: During the summer of 1936 it was necessary to find work for unemployed men in many parts of Canada. To aid in this purpose the Government advanced to the Company a total of $554,700. This loan was fully repaid by instalments between January 1938 and January 1942. Over the period the Company paid interest at 2½ per cent totalling $47,567.42.

Between September 1935 and March 1936 the Government lent to the Company a total of $1,270,000 to finance the betterment and repairing of railway equipment. Those were days when the depression had seriously reduced the Company's available funds for this work. The loan was fully repaid between January 1938 and January 1942. No interest was to be paid on this loan for the first two years, but later interest payments at 4 per cent were made to a total of $170,854.79.

During the period of 1935-38 the Government purchased railway equipment to a total value of $5,730,000. This was sold to the Canadian Pacific under a hire-purchase agreement and the entire amount was repaid to the Government by January, 1943. This loan was interest free for two years. After that period the Company paid interest of 3 per cent, a total of $610,978.61.

A similar arrangement was made for the purchase of equipment over a period including the years 1939 and 1941. The Government lent the Company a total of $9,951,489.64, at 3½ per cent interest. This was fully repaid by December 1942, with interest thereon amounting to $844,990.53. Over the period until these loans were fully repaid, therefore, the Canadian Pacific made a total interest payment of $1,674,391.35.

The only other outstanding loans which the Company owes the Government are two which were made for the purchase of helping to keep the country's workmen employed between November 1931 and January 1933. The depression was then at its height and it was necessary that something be done to check the growing unemployment. Large industrial concerns were approached with this end in view and the Canadian Pacific agreed to assist by going on with work that otherwise would have been left to more prosperous times. For this purpose the Government advanced in 1931 a total of $1,447,221 repayable on demand without interest when the Company resumes dividends at a rate of more than 5 per cent per annum. In 1932 and 1933 the Government advanced another million dollars repayable on demand without interest before the Company pays any dividends on its common stock.

OKA COLLEGE OF AGRICULTURE AT 50th MILESTONE

The Oka Agricultural Institute, one of the most important agricultural schools in Quebec, celebrates the 50th anniversary of its founding today, July 1. It is directed by monks of the Abbey of Notre-Dame-du-Lac.

The Cistercian establishment at Oka dates back to 1881, when two monks who has been evicted from the Abbey of Bellefontaine, in France, took possession of one thousand acres of land which had been offered them by the Sulpician Fathers, of Montreal. This land was situated in the Sulpician seigniory of the Deux Montagnes lake, and within a few years, the Trappists had transformed their establishment, to found the agricultural institute which will celebrate its golden jubilee in a few days, in 1893.

Agronomists throughout the Province held a big convention at Oka from June 28 to June 30, and will participate in the anniversary celebrations today.

SAVE PROTEIN IN HAY CROP

(Experimental Farm News)

As protein concentrates are comparatively costly, and just now somewhat difficult to procure, it is sound practice to save all the protein possible in farm crops. Good average alfalfa hay contains about 14¾ per cent of crude protein. Red clover contains about 12 per cent. Compare these with timothy hay, about 6 per cent, barley grain, nearly 12 per cent, and oat grain, 12 per cent, and the high value of alfalfa and red clover is quite apparent.

Protein is easily lost if hay is not carefully handled. Early cutting is necessary if the maximum protein is to be obtained. Analyses at the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, show that alfalfa cut at the recommended stage just after bloom commences, contained nearly 20 per cent protein, while in full bloom it contained only about 17 per cent. Red clover in the bud stage contained just over 15 per cent and with heads turning brown about 11½ per cent. Timothy in the shot blade contained over 9½ per cent protein and in full bloom about 6½. Cutting hay early cannot be too strongly emphasized.

Curing hay should be carefully done under as favorable conditions as possible. The leaves of alfalfa contain on the average about 22 per cent protein, while the stem contains only 10 per cent. It is essential to save as many leaves as possible. Experiments have shown that under the most favorable conditions 50 per cent by weight was lost, representing more than 50 per cent of the feeding value. The hay should be partially cured in the swath and when still tough should be raked and the cutting finished in windrows. If conditions permit, the hay should be harvested from the windrow. This saves protein and also conserves labor. Under poor climatic conditions cocking may be necessary. Exposure to rains may result in as high as 60 to 70 per cent loss in protein as well as large amounts of other nutrients.

Cut early and save carefully should be the hay makers slogan.

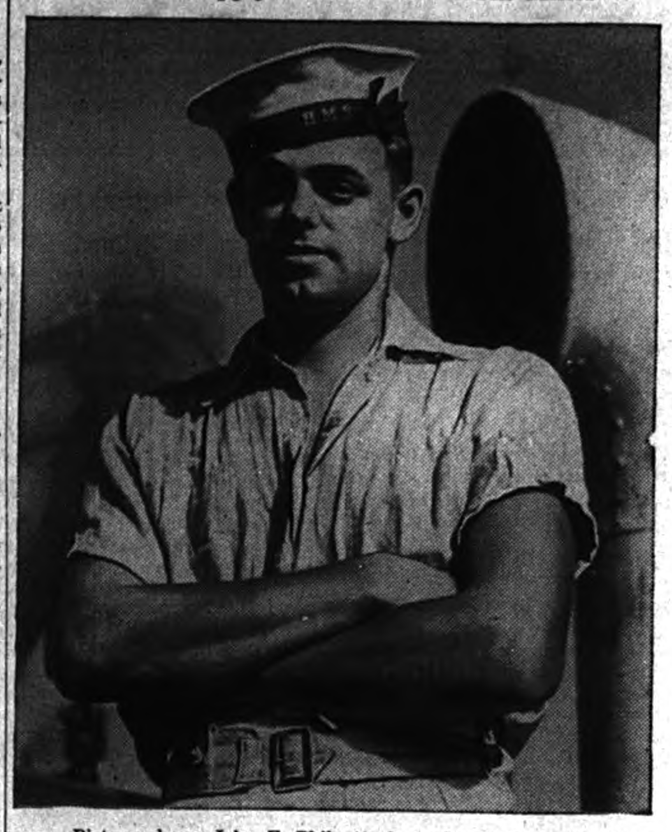

An asset to any home.

Proclamation Issued by Wellington Contained in Old English Newspaper

Brownsburg, Que. —

One of the most historical proclamations of the 19th century, that given by Wellington to the French people after Napoleon met his defeat at Waterloo, is contained in the issue of the London Courier of June 30, 1815, which A. J. Quinn found among some old papers last week. While the format of the paper is typical of the time, there is every evidencce that promotional schemes brewed on a large scale even then, for there is an account of a "matchless $40,000 lottery" and while the advertising appeals were somewhat different, they were very direct.

"I announce to the French," says the proclamation, "that I enter their territory at the head of an army already victorious, not as an enemy (except of the Usurper, the enemy of the human race, with whom there can be neither peace nor truce) but to aid them to shake off the iron yoke by which they are oppressed. I therefore give to my army the subjoined orders, and I desire that everyone who violates them may be made known to me.

"The French know, however, that I have a right to require, that they conduct themselves in such a manner that I may be able to protect them against those who would seek to do them evil.

"They must then furnish the requisitions that will be made them by persons authorized to make them, taking receipts in due form and order; that they remain quietly at their homes and have no correspondence or communications with the Usurper or his adherents.

"All those who shall absent themselves from their homes, after the entrance of the army into France, and all those who shall be absent in the service of the Usurper shall be considered as enemies and his adherents, and their property shall be appropriated to the subsistence of the army.

"Given at headquarters at Malpaquet this 21st of June, 1815.

—Wellington."

Another important item, also of a historical nature was the notice of a House of Commons bill by the great William Wilberforce to prevent the smuggling of slaves into the West India colonies.

Sporting Gentry

It was apparently a field day for inventors and one who had developed an improvement in a gun announced it in the following terms:

"Thomas Manton begs leave to inform the nobility, gentry and sporting world in general that after much labor and expense he has completed an improvement in the lock and breech of the gun, and flatters himself the long-wished for object is attained of preserving the powder in the pan from the effect of wet. This improvement is further desirable, by rendering the communication quicker than by the former method, as also in preventing the possibility of accident arising from the blowing out of the touch-hole. T.M. feels confident in soliciting the inspection of the gentlemen of the sporting world to this improvement from a conviction that it will meet with general approbation, both on account of its utility and capability of its being affixed to any modern gun. — 59 Princess Street, Leicester Square, London."

GOOD LAWNS IN SHADY PLACES

(Experimental Farm News)

The establishment and maintenance of grass under trees and in other shady locations is one of the most difficult of all turf problems, says J. H. Boyce, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa. There are, of course, some situations where the shade is so dense that it is impossible to grow grass. In other instances it is possible to maintain a green cover only by sowing grass seed two or more times each year. In a majority of cases, however, it is possible, by very careful preparation and maintenance, to secure and maintain a satisfactory permanent turf.

The ideal soil for lawns in the shade is a deep, rich, well drained sandy loam and if not already present every effort should be made to secure such a soil by improving that which is on the site or replacing it with soil of a suitable nature. Heavy fertilization before seeding is recommended and the fertilizer should be worked deeply into the soil. Where large trees are present it is desirable to provide extra food for them by removing the topsoil from the area in which the feeding roots are situated and working a liberal application of fertilizer into the subsoil without disturbing the roots. The topsoil is then replaced and fertilized in the same manner as the remainder of the lawn. If the subsoil is heavy it is well to install a system of tile drains in order to secure adequate underdrainage. Surface drainage may be taken care of by proper grading.

The best time to seed in shady places, particularly under deciduous trees, is around August 15th. This allows free time in the fall and early spring for the establishment of a deeply rooted turf.

The seeds mixture should contain a high proportion of species particularly adapted to shady locations. Creeping red fescue and chewing's fescue do well under dry shady conditions and rough stalked blue grass usually does well in moist shady locations.

The grass should not be cut too short. A height of one and one-half to two inches is recommended. Established grass in shady places should be fertilized twice each year, once in the early spring, before active growth begins and again during late August. The health of both trees and grass can be greatly improved by feeding the trees through holes punched into the soil in the feeding root zone.

Water only when necessary to keep the grass in a slowly growing healthy condition. Trim out as many limbs of the trees as possible without affecting the beauty or health of the trees.

Further information on the establishment and maintenance of grass may be obtained from Division of Forage Plants, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

THREE R.A.F. CREW KILLED IN PLANE CRASH . ST. ADOLPE

St. Adolphe de Howard — Three Royal Air Force Transport Command men met death in the wreckage of a two-motor Lockheed-Hudson bomber here at noon last Thursday, June 24.

The plane, understood to be from the North Bay area, circled over Lake St. Joseph shortly before 12 o'clock and was seen by campers to be flying very low, presumably in trouble. It sliced the tops off several trees on an island in the lake, the site of the Y.M.C.A. Camp Otoreke, lifted up over the lake and a small village at the north end and plunged into the side of a hill and exploded.

Seventy Y.M.C.A. campers were on the island at the time and these stated that several articles fell from the plane when its tail struck the trees, including a large aerial map. Tree tops were scattered about the island but fortunately none of the campers were injured.

The mishap occurred a mile due north of St. Adolphe.

Mgr. J. B. Bazinet, of Ste. Agathe, hurried to the scene and performed the last rites of the church near the wreckage.

Several Ferry Command pilots, holidaying in the vicinity set up a guard to keep the crowd back. Residents of the area and summer visitors rushed to the crash by boat and auto.

Consensus of opinion among people at the scene was that the big plane, presumably in trouble, bucking high winds, smashed into the trees on the island. The pilot, it is believed, first thought to bring it down into the lake. It is believed that he saw the possibility of his momentum causing the plane to strike the houses and boat houses at the north end of Lake St. Joseph and that he deliberately lifted the big ship up over these and crashed into the hillside.

OF ANOTHER INVASION

Bale, Eng. (CP)—A plowman near this Norfolk village turned up an urn containing 1,300 Roman coins. Experts expressed belief they had been buried for safety during an invasion scare when the Anglo-Saxons were striking at Britain. The coins date from the reigns of Probus and Gallienus.

PORTUGAL'S GOLD RUSH

Lisbon, (CP) — Portugal has had a great "gold rush" which swept civilians from their jobs at counters and desks into the hills after easy money. Wolfram, an element essential in hardening steel, was the prize. Allied and Axis representatives didn't haggle the price.

CYCLIST KILLED BY TRUCK ON HIGHWAY TO LAURENTIANS

Fernand Leroux, 19-year-old cyclist, of St. Janvier, was fatally injured when he was struck by a hit-and-run truck on the Laurentian highway on Saturday night.

According to information gathered by provincial officers, the victim was bicycling near the Bouchard plant when he was hit by one of two transport trucks which were reportedly racing on the highway.

Taken to nearby Ste. Therese immediately after the mishap, young Leroux was given first aid treatment and then taken to Ste. Jeanne d'Arc Hospital, Montreal, where he died Sunday afternoon.

Driver of Vehicle Held On Manslaughter Charge

Gaspard Pratt, truck driver, of Montreal was arraigned before Judge Omer Legrand Monday afternoon on a charge of manslaughter.

Accused war formally remanded for enquete on July 6, bail being allowed in two sureties of $950 each.

Roger Ouimet represented the Crown, and Andre Demers, K.C., and Fabio Monet, K.C., appeared for the accused.

Evidence heard before Coroner Richard Duckett was to the effect that Leroux was riding his bicycle on the highway at St. Janvier when he was struck by the vehicle driven by Pratt.

Witnesses of the accident testified that two trucks passed and repassed each other, travelling at an excessive speed. Neither of the trucks stopped after Leroux was hit. The two drivers were traced by the provincial police, and the coroner was informed that they both admitted they passed each other at speed in excess of 40 miles an hour and that neither of the speedometers on the trucks was working. The coroner's jury added to their verdict a rider recommending that the rules of the road be more strictly enforced and that speedometers and brakes of all cars owned by trucking companies be checked by the authorities in the interests of public safety.

Dominion Day, 1943

Canada's log cabin days are history, but the pioneer qualities of initiative, stamina, physical courage and horizon-vision have built the nation whose achievements we honor on her 77th Dominion Day.

In defiance of geography she has linked three coasts by rail and air; in defiance of history she has kept faith on a 2300-mile unfortified boundary for 128 years. Her population has trebled since 1867, the year of Confederation. Agriculture, industry and mining have outstripped the bravest dreams of the Fathers of Confederation. In a little less than four years of war she has established basic industries which will be of untold value in the post-war period. Today, geared to the highest per capita war production of any British dominion, she stands in defiance of dictators, a "dagger pointed at the heart of Berlin" by sea, land and air, a pioneer of democracy.

But if on an anniversary the past parades its gratifying achievements, at the same time the future throws down its challenges. And here too Canada has been a pioneer. The British Commonwealth Air Training Plan, anti-inflation legislation and "pay-as-you-go" financial policy place her in the vanguard. The United States has studied her wartime economy and other dominions her war production projects.

Those who know, see the war's "beginning of the end". It is not too soon for Canadians to assess the problems of the future. When the end comes there will be tremendous tasks ahead, the drafting and execution of a post-war social order that will avail itself of Canada's demonstrated capacity for patriotism, sustained effort and spirited action.

Her past accomplishements have provided experience and confidence. The war has proved her unparalleled ability to expand. The way lies open for Canada, the pioneer of the future.

More Evidence

The successful outcome of organization for a blood clinic in our neighboring town of Hawkesbury, and the holding of the first clinic in that centre, may give encouragement to those undertaking this venture in Lachute under auspices of the Red Cross. The local Lions Club will solicit donors and advise volunteers on the arrangements made for this enterprise.

The immeasurable value of these blood-banks for life-saving, in civil emergencies and wartime needs alike, is evidenced many times in the news from widespread sources. We have just read, in the Aberdeen Weekly Journal, a vivid report of the disaster which befell a quiet northeastern town when enemy planes swooped from the skies to spread their destruction. It is soul-stirring story, with flashes of kindliness and heroism illuminating its poignant paragraphs. And the story ends as follows:

"The town's blood transfusion service saved many lives. Eighty to 100 bottles of blood and plasma were used in the treatment of casualties in hospital.

"'In spite of the heavy calls made on the blood-bank, supplies were more than enough', stated an official. 'The treatment unquestionably made all the difference between life and death for many.'"

Another Bungle

Local merchants and business men agreed this week to observe the Dominion Day holiday next Monday, July 5,

The change in the date for observing the Dominion Day holiday by the government has resulted in a mix-up all around — states the Sterling News-Argus, voicing a complaint which has been expressed by many editors. Originally it was announced that this statutory holiday, which this year falls on Thursday, would be celebrated on the following Monday. In many instances plans have been made for holding events on Monday, July 5, and at this late date it will be impossible to make a change. The result is that some municipalities will celebrate on July 1 and others on July 5, while municipalities that observe Wednesday as a mid-week holiday will be faced with two holidays in a row. No doubt the change in dates was made to avoid congestion of traffic on the railways and to save the gasoline used in long motor trips which go with long week-ends (concludes the News-Argus), but it would have been much better if the announcement of the change in date had been made a couple of weeks earlier.

—To which we may add a moral from another Ontario weekly, the Rainy River Record: Don't arrange to celebrate a holiday until the government makes up its mind when it is going to be!

Co-operation Through Necessity

There are all sorts of stories coming in from farming districts these days about tractors running day and night and farmers co-operating with each other to plant a maximum crop in the short time now at their disposal. In many instances the weather has accomplished something that no amount of talking could previously do. The shortage of machinery has also helped.

For years farmers have complained about overhead costs of farm operation. Yet each farmer felt he needed a full set of machinery, his own bull and boar, and everything else to make his own farm as self-contained as possible. Obviously there was a lot of waste — such as three bulls doing a poor job where one good bull might have improved conditions. One way to cut costs is to share things.

Good Intentions

Labor Minister Mitchell's announcement that teachers are now "frozen" in their jobs — may not take other occupation without a permit — is good news so far as it goes. It indicates federal recognition of the school's importance to Canadian welfare, and sets an example which Ottawa might well extend to other vital community services. One such is hospitals, where the staff situation is increasingly desperate.

But though the intention is welcome, the execution is awaited with some pessimism. On the record to date, Ottawa's refrigeration process is not too efficient — the "frozen" trades do not seem to stick. Coal miners have been "frozen" for some time, and since May 17 have been the only Canadian industry in which compulsory transfer has actually been attempted. But Labor Minister Mitchell's own figures showed that during May, while Selective Service was placing 679 men in coal mine jobs, 1,514 left the pits for other work.

Confidence was not increased by the military call-up figures Mr. Mitchell gave the House on Wednesday. Any machinery is defective which fails to account for 507,374 men out of 988,475. More than half the men called up are unaccounted for.

And even this figure may be an understatement. Mr. Mitchell's tables do not show the number of men rejected on medical grounds, but they do show a wide gap between the number medically examined and the number called for training — a far wider gap than is accounted for by the number of postponements in effect. Here are the figures:

Men medically examined	608,642
Postponements in effect	100,973
	507,669
Men called for training	289,544
Unaccounted for	218,125

This remainder includes, of course, the men rejected for medical reasons. But until we are given that figure itself, we cannot tell how closely it tallies with the gap between men examined and men called. And there are too many gaps in Mr. Mitchell's figures for us to take anything on faith.

Opposition Leader Gordon Graydon, calling for an investigation of the whole set-up, suggested yesterday that Elliott M. Little had lost out as Selective Service Director because "he was too good a planner for what the Government had in mind". Be that as it may, it is evident that no good planners have succeeded him.

BEST OF EXPERTS DO MAKE ERRORS IN BOMB TELLING

It May Sound Like "One of Our Own" but Better Duck Under the Table Anyway, to Make Sure

By Scott Young,
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London (CP) — The next volume of Famous Last Words should include a picture of a confident character pointing blithely skywards and saying: "That's one of our own."

It's just like reclining in the middle of your local main street and saying "I've never been hit by a car." The drama depending on "That's one of our own" for its punch-line generally goes this way:

Sirens sound alert. Gunfire begins. Aircraft heard overhead.

First Voice: "That sounds like Jerry." Second Voice: (firmly): "No, that's one of our own."

Offstage Noise: Distant whistle, growing louder, sounding like a bomb.

Wham! It was a bomb. Closing chorus:

One error in life is his to atone.
He said that plans was one of our own.

Happens Regularly

Something like that happens every week or two in Britain, and usually it isn't funny. Most recent version was that of a 10-year-old boy in a south coast town, explained: "I saw six planes and thought they were Spitfires. The next thing I knew I was covered with dust and feathers from people's beds."

The variations go on and on, but one of the best concerns a Royal Air Force specialists on aircraft recognition lecturing to a class of R.A.F. students. "It is simply a matter of study, recognizing these sounds," he was saying. "Once you know them all, you can't make a mistake."

Just then the siren sounded, nearby guns opened up and a plane was heard approaching.

The instructor listened, smiled depreciatingly and said: "That, for instance, is one of our own."

A whistling scream was heard in the distance, getting closer. The instructor beat his entire class under the table.

Laugh 'n Like It!

"Why the suitcase, old man? Going on a vacation?

"No. My wife's managing the parish rummage sale, so I'm storing a few personal belongings in the office until it's all over."

• • •

"Could you pay for an operation if I thought one was necessary?"

"Would you think one was necessary if I couldn't pay for it?"

• • •

"Journalists are just ordinary people," says a correspondent. With exceptions. For instance, there is the editor whose decision is final at home.

• • •

"Please can you tell me why the tide is up this morning?" asked the little girl at the seaside.

"Yes, missie," replied the old fisherman. "It's because it was out all last night."

"Is your commercial school for girls a great success?

"Yes, 60 per cent of the pupils have married their employers."

One morning a young clerk reported to his chief that he had lost the key to the safe, so he could not get at the important books and documents.

"But I gave you a duplicate key," said the chief. "You haven't lost that as well, I suppose?"

"No sir, I know where that is."

"Well, then, you can open the safe."

"Please, sir, I thought I might lose the duplicate key, so I put it in the safe!"

"Scram! We've got tickets!"

Income Tax Worries

A taxpayer files his income tax return within the due date, and, in doing so, because of the heavy obligation, asks how it may be paid on the instalment plan. Fourteen months later he receives the bill of what is due, plus interest that savors of usury, plus a percentage of the National Defence Tax which he has already paid in full because it has been taken off at the sources. The tax collectors, though ultimately inexorable in their decrees, are "leaden servitors" of the Government.

—Victoria Daily Colonist

Indoor Serenade

Mussolini has just decreed the ultimate in war restrictions on the people of Italy — no more outdoor serenading. Any young fascist, whose heart is busting with love, caught strumming his mandolin under his fair one's balcony will be clapped in the jug for a three-month stretch.

Various reasons are advanced for the ban on al fresco song. One is that Il Duce spends a lot of time on his balcony and no one has come to serenade him in a long, long time, so he has decided no one else will be serenaded either. Another is that the R.A.F. is making enough noise these evenings in Italy without adding some second rate singing to the din.

Whatever the reason, the Italians probably do not feel much like singing anything but "I'll be glad when you're dead, you rascal, you" to the former protector of Islam, anyhow. —Winnipeg Tribune

And A Child Shall Lead . . .

This is the letter Marilyn Townsend, 8, of Winnipeg, Man., wrote to the National War Finance Committee recently:

"Dear Sirs: I am the captain of a club. I have my group of girls well drilled. But we don't think that we do enough for the war effort. Would you please send me instructions how I could get War Savings Stamps for us to sell.

The ages of the girls are from 8 to ten. Maybe we sound pretty small but this is a war for every man, woman and child. So we want to do our bit to win."

Over in Slovakia, three people were shot for listening to the wrong radio program. Under that sort of rule over here, the shooting would be virtually continuous.

THE PEOPLE'S MOUTHS

The People's Mouths, by Austin Fletcher Cross, B.A.— The MacMillan Company of Canada Limited.

> The noble tribunes are the people's > Mouths, and We their hands.
> —Shakespeare (Coriolanus).

A veteran parliamentary correspondent tells how the Canadian Government works and answers with a not unkindly mixture of satire and humor the following pertinent (at times impertinent) questions: What kind of man is Premier King? Who are the members of his Cabinet? How well do they do their jobs? How are our Federal laws made? What future has the Conservative party? What does the C.C.F. stand for? What is the policy of the Social Credit party? Is the Senate useful? What good are Back Benchers? What goes on in social circles of Ottawa?

In racy, vivid prose the author presents us with intimate thumbnail sketches of members of the Cabinet and leaders of the Opposition; the men, their jobs and how ably they perform them. There is also a chapter devoted to those hard-working but not so well-known Back Benchers, most of whom are liked by Mr. Cross. The author — who makes his home in Montreal with his wife and two children — grew up in a political atmosphere, within sight and sound of the Parliament Buildings in Ottawa, in a home where politics was daily table talk. He has an uncanny memory and knows by sight every member of Parliament and can name their riding.

We are reminded that there are over 70 lawyers in the House of Commons, 31 being from the Province of Quebec. There are 55 farmers, "but in many cases this 'Farmer' label is just something thought up to bellwether the votes." There are 15 medical doctors and 13 teachers, five from Alberta and all the five Social Creditors. "They have found it pays, apparently to follow the lead of their spiritual chief, Premier William Aberhart, who has been a teacher by profession all his days." "Next come merchants, with 12, and manufacturers, also with a dozen. There are 66 M.P.'s engaged in business one way and another. Quebec produces the most lawyers (31), Ontario the most farmers (18), Alberta the most teachers (5), British Columbia the most agents (3), and Saskatchewan the most preachers (2).

Properly enough he gives most space to Prime Minister King. After some pages of bright, friendly jibes mixed with bits of worth while Canadian history about our great and near great, he (the keen hard-boiled veteran of the Press Gallery) sums up his opinion of our Prime Minister as follows: "There's nothing about MacKenzie King to warm up to." This reviewer does not agree. "You could no more get chummy with him than you can make love to the British North America Act. But in Canada when the history of our time is written, the No. 1 Man in the book is going to be Mackenzie King." This reviewer heartily agrees with the last thirteen words of the last sentence which show the sense of fairness and good judgment of our author.

In the tenth chapter The Right Tea-Cups he gives his home town Ottawa a ribbing as he did in Snobs and Spires.

He wrote: "Twittering over the right tea-cups and pouring drinks down the right throats count for more in our city of snobs than the copy-book virtues. They pay off here on who you know, and not what! The best jobs come not by the sweat of your brow, nor with a dozen degrees, garnished, cum laude. The big money comes because somebody likes you — or your wife." He mentions some of the leaders during the past 20 years who crossed the stage and made their exits and wrote: "They had their day, and it was a great day. But an ambitious Ottawa hostess would not give a twelve-sided nickle to entertain any of them today. The catches this season are the Howes, the Haleys, the St. Laurents, the Ralstons, and so on down the Cabinet."

THE JEWS IN SPAIN

"The Jews in Spain", their Social, Political and Cultural Life during the Middle Ages, by Abraham A. Neuman, President, The Dropsie College for Hebrew and Cognate Learning, Volume One, Political-Economic Study, Volume Two, a Social-Cultural Study. — The Jewish Philadelphia Society of America, Philadelphia.

This is the third work issued under the Professor Morris Loeb Fund. The first, Saadia Gaon — His Life and Works, by Henry Malter was published in 1921. The second, The Pharisees — The Socialogical Background of their Faith, by Louis Finkelstein, was published in 1938.

The volumes are dedicated "To the memory of Solomon Schechter, 1850-1915; Joseph Jacobs, 1854-1916; Cyrus Adler, 1863-1940, Teachers and Friends who Profoundly Affected my Life". Dr. Neuman wrote in part in his Preface in Volume 1: "In these days, when the ghosts of mediaevalism have been fantastically brought to life in Germany and in other countries under her baneful influence, the story of Jewish life in Spain during the Middle Ages takes on startling timeliness. The fate of the Jews in the Iberian Peninsula during those dark ages appears almost like a preview of Jewish life in Nazi Germany, so striking is the parallel between them. The high level of Jewish life and culture in Spain, the manifold contributions which the Jews made to Spanish civilization in all its manifestations and, withal, the inevitable doom that followed — this recital of the glory and the tragedy of Spanish Jewish history is like the holding up of a mirror to the scenes enacted along the banks of the Rhine and Unter den Linden. Thus one may recognize in their true character many of the malignant ideas and practices so wantonly foisted upon the world in the name of the "New Order".

There are seven rare illustrations in Volume 1 and eight in Volume 2. There are a list of abbreviations, many notes, an extensive glossary, bibliography and index.

ZERO HOUR NEAR

June Best Record in War Against U-Boats

(CP) — Prime Minister Winston Churchill declared in London Wednesday that the time of an Allied invasion of Europe is approaching.

He said: "It is very probable that there will be heavy fighting in the Mediterranean and elsewhere before the leaves of autumn fall."

Reviewing the anti-submarine campaign, Mr. Churchill stated that since the middle of May scarcely a single Allied merchant ship has been lost in the entire north Atlantic. During May more than 30 submarines were destroyed and the Prime Minister said that June was "the best month we have ever known in the war."

Shipbuilding in the United States and Canada alone, he said, had reached a stage where the output of new ships was somewhere between seven and ten times as much as Allied losses from enemy action in June.

CWAC Member Attached To Parachute School

Winnipeg, Man. — Women have invaded another he-man field in the Canadian Army, no less than the paratroopers.

The first of her sex to be attached to the Canadian Parachute Training School at Camp Shilo, is Private Marjorie Perry, of St. Boniface, Man.

Private Perry, a member of the Canadian Women's Army Corps, will not be schooled as a soldier jumper but as a "rigger" who will be charged with the care and maintenance of 'chutes.

It isn't as exciting a job as that of leaping from planes, but nonetheless important and interesting, Major R. F. Routh, acting officer commanding the school, pointed out there is a definite field for women in parachute work because they can relieve manpower for other duties by packing and otherwise maintaining the silken bags.

It will take about two weeks to train a competent girl to pack 'chutes, and a month to repair and look after them.

One of the most meticulous phases of a paratrooper's course is how to pack his 'chute properly, how to dry it and how to keep it in repair. He will still have to learn all that, but much of the time-consuming routine of maintenance may in future be handled by the C.W.A.C.s.

The Late David Stalker

On Saturday, June 26, at his home in Lachute, there passed away one of the oldest residents of Argenteuil County, in the person of David Stalker.

Mr. Stalker was born at Chatham, Que., on February 15, 1856, and spent his entire life in this locality. On March 6, 1878, he was married to Maria Graham, and the couple spent many years on nearby farms, moving into Lachute in the year 1909. Of their marriage four children were born, one of whom died in infancy. Of the others, one daughter, Annie, died at the age of 20, and their only son, Howard, at the age of 18. The remaining daughter, Miss Lillie M. Stalker, survives her father, her mother having passed away in 1921.

In 1925 he was married to Miss Lillie May Doig, of Lachute, who survives him.

Mr. Stalker was a member of the United Church, and a faithful attendant at its services as long as his health permitted. He also served on the Town Council of Lachute.

The sympathy of the community is extended to Mrs. Stalker, and to Miss Lillie Stalker, in their bereavement.

The funeral service took place at the home on Monday afternoon, and was conducted by the Rev. W. B. Rosborough, with the Rev. R. P. Stafford, of Coaticook, Que., taking part. Mrs. C. Duncan sang as a solo "Beckoning Hands," accompanied by Miss Ruth Todd. Many beautiful floral tributes were banked about the casket.

Committee Formed at Lakefield; Fund for Churchyard Endowment

Lakefield — The special meeting, called for Saturday, June 26, in the Gibb Parish Hall, was well attended. The Rev. C. W. P. Bangh was chairman. Mr. Thos. McCambly and Mr. Austin Kyle, the churchwardens, were present, as well as Mrs. T. McCambly, president of the W.A. and interested members of the congregation.

The object of the meeting was to devise ways and means of improving the condition of the cemetery around the church.

After considerable discussion, it was decided to appoint a committee, as follows:

Chairman, the Rev. C. W. P. Baugh; treasurer, Mr. Thos. McCambly; Rev. Allan E. Mount, Mr. Austin Kyle, Mrs. C. W. P. Baugh, Mrs. Geo. Peet, Mrs. Lorne Dawson.

The object of this committee is to raise sufficient funds to level the grounds, cut all brush, remove rocks, etc., and, further, to raise an endowment fund of at least $1,000 for the upkeep of the graveyard once it is put into good order.

Already an encouraging number of subscriptions have been received, and it is felt by the committee that many friends at home and in distant parts will be glad to help in this important work. All subscriptions sent to Mr. Thos McCambly will be gratefully acknowledged.

At the end of the service several men were in shirt sleeves.

Christian Science Sunday Services

"God" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon to be read in Churches of Christ, Science, on Sunday, July 4.

The Golden Text is from Isaiah 33: 22. "The Lord is our judge, the Lord is our lawgiver, the Lord is our king; he will save us."

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "O let the nations be glad and sing for joy: for thou shalt judge the people righteously, and govern the nations upon earth." (Psalm 67: 4).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddie: "Christian Science raises the standard of liberty and cries: 'Follow me! Escape from the bondage of sickness, sin, and death!' Jesus marked out the way. Citizens of the world, accept the 'glorious liberty of the children of God,' and be free! This is your divine right. The illusion of material sense, not divine law, has bound you, entangled your free limbs, crippled your capacities, enfeebled your body, and defaced the tablet of your being." (Page 227).

If every Canadian woman engaged directly or indirectly in war work buys one extra War Savings Stamp the result will be 700 depth charges with which to drive enemy subs from the seas.

Hints for Homebodies

ROUGH JUSTICE

This business of sugar rationing is difficult for all of us, and it must be a headache for the authorities. Last year they let every one have all they asked for and we all know women who abuse this privilege. There was plenty of sugar bought that was not used for canning. One way of checking is in the amount of flour used. Immediately after the canning season there was a sharp increase in the amount of flour purchased — and you can't bake without using sugar. When they gave women all the sugar they wanted for canning they used 110 million pounds. This year they asked for 209 million lbs. 84% of the population asked for sugar for canning. Granted that more women want to can this year than ever before, but it is doubtful if that many actually will use sugar for this purpose. Between 40 and 50 million pounds went to the bottom of the sea because of enemy action, and there is only 100 million pounds of sugar available to us for canning purposes. If all the sugar asked for had been allowed, there would not be nearly enough fruit. One mistake the W.T.P.B. made was in asking women to can as much as possible to save fruit. Women on farms need more than other women and they have been given more sugar, but not as much more as I would like to have seen them get. People who grow small fruits use more sugar than the average, but they will have to get on with less than usual. Byrne Sanders phrase of 'rough justice' is about right. They are giving us all the sugar there is, so let us stop grumbling and be thankful for what we can get.

JAM

There are many women canning and making jam this year who have never done it before. Some of these live in apartments where there is not a proper place for storing fruit. Those who have not a good cool cellar should be a bit chary in canning as it is a shame to do fruit with the possibility of it not keeping. Jam and jelly are much easier to keep than canned fruits, and it might be well for these women to make jam rather to chance canning. To make jam, prepare the fruit, weigh it, and add three-quarters of the weight in sugar. Let this stand until some of the juice is extracted, giving it an occasional stir to hasten the process. Cook rapidly until the mixture is thick enough. Test for thickness by putting a little on a cold plate. Stir frequently to prevent sticking, and towards the last of the boiling, it requires almost constant attention. Pour in to sterilized jars and seal.

SEALING FRUIT JARS

The simplest method of course is to use the regular fruit jars, and a rubber ring, but for jam and jelly any bottle may be used. Wax may be used for sealing these. Pour the melted wax in a thin layer over the fruit immediately. When that has cooled and set, pour a thicker layer, rolling the bottle so that the wax comes well up the sides. Many advise putting a thread under the first layer of wax to make the wax easy to remove. I have advised this myself, but no longer do so, as the only bottles of jam I ever had spoiled were those that had the thread. Not many spoiled, but each year an occasional one did. I like to use those paper seals which you wet and fasten with an elastic band. I have found them perfectly satisfactory, and they even have stood up to moving and long storage. A friend who lives in an old house and has trouble with mice each fall, says she cannot use the paper seals as they are no protection from the mice. Careful sealing is necessary, no matter what method you use. If you use the regular jars and rubber rings, tighten the ring while the jar is hot, and then leave it alone. If you tighten it again you break the seal.

APRICOT BREAD

1½ Cups pastry flour, 5 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon salt, 1½ cups whole wheat flour, 1½ cups milk, ¼ cup molasses, ½ cup brown sugar, 1 tablespoon melted butter, 1 cup dried apricots.

Soak the apricots in cold water for four hours, then drain and mince. Sift the white flour, salt, and baking powder, add the whole wheat flour, and sugar. Stir in the remaining ingredients and bake in a moderate oven of 325 degrees for 1¼ hours. In the days when we had nuts I added ⅔ cup, but it is good without.

RATIONING

Questions & Answers

Q.—What is required of producers of dairy butter who sell it on the market or elsewhere?

A.—Every such producer must register with his local Ration Board and cannot sell butter unless he has done so. At the end of each month he must deliver to his Local Ration Board all the coupons or other ration documents he has received for the butter he has sold.

• • •

Q.—Is there any rule saying that I have to take my ration book with me when I visit friends?

A.—No, but it is a courteous thing to do. If you leave your book at home, it just means that your host and hostess will have to do with less in order to share their rations with you.

• • •

Q.—I have a two weeks' vacation this summer and I'm going to spend it at a hotel. Do I need to take my ration book with me? I will be eating at the hotel.

A.—Definitely yes! Don't forget that book! When a guest stays a week or more at a hotel, the management must detach two meat coupons and one butter coupon each week. Every two weeks, one tea or coffee and one sugar coupon must be detached.

• • •

Q.—My son has just been discharged from the army after nine months service. Am I allowed extra canning sugar coupons for him?

A.—You should write or call in at the nearest ration office of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, giving the particulars. In your case, you should write to the Ration Office, Sun Life Bldg., Hamilton.

• • •

Q.—We have not yet received our canning sugar coupons? Have they all been distributed?

A.—All sugar coupons have not yet been mailed out in some communities and in some sections of cities, but you should be receiving yours within a few days.

• • •

Q.—Do all coupons marked June for canning sugar have to be used in June only, or are they good any month up to the end of the canning season?

A.—All sugar for canning coupons are good until September 30.

Meat Coupons

The law provides that bookholders when purchasing meat must surrender at the time of purchase to the seller, valid meat Coupons. It is, therefore, illegal for merchants to issue, or bookholders to accept, I.O.U.'s or any form of credit slip or token for meat for later supply. In other words, if the purchase of meat does not equal the full Coupon value, small balances must be either ignored or taken in such easy "make weight" items as sausages, hamburger, etc.

Removal of Coupons

While it is illegal for anyone to present loose Coupons when purchasing rationed goods, the law allows the book holder to remove Coupons in the presence of the merchant or his employee. This practice may be preferable when purchasing meat. It not only assists the merchant but may prevent your ration book from becoming soiled.

Lady of Mercy

Taking her part in Canada's war service, R.M.S. Lady Nelson, once the proud flagship of the Canada-West Indies fleet of the C.N.R., is now a hospital ship. Known simply as Canadian Army ship No. 46, the Lady Nelson made her first Atlantic return crossing in May, bringing Canadians from Britain, some of them Dieppe veterans, and Americans from North Africa. When she docked, CBC's commentator, Joan Marshall, went aboard; and here she is shown chatting with Captain George W. Welch, first to command a Canadian hospital ship in this war. Miss Marshall described her visit aboard the Lady Nelson in a recent Canadian Round-up program for CBC listeners.

SERVICE WIVES IN "KEEP FIT" WAR MOVEMENT

Organized Recreation Centres in B.C. Big Attraction for Lonely Folk

Vancouver, June 27 — It could have been a jumping net such as firemen use — or some sort of hammock. But it was neither.

"We call it a tramp-o-line," said Jerry Mathison, provincial chief instructor of British Columbia's Recreational and Physical Education branch of the Department of Education, as he watched a couple of youngsters performing on the apparatus.

Service men's wives — many of them strangers to Vancouver and who cannot afford expensive recreational — are making friends in "Pro Rec" classes.

"Industrial weightlifting has been introduced as a voluntary activity for women," said Mrs. Hilda Keatley, provincial chief instructress. "Many of our Pro Rec women are workers. Often they are called upon to carry heavy objects. Our instructors teach them how to lift properly, thus avoiding strain and possible injury.

"Pro Rec is now planning for expansion of the 'Keep Fit' movement throughout British Columbia war plants," said Mr. Mathison. "Only in this way can we offset the lowered vitality of the worker, caused by monotony, artificial light, dim-outs and general physical strain."

Board of Directors Only To Hold Sessions

Owing to war and transportation conditions, Quebec Women's Institutes will hold only a meeting of the Board of Directors, instead of the usual annual convention at Macdonald College this year. The Board will convene for its sessions at the College on June 29 and 30, and among other business will ratify the report which the Nominating Committee will present of officers and directors for another two-year term.

Vegetable Plate

Summer meals, and what to do about them, are the theme of "Vegetable Plate," a new series of four talks commencing Wednesday, July 7, at 4.18 p.m. EDT, over the National Network of the CBC.

Dorothy Colquhoun, in the role of a rationed householder, and also in the part of her Scotch maid, Janet will discuss new ideas for summer dishes that are nourishing as well as palatable. Her ideas are meant for those who have succeeded in growing a Victory Garden and want to use its maturing products to best advantage on the table.

"Janet" and her mistress will stay with the garden food topic through the month of July, providing recipes and ideas for listeners as fast as the fruits, herbs, and vegetables come out of the garden.

BRITAIN AWAKES TO NEW METHODS FOR HOME COOKS

Ministry of Food Says No Nation Cooks Vegetables Worse or Grows Them Better

London (CP) — "No country in the world grows vegetables better than we do and probably no country in the world cooks them better."

Those forthright words in the opening paragraph of a gaily colored leaflet on "Green Vegetables," published by the British Ministry of Food, officially confirm what many overseas service people in Britain have been saying since their first meal here.

The war has brought the sometime soggy state of English cooking not only to the attention of the visitors but to everybody else in Britain.

Both the Ministry of Food and voluntary organizations are trying to educate the public. Doctors are broadcasting, posters are admonishing, booth set up in various districts are giving free advice. Housewives are being taught to buy sensibly and to cook properly. There has been a revolution in eating habits.

Changing Scene

Britain is becoming vitamin conscious at last and tourists of the future may gain by the lessons learned of necessity during the war. Before the war "meat and two veg" was the staple everyday English meal — one vegetable being potatoes and the other cabbage or Brussels sprouts.

Folks from overseas, however, should take heart. Pea pods, nettles, cauliflower stalks are recommended to a rationed Britain more and more dependent on home grown produce, and in the leaflet Brussels sprouts appear once.

Perhaps in the future the overseas tourist visiting the home of his ancestors in some country village may find in the local inn not the inevitable "meat and two veg" but a salad laid on a spotless linen cloth in the oak timbered room. Only after the war perhaps there will again be golden butter and English lamb and mint sauce to go with it.

Will Marry Girl He's Never Seen

London (CP) — Eric l'Epine Smith, film studio casting director, is getting ready for a wedding to a girl he has never seen. "Dental Health"

Abscessed Teeth

Much progress has been made during the past twenty-five years in the study of the relationship between dental health and general health. Today, it is quite well recognized that dental disease and poor dental hygiene play a great part in the development of many physical ailments such as rheumatism, arthritis and heart and kidney diseases.

One of the greatest offenders in his respect is the much discussed dental abscess.

In most cases, a dental abscess is caused primarily by extensive decay in the tooth. If dental decay is allowed to progress until it reaches the pulp, or so-called "nerve", that delicate tissue readily becomes infected and dies. Usually, this is a slow, gradual and somewhat painful process. As the pulp, or "nerve", becomes devitalized, it naturally loses its resistance and readily becomes decomposed. Thus, infection is allowed to progress to and through the root end of the tooth into the adjacent bone and soft tissues. In most cases, once the infection has penetrated the root end, an abscess forms.

Sometimes, the infection will force its way through the jaw bone and gums and drain into the mouth. This type of abscess is commonly called a gum boil. Dental abscesses in the mouths of children quite often take the form of gum boils.

Whenever a gum boil appears, the infected tooth should be cared for by the dentist before the poison affects other parts of the child's system.

Sometimes, an abscess will form very rapidly and extensive swelling of the face and pain result. Tis is called an acute abscess.

Frequently, dental abscesses form slowly, with little or no pain and no swelling. This type is called a chronic abscess. These slow, painless abscesses are often more dangerous than the acute type, because they frequently go unnoticed. Therefore, they sometimes harbor infection that should receive care. Infection originating in chronic abscesses may be spread to other parts of the body by the blood stream. X-ray pictures of the teeth are a help to disclose any chronic dental abscesses that may be present.

Carrots Second

If Victory Garden crops were to be rated according to the quantity of vitamins they are likely to contribute to the family diet all season long, the carrots would probably be rated next to the tomato.

CHINESE WOMEN FINE KNITTERS

Asiatic Mothers in Canada's West, Organized in Relief for the Homeland

Winnipeg, June 27 (CP) — The war goes on behind the lines as Chinese women here find ways of creating small comforts for the suffering people of their homeland and of other Allied countries.

An afternoon on tour of the Chinese Mission here and the rooms of the Chinese National League with Miss Daisy Ross, a business woman who has been teaching Chinese children in Sunday school and meeting their mothers weekly for the past fifteen years, would reveal the great effort expended towards winning the war.

"They knit beautifully," explained Miss Ross, as she showed samples of work. It consisted of knitting of women's and children's sweaters, mittens and sewing of patchwork quilts for the Red Cross. Through the I.O.D.E. they have sent much of their knitting and sewing to bombed-out English families.

Now they are working on a tea at which there will be a sale of sewing and knitting. The proceeds of this tea are to be sent to their first lady, Madame Chiang Kai-Shek, for the Chinese Refugee Relief fund. Such articles as gay aprons, knitting bags, stuffed animals, cushions with a V embracing the Chinese flag and the Union Jack (emblem of the Chinese National League), table runners with Chinese character which translated into English means "Hope for Victory."

Big Sister Work

Thirty Chinese mothers who have been remaking big sister's clothes for little sister for years, can well fit into the scheme practiced in Canada of remaking clothing to save material and manpower.

A friendly and homey atmosphere prevades the places of meeting. Amid the humming of machines, the click needles against thimbles, the buzz of women talking, is the gurgle of babies and the frequent cry of "mamma". When there is work to do, Chinese women do it even though they must care for their babies at the same time.

CANADIAN TROOPS IN ATHLETIC MEET, DOMINION DAY, 1918

Ignorant of Plans for Big Offensive, Boys Celebrated in Sports Near Arras

By H. H. GORDON, Canadian Press Staff Writer

July 1, 1918 was a big day for the Canadian Corps in the First Great War. Unaware of plans in preparation for the smashing summer offensive that was to end in Germany's crushing defeat, the overseas soldiers celebrated Dominion Day by holding a miniature Olypiad at Tinques near Arras.

For months the corps had played only a minor role in the great battles that developed from the German spring offensive. While British and French troops repulsed the drives in which the Germans had hoped to separate the Allied armies, most of the Canadians were undergoing intensive training in the Vimy Ridge sector for the great Battle of Amiens which was to turn the whole tide of the war.

But only Sir Arthur Currie and a handful of senior officers knew of the plans being hatched in the fertile brain of Ferdinand Foch, generalissimo of the Allied forces, and they kept the secret well as they watched the finely trained Canadians in athletic contests and other activities that marked the Dominion Day holiday.

Notables At Games

Among the spectators were the Duke of Connaught, Sir Robert Borden and other Canadian cabinet ministers, Sir Douglas Haig and leading British commanders together with Marshal Petain of the French Army. Marshal Foch was to have attended the celebration, but back at his headquarters he was engaged with far more weighty matters.

More than 35,000 Canadians took part in the celebration and with them men of Scottish divisions undergoing training in the same area. Two squadrons of Canadian airmen patrolled the skies to prevent any interference with the program by hostile planes.

Less than three weeks later the Canadians heard that French and American troops had smashed forward over a 35-mile front in the Champagne sector. Foch planned to exploit this advantage by throwing Canadians and Australians into the battle of Amiens, but they were to know of the plans only a few hours before the battle.

Training Paratroops: Volunteer Shock Troops of Britain's Airborne Forces

Parachute Troops constitute a powerful surprise factor and are usually employed in conjunction with airborne or mechanized troops in the main ground effort or in rear of the enemy lines. They are armed for their specific task with weapons and equipment dropped on their landing area. Paratroop training by R.A.F. instructors of Army Co-operation Command, a highly specialized undertaking, is done first by synthetic ground apparatus and later from static balloons and 'planes. Special P.T. courses ensure all-round physical fitness, co-ordination and mental alertness. . . . Picture shows Paratroops with Bren and Sten guns defending their colleagues while arms are being taken from the container dropped with them.

"NIGHTMARE" STORY OF PRESENT DAY SPIES IN ENGLAND

Tim Whelan is an American director who has made a number of films in England in recent years. Now back in Hollywood he has directed "Nightmare," a melodama about spies in England today — which comes next week, July 9 and 10, to the Rex Theatre.

Many of the directorial touches in the film show the influence of the dominent English or Hitchcock, school, writes Herbert Whittaker, Montreal reviewer. It has plenty of surprises scattered through, starting with a most unconventional meeting between an English girl and an American gambler, and proceeds across country to mingle with some of those highly respectable English spies.

The dialogue too is good, most of the time, with plenty of those terse scenes in which people politely threaten each other with death and disclosure. The picture is well-made, much of the English atmosphere being quite convincing. There are one or two places however, when a false note is struck. For instance, no English butler would surely ask the lord of the manor's cousin to wait in the hall while he announced her. Also the English villagers seem too ready to jeer.

However, these are not things that matter very much, our critic avers. A more important fault is the rather heavy pace which persists throughout. Mr. Whelan has learned the tricks of the trade but hasn't caught quite the suspense of the better English models.

Part of this heaviness may be due to Diana Barrymore's impersonation. Her idea of portraying a well-bred English girl seems to be to make the character as bad-tempered as possible. One feels that when any girl is in the predicament in which Miss Barrymore finds herself in the film, it would be better to be as nice as possible to anybody who can help her. However much of this may be inherent in the script. Miss Barrymore has a good name and good figure, but she speaks lines in a ponderous way that is not going to help her career.

Brian Donlevy, on the other hand, makes the best of his role of the American gambler, underplaying his lines when necessary and bringing a certain lightness to the business at hand.

Two Strikes and — Out!

When a sit-down strike was called among 60 employees of an Indiana auto accessory factory, the president decided to settle it quickly. "Boys, you might as well be comfortable here," he told the strikers; and sent for blankets and had three cases of brandy sent in. When the brandy was almost finished, he brought in 16 young ladies to amuse the strikers. At the height of festivities, the president left, to return with all the wives of the strikers to view the Indiana version of a Bacchanalian revel. . . The strike was called off forthwith.

ROYALTY GUESTS OF VICE-ROYALTY AT SEIGNIORY CLUB

The Governor-General of Canada, the Earl of Athlone and Her Royal Highness, the Princess Alice, entertained at luncheon last Friday at the Seigniory Club, Montebello, when their guests were Her Majesty Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands, H. R. H. Princess Juliana and the Governor-General's grandson, Richard Abel-Smith and Donald Redfern, of Ottawa. Flight Lieutenant W. O'Brien and Lieutenant Chatfield, aides-de-camp to His Excellency, accompanied the party.

After a swim in the glass enclosed pool, luncheon was served on the outdoor terrace dining room of the Log Chateau. Then the whole party took to canoes and paddled down the Ottawa River. Her Majesty Queen Wilhelmina and H.R.H. Princess Juliana returned to Ottawa at four o'clock, but the rest of the party drove to the Sports Club house on the golf course for afternoon tea, after which they returned to Ottawa.

KEEPING MICE HER WAR JOB

Mrs. Patricia O'Hara, wife of one of Britain's rescue workers, is exempt from all military service or factory work so that she may look after the 1,000 mice she has in the basement. Why? Because she is raising the mice for the government — red mice, blue mice, blue and tan, black and white white and champagne; every sort of mouse. They are wanted for bacteria testing and gas testing, and are also used in making insulin.

Urban Centres Expected to Show More Marked Effect Of Compulsory School Law

Farm Communities Considered More Conscientious in Child Education

Director of Prot. Education Comments on Law; Effect on Teaching Profession

"THE WEEK AT QUEBEC"
By D'ARCY O'DONNELL,
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Quebec, July 7 (CP) — The provisions of Quebec's new Compulsory School Attendance Law, adopted at the last session of the Legislature, are now in force and school commissions throughout the province are preparing to apply them when the new term opens in September.

The provisions, which make it obligatory for children between six and 14 years of age to attend school, became effective July 1, two months before classes are due to open. The early enforcement date was set to allow the 1,900-odd commissions in the province to prepare for the changes the law will necessitate.

Each commission will have to appoint one or more truant officers who will check on school absentees and a count will be made to find out how many children between six and 14 should attend school. Some classes will have to be enlarged to accommodate pupils who would not have attended school this year if they were not obliged to. Some commissions will have to find additional teachers to handle the increased number of pupils.

Much of the responsibility for seeing that children attend school regularly will rest with the teachers, according to Dr. W. P. Percival, Director of Protestant Education for the province.

Dr. Percival believes that teachers will be able to do much to improve school attendance by co-operating with truant officers and reporting absences promptly.

The shortage of qualified teachers, Dr. Percival says, may mean additional burdens for those who remain in the profession, but he urges them not to abandon their posts. Every teacher who resigns now, he says, leaves a vacant classroom. Before the end of the last term more than 200 schools had been closed in the province because of lack of teachers.

Following passage of the compulsory attendance bill, the government announced its intention to increase teachers' salaries in order to attract back to the profession some who left it for remunerative jobs in war industries.

The provisions of the new law apply to all parts of the province. However, they will not apply to cripples, children who live far from school or children who have been expelled from school.

Farmers who wish to keep their children home to help with the crops may do so after written application for such permission has been accepted by the school. Children, however, will not be allowed to miss more than six weeks of any school term.

Anyone employing a child between six and 14 during school hours will be subject to fine. Parents who refuse to co-operate with school authorities in seeing to it that their children attend class will also be subject to punishment.

The effects of the law are expected to be more readily seen in cities. Government authorities say that figures show that farmers are conscientious about the school attendance of their children. For that reason rural attendance is not expected to show any sizable increase. In the cities, however, the capacity of classes is expected to be taxed by the youngsters who work as office boys or messengers instead of going to school and by those who foxed from school without their parents' knowledge.

20 TROTTERS ENTERED FOR HORSE RACES

Major Attraction in Program Arranged for Lachute Exhibition Grounds

LIONS CLUB ANNUAL EVENT ON SATURDAY

Attention is drawn to a venture meriting hearty support of the Lachute public — the Lions Club annual field day, to be held at the exhibition grounds on Saturday. Apart from the recreational attractions of this event, its purpose should ensure a generous attendance, since the proceeds will be devoted to the soldiers' cigarette fund by which so many county men on service overseas have benefitted. An advertisement elsewhere in this issue, sponsored by businessmen of the club membership, gives further details.

The field day will be a gala occasion for many youngsters, and for a number more advanced in years, who will compete for prizes in the track and bicycle races. A drawing will also be made in the Lions Club raffle, for which tickets have been on sale during the past few weeks. This drawing will augment the Club's fund for the same patriotic work, namely the cigarette fund. The prize is a $50 Victory Bond.

A major attraction will be the horse-racing program, in which no fewer than 20 harness horses have been entered. Among these are some of the best county animals and a number of outstanding performers from outside Argenteuil. The keenness with which county trotting races have been followed here in recent years, ensures high interest in this phase of the program.

Considerable time and effort has been devoted by committeemen of the club in preparation for this event, and it is confidently expected they will meet with a warm response on the part of local citizens. It is the occasion for a home-town family outing which will involve the minimum of travel and the maximum of pleasure.

Plans for Blood-Donor Clinic in Committee Hands

A management committee named to arrange holding of the blood donor clinics in Lachute under auspices of the Red Cross Society, has been formed as follows:

Chairman, Mrs. T. A. G. Bishop; secretary, Mrs. H. Rigg; head physician, Dr. F. W. FitzGerald; head nurse, Mrs. Geo. H. Héon; Lions Club representative, Gordon McOuat.

Publicity, J. S. Giles; receptionist, Mrs. A. Hills; in charge of canteen, Mrs. W. E. Honsberger.

The purposes and functions of this clinic, instigated locally on suggestion of the Lions Club, are generally known. The Club, which has undertaken to sign up blood donors, is now soliciting volunteers for this good cause — with Lion Gordon McOuat in charge. Further information may be had from Mr. McOuat or from any member of the above committee or the Lions Club.

In connection with the Lions' field day next Saturday the enterprise will be given a further boost; literature will be available for those who desire it, and volunteer donors may hand in their names on that occasion.

Flowers from Manchester To Calgary, Record Time

Montreal — When Captain M. B. Barclay, of Trans-Canada Air Lines, recently piloted a Lancaster bomber from England to Canada in the near record time of 14 hours, seven minutes, he did aid in establishing one new record. A. Stewart, an airways technician, returning to Canada on the plane, made a last minute call on a friend in Manchester and was given a dozen roses from the garden for his parents in distant Calgary. On arrival at the Montreal airport, Mr. Stewart transferred the flowers to Trans-Canada Air Lines express and a subsequent telegram recorded the arrival of the flowers in fine condition. The overall time from garden to parlor was less than forty-eight hours.

BOYS' BRIGADE OPEN CAMP AT ST. ANDREWS E.

1943 Is Jubilee Year of World-wide organization Founded in Scotland

HISTORY OF YOUTH-MOVEMENT REVIEWED

The 1st Montreal - Westmount Company Boys' Brigade will open their camp on Saturday, July 10, on the farm of Albert Dorion, St. Andrews East. This year marking the diamond jubilee of the Brigade, many special features will take place during the two week camping period. Captain J. Howard Richardson will be in command, and will have associated with him the Rev. C. A. Selby, Dominion President of the Brigade. Mr. Selby is expected to arrive at the camp next Monday, and will remain for the balance of the period. Lieut. Alex Upham will be unable to be present except at week-ends, and in his stead Corporal Alan Keith will assume the post of camp registrar.

The camp will consist of five tents, with an additional tent to care for week-enders, and will be in charge of the following N.C.O.'s: Col. Sgt. Edwin Goring, Cpl. Robt. Eastwood, Sgt. James Wright and L/Cpl. Ian Campbell; there will also be a staff tent.

The boys are keenly looking forward to this occasion, and it is expected that a larger number than last year will attend. The Company's bugle and drum band is in readiness for church parades, and will make its first appearance on Sunday, the 11th, marching the unit to church.

The officers greatly appreciate the many kindnesses extended to the camp by Mr. and Mrs. Albert Dorion and their family, and look forward to one of the finest camps in the Company's history.

It was back in the year 1883 that the Boys' Brigade first saw the light of day, when a young Scotsman named William Alexander Smith decided he would endeavor to organize his Sunday School class into some sort of mid-week group, giving him a greater opportunity of getting to know his boys more intimately as well as of moulding character.

Upon discussing this matter with his boys, the response was unanimous and it was decided that the plan would be put into effect just as soon as permission could be obtained from the Kirk Session, for use of the Sunday School hall. This was far from being an easy task. Many of the Session were prejudiced to having boys' activities in the Sabbath School hall fearing it would result in serious damage to church property. However Smith was not the man to be discouraged, and proceeded to put forth strong arguments in favor of making at least a trial of his proposition. "Is not the soul of a boy worth more than a yard of church carpet?" was one of his most convincing statements, and he finally won out by securing permission for a limited time, that his experiment might be given a fair trial.

Further Orders in Prospect for Shift Of Manpower

By DOUGLAS GREEN,
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, July 7 (CP) — Speculation has arisen here concerning the sources to which National Selective Service authorities will turn in future to meet the manpower requirements of Canada's essential industries.

The fact that youths 16, 17 and 18 years are made subject to compulsory transfer to more essential work under the third order announced by Labor Minister Mitchell is an indication of the shortage of labor from which the Dominion's war-expanded industries now are suffering — a shortage which, as Mr. Mitchell has said, may be expected to become more acute as the war continues.

Already, the Labor Department, through selective service, has asked Canadians to spend their holidays this year on farms so as to assure fulfilment of the Dominion's undertaking to supply the United Kingdom with vitally-needed foodstuffs.

Under the transfer orders, which affect workers in age groups subject to call for compulsory military service, more than 24,000 men already have been interviewed, and many of them have been transferred to work of higher priority.

No estimate is available as yet of the number of men who will be affected by the third order, which covers workers in specified wholesale activities, certain types of manufacturing regarded as non-essential, the raising of special livestock, flower-growing, brewing and horticultural services, except for tree surgery.

However, workers affected are expected to run into the thousands, and further orders designed to shift manpower from low to high priority industries are in prospect.

Council Gives Support to Formation Of Civilian Protection Committee

An Unusual Sight

Interest was occasioned by a rare scene in the skies Tuesday afternoon, when the sun, a new moon and a bright star were visible in full daylight — all within a sweep of the eye.

Attention of The Watchman was drawn to this occurrence by a Dunany reader, who telephoned the "news", and doubtless many others in the countryside took note of the circumstance.

By September, 1942, Britain's biggest bombers were carrying about four times the weight of bombs carried by the heaviest bombers at the beginning of the war.

MEETING HELD TO ESTABLISH CIVIL DEFENCE

Committee Formed, and Wardens Named for Various Town Divisions

AT REQUEST OF FIRE AND DEFENCE OFFICERS

At the request of A. Gaboury, of the Civil Defence, and Ernest Lavigne, Fire Commissioner of Quebec, a meeting of representative citizens was held in the town hall on Tuesday for the purpose of setting up an organization of Civil Defence in Lachute. A committee was named as follows:

Chairman, Mayor J. S. Giles; Police, Chief G. Ampleman; Fire, Chief G. Y. Deacon; Public Works, R. Todd and J. Gosselin; Health and First Aid, Dr. L. Turcotte; Secretary, Germain Filion.

The town was divided into 10 sections with suggested names as Wardens in each district as follows:

1. From Ayers Ltd. to St. Julien Church, T. Milnes.
2. St. Julien Church to Charles St., Henry Trichard.
3. Charles St. to Chatham St., including part of Princess St. in that section, Lucien St. Jacques.
4. Centre Ward, section west of North River, Donald Beers.
5. Barron's Bridge to Bethany St. north of C.P.R. track, Henry St. Onge.
6. East Ward, north of C.P.R. track, Geo. Muir.
7. East Ward, south of track, Wm. Blakely.
8. Barron Avenue to Bethany St., south of C.P.R. track, Jos. Belanger.
9. From Barron Avenue to Mary St. south of C.P.R. track, W. K. McArthur.
10. West End, all west ward east of North River, Simard Larocque.

We would remind our readers that, within the space of a few days, three United Nations leaders have found it necessary to give solemn warning against the optimism which assumes the war to be won.

Premier Joseph Stalin — "Germany is not yet conquered . . . Soviet victories over the Nazi army do not yet mean that it cannot recover".

President Roosevelt — "Americans still face reverses and misfortunes . . . It is not enough that we have faith and that we have hope".

Prime Minister King "I doubt if any of us have begun to appreciate the ordeal that this country and our armed forces may have to pass through before this year is out".

• • •

It is because of this realization that the organization is seriously emphasizing to the public that distance means little or nothing in modern warfare, that preparedness is vital, and blackouts are essential. Keymen have been named in each local district and will be called to a meeting shortly, when they will be given instructions which can be passed along to householders.

Conducting of Bus Traffic in Town Is Subject of Notice to Transport Company

Council approval to the setting up of a Civilian Protection Committee in Lachute was given last evening at the regular session of the town body. The move to establish a C.P.C. organization follows a meeting called here at the request of provincial Defence and Fire officials — which meeting is reported elsewhere in this issue.

Under chairmanship of Mayor J. S. Giles, the following aldermen attended the monthly council meet: Messrs. A. Guenette, R. Paquette, J. A. Ethier, A. Scott, O Laurin, A. Trichard, A. Bothwell and W. Morrissette.

A claim presented by Come Belanger, for a broken lawn swing, resulting from Hallowe'en escapades last year, was left on the table for further consideration.

A petition was presented to the council to install drains on Main Street East. After considerable discussion the Secretary was instructed to advise the Provincial Roads Department of the state of this thoroughfare, with request to remedy same.

It was decided to construct a sewer along part of Robert Street, with discharge on Foundry Street, through Geo. Muir's property. The Mayor and Secretary were authorized to sign the necessary deed to secure right of way.

Accounts totalling $5,641.49, less an item $113.20, were approved for payment.

A subscription of $25. out of the Salvage Fund was voted for the Greek War Relief Fund, on motion of Alderman W. Morrissette, seconded by Alderman A. Bothwell.

The firm of W. J. T. Adamson & Co. was engaged to audit the Town's books for 1943

Alderman H. Trichard gave notice of motion that at the next sitting of council he would introduce an amendment to the Bicycle By-Law, so as to render subject to tax non residents riding bicycles in the town.

The Secretary was instructed to call attention of the Provincial Transport Company's officers to the fact that their buses are creating a nuisance to local traffic in many instances, and that their co-operation is required to remedy the situation.

The council gave approval to the setting up of a local C.P.C. with following officers in charge:

Chairman: Mayor J. S. Giles. Members of Board: County Health Officer, Dr. L. Turcotte; Fire Chief, Geo. Y. Deacon; Chief of Police, Gaston Ampleman; Town Superintendent, Robert Todd; Manager of Gatineau Power Co., J. A. Gosselin; Town Clerk, Germain Filion, to act as secretary.

Redistribution to Await the End Of Hostilities

By DOUGLAS GREEN,
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, July 7 (CP) — Basis of representation of the Canadian people in parliament will remain unchanged for the duration of the war under a decision taken by the House of Commons this week.

By a large majority, with only a number of Quebec members opposing, the House passed a resolution asking the British Parliament to amend the British North America Act so a redistribution of constituencies need not be made until after the end of hostilities.

The act, which is the constitution of Canada, requires a redistribution after each decennial census. The ordinary time for it was this year, following the 1941 census.

In presenting the resolution, Justice Minister St. Laurent contended redistribution would be unfair at this time and argued for some change in the present basis on which redistribution is undertaken. He said in the last 20 years Quebec's population had increased more than Ontario's in relation to the Canadian total but the two provinces still retained the same number of seats in the House of Commons.

While Quebec's unit of representation, which by law becomes that of all provinces, is about 51,000 to a constituency, Ontario has 17 seats more than Quebec and for each of these extra seats the unit is only 27,000.

The minister said wartime was not the time to open up the larger questions involved in a change in the basis of representation.

Support for the postponement was voiced by the opposition parties, the objectors being some Quebec Liberals and Independents.

The resolution must be passed by the Senate and will then be forwarded to the King who, it is expected, will ask the British Parliament to enact the necessary amendment.

DRESS WORN BY PRINCESS USED IN LOCAL SHOW

Margaret Rose Guard of Honor in Performance for Local Hospital

RARE TALENT SHOWN BY FRENCH CHILDREN

French-Canadian school children of this town displayed a rare variety of talent in the Auditorium on Wednesday evening. The "Margaret Rose Guard of Honor", under the direction of Mlle Lucienne Lefebvre, gave a benefit performance in aid of the Lachute Providence Hospital, and the versatile ability of all members amazed the large audience.

From precision drills to ballet dancing, from acrobatics to elocution, from toe and tap dancing to pianoforte, and from drama to comedy, every conceivable phase of art was creditably enacted.

Four acrobatic groups competed for a silver cup, and the four young ladies who led their section were Mildred MacDonald, Paule Joly, Lucile Roy and Pauline Blanchard. In the final demonstration, petite eight-year-old Paule Joly won by a slight margin over Lucile Roy by popular acclaim, and thereby was awarded the cup.

Three young members of the group were applauded for their elocutionary and vocal talents, as Marie Marthe Beauregarde and Gislaine Lacoste gave "The Little Sister" (an appropriate wartime story), and "Le Coq", a humorous tale of the cockerel, while little Marcelle Lafortune won hearty approval for her songs.

Various types of dancing evidenced the versatility of Miss Lefebvre. Tap dancing turns were demonstrated, while Tchaikowski's Concerto was utilized for a slower ballet dance, and even the Spanish and acrobatic dances were displayed.

"The Old Brown Mare", was the concluding item on the program, and provided many laughs.

A tableau honoring Princess Margaret Rose brought the evening to a climax. The Princess was personified by Miss Lucile Roy, appearing in one of the actual dresses worn by the Princess.

The girls sang "God Save the King" in English at the conclusion.

Congratulations are due to all these girls, to their director, Miss Lucienne Lefebvre, and also to the pianist of the evening, Mrs. A. Côté.

A play-wagon was raffled, and the lucky winner was Ernest Seguin.

The Rev. Father Lavoie thanked the performers and supporters in a gracious manner, and expressed the hope that another such entertainment would be staged in the near future.

HOUSING NEED IS URGENT IN MANY BUSY CENTRES

Failure of Wartime Housing Ltd. to Provide Accommodation Except at Plant Sites Causes Complaints

The housing shortage, apparent even before the war and becoming constantly more serious, is causing concern among civic government, social agencies and private groups which are uniting to demand some immediate action from Ottawa. The government housing company, Wartime Housing Limited, it is admitted, has performed an important function by providing accommodation for workers at war plants, but in the meantime the bigger cities are experiencing increasingly serious housing conditions and are being offered practically no remedies.

There is disagreement about the type of houses being built by Wartime Housing, but at the worst, critics admit, the government company is helping provide some place for workers to live. In the cities, however, families are living in empty stores, are crowded together in limited quarters and although economically able to occupy decent housing are being forced into slums. Most war workers live in these big centres and little attempt is being made to provide housing for them.

Some attention is being paid locally to increasing accommodation in existing dwellings and for the time being at least that seems most feasible way of easing pressure. In homes with unfinished attics, for instance insulation and partitioning with available materials provide added living space and many homes may at comparatively small cost be converted into two family dwellings.

This renovation or conversion program will not by any means solve the housing problem, but it will provide some additional living space for families badly in need of homes.

Railwaymen Save Traveller's Home

Muskegon, Mich. — This tale is told on the authority of W. H. Edmondson, general superintendent of the Grand Trunk Western Region of the C. N. Rlys. and forms part of an official record. Mrs. Ben Foster, of 1528 Glade Street, Muskegon Heights, boarded train No. 56 at Muskegon which travels 197 miles to Detroit, serving a busy and interesting intermediate territory. After the train left the station, Mrs. Foster remembered that she had been using the electric iron and wondered if the power remained on. She informed Conductor W. L. Washburn of her plight. The conductor could not stop the train and return, so he wrote a message and tossed it off to a section gang working along the line. The section foreman, read the message, got on the telephone and passed word to A. J. Spiess, Grand Trunk Agent, and the latter was promptly in touch with the Fire Department. A patrol hurried to the Foster home, and entered to find the iron had just burned its way through the board, but the firemen prevented any serious damage. Mrs. Foster was glad, and the Conductor was commended for his method of dealing with an emergency.

RE-PLOWING IS ADVISED, THROUGH WEED GROWTH

(Experimental Farm News)

The wet, backward spring season which has prevailed in most of Eastern Canada this year has resulted in an exceptionally heavy growth of grass and weeds in fields intended for grain and hoed crops. There will consequently be more need than ever for careful and effective plowing and soil cultivation. Unfortunately it comes at a time of labor shortage, and plowing, cultivation, and weed control always require a tremendous amount of labor. However, if crop production is to be maintained at a maximum, extra efforts will have to be made to eradicate weeds and provide good tillage conditions, says F. O. Ripley, Field Husbandry Division, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

Many fields which were plowed last fall have become so weedy and grassy that replowing in many cases is necessary. Shallow plowing is recommended as it is as effective as deeper plowing for weed control. Experiments by the Experimental Farms Service have shown that crop yields are equally good on shallow plowed land as on deep plowing. Shallow plowing requires less power. While it is generally too late for spring grains or most hoed crops to be planted, the land may be thoroughly cultivated and seeded to buckwheat, millet or rape any of which will produce some feed and all of which grow fairly rapidly and compete very favorably with weeds.

In a season such as has been experienced this year after-harvest plowing and cultivation should be practised to the greatest extent possible, whether after hay, spring grains or catch crops. Here again shallow plowing is recommended as soon as possible after the crop has been removed. The land should then be thoroughly disced or cultivated at frequent intervals until fall. This should help to control many weeds which may have become established. Plow early in the fall and cultivate as often as possible should be the slogan for cleaner farms.

Big Freight Canoes For Northern Waters

Montreal — Big freight canoes remain a useful means of bush transport and there is a constant demand for this type of craft for Northern waters. One day recently a consignment of twelve 22-foot freight canoes manufactured at Fredericton, N.B., were shipped through Montreal over the C.N. Rlys. destined to Waboden and Churchill, Manitoba, and Waterways, Alberta, part of the consignment remaining at Winnipeg eventually to go to Hudson's Bay Company posts.

New-Type Spitfire Goes Into Action

The Spitfire, most deadly and most feared of Britain's fighter aircraft, has been improved and the first of the new-type Spitfires have been in action, manned by R.A.F. and Fighting French pilots. The first squadron to be equipped with the new Spitfires are an International Squadron attached to R.A.F. Fighter Command and a Fighting French Squadron. The former is composed of English, Irish, Scottish, Czechoslovak, Australian and New Zealand pilots. The improved Spitfire is said by its pilots to be even more effective than its famous predecessor. . . Picture shows R.A.F. BROILERS MAKE GOOD SIDELINE

(Experimental Farm News)

In recent years the practice to destroy numbers of day-old male chicks for which no market could be found has become more general. The present shortage of all meats has entirely changed the situation.

Owing to the low cost of production, a favorable market and a quick and profitable turnover from their sale as broilers, the surplus males now offer an attractive proposition for the farmer.

Investigations at the Dominion Experimental Station at Harrow, Ont., have shown that healthy male chicks can be raised for the broiler market in eight to ten weeks. The amount of food required for each bird to two pounds live weight is about six pounds. If sour skim-milk is available and some succulent green food is chopped and fed with the ground grain mixture the cost can be materially reduced and the growth and quality of the meat improved.

It is well to bear in mind that the product is in the luxury class and that generally the customer that can afford luxuries is discriminating; consequently it is advisable to put the broiler on the market in the most attractive form.

There will be an improvement in the appearance and quality of the meat if the bird is thoroughly starved, but given plenty of water to drink, for at least twelve hours before killing and dry plucking. With dark feathered birds it may be advisable to semi-scald but with either method of plucking the birds should be properly bled and, if scalded, should be thoroughly immersed for about half a minute in water heated to a temperature of 127 degrees. The right temperature is important. Over-heating will give the skin an unattractive appearance. A low temperature will not loosen the feathers sufficiently to avoid tearing.

Might Be Forced To Ration Coal

J. McG. Stewart, coal administrator for the prices board, said that while his administration had been and now was giving a "great deal of consideration" to the question of rationing coal in Canada, it had not been decided whether the rationing of coal would be necessary.

"However," he added, "if the United States put in a thoroughgoing system (of rationing) covering their exports to us, we would be forced to put in a system."

The form such rationing would take had not yet been settled.

SWEETPEA "SUGAR" FOR AGRICULTURE

New Species Provides Food, Pasture, Even Fertilizer, All on One Stalk

Baton Rouge, La. July 6 (CP) — It has been 16 years since B. H. Singletary discovered a strange-looking stalk in the sweetpea patch of his flower garden but what that stalk meant to agriculture is summed up in this comment by Farmer Neal McHenry, of Munroe, La.

"I have made more off the ale of Singletary peas than any farm crop I have ever grown, considering average value. This year I am making more from my peas than I usually make from the farm all told".

Singletary's odd-appearing stalk was the ancestor of today's self-propagating Singletary Pea which gives the farmer not only a harvest of peas and ground automatically reseeded for next year's crop but also a pasture into which he can turn his cattle, a bountiful hay crop, and, when he turns what's left under the soil, a rich fertilizer.

Tried and Found Good

B. H. Singletary, head of the horticultural department of Louisiana State University. That is why he was interested in the stalk and grew more of the plants. In the end he interested a farmer in planting a plot. That farmer never regretted it. From the one planting he has harvested five crops of seed and wintered annually a herd of cattle.

Experts say the pea is so hardy it stays healthy in the hottest summer and withstands the coldest blasts sweeping the Texas panhandle. It feeds nitrogen to the soil. It bears such a wealth of pods that a plant loaded with them is now in the museum at the state capitol.

Plant He Discovered

R. A. Wasson, agronomist with the university's agricultural extension division, says if Louisiana farmers plant a million acres of these peas they'll not only reap a rich harvest from seed, pasture and hay but will also add $5,500,000 to the value of their soil. And that, one wag commented, "ain't hay".

Irrigation Plan In Old Lebanon

South African Troops Drilling Through Mountain to Help Farmers in Ancient Land

London (CP) — Engineers of the South African Army are drilling a tunnel through five miles of mountain so that the waters of the Litani river may be brought through to irrigate 7,000 acres of land in Southern Lebanon. Their work was cited by R. G. Casey, British Minister of State in the Middle East, as an example of what is being done to make the Middle East countries self-supporting.

No "Hot Dogs" on Meatless Tuesdays

R.C.N.'S BIG JOB

Liverpool (CP) — More than 12,000 cargo ships, carrying 77,000,000 tons of cargo, have been convoyed across the north Atlantic to Britain, A. E. Bryan, Canadian Trade Commissioner said and he added that the Royal Canadian Navy now absorbed 50 per cent of total convoy duties.

Where Is Hitler?

We are not much given to propaganda tales about Hitler being dead or in a sanatorium. Yet where is he? During the first two years of the war Hitler was heard from frequently; his boasts and threats a part of the German strategy. For nearly a year now no word has come from him; nothing but a message read in his name by Goebbels, and which resembled little the well known Hitler style.

It is all strange, to say the least. Strange that this man, so much given to talk, should let months go by without a word to his armies or people. This at a time when his armies are in defeat, and when his people feel increasingly the heavy weight of war.

When the British people were in desparate peril, Winston Churchill rallied them with his deathless words of defiance. Is Adolf Hitler, if he is alive, without the same quality of courage — skulking in silence when victories no longer come to him?

Hitler may not be dead. Yet there is something very strange, and perhaps significant, in his continued silence.

IMPORTANT FACTS ON PULP & PAPER WAR EFFORT

HOW THE PULP & PAPER INDUSTRY CARRIES COMFORT TO PRISONERS OF WAR

EACH WEEK CANADIAN PRISONERS OF WAR LOOK FORWARD TO THE RED CROSS PARCEL OF FOOD—THEIR ONLY CONTACT WITH THE OUTSIDE WORLD.

DURING THE YEAR THE CANADIAN RED CROSS PACKED 5,200,000 CARDBOARD CONTAINERS FOR SHIPMENT OVERSEAS TO PRISONERS OF WAR.

THE RED CROSS is doing a magnificent job in caring for Allied prisoners and, by supplying strong, light board for reducing the weight of packaging, pulp and paper workers are backing them up. This is just one of the many ways in which Canada's greatest peacetime industry is helping the war effort.

The Businessmen's Army

Not all men are able to be full-time soldiers. Demands of home and business and industry prevent many from joining the active forces. So the Canadian Reserve Army today is made up of men busy in their private life and burdened with family responsibilities, but who consider it their duty to prepare for an eventuality.

And the women of Canada; the wives of these men, are behind them, just as the wives of the pioneers were behind our laboring, fighting forefathers.

Many a man is eager to get into a soldier uniform and march out into the country, run through manoeuvres, practice with all the latest weapons and yet he feels that his first duty is to his home and family. But he can do all that, and do it all on his training nights and the occasional week-end, simply by joining the Reserve Army. — Many, indeed, are doing just that, for they realize the possibility is not past that military training may some day save their families and their homes. The business man who learns to master a Bren gun may stand off an infantry detachment until help arrives. That is how important a little bit of training can be.

Heirs of Ancient Hobbies

Kipling once wrote an entertaining ballad about a fellow named Ung, the stone-age man who liked to draw pictures on bone and whose hobby became his work: the first artist.

That sort of thing has gone on all through the earth's life. It is an interesting thought that if man had not turned aside from the daily struggle for meat to indulge a hobby — rubbing wood on flint to observe the polish, scratching lines on stone — we should have neither art nor science. It is intriguing to consider that invention may be just as much a child of inclination as of necessity.

We are the heirs of those ancient necessities and timeless inclinations. We exemplify also a trend that was evident even in Ung's time, a tendency to satisfy our needs for something outside daily routine by examining and criticising the other fellow's effort. Without that, of course, we could not have what we call greatness, for greatness is relative to recognition. None would have heard of Rembrandt if none had seen his work.

Today the immortality of those ancient inclinations colors all our life — they live in the art gallery, the library and the vacuum cleaner. On the mechanical side they have become the routine from which we need occasional escape. On the artistic side, they are themselves a mass escape, a second-hand sense of achievement that can never give the nameless thrill that must have come to the fellow who first played truant from the warboat to "fall to his scribing on bone".

The artists and inventors were those whose inclinations appealed to great numbers of their fellows to the world's advantage. The misfortune is that many of those who crowded around Ung and brought gifts to his tent-flap found in his drawing all they needed beyond the ice-floe.

They made his hobby a work until he probably had to go out and fight the Aurochs to get some relaxation.

It is still that way. We get our relaxation too much at second hand. That is why it is encouraging to see kids playing their own game of ball while the big league games are coming in on the radio.

Hot Weather Dangers

Hot weather days are here, and with them the danger of heat exhaustion and sunstroke, both of which may result from prolonged exposure to sun or intense heat, indoors or out. Aged persons and young infants, particularly, suffer during heat waves and the mortality resulting is chiefly among them. Persons with high blood pressure or diseases of the heart or kidneys are more likely to suffer from such prolonged exposure and heat than those who have good health. It has been found also that the mortality is higher among males than females, possibly due to greater exposure of men in their work.

A factor in heat exhaustion is the loss of salt from the body due to excessive perspiration, and replacement of the salt will do much to keep the body in good condition. Commercially prepared salt tablets are available from drug stores.

In heat exhaustion the patient usually remains conscious but shows pallor, feels cold, while the skin is moist. The respiration is rapid, the pulse weak, and the temperature is below normal. A doctor should be called and the patient should be put in a cool, quiet place, in a reclining position. He should be kept warm by means of a blanket or hot water bottle, and if conscious should be given a stimulant such as tea, coffee, or aromatic spirits of ammonia (one teaspoon in a half glass of water).

Sunstroke victims suffer from dizziness, sometimes nausea, acute headache, and in true sunstroke these symptoms are followed quickly by unconsciousness. The skin is dry and hot, the face red or purple, breathing difficult, fast pulse, and high temperature. A doctor should be called and the patient should be placed on his back in a cool place. As much clothing as possible should be removed. Temperature should be reduced by sponging the body with cold water. Ice in bags or cold cloths, should be applied to the head. Circulation may be induced by rubbing the hands and trunk toward the heart. No stimulants should be given.

The Tie That Binds

Unity needs bonds more binding
Than we get through mere fault-finding.
To name a wrong without its cure
May place the blame, but won't endure.

So let's set out to weld and heal,
Forge bonds no foe can break or steal,
Stand together because we care
No matter what gets in our hair.

Timely Warning

A suggestion made by the Ottawa Better Business Bureau that Victory Bond holders should be on their guard against irresponsible promoters, deserves a wide hearing.

War Bonds are rapidly becoming the average family's most important savings reservoir, the Bureau observes. Thus, such investments and securities are always prime lures for racketeers, with their schemes for persuading people to cash in their bonds and turn the money over to them on irresponsible promises of getting rich quick.

One thing is certain, the Bureau advises — these propositions will sound good. They have to seem plausible to get our money. Some may appear to be an opportunity for one to make a good profit. But, unfortunately, in too many deals, the promoter is the only one to profit.

Says the Bureau: "If you are urged to cash in your bonds for 'investment' in an unknown proposition, Watch Out! Carefully investigate the offer for these good reasons:

"1—It may be a racket.

"2—It is real patriotism to keep the War Bonds you buy.

"3—These bonds are one of the best investments you can make."

Unpleasant But Necessary

Rudyard Kipling was at his best when immortalizing the colorful British private soldier in prose and verse. A staff officer once asked Kipling why he did not do the same for those of higher military rank. The poet replied that it was impossible to become lyrical over King's Rules and Regulations.

It is impossible, of course, to become enthusiastic about rules and regulations of any sort, for the simple reason that by their very nature they invariably impose restrictions upon the freedom of action of individuals. When anything of the kind threatens British people they write to The Times about it. Which is all to the good in time of peace; but in wartime, particularly in war against the most overbearing would-be conquerors the world has ever known, we should all think well before complaining about government orders which might temporarily deprive us of the right to live our lives in our own chosen way.

The various orders that are issued from time to time by the National Selective Service are cases in point. Nobody will contend that these orders could possibly be welcomed by anybody. But those in authority have decided that they are necessary if we are to win this war without too much dislocation of our national life.

The object of the most recent order issued by the National Selective Service is to make available for essential work men who are now employed in non-essential occupations, that is, men who are producing things or rendering service which, in these difficult times, we can readily do without.

It is not pleasant to have the even tenor of our lives disrupted, but war is no respecter of persons. Thousands of our young men of military age have gone straight from the colleges and joined the armed forces of this country. Thousands of older men have given up lucrative jobs in which the future seemed so bright in order to play an honorable part in putting down oppression. Many of them have already given their lives. It is not too much, therefore, to ask that those men now engaged in non-essential occupations and who are not called to serve in the army, navy or air force, report to the nearest National Selective Service office for other employment which will enable them to make a very direct contribution to our united war effort.

The Greatest Newspaper

A famous newspaper publisher made this statement: "The greatest newspaper in the world today is not The New York Times nor The London Times, but your own local newspaper; it alone gives you your life and breathes of home."

How true are these words! Johnny is born in a town and grows up there and if that town has a newspaper, the history of Johnny's life will be chronicle, his progress at studies, in sports and community activities, right through to his entrance into business or a profession. It is all there, from time to time, for parents, relatives and friends to read, and ready to be clipped for family scrap-books. What large daily in any great city carries items of equal interest to those folk?

Yes, we admit there are still folks who snicker and derive some sort of amusement at such items as "Miss Mary Prescott spent her vacation in Buffalo, N.Y." or "Mrs. Gordon Bookerson has come to Pleasantville to reside with her daughter." They forget they are parcel and part of the local weekly. They cannot read behind the lines and see that Mary Prescott's vacation was taken as the result of saving for months or that Mrs. Bookerson is living with her daughter only by necessity. To the regular subscribers the life of the community is mirrored on the pages of the local paper.

It is also true that the best literature in the world is your own name in print and the local paper is crammed with names of local people.

A story comes from Ottawa of a prominent citizen who was honored for distinguished service. The metropolitan papers across the country played it up but the write-up which thrilled this man the most and brought a glint to his eyes was the one appearing in the small town weekly "back home", the town he had left 25 years before. —Bowmanville Statesman

Medical Problems Of Tank Warfare

In an article on "Medical Problems of Tank Warfare," the Journal of the American Medical Association comments on the increased speed and power of mechanized warfare and mentions that since the appearance of the tank in the First Great War on September 15, 1916, the slow tread of four miles per hour had increased to 30 miles per hour, while fire power had also increased.

"The all-metal body encloses a high speed engine, ammunition, grenades, bombs, Verey cartridges, batteries, radio, firearms, fuel oil and an alcohol compass in close proximity to the crew. Special training is required to render efficient medical service to the personnel of tank battalions."

Elimination of flat surfaces and angles in tanks has favored richocheting of projectiles and has made a disabled tank a target of great danger to soldiers seeking shelter nearby, the Journal reports. One-third of battle casualties in British tank crews in the Middle East occurred outside tanks when men were caught seeking shelter near disabled tanks.

Excessive heat is a serious medical problem, but the British in the Middle East have had few cases of heat exhaustion. If possible, it is said, tank crews should not be subject to more than one week of active fighting.

Burns are responsible for 27 to 30 per cent of British tank casualties. Crews, specially commanders, sometimes expose their heads from turrets and so to gunfire. Temporary deafness results from the roar of the engine and the tank. Newer tanks have been equipped so that there are fewer of the earlier injuries due to heavy tank doors slamming on hands. Sudden stops in ditches or in traps sometimes cause chest and abdomen injuries. Trees have been known to enter through portholes and injuring crews.

One of the most difficult medical problems has been evacuation of casualties from tanks and it has been given much study. Several methods have been adopted but, the Journal says, "The evacuation of wounded from tanks remains . . . a problem to be solved by any method that will accomplish the purpose under the circumstances."

Another difficulty is maintaining medical contact between swiftly moving motorized groups.

"The battalion surgeon must have at his command a radio-directed armored car or a half track protected ambulance; and a clearing station where provision can be made by returning wounded men in airplanes to theirbase, men in airplanes to their base.

"The medical department obviously must do more than care for the sick; its training must provide instruction in methods of communication, motor maintenance, identification of hostile aircraft, and map reading."

"Sorry to put you to the trouble of fetching water specially for me," said an English tourist, who had ordered whisky in a Highland inn.

"Nae trouble at all," replied the host. "I always keep a drop on the premises in case of fire."

With the Army

Ottawa — Boots, boots, boots! 300 pairs of them a day roll down the "rack and track" assembly repair-line of the Royal Canadian Ordnance Corps workshop at Kingston, Ont. Cobblers of Kipling's time would have been stunned at modern-day mass-production repair of Army boots, but it is part of the Army's program of looking after the feet of the soldiers.

Devised only a few weeks ago, under supervision of Lieut. H. H. Hatch, of Montreal, Staff Sergeant Albert Scott, of Winnipeg, supervisor of the shoe repair workshop, and Sgt. D. A. Williams, Brampton, Ont., bootshop foreman, the "rack and track" method has increased repair production from a daily output of 135 boots each day to more than 300.

Boots are placed on a small wheeled wooden rack, complete with all materials needed for repairs. Launched on their journey along the ramp, the boots first receive attention of the "stripper", who rips off worn leather; a sole-builder next tacks on soles, and a heel-builder affixes heels. Following a sole-softening dip in the mulling tank, soles are stitched, skivered and bevelled by three different machines, before being trimmed, sanded, polished and fitted with toe plates. Final operation, as in other assembly-lines is inspection, and if boots don't please the critical inspector's eye, back they go. Finished and inspected, the boots are shipped back to their original wearers.

Anaesthesia, responsible for the saving of untold thousands of lives, is being intensively studied by medical authorities of Canadian Armed Forces, on a special course being conducted by two Montreal specialists, Dr. Wesley Bourne and Dr. M. Digby Leigh.

Since inauguration of the course a year ago, three classes comprising 16 medical officers of the three services, have graduated. The fourth course, which marked enrollment of the largest class to date: five Army, four Navy and four R.C.A.F. medical officers, began on July 3.

Ten Montreal Hospitals, French and English, and the R. C. A. F. hospital at Manning Pool in Lachine, are cooperating in providing instruction and practical experience during the course.

Thorough training in anaesthesia, inhalation therapy, shock treatment, the use of blood and blood substitutes and resuscitation will be stressed. Caudal analgesia, given wide attention recently for it use in painless childbirth, is also taught. It is used in surgery on the lower torso and lower limbs.

"There will be great strides made in painless childbirth after the war," Dr. Bourne declared, "but now we are more interested in applying the technique to saving lives on the battlefields".

All ranks of the Canadian Army, both overseas and in Canada, are to be re-examined under the new Pulhems medical classification system. Standards will, however, not be slackened. Men rejected for Army Service as physically unfit will not find admission standards less rigid.

Main purpose of the new system is to provide allocation officers with tangible, finger-tip reference charts, which will indicate at a glance the physical abilities or disabilities of any given soldier.

Automatic machines have been installed which will classify information on all Army personnel, being gathered in returns now pouring in from all parts of Canada. These returns list, in addition to Pulhems rating, each man's regimental number, year of birth, knowledge of languages, "M" test score, rank military trade or specialty and trade grouping. They will identify his unit and state the amount of training he has undergone.

"Johnny, that's terrible! Professor Morton probably thinks you haven't looked at the piano all week!"

Neighborliness

Matt Kee, a veteran of the last war, is a farmer in the Carman district. His two sons joined the armed services and are overseas. Last January the younger was reported missing.

For several months Matt has been a patient in Deer Lodge Hospital, unable to do the spring work around the farm. His friends and neighbors took the situation in hand and held a bee to plow and seed his hundred acres. They turned up the first day with ten tractors. Seven teams and three more tractors were on hand next day to finish the job.

This little incident is told not because it is so extraordinary, but because it is a typical example of Western neighborliness. It is something like this we mean when we say "our way of life."

Secret Weapon

Just to make Japanese searchlight men and A.A. gunners "hopping mad", a young American pilot over Rabaul one night threw overboard a roll of toilet paper.

The paper streamed out in the glare of the searchlights, and more A.A. guns went into operation. Then the pilot Morsed insulting messages to Emperor Hirohito with his landing lights. His crew caught the idea and threw down empty bottles.

He explained that a little earlier he had been kept up all night by a wandering Japanese pilot, and to even the score he had flown his machine over Rabaul from midnight until dawn.

TWO-THIRDS of the total number of loans outstanding in Canada's Chartered Banks average less than $500 per loan.

Through bank loans, Canada's Chartered Banks help Canadians to benefit themselves, their fellows and their country. Many of these loans are small—but all contribute their share to the day-by-day activities of Canadian enterprise.

Some further facts about Canada's Banks:

Chartered Banks' loans related to agriculture as shown on the last official return to Parliament, totalled $340,118,473. This sum included loans to farmers, ranchers, fruit raisers and to grain dealers and grain exporters.

Every general manager today heading a Chartered Bank entered the bank as a junior in some small branch.

Up to and including February, 1943, no fewer than 6803 men and 154 women bank employees had enlisted in the armed forces.

Canadians in every walk of life and in every part of Canada are served by more than three thousand branches and sub-agencies maintained by the Chartered Banks to facilitate the nation's business.

"The Rumor Clinic"

— Prepared by The Canadian Column —

Pessimistic Conversation Is Dangerous

There are honest but misguided men and women among us who believe that Canada's system of economy is gradually becoming worse until we are now facing almost certain economical disaster.

Let there be no doubt about this fact in the minds of Canadian people. Our Canadian system of economy has met a supreme test, and thanks to the response of every citizen who has helped in this effort, we have passed this test with colors.

Whether they know it or not, these unsuspecting people are singing tunes from the score written by propagandists that sound like a symphony to the ears of Goebbels and his followers of the totalitarian way of life.

Everyone speaks of the miracle of Canadian war production; not everyone realizes that it is a miracle made possible by individual initiative.

Totalitarian states have boasted of their productive capacities. Germany, for instance, built a vast and terrible machine of destruction in only seven years. Many of us were impressed by that feat, although we knew that it was accomplished by driving an entire nation with whips of terror and propaganda. Yet, today, without enslaving capital and labor, we can look down on the Nazi accomplishment from the heights of our own production records.

The pride we take in the Canadian capitalistic system, however, does not only imply that we fail to acknowledge shortcomings or that we will not criticize certain methods adopted by Canadian business if appearing unsound. On the contrary, we regard the flexibility of our economic set-up, its capacity for new methods to meet new conditions, as an important source of strength.

It is our duty then to defend this effort behind which we are united and remove all barriers, such as loose talk, mouthed by pessimistic crystals-gazers into the future of our country. Any form of rumor mongering is dangerous. With this knowledge, let us do all in our power to eliminate it.

The following rumors to come to our attention are rejected upon presentation of the facts:

Rumor: "Victory Loan agents were getting a salary of $1 per day and expenses of $20 per day."

Fact: Office of Dr. W. C. Clark, Deputy Minister of Finance: "We assume that by the word 'agent' you mean canvasser or salesman. In the Fourth Victory Loan campaign, salesmen received a commission of ⅜ of 1 per cent on sales of the short term bonds, and ⅝ of 1 per cent on the sales of the long term bonds. Salesmen received commissions on sales made in the general canvass. They received no commission on 'special names' subscriptions (corporations and individuals capable of subscribing large amounts) or on payroll savings subscriptions.

No expenses were paid to salesmen, with the exception of salesmen from remote districts brought into unit headquarters for instructions. In these cases expenses not exceeding five dollars a day."

• • •

Rumor: "The contractors for the Wartime Housing made huge profits."

Fact: Gordon C. Garbutt, director, Publicity Branch, Department of Munitions and Supply: "According to Joseph M. Pigott, president of Wartime Housing Limited, as a general practice tenders are called for and contracts awarded to the lowest bidders. Where, for some reason, tenders are difficult to obtain, or where there is not the necessary competition, contracts have been let in a few instances on the basis of guaranteed cost with a fee; or on a small fee with a guaranteed cost. Where a ceiling has been established, the fee has been 5 per cent; where there has been no ceiling or guaranteed cost, the fee has run about 2 per cent. Under a system such as this, it is impossible that any substantial profits can be made."

• • •

Rumor: "A Canadian firm has not been allowed to export zinc oxide to South America because that would compete with United Kingdom trade."

Fact: "There is a shortage of zinc oxide and it is not to protect United Kingdom interests but to safeguard supplies needed here that export permits have been refused."

Rumor: "Over 60 per cent of the leading positions in Ottawa are held by Frenchmen."

Fact: "This is just the type of rumor which the fifth-columnist would like to see given as wide circulation as possible, as it is one which is obviously intended to stir up bitterness and misunderstanding between the English-speaking and French-speaking people of the Dominion. There are many French-speaking Canadians holding responsible positions in the Capital, both in permanent government departments and in the various war departments. The same applies to dollar-a-year men, there is a fair representation of French-speaking business men serving their country in this capacity.

But to say that 60 per cent of the important positions in the Capital are held by French-speaking people is absolutely false. English-speaking people hold a great number of important posts. No figures are available, but it is safe to say that English-speaking Canadians hold as many, if not more top positions, as French-speaking Canadians in relation to their proportion of the total Canadian population.

• • •

Rumor: "The government has arranged to have 100,000 Jewish refugees brought in immediately."

Fact: F. C. Blair, Director of Immigration, Department of Mines and Resources: "There is not a word of truth in this statement. No such proposal has been made, let alone considered."

Attend the Lions Club annual field day, on Saturday. — In aid of soldiers' cigarette fund.

Christian Science Sunday Services

"Sacrament" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon to be read in Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, July 11.

The Golden Text is from I Corinthians 10: 17. "We being many are one bread, and one body: for we are all partakers of that one bread."

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven." (Matthew 7: 21).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Christians, are you drinking his cup? Have you shared the blood of the New Covenant, the persecutions which attend a new and higher understanding of God? If not, can you then say that you have commemorated Jesus in his cup? Are all who eat bread and drink wine in memory of Jesus willing truly to drink his cup, take his cross, and leave all for the Christ-principle?" (Page 35).

White - Foreman

Calumet—The marriage of Anne Shirley, youngest daughter of the late T. G. Foreman and of Mrs. Foreman, of Calumet, to Pilot Officer Robert George White, of Halifax, son of Lieut-Col. and Mrs. White, of Ottawa, was solemnized on Saturday afternoon at four o'clock in Holy Trinity Church, Calumet. The Rev. A. Hawes performed the ceremony. The bridal arch was decorated with daisies and roses; a profusion of mock orange blossoms and Canterbury bells formed the other decorations.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Cuthbert Foreman, wore a floor-length gown of white printed organdy, having a moulded bodice and a small Peter Pan collar. The collar was edged in fine pleating which extended to the waistline. Her fingertip-length veil of tulle illusion was held by a halo of orange blossoms, and she carried a bouquet of pink roses and baby's breath.

The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. Harry Druce, as matron of honor, and Miss Elsie Brigden, her cousin, as bridesmaid. The matron of honor was in a floor-length frock of blush pink organdy, having a fitted bodice with sweetheart neckline and a bouffant skirt. She wore a circular shoulder-length veil held by moss rosebuds. Miss Brigden was similiarly attired, only in delphineum blue. They both carried Colonial nosegays.

Lieut. John White was best man for his brother and the ushers were Pte. Arthur White, another brother, and Sgt. - Pilot George Foreman, a brother of the bride.

Mrs. Foreman, the bride's mother, wore a street-length gown of black printed crepe with black accessories and a corsage of roses. Mrs. White, mother of the bridegroom, was in a street-length gown of navy sheer with navy accessories and a corsage of pink rosebuds.

A reception followed the ceremony at the home of the bride's mother, where the bridal party received on the lawn. Mock orange blossoms and roses were arranged in the rooms. Lieut-Col. White proposed the toast to the bride, which was answered by the groom. During the reception the telegrams received by the couple were read by Lieut. John White, one being from the bride's brother, Sgt. Thomas Foreman, overseas.

Later the young couple left on their wedding trip, the bride travelling in a smoke blue printed dress with navy and white accessories. They will reside in Halifax.

Out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Mott, Miss Ora Standish, Miss Alice Demers, Miss Elsie Graham, Mr. and Mrs. F. Rourke, of Montreal; Miss E. White, of Ottawa; Miss G. Hartley, of Hawkesbury, Mrs. Tomson, of Ottawa; Mrs. J. E. Arnold, of Grenville; Mrs. S. Arnold, of Montreal.

ANYTIME IS A BETTER TIME WITH A SWEET CAP

If you have to wash your undies
On fine Saturdays or Sundays;
What's the use of kicking up a frightful din?

Try to think how well these stints
Are preparing you for quints . . .
And THAT'S where a Sweet Cap comes in!

SWEET CAPORAL CIGARETTES

"The purest form in which tobacco can be smoked"

The rest-pause that refreshes

Welcome in peace... more welcome in war work

MANAGERS and personnel directors will tell you that regular rest-pauses plus the refreshment of ice-cold Coca-Cola increase contentment in their plants. Thus production is increased. A pause for Coca-Cola is a little thing in itself, but one of the little things that brighten a busy day.

You might think it strange that workers have such a welcome for a soft drink. But Coca-Cola has something all its own in goodness. Made with a finished art, its taste always pleases. More than just quenching thirst, it brings a happy after-sense of complete refreshment. Always ask for a Coke . . . the rest-pause that refreshes.

The best is always the better buy!

Letters from plant managers from coast to coast emphasize that the little moment for an ice-cold Coca-Cola means a lot to workers in war plants. It's a refreshing moment on the sunny side of things . . . a way to turn to refreshment without turning from work.

A breathing spell, a rest-pause and ice-cold Coca-Cola. Contentment comes when you connect with a Coke.

Jubilee Year of Boys' Brigade

This being granted, the next few weeks saw the first boys' group ever known in the Christian Church taking form. Little did Smith ever realize that in years to come the whole Church would become boy-conscious, but from the humble beginning, with 30 boys in a small mission church, Smith's experiment soon became the talk of all Scotland. Churches throughout the land were seeking advice as to how they might follow suit, and before he realized it, the movement was gaining ground at a rapid pace.

From the very outset, Smith set for his object the following: "The advancement of Christ's Kingdom among boys and the promotion of habits of Obedience, Reverence, Discipline, Self-Respect and all that tends towards a true Christian Manliness". This high standard has remained down through the years as the bedrock foundation upon which the whole program is based. Bible Class or Sunday School attendance was obligatory for membership in the Brigade, and thus it was that the problem which has faced the Sunday Schools throughout the ages, concerning the drifting of 'teen aged boys, had found a solution in this new movement. The motto, placed upon an Anchor, was "Sure and Stedfast".

As the years went by, this movement spread into all parts of Great Britain, demanding that Smith retire from business and become its first secretary, the position which he held until the time of his death in 1914. As early as 1897 the Brigade was established in Canada, and in 1893 in the United States, where it still flourishes at the present time under the name of "The United Boys' Brigades of America". As it spread throughout the length and breadth of the Empire, other countries also followed suit, seeing that the success experienced by the early companies was growing from year to year, and Holland, Denmark, Norway as well as many other of the European countries developed movements for their youth along similiar lines, taking as their textbook, "The Boys' Brigade Manual" as drawn up by William Smith.

In 1907, King Edward VII knighted Smith for his contribution to the youth of the Empire.

In 1908 Baden-Powell issued his publications "Scouting for Boys" expecting it would be taken up and utilized by the Boys' Brigade, the Boys' Life Brigade and the Church Lads' Brigade, the latter two being newcomers into the field, working along lines similar to the B.B. but on more of a denominational basis. However, so great was the demand from outside, that Powell was forced to set up his own association known as the Boy Scouts. While this brought another organization into the field of boys' work, there was and always has been the friendliest of feeling between the Boys' Brigade and the Scouts, as both seek to turn out good citizens, and are in no way competitive rivals. There is more than adequate room for all to work amongst lads, more especially in time like the present, when juvenile delinquency is so rampant.

In 1935, a great revival of Brigade work commenced in Canada and with the setting up of the Canadian Dominion Council the following year, units were organized from coast to coast. The work has flourished and despite present war difficulties, is carrying on in a marvellous way. Units are established in churches of all Denominations, and battalions in the larger centres of the Dominion are well equipped to cope with the present shortage of leadership.

The diamond jubilee is being celebrated throughout this year and is being marked by special displays and parades, giving the public an opportunity of seeing the type of training given the boys. First Aid, Signalling, Physical Training, Music, Band, Handicrafts, Fireman's, Wayfaring, Camping, Swimming as well as all the phases of boys' work which all boys crave — all form a part of the average company's carriculum.

Even the simplest orders, delivered in the sergeant's loudest voice, had missed fire and the perspiring N.C.O. glared at the batch of raw recruits in despair. Then he had an idea. Disappearing for a minute round the corner of the barracks, he returned leading the regimental mascot — a sheepdog.

"There you are, boy," he said, patting the dog's head. "See what you can do with them!"

Carrots Rate High As Vitamin Products

If Victory Garden crops were to be rated according to the quantity of vitamins they are likely to contriute to the family diet all season long, the carrot would probably be rated next to the tomato.

Carrots are definitely a health food. They say that pilots of the Royal Air Force are required to eat them nearly every day to keep their eyesight keen. But not everybody likes carrots.

If your family belongs to the anti-carrot faction, do not omit carrots from the schedule just because of that prejudice. If you have never eaten carrots fresh from your garden then you have no idea how delicious they can be. They make a pleasing and colorful addition when shredded into salads. Children often prefer carrots raw to cooked.

Let the carrots grow without thinning until they are as thick as lead pencils, then begin to thin out and cook the excess roots. You will be amazed at the flavor and tenderness of these tiny carrots, and from then on your prejudice will disappear.

While carrots are most delicious when they are young, they still remain tender and sweet after they have grown all summer. They will mature well standing so close in a row as to touch each other. But the best plan is to make successive sowings, and harvest them before they are full grown.

If you wish to can carrots, the smaller they are, the more delicious you will find them next winter. It is a good plan to sow a special row for canning and harvest them when they reach the desired size.

When carrots are allowed to mature they should be pulled when the tops begin to turn yellow. If left in the ground they will lose quality.

HORSE STEALING RAMPANT

Manchester (CP) — Horse stealing, an almost forgotten "industry" before the war started, is coming back in Britain. As a result of a shortage, horses and ponies have been taken out of fields at night and have even been driven away in carts when left in the road by owners.

NAZIS' FAKE NEWSPAPERS

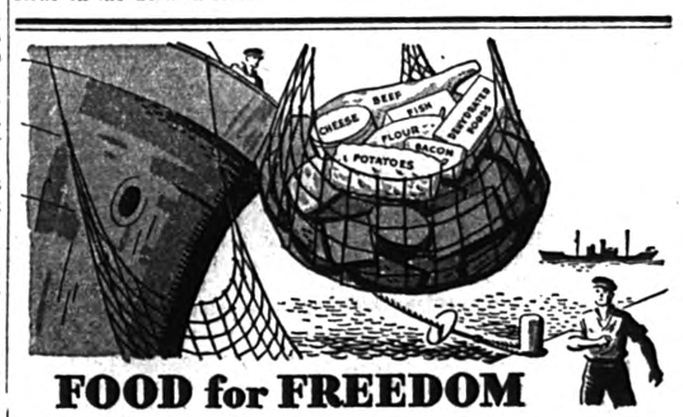

Cairo (CP) — A New Zealand corporal freed by the advance of the Eighth Army in Africa said the Germans left fake newspapers lying about their prisoner-of-war camps to dishearten the Allied prisoners. His description of conditions in their hospitals and camps was "appalling." The New Zealander's limbs were swollen through underfeeding.

By the middle of November, 1942, Britain had sent to Russia equipment for 20 armoured divisions on the German scale.

COLLEGE FARMHANDS

London (CP) — University students must take second place to "boys from poorer families" as farmhands in Britain says F. A. Secrett of the Agricultural Ministry. "The university-trained lad is seldom prepared to stand up to the drudgery essential to the practical training for agriculture," said Mr. Secrett.

We're beginning to find out there are lots of things to be done to certain vegetables before they look like those that used to come in a can.

THE WOMAN'S PAGE

By Jessie Allen Brown

A GIFT OF TOYS

Two officers from a British Merchant ship were at a Saint John home, and one of them in chatting said that his sister was in charge of a Nursery. Telling about her work he happened to say that his sister wished they had some toys as they didn't have a toy at all. At nine o'clock on that Monday evening this woman started in to phone some of her friends to try to collect some toys for the men to take back with them. The I.O.D.E. Camps' Library was used as a receiving centre. One of the Chapters met on Tuesday and made a donation of five dollars to buy new toys, and these were the only new toys collected. The toys had to be ready by Wednesday noon, and when they got them packed they were delighted to find they had eleven cartons of them, besides such things as a doll carriage and a scooter. They had over sixty dolls. They packed the doll carriage with soft dolls, and when the cartons were delivered to the ship, the young officer, who was a six-footer, proudly wheeled the doll carriage aboard, with his arm draped with dolls. The officers were delighted and they were going to stow the various cartons in their own quarters. They promised to cable as soon as they got to England that the dolls had arrived. Pray God they do. People are generous and quick to give when they know the need, and incidents such as this are heart-warming.

BETTER SCHOOL BUILDINGS

Money is going to be spent after the war to provide work, and I don't know of a better place to spend some than on the plant and equipment of our schools. During the depression years many schools became run down and they are getting worse and worse. Small schools, generally, are dingy, unattractive looking places. Many of them are old and require modernizing. To supply running water and sanitary conveniences is a big job in itself. There is a great demand for Rural High Schools, with courses specially designed for rural living. There has been too much cutting the cloth to the one pattern in our education. Curricula should be flexible to meet the needs of different communities. There has been a general lack of interest in the surroundings of rural schools. Many of them are unkept and haven't even a tree on them. This is something which could be remied without the expenditure of money. Interest and a little work could make school grounds look attractive. Where is the money for improved schools to come from? Not from Municipal taxes. It is time the Provincial and the Dominion Governments took over a greater share of the burden. It is hoped that some of the present buildings being used for Military purposes may be available for schools after the war.

USE SMALL QUANTITIES

After many years of jam-making, I have come to the conclusion it is best to cook only a small quantity of fruit at a time. This will boil quickly and make a jam with a better flavor and color than that made with a large quantity of fruit which takes a longer time. Even when I am using a large quantity of fruit, I still cook it in small quantities. It does not take as long to finish the work either. As soon as I have two quarts of fruit prepared I put it on to boil, and while it is boiling continue preparing the rest of the fruit. A little lemon juice added to jam just before it is finished boiling sharpens and improves the flavor.

MAIN STREET - LACHUTE

RED CURRANT JELLY

Pick over slightly under-ripe currants, leaving them on the stems. Wash and cover with cold water. Bring to a boil and boil for twenty minutes. Drain in a jelly bag without squeezing. Measure the juice, and add three-quarters of the measure of sugar. Bring to a full boil, stirring frequently. Boil until it registers 218 degrees on a candy thermometer, or until a spoonful put on a cold plate and cooled quickly can be pushed back with a spoon. Another test is to dip the spoon in the syrup, cool slightly, and if the jelly is done, the drops will run together and come off in flakes, and will not drip or drop off.

MOLDED CUSTARD

1 Tablespoon gelatine, ½ cup milk (cold), 2 cups milk, 1 teaspoon vanilla, ½ cup sugar, 2 eggs, ¼ teaspoon salt.

Soak the gelatine in the ½ cup milk for 5 minutes. Heat 2 cups of milk until scalded. Add sugar, and salt, then pour over the beaten egg yolks, and cook until slightly thickened. Add vanilla. Fold in the stiffly beaten egg yolks, and pour in to individual molds, and set until firm.

GINGER CREAM

1 Cup cream, 1¼ cups ginger snap crumbs, 2 teaspoons sugar, ½ cup milk, 1 teaspoon vanilla.

Whip the cream to a soft custard, adding the sugar. Fold in the remaining ingredients. Taste to see if sweet enough. Pour in freezing tray and freeze lightly. Do not make too stiff.

Rationing Not So Bad!

By Betty Barclay

Well ladies! We have been playing with those little green coupons for some time — and they are not so bad after all. In fact, we are learning to become careful shoppers and make non-rationel foods take the place of many old favorites on our table. When we once opened a can of cherries or peaches for dessert, we now make up some attractive dessert from our fresh oranges — and I rather suspect most of us have been agreeably surprised. Best of all, those fresh fruit desserts are just what we need to balance our diets, and they may be varied as new fruits and berries appear locally—for oranges blend with all other fruits to make a constant parade of new desserts.

Then we have the lemon. "Pass the lemon sauce and save the cream" is a good slogan for today. Grated lemon peel and lemon juice often give that "needed" flavor to some dish that without these flavorings, may seem a trifle "flat".

Here are two excellent lemon recipes for your wartime menu:

Fruit Salad Dressing

½ Cup orange juice, 3 tablespoons lemon juice, ¼ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon paprika (optional), few grains nutmeg.

Skake well or stir just before serving. A delicious fresh fruit dressing, excellent for those who do not care for oil.

Lemon Honeys

1½ Cups honey, ¾ cup shortening (part butter for added flavor, if desired), 1 egg, 2½ cups flour, ¼ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon soda, 2¼ teaspoons baking powder, 1 tablespoon grated lemon peel, 1½ cups oatmeal (uncooked), ¾ cup raisins or chopped nuts, 3 tablespoons lemon juice.

Cream honey and shortening. Add egg and beat well. Sift flour, salt, soda, baking powder into mixture. Add oatmeal, raisins or nuts, grated lemon peel and juice. Mix thoroughly. Drop by teaspoonfuls onto greased cookie sheet. Bake in moderate oven (375°F.) for 15 minutes. Approximate yield — 4 dozen cookies.

• • •

Toastaroons

6 Cups corn flakes, 1 can (14or 15 ounces) sweetened condensed milk.

Combine corn flakes and condensed milk, mixing lightly. Drop from teaspoon on greased baking sheet; flatten slightly, shaping edges with spoon. Bake in slow oven (325°F.) 12 to 15 minutes, or until done. Remove from baking sheet immediately, using knife or spatula. Too keep cookies from sticking, hold pan over very low flame for a few seconds. Makes about 40 cookies.

Nut Toastaroons

Use above recipe, reducing corn flakes to 5 cups and adding ¾ cup chopped nut meats.

Spicy Toastaroons

Use above recipe, mixing 1 teaspoon cinnamon or nutmeg or powdered ginger with corn flakes before adding condensed milk.

It matters, not what you are thought to be, but what you are.

FIRELESS COOKER STAGES COMEBACK

Fine for Outdoor Workers' Meals in Summer Time and Autumn

Ames, Iowa, July 6 (CP) — Cooking meals in the field while mother and the rest of the family work outside is predicted by Fannie Gannon, extension home management specialist at Iowa State College.

When women go to the fields to help relieve the manpower shortage, fireless cookers or homemade insulated cans will keep food cooking for two to four hours if the food is boiling hot when put into the cooker, she said.

If old fireless cookers are not available, Miss Gannon suggests making one from a large can, such as a 100-pound lard can, and a small can to fit inside. A layer of rock wool or other insulation is placed between the two cans.

Boiling-hot food should be put in tightly-covered pans and placed inside the smaller can. Insulation retains the heat, and heated soapstones or concrete blocks provide heat for continuing the cooking. Fireless cookers may be used for any food that requires long, slow cooking.

PRICE CONTROL

News & Notes

Need for Tin Tubes

Authorized collectors of used shaving cream and tooth paste tubes shipped to smelters over 13½ tons in May. From this, 3,061 pounds of tin were obtained. This is indicative of the advantage to be gained by strict adherence to the Wartime Prices and Trade Board regulation which requires the surrender of a used tube before purchase of a new tube.

According to the goods administration of the Board "tin conservation looms larger in importance daily as without tin corvettes, torpedo boats and ships, among other vital war needs, could not be made.

Maximum Prices for Honey set

Maximum selling prices for honey in all forms were established by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board in an order which became effective June 22.

Pasteurized granulated honey will be sold at slightly higher prices than extracted honey and in many cases in new composite and fiber cases in order to conserve tin.

Where the primary producer of honey sells direct to the consumer he sells at wholesale price plus a mark-up not to exceed three cents a pound for honey in bulk or in more than one-pound containers. The maximum price for standard comb honey is set in the order at 40 cents a section.

Extra Meat for Medical Cases

Extra meat rations for medical cases will not be provided except in cases of diabetic or coeliac diseases, the Ration Administration of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board has announced. Applications, accompanied by a doctor's certificate, may be sent to the nearest local ration board. Diabetics who have already surrendered sugar coupons will not be required to present a second doctor's certificate when applying for extra meat rations. It is stated that the maximum extra ration will be three single coupons per person, per week.

New Order on Poultry Feathers

Steps to control the shortage of feathers and down needed for such military requirements as sleeping bags have been taken by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board in an order effective June 24. The order applies to new or used feathers from geese, ducks, chickens and turkeys.

With the exception of processors and manufacturers no one may keep, for longer than ten days, more than 100 pounds of down or of duck or goose feathers, according to the order. The 10 day limit applies also to 500 pounds total combined weight of chicken or turkey feathers.

Facial Tissue Supply Increased

To meet the increased demand for facial tissues the Wartime Prices and Trade Board has issued an order which provides for economies in production which is expected to increase current supplies by 30 per cent. Reduction in the number of sizes of facial tissues to two and setting a maximum of 300 tissues to a package is expected to effect this.

Simplification of sizes and packaging, it is hoped, will ease somewhat the difficulties in the wholesale and retail trades where acute shortage has led to a quota system of distribution.

BEAT TEMPERATURE WITH GOOD TEMPER

How do You Behave in Hot Weather? — Make an Honest Effort to Forget it

By GRACE MARTIN, Associated Press Writer

Now that hot weather is here, it might be a good idea to size up the way you behave when the mercury mounts.

Are you one of those who grumble incessantly about the heat? Do you take a sadist's satisfaction in talking about how hot it was yesterday and how much worse it is today? Or do you make an honest effort to forget the heat?

And how about your appearance? Do you go around looking like a wilted leaf of lettuce — your hair in trings, your make-up the worse for wear, your frock limp and crumpled? Or do you spend some energy in sprucing up your appearance, so that you are really pleasant to look at in spite of the heat?

What happens to your temper when it is 95 in the shade? Are you one of those who grow peevish and cross so that any conservation with you is a hazard? Do you let your voice rise high and your tone grow sharp, just because you are uncomfortable? Or do you try to keep you voice even and your answers civil?

The weather is just as warm for your family and friends as it is for you. And some of them have more to try them in other ways than you do. You can do a lot to make yourself more popular by giving some thought to the way you look and act.

WOMEN JOIN THE SERVICES

Last May 15, a young Polish girl solemnly took the oath of allegiance and a few moments later became the first European guest child to enlist in the Canadian Women's Army Corps. The brief ceremony culiminated almost four years of important waiting for the time when she would be of age to enroll.

She came to Canada from Poland late in 1938 to visit an aunt. During her visit, Nazi hordes goose-stepped into her homeland and touched off the first explosion of the global war. Her parents sent word for her to remain in Canada, and since that time she has lived for the day when she could take an active part in the war.

She is now realizing her ambition and wears the uniform of the C.W.A.C. She is undergoing her basic training at Kitchener, Ont.

Pursued by German bombs in France and England, courageous Pte. Germaine Rochette, now returned to Canada, has enlisted in the Canadian Women's Army Corps, and intends to carry on her private war with Hitler's minions in an Army uniform.

Shortly after war broke out, action-seeking Germaine Rochette sailed for France. There she took a First-Aid course, and had just begun making use of it in Paris, when imminent occupation of the city made it necessary to leave. Crossing the channel to England, she worked with the Belgian consul, finding shelter for hundreds of Belgian refugees.

During that time, Miss Rochette eye-witnessed the Battle of Britain. Twice narrowly escaping Nazi bombs, her most harrowing experience occurred when a hospital in which she was a patient was bombed and a wing was destroyed.

Her health failed, and she returned to Canada. But the spirit which had taken her across an ocean was equal to the menace of illness, and after a few months' recuperation, she successfully met the standard for enlistment in the C.W.A.C.

Pte. Rochette is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Rochette of Montreal. She has two brothers serving in the Canadian Army.

A "Floor" Needed

The Advance again calls attention to the fact that while ceilings are placed on prices, the real need is a floor on quality. In nearly every line of goods quality has gone down into the open cellar and threatens to further dig itself in. Prices have kept up, but quality has gone down. It has been all very well to brag and bluster about inflation, but it is difficult to see where the people really benefit from paying ceiling prices for sub-cellar quality.

HARD ON DANCER NO BOY FRIENDS

Spanish Flash in New York Has Marital Ambitions, However, and Likes Quiet Dark Men

By ADELAIDE KERR, Associated Press Writer

New York, July 6 (CP) — Maybe you think you envy Carmen Amaya.

She is billed as the world's greatest gypsy dancer. She often makes $2,000 a week. When she flashes like lightning across a stage, Manhattan's Latins thunder "Vivas". And a lot of people who aren't Latin crowd around later to pay their respects.

But Carmen Amaya is not happy. She has no boy friends!

"No — not one," she said as she coiled like a spring on her dressing-room couch at the Roxy Theatre, where she and her troupe are dancing. "They come to congratulate me. But that's all. I'm always working—I work too hard. I'm tired of dancing all the time. Nights I look out of this window—and I see other girls with their boy friends, on the streets. And I think I'm a woman. A woman has got to get married sometime".

(Carmen Amaya likes 'em dark. She doesn't like card players or hard drinkers. She wants a man who is kind-hearted, faithful and who will love her for herself.).

Carmen has been dancing ever since she was four. First in tourist caves in the gypsy quarter of Granada, Spain, where she was born. When civil war broke out in Spain, she and her family went to Buenos Aires. They danced there for the next six years. In 1941 Carmen came to New York to dance in night clubs and zoomed right into fame.

When she darts across a stage, her black hair swirling, her swift heels clacking, her skirts a flash of scarlet, she electrifies the audience. As one critic put it, "She almost knocks you out of your seat".

Carmen is a little girl. She weighs only 95 pounds, and says she is 21. Her eyes are black and snapping, her face slender and tense, her body lithe as a spring.

Her weekly take supports a family and troupe of 17. Father, brother and uncle play guitars. Two sisters dance in her show. Mama Amaya cooks for the whole crew.

Not all the dancing is Spanish though. Carman loves jitterbugging. "And someday," she says, "I hope to be good".

STAY SAFE!

LIVING LIKE SPARROWS

London, (CP) — Reuters reported that Greek children orphaned by the war are wandering the streets of Athens in gangs searching refuse heaps for food. A German newspaper published a picture of them and said they are "living like sparrows".

BLACK MAGIC HITS STYLES

In Summer Evening Dresses in Gotham; and Likely to be Factor for Fall

New York, July 6 (CP) — Forerunners of fall are the new black styles designed for any occasion after 5 p.m. from now on straight through the summer. Come autumn, you'll probably still be wearing them, under furs.

These young black smoothies are street length, with brief sleeves, flattering necklines, designed to dramatize the figure. They are devoid of trimming, so that they can be dressed up or down with jewelry or accessories.

Slim and sculptured, the new styles are done in such slick, soft-draping rayons as flat crepes, heavy sheers, satins and the important new tissue failles. Peek-aboo fabrics are introduced occasionally in yokes of chiffon, marquisette or scroll-patterned net, all in matching black.

The new dresses are remarkable for ingenuity of design in achieving soft drapery and fluid lines with a minimum of yardage. Draped types have slightly flared skirts and smoothly moulded bodices. Slim, tubular styles often have horizontal treatment such as tucks, appliqued bands or rows of fringe. Bodices show new construction interest, in smooth shoulder draping, surplice closing or a cowl drape to a low square neckline. The necklines themselves may be U-shaped, a deep V or the new bateau, cut both low and wide.

"Dental Health"

Your Child's First Visit to Dentist

The dentist, the physician and the policeman are the child's best friends, but too often they are associated in his mind with pain and terror.

Obviously, the way to prevent these childish misconceptions is to lead your child to understand early in life that these guardians of his health and safety are his "pals" — men like his father and his uncle.

Your child's first visit to the family dentist should not await his first toothache: it should be made as soon as all his baby teeth have appeared; that is, shortly after his second birthday.

The wise dentist will make friends with the child, allowing him to examine the dental equipment and ask questions about it. In the meantime, the dentist can observe the child's breathing habits, the shape of the mouth and other indications as to whether his teeth and jaws are developing properly.

The occasion also will give the dentist an opportunity to look at the child's teeth, after relations between the two have been established on a friendly basis, and to determine the conditions of the enamel and the formation of the teeth.

With this good start, subsequent visit to the dentist should be anticipated by the child with pleasure. Frequent visit will enable the dentist to stop tooth troubles before they start and so avoid the resultant discomforts.

Contrast this method with that of waiting until the child complains of a toothache before he is taken to the dentist. Under such circumstances, the child will arrive in a fretful state, nervous and fearful. No matter how gentle and patient the dentist, the nature of the necessary work will leave an unpleasant impression and make it difficult every time the child has to return in the future.

Technicians Trade Home Jobs For Front Line Duty Overseas

The ambition of every CBC news man on the overseas staff is to be with the Canadians when the "dagger pointed at the heart of Berlin" begins to thrust forward. But they cannot all be in action, and it is the job of the technical staff to form the link between the men covering the front and those at the news desk in London, so that the on-the-spot story can reach the Canadian listener with the least possible delay.

Plans have been made for direct radio broadcasting from the front line with the Canadian troops, and the CBC staff and commentators who will provide the service are now on duty overseas.

The full complement of the technical personnel and four mobile units are there, too, and specially developed equipment has been installed in the field units which will travel with the Canadians on the attack.

For Field Operations

The CBC overseas technical organization consists of four mobile Units No. 3, 4, 5 and 6. In addition to the vehicles, there is the usual studio recording set-up in England and a field recording unit which can be used anywhere in the field, remote from the mobile units.

Made in Canada

The overseas mobile units are an all-Canadian enterprise. The army trucks were built in Canada and shipped to Britain. The equipment was designed and constructed by CBC engineers, and assembled in England. The operations are similar to those of any regular actuality or on-the-spot broadcasting. The commentator's words are spoken into a microphone and amplified onto recording discs just like a phonograph record. These are shipped to the CBC newsroom in London, where they are passed by the censor. They are then beamed to Canada by the BBC and picked up by CBC's shortwave receiving station at Britannia Heights, near Ottawa. They are either fed direct to the National Network or recorded and held for what is technically known as a delayed broadcast.

The Engineering Staff

Who are the men who take these modern mechanical couriers into action? They are usually quiet, unbelligerent chaps, a notch or two removed from college professors and research men. They may be young and they may be not so young, but all of them have read a book and some of them are heroes already. Arthur W. Holmes, for instance. He went over in 1939, the first Canadian radio engineer to reach Britain. He went with the first Canadian contingent. He recorded the Battle of Britain, sitting in Regent's Park with a pack set on his back and an inferno of bombs blazing about him. He is back for his big job, after a year at the CBC's Dixie transmitter, along a rural Ontario highway.

There is A. J. McDonald, a former Queen's man and studio member at Toronto, who went overseas in May, 1942, worried sick in case he might miss the "big show".

There is F. P. Johnson, the man from Watrous, Sask., where CBC set up the fourth 50,000 watt transmitter in its Dominion-wide service.

L. R. Moore, was originally an operator at Montreal studios, but he received leave of absence from the CBC and went overseas with the Army Tank Corps. When CBC had urgent need for his services, the army gave him an honorable discharge.

Bilingual Engineer

J. Beauregard, another member of the Montreal studios who joined the active forces of Canada — this time it was the Royal Canadian Navy — is a member of the overseas staff, too, having been given an honorable discharge on medical grounds.

And, finally, there is F. H. Wadsworth, who, with Art Holmes, formed the original engineering staff of the CBC during the Battle of Britain. Mr. Wadsworth is a member of the six-man technical staff from Canada which plays such an important part in CBC's plans to bring the story of Canadian armies overseas to the people at home.

BOY SCOUT WINS EMPIRE MEDAL

The youngest winner of the British Empire Medal is a British Boy Scout, John David Grix, aged 15, who for two nights rode his bicycle through heavy bombing to carry out his civil defence duties, and also direct firemen and rescue parties to devastated areas of the city. His award was given for "courage and determination during the heavy raids on Norwich."

LABOR PEER AND THE BOY SCOUTS

Lord Wedgewood, British labor peer in his new book "Testament to Democracy" says of the Boy Scout Movement: "Reflection leads me to the queer conclusion of my age the three of real utility have been bicycles, Boy Scouts and the cinema. As for Baden-Powell's Boy Scouts, I hope they are still doing their daily good deed. There too, imagination has its fling as never before for the working class. The discipline and adventure of camping out, the common work and comradeship, did as much to change the youth of Britain as did Hitler's training in brutality and violence to change the youth of Germany."

THE WATCHMAN

McDONALD CAREY IS MARINE HERO IN WAKE ISLAND

MacDonald Carey, one of Hollywood's newest stars, dies in his latest picture — and he's glad of it.

MacDonald, you see, meets his death after sinking a Jap cruiser in Paramount's saga of Marine heroism, "Wake Island". The film appears at the Rex next Sunday and Monday, featuring Brian Donlevy, Robert Preston, Albert Dekker, Walter Abel and Barbara Britton, in addition to Carey.

"Wake Island" is Carey's third picture in his Hollywood career. The previous two were "Take A Letter, Darling," in which he was a young tobacco dealer millionaire, and "Dr. Broadway" in which he was a Broadway medico who solves a murder. Both were good parts, but Carey thinks his third role to date is absolutely tops.

He plays the part of a young Marine flying lieutenant, one of the few pilots on "Wake Island" when it was attacked by the Japs. In the first blow, most of the 12 planes on the Pacific outpost were destroyed. The Marine garrison was hopelessly outnumbered, yet not one of its defenders apparently even thought of surrendering without a fight.

Flying one of the remaining planes, repaired and patched up with parts of damaged ships, Carey, as Lt. Cameron, risks almost certain death to take on a Jap cruiser. He shakes off several Jap planes, and, disregarding blistering Jap anti-aircraft fire, dives down on the Jap cruiser, hits it with a salvo of perfectly placed bombs. Although his plane is crippled in the hail of "flak" and machine gun bullets, he succeeded in bringing it back to the field. But he himself is dead by the time his comrades reach him.

The single-handed sinking of the Jap cruiser is the film dramatization of the first actual sinking of an enemy heavy ship in Pacific waters.

Man: "I understand your wife is a finished singer."

Friend: "No, not yet. But the neighbors almost got her last night."

A commercial traveller away from home for long periods at a time saw very little of his child, aged four. Returning home one morning very early, he stayed in the sitting-room reading a newspaper before his family got up. Presently his little daughter come in. She looked at her father for a few moments and then shouted: "Mammy, mammy, come here, quick; that man's here again."

The proprietor of a big store noticed an assistant dozing up against the wall of one of the departments. He consulted the manager about the matter.

"I can't do a thing with him," said the manager; "I've had him in three different departments, and he dozes all day long."

"Put him at the pyjama counter," suggested the proprietor, "and fasten a card on him with the words, 'Our pajamas are of such superior quality that even the man who sells them cannot keep awake.'"

BOB HOPE FINDS WASHINGTON A HIVE OF INTRIGUE

Turn a pack of Nazi, Jap and Italians spies loose on wartime Washington, with only Bob Hope wise to their activities, and you can imagine what you get. Most of what you'd imagine, if not all, comes into "They Got Me Covered" — a Capitol Theatre booking for next week, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, July 13-14-15.

Given a smart, sleek production by Samuel Goldwyn, this latest Hope comedy is crammed full of a wide variety of situations. These situations take the broadfaced, snub-nosed Hope to Washington as the newspaperman who must get a story or be out of the business for life (he slipped up on the Nazi invasion of Russia, it seems).

A convenient meeting with a spy-friend lets him in on the ground floor of the world's biggest story. Spies are everywhere in Washington, but only Hope, this spy-guy and Dorothy Lamour know about it. But by the time the denoucement comes, the Marines, the F.B.I. and the Navy have all caught up.

The sequences between include some smart scenes. One has Hope faced with Donald Meek as a crazed Confederate spy, and finally escaping by out-half-witting him. Another time he finds himself married to a beautiful blonde from burlesque, framed by Nazi agents. He gets into a beauty parlor and first impersonates a woman having a mud-pack, later a dummy riding a bicycle. Most of the situations are very good but not over embroidered.

Hope does manfully, considering that he's essentially a gag-reader developed by radio. His brand of mugging fits in well, however, and while he's always conscious of the camera it serves the purpose of sharing the situations with the audience.

Government to Restore Premium on Cheese Production in Quebec

By D'ARCY O'CONNELL,
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Quebec, July 14 (CP) — Quebec Government has decided to restore the premium it paid on cheese production during 1941 and during most of last year.

Premier Godbout, who holds the portfolios of Agriculture and Colonization, announced that the Government will pay a two-cent premium on every pound of cheese of 92 score which is produced in Quebec. Payment is retroactive to July 1.

The Premier said his Government decided to restore the premium in an attempt to increase the production of cheese needed in the United Kingdom. Cheese production has been on the decline since the Government stopped paying the premium after butter production slumped and rationing became necessary.

The Premier did not say whether the premium would be dropped should butter production drop next winter, but he did say that restoration of the premium will increase by almost $1,000,000 the annual revenues of Quebec cheeee producers.

Also acting in his capacity as Minister of Agriculture, the Premier announced that he will act as president of a corporation that will handle the affairs of a sugar-beet factory the government plans to operate at St. Hilaire, Que. Roads Minister T. D. Bouchard and Attorney-General Leon Casgrain will also serve on the corporation.

The Government was authorized during the last session of the Legislature to create the corporation and allow it to handle the affairs of the industry until it can be turned over to a farmers' co-operative.

Duplessis Protests

During the week, Opposition Leader Maurice Duplessis announced that he had wired Prime Minister Mackenzie King asking him to convey to Prime Minister Churchill a plea for the British House of Commons disapproval of an amendment to the British North America Act sought by the Canadian parliament.

A resolution seeking amendment was approved last week in Ottawa, with a few Quebec members dissenting. It would allow postponement of redistribution of the House

GROUP EXPLAIN OPERATION OF A BLOOD CLINIC

Appeal for Voluntary Donors; Mobile Unit Due Here Early in August

COMMITTEE HAS FIRST-HAND INFORMATION ON METHODS

The committee in charge of the Red Cross Blood Donor Clinic in Lachute visited the clinic which is permanently set up in Montreal, with the object of learning the routine under which it operates. They were cordially welcomed, everything was fully explained, and they were free to inspect all departments. The visitors were most impressed by the efficient and kindly atmosphere of this clinic.

The donors, consisting of both men and women, were well provided with soft-drinks, biscuits and magazines while waiting, at no cost to themselves. They then proceeded to the examining room; thence they were conducted to the room where the donations were actually taken, and from there to the rest room where they were served tea, coffee or soft-drinks and rested before being allowed to take their departure.

The Lachute Blood Donor Clinic will operate with a Mobile Unit, which will come from Montreal complete with sterile dressings and apparatus. This Unit will be in charge of a trained technician, who will be assisted by local nurses headed by Mrs. George Héon. Doctor F. W. FitzGerald will be in charge of the clinic here, assisted by other local physicians. The clinic will be situated on the ground floor of the Auditorium. All necessary equipment is being provided by the Lachute Lions Club, and everything is being done for the convenience and comfort of the donors, including canteen service.

Men and women between the ages of 18 and 65 are accepted as donors. A medical examination is given by one of the attending physicians before they are allowed to donate their blood. Any found with deficient blood will then be given a tonic for the purpose of improving and building up their blood, so as to enable them to give their donation at some future time. The actual blood-giving is a painless process and should have no ill effects on the donor. A nurse will be in constant attendance at each table and the donor is given refreshments before he or she leaves the clinic.

The Red Cross Mobile Unit will be in Lachute early in August for the first donations, and every two months thereafter. Prospective donors will be notified, by telephone and mail, of the date and hour of their appointment. They will also be sent directions about the fat-free meal taken before giving blood. This is very important as blood containing fat dries oily and is insoluble, and must therefore be discarded.

The committee in charge feel that everyone should be informed about the Blood Donor Clinic, and have taken this opportunity of telling the public about their plans. They are certain that all who are fit and able will feel it is something they can do to help the men overseas, especially as the Canadians are now in the thick of the Sicilyian invasion and, according to the Red Cross centre in Toronto, are being accompanied by the Canadian Red Cross.

It is expected a large group will offer themselves for the first clinic and that ever-increasing numbers will volunteer for subsequent visits of the Mobile Unit.

This is a direct appeal to all; each and every reader should feel that he, or she, is the one to support this great Red Cross service — and send their name accordingly to the Lions Club representative, Gordon McOuat, Lachute.

LINES STRUCK BY LIGHTNING

The extreme heat experienced this week brought an electric storm and heavy rains late Monday afternoon, which cooled the atmosphere only for a few short hours.

Lighting at the height of the storm struck the high tension power system and caused minor damage over a wide area. The surge was evident in greatest force at the J. C. Wilson Paper Mill, where it played tricks with wiring and fuse boxes, blew out lightbulbs and set fire to woodwork at a hoist near the bag factory. Gatineau Company linemen were kept busy afterwards on repairs at different points in the power system.

Intermittent storms have been experienced as the heat wave continues.

OVERHAUL ON TWO LACHUTE BRIDGES

Two bridges in Lachute have been undergoing repairs. Barron's Bridge, with new flooring and pavement laid by the Provincial Roads Department, is meeting the approval of motorists — and also of nearby residents, for whom a loose board at the western approach has disturbed nightly slumbers for some time past. On the railway bridge adjacent to the Park, a crew of C.P.R. workmen have been laying new ties and overhauling the right-of-way.

Guest Speaker, Rev. E. Orsborn, On Timely Topic of "Freedom"

At a meeting of Lachute Lions Club, held Monday evening at the Golf Club premises, the newly elected officers under Lion President Fernand Legault conducted an interesting program.

Officers appointed were as follows: Immediate past president, J. S. Giles; president, F. Legault; 1st vice-pres., Dr. F. W. FitzGerald; 2nd vice-pres., Leopold Carriere; 3rd vice-pres., G. McOuat; secretary, Geo. Tattersfield; treasurer, T. K. Haller.

Reports were heard on the recent Field Day activities, which showed net proceeds of $434.12, an added amount of $100 being also donated by the Argenteuil Agricultural Society — these results representing an appreciable boost to the soldiers' cigarette fund.

President Lion F. Legault stated he would endeavor to have special speakers at all regular meetings of the club. The Rev. E. Orsborn, guest speaker for this occasion, was then introduced by Lion J. S. Giles, and in conclusion was thanked by Lion Clement Tremblay.

Mr. Orsborn's topic was "The Freedom We Seek". Following is a digest of his remarks:

The Freedom We Seek

The discontent and bewilderment of these times may be attributed to the fact that — we are not free, We are unhappy because we are forbidden to do many things. We

BOYS' BRIGADE CAMPERS PLAN A FIELD DAY

Dominion Brigade President Welcomed to Camp by Capt. J. H. Richardson

PARADE HELD SUNDAY TO PRESBYTN CHURCH

St. Andrews E. — The Boys' Brigade 1st Montreal Company's annual camp was officially opened Saturday evening, when a fitting "torch ceremony" took place. During the course of proceedings, a hearty welcome was extended to the Rev. C. A. Selby, Dominion president of the Brigade. The Rev. Selby will remain at camp for the two-week period and assist in the various programs.

This year's camp is one of the finest in the Company's history. The advance guard spent a great deal of time and energy putting things into shape prior to arrival of the campers. Cpl. Bob Eastwood, Cpl. Alan Keith and Lance Cpl. Jimmy Dugan, together with Capt. Richardson, formed the advance guard. They were fortunate in having dry weather for tent pitching; and it was a glorious sight that greeted the campers as they approached the Dorion farm and saw the five tents in readiness for them.

On Sunday the Company paraded to the Presbyterian Church, led by their band which was almost at full strength. While the weather was extremely warm, the boys enjoyed the service to the fullest extent.

Among special guests welcomed for the week-end were Lieut. Alex Upham, Cpl. Geo. MacFarlane and Pte. Doug Unsworth.

The Company are now planning a field day to be opened to all boys of St. Andrews East as well as those at Tyndale Camp. This will most likely take place on the second week.

The Company are grateful to Mr. E. C. Calder for his kind assistance, both prior to camp as well as on Sunday, when he very kindly drove the boys back to camp after service.

Many activities will be commenced this week, and visitors will be welcome to tour the camp on Saturday or Sunday afternoon.

Regular Radio Features Aid Important Wartime Duties of Canada's Land Army

Farm Broadcasts Department Arranges Programs To Boost Food Production on Home Front

Ontario farmers give encouraging reports of the way help is now coming to them from the urban centres. Over 200 Farm Commando Brigades have been formed in province of Ontario alone, their purpose being to supply workers to the farmers most in need of them. Each "commando" has registered with his brigade for as many hours, half-days, and days as he has free from his city or town work.

Considerable impetus to the forming of the brigades has been given by the CBC broadcasts of "Help Wanted." The programs present an accurate picture of farm problems in this fourth year of war, and describe the endeavors now being made to meet these problems. Next week's Ontario and Quebec broadcast, will be heard Wednesday, July 21, at 7.30 p.m. EDT.

Help Volunteered

"Farmerettes" have answered the "Help Wanted" call in astonishing numbers. Girls from the city have flocked to the farms right after school closing, to lend their hands for the summer months. Farmers say they can use them all, and more. The response from teen-age school boys, however, has not been all that the farmers had hoped for. Every summer day that boys can give is urgently needed on the land.

Feature broadcasts of a practical and topical nature are being presented on Monday evenings by the Farm Broadcasts Department of CBC. Of interest to every listener, as well as to the farmer, this series will be heard throughout the summer months.

"Canadian Crop Report," is the subject of the broadcast on Monday, July 19, at 830 p.m. It will be heard on CBC's Eastern Network. Fergus Mutrie, British Columbia farm commentator, will report on the West, and Peter Whittall will bring the news from the Prairies. The Ontario report will be given by W. J. McPherson, and the Maritimes report, by A. R. Kemp.

"The Craigs"

Another farm feature has developed into one of the most popular broadcasts on the Canadian air. Known as "The Craigs," it is heard from Monday to Friday, as part of the Ontario Farm Broadcast at 12.30 p.m. EDT, going also to Quebec listeners.

As a typical rural Canadian family, the Craigs reflect all the problems and experiences and the daily life to be found along every concession road. Right now Thomas Craig is pleased because he's picked up an extra hired man —a vagabond who intended to stop only one night, but who decided to stay on and help out. Thomas' friend, Charlie Venning, is feeling a little better about things in general because he's got a farm "commando" coming out from the town hardware store two afternoons a week. And Thomas' son, Bill, once an invaluable helper on the farm, is coming home from his western airforce post for two weeks' furlough.

The Craig family has been on the air since May Day, 1939. Through its broadcasts many of our farmers have heard solutions to matters that were of direct concern to the success of their own farms and affairs.

Down on the Farm

Thomas Craig has brought his tractor to a halt for a little consultation with his wife, Martha, and daughter, Janice. The fourth party is, of course, Eric, hired man par excellence. The camera caught "The Craigs" down on "Briarwood" farm, the day they made their 1000th broadcast to Ontario and Quebec listeners in CBC's daily Farm Broadcast.

Capt. D. Campbell Arrives Home From Overseas

Capt. Dave Campbell, who went overseas in March, 1942, with the 1st Canadian Base Ordnance Workshop, is home from England visiting his mother, Mrs. Jack Campbell, and relatives in these parts.

Capt. Campbell, hale and hearty, will spend a leave in Montreal and Lachute pending further movements.

Referring to local servicemen in his Unit overseas, he reports they are all well. Mention was made to the Blair brothers, Walker and Rodgers; the latter, he stated, was about to go on leave as he took his departure for Canada. He also mentioned Hardy and Cox, two other local men stationed in the same area.

In conversation with The Watchman today, Capt. Campbell asked that special appreciation be expressed to the Lions Club, the W.I. and various church organizations which have sent cigarettes, food and comforts to these boys. The good work of these groups, he said, is highly praised among the soldiers, who share their parcels with less fortunate friends and so spread their benefits to a greater number.

In the Studio

Here's how "The Craigs" reach thousands of CBC's Ontario and Quebec listeners in the daily Farm Boadcast, at 12.30 p.m. EDT. Producer Kay Stevenson has just waved them on the air, author Dean Hughes follows the script, and control operator Archie Pook keeps a practised hand on the controls.

Former Watchman Writer Gets a Break, Gives Invasion Comment from Algiers

Flight-Lieutenant Leslie Powell Heard With First Announcement of Long Awaited Second Front

Stories of radio and news men in readiness for the "big break" on the European invasion front, have been followed with routine interest. But a big flash of last Friday's early broadcasts, which heralded the Allied landing on Sicily, brought to this town a voice familiar to several of its residents. The speaker was Flt.-Lt. Leslie Powell, whose commentary from Algiers on the "lay of the land" which confronted Allied landing forces, followed the 8 o'clock CBC news broadcast. Powell has since been heard in several broadcasts over the Algiers radio.

Flt.-Lt. Powell, who conducted a lively column in this newspaper several years ago, has made notable strides in journalism. These broadcasts, however, are believed to be his first experience on the air waves; and his radio debut, coming at such an auspicious juncture, is a scoop which reflects personal credit. Leslie Powell, American by birth, lived for many years at Ste. Agathe, where he conducted a weekly newspaper and later a periodical review on Laurentian sports and resorts. He joined the staff of the Montreal Gazette as a proofreader, later covering the Montreal military "beat" and special assignments. He then enlisted with the R.C.A.F. public relations department and has since risen to the rank of Flight Lieutenant. He served in Great Britain before being transferred last winter to the Middle East. His articles and photographs have appeared from time to time in the Gazette and the Montreal Standard.

Powell's brother, George, who attended High School here and also displayed distinct ability in journalism, is an N.C.O. in the Signals Corps; when last heard of he was stationed in England. He, too, has been heard in Canada on overseas radio broadcasts.

40th Anniversary Of Cushing Couple

Cushing — A pleasant surprise party in honor of their 40th wedding anniversary was given for Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Canning on Saturday evening by their daughter, Margaret, and a group of Montreal friends. The honored couple were presented with a number of lovely gifts. On Thursday, their actual anniversary date, Mr. and Mrs. Canning, their daughter and a party of friends motored to St. Jerome for a picnic. This community wishes Mr. and Mrs. Canning many happy returns of "the day".

Garage Proprietor Not Responsible For Car Theft

In the Superior Court on Tuesday Mr. Justice Joseph Archambault delivered a judgment which has an important bearing on the responsibility of garage-owners for the safety of automobiles left in their care for repairs.

The Court dismissed an action in which Edouard C. Girard, hotelkeeper, of St. Eustache, sought to recover from James Williams, garage-owner, of Plage Laval, $670, the value of plaintiff's automobile, which was stolen from defendant's garage on the night of July 22, 1941.

The theft resulted in the wreck of the car and the death of three youths, whose bodies were found near the wreckage at Ste. Dorothee early on July 23. They were between the ages of 16 and 18 years, and no doubt, the Judge remarked, they met with an accident after they broke into the garage of Jas. Williams and stole the automobile.

Girard took the car to the garage to be washed and simonized on the evening of July 22, but as Williams was unable to undertake the work that evening plaintiff agreed to leave the vehicle at the garage for the night, work to be completed next morning.

Judge Archambault said understanding between the parties was not one of deposit but an agreement for work on the automobile. Defendant locked the garage securely and loss of the car was not due to any fault or act on his part. Proof of the fact relieved him of all obligation for the theft. Regarding plaintiff's allegation of fault because defendant left the keys of the automobile in the car, the Court held this was an act of prudence as, in the event of a fire, it would be possible to remove the car with the keys of the automobile available.

Brownsburg Man In Sicily Action

Serving with one of the naval flotillas which performed highly creditable work in the landing of Allied invasion troops at Sicily, was Petty Officer John J. Seary, motor mechanic, R.C.N.V.R., of Brownsburg.

Mr. and Mrs. John Seary, his parents, were thrilled when their attention was drawn to a news report Tuesday evening listing his name among the personnel of Canadian craft which took part. The despatch gave detailed descriptions of the "big role" played by the Imperial and Royal Canadian Navy in the landings which started last Thursday night and initiated the first move in the Allied invasion front.

The naval craft delivered the fighting men right up on shore where the water was no more than ankle deep, stated the despatch.

Petty Officer Seary is the eldest of three sons now serving in the forces overseas. In a recent letter to his parents he stated he had crossed the Equator twice since arriving in British waters last October.

DRAWS ATTENTION OF EMPLOYERS TO LAW NOW EFFECTIVE

J. R. Charron, Manager of the Local Employment Office, today stated that a change in policy has been adopted by the Unemployment Insurance Commission in regard to the exchange of unemployment insurance books required by law to be made at April 1. Up to this year, Mr. Charron stated, in order to give employers an opportunity of becoming familiar with the Act, prosecutions were not entered against employers who delayed unreasonably or failed to exchange the insurance books of their employees. However, this year prosecutions are being gone ahead with, and already six convictions of delinquent employers are reported from various points across Canada. Employers charged with negligence at Waterford, N.S., Shediac, N.B., Toronto and Sudbury, Ont., and Chicoutimi and Sherbrooke, P.Q., have all been convicted by local magistrates. The magistrates levied minimum fines in some cases, but in other instances penalties were rather severe: several magistrates issued warnings that further offences would be treated more seriously.

Mr. Charron added that he is informed from Ottawa that a number of additional cases across Canada, where failure to exchange insurance books is alleged, are now under review, and some of them at least will come before the courts.

The Local Employment Office Manager stated that in this district there are some employers who have not yet complied with requirements of the Unemployment Insurance Act in regard to the exchange of books. Some have neglected to assure themselves that every one of their employees is provided with a National Selective Service Permit and an Unemployment Insurance Book.

Should the employers be in doubt as to whether they are in conformity or not with the regulations relative to National Selective Service or Unemployment Insurance Commission, they should communicate immediately with the Manager, Employment and Selective Service Office at 74 Grace Street, Lachute, Que.

are commanded to do many other things. Rationing, and selective service, and increasing income taxes, and the rising cost of living take much of the joy out of life. And when we add to that our anxiety for those who have entered the forces, we have an accumulation of trouble sufficient to dampen the spirits of the most cheerful among us. If only we could do what we want to do; and go where we want to go; and get what we want to get; and be what we want to be! But we cannot.

Strange, isn't it, that we are losing more and more of our liberty while we fight to preserve our freedom! Obviously something is decidedly out of order.

No Absolute Freedom

But let us try to understand, once and for all, that it is utterly useless to go through life looking for something that does not exist, namely, absolute freedom. In war and in peace we are never free from restraint. There are multitudes of written laws and social customs which serve as restraints upon our freedom. Let us, then, reconcile ourselves to the thought that we cannot live without restraint and must tolerate restrictions upon our freedom.

National Freedom

What, then, can we reasonably expect in the way of freedom? . . . During the last 150 years there has been a distinct advance in the struggle for national freedom. Since the overthrow of Napoleon's Empire at Waterloo in 1815, there has been a growing determination that nations must be free from foreign domination. Three empires disappeared after the last world war, the empires of Prussia, Turkey and Austria. National freedom in greater measure than ever before came to Poles, Czechs, Slovaks, Arabs and the peoples of the Baltic States. In the Balkans the same was true, and across the seas republics sprang up in Central and South America.

In Canada we do not fully appreciate our national freedom. We have never known anything else. Our fight today is not to protect our national freedom, but to save that freedom for others, some of whom have lost it for the moment, while others find their national freedom gravely threatened.

Political Freedom

A second freedom for which we fight is political. People within a nation should govern themselves. This is democracy. British democracy has been long established. The United States is a powerful and democratic nation, and so was France before the war. Germany, Japan and Turkey copied the British Parliament, Russia and China became republics. Ireland secured Home Rule, India a measure of self government, the "Colonies" became "self governing dominions" and the Empire "a commonwealth of nations".

Part of our battle is for the preservation of these gains in democracy.

Personal Freedom

Personal Liberty comes next. Liberty to think, speak, act and worship as a man may choose, subject to the similar rights of others. This freedom is denied in every totalitarian state. We contend that the state is an organization which exists for the benefit of its members. God Himself gave man the right of choice and as man exercises his privilege and learns by his mistakes, he becomes more and more like the man God wants him to be.

Economic Freedom in Its Infancy

Finally, Economic Liberty.—The slavery of poverty, overwork and bad environment must be overcome. Economic freedom is still in its infancy. We have child labor laws, laws to regulate wages and hours, employer's liability and so on. We have labor and trade unions. But all this is only a beginning.

Economic slavery brought on the present war. To escape from economic slavery German people surrendered their personal freedom and their political liberty. "You can't have guns and butter", they were told; so they gave up butter, and gave up their free ballot at the polls, and gave up their right to personal freedom — and they bought guns.

So today the battle of liberty is being fought on four fronts — national, political, personal and economic. If our enemies should win, we would lose all four of these freedoms. So the average Canadian is willing to sacrifice a degree of economic liberty and of personal freedom. He is willing to pay taxes higher than he ever paid before; to be ordered from Ottawa to do this and to do that. It is a little that every one of us can do. Let us try to do it gracefully, learning that our fight, when it is won, will restore large liberties to millions of our fellows, and that our own freedom will be sweeter to us than ever before.

C.P.R. Saves Rubber With New Machine

SHOWN above, with the safety guard removed from the knife for this picture only, to illustrate the operation of the cutter, is a new machine developed at the Canadian Pacific Railway's Angus Shops in Montreal as part of a programme for reclaiming rubber, latest phase of the company's Dominion-wide conservation campaign. The machine prepares worn and burst sections of rubber hose from air and signal connections to be put back into service. The good sections of the used hose are spliced with the aid of a small malleable iron adapter and the reclaimed product meets all safety requirements. In the short time the programme has been in effect five and one-half tons of rubber have been saved with 5,394 air hose and 1,058 signal hose reclaimed to make up that total, according to H. B. Bowen, chief of motive power and rolling stock, who is in charge of the rubber-saving plan. Over the year it is estimated there will be a saving of 30 per cent. in the rubber hose used on the 84,139 pieces of company rolling stock — with locomotives, passenger equipment, freight and work cars included in that total.

The Great Lover

"My affection for Canada is so great that nothing anybody can do or say can change it." The speaker is Col. R. R. McCormick, publisher of the Chicago Tribune, organ of the isolationists of the middle west.

The colonel's affection for this country has been demonstrated on many occasions and is soundly based on his ownership of several thousand square miles of timber limits in Ontario and Quebec and paper mills which turn out the raw material for his own newspaper and that of his isolationist cousin, owner of the New York News.

It cannot be said that Canada unanimously returns the colonel's affection, even though he hobnobs with provincial cabinet ministers on his visits to this country. His courtship has, however, won him the approval of some other countries. Japan, for instance, warmly commended the recent McCormick proposal of annexing Canada to the United States, and in the days before Pearl Harbor, the Chicago Tribune's sponsorship of Lindbergh, and its unremitting attacks on Lend-Lease and other aid to Britain, were warmly received in Berlin.

There is a deep pathos in the colonel's unrequired affection. Nothing that he can say or do can alter the feelings of Canadians towards him. But he forgives our blindness to his virtues, and remains our constant lover.

LARGEST TERRITORY, SMALLEST WEEKLY

Only One in Million Square Miles, Weekly Newspaper Makes History and Progress

By HERB JONES,
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Yellowknife, N.W.T., July 10 (CP) — Canada's smallest newspaper in the nation's largest territory — that's the Yellowknife Blade.

Only newspaper in a million square miles is the claim of the mimeographed weekly founded in 1940 by its editor, John Murray McKeekan, a geologist by profession but a newspaperman at heart.

Schooled in geology at London University, he came to the Territories in 1935, attracted by the prospecting possibilities of the northern hinterland. But newspaper work was still in his system. Now he combines the two with the aid of his wife by gathering all the news and chatter of the Territories in his six to eight page paper.

Every pressday in the McKeekan home in this settlement of 1,000 people, the Blade's rotary duplicator rolls off some 400 copies of the 14 by eight inch sheets on which the duplicator is printed by the editor and his wife — the first school teacher in the Northwest Territories before her marriage.

Sells For 10 Cents

Selling for 10 cents a copy or $4. a year by subscription, the Blade is hawked in the streets of Yellowknife and delivered to regular customers in the manner of big-time dailies by eager newsboys who work on a 50-50 basis with the editor.

Some 275 to 300 copies are distributed by newsboys locally and 100 others go to other parts of 1,300,000 square miles of the Northwest Territories by various means of northland transportation — canoe, plane and even horse.

On the Blade's mimeographed pages can be found all the news of the district. "Big" local stories such as election of the new trustees is given a front-page banner over two-column story for its editor is an experienced newsman, laying claim to establishment of the first newspaper in Rouyn, Que., in 1926 and subsequently editing other publications.

Inside among numerous advertisements by those taking advantage of the only such publication in the north are chatter columns on the comings and goings of those known in the Territories country.

For the Blade, Editor McKeekan has adopted a policy of "promoting interest in the tremendous potentialities as a mineral producing area" the hinterland to the north of the northern shore of Great Slave Lake where Yellowknife is situated.

Dust Best Control For Cabbage Worms

The velvety-green caterpillars which are commonly found feeding on cabbages and cauliflowers are known as imported cabbage worms. They eat large circular holes in the leaves and frequently bore into the centre of cabbage heads. Control measures should be applied as soon as injury to the plants becomes evident. Dusting with arsenate of lead and hydrated lime is the most widely recommended remedy, states the Dominion Department of Agriculture. One part of the poison should be mixed with six parts of hydrated lime and dusted on the plants in the early morning or late evening when the leaves are wet with dew.

Particular attention should be paid to the central portion of the cabbages and cauliflowers. Two or three applications should be made as required, care being taken to apply the dust immediately feeding becomes evident. Due to the waxy condition of the leaves, spraying has not given satisfactory results. If the plants have to be treated shortly before being marketed, fresh pyrethrum powder should be used as a dust, one part of the pyrethrum to three parts of wheat flour. This material is non-poisonous to human beings, and can be obtained from local seed houses or drug stores. The remedies recommended for cabbage worms are effective in controlling other cabbage insects, such as the cabbage looper and diamond-back moth.

IRELAND SHORT ON POTATOES

Dublin (CP) — Eire, which has always regarded potatoes as its staple crop, faces a "spud" famine this year. There are no prospects of an outstanding season and last year's crop fell short of expectations by 500,00 tons.

ALWAYS "BRITISH CHANNEL"

Dover, Eng. (CP) — Since outbreak of war less than one in every 200 British ships constantly passing through the English Channel have been sunk. These British convoys have to face shore-based enemy guns in addition to German submarines, E-boats and air raiders.

Your Town Paper

The country paper is getting better and better as times goes on. The number grows less but the quality improves.

Once it seemed that changes in the means of transportation might tend to destroy the local papers, but the average man wants to know what happens round home as well as what is going on in Europe and Asia.

Town and country people see things more clearly than do city folk; they are closer to realities, the atmosphere is less disturbing. In cities they do things in the same old way, but in the country there are always means for infinite improvement.

The farmer works with living things. Why does Jones have the best potatoes at the fall fair? There must be a reason. Jones should tell how he does it. . . . Why does Sam Parks always get "Select" grade for his bacon hogs? It's not pure luck. The editor usually endeavors to sum up his method. . . . Who saw the first robin? Can any boy or girl tell us how it manages to find its way back to the same nest each year? There are miracles in the country — real things happen.

There are improvements in farm methods from year to year. The farmer should let his neighbor know how he does things. The town weeklies might well contain more discussions, by their own readers, on questions of national importance. This does not imply political questions — politics warps judgment but issues can be discussed on their merits. The town paper is a real institution. It should have more help from the community. The success of the country paper depends on the interest of its subscribers.

In A National Role

Election of John Inwin to the presidency of Abasand Oils Limited reflects something of national recognition for his initiative in this line of business. This appointment differs from the executive jobs already performed by Mr. Irwin in several private enterprises, for the Dominion Government now has definite interest in the development of the Alberta oilfield, not only in terms of monetary investment but through the urgent need for home production of oil. The outcome of Abasand will be awaited by Canadians with a concern more vital than casual. . . . The story of John Irwin's part in this enterprise is the subject of an article in Toronto "Saturday Night", which we reproduce elsewhere on this page.

Mr. John Irwin is known in these parts for his personal interest in farming. The farm and residential property he owns at St. Andrews East afford diversions which stamp him as extremely human. But his interest here is not confined to horses, cattle, poultry, and the production of maple syrup — it extends to the community in which he has established his country home. No local appeals lack his support; no national campaigns without his contribution in generous figures. And if, in this county, Mr. Irwin finds scope for his hobbies and relaxation from his arduous duties, the people of Argenteuil are happy to count him as their own — a country man with all the attributes of neighborliness and fellowship.

Their Triumphant Passing

A. E. Powley, of the CBC overseas news staff, recently made a tour of several Canadian units in the United Kingdom. Here are his impressions of an incident which occurred in the night, as broadcast on a recent CBC national news summary:

"The noise of their engines was incessant as wave after wave of our bombers streamed out toward the coast. Back in Canada I often heard that sentence, or one something like it, in the cabled dispatches about our night raids on Europe, and as often as it came I used to think that the sound of a procession of our heavy bombers outward bound must be an awe-inspiring thing. Well, I heard it the other night, and it is. The bombers passed over, wave after wave as the dispatches usually put it, as I lay in an army tent in the wood in a particularly beautiful part of rural England. How many of them there were, I couldn't guess, but they were a mighty force. I don't know either how long they took to pass, for when the noise of them was finished it left no clear recollection of beginning or end, only of immensity. The sound filled the valleys and echoed in sustained volleys from the hillsides.

"I didn't know of course what the target was but it wasn't necessary. It was satisfyingly certain that some place in enemy territory was in for it in a big way — in for such a concentrated dose of destruction as this scarred and gashed London never knew in the worst days of the Blitz. It turned out from the next day's communique that the target had been in the Ruhr again. Also the communique told of our losses that night. The figure did not seem disproportionate, but I know that some of the lads who passed so close in the darkness were going that way for the last time. But I don't think that anyone who heard it could forget the triumphant voice of their passing."

Secret of Success

Mrs. Wade is a successful historian. For over thirty years she has been writing the history of the Big Chute — and getting this history published, too. Another feature that puts her ahead of some historians is that a good many people read every word she writes. And they like to read her history: this sends her away out in front of many much more erudite historians, whom people read only because they think they should.

Around the Big Chute, which is not big at all, but only a very small village, nobody thinks of Mrs. Wade as being an historian. They take her for granted as a wife and mother who makes good potato pies. It is well known of course that once a week she turns in a handful of "personals" that appear in the newspaper of the nearby town under the heading of Big Chute News. Everybody in the village, who is old enough to see, gives close attention to the half-column of Big Chute News sometime during the week, although they don't all subscribe to the paper, copies of which circulate on fairly definite schedules from one house to another.

In Canada there are over five thousand historians like Mrs. Wade, although not all so good. They are the district correspondents to the weekly and smaller daily newspapers. Unknown outside their districts and not recognized in their districts as historians, these people have what every ambitious author longs for — an absolutely loyal following of readers. As a class the historians of the "personals" stand in the very first rank, according to surveys of who reads what in the newspapers. They have the secret of literary success: they write about their readers.

Mr. Bracken and Mr. King

Mr. Bracken, Progressive Conservative leader, having told a Toronto audience that the Government's manpower policy is "prompted by political cowardice", Prime Minister King rose on Monday to say to Parliament:

> "Had Mr. Bracken . . . been a member of the House of Commons I should today immediately have asked you, Mr. Speaker, to see that Mr. Bracken was obliged immediately to withdraw his charge of political cowardice."

Which is the complete justification for Mr. Bracken having said what he did say where he said it. For if Mr. King proposes to regard himself and his Government as "lese majeste" in the matter of criticism and to use the power of his majority to stifle it in Parliament, then it is time somebody spoke the truth outside Parliament.

And it should be possible to say in Parliament what Mr. Bracken did say. What Mr. Bracken's words implied is that in the matter of manpower the Government refrained from doing the right thing through fear of its political consequences. If it is not possible to say that in Parliament then our whole system of an opposition party in the House of Commons has come to a pitiful decay.

Mr. King is a student of British parliamentary history. If he will read that history over again, read the debates from the days of Pitt and Fox and Burke down through the days of Canning and Peel and Disraeli and Gladstone, and on through the days of Asquith and Lloyd George and Balfour and Churchill, he will see that British parliamentary government has not been carried on by weasel words, nor made what it is by men who were afraid to utter conviction with language of force.

"Political cowardice"? If these words be unparliamentary, if it be no longer possible to utter them against a party and Government which has elevated political party expediency almost to the level of a principle, then we may as well close up Parliament altogether and declare that our democracy has died of anaemia.

As it is, the evil of our democracy at this moment, the thing that threatens Parliament, is the loss in the House of Commons of more of the hard steel in criticism. The Government has been given too much of leeway; to much of praise where it should have had condemnation — has been let off without audit of its acts and policies where examination could have brought only condemnation.

So we hope that Mr. Bracken repeats his phrase; and hope also that he will make his way to the House of Commons and repeat it there — if it still be necessary to do so. Visionary swords and shadow-boxing and make-believe have no place in our way of government. Not any more than little Hitlers have. —Ottawa Journal

A WEEKLY EDITOR LOOKS AT Ottawa

Written specially for the weekly newspapers of Canada

By Jim Greenblat

This introduces, from the nation's capital, a new series of weekly letters, designed exclusively for community papers of Canada and that vast audience of readers which never gets out to a night club. For the rancher, farmer, fruit grower, miner; the semi-urban and rural people whose feet are directly and indirectly rooted in the soil of Canada.

Your own editor among others has been annoyed to high heaven with the flood of material which comes from Ottawa much of which he cannot use. Like you he's a busy person running that old paper you think so much of, whether you agree with him on politics or not. He knows you would be interested in a quick catch-up on government doings and what's what around Ottawa after you come in from chores at night. He also knows you do not relish long winded reading after a hard day's work. And this week-feature, for your editor's sake and especially you, I hope will find the bill.

The Wartime Information Board has been made aware that readers of weekly papers are entitled to something in their own language from Ottawa, and so, accepting this assignment it would be interesting to get your collective reaction through your editor.

If you have any particular problem which has its anchor in Ottawa, and you want to know what makes it tick, feel free to drop a line to this column. Maybe it can be interpreted for you. Possibly there are thousands others who want to know about the same thing. But it would be better if none of us get too personal or too political. We'll leave that sort of thing to the politicians.

This column to justify itself should be a national mirror for the home town. I don't suppose you are much interested in the fact that Ottawa looks really beautiful this time of year. So is your own place out east and west. But you might like, occasionally, to hear of strange people, strange faces, strange ideas, all of which makes Ottawa so intriging even if you have to stand in line to eat.

There could be little sidelights, like seeing the Soviet fliers recently; the fellows who flew from Moscow to Ottawa — just like that. I watched them in the hotel lobby, in black knee length boots, loose fitting tunics, rakish forage caps; smart earnest looking fellows who looked as if they had a mission in life. Undoubtedly their killing Germans. They were watching the smartly dressed girls in and out of uniforms; men of our armed forces, civilians and seemed to be measuring the standards of democracy as against Communism. I got a kick out of watching them eye the well filled cigar stand, the jammed hotel cafe.

Well, that's part of Ottawa. A little of this, a little of that about government activities, legislation, Parliament, none of it too wearying — but informative.

Just recently I heard Hon. Humphrey Mitchell in the House of Commons justify the government's manpower policy. When he said that 5,100,000 men and women out of a total population of 8,720,000 aged 14 years and over were in the armed forces or at work, this on the face of it speaks mighty well for Canada at war. The Opposition calls it a "muddle". Well, after listening in on the debates for weeks on end, it becomes increasingly clear that Canadians have got to think and interpret for themselves a little, too. We'll try to unravel things if possible, always keeping in perspective the national picture and that millions of others have problems and ideas, too.

Letters in from editors all over Canada relative to this new service reveal that people in Canada are pondering these days and want to take the works of the clock apart themselves. One editor suggests we dig with both hands into a Health Insurance measure now pending which he claims would be foisted on us by a medical monopoly, and which in its present form would cost the people plenty.

A Manitoba editor wants, "in simple language enlightenment on matters pertaining to farmers and the farming communities" and also "of what benefit will the post war reconstruction schemes be to the farmer."

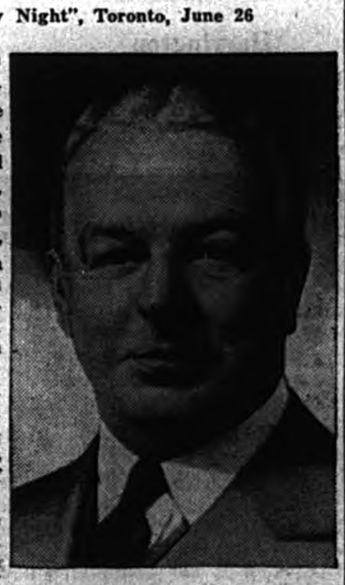

That seems to be our "simple task" in this weekly news letter. Your must not expect miracles of reporting. Time, experience in digging out the essential facts and developing a continuity of understanding of what you might be interested in out here will follow. Undoubtedly you want facts, and an authentic, unbiased and interpretive slant at Ottawa, dished out as if your own worried-looking editor was here doing it.

A Man of Many Interests

WITH STAKE IN ARGENTEUIL FOR LIGHTER MOMENTS, JOHN IRWIN'S ENTHUSIASM IN ALBERTA OIL IS CONCERN OF NATIONAL IMPORTANCE

—Article from "Saturday Night", Toronto, June 26

Recently when the Dominion Government went into the oil business by undertaking to finance the commercial possibilities of the recovery of oil from the famed Athabasca tar sands at McMurray, Alberta, it was not surprising to those acquainted with John Irwin, of Montreal, to learn he had been named President of Abasand Oils Limited. As an associate remarked at the time, "If there's oil in them thar tar sands, John Irwin will get it out."

Mr. Irwin is perhaps best known to most Canadians as the energetic President of Canadian Oil Companies Limited. He is, however, equally at home in a variety of other fields. As President of both McArthur - Irwin, Limited, and the Crown Diamond Paint Co. Limited, he is recognized as a leading figure in the paint industry. As head of Irwin Dyestuff Corporation Limited, his technical knowledge of that subject would assure him close attention at any gathering of color chemists.

Born of Irish Presbyterian parents in Kingston, Ontario, 62 years ago, Mr. Irwin possesses the Irish gift for an apt phrase and a friendly manner which immediately puts others at ease. When talking to Celtic friends, Colonel Bill O'Brien and Clary McKenna, an indefinable turn of expression or a hint of Irish brogue would make a stranger wonder how long it was since he came over from the "ould sod."

John Irwin's versatility and broad background reveal themselves in many ways. A stenographer as a youth in Kingston with the firm of E. Chown & Son, he still makes notes of telephone conservations in shorthand. The ease with which he absorbs the vital elements of a legal document in a fraction of the time required by the average business man is the result of his association for a number of years, still as a stenographer, with the well-known Montreal legal firm of McGibbon, Casgrain, Ryan and Mitchell. Six years later he struck out for himself, when he had the opportunity of purchasing the old established paint firm of McArthur, Corneille (now known as McArthur-Irwin Limited.)

Despite his many-sided interests, Mr. Irwin is primarily an oil man. The McColl-Frontenac Oil Company was largely his creation. He started it with a small refinery unit in Montreal. When control of McColl passed to the Texaco Company, he returned to the oil business in 1939 as President of Canadian Oil.

Without doubt, John Irwin's forward-looking mind is already busy visualizing the great benefits which may accrue to Canada through the development of her Northwestern tar sands. Certainly his familiarity with technical problems and his capacity for coping with difficulties of this kind will be needed in his new undertaking. There are those who consider those same tar sands as a kind of financial quicksands, with everything going in and nothing coming out. . . . To date approximately $1,000,000 has been expended on this project under private enterprise . . . with only negligible results. This time the Government is putting up an initial appropriation of $500,000, and has entered into an agreement with Abasand Oils whereby its present plant is to be rehabilitated and operated on behalf of the Government. Mr. Irwin's appointment is Mr. Howe's method of implementing the statement he made at that time: "We have reinforced the management with some of the best men we can lay our hands on."

"His terms are unconditional surrender!"

A little boy in school refused to sew, thinking it beneath the dignity of a ten year old man.

"George Washington sewed," said the principal, "taking it for granted that a soldier must; and do you consider yourself better than George Washington?"

"I don't know; time will tell," said the boy seriously.

Tramp — Lady, I'm a sick man. A nice doctor gave me some medicine and I would like to ask you to give me somethin' to take it with.

Lady — You would like a spoon and a glass of water, I suppose?"

Tramp — No, mum; not that. The doctor said I was to take the medicine after meals, an' I thought you might contribute the meal.

BRIDGE STREET STATION RECALLS RAIL HISTORY

Montreal — "Bridge Street" is a new station name appearing in time tables of the C.N.R. consequent on the inauguration of the Central Station on July 14 next. LET'S ALL DO MORE TO WIN THE WAR

BEFORE THE WAR: Smiling Jimmy Burke delivered groceries. He had ideas about owning a grocery store of his own some day.

TODAY: Grim Pilot Officer Burke is still serving you as he delivers bombs over Germany.

THE MORE WE'RE IN IT THE QUICKER WE'LL WIN IT!

Jimmy, and thousands of others, have given up their fondest dreams to go to war. We, at home, must do everything we can to back them up. There are many things we can do — and one thing is to do without. Don't buy anything unless it's absolutely essential. Use it up. Wear it out. Don't waste. Buy Victory Bonds and War Savings Certificates. Let's all do our share.

SOLDIER of the SOIL

THIS year the Canadian Farmer urgently needs help. He needs your help to produce the food so necessary for victory. Many thousands of farm workers are serving in the Forces, so that the farmer —the Soldier of the Soil—is shorthanded, but shorthanded as he is, he is called upon to produce more food than ever before. Food is one of the most powerful weapons of war. Grains, bacon, dairy products, eggs, beef, fruit, vegetables—FOOD to feed our armies, our allies and our people we must have.

WHAT CAN YOU DO?

You may be a school teacher, student, business or professional man, an office or store clerk—no matter what you are, if you have a few hours, days, weeks, or months of free time this summer, you can do your country and the farmer a great and patriotic service by helping out on the farm. You may be inexperienced, but you still can help. You will find work on the farm healthy and congenial. It will give you the satisfaction of feeling that you have brought Victory nearer.

What you should do NOW!

Consult any special local committee or office established to deal with farm labour placements in your city or town; or Write the Director of the Dominion-Provincial Farm Labour Program at the Capital of your province; or

At the Allied Grand Strategy Conference in North Africa

The most momentous conference of this war began on January 14, 1943, near Casablanca, when President Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill met to survey the entire field of the war, theatre by theatre. They were accompanied by the Chiefs of Staff of the two countries. All resources were marshalled for the offensive campaign of 1943. Mr. Roosevelt later described the conference as the "unconditional surrender" meetings, meaning that unconditional surrender of the Axis powers was the only assurance of future world peace. . . . Principal and Teacher Wed at Pointe Claire

Perkins - Aitchison

A very quiet wedding took place at St. John the Baptist Anglican Church in Pointe Claire on the afternoon of July 3, when Mrs. Irene Henrietta Aitchison, of Cowansville, Que., was united in marriage to Mr. Lester Ray Perkins, of Morin Heights, Que.

The ceremony, a double ring service, was performed by the Rev. Canon H. Coffin, of Pointe Claire. The altar and chancel of the church were decorated with blue delphinium and mock orange blossoms.

The bride wore an afternoon gown of aqua blue crepe, a white turban with midnight-blue veil, white accessories and carried a bouquet of marguerites. She was attended by her daughter, little Miss Joan Aitchison, who was dressed in cream-colored crepe with a wide Leghorn hat trimmed with blue velvet streamers, and carried a nosegay of blue, white and yellow flowers.

The bride was given away by her uncle, Mr. Stephen H. Wiggett, of Pointe Claire. Mr. Reginald Wiggett, of Montreal, was best man for Mr. Perkins.

Following the ceremony the Misses Isabelle and Clare Wiggett entertained the wedding party at an informal reception at their home, on Cedar Avenue, which was tastefully decorated with summer flowers.

The bride, the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. W. R. Aldrich, of Pittsfield, Mass., graduated from Bishop's College, and is a school teacher, formerly on the staff of the Heroes Memorial High School at Cowansville, Que. The bridegroom, elder son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Fred George Perkins, attended the University of New Hampshire. He is the principal of the Sawyerville High School, where Mrs. Perkins will also be teaching during the coming year.

Mr. and Mrs. Perkins will be at home in Sawyerville after July 15.

By Jessie Allen Brown

THE LOOMCROFTERS

Miss Lawrence and Miss Jenkins have established the Loomcrofters to make and to market handicrafts in New Brunswick. During the depression years the N.B. Government established classes in handicrafts, weaving among them. These women were two of the teachers. They felt very strongly that teaching them was not enough, and that there should be a means for these accomplished weavers to the girls who were good weavers, and gave further training to others whose work was not of the high standard required. They market their products under the name of Loomcrofters. Any of you who have seen it know what fine work it is. They are in a very interesting old house and their work-shop or studio is in an old mill. These women are to be admired for having the initiative to see an opportunity and the courage to go ahead.

THE R.C.A.F. TARTAN

Many of you have heard the R.C.A.F. Pipe Band from Centralia, Ont., which has accompanied the Women's Precision Squad. If so, you must have admired the tartan of their kilts. It was designed and made in Gagetown, New Brunswick. Miss Margaret Lawrence and Miss Patricia Jenkins, of the Loomcrofters are responsible for it. The design has been an azure and navy blue background, crossbarred with cardinal. It has been accepted by the Air Council as the official Air Force tartan, and is registered in the archives of the Court of Lord Lyon, in Edinburg, the official repository of the weaves of Scottish clans. So far the Centralia band is the only R.C.A.F. Pipe Band, but it is expected other Air Force Kiltie bands may come in to being, and will use this unique and most attractive tartan.

MEAT RATIONING

How are you managing with your meat rationing? Have you enough coupons? Most people seem to be doing nicely, although there are some who are finding it difficult. Personally, we have more than enough at present. Enough to have a bit of bacon occasionally for breakfast. Perhaps the Maritimers will not find the meat rationing as much of a burden as some other parts of the country, because of the fish that we can buy. We always have fish once a week, and frequently oftener. Meat rationing or no meat rationing, we would have it oftener than that now because the salmon is in season. And what salmon! ! The Saint John People claim the Saint John Harbor salmon is the best of them all, and I believe they are right. They are not such large fish and are not so course as some others. If you cannot get fresh fish, how about having salt cod occasionally. Fish cakes go well with vegetables and make a hearty dinner out of what have had to be a vegetable one. I was at a large meat counter the other day and had to wait my turn, which took some time. I could not help noticing that the young women knew the values of their coupons and did their buying quickly. Whereas the women who had been housekeeping for a longer time had difficulty and slowed up the buying time considerably. Know what you want and decide on alternatives before you start to buy.

WHIPPED CREAM

There are some desserts that just seem to need whipped cream to make them right. The light cream which we get will whip fairly stiff, if it is two or three days old, but it will not stand up, and some of it quickly runs back. It is a nuisance to have to whip cream just the very minute it is to be used, so I whip it when convenient and put it in the frezing tray. In our refrigerator the second tray from the bottom is the one to use. It freezes lightly but that does not hurt it any, and it is better than runny whipped cream.

VEGETABLE SALAD

2 Cups diced cucumbers, 1 cup sliced radishes, 2 diced tomatoes, ¼ cup sliced green onions, 4 cups leaf lettuce, cut in pieces.

Toss ingredients lightly with salad dressing.

JELLIED VEAL

Cover two shanks of veal with water, bring to the boil, and simmer until tender, probably about three hours. Add salt, and pepper and an onion for seasoning, during the cooking. The meat should be tender enough to fall off the bones. Let stand in the water until cool enough to handle. Take the meat from the bones, discarding any fat or gristle. You may leave the meat in small pieces or put it through the grinder, whichever you prefer. Put the meat loosely in to moulds, either a large one or individual ones, strain the liquid and pour it over the meat until the mould is filled. Do not worry about it jellying as the bones have so much gelatine, it never fails. Use the bones for soup, and if you want to serve a jellied soup on a hot day, even this second boiling of the bones, will jell. This meat recipe is easy on the meat coupons. Hurrah!

Star Recipe

By Betty Barclay

Star recipe for this month is a pudding recipe — one that may be made even by the cook whose ration coupons are practically all used. And this pudding made almost entirely from unrationed foods will please both the adults and the children. It is economical; it is healthful and it is easy to prepare. That brings it pretty close to one hundred per cent perfect.

Cereal Pudding

3 Tablespoons flour, ⅛ teaspoon salt, 2 cups milk, ¼ cup honey, 2 eggs, beaten until thick and fluffy, 1 tablespoon butter, 1 teaspoon vanilla, ½ cup Grape-Nuts.

Combine flour and salt in top of double boiler; add milk gradually, stirring until smooth. Add honey and blend. Cook and stir over boiling water 8 minutes. Pour small amount of mixture over eggs, stirring vigorously; return to double boiler and cook 2 minutes longer. Remove from fire; add butter and vanilla. Cool. Add cereal. Chill. Serves 6 to 8.

Tips to Mothers for Baby's Summer Diets

Mothers who fret about their babies' temperamental eating habits during the hot months, are to get a few tips this week from Dr. Gwen Mulock, CBC broadcaster on problems of health. The doctor speaks on alternate Mondays over the National Network in the series, "The Perils of Junior."

On Monday, July 19, at 4.18 p.m. EDT, her subject is "Junior's Baby Food." The broadcast will map out a suitable food chart, designed to take care of the baby's loud objections to his meals, before he gets time to think them up.

Dr. Mulock's simple directions to mothers, as broadcast in this series, are arranged to cover every aspect of child raising.

CANADA NEEDS MORE NURSES

For over a year a well planned nation-wide campaign for increased recruitment to schools of nursing has been carried out through publicity committees within the nine provincial associations of registered nurses. An increase of approximately three hundred students is recorded in Quebec, but the Quebec Association feels that one thousand must be its objective.

The field of nursing offers rich opportunity for young women with High School or college education to prove their mettle. Nurses play an important part in the present fight to preserve our freedom. They help to keep our fighting forces fit, and to keep men and women in industry well. They help to restore the sick to health and to safeguard communities against epidemics. They help mothers bring their babies safely into the world and teach them how to care for their children so they will grow into strong men and women, healthy in body and mind.

Student nurses today — the registered nurses of tomorrow — have enviable opportunities. They are serving, and so helping to win this war, while learning to become professional nurses. Their care of patients in hospitals connected with nursing schools is an essential service in a program of total defence in which the health of civilians is as important as that of the military forces.

For those young women between the ages of 18 and 35 years who desire further information on the subject, the headquarters of the Association of Registered Nurses of the Province of Quebec, situated in Suite 1012, Medical Arts Building, 1538 Sherbrooke Street West, Montreal, is ready to furnish such data either through personal interview or by mail.

Bursaries, too, are available for potential students in nursing through the Youth Training Plan to which the Federal and Provincial Governments subscribe, and are available in two groups of persons, namely (1) candidates who would be admitted to an approved school of nursing upon successful completion of the fourth year of high school, and (2) those who possess all the necessary qualifications for admission to an approved school of nursing but require financial assistance to undertake the three-year course. Candidates for those government bursaries must be British subjects who have resided in Quebec during the past five years. There are seven approved schools of nursing in Quebec conducted in the English language, namely — Sherbrooke Hospital, Sherbrooke; the Jeffery Hale Hospital, Quebec City; the Montreal General Hospital, Royal Victoria Hospital, Homoeopathic Hospital, Women's General Hospital, St. Mary's Hospital, Montreal; and 27 in the French language, the Association of Registered Nurses of the Province of Quebec conducts its affairs in both languages.

HOME COMMANDOS BOOST NUTRITION ON FAMILY FRONT

Many Canadian Towns and Other Centres Have Been Organized to Get Best Out of Food for Happy, Healthful Life

By ADINE SEAGRAM, Canadian Press Staff Writer

An ugly word not so long ago, "nutrition" had a vague, distasteful meaning for many Canadian housewives and was associated with diets and scientific jargon. But now Canadian homemakers are beginning to realize that on such words as home economics and dietitics rests the whole future of happy home life.

They not only realize it but they are rallying under the new banner. They are beginning now to build the foundation of post-war home life. They know that food and happiness cannot be divorced: that adequate and proper food results in health, and indirectly in happiness.

"Nutrition Services" was organized shortly after the beginning of this Second Great War. It set up a program and soon seven provincial committees were formed. And in the provinces, in the towns and villages, in each community, small groups of women who valued home life and were dismayed to see the disintegrating effects of war on it, banded together. They are soldiers on active service in the Home Regiment!

Work in Towns

What did they do? At the national meeting of the Canadian Home Economics Association in Toronto, Miss Frances McKay, holder of the Swift Foundation Fellowship in Applied Nutrition, told with enthusiasm the achievements of these people. Miss McKay, who is from Winnipeg, travelled across Canada last winter giving her services to any such groups of women who wished assistance.

Each community formed a committee which outlined a program. One small town in Western Canada carried out a project in the schools called "Nutrition Week" during which the children were taught what kind of food was necessary for well-being and how and why such food contributed to health. At the same time, this town put forth a project for women on lunch boxes. All the mothers and wives could learn how to pack a "Victory lunchbox" which would be appetizing and also contain the proper vitamins for their school children and for their men in industry.

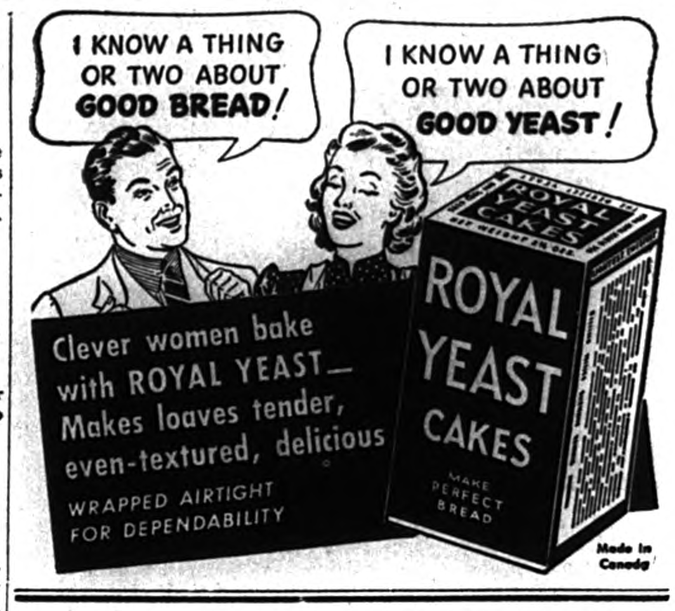

In an Eastern Community, a committee divided the town into sectors and zones and appointed captains to supervise them. The program they followed began with Victory Gardens, then demonstrated the proper methods of cookery, and finally gave pointers on canning.

Other districts had programs which included newspaper articles, radio talks, a nutrition campaign for "Victory meals in Restaurants", courses of assistance for young brides, and lectures which explained in everyday language the story of nutrition.

Conserving Food

These women contribute in multiple ways to the war effort. They actually conserve food since the educational programs teach housewives how to get the most possible value from their food; they teach homemakers how to plan proper menus which result in healthier bodies for those actually engaged in essential work; each woman benefits from the knowledge of the rest; they are training the homemakers of tomorrow, and they are creating an interest and enthusiasm for this most important of all jobs — the making of a home.

They were not graduated home economists; sometimes there was one in the community, but just as often not, and the coming year will see many more Canadian women together in this work.

FASHION DRESSES FROM OLD SHEETS

There's a Use for Everything These War Times, It Seems.

By DOROTHY ROE

If women have to take the sheets off their beds, they'll still be well-dressed, come what may.

It's downright amazing what you can do with an old sheet that has been mustered out of active service for general debility, if you put your mind to it.

The newest conservation wrinkle being taught at sewing centres in various parts is sheet salvage. If a sheet is worn threadbare in the middle, you can still count on odd pieces from the unworn sections to make crisp dickies and collar-and-cuff sets for summer dresses and suits. A quick-tinting job will transform the original white to engaging confection colors such as candy pink, leaf green or sky blue.

Aprons Too

If you find larger unworn sections along the ends and edges of your old sheets, you can run up a pinafore for little Mary or an apron for yourself in practically no time. Old sheets also provide good material for children's underwear.

After you've started, you'll find all kinds of uses to make of your old linens, aided and abetted by scraps from the ragbag to form contrasting pipings and such. Pillowcase ends lend themselves admirably to making starched bows for trimming a pillbox or a vestee. A worn-out sheet can provide you with a flattering gilet for a two-piece dress.

At the end of May, workers and residents of the County of London had contributed $3,267,840.00 to the Red Cross Penny-A-Week Fund.

TEACHES FLIERS ON LINK TRAINER

Even Veterans Take Instruction from Woman Expert in Blind Flying

Edmonton, July 12 (CP) — Miss Margaret Littlewood, 26, and air-minded, can claim a most unusual career among women, and one that's highly important in wartime. She's Canada's only woman Link Trainer instructor.

Miss Littlewood is a flier herself with 1,000 hours to her credit. At the outbreak of war she was instructing at a flying school at Toronto but the school closed down. She wrote Capt. "Wop" May, famed bush pilot and civilian manager of Canadian Airways Training Limited, at No. 2 Air Observers School here for a chance as a link instructor. She got her chance and after long hours of practice she was given her certificate by the Air Force after passing a rigid examination.

Now she watches as R.C.A.F. pilots and those on loan to the school from the Air Force take their "link" instruction on the machine that reveals on paper the pilot's mistakes during instrument flying. Any number of weather conditions can be simulated on the "Link".

Even such veteran flyers as Grant McConachie, North Sawle and H. Hollock-Kenyon have taken instruction from the girl Link Trainer operator because they realize the importance of practice in blind flying.

Stamp Out the U Boat ! Shoppers, Here's Your Chance

From officials of the Argenteuil Legion who are promoting the current War Savings campaign — with depth charges as its objective and "Stamp-Out-the-U-Boat" as its theme — it is learned the local response to date has been disappointing. The purchase of War Savings stamps and certificates must be continued regardless of major appeals and campaigns, for this is a constant source of national financing and should, similarly, provide a steady avenue for investment in Victory by the average citizen. The method may be regarded as a personal aid to thrift, for opportunity is presented to invest in savings — here and there, today and tomorrow — as often as the pocketbook permits. These investments, mounting steadily, will accumulate to appreciable sums, and will fill their purpose as a constant stream to carry on the war effort.

In most of the local stores, and in Brownsburg where the Legion is also sponsoring this drive, cards are prominently displayed to remind shoppers of their duty in this matter, and citizens are urged to back the drive in a manner creditable to the community.

of Commons membership on the basis of the 1941 census. Mr. Duplessis said in his telegram that he trusted that the Westminster Parliament will be adamant in refusing to sanction a move which would prove to be a violation of provincial rights in Canada."

Inspect Highway

Early in the week, Mr. Bouchard took members of the Legislature's Press Gallery on a tour of the $18,000,000 Sir Wilfrid Laurier Highway which will connect Quebec with Montreal and the State of New York. Mr. Bouchard said that the highway will be the "greatest" on the continent and will be the longest six-lane highway in America. Work on the highway is expected to be completed this year.

Hon. Wilfrid Hamel, Minister of Lands and Forests, presided at the first meeting of a committee appointed to study post-war problems of the forest industry. The meeting was private and no announcement was made following it.

However, during the week Mr. Hamel told newsmen that the firewood situation in the province may become so critical that householders would be well advised to put in their supply as early as possible.

The minister also made an appeal to the people to show the same "vigilance and care in protecting forests as in warding off fire from one's home." More than 100,000 men are employed in Quebec forests, he said, and they earn about $35,000,000 annually. "This clearly shows how vital and important is the protection of our forests."

ELEMENTS WOULD ORGANIZE PROTEST FROM QUEBEC ON POSTPONED REDISTRIBUTION

Keynote of Contentions by Duplessis Opposition Leader, at Political Meet

Urge Emissary Be Sent to London, and Defy Prime Minister to Prevent Him

By D'ARCY O'CONNELL,
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Quebec, July 21 (CP) — Protests against postponement of redistribution of House of Commons membership until after the war highlighted political news in the province during the week.

Maurice Duplessis, leader of the Union Nationale opposition in the Legislature, and Maxime Raymond, leader of the Bloc Populaire party and member of the House of Commons for Beauharnois-Laprairie, made public protests. A protest made by Premier Godbout in a letter June 22 to Prime Minister Mackenzie King was made public in the Canadian Senate.

Mr. Duplessis made his protest at a meeting in St. Lin, the birthplace of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. He said that the Prime Minister was attempting to deprive the province of "fundamental rights" when he asked the British Parliament to amend the British North America Act so that redistribution could be postponed until after the war. The redistribution would be made according to the 1941 census and Quebec would be entitled to a higher proportion of seats. The province now has 65 seats out of 245 in the House of Commons.

The Premier also said that any intervention by the Parliament of Great Britain in the internal affairs of the Dominion "would be the negation of Canada's equality of status with the United Kingdom."

Soon after Mr. Duplessis' meeting, Mr. Raymond in a prepared statement called on some non-political organization to "take the lead in collecting protests" against postponement of redistribution.

Mr. Raymond said that the postponement "especially harms the interests of Quebec," and suggested that after all protests had been collected, "an emissary be sent to London to deposit the protest of the Province of Quebec."

"This emissary would not ask the Imperial Parliament to regulate our domestic problems," he added. "On the contrary, he would point out that because of the opposition of Quebec, it has not the right to uphold by its vote the decision taken by Ottawa. We will not make it the judge of our affairs; on the contrary, we will tell it that it has not the capacity of judging.

"If unanimity is realized on this project, we defy Mr. King to try to prevent our emissary from reaching London."

Mr. Raymond said that some organization without political affiliation, such as the St. Jean Baptiste Society or La Ligue pour la Défense du Canada, should collect the protests expressed by political, civic and professional leaders in Quebec.

Speaking at a political rally, Mr. Duplessis said that if the British Parliament accepted Mr. King's proposal it would be "accomplishing a dishonoring and dishonorable act." He said he was beginning a tour of the province to protest against the "pretentions" of Mr. King that the parliament of Canada could decide by itself when amendments to the constitution should be sought.

The Fathers of Confederation and British parliamentarians at the time, he said, had looked upon the B.N.A. Act as a pact between provinces. Therefore Mr. King had no right to assume that the will of the majority in Canadian parliament was sufficient ground to ask for an amendment.

He said that the King proposal was part of an attack on provincial autonomy and he charged Premier Godbout with cowardice in dealing with Ottawa on federal-provincial relations.

Several days prior to the meeting, Mr. King released in Ottawa the text of a letter to Mr. Duplessis in which he refused the opposition leader's request that his protest against the postponement be transmitted to Prime Minister Churchill.

Mr. King said it was true that it was still legally necessary to ask the British Parliament to amend the B.N.A. Act to make the postponement possible, but that situation "is acceptable only so long as such amendments are made automatically and without question on the request of the appropriate representatives of the Canadian people."

Meantime, it was revealed in the Canadian Senate that Premier Godbout wrote Prime Minister King June 22 to protest against the postponement.

"This decennial readjustment is an essential part of the compact between the provinces out of which arose the Canadian Confederation, and therefore, the British North America Act cannot properly be amended without the assent of the provinces," he wrote.

"Of course these are trying times, but I strongly feel that this is rather a reason in favor of scrupulous adherence to the constitution; Canadian unity cannot fail to be imperilled if this province is not given a proportional representation in the House of Commons at a time when, unfortunately, the majority of its people happen to hold on some national issues views different from those of the majority in other provinces."

In replying to the Premier, Mr. King said that the government's plan to postpone redistribution was only temporary and that it "in no way prejudices the ultimate constitutional rights or position of the electors in any of the provinces of Canada."

STAMP-O-GRAM DEADLINE DATE END OF JULY

Potential Depth Charges on Sale at Several Local Stores and Banks

VETERANS BACK CAMPAIGN TO FILL STICKER SPACES

Local merchants collaborating with the Argenteuil Legion B.E.S.L. in the Stamp-Out-the-U-Boat campaign, are boosting the sale of war savings stamps in order to have their Stamp-O-Gram display cards completed before the end of the month, when the drive terminates.

The stickers filling squares on these cards represent a total investment of $90 — this being the purchase price of a depth charge. These weapons of sea warfare are proving a potent force in combatting the U-Boat menace, and it is because of their effective record they were chosen as the theme for the current war savings campaign. The Argenteuil Legion, and the Brownsburg branch of that organization, are urging strong support from the public, to complete all cards displayed and to acquit the two communities with whole-hearted participation. The purchase of four 25c stamps entitles the purchaser to one of these stickers; each bearing a subtle message, and the cards provide space for 90 stickers.

In Lachute these posters may be seen, and war savings stamps may be purchased, at the following stores: John McFaul & Son, H. M. Lavigne, T. McOuat & Son, Campbell Reg'd. Cottingham Supply Company, also the local Banks. The numbers of sales recorded in each case show that the campaign is moving ahead more favorably.

Where more men per job are needed, the answer easily may be more job per man.

BROWNSBURG TO LINK WITH LACHUTE FOR SUCCESS OF LOCAL BLOOD DONOR CLINIC

Effort Organized by Lions Club and Red Cross, Becomes District Venture

Technician Approves Arrangements Made For First Clinic Here, on August 9

Representatives from Brownsburg having signified their willingness to link with Lachute in the Red Cross Voluntary Blood Donor Service — this enterprise now becomes a community work in which a wider area will participate. Many willing helpers are now completing plans for the first Clinic to be held here, August 9 at Lachute Auditorium basement — which will see the realization of a plan suggested some months ago by the Lions Club.

Technician Pays Visit

With the mobile unit from Montreal Red Cross headquarters, Mrs. K. E. Hubley, R.N., blood clinic technician, visited the community Tuesday, to inspect the local facilities and to approve arrangements. She expressed keen satisfaction with everything that had been achieved to date.

Personal Canvass Not Possible

Details of this work, and of the donor's part, are now generally well-known, but for any who are doubtful on certain points, full information is available from the committees or persons listed in this week's appeal, page five.

It is stressed by the organizers, however, that as the personnel engaged on this activity is limited, it is not possible to call personally on on each prospective volunteer. Those willing to give blood donations are therefore urged to give their names or come forward and sign the cards provided for this purpose, in readiness to be summoned to the first clinic.

It is stated that attendance at one clinic does not oblige the volunteer to give further donations if he, or she, does not so wish. After giving three blood donations, the volunteer receives a bronze button, and after six donations a silver-button. In established centres these buttons are worn with considerable pride by men and women in all walks of life, who have given the valuable contributions of their blood to save others on the fighting fronts.

The requirements of a volunteer are simple — reasonable health, and age between the limits of 18 and 65 years. The donor is also required to observe a certain care in the diet for six hours prior to attending the clinic. A card is mailed to the volunteer regarding this need to abstain from fatty foods, which otherwise would render the blood plasma greasy and insoluble.

Brownsburg Red Cross Ladies Find Billets for Men on Leave

Some, From Britain, Get First Taste of Canadian Hospitality

A FINE GESTURE TO YOUNG MEN ON SERVICE

Brownsburg, July 21 —

Along the "home front" the women of Brownsburg have cause to feel proud of their contribution to the war effort.

Added to the work that they have been constantly doing, the local branch of the Red Cross Society has set up a billeting service that provides lodging for men in the Armed Forces who spend a night or two in the town. Two ladies from the Red Cross branch spend a few hours each Friday and Saturday at the Recreation Hall, arranging accommodation in homes where a room or two for this purpose has been placed at their disposition. In the past three months scores of letters have gone home across the Atlantic, out to the western provinces and down to the Maritimes, bearing the news that a soldier, a sailor or an air force boy has spent a grand weekend in a place called Brownsburg in the Province of Quebec. These letters tell of kindly folk who open their homes to lonely boys, not only providing sleeping accommodations, but giving them breakfasts and dinners, and a warm welcome in a house where they can chat and lounge and be "at home" for a "48".

The kindness of the Brownsburg residents co-operating in this service is much appreciated. To nobody does it mean more than to the boys from the British Isles who are in the Royal Air Force and training at St. Eugène. On their initial leave in this country many of them head for Brownsburg. It is here that they get their first taste of Canadian hospitality, and from all accounts they are loud in their praise of it.

Milk Output in Quebec Is Higher

Milk production per cow in Quebec is rising. A report of the Provincial Bureau of Statistics shows fewer cows last year (than in 1941) yielding more milk. It is estimated that at June 1, 1942 (1941 figures in brackets) the province had 794,000 (817,300) milk cows and that milk production for that date was 18,057,900 (17,475,400) pounds.

Keen competition is being experienced by the various tents, and as the second week dawns Tent No. 1 holds the lead with 259 points, while the 3rd tent is not far behind with 251 points. These tents are commanded by Corporal Robert Eastwood and Sgt. James Wright, respectively.

Wednesday was set as the annual sports day, on the farm of Albert Dorion. Boys of the town as well as those from Tyndale Camp were cordially invited to participate. The day was arranged so as to permit sports in the afternoon, commencing at 2.30, and then a general swim for all, followed by picnic supper, and sports in the evening, in the form of a baseball game. A camp-fire program was scheduled for the late evening.

The Camp welcomed a special visit from the Rev. Donald Gordon and the Rev. B. J. Thorpe on Monday. Both gentlemen were much impressed with the Camp and wished it every success.

In the year that war broke out Britain imported more than 1,890,000 tons of paper-making materials. Today her imports are negligible and paper is being made from salvaged paper and sometimes from cotton rags.

Order Insists Landlords Must File Report on Change of Lease

Issue or Renewal Involving Change of Tenant, Rent or Services

NOTES AND NEWS ON PRICE CONTROL

All landlords making or renewing leases, oral or written, after April 25, 1942, if the lease involves a change of tenant, change of rental or change in services, equipment or accommodation supplied by the landlord were required to file form "R.C. 40" by the rentals administration of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. The Board announces that severe penalties are provided for failure to complete and file the form.

Voluntary co-operation is being asked before legal action is taken. "With rentals second only to food in the average Canadian's budget it is vitally important that ceiling levels be maintained", officials stated. "R.C. 40" records the lawful maximum rental as well as the services, equipment and other details which were supplied previously, and also gives particulars of the rental and services provided for in the new or renewed lease.

Imports of English Cotton Fabric Restricted

Imports of Cotton textile fabrics from Great Britain into Canada will be restricted to those necessary for war requirements and special industrial uses according to announcement made simultaneously in England by the Cotton Board and in Canada by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. The announcement states that only those types of fabrics which cannot be supplied on this continent may still be imported.

The import of cotton yarns from the United Kingdom to Canada will be maintained as in past months, it is stated.

No Increase in Butter Ration

Officials of the Foods Administration of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board have repeated the warning issued some weeks ago, that the substantial increases in stocks of creamery butter in storage in Canada, as shown by the figures released by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, does not mean that there can be any increase in the present butter ration allowance.

"There is a false impression that we are building up abnormal stocks of butter", said Kenneth Olive, Administrator of Dairy Products. "The people should thoroughly understand that the increases in stocks in storage are not abnormal."

Not one British warship has been sunk by an Italian surface vessel during the two and a half years since Italy entered the war. It is calculated that by March 1943, the Italian Fleet had lost 10 cruisers, 48 destroyers and a large number of submarines.

Sunday morning, the Brigade paraded to the United Church, where an inspiring message was delivered by the Dominion President, the Rev. C. A. Selby, B.A., L.Th., based on the theme of Christian Living. Capt. J. Howard Richardson presided at the organ and Pte. Wilson McClelland sang "Follow Me, the Master Said", as a solo. The Company paraded under direction of Capt. Howard Keith, of the 5th Montreal Company, and Lieut. Alexander Upham, of the 1st Company.

During the afternoon, inspection was taken by the Rev. C. A. Selby and Capt J. H. Richardson, followed by a general tour of inspection by the parents and visitors. This proved most interesting and the camp was commended on its efficiency and its splendid layout. Light refreshment was served the visitors in the early afternoon, prior to their departure for Montreal.

Sunday evening, the camp held a successful drum-head service on the property of Albert Dorion. This was conducted by the Rev. C. A. Selby, assisted by Capt. J. Howard Richardson, who led in prayer, and Pte. Alistair Riddell, who read the lesson. The evening text was based upon the parable of the Prodigal Son, as applied to camp life. During the service a number of well known gospel hymns were sung, led by Arthur

Lake Property Is Destroyed by Fire

Island Cottage Burned to Ground, at Lake Louisa

Fire of unknown origin destroyed the summer cottage of R. A. Giles at Lake Louisa, in the early hours of Friday, July 16.

Mrs. Giles and her younger son, Bobby, were the only occupants at the time. They were awakened at 2.30 a.m. by the crackling of woodwork in the kitchen downstairs, and by dense smoke. Flames on the stairway blocked their escape and they were obliged to climb through the window onto a porch roof, barefoot and clad only in their night attire. From this point the youngster jumped to the ground, and brought a ladder, which enabled his mother to climb to safety. The flames spread so rapidly that nothing could be saved, and the building burned to the ground.

Lake residents reached the scene some time later, and quenched flames in the surrounding area which threatened a nearby cottage. The properties are situated on an island.

Loss of the Giles residence and contents was only partially covered by insurance.

Preparations for the landing of troops in North Africa involved alterations to over 300 ordinary merchant ships for use as troop carriers, floating work-shops, etc., The work was executed in surprisingly short time and in the utmost secrecy.

Late Jas. Parkes Well Known in Business Circles

James Stowell Parkes, president of the Stowell Screw Co., Ltd., and well-known in Montreal business circles during the past half century, died suddenly Monday morning at his home in Dunany, in his 78th year. The funeral service was held at the Anglican Church at Dunany, Wednesday afternoon, the Rev. C. W. P. Baugh officiating. Interment took place at the Dunany cemetery.

Mr. Parkes was born at Stockport, England, on October 13, 1865, and came to Canada in 1890. He was associated with Guerney, Massey Co., and later with the Page Hersey Co., until in 1913 he formed his own company, the Stowell Screw Co., Ltd., of which he was president until his death. He retired from active business in 1928 and took up his residence at Dunany. Prior to that he was a member of St. James the Apostle Church in Montreal, a member of the Westmount Masonic Lodge, the Westmount Chapter of the Royal Arch Masons and also a member of the Scottish Rite.

He is survived by his wife, formerly Eva B. Allard, of Montreal — the couple were to have celebrated their golden wedding anniversary next month — and two brothers, Harry C. Parkes, of Manchester, England, and Frank O. Parkes, of Como, Que., as well as by several nephews and nieces.

MAN FOUND DEAD NEAR PLANTAGENET

Plantagenet Springs, Ont., July 18 (CP) — The body of 35-year-old Stephen McCusker, farmer of this district near Ottawa, was found about 75 yards from the Canadian Pacific Railway tracks crossing a bridge spanning the Nation River, and officials speculated that he may have been struck by a train.

Coroner Dr. Martin Powers, of nearby Rockland, ordered an inquest for Thursday.

MINISTER OF LABOR DISCUSSES CANADA'S SITUATION IN FUEL

Following are extracts from a radio address given July 14 by the Hon. Humphrey Mitchell, Minister of Labor, over the CBC national network:

Coal Requirements

Our fuel needs, coal particularly, in relation to available supply, affect every Canadian in at least two very important aspects: coal in a very real sense underlies our national war contribution; in this northern climate, blest as we are with a pronounced rotation of seasons, we must protect our people against the rigours of our winter season.

Production of ships, guns, shells, used by our men in Sicily, as well as those provided to our allies by this country, requires coal and we need coal for smelters, blast furnaces, steel mills, railroads and ships to move the finished product. A steady stream of war supplies will not be forthcoming unless we have sufficient coal.

Many of the ships leaving Canada's shores are coal burning. With minor exception, coal moves every train in Canada. In spite of our heavy electrical installations a substantial proportion of our factory power is made from coal. Artificial gas for heating and cooking purposes comes almost wholly from coal. With relatively few exceptions where oil is used (and oil is increasingly difficult to secure) our larger buildings — public buildings, factories, offices — are heated by coal. Most of our homes need coal. I mention this to remind Canadians of the utmost importance of having available a sufficient supply of the black fuel. I now wish to give you some figures to show the problem with which we are faced.

When we speak of coal for industrial purposes — for the production of electric power, the movement of ships and locomotives, the driving of plant machinery, we are referring to bituminous or soft coal.

Last fiscal year Canada used nearly thirty-seven million, four hundred thousand tons of this type of coal. Slighty less than half of this amount was produced in Canada. More than ninteen million, two hundred thousand tons were imported from the United States. In order to keep pace with our expanding war economy during the present fiscal year — which will carry us to March 31, 1944 — it is estimated we will require about four million, one hundred thousand tons more than we used last year. To meet this increased production it is obvious that we must increase our imports of bituminous coal from the United States, or increase our own production, or both.

From the fiscal year, 1940 — 1941 to the fiscal year 1942 — 1943 (that is in a two-year period) we increased our imports from the United States by approximately fifty per cent — to the figure of nineteen million, two hundred thousand tons which I have mentioned. With United States war production constantly expanding, necessitating increased consumption, it would be unduly optimistic to expect any substantial addition to imports from that country this year. We will hope that there may be available to us as much coal from United States sources as we secured last year.

Under these circumstances, we are thrown back on our own resources. We must cut and bring to the surface more coal from our own mines.

While bituminous or steam coal is the coal needed for industrial purposes — a good deal of bituminous is also used for home heating purposes, particularly in the Maritime Provinces, on the Prairies, and in British Columbia.

In central Canada most of the home heating roal is, of course, at the present time, United States anthracite. In this regard we are not too happily situated. Depending entirely on imports for this purpose we are faced with an estimated requirement of five million tons, against imports of four and one-half million tons in the last fiscal year. We may have to find substitutes for some portion of our present anthracite coal consumption.

The production of a greater quantity of coal in Canada depends on: (1) securing more miners, and making them available to the industry. (2) encouraging and helping the minors at present engaged in the coal mines to produce more coal.

I am happy to say that substantial progress has been made in the supply of labor for our coal mines — although nowhere near enough additional workers have been made available to the mines to ensure the production we require. The measures adopted had some effect, but nevertheless by the middle of May this year the situation had become serious. Coal production was decreasing, the number of men employed in the mines was also down. Men had left to join the forces, some to go to other war industries.

In view of the gravity of the situation, the Government on May 17, this year, declared a state of emergency to exist in regard to the production of coal. An Order-in-Council provided certain further measures to stabilize employment in coal, and to increase worging staffs.

The main points are:

First: The rule that coal mine workers could not be dismissed, nor leave mining voluntarily, except under Selective Service Permit, was re-stated.

Second: Present and future coal mine workers were granted postponement of military training to February 1, 1944, by virtue of their occupation.

Third: Ne coal mine worker is to be accepted under voluntary enlistment for services with the armed forces, prior to February 1, 1944.

Fourth: Provision has been made for the compulsory return to the mines of those in other industries who are former coal mine workers.

Fifth: The minimum age of workers in coal mines has been reduced to sixteen years, regardless of any provincial regulation. At the same time authority has been given for the employment of women at the surface of mines.

In spite of the hundreds of men added to coal mine payrolls, there were listed at Employment and Selective Service offices at the end of June vacancies for 3,800 mine workers. It is expected this number and more will be required to increase our production by the necessary four million, one hundred thousand tons. A short while ago we appealed for ex-mine workers, in other industries, to register at the employment offices. Nearly two thousand responded, but unfortunately not all were suitable for return to the mines.

It is the patriotic duty of any man who has the skill and experience to cut coal, to respond to his country's call. He should report without delay to the nearest Employment and Selective Service office. It is a call to really vital work in the national interest.

In the name of the Government of Canada I also ask management and miners to make full use of the conciliation and other services offered for the settlement of employer-employee differences, in ordr to maintain continuous working time.

Our right to have trade unions depends on the outcome of this war. Both sides seriously should consider what is at stake before allowing any dispute to reach a point where time loss will result. Freedom in the future depends on self-discipline now.

Fuel Wood

And now as to fuel wood. . . This is also an important factor in our winter heating problem. Production of wood has fallen off seriously in the course of the past year or two. It must be increased for the same reason as coal. If coal production cannot sufficiently be increased, wood production must take up some of the slack.

Already a government subsidy on the production of fuel wool has ben announced and our Employment and Selective Service Offices are doing their best to provide the necessary labor to cut more wood.

The Government urged industry, farmers and others who are able to cut wood, to do so. Large quantities are needed. I think I have indicated to you that our fuel situation is serious; that Canada urgently needs the help of all concerned.

Your Government asks for cooperation on the part of the public, initiative, hard and constant work, on the part of all now directly connected with the fuel industries. Canadians have met and overcome serious problems before. I am confident we shall do so in regard to fuel. Our boys are doing a good job for us overseas: let us do a good job for them and ourselves here at home.

The fires from Canada's coal may well be fires of victory.

The sound of the axemen's blows in our woods will symbolize the determination of our people to do well the tasks at home.

BUTANE FOR GAS IT'S NEW FUEL

Alberta Car Gets Along Nicely Without Gasoline, but General Use Is Limited

Calgary, July 20 (CP) — There is one car in Calgary that isn't affected by gasoline rationing.

It is a truck operated by the Calgary Natural Gas company and it uses butane, a highly volatile by-product of natural gas, in place of regular gasoline.

The truck has been using this type of fuel since February following a year of experimentation but company officials say the possibilities for its use as a general automobile fuel are limited and it cannot yet be used by motorists generally.

Since the experiment began, the company has received a flood of letters from all parts of the country from motorists asking how they could equip their cars to use butane.

Company officials said numerous pieces of special equipment, such as a pressure tank, pressure tubing, replacement of the carburetor with a special regulator, and special spark plugs are needed to convert a car to use of butane.Most of this equipment is now unavailable because of the war. They said mileage obtained by their butane-operated truck was generally on the same scale as ordinary gasoline on gallonage basis.

An employee of the gas company in Edmonton also experimented with natural gas as an automobile fuel. He used a large, rubber, balloonlike bag as a storage tank. The experiment was successful except that refill was necessary after about eight or ten miles.

The rubber shortage also complicates that type of venture, officials said.

Nowadays everybody has a plan, or is in favor of a plan, or is against a plan. What we need are men able and willing to carry out a plan.

MIGRATION "HOME" WHEN WAR OVER

People Planning Already for Ocean Trips to Old Land

Edmonton, July 20 (CP) — There are a lot of Albertans looking forward to a leisurely steamer trip to the Old Country when the war is over.

That is the word of Ron W. Greene, assistant general agent for Canadian Pacific steamships here and to prove it he has many requests from people seeking reservations "on the first boat crossing the ocean after the war."

Most of the letter-requests begin with: "I know it sounds foolish, but I want to get on the first boat . . . " To all, Mr. Greene has had to say that the company is not taking reservations for such trips at present.

Here's Easiest Way To Fix Plant Lice

Aphids, commonly known as plant lice, attack a wide variety of plants all over Canada. Spraying the plants with 40 per cent Nicotine Sulphate and water, to which has been added a small amount of laundry soap, is the best and easiest method of controlling them. The nicotine should be used at the rate of almost half a pint to 40 gallons of water, with two pounds of soap added. In small amounts, the rate is two teaspoonfuls to a gallon of soapy water. Apply the material on a hot calm day, and drench both the upper and lower surfaces of the leaves so as actually to hit all the insects.

In protecting field crops at least 100 gallons of spray should be used per acre at each application, states the Division of Entomology, Dominion Department of Agriculture. Two or three applications at weekly intervals should give complete control. By purchasing the nicotine in bulk lots, that is, in large containers rather than in a number of small bottles or cans, the cost will be reduced.

SECOND CROPS IN FOODSTUFF FOR "VICTORY"

Advocate Mid-Summer Planting in Some Kitchen Garden Stuff

By ROBERT GEIGER

Town and country cupboards don't resemble Old Lady Hubbard's, thanks to Victory gardeners, but the home front task force will have to place a second crop in the ground this mid-summer for winter storage, say the food experts.

In addition, wet weather brought out such a strong force of insects and burgs the battle of the spray guns will have to continue with unabated energy among the all-season plants.

Agriculture leaders say victory garden planted and producing to till the frost comes. "The most important thing now is to keep the karden planted and producing to the end of the growing season," says one. "There is still time to plant snap beans, sweet corn, squash and Swiss chard where early crops have already been harvested." This applies, they say, in all but the most northern parts of the continent.

The second harvest should be of things that are easily stored, as snap beans.

Succession planting requires the use of commercial fertilizers and careful preparation of the seed beds if the second crop is to get away to a good start in hot weather.

What to Plant

Generally crops should be rotated, so that the leaf crops are followed by root crops and the root by seed or "fruit" crops. As an example lettuce, a quick maturing leaf crop, may be followed by carrots, a root crop that can be stored for winter use.

Pea vines should be spaded under, after the pods are harvested, as they improve the soil and add nourishment for the next crop.

Succession planting requires knowledge of local fall frost dates. The approximate period of growth for each variety of vegetable is known. The gardener reckons his last safe planting dates by estimating the number of days before the first fall frost and then planting varieties that will mature before that date.

Exceptions are the crops that frost does not harm. Parsnips, which require a long growing period, may remain in the ground all winter, for example, and they grow late into the fall; carrots also may remain in the ground for a long time after frost. They are pulled before extremely cold weather sets in; the tops are cut one-half inch from the root and the carrots are stored in a pit or cellar.

Spade the soil at least six inches deep. Rake and pulverize carefully.

Plant seeds according to instructions for each variety. For most crops the soil should be firmed over the seed, by walking carefully down each seed furrow after the seed is placed in trench and covered.

Succession cropping requires commercial fertilizer. A good way to apply fertilizer conservatively is to open a small trench from two to four inches from the seed line; place fertilizer in this trench and cover. Water will carry it to the plants as they grow. Fertilizer should be applied sparingly, according to direction for use with each type of crop.

Give What Money Can't Buy

Support of all physically fit citizens is earnestly solicited in the Red Cross Voluntary Blood Donor Service, corcerning which an appeal is advertised elsewhere in this issue.

As civilians, we may have felt some humble pride in our individual war effort to date — our participation in the works of war organizations, our contribution of financial help, our private devotion to the morale-boosting of relatives and friends in the forces — or we may even be contributing conscientiously in our daily work. But here is an opportunity for participation which seems more vital, more personal, and more valuable than others, namely to give a donation of our blood and help to save lives among those actually on the fighting fronts.

Through arrangements of the local Lions Club and Red Cross, every facility and convenience is being placed at our disposal to make this contribution. It entails no personal hardship, but may count in terms of life and death where it is most needed.

Those who are not familiar with the procedure may obtain full particulars from the sources mentioned in this week's advertisement. The Red Cross mobile clinic will make its first call to Lachute on August 9, and before that date the organizers desire to sign up a substantial number of volunteer donors. . . . Think it over, and take the initiative in submitting your name for this vital effort.

Town Landmarks

The interest attaching to historic sites grows with the years. Just recently the Historic Sites and Monuments Board of Canada was asked to take over the maintenance of the 140-year-old Halifax town clock built by Queen Victoria's father. Milestone places in the history of the Dominion are for the most part well marked, but the beginning and development of small town and country life is not so well commemorated.

Too often the inauguration of community life has become the short and simple annal of unrecorded familiarity. Such is not the case in Britain; their historic sites are well marked and carefully preserved, whether Roman remains, the inn where archers celebrated their return from mediaeval wars, or the cottage of Shakepear's wife. Our men overseas can visit these places, and there is hardly a village in Britain that cannot boast some famous character or exploit preserved in print and stone.

The National Parks Bureau of Canada has acquired some 300 sites throughout the Dominion, but in relation to the size and history of our country the number is comparatively small. Many of them are in cities. The community's human interest spots such as the first house or church or mill, the graves of pioneers and the birthplaces of famous men are in danger of passing from memory.

By marking the sites and placing the facts on record, organizations such as the business men's associations and the Women's Institute can contribute substantially to the history and the spirit of the community. We must not let these landmarks be forgotten, simply because they are still familiar enough to us not to need marking. Canada looks forward to a long history and now is the time to record its beginnings.

Sure there's a war on — but what better antidote for war nerves than a spirit of recreative interest in the pioneer activities of a community that must live and progress after the war is over.

Sport — the Leaven

A touch of sport makes the whole world kin. On that basis, at least, Britain, the Dominions and the United States should be drawn closer together after the war.

Trevor Wignall, London sports columnist well-known on this side of the ocean, recently called attention to the interest being shown by British sport fans in baseball and hockey games played overseas by Canadian and American soldiers, who in turn are rapidly acquiring a knowledge of the fine points of soccer, rugger and cricket. And on this side of the Atlantic, in a lesser degree, the same is true with British lads undergoing training in various parts of the United States and Canada.

There is nothing fanciful in the belief that Dominion relations would be given a real lift if Canada got on the international sport bandwagon. Before the war cricket and rugger were the sports that made for a real bond between Britain, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, India and the West Indies. The day may be near when hockey and baseball enter the realm of Dominion competition, particularly with the facilities to be provided by air transportation.

An international hockey match between Canada and Scotland at Toronto or Glasgow would do more to foster good relations than a score of goodwill tours. An international soccer match at Winnipeg, Melbourne or Cape Town would have the same effect.

During the past 30 years Empire cricket has become an effective advertising medium. There is hardly a boy or man in either England, Australia or South Africa who is not cricket-conscious. English people in 1939 knew all there was to know about Don Bradman and other Australian cricket stars and "down under" knowledge of English players was just as wide.

It doesn't require a big stretch of imagination to think that before many years have passed some budding "Eddie Shore" or "Syl Apps" might be as well-known in Britain as Bradman, or that some Welsh youngster now just learning to skate, might be in the running for a place on an international all-star hockey team.

Thoughts on Gardening for Victory

For many of us today, long hours at the business end of a spade, hoe and fork are taking the place of those peaceful hours wielding a golf club or fishing pole. Hanging on a strap in a city streetcar you may hear, any day, the sure cure for potato bugs or a remedy for earth that has soured — all coming from the same men who used to be troubled with "hooking their drive" or finding the right bait for bass in July. Worms, too, seem to have further functions than just going on fish hooks. Believe it or not, many of us are learning that potatoes don't just come nicely scrubbed in paper bags, nor do carrots grow in bunches with a rubber band around their tops. And today many who have baggy trousers and sore backs display a greater admiration for all that has gone into producing choice vegetables. Today we dig for victory.

We may never produce a new kind of vegetable; we may never fully understand the miracle of nature that gives us tomatoes from those tiny seeds, but there are many things we do know and others that we are picking up quickly. We know that sunshine and water are essential, that there must be certain minerals in the earth if its fruit is to be of real value as food. Therefore we water, drain and fertilize our patch of ground.

We know now, much to our sorrow, that with all the good will in the world we can't dispense with the simple laws of nature. Even though our garden is dedicated to victory it takes stiff doses of foul-smelling manures and many layers of skin to create the conditions in which plants will thrive.

This gardening gives us time to think too. . . . I takes sweat to produce lettuce; what about the Atlantic Charter and the "four freedoms"? We know that our potatoes won't be worth digging if we allow the potato bugs to look after them; but do we expect victory and peace will be ours, without effort, when the fight stops? While our national soil is being poisoned and soured by differences of race, class and creed, and is knee-deep in weeds, there are still too many who glibly go about their jobs just waiting for the fruits of victory and the lasting peace to drop into their baskets.

We who have scoffed at the dirt, the aches and the pains and have felt the glow of success in our gardens — we, who have tackled Mother Nature and won a partner — are not we the ones to tackle human nature and set it right, to win the peace?

Lives Can Be Saved

Many persons apparently dead as result of drowning can be revived by artificial respiration, even after immersion in water for periods of up to one-half hour, the Health League of Canada reiterates, as reports of drowning accidents come in from all parts of Canada.

Drowning takes hundreds of lives in Canada every year and many could be saved by prolonged artificial respiration. There are numerous instances on record where persistence has reclaimed accident victims who to all appearances were beyond aid, the League says. Artificial respiration by the Schaeffer method should be continued as long as six hours or even longer, or until rigor mortis sets in. This applies not only in cases of electric shock and poisoning with gas fumes, but also in drowning accidents.

The artificial respiration should be started as soon as the victim is recovered from the water and continued without interruption at the scene of the accident until the victim has been restored or until the rescuers are positive life is extinct. There have been instances where people have been revived even after they were pronounced dead. First signs of life are frequently not observed for a long time. In a case of electrical shock in Windsor, Ont., artificial respiration was kept up for eight hours before there was any sign of life.

In drowning accidents it is essential to keep the body warm by means of blankets and hot water bottles. In the Schaeffer method, the accident victim is placed prone on his stomach, with the head turned to the right side. The rescuer kneels astride the body and applies pressure rhythmically to the back in the region of the lungs.

In a considerable number of cases spasm of the larynx prevents air getting through to the lungs, making artificial respiration efforts not only useless but actually harmful. Rescuers should make sure that air is getting through to the lungs. The tongue should be drawn out by means of a tongue forcep, if available.

Instruction in resuscitation methods should be given more generally, the Health League states. It warns against people, even strong swimmers, bathing alone.

Mr. Bracken's Tact

Certainly nobody can accuse Mr. John Bracken of a lack of tact.

In St. Thomas recently Mr. Mitchell Hepburn introduced Mr. Bracken to a gathering of citizens, said some extremely nice things about the Progressive Conservative leader. Mr. Bracken in his reply said he hoped the temporary retirement of Mr. Hepburn from public life would not become permanent, and then he went on:

" . . . Should he (Mr. Hepburn) go to Ottawa, whether he is on my side or the other, it would be a more interesting institution, I am sure."

That, we think, was perfect.

Secret Government documents in Great Britain are now not burned but shredded in machines, and the shreds are passed straight to the pulping mills to be used in making new paper.

For a dime a case you ran read all the suppressed divorce evidence on file at Osgoode Hall. Now there's a way to put in time if you're ever forced to spend a day in Toronto. —Montreal Herald

Since the war began the "small" man in Great Britain has contributed £2,150,000,000 ($9,546,000,000.00) in savings, which has provided 20% of the Government's borrowing needs.

Reflections in the Zoo

—From "The Printed Word"

Science planning of our post-war society being the order of the day, it seems strange that no one has yet got around to making a few laboratory tests of the new ideas. A chemist with a new explosive in mind would have the elementary caution to work out his formula in a test-tube and ascertain its properties and peculiarities, before he mixed a batch of a ton or two. No matter how safe his formula was in theory, he would know that there is an innate cussedness in chemicals that lies in wait for the unwary.

Laboratory tests of social security should not be difficult to arrange. There is a ready-made laboratory in Riverdale Park, Toronto, where the city supports a small zoo. There are lions, tigers, bears, monkeys and several other animals leading a sheltered and ostensibly care-free existence. They are fed regularly at the public expense, receive expert medical attention if they fall ill, are restrained by bars from indulging in unnecessary and wasteful feuds with the other inmates.

It seems an ideal existence. The benign expression on the lion's face perhaps reflects the inner wisdom born of long days of contemplation. The polar bear also appears content, except on the hottest days, when he betrays a trace of nostalgia for the Arctic. Nevertheless, he is a sensible creature, and after many years' experience of social security, he has no doubt come to realize how fortunate he is to be enjoying the cultural and social advantages of Toronto instead of waiting for a seal on an ice-floe in Lancaster Sound.

The monkeys, more gregarious than lions and polar bears, seem to get more positive enjoyment out of life. They are always interested in watching the peculiar antics of their cousins on the far side of the bars, and one gets the impression that their comments are pithy, if not invariably polite. The cynical glance that a monkey casts towards the taxpayer who supports him indicates an intellectual appreciation of life in the zoo. The monkey has no intention of relinquishing his social security. He can judge how far it is safe for him to go. He knows exactly when the taxpayer must be flattered or amused and when he may be treated with contempt.

The larger animals keep their feelings to themselves, except when a dog evades the strict rule of the park and wanders past their cages. Then bedlam breaks loose. Deep-throated howls of jealousy are heard all over the park. The intruder may be the ugliest little unwashed mongrel that roams the streets, in daily peril from traffic and dog-catchers but he is free.

A WEEKLY EDITOR LOOKS AT Ottawa

By Jim Greenblat

Night of July 9th. While Brooke Claxton, parliamentary assistant addressed a sparse and somnambulent House on External Affairs, I had the feeling somehow that momentous things were in the making. The Prime Minister and Defence Minister Ralston, only two cabinet members present were close in huddle in adjoining front benches. The P.M. looked grave and pre-occupied. He was making a pencilled draft. Correcting, leaning over to check with Mr. Ralston, pencilling some more. At 8 o'clock next morning I heard his radio announcement to the nation that Canadians were fighting on the beach heads of Sicily. He may have been drafting that important speech as I watched, even while all of Canada was unaware of history-making events taking shape thousands of miles away. Surely they knew. What a secret to carry!

No stove league raised more fuss than sugar for canning. Housewives were definitely annoyed at the arbitrary allotment after counting cans in the basement. The Opposition started a warm but informative debate in the House on this matter and Finance Minister Ilsley said knowledge of available supplies was not known at the time. It was estimated 30 to 40 per cent of the population did their canning. Lo and behold, actually 84% applied. Now, in Germany and the U.S.A., a flat allocation is made to each ration book holder, whether for canning or not. Canadians asked for 200 million lbs.; only half that amount available. Certainly there will be a different approach to the problem next year.

Most productive of argument speech in the House for some time — that of Justice Minister St. Laurent on the resolution for deferment of redistribution during the war. There was a distinct tenseness in the House. Party leaders and supporters approved, but nine Quebec members voted against putting the motion. There seemed unanimity with Mr. Coldwell the day must come when Canada will make decisions of this kind without reference to Imperial Parliament. That Canada by this time is wearing long pants. Mr. St. Laurent who talks in clipped and measured tones, drew fire from quiet speaking Conservative House Leader Graydon for "Side-stepping the resolution and injecting racial controversies." The minister claimed some people mongered that "that man in the Vatican" and Quebec clergy plotted to control government of Canada; He said such talk was rampant. Saw the desirability of having our own flag and national anthem although that shouldn't be pressed during the war. Claimed vigorously that Quebec was entitled to more equitable representation based on population. Mr. Graydon countered that raising these side issues now was provocatively dangerous to national unity.

Who'd ever thought it! Research experts of the Department of Agriculture, although mum on the subject yet, are working on the production of rubber, resins and a superior kapok from species of the lowly milk weed. A group have returned here from the U.S.A., where they conferred with experts on progress made there along the same line. It appears it's getting into the post-experimental stage because I hear they are even working on harvesting methods and machinery to make the once-pest get to work for the war-effort.

Members tell us the present long-drawn out session, which started in January, will probably wind up by the end of this month. The closely-printed official report of the House of Commons already runs well, over 4,000 pages. Which brings up press comment that the four federal by-elections will be a serious test of public opinion; may influence the government's decision re a general election, though there is no official peep about such a possibility. Ontario election: editors in the province showing definite party tendencies, but all agreeing there should be no apathy by the voters.

MORE SMALL TOWNS FOR OLD BRITAIN

Post-War Planners Again Urging It as Flank Attack on Inflated Land Prices

London (CP) — F. J. Osborn, president of the Town and Country Planning Association, is calling for 50 new, small towns in Britain providing living space for two million people. This, he held, would make a substantial "flank attack" on the problem of inflated site values which represented the greatest difficulty in considering re-planning of existing towns and cities.

RED CROSS SUPPLY BLOOD SERUM FOR USE IN SICILY

Blood from Canadian Donors Goes to Invasion Front

Toronto — Large shipments of Canadian dried blood serum from countless donors in the Dominion have accompanied Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps units on the invasion of Sicily, according to a cable advice received at the society's national headquarters from Maj.-Gen. C. B. Price, Canadian Red Cross Overseas Commissioner.

"Thanks to the co-operation of Canadian military authorities the Red Cross was afforded the fullest facilities during the planned stage so that the moment action began the society could furnish service immediately," the commissioner said.

Base medical units attending the sick and wounded in the campaign went forward completely equipped with the Canadian Red Cross Comforts including bags containing cigarettes, combs, razors, writing material, shaving soap, toothbrushes, chewing gum and a considerable quantity of reading matter for patients. Large quantities of hospital supplies have also gone with the units.

To stimulate business, a German theatre owner advertised a special feature and offered 500 marks to any patron who didn't like it. The house was packed, but no one claimed the money. The feature was a picture of Hitler.

Harvest Leave for Trained Soldiers

Harvest leave, not to exceed six weeks' duration, may be granted to fully-trained soldiers of the Canadian Army where service conditions permit. The leave will be taken without pay and allowances. Only soldiers who have experience in farm work are eligible.

Periods during which harvest leave may be granted will vary according to crop conditions in various parts of Canada, but all soldiers must report back to their units before October 31, 1943.

Those who may not obtain Harvest Leave are soldiers awaiting despatch overseas, and those awaiting allocation after completing Army Courses. Members of the Veterans Guard who can be spared from their duties may apply.

AMONG THE CHURCHES

Farewell Sermon by Preacher at Morin

Morin Heights — Mr. H. G. Baugh preached his farewell sermon in Holy Trinity Church, Morin Heights, on Sunday morning. The church was crowded to capacity, and the floral decorations were extremely well arranged.

Mr. Baugh referred to the great progress made by the church during the past few years, and expressed the hope that the members would maintain their loyalty to the work of the church. . . . His sermon was based on St. Paul's advice to the people of Corinth, which urged the people to "Be perfect, be of good comfort, be of one mind, live in peace; and the God of love and peace shall be with you."

Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Baugh are leaving Lakefield on Sunday afternoon for Doaktown, New Brunswick, where they will take up residence in the rectory. They are to be officially welcomed in their new parish on Wednesday, July 28, at 4 p.m.

The Written Test

Without making any all-inclusive or unreasonable complaint, it must be said that the average product of Ontario schools — primary or secondary — in this day and age is not distinguished for his or her ability in either writing or spelling. Educationists seem to have fallen into the error of supporting that, because English is a pupil's mother tongue, he must be proficient in it as a matter of course. The misuse to which the language is commonly subjected dispels the notion.

For English composition, at least, there is no satisfactory substitute for the written lesson and the written examination. The schools would do well to pay more attention to the subject.

All Over England – New Steps on Stairs and Strange Coats on Pegs

Specially Written for The Lachute Watchman
By MARGARET BUTCHER

Reading, Eng. — How comforting it is that nothing can interfere with the seasons! The whole world of Man may be rocketing; but the peas have begun to sprout up through the stony ground of the Allotment — and the beasties (whatever they may be) are eating the tops off . . . just as usual.

The Gardening Partner, his trusty old gardening suit reinforced with handsome leather patches, is seasonably gloomy and predicts the worst, as always. But there is life — real life — in the air; the birds are chirping and tweedling away in the trees and on housetops, and today the whole place has a lush green look after the rain.

Even the potatoes in their little sack behind my curtain are sprout-like mad. The most dreadful things which man can do cannot take away one's queer and secret joy in all this waking up, all this bursting out of hope. . . . Yes, it's got me today. Some day the world will be sane again and people will be happy — if they have enough sense.

I guess we'll have to use our sense, all the same. But I'm not one of those pessimists, for the war has shown us one thing: that human beings can, under pressure, show extraordinary courage, determination and gumption. Most curious of all, they can show unselfishness. That is going to be the snag, for it always is.

I've been talking to a man and his wife about it all: a couple who are just too old to be roped into anything, and who are pretty cosy in their circumstances. He said sitting back on his shoulderblades: "You can't cut out self interest. It's human nature." She says: "I think it's silly — all this worrying about future generations. What's it got to do with us?"

Went a Shade Sulky

I think I just went quiet and a shade sulky — which was cowardly of me, and I know it now. But that sort of talk staggers one . . . and when one is sitting there eating somebody else's food — well, it's a spot to be in, believe me. What I ought to have done is plain enough; I ought to have said: Yes, and it's just folk like you who're the bother, and who always will be You're the kind to beware of, and if the rest of us really know what to do in the future we shall freeze you out. You won't be met at anybody's party; you can't have any nice snug billets on committees or councils. You'll be so darned uncorfortable socially that you'll realize you don't fit in anywhere."

Some day, without a doubt, I SHALL say something of the sort. So if you hear that I am an outcast, only able to move around under police escort, you'll know that the war is over and things have slipped back into the same dear old groove. But, all fooling apart, what can be done about people like that?

Personally, I think there should be a truce to politeness for awhile; the rest of us — nearly all of us, happily — should be free to tell those people precisely what our opinion of them really is. You can imagine what we murmur among ourselves, can't you? People with sons who are fighting, husbands who are tiring their almost-aged bones in the Civil Guard, mothers, and daughters who are rushing about in canteens or nursing. Yes, it's very odd, but I've noticed that the folk with the strongest self-interest and instinct of self-preservation are invariably the least worth keeping alive. Well, when things begin to take shape again it might pay us to watch those folk. They will be up to their old tricks, given half a chance.

The Present Position

More than three years of War have had far-reaching effects on every phase of Canadian life and activity. To some they have brought irreparable losses; to others private griefs and anxieties beyond description; to all, new conceptions of sacrifice and self-discipline.

In the realm of business, as elsewhere, problems of every kind and description have arisen and have had to be faced with resolution and presight. Adjustments to new and sometimes unpleasant conditions have had to be made. Personal convenience and advantage have had to be subordinated to the interests of whole communities.

All this has been done with fortitude and patience, as becomes a people engaged in the most serious task of their generation. Often where criticism has been made, it has been dispelled by information and explanation.

The Quebec Liquor Commission has encountered its full share of difficulty in the conduct of its operations, and this has reflected itself in the steps it has been under the compulsion of taking to deal with the situation confronting it. It is well aware that inconvenience to the public has in many instances attended the actions it has been forced to take, but it is confident that once the facts are known, understanding and approval will follow.

The Quebec Liquor Commission does not manufacture any of its wares. It is neither a distiller, nor a brewer, nor a wine producer. These are produced by private manufacturers here in Canada and abroad. The nearest approach it comes to being a producer, is as a blender and bottler of spirits and a bottler of wines, and this is only a minor part of the Commission's activities.

While the Commission prudently carries some reserve stocks of spirits and wines, it has no means of replenishing these, except from the stocks of the producers.

As is well known, some commodities cannot now be obtained at all, others, because of transit hazards and war difficulties only in restricted quantities which cannot be foretold, and others, owing to Dominion Government restrictions, only in a small proportion to what was used in previous years.

All of these factors combine to limit severely present supplies and to render future supplies difficult of judgment. Further, the strong probability is that instead of being easier to obtain they will, as time goes on, become increasingly difficult. None of these factors is under the control of the Quebec Liquor Commission.

Along with this narrowing of the sources of supply there has been a much larger demand than ever before experienced. War has few pleasant features, but the widespread employment which it has created has placed many of our people in a better position financially than they have ever previously been.

Perhaps naturally this prosperity has carried with it a desire to spend more, or at least to have more of the luxuries of life than were available in other days. Perhaps also the stress and strain of war work as well as anxieties engendered by the war itself have contributed. But whatever the cause or combination of causes, the fact is that all over Canada there was, in comparison with pre-war days, a tremendous increase in the purchases of alcoholic beverages, and it is undoubted that if left unchecked, this increase would have continued.

There has thus been an ever widening gap between existing demand and supplies available. To draw on reserves would be only a temporary expedient, making the last condition worse than the first, and since difficulty in obtaining supplies is much more likely to grow rather than lessen, the wise step in order to secure continuity of service—which is the same thing as saying in the interest of the purchasers themselves—is to avoid as far as possible drawing on reserve stocks and limiting sales to the lowest reasonable minimum.

In the last analysis, however, such a plan, sensible and proper as in the circumstances it obviously is, must have the sincere co-operation of the purchasing public. Purchasers should, if for no other than selfish reasons, restrict severely their purchases of alcoholic beverages just as they have to do with so many other articles to which they have become accustomed. The Quebec Liquor Commission earnestly hopes they will do so.

THE WOMAN'S PAGE

By Jessie Allen Brown

A TIME SAVER

A group of the Red Cross workers, who start to work early in the afternoon, and work late, find they accomplish more if they stop long enough for a cup of tea. The washing up took time which they begrudged spending. Then one woman had the bright idea of having each woman bring her own cup each day. It was a great time-saver as it meant that each woman just had to wash one extra cup at home. It is amazing the amount of good work so many of these groups turn out week after week. They are using such attractive materials that it is a satisfaction to see the finished work. We have all seen some pretty ugly stuffs go in to organization work. Attractive colors and patterns cost no more than ugly ones.

FOOD DIFFERENCES

We had a young English Air Force lad with us who had been in Canada for just six weeks. He said Canada was very much as he had pictured it, and he was enjoying it very much, but he had not been really hungry since he came here. That same day a woman told me she had a letter from her son in England. He liked England very much — all but the food. Wouldn't she please send him some good Canadian food. He particularly wanted canned meat and canned fruit! Probably they are both getting good food, only it is different than they are used to, and it takes time to learn to enjoy it. The Englishman said their food in England was not monotonous because they never knew what they were going to get, and that the lack of oranges and other fruit was the worst of all. He enjoyed his glass of tomato juice, and said it was the second time he had tried it, as he had it on the train enroute to camp.

HEALTH EDUCATION

Health education in our schools is of utmost importance. It is no accident that it is put first in the recent report of the Survey Committee of the Canada and Newland Education Association. Health is taught in all schools, but too often the practise does not follow the theory. There are many schools which are not properly heated, lighted, or ventilated. Some of the rural schools have no sanitary conveniences and many existing ones are very unsatisfactory from the standpoint of health. Some schools have a proper health inspection that is adequately followed up. How many do you know that have? Let us hope that after the War money will be found to improve the health in the schools. Money can buy a lot of health. Even when pupils have health inspection, teachers are often omitted. In one small village the teacher was found to have tuberculosis, and 65 per cent of the children also were tubercular. One province requires teachers to pass a test for tuberculosis and last year 200 teachers were obliged to discontinue teaching. Think of the damage those teachers might have done had they continued teaching. When will the other provinces require such a test? The money needed to keep just one patient in a sanitarium would pay for a lot of medical health examinations.

GET THEM YOUNG

The more health and nutrition that can be taught in the lower grades the more effective will they be. Children go through a stage when anything teacher says is law. They not only think so themselves, but they insist on the family thinking so too. If the utmost advantage was taken of this stage the teacher's influence would be widespread. When one of our lads was about eight, he rushed in fairly gasping to tell us that he couldn't drink tea. "Teacher says we mustn't drink any tea.". It never occurred to the poor child that he had never tasted it. Teacher said he was not to drink tea, and that was all there was to be said about it. Parents do a great deal to please children, and to live up to their faith in them, and if these small children could get enough health teaching, they would see the families followed the rules.

SANDWICH SPREAD

3 Tablespoons flour, 3 teaspoons salt, 1 cup sugar, 3 teaspoons mustard, 1 cup vinegar, 3 eggs, ¼ cup cream, ¼ lb. cheese, ½ cup chopped sweet pickle, 1 can pimento (if obtainable), ½ cup butter.

Mix the dry ingredients, and rub smooth with the vinegar. Add the remaining ingredients, and cook until thick in the double boiler. Either grated cheese or cream cheese may be used. This makes one quart of filling and it will keep for some time if kept in a cool place.

JELLIED CHICKEN SALAD

2 Talbespoons gelatine, 1½ cups chicken stock, 1 cup diced chicken, ¼ cup chopped celery, 1 teaspoon minced onion, ½ cup salad dressing.

Soak the gelatine in ¼ cup cold water, and dissolve in the hot well-seasoned chicken stock. Cool and add remaining ingredients. Pour into mould, and chill until set. This is a good way to use up the last of a chicken, as stock may be made from the bones. Canned chicken and canned chicken soup could be substituted.

Star Recipe

By Betty Barclay

Griddle Cakes are for cold weather, eh? Not now my friend! Not with bacon, ham, sausages and chops rationed. Today griddle cakes are an all-year luxury.

Following is a griddle cake recipe. A nutritious, tasty and economical morning main-dish is in store for those who try it.

Cereal Griddle Cakes

1 Cup boiling water, 1 cup Grape-Nuts Wheat-Meal, 1¼ cups sifted flour, 2¼ teaspoons double-acting baking powder, 1 teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons sugar, 2 eggs, well beaten, ¾ cup milk, 4 tablespoons melted butter or other shortening.

Pour boiling water over cereal and let stand 15 minutes. Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder, salt, and sugar, and sift again. Combine eggs, milk, and cereal, and mix well; add gradually to flour, beating only until smooth. Add shortening. Bake on hot greased griddle. Serve with maple-flavored syrup. Makes 1½ dozen griddle cakes.

AUSSIE WOMEN RUNNING FARMS

Soldiers' Wives and Widows in Southern Commonwealth Keep Agriculture Moving

Sydney, N.S.W. (CP) — Women are keeping many farms going in Australia for the fighting services need their food products. They are plowing, driving tractors and trucks, lifting heavy cases of fruit and digging the furrows for irrigation.

They are fruit-picking, grading and packing, planting and digging vegetables — all in addition to their usual household duties. Some have broken down under it and have had to take easier jobs.

One woman does all the work on her farm, sometimes without any help at all, as well as running her home and caring for her aged parents. She is a widow with two sons in the Australian army overseas.

A soldier's wife with six children is managing and doing most of the work on two farms. She does all the irrigation work, cutting the furrows and digging with a spade as the water flows between the trees.

As well as caring for her young family — her eldest child is 14 — she does all the cooking and gets morning and afternoon tea for the pickers.

Canada's 1943 egg objective is 345 million dozen, compared with average production of 200 million dozen before the war. It's fine to see the hens getting behind the war effort like this.

War Work Tells On U.S. Women

New York, July 20 (CP) — Women's heavy industrial war work is beginning to take its toll in fatigue throughout the United States, said a Y. W. C. A. official here. "Lots of women told me they were so tired they couldn't go on," she said, back in her New York office after a tour of war industries.

"Tub Topics"

Lettie, the laundress, says "Look at the label".

If you threw the label in the wastepaper basket, read this one. It will tell about wear-control of all your rayon fabrics. Rayon is right for wartime wear, but rayon too needs care. The label on a proper tested rayon garment gives instructions for proper care in laundering — like this:

Wash:

1. By hand. — 2. with plenty of suds. — 3. without a bleach. — 4. without soaking or rubbing. — 5. by rinsing in lukewarm water. — 6. by squeezing water out (not wringing or twisting).

Dry:

Always dry away from sunlight or direct heat.

NEVER leave garments rolled up damp.

NEVER let colored garments stand in a heap after washing.

Press:

—On the wrong side, with a moderately hot iron and on a well-padded ironing board. . . .

Use a smooth even pressure "with the grain" of the fabric.

Use a pressing cloth over cuffs, collar or any part requiring pressing on the right side.

Try out an inconspicious bit of the garment to determine what degree of dampness is most suitable for the best results in pressing.

When you have to be your own laundress, make it the easy way. For instance, don't wear a garment two days longer than usual to get your washing all done up at one certain time. Things that are too soiled take longer to wash, and wear out quicker. It's wise to mend your things and take out spots before washing, too.

It is always better to take an extra minute or two to remove buckles, etc., and unwashable trimmings, than to find broken buttons and stains on that favorite blouse.

Do not wash a garment if the label says "Dry clean". Even soft water and the best suds won't correct that error.

Most rayons should be pressed when slightly damp and crisp; acetate rayon should be noticeably damp. Spun rayons look best if ironed when almost dry. Crinkly types should be shaped while damp, then pressed when dry, over a towel to retain the crinkle. Rayon and wool fabrics should be treated like woollens — use a damp cloth over them.

Remember, Lettie says "Look at the label". When instructions are given with the material, use them.

WE HAVE TO MIND P'S AND QUEUES

Be Good Sport in Line-ups and Ready When You Get There!

By GRACE MARTIN, Associated Press Writer

Queue-standing is something you have to learn to like — or even to tolerate these wartimes.

A lot of people who behave quite well otherwise are very poor sports about standing in queues.

They begin by trying to wedge into the line ahead of people who have been waiting patiently for a long time. They join the queue with a scowl which seems to indicate that life has offered them a particular affront by forcing them to stand in line at all.

They press forward impatiently, ramming their elbows or their packages into other people's back. After all this bad temper they are not ready for business when they finally reach the window. They have to fish in pockets or bags for papers or change while a crowd waits behind them.

And when they have finally finished their business, they leave, muttering about inefficiency and bureaucracy, and how much better they could run the works themselves.

If you recognize yourself in that list, you'd better change your tactics. Standing in queues cheerfully is one of the ways you can help fight the war on the home front.

In Great Britain, 90% of the men employed before the war as bus conductors have now been replaced by women conductresses. In 1939 the proportion of women employees in the bus companies was 9%: today women represent approximately 35% of the entire staffs of the bus companies.

The Jelly Shelf

By Betty Barclay

Ripe Blackberry Jelly

4 Cups berry juice, 7½ cups sugar, 1 bottle fruit pectin.

To prepare juice, crush thoroughly or grind about 3 quarts fully ripe berries. Place in jelly cloth or bag and squeeze out juice. (If berries lack tartness, substitute ¼ cup lemon juice for ¼ cup prepared juice.)

Measure sugar and juice into large saucepan and mix.

Bring to a boil over hottest fire and at once add bottled fruit pectin, stirring constantly. Then bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard ½ minute.

Remove from fire, skim, pour quickly. Paraffin hot jelly at once.

Ripe Raspberry Jam

4½ Cups prepared fruit, 6 cups sugar, 1 box powdered fruit pectin.

To prepare fruit, crush thoroughly or grind about 2 quarts fully ripe raspberries. Remove some of seeds sy sieving part of pulp, if desired.

Measure sugar into dry dish and set aside until needed. Measure prepared fruit into a 5- to 6-quart kettle, filling up last cup or fraction of cup with water if necessary.

Place over hottest fire. Add powdered fruit pectin, mix well, and continue stirring until mixture comes to a hard boil. At once pour in sugar, stirring constantly. (To reduce foaming, ¼ teaspoon butter may be added.) Continue stirring. bring to a full rolling boil, and boil hard 1 minute.

Remove from fire, skim, pour quickly. Paraffin hot jam at onse. Makes about 10 glasses (6 fluid ounces each).

A Manchester furniture store which had received a severe shaking from Nazi bombs bore the following notice: "But You Ought to See our Berlin Branch!"

Why is a talkative young lady the reverse of the mirror?

Because she talks without reflecting, while the mirror reflects without talking.

ALL OVER ENGLAND

Put Out of My Quarters

Today I am with my good friends who have a half-a-dozen evacuees in their house; yet they have found a corner for me to work in, bless them. At my own lodgings there is now a sleeping war-worker; a girl who, this week, is on night-shift, so I have crept out to rattle my typewriter elsewhere. War-workers are being billeted all over the place, and it's no good for your smug householder to object.

A vacant room means shelter for somebody, and the louder the objection the larger the war-worker — which is as it should be. But mist folk are very decent about it all; one woman tells me that her new billette is "a real blessing" and looked after her, as much as possible, when she was ill. All this, as you can imagine, is making a tremendous difference to the average home which, in the old days, was likened to 'an Englishman's castle'.

The stranger is now well within the gates. All over England there are new steps on the stairs, strange coats hanging on the family pegs, alien sponges in the bath-tray. My private opinion is that it is an excellent notion and something that will do a power of good all round. We aren't an island people any more; there are no real islands nowadays; so we're learning to be good mixers instead.

My friends here are kindness itself to their London evacuees, taking no end of trouble over the two children. One feels quite sure that those kiddies, no matter what the future holds for them, will never outgrow the influence of these kindly, well-bred host of theirs. Anything but the best will always seem a trifle shoddy to them after this environment in their most impressionable years.

Real Unselfishness

The whole atmosphere of this house is one of real unselfishness, of the wish to help the other fellow in every possible way. It's wonderful. One may come around and wash clothes in their hot-water sink; a young soldier turns up one night a week and practices on their piano; the homeless are gladly welcome to any little privilege a home can offer; and they themselves spent most of their time in one room, loyally saving light and fuel.

The striking thing about it all is that they are much, much happier than those other two people who are so wrapped up in making as little difference as possible in their lives. Naturally, they don't like having their existence disrupted — who would? — but I know they have the satisfaction of feeling that they're making a job of it as best they can.

Last week, by means of working like mad in my spare time for a month, and by borrowing sketches from everybody who has one, I got together enough for an Art Section in a country 'show.' It was held in a little village near here, where nobody has much spare cash, and was in aid of the country hospital. We had a truly hectic Saturday afternoon in the schoolrooms, and many of the women worked like a fire-party from two til six, brewing rivers of tea, organizing raffles and competitions, running the concert and selling every scrap on the stalls—though some of the articles, as usual, were of the what-on-earth-is-it variety.

Sixpence Admission

I sat in the Art Section, somewhat aloof, taking sixpence a time for admission, and quite a lot of people wandered in. (There is always something a trifle 'wandering' about an Art Exhibition, isn't there? It is so hard to look as if one had come in on purpose.) And believe it or not, that little fete netted over five hundred dollars. We should have considered ourselves lucky to get two hundred.

The organizer — a woman I had now known before—saw me sketching one Saturday and we got into conservation. She asked me if I would help the little show, and thus I have made more friends. They have a really beautiful house in the village; two or three sixteenth-century cottages turned into one, and I was their guest for the night. All day long they are working at something; running Savings Groups, collecting for the Red Cross, holding the village effort together. All day folk are leaning their bicycles against the wall and knocking on the front door. No house in London was ever busier.

During our manouvres they were always on the lookout for bone-dry soldiers who could to with a cup of tea: and I guess plenty were bone-dry in that strenuous time. They were everywhere, and one heard Canadian voices all over the place. They'll be coming home with the English tea-habit firmly ingrained after this; and one of them said to me having spent the winter here: "It'll take me some time to get used to the warmth again, I guess, when I get back home." So don't take it too hard if, for the first fortnight, they show a disposition to loosen collars and open windows! It will pass.

Lodgers Face North

Incidentally, I have just loosened my own collar. The sun is pouring in through the open window—oh, lovely warmth! In my lodgings I never see a gleam, for I face north, and it makes the winter a long, bleak stretch. Some day, when All This is over, I'll have a sunny room again, maybe; but it is, I think, an axiom that The Lodger Always Faces North. And over here, one meets people every day who have been torn up by the roots; in fact it is the exception to come across somebody who has a settled home — or who is not working away from home.

Nothing less like the ordinary English habit of life can be imagined, yet folk have shaken down to it, and one hears very little complaint, considering the inconvenience that it is bound to be at times. It is a big thing to have food and shelter — and we know it; and a north room is better than the lee side of a hedge, even though there are days when there doesn't seem to be much to choose between them!

Winter is over at last and it was all much easier than it might have been. We have come thus far and can go on. One knows it on a day like this . . . but then, we've always known it, down underneath, whatever the day was like.

IMPORTANT FACTS ON PULP & PAPER WAR EFFORT

HOW THE PULP & PAPER INDUSTRY HELPS PROTECT OUR HEALTH

IS PAPER ESSENTIAL? "The present war would come to an end in sixty days if we stopped the pulp and paper mills," stated Robert Porter of the United States War Production Board recently. "Paper takes its place along with steel, lumber, textiles." Canada has a right to be proud of this industry.

THE OLD ROLLER TOWEL ENCOURAGED THE SPREAD OF DISEASE; IT WAS A DANGER TO WORKERS' HEALTH. STRONG, HIGHLY ABSORBENT PAPER TOWELS PROTECT THE WORKER. THEY ARE ESSENTIAL TO MODERN INDUSTRY.

THE SANITARY PAPER DRINKING CUP IS ANOTHER IMPORTANT PRODUCT OF CANADA'S PULP AND PAPER INDUSTRY— IMPORTANT TO THE WAR EFFORT.

TO OPERATE CAMPS UNDER MACDONALD ADULT EDUCATION

Camping has usually been identified with youngsters going off to the woods to learn something of the acts of the Indians and becoming accustomed to looking after themselves. But adults can also go camping, according to an announcement issued by the Macdonald College Adult Education Service. In the fourth year of the war people need, as never before, an opportunity to renew their minds and to release the physical tensions of wartime living.

Camp Macdonald for adults and young people is about to open its third year season on a greatly expanded basis.

In place of one camp there are to be two; one in the Eastern Townships on Lake Memphramagog, the other at Ste. Anne de Bellevue. The first (August 2 - 8), which is planned primarily for leaders of Community Schools, Farm Forums and young people's societies, will operate on the beautiful Cedar Lodge camp site near Georgeville.

Many Features

Special speakers have been invited to this camp and an outstanding staff is promised again this year.

Norman MacKenzie former extension worker in Nova Scotia and British Columbia, who is preparing to do rural work in China will assist the Director, R. Alex Sim, who Has directed these camps each year since 1941. Beatrice Desfosses of New York will take charge of the music and singing. Arrangements are not yet final for a recreation leader, but a fully competent recreationalist is promised.

An added feature this year, is that the Quebec Religious Education Council, an interdenominational body is co-operating with the program. A special course of interest to young people's societies is being offered. The Rev. Charles Stewart, and Rev. Philip Mathams of Magog are to be the instructors in this course.

Many Farm Forum members are expected to attend, as well as executive and instructors from the various Community Schools in Quebec.

Broader Scope

The second camp (August 21 - September 6) is of broader scope. It will attract students from Montreal, Ontario and the Maritime provinces. Running for 16 days it offers a training in community recreation, and adult education leadership. It is expected that this course will attract librarians, film projectionists, volunteer leaders in social agencies, recreation leaders in industries, and adult education leaders.

This camp is a distinct inovation being the first of its kind in Canada. It was inaugurated by Macdonald College as a wartime program to relieve the agencies that must depend upon part time and volunteer leaders to carry on their program.

Both camps promise programs of unusual interest, enjoyment and advancement for those who are fortunate enough to attend them.

A Hen's A Hen

The New Jersey Agricultural Experiment Station at New Brunswick has given up its attempt to make better hens than those created by nature. For 16 months 350 hens were kept in an artificial world of 26-hour days, each of 14 hours of light and 12 of darkness.

But the experimenters learned that the hens so blessed by science did not lay any more eggs than when they scratched around in the barnyard, running from dogs and cooks bearing hatchets.

The New Dealers who propose to make over the world and all the people it might learn a lesson from New Brunswick's experiments, but they won't. Instead they will probably point out that subsidies and time-and-a-half for overtime weren't tried.

That Deanna Durbin is now to be considered as a fully grown young woman there can be no doubt after seeing her in "Amazing Mrs. Holliday", a Capitol Theatre booking for next week, July 27-29, inclusive. For the many members of the film public who have been with her, cinematically speaking, from her early youth it must be a great source of pleasure that she turned out so well.

There is a certain old-fashioned air about this picture, for all its desperate attempts to be timely, writes Herbert Whittaker in a Montreal film review.

Miss Durbin is a wholesome Cinderella who comes into a fortune by simply saying she was married to an elderly shipowner, after he has presumably been drowned. She does it, of course, just to get a home for her children, who are all she could save from the destruction of a mission in China.

Of course we needn't tell you that the old man left a personable young grandson, and you can imagine the fun when he has to call Miss Durbin grandmother. But he grows to like her and she, one gathers, really cares for him. She goes so far as to confess her deception and we thought he took it very badly. However, it wouldn't do for a man to marry his own grandmother, especially right in the middle of the picture. So the film is drawn out to full length, and even further, by the return of the grandfather.

Much of this tale is told in a series of flashbacks, as the young man draws the girl's story from her. She tells him things at great length, even remembering the songs she sang. Between these generous memories there are scenes showing Miss Durbin putting the children to bed. They're good children, but they take a lot of putting to bed, it seems. Edmond O'Brien plays Miss Durbin's grandson-in-law (I hope you're following) and he gets a chance to put the children to bed, too. Harry Davenport and Barry Fitzgerald play two crusty old salts, but, shucks, just to look at them you'd know they both have hearts of gold . . . and so they have.

Wholesome fun, but not for diabetics.

She Wouldn't Miss It

Upon joining up, a young man was called upon to answer the customary string of questions. Among them was the amount of his pay he desired to allocate to his wife. He replied. "Nothing". The sergeant said, "Surely you must give your wife something?"

To this the recruit replied: "I am already allowing her £1,000 and I don't think half-a-crown a week will make much difference."

This reminds me of a story of the last war. Then a trooper, who had shown no signs of swank when undergoing his preliminary training invited a comrade to dine with him when they had a few hours' leave. The invitation was promptly accepted, and when the hour of departure arrived a big Rolls-Royce drove into the barracks square, and without any comment the pair drove away in it.

FILM PHOTOGRAPHED AT BROWNSBURG

Brownsburg, July 21 —

A preview of the film "A letter from Brownsburg" was held last week and is now being made ready for a public showing in the near future.

As its title implies, the film is the story of a girl who comes to work in Brownsburg and writes home to tell the folk all about the place. The camera man commences the moment she announces her intention to come and work here, the trip up and her reception in the place, the room she occupies in the residences, and how life goes on there. She is shown going through the office records and attending the induction program.

The picture points out the recreational facilities that are placed at the disposal of the employees and the rules pertaining to the identification card, against carrying matches inside the plant, absenteeism, lateness and safety hazards. A good part of the picture is devoted to Mary and hundreds of others "at work". Alan Moorehouse, the camera man, did an excellent photographic job and the picture generally reflects the effort that was put into its making.

SPOTLIGHT ON FEDERAL BY-ELECTIONS IN QUEBEC

Govm't Campaigners Give Priority to War Effort; Duplessis Continues Tour Decrying Delay in "Redistribution"

By D'ARCY O'CONNELL,
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Quebec, July 28 (CP) — The political spotlight in the province turned this week to Stanstead County and to Montreal Cartier constituency where federal by-elections will be held August 9.

The Stanstead campaign drew attention when Justice Minister St. Laurent and Works Minister Fournier spoke in support of R. G. Davidson, the Liberal candidate. Mr. Davidson is opposed by Mayor Pierre Thomas, of Magog, C.C.F. candidate, Armand Choquette, of Katevale, Bloc Populaire, and Donat Martin, of Magog, independent.

Mr. St. Laurent told a political rally that wars are not won with idle and extravagant speeches nor by raising racial prejudices, but by the united and well-directed efforts of the nation under the authority of the constituted government.

"Nobody desires or likes war but when accepted in defence of a just cause there is only one thing that counts — to win it," Mr. St. Laurent said. "The duties which the conduct of war entail are not always agreeable or easy of execution, but they have to be accepted as a price for victory and the maintenance of the benefits of freedom and what it means in a democracy.

"It may be easier to denounce whatever the government does, or to appeal to racial prejudices, than to execute the duties involved in such a gigantic enterprise as the present war.

"Canadians," he said, "will never stand for such tactics that only lead to disunity and failure. Canadians will not approve of such tactics which in too many cases in Europe led whole nations to slaughter and slavery."

Mr. Fournier said he also wished to denounce those who sought "to sow the seeds of discord and prejudice."

He said the government had succeeded in raising an army of 600,000 men without imposing conscription for overseas service. Half of the army, he said, is fighting side by side with the other United Nations on the battlefields of Europe, Asia and Africa.

Government ministers were also expected to take part in the campaign in Montreal - Cartier where Lazarus Phillips is the official Liberal candidate. He is opposed by David Lewis, C.C.F., Fred Rose, Labor - Progressive, and Paul Masse, Bloc Populaire.

While the Cartier campaign went on quietly, special enumerators completed a revision of the electors' lists. The revision was made after C.C.F. Leader M. J. Coldwell said in the House of Commons that the original lists were "padded" and contained the names of children, infants and dead persons.

Also attracting attention, besides the by-election campaigns, was Maurice Duplessis, leader of the opposition in the Quebec Legislature, who continued his tour of the province.

He told a rally at Drummondville that "if there is one man who speaks about unity and who works against it, it is Prime Minister Mackenzie King." Mr. Duplessis said that the Prime Minister "has recently given two instances of that, first by his inopportune plebiscite and now with his delay of redistribution of seats in the House of Commons."

"Quebec," he said, "is law-abiding and the law should be respected, but the legislature which makes bad laws should be despised, punished and defeated. Today it is the turn of Quebec to suffer from the conduct of the federal government — tomorrow it will be the turn of another province or provinces."

Because of Mr. King's action, he said, Quebec would be deprived of the influence at Ottawa to which it was entitled by constitution. The provinces were not consulted in regard to the constitutional change which permitted delay of the redistribution. The constitution since confederation was considered a pact of honor between the two major races, between men of honor, and it could not be changed without the consent of all contracting parties.

LIGHTNING KILLED STE. THERESE MAN

One death was reported to police in the wake of a severe thunderstorm which struck districts north of Montreal on Tuesday afternoon.

Arthur Ledoucsee, 27, an employee of the Thibault Construction Company, died instantly when hit by lightning as he worked on the roof of one of the company's storage buildings at Ste. Therese. A companion worker escaped without injury.

Rainfall of .81 inches was recorded in two brief cloudbursts which apparently broke the back of a three-day heat wave in the district.

CHILD STRUCK BY TAXI, DIES OF INJURIES

Six-Year-Old Girl Is Victim of Sunday Mishap in Lachute West End

A fatal accident occurred at Lachute Mills Sunday evening at 6.45 o'clock, when Nicolle Laurin, six-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rene Laurin, of Lachute, was run down by a taxi.

The automobile was driven by Ranger Lapierre, of Lachute. At the inquest, evidence showed that the child had run from the roadside into the side of this car. Another taxi was following, driven by Wilfrid Belair, who swerved to avoid the child, but his car passed over her on the street. The accident occurred opposite the residence of Francois Larocque.

The youngster was picked up and rushed to the office of Dr. A. Rodrigue, Lachute Mills, who, finding the child's condition critical, arranged for her conveyance to a Montreal hospital. However, she died en route to the city, and the body was brought back to Lachute.

Investigation was made by Traffic Officer A. Leger, of Brownsburg, and Provincial Officer R. Danis. On Monday morning a jury was empanelled by the district coroner, Dr. A. R. Cote, of Brownsburg, and a verdict of accidental death was returned. Cause of the child's death was a fracture of the skull.

MAIL FROM FORCES OVERSEAS BROUGHT BY NEW SERVICE

Montreal, July 26 — A large mail from the members of the armed forces of Canada serving overseas arrived here Sunday by the Canadian Government trans-Atlantic air service operated by T.C.A. The flight of the big transport plane was a non-stop one from Britain to Montreal, and brought naval, military and air force personnel and technicians on special missions to Canada in addition to upwards of 3,000 pounds of mail from the officers and men in the overseas forces.

The flight from Britain to Montreal was made in 15 hours, and, using the connecting T.C.A. planes, some of the official personnel were in Toronto 18 hours after leaving the British Isles, and in other Canadian cities within 24 hours.

The new Canadian Government trans-Atlantic air service has attracted widespread interest in Britain and is hailed as marking a great advance in the transportation facilities between the two parts of the Empire. It was also warmly welcomed by the fighting forces of the Dominion engaged in the European and African theatres of operation, as providing a speedy means of communication with their families and friends in Canada.

DIRECTOR OF EDUCATION ADDRESSES SCHOOL COMMISSIONERS

Protestant Boards Meet in Lachute; Urged to Unite Argenteuil Bodies Into A Central School Commission

Larger Unit Would Provide Rural Pupils with Advantages Enjoyed In the Urban Educational Centres

An interesting meeting was held in Lachute High School yesterday afternoon, when Dr. W. P. Percival, Director of Protestant Education, explained the purpose and set-up of the County Central School Board system. The meeting was attended by a very representative group of the members of the school boards of this county, and was presided over by George Y. Deacon, chairman of the Lachute School Board and member of the Protestant Committee in charge of the organization work in this district.

Dr. Percival explained that the plan of the larger unit of administration was necessary as a means of keeping the present rural population in their communities, as the tendency is for families to move to localities where there are better schools. By means of the larger unit the advantages of city schools would be enjoyed by the rural population. At the same time the sole aim of the scheme is to provide rural children with the same privileges and advantages in education as are furnished to pupils in larger centres.

Dr. Percival explained that all local school boards would remain as they are under the new system, and continue to manage their own schools under the supervision of the Central Board for the county. He explained that in parts of Quebec — Megantic, Richmond and Chambly Counties — a voluntary set-up was organized to try out the plan. This scheme has been working satisfactorily for the past year in Megantic County, and he suggested that the boards of Argenteuil unite temporarily in a similar experiment, which he felt would later develop into a complete administrative unit.

Dr. Percival gave the group considerable information concerning Compulsory Education, and pointed out that a pupil must attend school until he completes the seventh grade, or attend to the end of the school year in which he attains the age of fourteen. The school year referred to is from July first to the 30th of June. Thus, if a child attains the age of 14 on or after July 1, he must attend the complete school term, September to June following, and cannot be charged fees for same, regardless of his grade in school.

Another advancement in education is the making of the school year 200 days, instead of the former 190. This puts Quebec in line with the other provinces of Canada, as Quebec was the only one with the shorter term. Thus all schools in the Province of Quebec must open on September 1, by an Order-in-Council passed recently.

Boys' Brigade Close Camp at St. Andrews E.

Awards Presented to Boys, and Thanks Expressed for Local Assistance

St. Andrews East — The weekend witnessed the termination of a most successful camp conducted by the 1st Company, Boys' Brigade, on the farm of Albert Dorion. A closing campfire ceremony marked the occasion, and was presided over by Capt. J. Howard Richardson. After a rousing singsong, Capt. Richardson called upon the Rev. C. A. Selby, Dominion President of the Boys' Brigade, to give his report on the camp. Mr. Selby outlined the observations he had made, and felt it had been a most thrilling and instructive two weeks. He closed his remarks by challenging the boys of the 1st Company to make this Diamond Jubilee year the greatest in their history, by building their company strength to still greater numbers as well as by upholding the object of this great movement, which is "The advancement of Christ's Kingdom among boys and the promotion of habits of Obedience, Reverence, Discipline, Self-Respect and all that tends towards a true Christian manliness."

As Mr. Selby concluded three rollicking cheers were raised by the boys, who were all delighted to hear that they would have the honor of his company next session. Capt. Richardson expressed his personal appreciation for the assistance given by Mr. Selby and a hope that he would make his visits annually to the 1st Company camp.

The tent standing was then given, showing that Tent No. 1, under Cpl. Bob Eastwood, had come out on top with 476 points, while the 3rd tent, commanded by Sgt. Jim Wright, who had won the honors last year, came close second with 454 points. Sgt. Eddie Goring was third with 417. A special trophy will be awarded the 1st tent commander later in the season. Two special Camp Improvement awards were presented, to Cpl. Robert Eastwood and Pte. Alister Riddell, who had the two highest individual points during the two weeks. Pte. Riddell, although somewhat new to the company, has shown remarkable leadership ability.

Three camper chevrons were awarded for special merit to Cpl. R. Eastwood, Col. Sgt. Eddie Goring and Pte. Alistair Riddell, while diving chevrons were awarded to Pte. Peter Bailey, Pte. Alistair Riddell, Pte. Elliott Parker, Lance-Cpl. Alan Keith and Sgt. E. Goring.

Capt. Richardson expressed deep appreciation to Mr. E. C. Calder for his assistance to the camp in so many ways. He asked him to accept, as a token of friendship, a Brigade sweater, marking the Diamond Jubilee. Appreciation was also expressed to Mr. Albert Dorion, and he was likewise presented with a Jubilee sweater. Mrs. Dorion was cheered most heartily for her splendid contribution to the camp's success.

Swimming badge tests were completed by the following — (Badge) Pte. Peter Bailey and Pte. Alistair Riddell; (Certificate) Ptes. Elliott Parker, Wilson McCleland, Lawrence Martin and Bryer Rice.

A weiner roast added to the enjoyment of the evening; this was made possible through kindness of Mr. A. Riddell. Following this, the closing ceremony took place, and while regretting the termination of the camp, all were resolved to be there without fail next year for a still bigger and better time. Early Saturday morning the campers left for Montreal.

Each day the Farm Broadcast Commentators of the CBC add their news and market bulletins, give directives from the provincial and federal farms authorities and voice many other aids to the wartime farmers' gigantic task of raising and marketing the food for victory. Here is A.R. Kemp (right) as he gives his daily bulletin to the rural listeners of Ontario and Quebec, Monday to Friday, at 12.30 p.m. EDT. Seated on the other side of the microphone is CBC announcer Del Mott, who divides his interest between the daily farm broadcasts and eye-opening music for the early risers.

Phone Directories For Lachute Area Issued This Week

Bell Co'y to Save 360 Tons of Paper A Year Through Directory Economies

To save paper and type metal for war purposes, important changes have been made in the latest issue of Lachute's telephone directory, which is being distributed this week.

The list of long distance rates to points most frequently called is now to be found on the inside front cover, and instructions on how to use long distance service are on the inside back cover. These sections formerly occupied the introductory pages of the classified directory.

All marginal advertisements are being removed from the top and bottom of pages in the alphabetical section, and the size of advertisements in the classified section is limited to one quarter of a column, effecting still further economies.

By means of changes such as these, applied to telephone directories for all the exchanges, the Bell Telephone Company expects to save 360 tons of paper a year for war purposes.

In view of the large number of new and changed listings in the new directory, it is important to discard the old book promptly on receipt of the new one. Subscribers are being asked to contribute their old copies to the regular salvage collection, for paper has now returned to the list of badly-needed salvage articles.

Consulting the new directory carefully before placing calls will hope to eliminate unnecessary calls, and will reduce the "wrong number" nuisance considerably.

Another request which is being emphasized because of war conditions is that subscribers who are moving should take their telephone books with them, instead of asking for another at the new residence.

London (CP) Economy at British government offices at Whitehall is so strictly observed that even paper left from punch holes is saved for salvage, said George Hicks, parliamentary secretary to the Minister of Works and Planning.

Two Charged With Theft of Cattle Near Arundel

Alleged to have slaughtered and stolen two prize head of cattle and to have stolen several score of hens and roosters in the Arundel and St. Jovite areas, two Crystal Falls men were formally charged in court at St. Jerome on Friday and remanded into police custody for questioning.

The pair, Alexis Bertrand, 27, and Raymond Richer, 17, were arrested by Det. Henry Berland, of Provincial Police, at Huberdeau in the reported shooting and theft of five prize cattle at the farm of Dr. J. C. Flanagan, near Arundel, the previous week-end. The two head of cattle mentioned in the charge, alleged to have been bled after the shooting and later sold, were listed as property of Dr. Flanagan.

Bertrand and Richer are also alleged to have stolen 40 hens from an Arundel man and a total of 40 roosters from two St. Jovite residents.

ALEXANDRIA HEARS ONTARIO PREMIER

Price Floor Essential to Farmers After the War, Says Premier Nixon

Alexandria, Ont., July 27 (CP) — Premier Nixon, of Ontario, said here today in an election address that a price floor would be needed after the war to assure the farmer of a "just and fair" return for his products, just as a price ceiling was needed in wartime to keep down the cost of living.

He said the Ontario general election had been called so his government could keep faith with the electors, its mandate having expired.

Mr. Nixon said that at the end of the war he would seek the return to the provinces of all the taxing powers surrendered by them to the Dominion Government as a war measure.

It's A Small World

Miss Marjorie Leggett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Leggett, of Lachute, was agreeably surprised to receive a letter this week from Bryce Murphy, of New Zealand. Eight years ago a number of girls at Lachute High School adopted "pen friends", and the war has brought Bryce Murphy, with whom Miss Leggett corresponded, here to Canada where he is training, at Kingston, for a pilot of the Fleet Air Arm. Needless to say this friendship will ensure a hearty welcome for the New Zealander to Lachute.

WOMAN CYCLIST IS DROWNED IN GRENV'L CANAL

Ship's Captain Finds Bicycle, Canal Waters Drained to Recover Body

The body of Simone Roy, 22, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Roy, Hawkesbury, was recovered from the Grenville canal last Friday night, after the canal waters had been drained down to a depth of two feet.

The girl was drowned late Thursday night while she was riding her bicycle towards Grenville to get a taxi for a friend who had fainted near canal lock No. 6, and is believed to have fallen into the canal in the dark.

She was not discovered missing until 1 o'clock Friday morning, having told friends with the fainting girl that she would not return with the taxi. After she had been reported missing by her parents, investigation was begun by Det. Laurent St. Laurent of the Provincial Police and Traffic Officer Howard Jones, of Calumet.

Waters of the canal were dragged throughout Friday, the body being recovered at 8.30 p.m., several hours after the girl's bicycle had been seen on the canal bank by the captain of a passing vessel.

An inquest was held by Coroner Dr. A. R. Cote, following recovery of the body. Testimony was given by friends who had been in company with the victim on the fatal night and by men who retrieved her body from the canal. Evidence showed that the road, or pathway, bordering the canal was unlighted and rough—the presumption being that the girl's bicycle had upset in a rut and she had fallen headlong over the bank of the canal. The body was discovered five feet from shore and within a distance of 75 feet from where the bicycle had fallen.

Verdict of accidental death was returned by the jurors.

PLAN TO DETAIL ARMY GROUPS TO AID AGRICULTURE

By DOUGLAS GREEN,
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, July 28 (CP) — Arrangements for detailing men from army units to help relieve labor shortages in agriculture were duly outlined in the House of Commons by Defence Minister Ralston Saturday, the day on which parliament ended a six-month session.

Col. Ralston said details of the plan would be made public later and one subsequent announcement has already been made by Labor Minister Mitchell.

The decision to detail groups of men will not interfere with the present practice of allowing compassionate leave to soldiers to engage in farm work, Col Ralston said. The granting of compassionate leave is being centralized, with authority given to district officers commanding in an effort to reduce delays.

The men detailed will be restricted to 10 per cent of units on operational duty, though larger proportions may be detached from depots. No men will be detailed from training centres.

In a previous announcement Col. Ralston had said some 5,450 men were already on leave for farm work.

The proposal was forwarded to the provinces by Mr. Mitchell who asked their co-operation on a 50-50 partnership basis with the federal government. Mr. Mitchell said the army pay and allowances of men detailed would be continued. The wages paid by the farmer would be collected by the government and after the return of the men to their unit they would receive the difference, if any, between their normal pay and allowances and the wages paid by the farmer.

The plan provides that while the men would remain under military discipline and orders they would work for the farmer in the same manner as civilian farm workers. Application for army men to help with farm work will be made to government agencies to be designated later.

Death Ruled Accident

Plantagenet Farmer Was Struck by Train

Plantagenet Springs, Ont., July 27 (CP) — A coroner's jury found that Stephen McCusker, 35-year-old Plantagenet farmer, came to his death accidentally on the night of July 17, when struck by a train near Plantagenet. McCusker is believed to have been walking across a trestle and failed to see an Ottawa-bound Canadian Pacific Railway train which rounded a curve and struck him, tossing his body over an embankment.

Godbout Governm't And Social Security

Meeting with the Hon. Adélard Godbout at a dinner recently, a group of social security experts — in conference at Montreal under auspices of the International Labor Office, an organization of the League of Nations — learned at first hand from the Prime Minister of advances in social security initiated by the present government in this province. The econocists and sociologists, among whom was Sir William Beveridge, took advantage of the opportunity to study this long-range work by Liberal administrations of Quebec.

Social security, as outlined by Mr. Godbout, covers the field of economic and social measures which would guarantee to the greatest part of the population, first, the security of steady work and reasonable pay, and second, protection against inevitable hardships in life — sickness, infirmity unemployment, and old age. In Quebec, a number of legislative measures have been enacted which deal with these aims of social security. These were undertaken in advance of the war, and before the publication of the Beveridge Plan, and such progressive social measures in this province have made it a forerunner in the field — a fact brought to the attention of the visiting experts. To the question, "What is the most progressive social legislation in the Province of Quebec?" the answer might be given by the recent legislation dealing with the establishment of sickness - insurance. This progressive measure adopted in the province is in line with contemporary trends — and it is the chief legislation undertaken by the new provincial Ministry of Social Welfare, created through foresight of the Godbout government.

Social security, however, is not concerned especially with measures that provide for medical treatment to the sick. A government has not done its full share in the field of social security when it has provided pensions to the old and indigent, to mothers in need, to the blind; that it, by setting aside funds to provide for the basic needs to which every human being has a clear right. Such measures benefit only a small part of the population, a minority in comparison with the whole population.

True social legislation is that which provides a firm and solid foundation, in the economic structure itself, to the principles of social security; namely, the security of work, recognition of the workers' rights, and understanding between Labor and Capital. For this reason, the sociologists visiting Mr. Godbout the other day were offered an example of progressive social legislation in Quebec's law on objective bargaining. . . . It might be objected, perhaps, that this does not deal with social security. But the abrlitres of the French Canadian industrial worker — his intelligence, his personal initiative are the means towards his social security in the present and in the future; and he faces life with the ambition to achieve that security. Therefore it is contended, all legislation which improves the conditions of labor, which guarantees a fair wage, which aids the worker to increase his efficiency, which gives him the right to air his grievances, and which protects him against any exploitation by capital and guarantees his freedom of association in syndicate organizations — all such legislation is essentially social security legislation, since it provides the foundation on which the prosperity of the bulk of the population is built.

This industrial legislation might well have been cited to the sociologists from Great Britain, United States, and South America, as an example of the Quebec Government for the improvement of social conditions — a policy which takes account of the immediate needs of the present, and also of the repercussions that may follow on the future of the French Canadian people.

RECALLS PATRONS OF 50 YEARS AGO

Toronto, July 27 (CP) — The Ontario general election gives old-timers a chance to recall the Patrons of Industry which became a sort of balance-of-power in the Legislature after the general election of 1894 — nearly 50 years ago.

Led by Jos. Langlord Haycock, a farmer of Cataraqui, near Kingston, Ont., the "P.I.'s" probably were the genesis of the United Farmer movements of 35 years ago throughout Canada. In 1894 the Patrons were elected to 14 seats in the Ontario legislature.

A jingle that made quite a hit in the 1894 election ran thus:

Lives of farmers all remind us
That we haven't got a chance,
The more we toil, we have behind us
Bigger patches in our pants.

However the P.I.'s were an impressive group in the Legislature for the next four years. In the 1898 general election Mr. Haycock was defeated with most of his colleagues and the Patrons of Industry dispersed.

Mr. Haycock was in 1903 appointed Inspector of Binder Twine for the Dominion government. He died some years ago.

Order Destruction of Drug-Producing Plants

R.C.M.P. Investigate Farm in Western Ontario

London, Ont. (CP) — Royal Canadian Mounted Police officers visited a farm at Crumlin, near here, and ordered destruction of more than 1,500 plants. They said the plants were being grown for food seasoning only, but actually were drug-producing plants. The farmer, whose name was withheld, was said to have been following a custom of his homeland in Europe in growing the plants for the seeds to be used to flavor bread and biscuits.

Action was an outcome of a search throughout Western Ontario for persons criminally cultivating the opium poppy, especially in the tobacco-growing areas.

BAUXITE ON GOLD COAST

Cairo (CP) — Hitherto unworked deposits in the Gold Coast are being exploited for wartime use by the British government which is building special railway sidings to handle the ore.

Boyhood Comrades in Radio Now Are "Comrades in Arms"

Billy and Pierre of Early Radio Serial Now Fight for Ideals Their Radio Drama Honored on CBC Network

Two young Canadians, a French-speaking soldier and an English-speaking navy man, are fighting for the ideals which they espoused as boy actors a few years ago.

They are Walter Reginald (Reg) Curtis, of His Majesty's Canadian Army, Ottawa-born of an English father and a French Canadian mother, and Kenneth Leigh-Smith, McGill graduate of English Canadian parentage, a Sub-Lieutenant in the R.C.N.V.R., and at present on loan to the Royal Navy.

Reg joined the Reserve Army when he was too young to go active; Ken received his gold medal in electrical engineering, in absentia, because he was at sea when graduation time came. The boys are the best of friends today, as they were in childhood, too. Then they were known to the CBC audiences as Billy and Pierre and played the leading roles in a daily serial. The story provided amusing evidence that the affections and misunderstanding of childhood can provide the antidote to political and social misunderstandings in grown-up life.

Through their natural curiosity and friendly rivalry each revealed the virtues and the short-comings of his respective environment and in the end, the comradship of these two boys — Billy, the English Canadian, and Pierre, the French Canadian — grew to include their families, their schools and their communities. Often since the days when they played together in the Montreal studios of the CBC under the direction of Rupert Caplan, they have met, laughed and talked over old times when their mutual ambition was to grow up to be movie stars.

Stardom has come to both, stardom in service to the country they both love. When it is all over, what will Billy and Pierre do? Well, Billy, that's Ken now, will continue his career in engineering, and Pierre, that's Reg, who worked his way through a special business course after high school graduation and who is with the Canadian Army Medical Corps, plans to concentrate on a radio career. He says he wants to be right back in the CBC studios at Montreal. So, as that's where Ken is heading in the technical end of things, the boys should be able to talk over more recent and exciting "old times" before very long. Here's luck to Billy and Pierre!

Pierre

He was the French-speaking hero in CBC's early serial, "Billy and Pierre." Today he serves with the R.C.A.M.C., as Walter Reginald Curtis.

Billy

He was the little English-speaking boy of "Billy and Pierre", the CBC dramatic serial. Today he's Sub Lieut. Kenneth Leigh-Smith of the R.C.N.V.R.

Trial Pool Delivery Saves Gas and Tires

A saving of 65.5 per cent in mileage, 68.8 per cent in gasoline consumption, and from 30 to 75 per cent in costs is reported by the 18 members of a pool delivery inaugurated in March by the automotive trades in Winnipeg.

The success of the experiment has brought interested enquiries from other trades, according to officials of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. It is expected that the pool system will be widely extended during the next few months.

Warning Given On Poison Ivy

Stay away from anything that looks like poison ivy, is a good preventive measure against infection by this weed. The resin which coats the stem, leaf, flower and fruit of the plant is responsible for the dermatitis condition that is only too well-known to people who have suffered from it. Itching followed by welts on the skin is the first sign of infection. It is best washed at first with soap under running water. Permanganate of potash is an old time remedy against poison ivy but one that is threatened by a better drug on the market which your doctor will prescribe.

Those who fondly believe that poison ivy is recurrent for seven years have no grounds for this assumption. If you are susceptible to poison ivy and come in contact with it for seven years, then you will suffer from it for seven years; you are not immune to it after seven years. You may be a victim for thirteen years or more.

Protect yourself with long sleeves and gloves if you work anywhere in the vicinity of poison ivy. It presents more danger at this time of year when people perspire freely. Prevention is the best measure against the infection.

OLD SCHOOL DAYS FOR U.S. ADULTS

Five Million Americans Become Students to Boost Farm and Factory Work

Washington, July 27 (CP) — War has lifted the face of the little red schoolhouse as Americans learn trades in a nation-wide back-to-school rush unparalleled in the history of U.S. education.

Since June 30, 1940, says the U.S. Office of Education, more than 5,100,000 Americans have come students for the sake of war production or farm work.

Sometimes students have pepped up production while learning. In San Diego, California, 700 trainees, mostly women made 190,000 sheet metal parts one month.

While regular schools often have been made over for vocational education, brand-new schools are pushing, production lessons too. In California ferry boats are commuters' classrooms, and in Vermont, mobile schools roll round to the people too far from regular vocational schools.

APPLE HONEY RELEASES GLYCERINE FOR EXPLOSIVES

Moncton, N.B.—"Apple Honey," now being produced from Nova Scotia fruit, is used to maintain the freshness of cigarette tobacco instead of glycerine now in demand for explosives and other war purposes. Research work is being carried on to discover other uses for this apple syrup in wartime substitutions.

Wartime Photography In Quebec Province

A list of places in the Province of Quebec where photography of any kind was prohibited, except by special permission from military authorities, was published in the September 15, 1942, issue of the Tourist Bureau Information Bulletin.

According to a recently-adopted amendment to the Wartime Measures Act, military authorities have added to this list the two shores of the St. Lawrence River, from Cornwall in Ontario, to the mouth of the river, as well as the Saguenay River.

The new prohibition concerns principally passengers on vessels navigating the St. Lawrence, and not only is the taking of photographs prohibited, but possession of photographic apparatus is likewise banned while on the St. Lawrence or Saguenay.

The Quebec Tourist and Publicity Bureau will be pleased to forward, on request, copies of the new amendment to persons who may be interested in obtaining them.

War Is Education

Emphasis has been placed on one angle of world entanglements — the apparent influence of the war on youth training, entirely apart from military requirements. There are indications of a coming revolution in school and college methods — indeed, the educational reformation may have started already if the words of educationists and developments in legislative circles can be taken as a sign of the times.

War itself is an education if consideration is given to the manner in which rural and urban recruits have been thrown together; and every issue of a newspaper, with its war news, is a lesson in geography and history.

Besides this enlightening process however, are such moves as strong agitations in several provinces for improved rural schools, widened scope of subjects and higher salaries for teachers, while the head of one university has stressed other than academic standards for admission to colleges in the post-war period, emphasizing that manual, as well as mental talent, is important.

Stress in increasing measure has been laid on aptitude tests, as developed in the R.C.A.F. to ascertain the proper niche for the recruit. Perhaps the traditional square peg in the round hole is being relegated to things of the past.

In any event, the war is broadening the outlook of the farm lad — and farm girl — through new associations in the services. It could not be otherwise because new contacts are certain to develop new thought. Many young fellows now in the armed forces, of school and college age, susceptible to environment and receptive mentally, are seeing a great deal of Canada in troop movements — and will see a great deal more overseas.

When they return to home life, they will have had an experience that many could not have otherwise secured. Meanwhile, there is apparently a new school outlook and a new future for the children in educational reforms.

Who says Mackenzie King has no sense of humor? In a letter replying to the protest on postponement of redistribution raised by Maurice Duplessis, the Prime Minister avers the latter "has no right to interfere in matters of Federal concern". — Duplessis, whose plaints have harped so long on the mournful chord of Federal infringement on Provincial rights!

In the Stilly Night

Here's a new slant on "man-bites-dog."

When Capt. J. T. Freeman, gas officer of the Reserve Army Camp at Sarcee, Alberta, took up his residence in one of the huts, he found the territory already occupied. And the incumbents, a family of skunks, were prepared to wage war to the finish.

First effort made by the odoriferous warriors was of course a gas barrage, which they released through the floor of Capt. Freeman's hut. A dauntless warrior himself, the Captain determined not to give an inch. He donned his respirator, found it worked against the pervading aroma of skunks, and bedded down for the night, proving also that one can sleep with a respirator on.

Next morning, however, victory belonged to the aromatic rodents. Captain Freeman moved out.

Montreal shows a higher increase in living costs than other Canadian cities, and residents are up in arms. The figures show — Montreal 20.6 per cent, Toronto 16.3 per cent, Winnipeg 15.1 per cent. . . Our guess is that — with provincial and municipal sales taxes added to every diminutive purchase made in the Montreal stores — the difference is not hard to find.

New Traffic Regulations

There have been a number of changes in the provincial regulations which have not been sufficiently publicized — states our contemporary, the Granby Leader-Mail.

One of the most important is the ruling that when more than one bicyclist is proceeding along the highway they must proceed in single file and at the right hand side of the road. Apparently few of them have heard about this as there are still numbers of bicycles travelling not only two but three and four abreast.

There are also too many cases of two or more persons riding on one bicycle.

Apparently it is nobody's business to stop and inform these cyclists of the fact that they are breaking the law.

There are many other laws which are being broken openly. Last Saturday one automobile went along the Montreal-Sherbrooke highway with two spares on the car, although no car is now allowed more than five tires altogether. There is still the odd motorist who travels at sixty or more miles per hour although the law now only allows forty.

With our multiplicity of governments it seems as if there must be an officer to enforce each law, and no officer will bother with any other law than his own particular one.

Thus a traffic officer or a local policeman will not take any notice of an infraction of a Price Board regulation which governs motoring.

It is a case of too many officers and not enough regulations — concludes the Granby editorial.

Will It Come to That ?

Restrictions on the use of newsprint, which are causing newspapers to reduce their size and curtail the number of copies issued, has caused at least one American publisher — Bruce Shelton, of the Tuscaloosa, Alabama, News — to follow the example of the British and freeze the paper's circulation for the duration. No more new subscribers will be added, except to replace names removed from the galleys.

Doubtless the time will come — if present conditions are aggravated — when "Irate Subscriber" will be told by the Editor that if he does not cease his complaining his subscription will be cancelled.

Perhaps, in that case, to circumvent the threat the letter writer will follow the example of the Scot who concluded his epistolary protest: "If you do not desist from pursuing this policy, I will stop borrowing your paper."

Most People Are Honest

We see by a contemporary that a lost wallet was found and restored to its owner, its $43 intact, that this incident clearly demonstrated "that there are honest people in the world".

Probably this was written by a young cynic who just could hardly believe that anybody could resist the temptation to acquire $43 without working for it. Thus it is we are told of this piece of honesty as something exceptional.

It isn't exceptional at all. It isn't true that most people are thieves, restrained from open crime only by fear of the law.

It is true that most people are honest and decent. If that were not the case organized society as we know it would be impossible.

A WEEKLY EDITOR LOOKS AT Ottawa

By Jim Greenblat

In the House of Commons the other day attended, on behalf of the weeklies, a press conference for General Henri Giraud. A memorable experience for me. The General spoke for 50 minutes, without notes. Tall, wearing a plain khaki field uniform without decorations of any kind, he looked every inch the famous soldier, who in two wars has escaped from German prisons. His chiselled, granite jaw sets up an interesting face, close to a double for the late Lord Kitchener. He talks in slow, measured tones, without gesticulation; at times arms folded. He has piercing eyes which seem to take everything in without moving. While speaking, his face, stern, is in complete repose. Only twice did he appear animated; once when talking about the road from "Tunis to Berlin"; and again later in the question period when asked what effect recognition would have for the National Liberation Committee. His face lit up and he smiled broadly, saying if that was a political question, he knew nothing about politics. He was introduced to the press conference by Prime Minister King.

• • •

Questioned in the House why the discount on Canadian funds as against U.S. dollars, finance minister Ilsley stated that stability is much more important at the present time. Any change in final exchange rates, he declared, would cause a vast amount of dislocation; some would benefit, others wouldn't. There would be no national gain by reducing if the west exported a lot of grain to the U.S. they would suffer by reason of the changing rates set. It was pointed out that to wash out the exchange rate while competing with countries whose currency is depreciated below ours would be a disadvantage to us.

• • •

West coast members like Mr. A. W. Neill, have been particularly anxious for the government to say what will be done with Japanese nationals after the war. There are, roughly, 9,000, a third still subjects of Japan; another third naturalized; remainder born in Canada. Mr. King said the policy must depend upon the times and the situation prevailing, to be, maybe, related and co-ordinated with the same problem facing the United States.

• • •

Government was sharply queried on the European refugee question. Canada will co-operate in recommendations of the Bermuda conference, the P.M. told the House; said little could be done now, shipping being such a vital factor. ". . . best way to save these helpless people is to win the war quickly." Our total immigration from April, 1933 to March, 1942 was 39,000, mostly refugees and thousands others "temporarily admitted".

• • •

Home front quickies: Owing to short supply of allied nations, such seeds as alfalfa, red clover, alsike from 1943 Canadian crop badly needed. Farmers asked to harvest, save as much as possible, sell at ceiling through usual channels . . . formerly only bought in Britain, U.S.A., for the first time we now have delivered, Made-in-Canada, 50 special operating tables for use on naval vessels, a million dental burs for drilling teeth . . . total value of contracts and commitments on Canadian and United Kingdom accounts by Munitions & Supply neared nine billion dollar mark end of June. Don't kid yourself, Canada is pulling its load.

• • •

There was a lump in my throat. Other morning watched national film board crew shoot a scene for a documentary film. Wave after wave of soldiers, airmen, C.W.A.C's., Wrens, air-girls marching down the massive, broad steps of the House of Commons toward the cameras; khaki, blue, white; six abreast, arms swinging, proud of themselves and the historic background. Canada's thrilling youth in uniform. You might see your own boy or girl in that film, some place, some day.

• • •

You asked about bicycles. I'm told present intention not to increase number manufactured. No change in number of models till end of war." We have developed a wartime model, expect to be able to continue its production as it represents the barest essential for cheap transportation", is the statement.

• • •

When the House is in committee discussing departmental estimates, a table is brought in on the Floor immediately in front of the Minister at bat. Here sit deputies who quickly furnish him information on questions which are popped with astonishing regularity from the benches. Atmosphere is quite informal, but often very electric. How they pick those items to pieces, bit by bit. It looks to me like a Minister has to be a cross between a shadow boxer and professor of universal knowledge.

• • •

Here's news, Pacific coast salmon, a favorite food, will likely be lower in price than otherwise, and if the run is good supplies will be available for Canadian tables. Prices Board, fishermen and department have come to an agreement. Previous order setting maximums and price to fishermen revoked.

In the Game

Apparently our navy lads crave action, afloat or ashore. Three elderly ladies, following a hard day at Red Cross, relaxed at a movie. During the feature, which lacked perhaps some of the speed and rhythm demanded by today's youth, one lady dropped a valuable ear-ring. After fumbling around her feet without success, and fearing it might be stepped on, she notified the others. All three leaned over and began fumbling, heads bobbing in a variety of eccentric motions.

At last one of the ladies lit a match. As its light located the missing trinket and all three dived for it, the sailor, half seas over, appeared from somewhere and crouched beside them.

"Hey", he said, "if this is a crap game I'd like to get in on it."

Not one British warship had been sunk by an Italian surface vessel during the two and a half years since Italy entered the war. It is calculated that by March 1943, the Italian Fleet had lost 10 cruisers, 48 destroyers and a large number of submarines.

Rail Traffic Restrictions Affect Vacationists

Suppression of special summer rates on railways was announced at the beginning of July by the Federal Traffic Controller. These special summer rates consist of 21-day tickets, and have been greatly popular with travellers en route to vacation spots in various parts of Canada. Decision to eliminate these special tickets was taken with a view to conservation of rolling stock and fuel, in order that the war effort might proceed at full speed.

Travellers are therefore requested to eliminate all unnecessary travel, and all those contemplating rail trips would be well advised to consult railway agents in connection with recent changes in rail schedules, before starting out.

Order Increases Farm Machinery Production

A Wartime Prices and Trade Board order providing for substantially increased quotas of farm machinery for manufacturers and importers for the next 12 months has been announced by H. H. Bloom, administrator of farm machinery for the Board. Increased food production goals, loss of manpower on the farms and the present short supply of farm equipment were the reasons given by Mr. Bloom for the new order.

Rationing of farm machinery, which was put into effect last October, will be continued as a means of ensuring fair distribution and maximum use of every piece of new equipment.

The number of various kinds of machinery and equipment which may be manufactured has been approximately doubled, although only the most essential units will be produced or imported.

Leather Footwear Squeeze Adjusted

To effect a more equitable distribution of the squeeze in the lather footwear industry, two orders have been issued by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, effective July 16. The orders permit an increase in the price to the retailer with no resulting increase in cost to the consumer and allow the manufacturer to purchase his leather from the tanner at a discount of four percent. As a result of the orders, the present system of subsidies will be discontinued.

"Fair Share" Planned For Short Supplies

A "fair share" distribution of commodities in short supply has been devised by the distributive trades group of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. The plan requires that suppliers distribute goods ratably to all customers in proportion to the sales of the calendar or fiscal year 1941.

Special provision is made for areas where large population changes have occurred. Quebec is one of the areas which has been allocated extra supplies to take care of new developments resulting from war conditions.

New Order Permits Sale of Shotguns

Effective July 20 an order of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board permits the sale of all types of new shot guns in Canada. The new order revokes the one which froze the sale of 18 makes and models of 12 gauge guns. Sales of shot guns were restricted formerly in order to obtain an inventory of supplies and to provide such guns as were needed for vital war purposes.

That Extra Something!

...You can spot it every time

THEY'LL tell you at ship's service departments how much ice-cold Coca-Cola means to the men in refreshment, in enjoyment and in morale. You read and hear similar things every day.

When people feel about a soft drink that way it's got something special. Coca-Cola has. A taste all its own. A drink that adds refreshment to thirst-quenching. Nothing refreshes like an ice-cold Coke.

A Coke and a sandwich! Everywhere you see that combination, you see something that is Canada in distant lands!

Drink Coca-Cola Delicious and Refreshing

Although war has changed and disrupted so many things in their lives, our fighting forces overseas are so often delighted to find in far-off places an old familiar friend... Coca-Cola... being bottled in Allied Nations all over the globe, just as it is at home.

On Tuesday evening, July 20, the many friends of the Rev. and Mrs. Cushing assembled in the church hall for a farewell party in their honor. During the course of the evening a musical program was rendered. Following this a few well-chosen remarks were given by Mr. Homer Cooke, who acted as chairman for the evening. A letter of appreciation was read by Mr. Davis, secretary of the church board, after which a gift of two occasional chairs was presented to the Rev. and Mrs. Cushing by the members of the board.

Refreshments were served by the ladies.

During the nine years which the Rev. and Mrs. Cushing and children have spent in Arundel, they have endeared themselves to many in this community. The congregation join in wishing them success and prosperity in their new field of labor.

Improvements Made to Graveyard of Trinity Church, Lakefield

Lakefield — A successful "bee" was held last Wednesday, when a number of men met to make things more orderly in the graveyard of Trinity Church. Their efforts have made a considerable difference in the appearance of this cemetery, and it is hoped that, after the haying and harvesting season, the grading and fencing, etc., will be attended to by the committee appointed for that purpose. Mr. Thomas McCambly, the treasurer, has charge of the funds for the renovating and the outlook is encouraging for a really substantial improvement to the beautifully situated grounds surrounding the historic old church.

Farewell Gatherings for Minister and His Wife

Morin Heights — A farewell gathering was held in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Horace G. Baugh on Friday evening at the home of Mrs. H. Gillingham. Members of the community gathered for a social evening, and presentations were made to both Mr. and Mrs. Baugh. Mr. J. Kennedy, People's Warden, presented a purse to Mr. Baugh, while Mrs. Gillingham made a presentation to Mrs. Baugh. Recitations were given by Mrs. Morgan, and Miss Vera McCullough acted as pianist for the evening.

In addition to the farewell address, Mrs. Downie read a poem "Our Farewell Wish", engraved in gilt-lettering, along with the names of the 41 families who had contributed to the event. . . The poem read as follows:

We now add ours to your growing store.
The conventional ones, health, wealth and success
We know you'll have; so we guess ours is Courage —
Courage to meet each day's demands
Courage to carry out God's commands
Courage to help each weary soul
Courage to seek the Pilgrim's goal
Courage to smile when things go wrong
Courage to face life with a song;
This wish and our gift we now impart,
With a prayer for Remembrance in each heart!"

• • •

Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Baugh were guests at a farewell party in New Glasgow recently, when a large number assembled at the Protestant schoolhouse to bid them farewell. Mr. A. Nickel, Rector's Warden, presented Mr. Baugh with a well-filled purse, and wished him success in his new work. Particular mention was made in his address about the feeling of unity and harmony which Mr. Baugh had developed in the community, and both Presbyterian elders and the wardens of St. John's Church were present to bear testimony to this fact.

Christian Science Sunday Services

"Love" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon to be read in Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, August 1.

The Golden Text is from Psalms 63: 1, 3. "O God, thou art my God; early will I seek thee: . . . Because thy loving kindness is better than life, my lips shall praise thee".

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible:"No man hath seen God at any time. If we love one another, God dwelleth in us, and his love is perfected in us". (I John 4:12).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passages from the Christian Science textbook "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "God is Love. Can we ask Him to be more? . . . The precise form of God must be of small importance in comparison with the sublime question, What is infinite Mind or divine Love? . . . No form nor physical combination is adequate finite and material sense of God leads to formalism and narrowness; it chills the spirit of Christianity". (pp.2 and 256).

County Couple United In Old St. Mungo's Church at Cushing

Vowles - Watson

Cushing — A very pretty wedding took place at St. Mungo's Church on Saturday, July 17, at 3.30 o'clock, when AC-2 Alan Reginald Vowles, younger son of Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Vowles, of Brownsburg, was united in marriage to Miss Audrey Elizabeth Watson, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Fraser Watson, of Cushing.

The Rev. S. T. Burman officiated. The church was beautifully decorated with roses and delphiniums in pastel shades and the guest pews were marked with white satin bows.

Miss Gwenyth Vowles, sister of the groom, acted as bridesmaid, wearing pale blue chiffon made on Princess lines, and carrying a bouquet of pink roses with baby's breath and fern.

Miss Oro Watson, only sister of the bride, as junior bridesmaid was dressed in pink Guinea crepe and carried a nosegay of roses and baby's breath.

The groom was attended by Mr. Kenneth Lamb, of Montreal. The ushers were LAC. Bill Watson and Mr. Arthur Robins.

The bride was given in marriage by her father; she wore a floor-length gown of white Jerome crepe having a fitted bodice with sweetheart neckline and a full skirt; her long embroidered tulle illusion veil was held in place with a halo of orange blossoms, and she carried a bouquet of red and white roses and baby's breath. Her only ornament, a two-strand pearl necklace, was a gift from the groom.

Mrs. Vowles, mother of the groom, wore a two-piece dress of pale blue with navy accessories, and a corsage of roses and baby's breath.

Mrs. Watson, mother of the bride wore a figured navy sheer dress with white accessories, and a corsage of red roses and baby's breath.

Mr. Leonard Young, of New York, played the wedding music and during the signing of the register Mrs. W. King sang "O Promise Me".

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, following which Mr. and Mrs. Vowles left for a motor trip through the Laurentians — the bride wearing a navy blue sheer crepe with navy accessories.

Out-of-town guests included — the Rev. and Mrs. E. E. Dawson, of Lacolle; Mr. and Mrs. Murray Watson, Mr. Kenneth Lamb, Mr. and Miss Young and Miss Phyliss Dugan, of Montreal; Mr. Leonard Young, of New York, LAC. Bill Watson, of Belleville, Ont.; Rev. and Mrs. N. S. Dowd, of Ottawa.

Verdun Anglican Church Scene of Wedding

Dickie - Golden

In St. Clement's Belcher Memorial Anglican Church, Verdun, Que., at four o'clock on Saturday afternoon, July 3, the marriage was solemnized of Eva Gertrude, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Golden, of Brownsburg, Que., and Robert Charles Dickie, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Dickie, of Verdun, Que. The Rev. H. Norman performed the ceremony and Mr. Harries played the wedding music. During the signing of the register Mrs. McFarlane sang "Oh Promise Me". Baskets of peonies decorated the church.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attended by Miss Ina Dickie, sister of the groom, as bridesmaid, and Miss Evelyn Legg as maid of honor. The best man was Mr. Norman Morrison, cousin of the bride, and the ushers were Mr. Melvin Morrison and Tpr. Everett Golden, of Camp Borden.

The bride wore a floor-length gown of white silk organdie and lace, and a fingertip veil falling from a halo of white gardenias; she carried a bouquet of pink roses.

The bridesmaid wore a floor-length gown of powder blue chiffon with a shoulder-length veil. The maid of honor was in pink chiffon; they carried bouquets of Talisman roses.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at 4560 La Salle Boulevard, Verdun. Mr. and Mrs. Dickie left later for a wedding trip to the Laurentians, the bride travelling in a blue ensemble with white accessories. On their return they will reside in Montreal.

They Laughed When He Sat Down . . . !

Ottawa, July 13 — A pair of shorts, 28 sergeants of the Canadian Women's Army Corps and an invitation to lunch were items which recently added to a "life's-most-embarrasing-moment" for a bewildered Canadian Army Sergeant.

Stationed in Calgary, the Sergeant made a duty trip to the Vermillion, B.C., Training Centre of the C.W.A.C., where 500 girls are in training. The Centre is operated entirely by women, the only men being a couple of Engineers who look after heating and other similar tasks.

It was a warm day for travelling, so the Sergeant was wearing shorts. Came lunch-time, and the Sergeant was invited to lunch in the C.W.A.C. Sergeant's Mess, which, unknown to him, was governed by a rule forbidding the wearing of shorts. When all diners were seated, a feminine Sergeant-Major, eyes a-gleam, informed the furiously blushing visitor of the taboo, admist gales of laughter and offers of the loan of a skirt.

The Sergeant, with a newly revised opinion of women in the Army, is still blushing, for the story beat him back to Calgary and his merciless fellow sergeants.

We don't use it to cure them.

BOOK NOTES

Many of you have read H. V. Morton's 'I saw Two Englands'. Did you notice this sentence: 'Among the great events which occurred during Bunyan's lifetime were the execution of Charles 1, Cromwell's Republic, the return of Charles II, the Plague, the Fire of London, the death of Charles and the succession of James II; and then the flight of James, and the coming of Dutch William'. I cannot remember ever reading before so much History packed in to one single sentence. If you are interested in sabotage, you couldn't do better than read 'The Dark Invader', by Captain Von Rintelen. He speaks with authority as he was in charge of the sabotage operations in the United States and Canada during the last war. The things they accomplished and the ease with which they did them is amazing. This book is to be found in one of the 25 cent pocket editions, and I found it most interesting.

EAT ALONE AND LIKE IT

Maybe it shouldn't be, but a meal without the children present is usually a treat for most parents. You better believe it is even a greater treat for the children. The average parent likes to forget it occasionally, and not be constantly on the discipline end. Children like to relax and be themselves and to eat just as they like without frequent adomishments about their manners, or eating too fast, or on the other hand too much dawdling. If you recognize this fact, why not do something about it and give everyone a holiday for one meal a day through out the summer holidays. Get the children's meal ready, and let them take it wherever they like to eat. What will you give them? Well, sandwiches are always a safe bet with children. Some mother is sure to say she can't be bothered making sandwiches as they are too much work. Really sandwiches aren't much of a job. You can sit to make them; make them any time it is convenient; and can pick a cool spot to work. If sandwiches are more work to you, that is balanced by the fewer dishes necessary for a sandwich meal. The meal does not need to be a sandwich one of course, as the whole family can have the same meal, but it really is a rest to eat alone. Often the child with a picky appetite eats more when left alone.

MIXED DRESSINGS

Do you ever mix your salad dressings? I like to mix bought salad dressings with my boiled dressing for some salads. Some I like to use most of the boiled dressing with just a dash of bought dressing, whereas others are better with just the opposite. You really can get some good combinations. One always feels complimented when guests ask what is in some particular food. The other day I made some ham sandwiches with the end of a boiled ham, and mixed the ground ham with three salad dressings, boiled mayonnaise, and a bought dressing, with an extra dash of mustard for good measure. Several asked me what was in the sandwiches, so you see the mixture made an intriguing flavor. We are short of so many materials now that we need to use imagination in our cooking and try something different.

TWO FAVORITES

When summer comes there are sure to be two of my recipes which are asked for. I think I would feel I was slipping if some one did not bob up and ask for them. Boiled Salad Dressing and Chocolate Syrup are the two. Just in case there are any other readers who have missed them, here they are.

BOILED SALAD DRESSING

1½ Tablespoons flour, 3½ tablespoons sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon mustard, 4 tablespoons butter, ¾ cup vinegar, ¼ cup water, 1 egg, 1 cup milk.

Mix the dry ingredients, and rub smooth with the water. Add the vinegar, the beaten egg, and the butter, and cook over slow heat until it starts to thicken, stirring steadily. Add the milk very slowly and continue cooking and stirring until it thickens. This dressing is particularly good with leaf lettuce to which has been added some onion and chopped hard cooked egg. If I am going to use it for sandwiches I reduced the sugar to three tablespoons. Less butter can be used if necessary. This recipe originally had three eggs and no flour, but during the First War when eggs were a dollar a dozen, I substituted the flour for two of the eggs, and I still do it. You can see this recipe is an old-timer, but it is still a good one.

CHOCOLATE SYRUP

1 Cup cocoa, 2 cups water, 1 cup sugar, pinch of salt.

Mix the cocoa, sugar and salt, add a little of the water and stir over heat until smooth. Add the remaining water and bring to a boil. Bottle and keep in a cool place. Add about two tablespoons of the syrup to a glass of milk. This syrup is rather sweet and it might be a good idea these days to try it with less sugar.

Summer Recipes

By Betty Barclay

Chicken or Tongue Omelet

1 Cup chicken or tongue, 2 tablespoons fat, 2 tablespoons flour, 1 cup cream or milk, salt and pepper, plain omelet.

Chop the meat until it is very fine. Make a sauce of the fat, flour, and milk or cream. Add salt and pepper and chopped meat. Make a plain omelet and spread the meat mixture on it just before folding.

Carrots Toasted

To serve carrots as a separate vegetable, scrape and wash; leave young carrots whole and cut old carrots in slices lengthwise or crosswise. Boil them until tender (15-30 minutes) in water containing one teaspoon sugar. Just before cooking is completed, salt the water. Drain, add butter, and seasoning or roll in butter, then in corn flakes and brown in oven at 350°F.

Savory Potato Cakes

2 Cups hot riced potatoes, 1 egg, 2 tablespoons butter or other fat, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon paprika, sifted bread crumbs, 2 tablespoons chopped mint leaves.

Add the egg-yolk, fat and seasonings to the potatoes. Shape into cakes, dip into the slightly beaten egg-white, which has been diluted with two tablespoons water, roll in crumbs and fry in deep fat (375-390°F.) until brown.

Summer Babies

Not only is summer the season when most babies are born, but it is also the time when the best babies are born, and, what is not quite the same thing, it is the best time for babies to be born.

By best babies is meant not necessarily the best behaved or the best tempered, but those best equipped constitutionally to withstand the rigors and special hazards of early infancy.

"NEXT-OF-KIN" IN CASES OF SOLDIERS MARRIED OVERSEAS

Marriage of an unofficially estimated 8,000 Canadian soldiers overseas to English and Scottish girls has created a next-of-kin problem for authorities at National Defence Headquarters in Ottawa. It means that they have changed the address of their next-of-kin from their Canadian folks to that of their wives with addresses in the United Kingdom. Dependent's allowance is forwarded to the new recipients by a treasury officer at Canadian Military Headquarters overseas.

If a soldier who has married since proceding overseas becomes a casualty, his wife as immediate next-of-kin will be notified as a matter of routine, but Records now advise that the soldier's former next-of-kin, that is, his mother or father in Canada, will also be notified.

Casualty lists are issued only after confirmation has been received that next-of-kin have been officially notified. The Canadian home town of the casualty as usually shown on the list is assumed to be the same as the home town of his next-of-kin. If, however, his next-of-kin (wife) is in the United Kingdom, his Canadian next-of-kin and address will also be shown.

GLORIA HANDLES WINNING PACERS WITH "PRO" TOUCH

Harder Work than Washing Dishes, She Says, but She Drives Trotters to Victory and Works off Weight

Dayton, Ohio, July 26 (CP) — The hardboots on the backstretch out at the county fairgrounds track are arching their eyebrows at a 15-year-old Dayton girl who handles pacers and trotters with a professional touch.

Chubby Gloria Hatfield's boss, Bob Seabrook, says the girl has a firm hand and a fine judge of pace and predicts it will only be a matter of two or three years before she will be driving with the best of them.

Gloria, who lives with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hatfield, and plans to enter Wilbur Wright High School this fall, started training horses pretty much by accident.

Winter Training

She struck up a conversation with Seabrook at the fairgrounds last summer. Already horsemen, suffering from shortage of drivers and handlers, had started hiring youngsters and Seabrook invited Gloria to help him. She did, trudging through snow and slush all last winter to help him out.

This spring Seabrook allowed her to take over the training and handling of Wintonia, a seven-year-old stallion. Twice a week she works him out, and each day she brushes, feeds and walks the pacer.

Gloria is so smitten with the horses that she has begun saving her spending money to buy a trotter of her own, and he has her eyes on a sorrel mare in the Seabrook stable.

It Takes Weight

One of the things that helps Gloria is her weight. Seabrook explained that recently a trotter ran away with a 12-year-old boy, but Gloria, with her strength and 189 pounds, could have pulled him to a quick stop.

Despite her love for horses, Gloria contends that driving them is work, "harder work than washing dishes." But it gets plenty of results, she said. "I have worked off 20 pounds in recent months and I will probably lose much more."

VACATION WISE? MAKE IT WORTHY ALL YEAR ROUND

New York Expert Tells How to Make Holidays at Home Tell Their Good Story for 12 Months

By Betty Clark, Associated Press Writer

New York, July 27 (CP) — Why not hamper yourself this vacation — give yourself some beauty baths?

Most girls work like busy little bees preparing for good old vacation time. Then they leave town in a state of exhaustion — and return the same way. The vacation playground is the Waterloo where they practically kill themselves trying to take advantage of all the recreation offered.

A typical day includes a workout on the tennis court at the crack of dawn, a dash to the beach, and then a few fast sets of croquet or ping-pong as a warm-up for an afternoon golf game. On the theory that one shouldn't sleep on vacation, they dance all night. Exercise taken in moderate doses is healthful, but a sudden change of pace can be a shock.

Holiday at Home?

This year it should be simpler to relax and take things easier on a stay-at-home holiday. With vacation time on your hands, those hop-skip-and-jump- baths that are a habit all year can be replaced by the lukewarm bath-and-snooze road to beauty. It will help relax tense muscles.

Plan to spend a half hour in your tub. Soften the tepid water with some spicy bath salts or perhaps a pine bubble bath. Pin your curls up and lean back against the tub. Work up a good lather with a large rough cloth.

Now take a firm-bristled, long-handled bath brush and scrub your back as vigorously as you can. Follow with a cool rinse in the shower, a brisk rubdown and a 15 minute nap.

Spend your vacation wisely building health and beauty and you can be a belle all year instead of for just two weeks.

There's one great advantage in being a July bride. She can drop around and get biscuit-baking lessons from a June bride.

Petticoat Pioneers Portrayed on Radio

Courageous Home Makers of Early Days in Eastern Canada

Women famous in the history of New Brunswick are to be the subject of a broadcast series beginning today at 4.18 p.m. EDT. The talks originate from Saint John over CBC's National Network.

Charlotte Robinson, of Renforth, New Brunswick, is the speaker for the series. An authority and writer on the province's history, Mrs. Robinson has selected five of the most noted women of the early pioneer days for her broadcast pictures. Each of them played a prominent part in molding eastern Canada into a British dominion.

Charity Newton is the first portrait. Her life was an adventurous one almost from the time of her birth. She was the daughter of a wealthy Rhode Island family, but ran off to marry Ebenezer Smith and join the Loyalist cause. They settled in New Brunswick in 1783.

Others among the province's petticoat pioneers will be discussed in succeeding weekly broadcasts. Elizabeth Regan, Susanna Phillipse Robinson, and Ann Ludlow are among those who took part in the colonial struggles. And Mary Caroline Boyd is important for the records her letters have provided of travels to London and New York 120 years ago.

Perhaps it results from the sudden siege of hot weather, maybe it stems from the war of nerves, or perhaps the Winnipeg Beach Council felt it was time to assert its authority — just to keep its hand in. ARMY FILM SHOWS DESERT WARFARE IN GRIM REALITY

"If you want to know what modern warfare is like, go to see 'Desert Victory,' the documentary record of the British Eighth Army's spectacular victory over Erwin Rommel's Afrika Korps which resulted last November in the chase across the desert from Egypt to Tripolitania. It is not too much to say that it is the greatest battle picture ever made," states Thomas Archer, Montreal critic. This picture appears July 30-31 at the Rex Theatre, Lachute.

The secret of the exciting and awful impression "Desert Victory" makes upon the movie-goer is that it is both screen drama and factual documentary at once. It places you right in the centre of the battle. It takes you, by means of the unerring eye of the camera man right into the heart of the fighting area. It brings modern warfare, its tremendous speed, its colossal impact, its immense range of planning and engineering right into the movie theatre.

And the British Army Film Unit has not been content with mere documenting the way the Germans did in Feuertaufe. This picture has dramatic continuity. There is contrast, there is dramatic tension which is played up almost unbearably in places. There is continuity as technically effective as in such a picture as in Which We Serve. There are stars, too, and they are General Sir Bernard Montgomery and General Feldmarschal Erwin Rommel, both of them first rate motion picture personalities.

The training of the Eighth Army is shown as a preliminary. It is a young man's war. Endurance is needed, to be sure. But speed is an equal requisite. You must be able to fall off a truck going at 30 miles or more an hour. You must learn to use a naked bayonet in practice manoeuvres and not kill your squad mate — if you can help it.

The tension rises as zero hour draws near. The men get their last glimpse of a gorgeous sunset over a peaceful sea before darkness falls and the battle begins. Clever studio shots emphasize the tension on the men's faces as they wait, watches in hand. Silence prevails. Then — "Fire" shouts an officer. And one of the greatest bombardments of all time begins. All is in the confusion of battle and the effect is overpowering.

After taking a sweeping view of the front as a whole the camera settles upon little groups, bayonet men, bombers. Here is a little group of Germans, hands high in surrender. There a ring of torn and broken bodies. And through it all comes the calm voices of the commentators explaining the various moves and their significance.

Tanks wallow in the sands burning furiously, a Hun plane crashes and a huge smoke-cloud mushrooms up. And all the time the guns thud and recoil as the sweating artillerymen serve them. Sappers go out to clear mines away. A sniper's bullet gets one within a few feet of the cameraman. The eye of the camera receives the impact of an exploding shell with an instantaneous blackout. A cameraman probably paid for that shot with his life.

The battle is followed by the chase. There are shots from planes, from the sides of the road, showing the relentless pursuit of the fleeing Nazis. No time is wasted on unnecessary footage.

The climax comes with the surrender of Tripoli. Montgomery, quiet and quizzical, receives the pompous Italian officials in a matter-of-fact way. The populace cheers the Eighth Army as it marches into the city headed by a band of Highland pipers.

Sequences of captive film are cunningly inserted. They are chiefly of interest because they give intimate close-ups of the once formidable Rommel. Rommel is seen at the front, interviewing the press in Berlin, receiving the field marshal's baton from Adolf Hitler.
