Prime Minister L. St. Laurent Visiting Here Today

At Assembly in Lachute Auditorium On Behalf of Government Candidate

'Dark Horse' Entry Withdrew Saturday, Liberal and Progressive Conservative Nominees Wage Vigorous Campaign

Ovila Gagnon, of St. Eustache — Independent Conservative nominee, a stranger to these immediate parts and a 'dark horse' in the electoral race — withdrew his candidature last Saturday, to cause a mild stir in the election affairs of Argenteuil - Deux Montagnes. The reaction that resulted in the opposing Liberal and Progressive Conservative camps is best known to those in the committee rooms of the two parties. The upset in the District Returning Officer's arrangements can be more readily estimated; the manoeuvre called for the publication of special notices and the reprinting of 30,000-odd ballot papers. . . The candidate forfeited his $200 deposit.

Meanwhile the two official candidates — Philippe Valois, Liberal, and Linton W. Armstrong, Progressive Conservative — continued their stampede over a wide area comprised in this double-barreled constituency. Their program of meetings reads like a shuttle-service timetable, as their respective engagements have directed them from one end of the riding to the other, speaking in schoolrooms, parish halls and a variety of places. Local partisans and outside speakers have supported both candidates on the platforms, and many largely attended gatherings have been reported on both sides.

A triumph for the government candidate, Philippe Valois, is the scheduled visit of Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent to speak in his behalf this afternoon, Thursday, at Lachute Auditorium. This is Mr. St. Laurent's second visit to Lachute; he was a speaker at the Auditorium in Mr. Valois' first federal campaign.

The inability of the Hon. George Drew, Opposition leader, to include Lachute in his itinerary as previously anticipated, was a disappointment to the Progressive Conservative ranks. The local party is undaunted, however, by this circumstance, and continues optimistic of victory in the final reckoning. . . Mr. Drew passed through Lachute by C.P.R. on Tuesday, but lack of time prevented a stop-over.

Indeed, the time element is a factor in the conduct of the entire campaign — a difficulty to be surmounted by both local candidates alike. It also accounts for much of the apparent lack of excitement hereabouts — the billboards, the posters and many other evidences usually associated with an election fight in this constituency.

Lachute Boys Win At Macdonald

In the Inter-County Livestock Judging Competition held at Macdonald College on Tuesday, George Pasco and John Oswald were the winners. The team from Howick took second place. Over 100 boys and girls took part in this competition.

The two Lachute boys will represent this district at the Provincial Contest at Sherbrooke Fair, the end of August.

Ross Oswald has acted as Club leader, and the local Agronomist, Alex Bothwell, has been training the boys during the past five weeks, with Donald Robertson representing the Federal Department of Agriculture.

Old-Line Chieftains in Test of Strength

United Church Issues Call to 'Shelter Padre'

Rev. Wilson Bridge Served In Frequently-Bombed London Church

A large and representative congregation of Lachute United Church assembled in the church hall Monday evening to hear the report of the Pastoral Relations Committee, and if favorable, to act upon this report. The meeting was under the chairmanship of the Rev. R. E. Spencer, of Montreal, who is the Presbytery representative on the committee. He called on the local chairman, Stuart Armstrong, to give the report of his committee, which was unanimous in the choice of the Rev. Wilson Bridge, of Andover, N.B.

The secretary, Herb Graham, read many fine testimonials pertaining to the Rev. Mr. Bridge, and the congregation were also unanimous in issuing a call to this former English clergyman.

Formerly a minister in the Congregational Church in Britain, he served during the past war in a frequently-bombed church in the heart of London. A London newspaper referred to him as "the first shelter padre of the war", as he ministered to the terrified victims of Nazi bombing. He was instrumental in forming an inter-denominational service with other Protestant and Roman Catholic ministers, who held weekly services in the bomb shelters of London. After the war, he had a charge in Hove, near Brighton, Sussex.

Coming to Canada in 1951 with his wife and son, he served the charge in Andover, N.B., where he was ever ready to speak to service clubs both in Canada and in the nearby United States. He was approached by delegates from the States to accept a call there, but his heart was in Canada, and his decision rested there.

He has had considerable experience with young people, having been engaged in Boys' Brigade work in England, and in directional capacities for boys' camps in Canada. He is also a member of the Masonic Order.

The Rev. Mr. Bridge succeeds the Rev. W. B. Rosborough, who recently resigned after 24 years of fruitful service with this congregation.

Induction ceremonies will be arranged by the Montreal Presbytery, and will probably take place the latter part of September.

From 1939 to 1952 total wages and salaries earned by Canadians climbed from less than $3 billion to more than $10 billion. In terms of constant dollars the total of wages and salaries more than doubled in those years.

Head-On Crash At Pte. au Chene, Nine Injured

Ontario Car Slides Into Gulley Between Brownsburg, St. Philippe

Nine persons were injured when two vehicles hit head-on near Pointe au Chene on Route 8 last Saturday, at 11.40 p.m. The injured were conveyed by ambulance to Notre Dame Hospital, Hawkesbury, and three were later rushed to Montreal hospitals for further treatment.

A car driven by Harold Combie, of Vermont, formerly of Lachute, was heading towards Lachute when it collided with a panel truck owned by Philips Radio and TV Company and driven by Raymond Coté, Montreal.

Those injured in the passenger car were Mr. and Mrs. Jake Combie, Lachute, Mr. and Mrs. James Girling and son, Brian, Lachute, and Harold Combie, Vermont. Others injured were Messrs. Raymond and André Coté, of Montreal, and Jacques Gascon, of Pointe au Chene. The injured suffered various fractures and cuts of a minor nature. It is reported Mr. Jake Combie is now home from hospital.

Both the car and the truck were demolished.

The accident was investigated by Traffic Officers Albert Legault and Roger Massie, and Detective Maurice Lamoureux of the local Provincial Police.

Car Goes Into Gulley

On the way back to headquarters after this accident, the police officers were called to the scene of another crash on the Brownsburg - St. Philippe Road. René Cliff, of Alfred, Ont., lost control of his car and slid into the gulley near the Lacasse farm, hitting a tree. Mrs. Cliff was thrown from the car and caught between the vehicle and the tree. She was conveyed by ambulance to the Providence Hospital, Lachute, where 18 stitches were required to close a scalp wound.

The driver told investigating officer Legault that he was blinded by the lights of an oncoming car. His auto, a 1931 model, was demolished.

Cliff and two other unidentified occupants of the car escaped serious injury.

Another Collision on Highway No. 8

Minor injuries were suffered by Howard Hayworth, Montreal, and Ernest Racine, Calumet, as well as several passengers, when their cars collided on Route 8 at the intersection of the Ogdensburg Road, last Saturday at 6.45 p.m.

Both cars were proceeding along the highway towards Lachute when Racine tried to pass the car in front of him. Hayworth at this moment turned left into the Ogdensburg montee, and a collision resulted. Hayworth's car was thrown into the ditch, where it came to rest against a post. Damage to both cars was estimated at $800.

Traffic Officer Albert Legault investigated.

Minor Accident, Various Complaints On Police File

The town police force has had a quiet week — in fact, the local docket reveals that most of this summer season has been quiet, up to date. The only accident on record was caused by a 16-year-old Montreal youth, Zalm Coulson, Jr., who started his father's car which was parked on Main Street. The car collided with three other parked vehicles. Damage to all cars was slight — one driver not yet having reported the extent of his damages to the police. The accident was investigated by Chief D. Villeneuve.

A complaint was laid against the Lachute Hotel and its proprietor, Henri St. Onge, for contravention of the recently passed town by-law on operating a dance hall inside the town limits without a license. Mr. St. Onge pleaded guilty and paid a $10 fine plus costs, and purchased his license for the sum of $200. This is the first case of any of the local hotels and dance halls not abiding by this new by-law.

Two local men were held in the town cells for the Canadian Army Provost Corps — both men having been A.W.O.L. from the Army, one for a period of two years. These two returned to camp, reducing the absentee list to 17 for this district.

Highway Racer Competes With Wrong Man!

One driver discovered this week that auto-racing on the highway doesn't pay — not around Lachute, that is. A motorist from Hull, Que., was driving along Route 41 just east of town when an ordinary-looking car pulled up behind him. Not anxious to be passed, the driver sped his car up to approximately 60 m.p.h. The other car followed. Time and distance sped by and the car went faster, being closely followed by the ordinary-looking car. They were racing along the highway on dangerous curves and turns in the vicinity of the Bourbonnière Camps. Apparently not satisfied with this speed, the Hull driver waved the car behind to pass him. The second car went by. . .

Detective Maurice Lamoureux of the local Provincial Police Squad states the motorist was surprised when he passed and stopped him — charged him with speeding and reckless driving — and took him to jail at St. Jerome. The speedster, released on bail, will stand trial at St. Jerome sometime next week.

B'burg Council -- Dissertation On Regulating Business Hours

"Chamber of Commerce in Lachute Got Into Misunderstanding Over That . . ."

Brownsburg — The monthly meeting of the Brownsburg Municipal Council was held at the Social Club on Monday evening, Mayor J. B. Donaldson presiding. Also present were Councillors Ernest Lavoie, Bill Ouellette, Sam E. Rose and René Lafleur.

Arising out of the minutes of the previous meeting, Secretary Emile Hebert mentioned that the last contribution to the Legion Building fund was $100 and that no other contribution comparable with the Rotary, Red Cross or Institute for the Blind had been granted, so he witheld the cheque as passed at last meeting directing him to send the same as last year. Councillor Lavoie moved that a cheque for $25 be sent the Legion to help in the rehabilitation program now in progress. Councillor Ouellette seconded and the motion was passed unanimously.

Councillor Rose enquired how the fund was holding out, designed to meet such applications for assistance. The secretary replied that the Council was in a pretty sound state and the finances were healthy. The sidewalk accounts were coming in. During last week $300 was collected.

Sewer and Road Development

Stan Harris appeared before the meeting to suggest that — in connection with the waterworks extension requested at Maple South and rejected because of cost and no means of revenue — he had received assurance from Mr. Lacasse that the line could be run along the lower side and not be subject to the cost of digging through the roadbed along hard ground. The cost would thereby be greatly reduced and perhaps the Council would be in a position to meet it.

Councillor Rose enquired what were the prospects of greater revenue to meet the cost of amortization. Mr. Harris said there was one more lot sold. Councillor Rose: "That does not increase the revenue very much." However, another estimate would be made taking into consideration the new development.

Mr. Harris also asked if the Council would take over the road through that area? This question resolved itself into a long discussion on the Council's responsibility in the matter of taking over new streets and maintaining them. It was pointed out that the position of the Council was that, if a street was opened by someone wanting to develop the district or provide lots for building, the road must be 66 feet wide to fulfil government requirements; the road must be made in sound manner with ditches and surface well maintained, then the Council could take it over. But it was not the province of the Council to ask a man to put the road in order so that it could be taken over.

Mayor Donaldson was of the opinion that, before opening these developments, owners should approach the Council and provide a plan of the proposals; lots should not be sold haphazardly and then

Chicago Cleric Guest Speaker at Rotary Club

Describes Characteristics And Reactions of American People

The Rev. John R. Hayworth, of Chicago, was guest speaker at the regular meeting of the Brownsburg Rotary Club last week. The Rev. Hayworth has been active in the ministry of the Unitarian Church in Chicago for 40 years, and during all but one of the past 34 years, he has spent time at his cottage in St. Andrews East during the summer seasons.

In his talk on British-American relations, he described the character of the American people and tried to explain their reaction to events, which have at times been misunderstood by the British. Since the American people are a blend of many different nationalities, they do not possess the distinctive features of any one people, and therefore are slower to make up their minds than is generally expected of a leading nation of the world. That factor, the Rev. Hayworth suggested, was the reason that the United States delayed in taking part in both World Wars although making no secret of where her sympathies lay. Similarly, the change-over from traditional isolationism to a policy of collective security was a gradual one, as the American people would not readily recognize the necessity of abandoning out-of-date policies.

However, in dealing with Americans as individuals, the Rev. Hayworth stated that they have more than ordinary ability to deal with each other and to co-operate in community undertakings. He cited as an example, the project of his own Kiwanis Club in Chicago, in which representatives of all the different religions were brought together to form a "Forum on Human Relations". This latter organization has been successful in all types of community work, and was largely responsible for stamping out racketeering in the area. The speaker suggested that other service clubs could benefit their communities by promoting similar organizations, which would teach people to work together in the interests of their own society.

The Rev. Hayworth was introduced by Rotarian King Amos and thanked by Rotarian Mac Walker.

President Keith Rutherford again expressed the thanks of the Club to all the guests of the evening who had helped in arranging the recent Rodeo show.

George McGibbon, president of the Argenteuil Agricultural Society, also spoke and expressed the willingness of his society to co-operate with community service clubs.

Preliminaries Organized for Blood Clinic

Chairman Emphasizes Despite Lachute Location Effort is "County Affair"

Preliminary organization for the coming Blood Clinic, to be held in the Lachute Auditorium, September 30 and October 1, was discussed by the committee at a meeting last Wednesday evening. Various subcommittee chairmen were appointed and the detailed organization is to be in their hands.

"The coming blood clinic is not a Lachute clinic but a County affair", stated Horace Lamarche, chairman of the committee. He added that the only reason the clinic was slated to be held in Lachute was that it was the most central and most populated centre in the County, and that it was thought that a larger percentage of the population would turn out.

Dr. L. Turcotte, County Health Officer, was appointed to form a committee to contact all industries and businesses in Lachute that employ more than 10 people, and ask for their co-operation in making the coming clinic a success.

A special letter is to be sent out to all those who are recorded as past blood-donors at the local clinics, and all families in the County are to be contacted through the mail.

The first day of the clinic (September 30) is scheduled for the businesses and industries, to avoid detaining the employees too long. All other volunteer donors are requested to attend the clinic on either evening, or on the second day, if at all possible. If it is impossible to do this, the clinic is open to everyone at all times — so come when you can.

In closing, Mr. Lamarche added that the objective for the County was 500 bottles of blood in two days, and that this objective could be obtained and surpassed with the full co-operation of all.

A special meeting is to be held September 2 at the Lachute Golf and Country Club with representatives of all the main business and social organizations from the surrounding community scheduled to attend.

It is interesting to note that a member of the committee placed a call to the Red Cross in Montreal for blood to be used in the Providence Hospital, Lachute. The blood was here in Lachute in less than 1½ hours. This is only one of the many ways in which the Canadian Red Cross Blood Donor Clinics serve you and your community.

Lachute High School Results Compare Favorably With Provincial Averages

The results of the Department of Education Examinations in the Lachute High School were, with the exception of Grade XII, better than last year. Twenty-five out of 29 students in Grade X passed, or 86.3%, whereas the provincial average was 66%.

Out of 39 candidates in Grade XI, 29 received their High School Leaving Certificates. This gives a percentage of 74.4 successful pupils, whereas the percentage last year was 73.

Ten students wrote the Grade XII examinations, of which seven were successful. This is one per cent better than the provincial average.

In each grade there were several students who missed obtaining a first class average by only a few marks. These were as follows:

In Grade X — Ruth Cowan and Jocelyn Wilson.

In Grade XI — Marlene Trayers, Paul Zsombor, Audrey McQuat, Anne Dwyer, Heather Graham.

In Grade XII — Val Pattee.

The results are listed on page 2 of this issue.

Supplemental examinations will be held in the Sir George Williams Annex, 1443 Stanley Street, Montreal, for Grades XI and XII, commencing on August 26. Candidates may take examinations in two subjects which must not include more than three papers. Applications should be made as soon as possible to the Secretary, High School Leaving Board, Department of Education, Quebec City. The fee for each examination is $2, which should be included with the application.

No Positive Polio Cases Confirmed

Several in Hospital And Under Observation

"Positive polio cases in this County have yet to be reported", states Dr. L. Turcotte, County Health Officer, "although local doctors have four possible cases, all of which are in hospital under observation. In two instances these are being treated as positive polio cases by the hospital doctors even though they have not been officially confirmed as such", Dr. Turcotte added.

The only effective cure for this dreaded disease is prevention and this is only possible by observing all general health rules, according to Dr. Turcotte. The most important of these are the elimination of all flies in and around the house; keeping garbage cans washed and covered; staying away from large gatherings; avoiding over-fatigue in any manner; and above all, staying out of the North River or any other body of water that has been condemned by the Public Health Department. If you are in doubt, consult your physician immediately. If the case is suspicious, the physician will notify the proper authorities, who know just what to do.

In the case of places where the water is not chlorinated, all drinking water should be boiled before use. The water will taste "flat" after being boiled, but beating the water with an egg beater will distribute the necessary air back into it.

In the case of farms, special care should be taken with water from wells, to ensure that no drainage is entering in. Barns and other outbuildings should be sprayed to prevent flies from accumulating.

Pamphlets on poliomyelitis are available at the County Health Unit in Lachute.

Murder Suspect to Appear Aug. 19 at Alexandria

Alexandria, Ont. (CP) — Henry Seguin will appear August 19 for preliminary hearing before Magistrate Leopold Lalonde on a charge of murder.

Seguin, 32, is charged with killing Leonard Hurd, a Maxville, Ont., taxi owner. (In hiding before his arrest in British Columbia, he left his car and other evidence that he had sought refuge in the Calumet district of this county.)

Seguin was flown to Kingston, Ont., penitentiary recently from British Columbia where he was serving a 20-year sentence for attempted bank robbery and shooting at a policeman in connection with offences committeed last December.

Between 1938 and 1950 Canada's national income increased 3½ times while total endowments of Canadian universities increased only slightly more than twice.

New K. of C. Hall Takes Shape

Pictures taken in early May and in mid-July, showing progress in construction of the new Knights of Columbus Hall on Foundry Street. From the unsightly excavation, which involved some lengthy blasting into a ledge of solid rock, the concrete-block walls are now well advanced, giving an idea of the shape and dimensions of the new hall.

Among Ayrshire Top Producers

The Canadian Ayrshire Breeders' Association lists the top-producing milkers for early July. In the 365-day division, Cumming Bros., Lancaster, broke all production records for the past month with their 7-year-old, Allendale Pride, who has made an ROP record in 365 days, mature class, of 18,780 pounds M, 812 pounds F, averaging 4.32 per-cent.

In the 4-year class, Willowhaugh New Look, owned by J. H. Black, of Lachute, produced 10,257 pounds M, 453 pounds F, 4.16 per cent. New Look is sired by Smithston Ivanhoe, Imp.

T. R. McBlain and Sons, Langley Prairie, B.C., have a leading three-year-old in Daisy Bank Primrose 2nd with 11,206 pounds M, 533 pounds F, averaging 4.76 per cent.

Cummings Bros. also topped the 305-day honor roll division, with Allendale Pride who produced 16,653 pounds M, 720 pounds F.

Seasonal

Farm Topics

Pasture in the Crop Rotation

Ottawa — Pasture in the rotation, as the term implies, forms a part of the regular crop rotation. This type of pasture provides an opportunity to thoroughly work the soil and effectively restore fertility by incorporating manure or commercial fertilizer into the surface layer. It permits the use of the larger-growing, deeper-rooted more productive grasses and legumes which may be harvested for hay, or silage, or grazed, as the need arises. The flexibility provided by this type of pasture allows the farmer to adjust his forage program to fluctuations in production.

In trials conducted by the Experimental Farms Service at Ottawa and at a number of Branch Stations in Eastern Canada, it has been shown that the rotation pasture has provided a fairly uniform production throughout the season allowing an almost constant rate of stocking. In areas where drought periods are long, the total seasonal production was higher than from any other type of pasture.

Maintenance of rotation pastures involves management practices that are somewhat more exacting than those of permanent pastures. Unrestricted grazing will tend to shorten the life of the legumes. Large quantities of nutrients are removed from the soil and this necessitates replacement by the use of manure or commercial fertilizer. In a rotation it may be advisable to apply half the manure to the hoed crop, or at the time of seeding down, and the remainder in the fall of the year as top dressing to the pasture. Commercial fertilizer may be applied in the intervening years to maintain a high level of production.

U.S. MAPLE CROP POOR

The 1953 season was a very poor one for New Hampshire maple sugar and syrup producers. Production for the state as a whole was 25 per cent below last year.

Bovine TB Serious Problem in Britain

Fresh ammunition for the campaign for safe milk in Great Britain is contained in the recent report published by the National Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis. The report is based on a survey undertaken by the Medical Research Council to determine the causes of the increase of the death rate from tuberculosis in the early part of the war.

The investigations covered the period 1943-45 in England and Wales, 1943-44 in Scotland, and 1945-50 in Northern Ireland, and consisted in typing tubercle bacilli from cases of non-pulmonary tuberculosis and pursuing detailed inquiries about the patients from whom they were derived. The number of strains examined was 994 in England, of which 261 (26.3%) proved to be bovine, 112 in Wales (19 or 17% bovine), 1,051 in Scotland (228, or 21.7%, bovine) and 387 in Northern Ireland (16, or 4% bovine).

It is apparent from this that tuberculosis of bovine origin remains a serious problem in the British Isles.

Poisonous Weeds Might Become Useful

If the studies of a young Canadian chemist bear fruit, certain weeds which are poisonous to farm animals someday may become useful in the manufacture of drugs for treating the ills of mankind.

The chemist is Dr. Raymond Leduc, of Montreal, who is conducting pure research under a C-I-L fellowship in the laboratories of the National Research Council, Ottawa. His research is aimed at finding the chemical makeup of "alkaloids" in poisonous weeds like the death camas, Dutchman's breeches, squirrel corn, lupines, spotted water hemlock and larkspur. He will also attempt to determine the reason for their presence in plants and what function they perform.

Alkaloids are bitter organic materials poisonous or potentially harmful to both man and animal but, in small quantities, have wide medicinal uses. Commonly known alkaloids are strychnine, morphine, coocaine, caffeine, nicotine and quinine — all obtained from different plants.

Dr. Leduc is interested chiefly in the fundamental aspect of alkaloid chemistry. Anything he uncovers that may lead to the commercial application of the alkaloids he is working with, will be passed on to NRC's applied chemistry division.

Early Fall Best For Lawn Seeding

Because moisture and temperature conditions are usually ideal for germination and growth, the last two weeks of August and the first two weeks in September is the best time throughout most of Canada to plant a lawn.

According to James E. Boyce of the turf research division of the Central Experimental Farm in Ottawa, fall-seeded lawns get an early start and are able to compete effectively with the warm-weather weeds which germinate in late spring and early summer.

Writing in the August issue of C-I-L Oval, Mr. Boyce describes the ideal lawn soil as a rich, deep, medium loam. Clay soils can be improved by use of soil conditioners such as "Loxar". The proper application of complete fertilizer prior to seeding is much more important than the rate of seeding or the ratio of components of the seed mixture.

He advises prospective home builders to strip the top soil from the lot, stockpile it in one corner before construction and re-spread it after proper grades have been established. This will save up to $350 in top soil replacement costs on an average-sized lot.

12 Countries Competing For Plowmen Trophy

Toronto — This October, crack plowmen from 12 countries will be vying for possession of a golden model of what is, in all probability, the great-great-great-granddaddy of the plow they use from day to day. The winner will be the first tractor plowing champion of the world.

The championship and the trophy, known as the Esso Golden Plow, will be awarded at the first world plowing championship match which will take place on the Durham - Northumberland Counties Home Farm, near Cobourg. It is being held in conjunction with the Ontario Plowmen's Association annual four-day International Match, October 6 to 9.

The United States, Denmark and Belgium have confirmed their entries in the match. Competing countries now total 12.

The trophy for the world champion is being jointly offered for annual competition by Imperial Oil in Canada and other interested companies overseas.

The World Championship Ploughing Organization decided its trophy should be symbolic of plowing as an ancient art. The original of the plow selected as a model is in the London (England) Science Museum. It is believed to date from about 1721, though some of its features go back to the 16th Century. Called the Norfolk plow, it is one of the pioneer light plows in England and the continental countries, and the forerunner of nearly all modern plows. With a pair of husky horses and an equally husky British yeoman behind it, it was capable of turning over about an acre a day — about one quarter as much as a modern tractor plowman with a one-furrow plow could accomplish.

Confirmation of the Belgian and Danish entries was received from Alfred Hall, W.C.P.O. secretary in England.

Other nations competing are Great Britain, Northern Ireland, Republic of Ireland, Norway, Sweden, Finland, Holland, West Germany and Canada.

Ayrshire Provincial Field Day, St. Hyacinthe

Over 300 Quebec Ayrshire breeders attended the provincial field day at the St. Hyacinthe Dairy School farm recently. Cloudy skies prevailed but rain held off and did not mar the day's activities.

Guest speakers included Dr. J. Berry, of Vancouver, president of the National Ayrshire Association. He told the breeders that their officers are drawing up a set of records that will make individual cow and bull records more readable and understandable at a glance.

The Hon. Laurent Barré, Minister of Agriculture for Quebec, told the breeders that as farmers they should not worry so much about reducing costs but to produce a better quality product and to see that it is merchandized better, in being sold to the consumer. Always keep an eye open to the wants of the consumer. He also pointed out the value of the provincial artificial insemination unit and urged them to make use of it. He closed by saying that he hoped he would see before he died the day that there were no longer money-losing scrub bulls on the province's farms.

The day started off with a judging class of which Prof. A. R. Ness, Macdonald College, Dr. G. Toupin, Oka College, and S. J. Chagnon, vice-president of the Agricultural Prices Support Board, were the judges.

"I'd like to say this to all Canadians..."

UNDER a Liberal government, Canadians have added every year to the national strength and national unity of Canada;
We have had the greatest expansion of social welfare in our history;
We have increased our employment, our production and our national income every year;
We have had the greatest expansion of our primary and secondary industries — truly an industrial revolution;
Because of the outstanding contribution of the members of our Navy, Army and Air Force, we have been able to do our full share to prevent and to stop Communist aggression;
We have reduced the national debt every year, and, in the last two years, reaped the reward in lower tax rates.
Do we want all that to be continued?
Do you really think it's time for a change?
For a change to a Parliament of regional groups — a handful of Social Crediters from the Far West, a few Socialists from the Prairies, a few more Conservatives from Ontario or the Maritimes and some so-called Independents from Quebec?
In such a Parliament without the leadership and responsibility of a united national party, how could the government help being weak and insecure?
Do we want a weak and divided government to deal with the formidable problems of the next few years? I ask you, IS it really time for a change?
We believe most Canadians want a government which encourages enterprise, promotes trade and fosters the exploration and development of our resources; and you know it as well as we do, that requires balanced budgets, paying off debts in prosperous times and a tax structure which, while fair to all, is adequate to meet these demands.

Dangerous Practice

WARNINGS are published repeatedly against carelessness with cigarettes and campfires in the woods — including the practice of throwing cigarette butts out of car windows.

A striking example of this dangerous habit came to our attention last week-end, when the bush near our neighbor's summer cottage suddenly became a blazing inferno, where a passing motorist had tossed a lighted cigarette or a glowing match into a brushpile beside the road. A hurried call brought nearby campers with pails and shovels, and the blaze was soon subdued — not, however, without threat to the property and other neighboring cottages.

To impress the suddenness with which these fires occur, and the speed with which they spread, needs but one example of this kind. But surely the average smoker has intelligence to realize the danger and heed the warnings, without the need of visual evidence.

The Younger Vote

THOUGH many candidates do not seem to realize it, the audience they are addressing today varies significantly from that of only a few elections back, says The Financial Post. There is a very considerable number of electors, for instance, who in their adult lives have only lived under a government of the Liberal party. More than one in three have no personal memory of the great depression, of low taxes, of a period when there was no inflation and no baby bonus.

Most of these younger people have no recollections of the political issues and fights of a generation ago, and no formal connection with any political party. While they are well spread across the country, they are much more concentrated in the urban areas and particularly the new urban areas.

It would be a bold person indeed who would predict just how this group of Canadians will cast their vote but they could have a profound influence on the result.

U.K. Economic Problem, Houses or Highways

THE ABOLITION of gasoline rationing and the fact that manufacturers can now sell a greater percentage of their new cars on the home market have brought a substantial increase in the number of cars on British roads. At 18.1, the number of motor vehicles per mile is the highest in the world and the ratio is rising steadily. Highway construction has not kept pace, and traffic congestion is beginning to affect national production adversely. It is not only in the cities that the trouble occurs but on countless main roads in the country as well.

Road transport bulks large in the United Kingdom's economy and its efficient operation is therefore vital. But when vehicles are held up by road congestion, fuel consumption per mile increases and the output per man engaged in road haulage drops.

The national cost of this state of affairs is difficult to assess. Many factors are involved. A high accident rate is one distressing consequence and costs, it is estimated, about $450 million a year. Economically, the greatest cost lies in the time wasted because traffic moves more slowly.

In the United Kingdom as in many other countries, not all the taxes paid by the motorist are used to maintain the roads. Only 15 per cent of the motor and fuel taxation collected since the war went to road maintenance or extension. When these taxes were first introduced, all parties agreed that the proceeds should be devoted entirely to supporting the roads. Unfortunately the need for increasingly larger sums for government, and the reluctance to hoist other taxes, has tempted virtually every government to use the funds collected for other purposes.

The average cost of road construction in the United Kingdom is probably about $750,000 per mile. Because the resources are not limitless, the Westminster Bank Review suggests that the housing program might be cut back to free money for the roads. Assuming a road program of 200 miles of new highway a year as a target, the cost, if undertaken exclusively at the expense of the housing program, would be the equivalent of 26,700 houses, or only 11 per cent of the number completed in 1952. Politically it may be difficult to put "highways before houses", but a good case can certainly be made for the economics of such a program.

Method and Persistence in Resuscitation

IN ADDITION to the numerous activities of attending the wounded, collecting blood plasma, relieving distress when disaster strikes and the other multifarious duties which its work involves, the Red Cross Society conducts a campaign to prevent loss of life — especially through drowning. In co-operation with, or because of, a movement started by a Catholic priest, instructors have been trained to teach young people to swim and more particularly to revive and resuscitate drowned victims. . .

Without going into the details of this movement, an instructor has been procured by the Red Cross at the Rotary Park and Swimming Pool at Brownsburg, where young and old can learn to swim, and can also learn the latest methods of applying artificial respiration.

For years past, the St. John's Ambulance Association among others has been teaching a method of restoring life to asphyxiated persons which recent discoveries has revealed was of doubtful effectiveness. So uncertain were the results, that operators became easily discouraged and did not persist for the time necessary to restore breathing and life. The method now in vogue and which is taught at the Brownsburg Pool, has been proved far more effective, and if there is any spark of life present it can be assured of careful fostering till the full flame of life again flickers.

As has been repeatedly emphasized by radio and newspapers during the present season, the big matter in the success of resuscitation is persistence. Keep on when the will to work has flagged, and when there is nothing else to do but keep on keeping on. Life has been restored after efforts lasting four or more hours. So don't become daunted, no matter how hopeless it seems; when there is nothing left but the will to keep on — keep on.

Keep Memories Green

LET'S SAY you're just back from a vacation — with a sunburn, a glow of new vigor and a handful of snapshots.

The sunburn will fade. The extra burst of energy, sad to say, will probably peter out in the face of the 50 weeks of toil before next year's vacation. But those snaps can keep the memories of your 1953 holiday alive far down the years — provided you take proper care of them.

After all, you probably went to a lot of trouble to get the pictures. Likely you climbed a rocky ledge and clung precariously to the bushes to get just the right angle for a shot of the young folks in the canoe, or missed supper while trying to capture that sunset with color film. When you took the camera along in the boat or on hikes, you always were careful to protect the lens from damage by flying spray or a jagged branch.

Now your prints are back — some good, some fair, probably a few bad. You've chuckled over some of the scenes of the gang at the beach, exulted over the good campfire shot and mourned over the twilight effort that didn't get quite enough light. Good or bad, they are probably all you can count on to remember this year's fun after other holidays have come and gone.

The first thing to do — and it should be done as soon as possible — is to date your snaps on the back. A handy way is to use an inexpensive little rubber stamp and ink pad, although even a pen or pencil will do. You may also want to write down the place where the picture was taken and the names of the persons photographed.

Then, for safekeeping, the best thing to do with the prints is to mount them in an album. Various sizes and shapes of albums are available, many of them costing fairly little. An inquiry at a photo supply store will probably turn up the best kind of material to stick the prints in the album — there are some new types of mounting cement available — or you may prefer to use mounting corners.

Once you have the album, you can place the pictures on the pages in any way you wish, working out fancy designs or just arranging them by subjects in neat rows. Filling the album is an interesting task in itself.

Best of all, you'll know that next winter or years from now, you can open your album pages and rekindle your memories of your happy holiday hours that have become a part of your yesterdays.

"Cloth Curtain" Our Guarantee of Freedom

"Vote as you wish, but vote and thank God you are free to do it."

Montreal — Calling the cloth curtain of the voter's booth a guarantee of freedom in a world split by the Iron Curtain of tyranny, Donald Gordon, C.M.G., Chairman and President of the Canadian National Railways, has urged all eligible employees of the company to "vote as you wish, but vote and thank God you are free to do it."

Mr. Gordon's message, which is appearing in the current issue of the Canadian National Magazine, is in support of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce non-partisan "Get out and Vote" campaign. Nearly 700 Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce and their 2,350 member companies are co-operating in the campaign.

He said that the cloth curtain of the voter's booth symbolizes the right to choose our government. "The cloth curtain is our protection, our guarantee of freedom. It is there only that we can cast our ballot, free from intimidation or any sort of compulsion."

Mr. Gordon contrasted this curtain to the Iron Curtain. The Iron Curtain "is not there to ensure privacy and freedom of choice but to hide mediaval tyranny and terrorism. The Iron Curtain shuts in oppression so that the free nations cannot see it, and shuts out the rest of the world so that the oppressed may be kept in ignorance and subjection."

Our way of life has been achieved after centuries of struggle and trial, Mr. Gordon said. But, he continued, "If we do not realize that freedom is a responsibility as well as a privilege, we may lose it."

The essence of political freedom is in the exercise of the free vote. On August 10, go to your poll and vote. Vote as you wish, but vote. And as you step behind the cloth curtain to mark your ballot, thank God you are free to do it."

Political campaign posters have never taken their place alongside stamps, coins and matchboxes as collectors' items. That is unfortunate. Poster-collecting could be a richly instructive hobby.

The photographs of the candidate which often appear on posters are a study in themselves. They give you a good idea what the candidate looked like as a young man.

The skill of a back-room Karsh is brought to bear on the facial expressions, which may convey any one of several messages, depending whether the candidate is an "in" or an "out" and also depending how mobile his face is. Sometimes a candidate attempts several messages at once, risking dislocation of the jaw.

We have, for instance, the purposeful smile, the good-natured scowl, the gazing-into-the-future-of-this-great-country stare, the look-at-our-record grin and the get-the-rascals-out frown.

Small boys sometimes add intriguing variations. One school of thought favors the smart toothbrush mustache. Another faction among portrait re-touchers leans toward the weeping willow or waterfall mustache. More creative small boys add a goatee or, in rare cases, a pair of horns. You would be surprised how different a purposeful smile looks with a pair of horns above it.

It is amusing to see the small boys line up for their dollar bills and all-day suckers at the headquarters of the rival candidate.

As some collectors of stamps collect whole envelopes with postmarks as well, some collectors of campaign posters would collect whole telephone poles or vacant-store windows upon which posters had been placed.

You might expect political posters to be printed with vanishing ink on paper especially designed to fall into powder on election day. An elected candidate surely would not like to be haunted by the ghost of his old self and his unkept promises. A defeated candidate would not like to be reminded of his failure.

Oddly enough, however, the posters seem to stay up for years — a faded picture gallery of political history, an illustrated catalogue of lost hopes.

That's what makes collecting campaign posters so interesting. Look around town, and if you are lucky you may come home with some fine trophies: an early Sir Wilfred Laurier or even a well-preserved Sir John A. Macdonald or one of the lesser Fathers of Confederation.

"What's that piece of string tied around your finger for, Bill?"

"That's a knot. Forget-me-not is a flower. With flour you make bread, and with bread you have cheese. That is to remind me to buy some pickled onions."

A long-winded cleric, hereabouts, is telling the joke on himself with relish. And, too, he's cutting down his sermons to fit the advice which came from Jimmy D., one of his youngest parishioners.

Seems the worthy man went calling on Jimmy's parents, recently. After the usual enchanting pleasantries with the adults, the parson turned his attention to the youngster.

"And how do you like going to church, Jimmy?" he asked.

"I don't!" came the sullen reply.

"You don't?" gasped the parson. "Why not? Don't you like the nice music and singing?"

"Sure", Jimmy replied, "the singing's O.K. But I don't think much of those long commercials you give us!"

Went to hear "Doug" Abbott hold forth at Victoria Hall, Westmount, last p.m. He was in a heated debate with a heckler when I arrived. The heckler was doing better than Abbott — and making more sense, too. Some people said he was a commie and the press murmured something about a mention of "peace" in the lad's remarks. At all events, he must have irked the tax-gatherer, because I heard later that Doug's boys heaved him out of the meeting.

When I got to the hall, Doug was giving the assembled throng a few bars of the government theme-song: "You Never Had It So Good." He suggested that he couldn't think of any period in Canada's long history when the tax-payers were better off. The gent next to me, however, had other ideas.

"Huh", he grunted. "We were better off by way of personal finances in the depression that hit us in the '30's than we are now. The Liberals got us in that mess and left the Conservatives to haul us out."

I gave up trying to decide who was making the most sense at the meeting and left for home. Somehow, though, Doug seemed to be running about a poor fourth.

It's interesting to note what the man in the street is thinking about these days. Mostly, it runs to Korea, Civil Defence, Elections, and the Montreal Transportation Commission. And the most frequently asked questions? Try these for samples.

"Why all the ballyhoo about a truce in Korea? I heard the same tunes played after Ethiopia, Spain and Munich! Where's the next blow going to fall and when are the dumb-dodo politicians going to wake up?"

• • •

"Where's all this Civil Defence we've heard so much about? I figure we'll get ten minutes warning next time to head for the nearest cellar. But I don't know where that is, the Civil Defence hasn't put up signs yet!"

• • •

"Who'm I voting for? Conservatives, of course. I figure the gummint's in a stinkin' mess now. Drew and his boys couldn't do worse job than Sally Rand's been doin'."

• • •

"What's the MTC want to raise fares again for? First fare hike, they got new uniforms for the boys. Last raise they got nice new designs and badges. What's the next hike for — shoes or underwear?"

Good, sound reasoning, all the way!

HABITS OF CARS

Careful investigation would probably show that when you are coming up alongside a parked car that has a driver in it, the left-hand front door of the parked car three times out of five will swing open. It would also be interesting to know what are the percentage chances of a double-parked car moving ahead just as you are trying to pass around it. Everyone knows, of course, that when you are following another car and it swings on the left as it approaches a cross street — it means it will likely turn right.

Mrs. W. H. Warren, having been on the sick list before leaving for New York, entered hospital for a check-up on her return to Montreal and is now in the Reddy Memorial on Tupper Street.

A businessman, phoning an associate at home, was answered by a child. "Tell him that Mr. Brown called", he said.

"Wait till I get a pencil and paper", the child replied, then, "How do you spell Brown?"

"B-R-O", the man began. Then there was a labored silence. Finally the difficulty was explained.

"How", asked the child, "do you make a 'B'?"

To Enlarge, Modernize Quebec Mental Hospitals

By Bertrand Thibault

Quebec, Aug. 3 (CP) — Quebec's mental hospitals are going to be enlarged and modernized under a vast program of reconstruction, Premier Duplessis announced last week.

The program, based on legislation adopted in 1950, will be launched shortly by construction of modern facilities at St. Michel Archange Hospital, near Quebec. The improvements will cost $7,000,000.

Mr. Duplessis announced the government has authorized a grant of $3,000,000 towards the improvements, following a review of the situation of mental patients.

There are seven mental hospitals in Quebec Province. Total number of patients for 1951 was 14,981.

"The number of patients has increased considerably and until recently no administrative or legislative steps were taken to solve problems arising from the situation", Mr. Duplessis said.

There was a need for segregation of various categories of mental patients.

"That is why we provided in our legislation for the setting up of a climate in hospitals which will help eliminate the humiliation attached to these diseases and to begin segregation of different categories of patients."

At Brownsburg Council

expect the Council to straighten out the mess that some developments get themselves into. In some cases, if a road is taken over and improved the owner of the adjoining lots put the price up 100 per cent. This was something that should be avoided in the interest of the future taxpayers.

Secretary: "The law as laid down in the Code stipulates that anyone selling lots and opening a road in Brownsburg must come before the Council and obtain the necessary permission."

Mayor: "Has anyone done that?"

Secretary: "Yes! Several people came and notified us."

Councillor Rose was of the opinion that this town could not support roads 66-feet wide. The usual black-top is 22 feet. "What is going to be done with the rest of the road?" . . Councillor Ouellette: "Grow weeds on it."

Taxi Complaint

Two young men appeared before the Council to ask that some automobile owners who were plying as taxis but without a "T" license be prohibited from doing so. They had reported the matter to the police and no action had been taken. It was not fair to taxi-owners who paid the regular license. After a lot of discussion the Mayor suggested that they notify the Transport Commission, who would look into the matter and get the police to attend to the breach of the law. It was not a matter for the Council.

On the motion of Councillor Lavoie, seconded by Councillor Ouellette, the secretary was authorized to pay the monthly vouchers. A cheque for $600 instalment on the purchase of the Brownrigg property was also authorized.

Gasoline Purchases

Andrew Hardie made inquiry why the Council's need for gasoline was not rotated among merchants selling gas. The secretary replied that at a previous meeting the garage owners had asked to have it confined to the garages, as they had to have service available at all times, while the merchants did not open on such a wide schedule of hours. The Council at that time decided to confine the custom to garages. Mr. Hardie offered a discount of one cent per gallon, which the garages did not, and was therefore included on the Council's list of suppliers. The question of tenders for a complete supply was discussed, as well as getting a wholesale supply pump — but the matter was talked out.

Councillor Ouellette pressed very strongly to have the Council obtain a set of stocks and dies for town use, rather than running around to cut a thread, causing delay and expense. This matter was decided by ordering the tools, not to exceed $150.

Tax Rates

A communication from the proprietor of the Crown Theatre protesting the increase in his tax rate, which had doubled over the last few years, was taken up and comparative taxes considered. Nat Cohen asked to be notified of a revision court, as he was prepared to appear to contest the increase. The Council felt that there was an inequality when compared with other similar properties and reduced the tax from $7,700 to $6,700 — a reduction of $1,000. Councillor Rose proclaimed that the system was outmoded and there was no basis for levying tax at present. It is a matter which should be corrected, by applying a system whereby everyone could know upon what basis taxes were levied.

The Barbers

The secretary read a letter from the Deputy Minister of Municipal Affairs at Quebec, in reply to a communication he had written at the instance of Mr. Parisien complaining of the hours set by the Barbers' Association for the Village of Brownsburg. The Minister said in effect that where there was a by-law in force as at Brownsburg, the Council could insist on its provisions being carried out. It was equally legal that the hours set by the Association come into effect, but where those two sets of laws came into conflict, it was a matter for agreement between the two parties to have the matter righted. The Mayor felt that the local Council's laws must be upheld, but that no Council can determine the hours a man must refrain from work between seven a.m. and six p.m. Half-holidays are all right by co-operation or agreement, but such things cannot be legislated. The Chamber of Commerce in Lachute got into a misunderstanding over that.

Councillor Lavoie: "This thing of barbers closing at six and butchers at five, and some other one at some other hour, leads to operators cutting their own throat. If we keep on with that, we will make this place a ghost town."

Councillor Rose expounded a theory of man being a free agent. "No one has the right to tell him when he should work or quit. No country ever prospered under restrictions and no Union or Workers' Association can exist beyond the time when grievances cease to exist. A Union may be good so long as it improves the lot of its members, but when that adjustment has been made and the workers' or members' lot comes into consonance with the living conditions around him, the function of the Union ceases. No one should be in a legal position to tell him when to work or quit if he is an independent operator, and any government which countenances such restrictions is not serving the best interests of the people."

Get Royal Warrants After Three Years

"By Appointment" Honors for Tradesmen Will Not Be Granted Until 1955

London (CP) — Some time in 1955 certain craftsmen and tradesmen in Britain and overseas will be given the right to display the royal coat of arms with, beneath, the words "By Appointment to H.M. Queen Elizabeth II".

It is not until the soveign has been three years on the throne and has been satisfactorily served for that time that a warrant of appointment is granted to a supplier of either goods or services.

Originally, holders of royal warrants were tradesmen attached to the royal household — virtually members of the staff. No one knows exactly when an outside tradesman first received a warrant.

In London's Public Records Office, however, there is preserved a warrant dated 1692, recording that Thomas Herbert was "Their Majesties' Clockmaker in Ordinary". He supplied a large pendulum clock for the king's coach and six alarm watches for the Royal pages. It suggests either that the king was a stickler for punctuality or that the pages were apt to sleep on duty.

Wide Variety

Among the warrant holders who served the late George VI were silversmiths and seedsmen, suppliers of food of all kinds, makers of agricultural implements and robes, cement merchants and fine art dealers, and many individual craftsmen, including a reed thatcher of the cottage on the royal estate in Norfolk, chimney sweep and window cleaners.

The names of some warrant holders were famous, others unknown; but the goods or service of each one of them were the best of their kind.

It is not only in Britain that the royal coat of arms with its inscription will be seen in 1955. If Queen Elizabeth follows her father's example it may be granted to tradesmen in many countries of the Commonwealth, in North America and in Europe.

But no matter where the royal warrant is held those who are entitled to use such distinction are jealous of the honor and maintain among themselves the highest standard of business conduct. What is more, prices do not rise for the ordinary customer when a tradesman is granted the privilege of marking his wares with the seal of royal approval.

Wed Saturday in Suburban Church

Leishman - Thomas

Standards of white and pink gladioli and chrysanthemums decorated St. Matthew's Church, Hampstead, Saturday afternoon for the marriage of Ruth Helen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter C. Thomas, of Notre Dame de Grace, to Mr. Donald Robert Leishman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Leishman, of Lachute. The Rev. Canon G. E. Trueman performed the ceremony, while Mr. Clifford Johnston played the wedding music.

Mrs. Allan Mair, twin sister of the bridegroom, was matron of honor, while Miss Dorine Timm and Miss Emily-Ann Naismith were bridesmaids. Mr. Allan Mair acted as best man for his brother-in-law, and the ushers were Mr. Jack Leishman, brother of the bridegroom, Mr. Robt. Thomson, cousin of the bridegroom, Mr. Desmond Houghton, and Mr. Raymond Kearns, cousin of the bride.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white Chantilly lace over tulle and satin, the long-sleeved fitted bodice styled with a tulle yoke and small Peter Pan collar, while the floor-length skirt ended in a long train. Her elbow-length veil of embroidered tulle illusion was held in place by a coronet of white flowers, and she carried a semi-cascade bouquet of Sweetheart roses with white sweet peas and stephanotis.

The matron of honor, in heavenly blue, and the bridesmaids, wearing starlight yellow, were in similarly styled bouffant floor-length frocks of nylon net over taffeta, designed with fitted bodices and worn with matching boleros. They wore matching tulle coronets, and carried Colonial bouquets of toning roses and sweet peas.

Mrs. Thomas, mother of the bride, gowned in light navy Chantilly lace over matching taffeta, wore a sky blue feather hat with navy accessories, and a shoulder spray of pink carnations. The bridegroom's mother, Mrs. Leishman, wore a floor-length gown of romance blue lace over matching taffeta, with toning accessories, and a cluster of pink and mauve sweet peas at her shoulder.

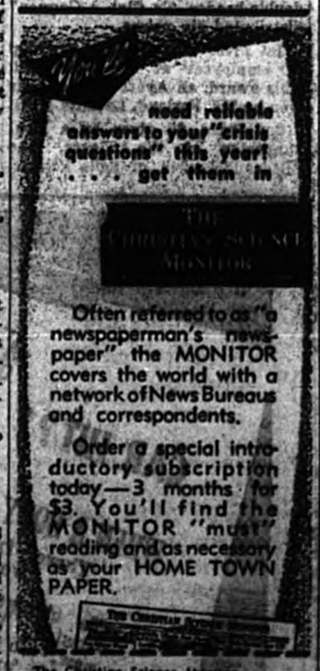

Victoria Hall, Westmount, was decorated with Sweetheart roses with white sweet peas and baby's breath for the reception. Leaving later on the wedding trip by motor through the Eastern United States, the bride wore a two-piece frock of tan shantung with a pink feather hat, and brown accessories. A cream-colored short coat and a corsage bouquet of white orchids completed her outfit. Mr. and Mrs. Leishman will reside in Lachute on their return.

The out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. Albert Leishman, parents of the bridegroom, Mr. Jack Leishman, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Black, Miss Bessie Black, Mr. and Mrs. R. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. R. Doig, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Morrison, Miss Eileen Morrison, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Pring, Mrs. J. Houghton, Miss Maureen Houghton and Mr. Desmond Houghton, all of Lachute; Mr. and Mrs. E. Rose, Mr. Charles Rose, Mr. Gerald Rose, Mrs. John Stewart, Miss Elda Stewart, all of Ottawa; Mr. David Gill, of Grenville; Mr. and Mrs. R. Olsen, of Buckingham, Que.; and Mr. and Mrs. Mossman Leishman, of New Haven, Conn.

An excited female voice came over the telephone. "Two boys are trying to get into my room through my window."

"Listen, lady, you've got the wrong number", answered an irate voice. "This is not police headquarters, but the fire department."

"I know", said the voice, more sweetly. "But my room's on the second floor and the boys need a ladder."

Baptism Ceremony At St. Sauveur

On Sunday, August 2, at the Church of St. Francis, the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Terrence E. Monaghan, of St. Sauveur des Monts, was baptized, receiving the names Corinne Margaret. Sponsors were Miss Marion G. O'Neill, of Toronto, and Mr. C. V. Monaghan, of Westmount. The Rev. H. G. Baugh officiated.

Engagement

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Noble, of Lachute, Que., announce the engagement of their daughter, Agnes Elsie, to Mr. Gerald Tapp Derrick, of Toronto, Ont., son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Andrew M. Derrick, of Stonefield, Que. The marriage has been arranged to take place on Friday, August 21, in St. Simeon's Anglican Church, Lachute.

90th Birthday

Friends extend their hearty congratulations to Mr. Thomas Hume, who will be 90 years of age on Saturday, August 8. Mr. Hume, who resides with his daughter, Mrs. Randolph Rogers, on the West Gore Road, continues to enjoy life in good health and spirits.

Exciting Sea Drama Seen from the Air

Plane Passengers Watch Attack On Huge Whale by Blackfish Pack

Vancouver (CP) — An attack by a pack of "killer" whales on a mammoth hump-back whale is the chief topic of conversation for the pilot of a Pacific Western Airlines plane and his five passengers.

The group had a ring-side seat for the 15-minute battle in which the big whale thrashed itself clear out of the water to escape its attackers and left the sea red with blood.

"I've never seen anything like it", said veteran coast flier Ray Oliver, reporting by short-wave radio on the unusual sea drama unfolding below his aircraft on a flight to Kemano.

"I was flying over the intersection of Griffin and Mathieson channels, about 3,000 feet, when I heard a smack over the sound of my engine.

"I looked down and saw a great splashing and writhing. The big fellow was a full 60 feet long. He'd blow, then come right out of the water trying to shake off the pack of four or five blackfish after him."

Pilot Olivier circled at about 50 feet, watching the fight for 15 minutes before continuing his flight. He pinpointed the spot about 30 miles northeast of Bella Bella, 350 miles northeast of Vancouver, then radioed other pilots on the route to watch for the finish of the battle. Pilots reaching the area later reported the battle over and no evidence whether the whale survived.

Blackfish, commonly known as killer-whales, work in packs and attack whales for their blood.

SPORTS AND JUVENILE ACTIVITIES

To Start Softball League Eliminations

A meeting of the Argenteuil Softball League was held last Monday at the Sport Shop, Rio Building, and it was decided that the play-offs should start on Sunday.

In the first elimination, 3 out of 5, the team in first place will play against St. Andrews and the holder of the second place will meet Lachute Royals.

The fight for possession of top place in the League is not yet final as this report is written. From early in the season the Lions and Lowe Bros. have been hardy contenders, and only one point divides them at this stage.

At a regular game between Lowe Bros. and Royals last week, the latter team raffled an Ayers travel rug to help finance their team this season. Bill Todd, of Lachute, was winner of the prize.

Lowe Bros.	27	17	9	1	35

Horse Racing at Rigaud

Last Sunday, a good program of races was presented at Rigaud Racing Park before a crowd of 1,500 persons.

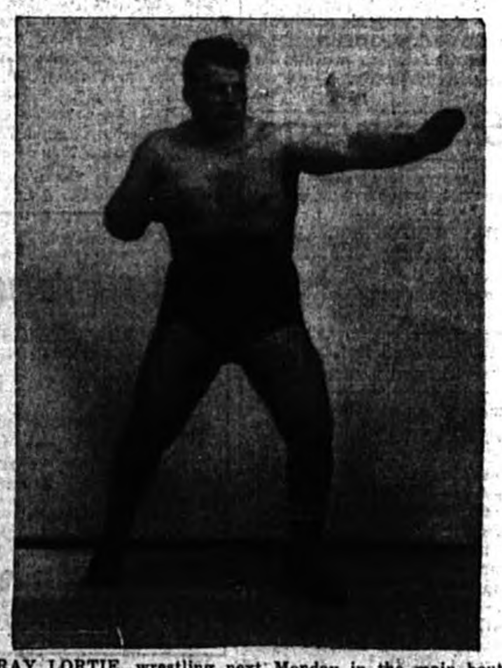

Each race was strongly contested. There were eight different winners. The biggest surprise was the victory of Neger Mercury in the first race. Nobody had placed this horse in the combination of the daily double. The mutuel betting paid on the second horse, Royal Grattan, which with Dr. McKinney gave a double of $29.90. Norval McKillop, owned by Mr. Larocque, of Chute à Blondeau, won the second heat.

The second and sixth races were won by Dr. McKinney, from Alfred, Ont., and Black Feather, from Cornwall.

Chum B., from Malone, N.Y., recent winner at Saratoga, won the first heat, but Prince Royal K., from Ottawa, won the second.

Martin G. Direct, owned by Mr. Minville, of Buckingham, and Little Captain, divided the first prize money in the free-for-all.

There will be another racing program next Sunday.

RAY LORTIE, wrestling next Monday in the main bout at Brownsburg Arena — a team match with the Lortie brothers (Bob and Ray) against Boris Kalmikoff and Roy Leboeuf.

BLUE HERON PROTECTED

The Great Blue Heron, commonly called the crane, is protected under the Migratory Birds Act. Trout fishermen claim this bird is a fish killer, but authorities maintain it does far more good than harm, and there is a heavy penalty for anyone found molesting these birds.

A World Championship In Horseshoe Pitching

SPORTS CAMERA
By Gerry Lougheed,
Canadian Press Staff Writer

If you like relaxing quiet in your sport, a horseshoe pitching tournament should be right up your alley.

A world championship was held recently in Utah and in almost complete silence the 36 players in the round-robin tournament tossed their horseshoes back and forth. The crowds sat in silence, only rarely applauded.

In such a tournament as the world championship at Murray, Utah, a "barnyard golfer" tosses the 2½ pound shoes about 1,120 times a day. That adds up to throwing almost 1½ tons of steel, 40 feet.

In addition, the player walks about four miles between the pegs.

The rules prohibit bothering or nettling an opponent with needless conversation. So the players just don't talk.

Only ringers and close shoes figure in the scoring. A shoe that lands so as to ring or enclose the peg for a ringer, counts three points.

A close shoe, one less than six inches from the peg, counts one point. A shoe leaning against the peg is a leaner and counts a point, too.

325-Pounder in Wrestle-Fest Next Monday

"Goliath", 7-foot giant wrestler who tips the scales at 325 lbs., will feature in the secondary bout at Brownsburg Arena on Monday evening, meeting a two-fold opposition in the Masked Marvel and the Golden Terror. Goliath, a new sensation in the mat world, starred in the recent film "David and Bethseba" by virtue of his immense stature.

A team-match on the same program will include the popular Ray and Bob Lortie against two villainous customers, Roy (Pirate) Leboeuf and Boris Kalmikoff.

Other preliminary bouts will complete this program, to commence at 8.30 o'clock.

Milwaukee's Nosedive In the National League

By Gerry Lougheed,
Canadian Press Staff Writer

What caused Milwaukee Braves' nosedive in the National League race? Manager Charlie Grimm is inclined to shrug things off as a bit of a bad dream.

"We're all right", he said recently as his team threatened to drop into third place after giving up the leadership to Brooklyn Dodgers. "Nothing has happened".

Well, something has happened. The club hasn't been winning those close games as it did earlier.

Whatever the reason, it hasn't been the support and treatment in Milwaukee. Everything's on the house when one or more Braves show up almost anywhere in Milwaukee. Steak dinners and valuable gift certificates are handed out for brief radio interviews and gasoline by the 100 gallons is available merely for a small endorsement.

Virtually anything else you can think of — dry cleaning, suits, socks, watches, television sets—is at hand at no cost.

Even the clubhouse man has been forced out of business. Soft drinks, ice cream and other snacks he used to sell to the players before and after games now are available free, courtesy of the manufacturers.

Latest addition to the Milwaukee stadium's home-team dressing room is a huge freezer loaded — and kept that way — with ice cream bars, soft drinks and such. Just help yourself.

An Indian returned to the town for the third time to buy a dozen bottles of cough syrup.

"Someone sick at your house?" asked the druggist.

"No sick", was the reply.

"Then what on earth is all this cough syrup for?"

"Me likeum on pancakes."

In home-runs the Tigers are holding their own, Bud Kimball, 3rd baseman, has his third — one behind 2nd place and only three homers from Gerry Claude. The Tigers are in 2nd place, for only Valleyfield are ahead of them. But the season has still four weeks to go, and many changes can occur in a month.

Bud Kimball went to it again Saturday night. Two home-runs in succession, then a base on balls, then got hit by the pitcher, for a perfect night at bat. Keep it up, Bud.

The Gagnon Club

Last Saturday night at the double-header, "le Club à Gagnon" distributed six prizes.

1st Prize was given by a group of employees at the Felt Mill. This award, an Ayers blanket, was won by Mr. Ferland, Lachute Mills.

2nd Prize, $5 given by a loyal supporter of the Tigers, Leo "Bedeau" Laurin, of Belle Riviere, was won by Armand Grondin, Lachute Mills.

3rd Prize, a credit of $5 at Albert Malacket Men's Shop, was won by Lucien Menard, Lachute — and if I am not mistaken, Albert Malacket has been giving a credit of $5 at every game played lately in Lachute.

4th Prize, a small electric stove, given by Gatineau Power, was won by Leonard Gagné, Lachute.

The 5th and 6th prizes, given by René Laurin, president of the Tigers (2 cases of Dow) were won by O. Carriere (handed on to the team to share after the games), and Oscar Belanger, Lachute Mills.

To all the donors, on behalf of the Association, a sincere Thank You. The Gagnon Club made $106 last Saturday night towards the Tigers' financing and to continue the good work of late Lionel Laurin. If any more supporters would care to give prizes, please contact "Rex Café" Gagnon.

News

Ed Lukes of Valleyfield replaces Pappy Smith as coach.

A rumor is going around that Gerry Cotnoir, capable coach for the Tigers, will be named the coach of the year in the Laurentide League. Gerry took hold of the Club in last position some 10 games behind, and with co-operation and good management he brought them to their present standing, in second place — not far from first either. Also it has been reported that Gerry should be in the nets for Shawinigan this winter. Gerry would be under Leger, as he was in the West.

Speaking of hockey, Pete Taillefer is going back with Chicoutimi Champs next winter. Well Pete, we'll be seeing you on TV, and wishing you luck.

Do you know that in the All-Star match three hockey players from Chicoutimi were in the game — Gerry Claude, Normand Dussault and Pete Taillefer. Also five other hockey players — Claude Evans, Denis Brodeur, Gerry Cotnoir, Gilles Dube and Geo. Bougie.

Here's how a baseball fan was explaining how to fix a baby's diaper:

"First place the diaper as baseball diamond, with you at home plate. Next fold in a way that 2nd base joins home-plate. Then place the baby on the pitcher's mound. Then join 1st and 3rd with home plate with a safety pin."

* * *

Bouquets

I have now seen many games in the league, and I certainly have to say a good word for the Lachute Stadium organization. The ushers are of the best. Another man doing a very good job is the one at the score board. Legault at the microphone is also tops. These are all contributing to make the local Stadium the best in the league.

* * *

LAST MINUTE NEWS

Club

To the Aquilla Legault and Antoine Desforges families, the René Gagnon Club extend sympathy in their bereavements.

Four members of this club, who desired to remain anonymous, each donated $5. René also added a fiver, and before Sunday night's game René presented Claude "Tiger" Groulx with $25 in appreciation of his fine performance in local games, especially in consideration of the fact that Claude has to do a day's work then rush to Lachute to play baseball.

* * *

And More Home Runs

Bud (3rd baseman) Kimball went wild again in St. Eustache with two more homers, making it 19, just one behind Gerry Claude of Valleyfield who leads the League with 20.

Hardy had one also at St. Eustache, and none other than the famous Eddie Yeager got himself a homer.

Accident

René Dufort, following his accident here Saturday night, will not be able to play baseball again this season. Dufort suffered a broken arm. . . But here's hoping to see you again next season, René.

FROG AND SNAKE BATTLE

Bullfrogs eat snakes, and snakes eat frogs. It is not uncommon to see a big frog and a snake in a lively battle. Very often the battle ends in a draw and both are ready to retreat.

Square Dancing Contest For Ottawa Exhibition

Ottawa district clubs and organizations will have an excellent opportunity of raising funds for their activities through entry in the Central Canada Exhibition's $1,000 Square Dancing Competition. Entries will be welcomed from the various agricultural and social groups in the Ottawa district in the mammoth square dancing event. Prize money in the Senior Division of the Square Dancing event totals $700 while the awards in the Junior Division amount to $300.

The competition is open to sets from anywhere in the United States and Canada. However, the Exhibition authorities are anxious that there should be an excellent representation from the Ottawa area and accordingly are issuing a special invitation to district clubs and organizations to place sets in this big event.

In this regard it was observed that the Kiwanis Club, Westboro, is offering a special inducement to Junior Farmer groups to place entries in the Square Dancing competition. The Kiwanis Club will sponsor and pay the expenses of the Junior Farmer square dance set which places highest in the Ottawa competition, to attend at the Canadian Square Dance finals to be held at the Royal Winter Fair in Toronto.

The deadline for these entries has been extended to August 17. Information and entry forms may be secured by writing the C.C.E.A. offices at Lansdowne Park.

Presents Documentary On A Small Town

A documentary on life in a small town, in this instance the town of Tottenham, Ont., will be heard in a special edition of Dominion Magazine on stations of the CBC Dominion network on August 17.

The documentary entitled, appropriately enough, "Small Town" is based on tape recordings and is narrated by Allan Anderson. Anderson surveys the life and living habits of Tottenham's population of 591, traces the town's past, and through tape recordings of conversations of the people themselves gives a picture of present-day activities in the little community.

With his tape recorder, Anderson takes the listener to Tottenham's post office, the town's favorite gathering place; to a barn with its bellowing cattle; to the town's lawn-bowling club, and to a discussioon among a group of Tottenham boys in which they expound on such subjects as swimming, fishing and turtle hunting.

Anderson's big objective in preparing the broadcast was to get at the day-to-day life of a small town through the actions of its people. Tottenham lies 40 miles northwest of Toronto, and another thing Anderson wanted to find out was what happens in a community of this size as influences of the city and the city itself creeps closer and closer.

The broadcast will be heard at 8 p.m. EDT.

Hopeful Heirs Seek Imaginary Millions

Auchland, N.Z. (CP) — An aged Italian died in Auckland 35 years ago leaving $900. He had no relatives in New Zealand and the estate lay unclaimed.

Recently the lawyers executing his will made an effort to clear up the estate by asking the Italian legation in Wellington if it could trace the heirs in Italy.

But in the process the estate swelled to fabulous proportions. The story spread in Italy that the estate included three gold mines, several factories and sugar plantations near Wellington. (No sugar is grown in New Zealand).

Eventually the Italian press published stories that the old man left $850,000,000, mostly in unmined gold. The accounts said the New Zealand Government would confiscate it unless it was claimed by 1968.

Now the man's distant relatives are fighting for the estate. They include a man serving a sentence for murder who claims the man who died in Auckland was his uncle.

The Italian legation has been deluged with letters from hopeful claimants. It is writing to tell them that the money available is still $900.

CASEY JONES REMEMBERED

Old-timers nodded as the band played "Come all you rounders, I want you to hear, the story of a brave engineer. Casey Jones was the rounder's name, on a high rightwheeler he rode to fame".

The village of Vaughan, Mississippi, has never forgotten the brave engineer who died there 53 years ago in the crash of the "old 383". Villagers built a monument to the scene on the Illinois Central line. Present for the unveiling ceremonies were Casey's 83-year-old widow, and Sim Webb, the Negro fireman to whom he yelled "Jump, Sim! Jump!" just before the crash.

Sim recited almost minute by minute the account of the "Cannonball's" last run in 1900, from the time they left Memphis, Tenn., an hour and 35 minutes late, to the time they reached the disastrous S-curve only two minutes off schedule.

Red Cross Traces Missing Relative

William Condon, of Huntingdon, Que., will always be grateful to the Red Cross, and with good reason. A few days ago he received a letter from his sister, Mrs. F. O'Malley, of London, England. He hadn't heard from her in 33 years. It was through the Tracing Bureau of the British Red Cross and the Enquiry Bureau of the Canadian Red Cross that Mrs. O'Malley was able to procure her brother's address. Mrs. O'Malley told the British Red Cross that her brother had emigrated to Canada back in 1911 or 1912 and she thought he had settled on a farm somewhere in Quebec. Although the particulars were few, it took the Enquiry Bureau of the Red Cross in Montreal only a few weeks to locate the whereabouts of Mr. Condon.

It was from an orphanage in Orpington, England, that William Condon came to an Ottawa Convent when he was only 14 years old. Later he was sent to St. Stanislas, a French village halfway between Valleyfield and Huntingdon, where he worked first for a blacksmith then for a farmer. When William Condon turned 18, he enlisted in the 87th Battalion and went to England. During his stay in England, he managed to get in touch with one of his brothers and one of his sisters, but after he came back to Canada in 1920, he lost track of all his relatives. Now after 33 years, the Red Cross makes it possible for him to re-establish contact with his sister. William Condon will be able to tell Mrs. O'Malley all about his Canadian way of life, his French-Canadian wife (Vinalda Lefebvre) whom he married in 1920, the lovely bungalow they own in Huntingdon, as well as the trials and tribulations encountered since the day he left his native land 42 years ago.

More Salad Dressings; Salads in Quantity

Salad time is any time, but particularly summer time. Such variety is possible with the abundance of fresh fruits and vegetables. The salad dressing or mayonnaise used, however, can make or mar any salad. Use a well-seasoned dressing, and do not use too much. It is better to err on the side of too little dressing on the salad and pass extra dressing for those who want more.

The following recipe for a salad dressing with oil is a popular type. Neither a true boiled dressing, nor mayonnaise, it is called:

Combination Dressing

1 Egg, 2 tablespoons sugar, 1 teaspoon dry mustard, ½ teaspoon paprika, 1½ teaspoons salt, 1/16 teaspoon curry powder, ¼ cup lemon juice or vinegar, ¾ cup salad oil, 1 cup water, 4 tablespoons cornstarch.

Combine egg, sugar, seasonings, vinegar and oil in a bowl. Blend together with rotary beater or electric mixer. Mix water and cornstarch. Bring to a boil stirring constantly, and boil 2 minutes or until starchy taste disappears. Gradually beat into egg mixture and continue beating until thoroughly blended. Store in covered jar in refrigerator. Thin with cream or fruit juice if desired. Yields 2 cups.

Variations

1—Mix dressing with a little syrup from maraschino cherries for fruit salad.

2—Combine dressing with ¼ as much whipped cream for chicken salad.

3—Add peanut butter to taste to dressing for banana, apple or cabbage and carrot salad.

Potato Salad for 50

Quantity recipes are sometimes hard for the average homemaker to find and every now and then she has to prepare food for a crowd, be it a church or club supper or a summer party, for the teen-age members of the family. Below is a good standard potato salad which will find a place, we feel sure, in many a recipe file:

Potato Salad — 40 to 45 boiled potatoes (diced), 2 cups French dressing, 4 cups diced celery, 3 to 4 cups salad dressing or mayonnaise, ½ cup chopped parsley, 1 medium onion (finely chopped), 12 hard-cooked eggs (chopped), salt and pepper to taste, 6 heads of lettuce.

Mix diced potatoes and French dressing and let stand in refrigerator for several hours. Combine marinated potatoes and remaining ingredients. Mix lightly to avoid mashing potatoes. Serve on lettuce leaves. Sprinkle lightly with paprika, or arrange tomato wedges and sliced unpeeled cucumbers on salad. Yield: 50 servings.

Let's Eat

"Throughout the summer season," said the head of the catering service at a large hotel, "we make a specialty of interesting salads and what we call 'Variety of Fresh Vegetable Plates.' On the vegetable plates we always serve a dainty but substantial hot savory, such as a chicken croquette, an a la king pate or a crab meat cake."

"What salad plates are most popular, Pierre?"

"Chicken or lobster salad, perhaps garnished with salted sliced almonds or seedless green grapes or crab meat or lobster-stuffed tomatoes, both served on crisp lettuce with fresh potato chips. But the favorite of the ladies is the fresh fruit salad plate with our specialite, rose mayonnaise."

Fish Salads Popular

Quebec — The products of Quebec's fishing industry should receive special attention during July 30 to August 8, National Salad Week — it is recommended by Hon. Dr. C. E. Pouliot, Minister of Game and Fisheries, in a message to home-makers in this province. National Salad Week was organized by the Canadian Council of Agriculture to direct the attention of home-makers to the nutritive value and economy of salads as a regular part of the family diet.

Dr. Pouliot said that his Department is glad to collaborate in encouraging the observance of National Salad Week, as a health measure, and suggested that everyone would benefit by the inclusion of some of the great varieties of Quebec fish products, which are both economical and an economical addition to salads of every kind.

Home-makers are invited to try some of the many recipes for tasty fish salads which are contained in a brochure prepared by Home Economics specialists of the Game and Fisheries Department. This booklet is available at most fish and food stores or it may be secured by request to the Fisheries Department at Quebec.

Convert day-old cinnamon rolls into delicious and nutritious French toast for breakfast, lunch or supper. Slice each roll into bread-thick pieces. Dip each piece into your favorite egg and milk mixture and fry in butter or margarine to a crisp, golden brown.

Top with drooling, hot syrup, match with fruit and a beverage and your breakfast is complete! Serve with curly bacon strips, crisp salad greens, fresh fruit and beverage for a fast but satisfying lunch or supper.

If it's lack of time that distresses you during this busy season, let pre-cooked rice come to your rescue! You can stay with your chores till practically the last minute and still prepare a delicious main course dish that will really satisfy Dad and the kids — Hearty Supper Salad.

Hearty Supper Salad

⅔ Cup packaged pre-cooked rice, ¾ cup water, ½ teaspoon salt, ⅔ cup mayonnaise, 1 teaspoon grated onion, ¾ teaspoon salt, dash of pepper, 1 cup slivered cooked ham, 1 cup slivered Swish cheese, 1 cup cooked peas, ¼ cup chopped dill pickle, 1 or 2 firm ripe tomatoes, cut in wedges.

Two County 'Observers' To Attend Associated Country Women's Conf'ce

Lady Nuttall Arrives Today from England

Lady Nuttall, of Dorking, Surrey, England, is arriving today (Thursday) at Dorval. Lady Nuttall, who represents the Quebec Women's Institutes on the Executive Committee of the Associated Country Women of the World, is coming to Canada to attend the 7th Triennial Conference of that organization as one of the Q.W.I. official delegates to this international conference, which is being held in Toronto, August 12-23. She will be the guest of Mrs. R. Thomson, of Abbotsford, prior to the conference and will accompany her to Toronto, where Mrs. Thomson is also a delegate.

While at Abbotsford, Lady Nuttall will visit the Ayer's Cliff Women's Institute, in Stanstead County, where she is an honorary member. After the conference she plans to spend some time with her cousin, Mrs. W. C. Smallman, of Dundee, before returning to England.

Other Q.W.I. delegates to the conference are Mrs. G. E. LeBaron, North Hatley, president; Mrs. G. D. Harvey, Stanbridge East, 1st vice-president; and Mrs. H. Ellard, Ottawa, 2nd vice-president. In addition Quebec will have 10 official observers, the number allotted to each constituent society. These are: Mrs. C. E. Petch, Hemmingford; Mrs. George Leggett, Lachute; Mrs. G. Cooke, Arundel; Mrs. E. O. Riddell, Como; Miss Helen Buzzell, Abbotsford; Mrs. W. B. Holmes, Ayer's Cliff; Miss Lucy Daly, Rawdon; Mrs. H. Ward, New Carlisle; Mrs. S. B. Coates, Bury; Mrs. V. R. Beattie, Richmond.

Fashions

Brown and white striped seersucker, so easy to keep looking fresh and crisp, is used for a dress that would be at home in town or country. It has brown cotton piping at the neck, and a brown cotton belt. The slantwise closing is marked by curved buttons. Skirt is pleated all around with an inverted box-pleat in front. Like denim and gingham, seersucker is stepping out a bit, getting to look smarter and more embellished with pretty detail each season.

"Mummy, Percy doesn't know how to swim because his mother won't let him near the water."

"Well, Percy's a very good little boy".

"Yes, and he'll go to heaven the first time he falls in."

CAT MOTHERS CHIPMUNKS, RABBIT

—Central Press Canadian

Buster, a cat who should have a female name, contentedly laps milk while her latest ward, a three-inch long rabbit, is fed by a doll's bottle from the hands of Lynette Williams. Buster doesn't act like a cat; in fact, her motherly spirit toward all young animals is embarrassing to Lynette. Last week she brought three baby chipmunks to her Toronto home and Lynette trotted them back to the ravine, where they had been found. When Buster brought home the rabbit, however, Lynette decided to adopt the helpless animal into the family.

Temper Tantrums

— By NANCY CLEAVER — (Copyright)

"I hate you!" Johnny screamed at his mother when she would not let him have his tricycle. Grandma was arriving any moment for a visit. She would be eager to see young Johnny at once. Johnny proceeded to stage a temper tantrum — yelling, jumping up and down, and pulling at the cupboard door knob where his tricycle was kept.

• • •

"Can I hold the dolly?" Susan asked eagerly pointing ot the exquisite doll with lovely yellow curls high on the store's toy shelf. The clerk explained to Susan's mother that it was both expensive and fragile. She could not allow a small child to handle in unless the parents was interested in purchasing it.

When Susan's mother heard the price, she knew it was much more than they could afford. But Susan, who was only three, was determined to get her hands on that dolly! When mother tried to hurry her out of the store, Susan resorted to a favorite device to get her own way. She "went limp", lay on the floor and kicked and screamed, "I want that dolly!"

There are few more exasperating phases of behaviour than a child's temper tantrum. They are horrid at home and even more trying in public. These sudden gusts of anger are so violent. The small boy or girl, feeling frustrated and disappointed, loses emotional control. He knows what he wants, and wants it right now! He strains, every nerve, including his vocal chords, towards reaching his objective.

What is mother to do? If she meets anger with anger, the child only becomes more excited. She wants to calm him down and at the same time not give into him. Mother has seen to many tiny tyrants using a temper tantrum as a "Big Stick".

There is no rule which fits every case. Mother should ignore his temper tantrum as far as possible. If it occurs at home she can go into another room or pick him up and carry him into his own room and leave him there. There is no fun for Junior venting his rage with no audience to watch him!

Sometimes his attention can be diverted to something else, and thus a head-on collison is avoided. If he has been building with his blocks and his tower has collapsed and angered him, perhaps he might like to look at a picture book or watch out the window for cars passing on the road.

There is absolutely no use attempting to reason with a child in a temper tantrum, because his emotions blot out his thinking. Threats and physical punishment usually increase his rage. Mother must not show hostility, or make her child feel that she will certainly get even with him for this bit of naughtiness. She should try to mix a casual attitude with necessary firmness about essentials.

Observant parents will notice that temper tantrums are a common affliction to pre-school children. They crop up most frequently when youngsters are depleted physically or emotionally. Too much adult pressure produces a rebillious youngster. Perhaps there has been too much excitement or too many orders.

No good comes from blaming a child for his angry feelings. He needs mother's help to realize that a temper tantrum does not "pay off". A little more rest or less strict discipline, may be two practical ways to lessen the frequency of these outbursts but they will not help all tempestuous scenes. If a child is using a temper tantrum to attract attention or because he is jealous of a new baby in the family, these reveal his loneliness or insecurity.

Learning emotional control, like growing up, is a long slow process. Parents help their children if they realize that temper tantrums are part of this growth process of the very young. With patience, and understanding and love, these emotional flare-ups will gradually disappear — although at the beginning of adolescence they may reappear in another form.

The child with a temper tantrum is a child in distress who craves help — not a naughty youngster who needs harsh punishment! Don't fail your youngster when a temper tantrum darkens his small world!

Friendship is a plant of slow growth, and must undergo and withstand the shocks of adversity before it is entitled to the appelation.

Morin Hts. Board Considers Tenders, Awards Contracts

(Our District Correspondent)

Morin Heights — The regular monthly meeting of the Protestant School Board was held last week, with the following members present: Chairman Col. G. M. Strong, Commissioners Duncan Dawson, Lawson Kennedy, Fred T. Watchorn and Mrs. M. A. Dey.

After bidding welcome to Mrs. Dey, the new member of the board, the chairman opened the meeting, and Secretary A. Hamilton read the minutes and presented accounts for payment.

The secretary also read a letter addressed to the board from Lakefield, regarding the schooling of children for that area. Long and serious discussion followed regarding this matter, on which the board is now seeking further information from Principal Marven Blakely to assist them in arriving at a decision.

Various minor matters have to be attended to before the opening of school, and the board gave approval to proceeding with these details.

The secretary then read the notice calling for tenders for the driving of school children on the different routes, and also for the position of caretaker, likewise asking for offers for the old school building. He then proceeded to open the tenders. H. Lister's bid of $1,250 was the only one covering tender No. 2. Clifford Black tendered on No. 1 at a price of $1,250, no other tender being submitted. These two offers were accepted by the board. For tender No. 3 there were two offers, the first being from Paul St. Denis, at $1,100 and to use all his own equipment; the other was received from Lyle Kilpatrick, at a price of $1,500, to find his own truck but to use the school snowmobile. The board voted to give this route to Lyle Kilpatrick at his price of $1,500.

A ratepayer present asked permission to register a protest over this added expenditure for the route in question. Tenders were then opened for the position of caretaker. Mr. Carruthers had submitted a bid for the amount of $170 a month for the 12 months; another tender was submitted by A. Hamilton at $180 a month for the 12 months. Lengthy consideration was given to this matter after Mr. Hamilton and Mr. Carruthers had been requested to leave the meeting, and upon their return Mr. Hamilton was informed by the chairman that his tender had been accepted — explaining to Mr. Carruthers the reasons.

There being no further business, the meeting was concluded.

Destroyer Crusader Returns from Korean Duty

—Central Press Canadian

Hundreds of relatives and friends lined the dock at Esquimault, B.C., to welcome the crew of the Crusader, back in her home port after a 65,000-mile tour of duty in Korean waters. The crew saw 247 days of continual duty and set a record among U.N. ships as a train-buster, sighting and destroying their targets off the shore of North Korea. The ship suffered no damages or casualties.

Garden-Graph

The new leaves which roses keep producing must be kept free from disease and insects if one hopes to have perfect blooms. The leaves manufacture the food which keeps the plant healthy, thrifty and flowering.

To keep rose foliage healthy calls for the use of a number of spray or dusting compounds. To simplify the problem an "all purpose" rose dust is now available which gives one-shot protection.

There are three types of rose pests which attack the foliage, chewing insects, sucking insects and fungus disease. A commonly prevalent pest is the aphid.

Aphids, or plant lice, often cluster in great numbers on the tender, growing shoots of roses, as shown in the accompanying Garden-Graph. They suck the life juices from stems, leaves and buds.

Aphids can be controlled by spraying with nicotine sulphate. Applications must be made as often as the aphids put in an appearance. It pays to get them while the colony is small, for they increase with startling rapidity.

Mildew frequently injures rose foliage by coating it with a powdery deposit. It also affects the buds, causing them to become shriveled or dwarfed, as illustrated.

Mildew and other types of fungi can be held in check, however, by the use of sulphur dusts. A more recent compound for control of mildew, black spot of rose leaves and rust, is called fermate.

It is possible to control all rose pests and diseases. There is no mystery about it. All that is required is the right material, properly applied at the right time.

Fish Give Ideas On Water Fouling

By means of an artificial "lake labyrinth" within a laboratory chamber 12 by 12 feet in the Quebec Biological Bureau, University of Montreal, the speckled trout is being given a means of expressing its own opinions as to the qualities of water fed to it.

The experiments are part of the anti-pollution program being conducted by the Bureau within the general conservation plan of the provincial Department of Game and Fisheries, whose minister is Camille E. Pouliot, M.D.

The "lakes" consist of six round basins each 40 inches in diameter and connected by the equivalent of creeks to form a single chain, as if they were part of a river system. The chain is subject to manipulation by means of doors, however, so that the order in which the lakes receive the inflowing water may be varied at will.

Various chemicals and other polluants are precisely dosed into the water, at various parts of the system, by means of pipes, and a little shoal of fishes which live in the "lakes" as in an aquarium express their feelings by switching from one basin to another and another, tracing a pattern which science may interpret.

The device was invented by Paul Dostert, D.Sc., pollution specialist of the Bureau. It provides yet another tool whereby the water fouling nuisance is being controlled and remedied despite the increasing industrialization of the province.

TIME TO SPAWN ONCE

The reason there is a size limit on game fish is to give them time to spawn once before being taken as legal fish by the angler.

CLAIM WHEEL CHAIR NO BAR TO SUCCESS

Vancouver (CP)—Two Vancouver business women have set out to prove that confinement to a wheel chair is no bar to success.

Katharine Cook, Limited, has been organized to provide businessmen with efficient part-time stenographers. Miss Cook, 26, is president and 21-year-old Beverly Thomas, is managing director. They do all their work from wheel chairs.

The firm specializes in dispatching stenographers to business firms who are without full-time secretaries or need extra help. The office is equipped with the most modern electric typewriters and duplicating machines.

GOD'S HANDIWORK

Man too often forgets his dependence on the divine being who orders and directs the life of the world. When space travel becomes possible, it will not only be a triumph for man's ingenuity. It will also be a means of appreciating more fully the majesty of God and His handiwork.

Canadian Genuis Behind Big Australian Industry

Among Canada's purchases from Australia year by year, dried fruits bulk large. In 1952, 50 thousand tons of Australian dried fruits went to overseas markets; Canada's share totalled 16 thousand tons, valued at nearly $5-million Canadian.

Birth of an Industry

The story behind this industry deserves to be better known. It was first established in 1887 as a result of the vision of Alfred Deakin, three times Prime Minister of Australia. He enlisted the creative genius of two Canadians, the Chaffey brothers, who had successfully promoted irrigation colonies in Canada and California. They set to work to harness the waters of the Murray River and its tributaries and to apply it to the arid but fertile soil along its banks.

After many years of battling with the elements, political opposition and depressions, settlements were established along the Murray River in Victoria and South Australia. Primarily the industry was developed to give employment to surplus rural labor and to make good use of basically fertile irrigated land. Today it provides a good living for thousands of Australians. After World War I many returned servicemen were settled in this area; veterans of World War II joined them many years later.

Area Under Production

The total area under production is about 65,300 acres, of which 34,000 acres are in Victoria, 21,500 acres in South Australia, 5,400 acres in New South Wales and 4,400 acres in Western Australia. Approximately 90 per cent is watered by irrigation. The Commonwealth and State Governments have decided to increase the present horticultural and viticultural lands in Australia by an additional 31,250 acres to help settle more World War II veterans on the land. This increase includes 9,500 acres for dried fruits.

The potential production of dried vine fruits, including the new areas coming into bearing, is estimated at about 125 thousand tons. At present Australia ranks third in world production after the United States and Greece. However, because of adverse climatic conditions, the present potential production of 104 thousand long tons has been attained only once — in 1944. Since then, output has ranged between 56 thousand and 80 thousand tons. The crop just harvested is estimated at about 90 thousand tons.

The home market takes only about 20 thousand tons and this leaves 70 to 80 per cent of the crop for export. The average annual value of Australia's dried fruits is approximately $11.25-million.

There is a strength of quiet endurance as significant of courage as the most daring feats of prowess.

P. VALOIS, LIBERAL, RETURNED BY SWEEPING MAJORITY

7,521 Votes Ahead of L. W. Armstrong, Prog. Conservative; Preliminary Count

Only Two-Thirds of Eligible Electors in Counties of Argenteuil - Deux Montagnes Turned Out to Polls

Rain somewhat dampened the enthusiasm of election day — which, according to the general impression, lacked much of the spirit and zeal climaxing the usual run of federal campaigns in these parts. Polls were set in order for early business Monday morning, but the influx of voters was spasmodic, totalling at 7 p.m., closing time, approximately 66⅓ per cent of the eligible electors throughout Argenteuil and Deux Montagnes, the two counties embraced in this federal constituency.

The result was conceded at an early hour — a victory returning Philippe Valois as Liberal M.P. Mr. Valois' majority increased decisively as the polling officers reported from this wide area. All but 10 of the 138 polls were heard from Monday night. The few remaining, without means of immediate communication, had turned in their results by noon Tuesday, resulting in a total (unofficial) count of 13,123 votes for Valois, and 5,602 for L. W. Armstrong, his Progressive - Conservative opponent. Valois' majority was 7,521 votes.

Mr. Valois received reports of the returns Monday evening in St. Eustache, returning later to rejoice among his friends in Lachute. After a laborious campaign his voice had worn thin with the strain of many speeches. His triumph repaid him amply for the effort. Mr. Armstrong, between his home and his committee room in Lachute, appeared in no way discouraged as the outcome became apparent. He, too, had waged a vigorous campaign and was in trim till the last platform, with no evidence of physical strain. In his own words, it had been an "experience" in which he had made many new-found friends, especially in Deux Montagnes, with which county he had been only vaguely familiar before this campaign.

Comparisons are always interesting. In the last federal contest here, the general election of June, 1949, there were 20,553 votes cast in the constituency. Mr. Valois defeated Georges H. Héon by a majority of 828 in that contest. Besides the Liberal candidate and Mr. Héon (Progressive-Conservative) there was a third contender, Orphir Desjardins, on the Union des Electeurs ticket. The latter polled only 479 votes.

Current Affairs At Morin Hts. Council Meeting

(Our District Correspondent)

Morin Heights — The regular monthly meeting of the Municipal Council was held here, with Mayor Chas. D. Campbell in the chair. Councillors present were — Paul Baumel, André Legault, Carl E. Seale and Willis Seale.

The Mayor welcomed the two new councillors present. He also welcomed the large attendance at this meeting, and hoped that all the people of the municipality would make it a point to be present at the Council meetings, where they could hear the community problems at first hand, and how they were dealt with. He then opened the meeting with prayer.

The secretary then read minutes of the meeting held July 10. The election report was also presented by the secretary and approved.

The Fire Chief's report showed that the firemen had attended all weekly practices and that there had been no outbreaks. The Police report showed that there had been four accidents, two of which had been turned over to the Provincial Police for action. One arrest had been made for disturbing the peace; the offender had been fined and had posted a bond to keep the peace for one year.

Following the usual custom, the Mayor opened the meeting to the public for any matters which they would wish to place before the Council. . . Carolus Guenette complained of rocks being blasted on the 3rd Range montee, and the stones falling in an oat field. E. Kneeland brought up the matter of flagstones for the frontage of the Municipal Building. F. C. Cameron asked if larger light bulbs could not be placed in the street-lights. A. Basler suggested that one blast of the siren be used instead of three, for sounding of the curfew. He also spoke about the hydrant at the four crossroads, claiming that it was a needless expense. This matter was left over to the September meeting as the Fire Chief was not present, due to illness.

Chatboro Barn Razed by Fire

A bull and a calf were burned to death Monday in a fire at the farm of Réal Demers, about a mile from Chatboro on the sand-hill montee.

The blaze was noticed around 10 a.m. and the Lachute Fire Brigade were called approximately an hour later. The fire was discovered by Mrs. Demers; she summoned a neighbor, Percy H. Wilson, who was first on the scene. Mr. Demers was absent working at one of the election polls.

A big barn packed with hay several days previously, and several smaller buildings, were burned to the ground causing an estimated loss of $8,000. Threshing had taken place Saturday, and the mill owned by M. Maisonneuve was still in the machine shed. This was removed along with other machinery, which was only slightly damaged.

Cause of the fire is unknown.

Religious exercises at the shrine will take on an added significance next Sunday, when the 10 o'clock Mass will be read by His Excellency Bishop Emile Frenette of this diocese. Extensive preparations are being made to accommodate the large crowd expected to take part in the ceremonies, and invitations have been extended to all the surrounding church congregations to have their members in attendance. This beautiful shrine has a very large Sunday attendance of its own, and despite the fact it is not of parochial status, its services are largely patronized. The Franciscan Fathers have done splendid work among the faithful in the district, and the visit of Bishop Frenette is a commendation of their labors.

Proces Verbal

The municipal council has invited Zenephon Plouffe to make a survey of the area with a view to correcting a number of doubtful boundary lines through which ditches discharge water onto properties, and which have been the occasion of many council discussions during the past years. It is expected to find a solution to many of the council's difficulties when the survey is complete.

Valuation Roll Gyrations

As with every other municipal council in the county area, Brownsburg has its critics of municipal valuations, their method of computation, their comparative inconsistencies, and of course the trustworthiness or competence of the valuators. Thus at a recent council meeting two properties were compared as to their respective worth and the difference in valuations noted and commented upon. It is generally accepted that there is no basis of assessment beyond the assumption of the valuator, who walks around the property and makes a guess at a set percentage of its value. Liability for error is, of course, great, and without technical training the ordinary valuator is very much handicapped in arriving at a just and true estimate of the percentage value of the property he is appraising. It is said that all law is based on common sense, and with this premise in view the justice of municipal valuation depends on the common sense of the valuators. There is, of course, a means of redress. When a palpably wrong assessment is established, the owner can take the matter before the courts and have a just estimate made by a qualified assessor. Nevertheless, because the cure is as bad as the disease, or perhaps as costly, this action is seldom employed. This defect in our municipal law is a very serious one, but as the problem is of county-wide implications (and perhaps a larger area), no individual council can solve it. It is a matter for action at the County Council level or more rightly a matter for the Minister of Municipal Affairs at Quebec.

Valuation Roll – $5,760,750 Taxable, $1,192,025 Non-Taxable Real Estate

Decisions Taken by Council on Sidewalk and Waterworks Extension; Subdivision Approved

The monthly meeting of Lachute Town Council was held on Wednesday, August 5, in the Civic Auditorium. All members were present, with Mayor Dr. Jules Lafleur presiding.

Athanase Pharand was in attendance and requested that the Council construct a concrete sidewalk on the north side of Robert Street towards the junction at Main Street. It was decided that the town proceed with this construction adjacent to the McArthur property, with the expenses to be charged to the McArthur account. A 7-day notice was ordered to be sent to Mr. McArthur, and also to R. E. Muir, Robert Street, East Ward, informing them that the town will proceed with the sidewalks.

A subdivision owned by Aldège Filion and bounded on the south by Bedard Blvd., on the north by Robert Street, on the west by the Carriere subdivision, and on the east by Gilbert Street, was approved by the Council. This subdivision has been ready for some time, with the exception of the position of the streets, which did not coincide with the adjoining streets.

The Health and Hygiene Committee was authorized to enquire as to the price of a certain lot in the Township of Chatham to be used as a dump-site. Full particulars will be available at a later date.

It was decided to extend the waterworks system on Elizabeth Street from the Latreille property to the corner of Robert Street, and at the same time, to install interconnections to eliminate the three dead-ends, which will possibly give better water pressure in this district.

Accounts to the amount of $10,660.99 were approved for payment.

Several tenders for snow-loaders were received, but this matter was tabled until the following meeting.

The valuation roll was homologated. Total assessable value for the town is $5,760,750, while there is $1,192,025 that is non-taxable.

Tenders for wood and coal, an oilburner and a humidifier, also for installation and repairs to (or trade-in on) the police patrol wagon, were called for. The tenders are published in this issue of The Watchman.

The meeting was adjourned.

Two Special Trains Take Ayers Ltd. Employees to Picnic at Belmont Park

Variation from Annual Field Day at Local Exhibition Grounds Proves Popular Venture

A wave of excitement swept the west-end of Lachute last Saturday afternoon, when two special C.P.R. trains left the main tracks to trundle their way to the Ayers Limited mill yards. Old-timers will recall that the last time a passenger train switched off the main line was in 1916, when in deference to one of our industrial pioneers, Mr. Thos. H. Ayers was escorted to his home in what proved to be his last grave illness.

The reason on this recent occasion, however, was a much happier one. Shortly after 1 p.m., 1,400 persons, employees and families of Ayers Limited, boarded these special trains for a day's outing at Belmont Park in Montreal. Citizens will recall that in the past, these Company picnics had been held at the local Fair Grounds. As a variation from this custom, Company officials and employees' representatives agreed to try this excursion, and if the all-round satisfaction of the participants is any indication, the new venture will undoubtedly be repeated.

One hour after departure, both trains arrived at Bordeaux Station in Montreal, where attendants with loudspeakers directed the passengers to 10 chartered buses, which, with the help of a motorcycle police escort, spirited them away to Cartierville. All traffic between these two points had been halted by traffic policemen, and within 15 minutes the transfer was completed. Railway, police, tramways and park officials agreed that they had never seen the like.

For the rest of the afternoon, the travelers were busy taking in the various park attractions; young and old alike had their share of roller coasters, caroussel, whip, boat rides, fishing ponds and the inevitable hot-dogs and popcorn. At 6 p.m. the picnickers gathered for a regular basket lunch and a band concert by the employees' band, which attracted several hundred spectators.

At 8.30 p.m. the revelers were back in their trains heading for home, and singsongs were the order of the day. One of the highlights of this outing was that not a single casualty was reported.

Canada's population increase in the twelve months preceding March 1, 1953, was 376,000, bringing the total population at that date to 14,692,000.

Almost Well Enough to Resume Duties

—Central Press Canadian.

This smiling close-up of Sir Winston Churchill, British prime minister, was made as he left his Chartwell private home by car for Chequers, England, his official country home. The prime minister's office said that he had "benefitted greatly" from his month's rest and that he would remain at Chequers a short time only.

Practical Film on Safe Driving Shown at Rotary

The film, "A Day in Court", was shown at last week's meeting of the Brownsburg Rotary Club by Rotarian Edgar Pollock, of Pollock & Graves Motors Ltd., Lachute.

This film dealt with common driving faults which are not looked upon as infractions by the person responsible, but which nevertheless contribute to innumerable accidents. "Bullying" other drivers off the road, showing off, nervous fidgeting instead of clear-cut signals, ignoring the rights of other drivers and ignoring traffic rules in situations where detection is unlikely, were cited as examples of driving faults that most drivers are guilty of every day.

The arguments used by the various types of offenders were very effectively dramatized as each one was brought into court to argue his or her cause. As an interesting sidelight, a newspaper cartoonist used the faces of the people representing each type, illustrating the personality traits that are responsible for their poor driving habits.

In going over each case, the presiding judge tried to show that the types of infractions committed would not be possible if the drivers would show the same courtesy to each other on the road that they would ordinarily practice in their own homes. He suggested that, if even a few drivers showed that extra politeness, they would find that most other people would react favorably and the practice of courteous driving would spread quickly. The slogan, "Courtesy Is Contagious", was recommended for use in any safety campaign.

Rotarian Pollock was thanked for a very interesting and instructive presentation by Rotarian Steve Istvanffy.

Miscreants Face Charges on Theft, Traffic Counts

While making deliveries recently Georges-E. Marchand, storekeeper of St. Philippe and co-proprietor of the Cinema Lachute, was attacked and robbed of his wallet containing $130. Paul-Emile Allard, 22, of Carillon, was arrested at Rigaud next day, where he was allegedly "sleeping it off" with nothing but small change left in his pockets. Det. Maurice Lamoureux, of Lachute, made the arrest and laid a charge in connection with the hold-up.

* * *

A theft of construction steel which occurred early in July was discovered only recently, when Det. Lamoureux and Police Chief D. Villeneuve were called to investigate. 5,400 pounds of metal in 108-pound pieces was found missing from the Carillon Canal repair project. The police subsequently arrested a man named Dupuis, of Grece's Point, who was charged and will appear shortly in court at St. Jerome.

A 32-year-old truck driver, Percy Chatelain, of St. Philippe, who parked his truck towards the centre of the highway between St. Philippe and Grenville on Sunday night, was narrowly avoided by a passing motorist. The detective was notified, and the driver was found asleep over the wheel of his truck, allegedly "under the influence".

17-Year-old André M[illegible] Lachute, borrowed a [illegible] mobile without permission, subsequently collided with a car belonging to Léopold Girard, Lachute Mills. The incident occurred at St. Jerome, and it is reported that the youth, afraid to face consequences, sped away from the scene of the mishap. He later arrested on a [illegible] charge. Gérard's auto was damaged to the extent of $[illegible]

Det. M. Lamoureux, of the Provincial Police, made investigation and arrests in all four cases.

Traffic Courtesy in Western Cities Notable Impression on Pacific Tour

The Rev. Dr. W. Harold Reid, minister of the Margaret Rodger Memorial Presbyterian Church, returned just recently from an extended tour to the Pacific Coast, and has obliged The Watchman with the following brief impressions on his travels:

Revisiting the West after 30 years brought a number of surprises. When engaged in mission work in Southern Saskatchewan a number of years ago, I recall the prairies were largely vast flat open stretches of land, with hardly a tree in sight anywhere, apart from the towns. Today the face of the prairies is quite changed, with small patches of trees dotted here and there, which, however, have not become large enough in either height or extent to be called 'woods' in our sense of the word.

Farming also has undergone a change. While wheat is still dominant everywhere, evidence of more diversified farming is now seen throughout the West. The very wet summer this year retarded the maturing of the wheat so that it was still green last week, instead of the beautiful golden color characteristic of this time of year, and harvesting had not yet started in any parts we visited.

Calgary is an interesting city, standing as it does between the prairies and the mountains. Each year Stampede Week brings its throngs of visitors and cowboys, and Calgary becomes a different city. Merchants do not expect to do business, for everybody, it seems, enters into the spirit of the festivities, with cowboys serving flap-jacks free on the streets from their chuck-wagons in the early morning.

The trip over the Rocky Mountains and down the Fraser River canyon was something never to be forgotten. It was strange to see the mountains so close to you on a hot summer day with their summits covered with snow.

While the West has been noted for being progressive and much faster than the East, yet we noted one amazing difference especially with reference to motor traffic. In the western cities the traffic laws are respected, and consequently motor cars travel much slower than here; but it was still more surprising to find that there pedestrians were regarded by motorists as human beings who had the right to cross the street! In vancouver, for example, at intersections where there were no traffic lights, as soon as a pedestrian stepped off the sidewalk at an intersection, no matter how wide the street, cars from both directions would stop at the intersection-lines and never dash by in front of you. Where there were traffic lights, pedestrians observed the WAIT or WALK signal and did not cross the street against the lights, even if there were no cars in sight. Moreover, you did not see jay-walking in the business section of the city. Believe it or not, motor horns were rarely heard and this freedom from noise was quite remarkable.

The delightful climate and wonderful display of flowers seen everywhere in British Columbia combine to make that province very attractive. The famous Stanley Park in Vancouver and the Butchart Gardens near Victoria must be seen to be appreciated, because mere words fail to convey the fulness of their beauty and grandeur.

Two Robberies Last Week-End

Two robberies were reported to local police headquarters last week-end. Chief Donat Villeneuve, who investigated, affirmed that arrests were imminent in these cases.

The first occurrence was at a local hotel room, where a guest, Antoine Simmon, employed as a cook at the Lapointe Hotel, St. Jerome, was victimized by the theft of clothing and personal articles valued at approximately $20.

During the absence of Marcel Dallaire and his family at the Ayers picnic at Belmont Park, his home at the corner of Cloutier and Hamelin Streets was broken into — a radio set, a camera and two suits of clothing being taken. Total value of the missing articles was around $125.

Although Ontario took 86,000 of the 164,000 immigrants to enter Canada last year, unemployment in the province decreased by 33,000 between April, 1952, and April, 1953.

Trailers Involved In Two Accidents

René Cuerrier and Jules Laparsée, both of Hawkesbury, received serious injuries when their car, driven by Cuerrier, crashed into the rear of a semi-trailer owned and operated by Hull - Montreal Express. The accident occurred on Route 8 near Marelan, one evening last week.

Cuerrier stated that he was attempting to pass another car and was blinded by the headlights of the oncoming vehicle. He did not see the trailer, stopped on the highway, until it was too late to avoid it. Paul Emile Tardiff, driver of the trailer, stated that his motor had stalled and that he had pulled over to the side of the road to make the necessary repairs. Extensive damage to the car resulted from the accident.

Cuerrier and Laparsee were treated in Hawkesbury.

Another accident occurred under like circumstances near Calumet four days later, at 12.40 a.m., when a car owned and driven by Aurele Guindon, Grenville, struck the left rear wheel of a parked semi-trailer owned by the same company. The cause of the accident was similar. The car was demolished.

Guindon was treated by Dr. G. R. Bowes, of Grenville, and later charged with driving without a Quebec operator's permit.

Considerable damage to a car, owned and driven by Clifford Moore, Arundel, and to a fence at Weir, resulted when the car struck the fence at 2.15 a.m. on August 7. The accident occurred at Round Lake, Weir. Moore was charged with driving while his ability was impaired.

Traffic Officer Howard Jones investigated all three accidents.

In Canada there are almost three times as many widows as there are widowers.

Holiday Fun

A local business man and his family enjoyed a happy vacation recently at Bristol, Que. — at one of those hostelries where organized sport and amusement finds ready collaborators. A fellow vacationist sends us the above picture showing our local businessman in an undignified role. Readers will perhaps recognize their local storekeeper (left) in masquerade glad-rags.

Gatineau LINES

Substations and transmission lines are essential parts of a smoothly operating electricity supply system.

It is with this thought that we recite in our column, from time to time, additions and improvements in our system, as reports to our customers of our endeavors to meet increasing demands for electric service.

This week we are glad to report:

Early in May our St. Jovite - Labelle transmission line was increased to 26,400 volts:

At that time, too, our Piedmont Substation, in our Ste. Adele Division, was increased from 1,000 kva to 2,500 kva.

Plans are in progress to increase soon the capacities of our Substations at Shawbridge and Ste. Adele from 2,500 kva to 3,750 kva each.

In the following weeks we will report upon improvements and additions recently completed or in progress.

Quebec Early Apples On Market Shortly

The fall may seem a long way off, but within two weeks Quebec early apples will be on the market.

A word of warning comes from Dr. Dan Taper of the Macdonald College Horticulture staff. The Red Melba, the chief early variety, bruises easily and does not keep too well. To assure yourelf of high quality fruit, your best bet is to buy early apples at roadside stands in apple growing areas. Early apples that are handled too often, stored or hauled long distances are quickly lowered in quality. Most Quebec early apples are sold at roadside stands, Dr. Taper points out, and are relatively hard to get and expensive in the city.

Ottawa Official At Stockholm Conf'ce

Ottawa — Dr. Orlan Hall, Assistant Veterinary Director General, is attending the International Veterinary Congress in Stockholm, Sweden, August 8 - 15, as Canada's official representative. He will give a paper on the control and eradition of foot and mouth disease in Canada. While on the Continent visits will probably be made to veterinary and animal quarantine stations in Denmark and Holland and discussions will be held with livestock officials in those countries.

In addition, Dr. Hall will confer with officials of the British Ministry of Agriculture and agricultural officials in Eire on the control of animal diseases, quarantine arrangements, and regulations regarding livestock importations into Canada. It is expected that these discussions will be of mutual benefit to all concerned.

3,000 at Macdonald Holstein Field Day

The annual Quebec Provincial Holstein-Fresian Field Day is noted for its enthusiastic support from breeders. This year was no exception. They turned out 3,000 strong at the event, held this year at Macdonald College.

At the college dairy barns, the crowd watched a demonstration of selective registration, an inter-club judging contest and a parade of the College Holstein herd. The afternoon feature was an open judging competition.

After a number of short talks, gate prizes of three well-bred Holstein bull calves were drawn. A lucky raffle ticket holder won a heifer out of a dam with a 25,000 pound record. The raffle raised several hundred dollars for the Provincial Association's funds. The McLeod Trophy was awarded to the Huntingdon Club, winners of the inter-club judging competition. Father Godin received recognition for his work on behalf of the Holstein breed, receiving an automobile from the Association.

Hermas LaJoie, secretary-manager of the Quebec Holstein-Friesian Society, and Prof. Alex Ness of Macdonald College were in charge of the day's events.

22 New Clubs in 4-H Movement

The 4-H family has been enlarged this year by the addition of many newcomers in the movement. Last year, at the time of their 10th annual convention, the 4-H Clubs numbered 252; this year, they number 274, comprising nearly 10,000 members.

Among the 22 new Clubs added from September 1952 to July 1953, many had already placed an official request to be accepted in the movement; this year their efforts have merited their acceptance. Some special requirements are to be fulfilled before a new club is officially accepted by the Central Bureau.

The Clubs of the year are sending a few delegates to the 4-H Provincial Convention, August 11-13, in order to learn the achievements of the other Clubs and meet with the members.

Acres Have Headaches

Cost-of-living for the farmer and his city cousin aren't the same thing, notes The Financial Post. The much-quoted indices are for the city. The latest farm family living cost index shows living costs 203.4% above the 1935-39 average, having increased more than city costs over that period. The farm index is 0.4% above January this year, but 3% below a year ago.

Politicians and Roads; A Countryside Unexcelled in Glossy Tourist Folders

"SUNNYACRES SKETCHES"
By Margaret Cook

The season advances; when we walk in the fields now, the blackberries lift their jet, and we avert our eyes, because they remind us of jelly. At present — as our western maid used to say, we do not "feel" for jelly. Each day, the apples on a tree facing the porch window are a little redder, the goldenrod is beginning to wave its orange banners above the bright blue of the bottle gentian in the bracken below, the blueberry bushes have all turned a deep mauve and a few precocious mushrooms have appeared. As we write, the wind moans around the house. But what do we care? We have a large stone fireplace!

Now we are glad we made the most of the past summery week. We swam, then sunned ourselves on the sand, we walked over the fields and we made a trip through the mountains, beginning and ending at Morin Heights and touching Montfort, Laurel, Lost River, Weir and Sixteen Island Lake in between. The scenery all the way is beautiful — with the breath-taking sight of the mountains rising behind Lake Bevan, taking easily first place. We were delighted with the diversity of the countryside, ranging, as it did, from wild highland glens reminiscent of the Scottish Trossachs, to rolling pastoral land. We were also intrigued by the diversity of the road surfaces. From Sixteen Island Lake to Morin Heights the road is beautiful — both to look at, as it rolls its black and white ribbon between the green fields, and to ride upon. The same is true of the stretch between Montfort and Laurel. From Laurel to Lost River the road is a pleasant country one, sandy and smooth, but between Weir and Sixteen Island Lake conditions are extremely bad, so that the driver has no chance to see the truly magnificent scenery. We find this diversity puzzling and are assured by a cynical friend that it is "due to politics". According to him, the smartest politician gets the best roads for his constituency, and if that is too big a territory, it often happens that the roads near his own home get done first. Our informant finds this discreditable, but we feel that it is merely human nature. After all, others benefit from the politician's narrow patriotism. At least, no one can accuse our local member of such weakness; the road to Lachute is worse than it has been for some time! Several places have miniature unmarked precipices at the edge, where the gravel has fallen over the side. We look forward to the week when we can write "I told you so", as some poor driver's epitaph.

To get back to the scenery — we were amazed and delighted to see a gull wheeling and planing over the waters of Sixteen Island Lake. As we came down the hill to the village, there lay the cluster of houses — the wharf, with some very handsome craft alongside — the lake ruffling away into the narrows — and above, Master Gull doing his best to make it all look like a seaside resort. We all enjoyed it. We also liked little Lake Julia hidden away in the mountains behind Lost River. This we had never seen before, and we admired its blue waters and yellow, sandy beach. We did not stop to see the beach at Lake Macdonald, but, if memory serves us well, it is one of the best in the Laurentians. All this country of which we write rivals world-renowned beauty spots and awaits the hand of a paternal government, or the manipulations of a promoter, to take its place along with the other resorts in the glossy folders. We do not urge this, we like it as it is, but undoubtedly even a mild boom would benefit the local residents.

And so, we returned down the bumpy road from Morin Heights and came home to the old house solidly awaiting us on its concrete foundations. "It is a poor thing, but mine own", and several people have recently looked at it with envious eyes. We had as tea guests this week some people from Czecho-Slovakia, and they were much intrigued. In their zeal to live as other people in their adopted land, they had bought a pretty bungalow, only to find that they could not live happily in it. The living-room with dining area came in for special criticism; as the wife explained, if someone called during a meal, there they were all condemned to sit, one eating, the other watching; also, if there are children in the family, and things are spilled, they are spilled in the living-room as well as the dining-room. Then there is the problem of picking up. "Always we are picking up." We explained our philosophy that life is easier in a big house because, if the flesh is weak at the thought of a cleaning job, it is always easy to shut a few doors firmly and pretend there is nothing behind them. We find it works fine. Always there comes a day when we feel full of vim and vigor and at night the doors are all open, the house shining, a good dinner on the table and a fire on the hearth. That's the day!

Since we began to write, the rain has come — not a nice soft, gentle rain, a nasty, noisy, beating of water on the glass from the northeast. We have set a match to the wood in the fireplace, and can feel the grateful warmth on our back; a day to sit about and read or play cards or do fancy work. The writer has never been able to content herself with bits of knitting, crocheting or like feminine avocations, so our friends' merriment is only exceeded by their amazement to see us struggling with quite a large "picture" depicting an old house, much like Sunnyacres, with a tree leaning over it, a well before it, and a squirrel in the foreground. As one of our guests suggests, it will be a nice picture, five years from now. . . This was all I needed; nothing activates me so much as a suggestion that I cannot do something. My motto now is, Christmas or collapse! We shall work at the masterpiece this afternoon.

News Flash! — We have a family of porcupines living near us, and in the dusk, they are accustomed to take a stroll about the lawn, talking volubly all the time. It is hard to describe this sound, a kind of high-pitched trill. At first, we accused Betty of doing what she calls a "preet"; but Betty was asleep — it was then we discovered the family. We wonder if it was Mother Porcupine who ate large scallops off our favorite wooden salad bowl, while it was spending the winter in the garage. Our friend, the contractor, has cleverly evened off the edge, so it is no longer the biggest bowl in the countryside, but still functional.

The time draws near for noon dinner at the hotel. Pity the poor hotel guest on a day like this. As one said as he quit the table, "Now don't disturb me for a couple of hours". Very sensible. Maybe we shall imitate him later; we have such pleasant dreams. When we awoke this morning, we were dreaming that a friend was offering a bowl filled with alternating cubes of pink watermelon and black ice. Very effective, but we did not get to taste it, for a great shaking of the grates announced that the man of the house had begun another day. We wonder what the psychiatrists would make of that dream.

B.F. Goodrich Tubeless Tire

Because IT HAS NO TUBE

It may save your life...
The B. F. Goodrich LIFE-SAVER Tubeless Tire gives you maximum protection against the hazard of blowouts and dangerous skids, that frequently result in serious injury, and even death.

It can save you trouble...
The B. F. Goodrich LIFE-SAVER Tubeless Tire seals punctures on running wheels . . . protects against the annoying trouble caused by flat tires.

It will save you money...
The B. F. Goodrich LIFE-SAVER Tubeless Tire provides greater safety than any tire and tube, yet it costs less than the conventional safety tire-tube combination.

Act now to prevent this!

Accidents like the one above can happen when blowouts occur—that's why you owe it to yourself to find out about the extra protection in B. F. Goodrich LIFE-SAVER Tubeless Tires. Most blowouts are caused when the inner tube explodes through weakened or broken cords. But, because it has no inner tube, a LIFE-SAVER Tire changes a sudden, dangerous blowout to a safe s-s-s-slowout—allowing you ample time to stop your car safely, with perfect control.

PUNCTURE PROTECTION
A gummy rubber compound under the tread immediately seals around puncturing objects, and permanently seals the hole when the object is removed. Inconvenience and delays are eliminated.

BLOWOUT PROTECTION
Instead of a tube, the LIFE-SAVER has a patented inner lining that's part of the tire. In event of damage there's no sudden blowout, only a small break in the liner, a s-s-s-slowout that lets you stop safely.

SKID PROTECTION
The LIFE-SAVER tread is cross-cut into thousands of tiny grip-blocks. At 30 miles per hour on wet roads, it stops you a car length quicker than regular tires . . . and gives you longer mileage too.

The Threatening Voice

AN OMINOUS warning came from Moscow, just two weeks after peace returned to Korea, when Russia served notice on the world that she had mastered production of the hydrogen bomb.

The announcement came as Premier Georgi Malenkov made a surprise appearance before a joint session of the Supreme Soviet. "The United States no longer has the monopoly of the hydrogen bomb", Malenkov told the cheering deputies. He added that Russian scientists had mastered its production long ago.

The hydrogen bomb is a development of the atom bomb but many times more powerful. The United States atomic energy commission is believed to have exploded the world's first hydrogen bomb in a series of tests at the Eniwetok atoll in the Marshall Islands last year, although this has not been announced officially. AEC announcements have said only that there have been "experiments in certain thermonuclear devices", which was taken to mean that work was done on hydrogen bomb-like explosives.

Malenkov now claims the Soviet budget "provides for improved defence capacity to give a crushing blow to any aggressor who wants to violate the peaceful life of the Soviet Socialist Republics".

— No sooner has the cornerstone of peace been laid, than we are confronted with new threats to sanity. Mankind is too prone to hope. This perpetual inquietude is a phase of evolution, but it seems we are loath to resign ourselves to anguish as an adjunct of existence.

Pastorale

THERE MUST BE considerable movement in the livestock market these days — judging by the truckloads migrating citywards from this town.

As we've mentioned before, it is our misfortune to reside on Main Street near a 24-hour eating place popular with the transport fraternity. Around 6.30 a.m. one day this week, we were awakened by the lowing of cattle at two altitudes on the scale — bass from beef cows and contralto from the juveniles — which continued while the truckman ate his breakfast. (We judge, from the prolonged performance, that he was at the point of starvation.) . . Deprived of our last lush moments with Morpheus, we went to work, labored through the morning and returned home at noon — only to be heralded by a load of hogs near the same spot. And before the hour's respite was ended, this cacophony was augmented by the crowing of roosters in a truck parked close behind the pig transport.

Truly, we like to be in the centre of activity. And we choose to live in town for its various advantages, in preference to settling on a farm. It seems we enjoy the distractions of both — and it is at times like this that we wish our entire Town Council and Police Force might share the same locality on Main Street, and realize what it's all about.

India's Great Experiment

OVER-POPULATION is one of the worst of many problems facing India in her huge task of social and economic reconstruction. The Republic of India is tackling it in earnest.

The economic consequence of population pressure in India were emphasized by the partition which accompanied establishment of India and the dominion of Pakistan as self-governing states. India itself has imported about 3,000,000 tons of food annually in recent years.

The cost of these purchases has cut into the money available for education, health services and other nation-building activities. Foreign exchange which could have been invested in capital goods to boost industrial development has had to be spent to feed the growing population.

Indian leaders consequently devised a two-fold approach to the problem. First, increased food production is being sought by large-scale irrigation projects and by agricultural programs for improving the individual's farming methods. Secondly, control of population growth has been made the subject of many government studies. A preliminary step was the population inventory provided by the 1951 census, which showed 356,800,000 people in the republic.

Now the government has adopted a comprehensive program of family planning as part of its first Five Year Plan. This emphasizes that the need for family planning is essentially based on considerations of the health and welfare of the family — that family limitation and the spacing of children are necessary and desirable in order to assure better health for mothers, and better care and upbringing for children.

For the period of the first Five Year Plan — until 1957 — large sums were allocated for social and technical research in family planning, and the provision of limited services.

Thus, say government spokesmen, India is tackling her population problem by taking into account not only national necessities but also individual welfare.

Fuel Trend

AS A source of fuel, coal has yielded first place to oil in the United States. For 50 years other energy producers have been nibbling away at what once was virtually the sole source of commercial power.

Last year — notes The Financial Post — 39.4% of the power generated in the U.S. came from oil, only 34% from coal. And that lead for the rival fuel, it is generally expected, will tend to increase in the immediate future.

What is true of the United States will certainly be true of Canada. Here, too, coal is losing out to oil, and especially with the two principal users, the railway locomotive and the home furnace.

For years the costs of mining coal have been rising, because mining wages have been rising.

If coal is to continue a major source of fuel and the coal mines a major source of employment, then real costs of production must be brought down to a point where coal can compete with other fuels. That's the fundamental problem.

Sittin' Thinking

SITTING THINKING is a good way to spend an hour or so. It is best done when things around are on the quiet side and it requires an old chair, a sofa or some other support, perhaps a grassy bank or a tree stump. Keeping the eyes closed is useful.

Sitting thinking is particularly good in August, be the locale the town park, a living room, a mountain lake or the porch of the farm house. It is the answer to an excess of keeping one's self busy.

Spectator sports, movies, and so on over a couple of generations have kept people so busy doing things that a great many now feel irritated if they are idle. The knack of conversation being lost to a degree, people try to keep occupied by playing cards or other competitive house games. Tension breeds tensiòn.

Sitting thinking is the way out. According to Pascal, much of the disorder and evil in life are the result of mankind's inability to sit and think. Noting this recently, The Saturday Review said "Silence, already the nation's most critical shortage, is almost a nasty word". Quiet and contemplation are essential for the healthy mind. Feet up is good, but not absolutely necessary. Just close the eyes and think. And if it's too hard to think, if your mind is a blank, you've hit the jackpot.

By Our Columnist,
G. E. MORTIMORE

We learn something every day, I'm afraid. News that the Royal Canadian Air Force had several kilted pipe bands came as a nasty surprise. On top of that, the Royal Canadian Mounted Police began advertising for bandsmen.

Vacancies exist in RCMP bands at Ottawa and Regina for single men between 18 and 30 who can play alto saxophone, French horn, bassoon, cornet, clarinet, oboe and flute.

An airman in a kilt playing the bagpipes? A dismounted Mountie playing a saxophone? Just don't let the adventure writers know, that's all. The shock will kill them.

We are used to Mounties riding motorcycles, cars and aircraft instead of horses. They are still a fine body of men. But the idea of Mounties playing musical instruments strikes a blow at our storybook illusions.

The RCMP may have had a band since the Riel Rebellion for all we know, and a good band at that. The fault lies with us. We can't accustom ourselves to the notion of a Mountie setting off to get his man with a flute strapped to his side. We know about the famous musical ride of the RCMP. All the same, imaginary scenes like this plague the mind:—

Ben the Mad Trapper stood with smoking rifle at the door of the Arctic cabin.

"That's the end of you, Mountie", he said with a sneer. "You'll never rise from that bunk to trouble me again."

The words were scarcely out of his mouth when he was seized in an iron grip, and handcuffs snapped on his wrists.

The Mad Trapper swivelled around.

"You!" he gasped. "Oompah of the Mounted! I just shot you as you lay in your bunk."

"That's where you made your mistake, Ben. All you did was to shoot a hole in my bassoon. I tucked it under the blankets to resemble my sleeping figure. Why did you come here to kill me, Ben?"

"It was that blasted bassoon, Mountie. You played it night and day. My cabin is two miles distant from yours, but the noise drove me mad."

"Hatred of music is no excuse for attempted murder, Ben. I'm taking you to civilization to answer for your crime."

As the two men trudged into the midnight sun, the policeman played a march on his bassoon. Eight hundred miles of ice and snow lay between them and Fort Muskox. They never got there. The sledge dogs tore them to pieces when they made camp. The dogs didn't like the music either.

During Stalin's wake, the Moscow radio announced that five million Russians filed by the bier in 72 hours. That means, according to the calculations of Frank Baker, a Mangum, Okla., accountant, that the mourners, two abreast, three and one third feet apart, ran past the bier at 22 miles an hour. Twenty-two miles an hour is 9.3 seconds a hundred yards, which is the world's record for the 100-yard dash — heretofore recorded only by America's Mell Patton.

MONTREAL -- MAELSTROM AND MILLSTREAM

By GEOFF.

I was sorting out some old books the other day. Some were mine; some were my sisters', other were books that my parents had given me after the house and home broke up on my father's retirement. It was a tiring and thankless job. Many of the books had to be earmarked for my old university library. That's the way Dad had wanted it, and I've only been three years in the process of getting them shipped to the college.

As I sat in the cellar last week, stuffing volume after volume into cartons and crates, I came across a religious book by the Rev. Canon Bertal Heeney. And, as I scanned the title, it brought to mind an amusing story. I cannot vouch for its authenticity, since I've never checked with the principal characters in the story. However, knowing the gentleman in question, I'm almost certain it's a true tale.

When Canon Heeney had completed his book, and before he trafficked with the publishers, he despatched it to the Venerable Archdeacon C. Hepburn, rector of All Saints' Church, Ottawa. He requested that the worthy Archdeacon read the manuscript, correct it, if necessary, and return it with any comments or suggestions he might care to make.

In due course of time, Canon Heeney got his manuscript back again. Attached to it was the following note:

"Proof o.k. Only one suggeation. Instead of 'What The Church of England Stands For', why not call it 'What The Church of England Puts Up With'?"

I guess Canon Heeney rejected this proposal. The title on the book I held in my hand last week was, "What The Church of England Stands For".

* * *

This is a short note this week. Not much to tell about Montreal at the moment. Everyone is too busy wondering about the elections tomorrow to provide the lowly writer wih material for a weekly article. One thing, of course, could be discussed. Let's look at the prediction for this riding, St. Antoine - Westmount.

As things stand now, the general feeling is that Doug Abbott will most likely get in again. Still, in view of Egan Chambers' vigorous door-to-door campaign, he may well edge Abbott out. In all probability, however, Abbott will get the nod but Chambers will give him a tough run for his money.

A straight, place and show prediction, if ever there was. Tomorrow we'll know the results of the race.

Now we know, Brother!

Easter Seals Organization

Arthur Lagueux of Quebec City has been elected president of the Quebec Easter Seal Society. Mr. Lagueux is well known as the senior jartner of the firm of Lagueux & Desrochers Limited, bond brokers, and also has an almost world-wide reputation as a past-president of the International organization of Rotary Clubs. He has been identified with community welfare activities for many years.

While the Easter Seal Society only commenced distributing Easter Seals for the benefit of crippled children and adults throughout the Province of Quebec, in the year 1950, it has raised over three hundred thousand dollars in this particular cause. Many Quebec cripples, some in quite remote parts, have reason to be thankful to Easter Seals.

The Quebec Easter Seal Society had its head office in Montreal, (staffed entirely by cripples), but covers the whole of the Province of Quebec through the help and co-operation of nearly 40 service clubs, such as Rotary, Lions, Kiwanis, etc., distributing Easter Seals in its own territory, and using at least one-half of the funds raised for the benefit of cripples in their own locality. . . In this district, Easter Seals are distributed by Lachute Lions Club.

In addition to Mr. Lagueux, the following officers and directors have been elected: Walter G. Attridge, Montreal, vice-president; Ernest O. Freedman, Montreal, treasurer; J. L. Busfield, Montreal, executive secretary; Lt. Col. Paul Brosseau, St. Jerome, Ray Brunet, Hull, Dr. Stephen Langevin, Montreal, Dr. Alton Goldbloom, Montreal, Cecil Pascal, Montreal, Joseph L. Pegnem, Montreal, Romeo Desjardins, Montreal, and Harold C. Pearson, Montreal, directors.

At Digby, N.S., the Parish of Trinity Church celebrated the 75th anniversary of the present church, replacing the original church which served the parish from its establishment in 1785.

The Canadian National Railway employs nearly 128,000 people, making it the largest employer in Canada. In this family of workers, located from Newfoundland to British Columbia, there are representatives of every skilled trade as well as members of the professional world such as doctors, nurses, lawyers, economists, engineers, metallurgists, physicists and chemists.

BATES — In loving memory of a dear father, Leslie Bates, who passed away Aug. 11, 1952. — Sadly missed by his daughter, Grace, in Timmins, Ont.

"Today recalls sad memories
Of a father gone to rest,
And the ones who think of him today
Are the ones who loved him best."

"Gone, dear Mom, gone forever,
How we miss your smiling face.
But you give us to remember
None on earth can take your place;

How sweet the memory still,
But death has left a loneliness
The world can never fill."

LOUDIN — In loving memory of a dear son and brother, Robert John, accidentally killed Aug. 17, 1936. — Lovingly remembered by Mother and sisters, Kay, Margaret and Eleanor.

A Letter to Our Bob

"We miss you, Bob, since you have gone,
More than mere words can say,
For life is not the same to us
Since you were called away.
We rose that morn and spoke to you
Like any other day,
And that night our hearts were broken,
Our skies had turned to grey.
As you went first and we remained,
One thing we would have you do —
Walk slowly down the path of Death,
For soon we'll follow you.
We want to know each step you take
That we may walk the same,
For some day, down that lonely road,
You'll hear us call your name — Bob".

MONCRIEFF — In loving memory of a dear father, George Moncrieff, who left us suddenly on August 19, 1946. — Always remembered by Violet, Stanley and Hartland.

"When twilight hours draw near
And sunset frames the sky,
We think of you, dear Dad,
And the happy days gone by.
The smile of you come drifting back
To make our dreams to stay,
We know that you are resting,
When twilight ends the day."

MAJORITY FOR VALOIS — 7,721

The bureaucratic attitude is summed up by statement of U.K. Ministry of Food, answering criticisms of the meat it has been foisting on British housewives: "The decision of what meat is suitable for the ration is made by experts." Time was when a statement like this would have overturned a British government. Today Britons take it for granted.

To the Electors of Argenteuil-Deux Montagnes

The gratifying results of last Monday's election are a credit to the devotion and sacrifice of our party friends, to whom the electorate extended such a warm welcome.

The imposing majority of votes in my favor will enable me to work with greater strength and confidence in the interests of my constituents.

From the national viewpoint, it is also gratifying that Argenteuil - Deux Montagnes has joined again with those across the entire country who appreciate the sterling character of that great Canadian, Prime Minister the Rt. Hon. Louis St. Laurent.

I thank my loyal collaborators — and add my assurance to all fellow citizens, that they may count on my sincere devotion to their service.

2 Local Growers Win Trophies at Gladiolus Show

Montreal's Victoria Hall was a blaze of color Tuesday as the Quebec Gladiolus Society opened its 19th annual two-day exhibition. This year's show boasts more than 250 entries, and a record display in the amateur class.

In the first day's judging, two local growers copped top honors. Thos. Iddon, a newcomer to this exhibit, won the amateur sweepstakes and was awarded the Bank of Montreal silver tray. In other amateur competitions, he captured the Stockton Memorial Shield and the New England Gladiolus Society silver medal.

H. Cordeau won the J. H. Stockton Trophy in the advanced amateur sweepstakes and the Merrill Mode Memorial Trophy with his champion spike, "Sunspot". He also took the New England Gladiolus Society rosette for the best spike in the advanced amateur class.

A big winner at the exhibition was Sydney G. Mode, of Vankleek Hill, Ont., who walked away with four trophies.

Three-Day Tests at Hudson of Interest To Horse-Lovers

The Horsemanship Club of Montreal is holding its annual tests for Dressage and Combined Events at Hudson, Que., on August 14, 15 and 16. These tests are similar to those at the forthcoming Olympic Games which will be held in 1956.

Major General C. C. Mann, C.B.E., D.S.O., of Toronto, is patron, and chairman of the committee is L. T. Porter, M.F.H., of St. Andrews East.

The program of events is as follows: On Friday, August 14, at 10.30 a.m. the Dressage Tests will be held (which are comparable to school figures in fancy skating). These will begin at the Lake of Two Mountains Hunt Kennels, Crevier's Farm, Como, and will continue throughout the day.

The following day at 1 p.m., at Jacobsen Farms, Harwood Road, Hudson Heights, will provide many thrills for spectators when the Cross-Country phase is ridden, over a course of approximately 11¾ miles in all, with a total of 25 fences.

On Sunday at Crevier's Farm, the Jumping Test will take place. This test is similar to the jumping classes seen annually at the Lachute Spring Fair.

One of the reasons that the Three-Day Event, as it is called, is of special interest to horse-lovers, is that each horse must show that he is capable of performing well in three quite different types of competition. He must be obedient and graceful in the Dressage test, show stamina and courage in the Cross-Country test, and finally after this gruelling test be able to compete in a difficult Jumping test at high speed.

From the winners of this competition will be selected a Canadian Three-Day Event Team to compete in the U.S.A. this autumn. The 1956 Canadian Olympic Team will be chosen from this and similar events.

Competitors from Toronto and Maryland, and many of our outstanding horsemen and women from Montreal and vicinity, will take part. Among them will be Miss Barbara Kemp, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Dillingham, Mrs. W. Angus, Mr. Desmond Stoker and Mr. Peter Plouffe, of Montreal, Mrs. Leslie Wallis and Mrs. George Jacobsen, of Hudson Heights, and Mrs. G. R. McCall, of Lachute.

The Three-Day Events should prove interesting to all horse-minded people and an eye-opener to anyone who has not yet witnessed these difficult tests. All are cordially invited to attend.

KEEP SHADOW AWAY FROM WATER

Trout spend their lives in danger of predatory birds and other hazards along the stream. For this reason they are frightened by shadows. A shadow flitting across the pool might be made by an osprey about to strike. If you would be successful, particularly on the still pools and smaller streams, be careful that your shadow or the shadow of your rod doesn't strike the water you wish to fish.

Ted Hansen, of Pierre, landed a 130-lb. sturgeon, already had market for it in Prince George, B.C. . . Penticton, B.C., Herald hopes the next government of the province, regardless of stripe, will eliminate the alternative balloting system "which only serves to irritate the people and to make this province a laughing stock."

Two Young Stars In Baseball Firmament

SPORTS CAMERA
By Gerry Lougheed,
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Two young baseball players — one in the American League and the other in the National — have been stealing the headlines this season from older established stars.

The pair — Mickey Mantle of New York Yankees and Eddie Mathews of Milwaukee Braves — have a lot in common.

Both are sluggers. Both arrived in the majors with little minor-league seasoning. Both hit the "big time" with quite a splash.

The Yankee outfielder arrived in the major league with all the noise and fireworks of a man being shot out of a cannon. Green as they come, he was only 19 when he attended his first spring training session with the Yanks.

Signed by a Boston scout at 17, Mathews was one of 20-odd untouted rookies in the Braves camp in the spring of 1952. He literally crashed into the publicity limelight.

He was an infielder, and Manager Tommy Holmes figured he would fit better in the outfield. Mathews was getting practice shagging outfield flies one day when he tore over into foul territory for a catch and collided with three men standing there.

One of them was Ford Frick, the baseball commissioner. All four of them went down, Matthews still clutching the ball. He suffered a broken nose.

That marked the end of Mathews' bid for an outfield spot and he was switched to third base. In contrast, Mantle was converted from a shortstop to an outfielder by the Yankees.

Each was awkward at the start, but both have made rapid strides. Each has trouble fielding certain types of line drives, but each has a rifle arm and can cover plenty of ground.

Like most heavy sluggers, Mantle and Mathews strike out pretty regularly.

Mathews led the National League in strikeouts last year with 115. Mantle was tied for that dubious honor in the American with 111.

Despite their ranking in the "star" category now, both players are aware of their weaknesses.

"I've got a lot to learn about hitting and fielding", Mathews admits. "It just makes me dizzy to even think of them. I think I'm finally getting the hang of playing third base but I still have trouble hitting certain pitching."

Says Cantle: "There's an awful lot I still don't know about this game. . . Everybody is saying I do this and do that well. Oh, I do a few things all right, and I'm not complaining. But there's a lot I still have to learn and maybe I'll never learn it."

MEMBERS OF PIKE FAMILY

The pike, maskinonge and true pickerel all belong to the pike family and are readily identified because they have no dorsal fin. The fish called a yellow pickerel in Ontario, a dore in Quebec and a walleye by the Americans, is not a pickerel at all. It is a member of the perch family, and the name pickerel is very incorrect.

Coronation Teaspoons Still Available

Since closing of the Watchman's subscription campaign, during which Coronation souvenir spoons were given out to subscribers, the publishers have had a number of requests from readers who would like to purchase one or more of these spoons. The Watchman has been able to purchase a further supply, and these will be on sale at the office, at practically cost price, 50 cents each. Readers may order by mail or call.

Gagnon Club ($108)

The Gagnon Club is certainly doing its share for the Tigers. Last Sunday night, $108 from the sale of tickets was given during the game to the Secretary of "L'Association de la Jeunesse Sportive de Lachute". Five prizes were awarded, as follows:

1st, cigarette holder with lighter, given by Hotel Tessier — won by Donat Fournier, Lachute.

2nd, Ronson lighter, given by Veteran Taxi, Lachute — won by Leo Gauthier, Belle Rivierre.

3rd, Basket of fruit, given by Ernest Laurin — won by Jean Guy Lavergne.

4th, 4 passes to Cinema Lachute, given by the theatre management — won by Oswald Carriere.

5th, case of Dow, given by the president, René Laurin — won by Mlle A. Carriere.

Well, keep it up everyone — donors, buyers and sport fans. And to René "Rex Café" Gagnon, many thanks on behalf of the Association, for raising these much-needed funds.

Taillefer has been loaned to St. Eustache since the accident to Dufort, and from last reports he is holding more than his share at 3rd base. And at bat, Pete is O.K.

Baseball Story
(New Liberty Magazine)

The Devil was always after St. Peter to arrange a baseball game between the good baseball players in heaven and a team from the Devil's home town. After quite a while, St. Peter agreed, and set the date.

Quoth the Devil: "St. Peter, this is one time you're going to lose".

"Why?" said St. Peter, "I have the best baseball players you could dream of."

"Sure", was the reply, "but still you're going to lose". "Why?" repeated St. Peter. "Well", said the Devil, "you should know! Where d'you think all the baseball referees go when they die!"

Marmora, Ont. (CP) — Gluttony was the downfall of a 20-pound muskie in Crowe Lake. Forrest Dennis, a fishing guide, hooked a pickerel with a double hook baited with a worm. The muskie tore the pickerel loose but became hooked in the process.

Problem

Farmer Jack Hayden is faced with a $300 question; which one of his 30 Holsteins swallowed the banknotes totalling that amount?

Hayden lost his wallet as he was feeding his cattle. When he found it an hour later in the big trough, 15 fat $20 notes were missing. But the wallet did still enclose a $700 cheque, result from a hog sale. Apparently, the cow had ignored the cheque thinking it too rich, or perhaps non-negotiable.

Farmer Hayden would be ready to destroy and search the culprit. But how many will he have to kill before hitting the right one?

Music Centre Opens for Two Weeks at Otter Lake, Near Huberdeau, Que.

A new Music Centre opened at Otter Lake, near Huberdeau, last Monday, to continue two weeks until August 23, during which time its members will attend recorder, choral and solfege classes in the mornings, enjoy outdoor recreation in the afternoons and have group singing and special lectures at night. The Centre is not intended for professional musicians only, but for amateurs who wish to improve their knowledge of music and add to the usual pleasure of listening to good music that of performing under expert guidance in a relaxed holiday atmosphere.

The Centre's Week-end Music Festivals, in the new hall of the Orphanage at Huberdeau, are open to the public. They consist of three concerts each on Saturday afternoon and evening and Sunday afternoon, featuring such outstanding Canadian artists as Mario Duschenes, Maureen Forrester, John Newmark, the Montreal Bach Choir, in programs ranging from folklore to ancient music and Canadian premières of works by modern composers. Tickets for these concerts will be sold at the door of the hall.

The co-directors of the Otter Lake Music Centre, Carl and George Little, are well known to music-loving Canadians. Carl is Music Producer for the CBC in Montreal, and George is organist and choir director of Erskine and American Church, as well as founder and director of the Montreal Bach Choir and professor at the Conservatoire de la Province de Québec in Montreal. Both brothers studied in Europe as well as in Canada. Assisting the directors at the Centre are Mario Duschenes, well known flutist and recorder player, and Ruth Blanchard, music and singing teacher at The Study, Montreal. Such highly qualified speakers as Celia Bizony (of Musica Antica e Nuova), Don McGill (program director at CBC) and Violet Archer (famous Canadian composer), are giving special lectures.

Persons interested in attending the Centre's activities can obtain information from Mrs. Madeleine Little, Secretary, Otter Lake Music Centre, Otter Lake House, Huberdeau, Que.

Store Clerk School

Seven of Montreal's largest retailers are sponsoring the establishment of a school of retailing at Sir George Williams College, in an effort to raise salesmanship standards and sharpen merchandising methods, reports The Financial Post.

40 British Schoolboys On Canadian Tour

Montreal — Forty British schoolboys bound for a two-week tour of Quebec and Ontario under an Educational Trust Fund established by W. H. Rhodes, C.B.E., Yorkshire industrialist, arrived at Quebec last week-end in the Cunard liner "Scythia".

The boys on this occasion are accompanied by the founder of the Canada Educational Trust, W. H. Rhodes, C.B.E., Sir Graham Savage, C.B., former Education Officer of the London County Council, and by Albert Spalding, B.A., Director of Education for Bradford, are from Secondary Schools in London, Birmingham, Bradford and Glasgow. Their tour includes visits to the Plains of Abraham, Quebec, stops at Montreal, Toronto, Hamilton and Niagara Falls and three days in camp, where they will be instructed in canoeing by Indian guides. They then go to Ottawa.

The Canada Educational Trust was founded in 1938 by W. H. Rhodes, C.B.E., to enable British schoolboys to "form an idea of the magnitude and importance of Canada."

Then there is the one about the man who went to have his thinning hair cut. His barber wanted to singe it instead — at double the price.

"Each hair is a tiny tube", the barber said, "and it bleeds at the cut end. As a result it gets weaker every time it is cut. But singeing seals the end, and the hair keeps its vigor."

"Then can you explain how the hair on my chin is growing stronger all the time, though each hair has been cut off every morning for 25 years?"

"No trouble at all", replied the barber. "You just ain't the kind of feller that story was made up to tell to."

$50,000 "Pot of Gold" In Prize Money at Ottawa Exhibition

A $50,000 "pot of gold" awaits successful exhibitors during the week of August 22-29, and the end of the rainbow is at Lansdowne Park, Ottawa, where more prize money than for any other one-week fair in the country is being offered by the Central Canada Exhibition.

Though situated close to the heart of the National Capital, the big fair is still primarily the rural show it always was, featuring farm production and rural community achievement that abounds in Eastern Ontario and Western Quebec.

Most of the $50,000 in prizes will leave the fair grounds in the pockets of exhibitors from farms and small communities.

The Central Canada Exhibition is heading for the greatest year in its history with record-smashing entry lists in all departments.

The great annual exhibition will feature the largest and best quality livestock show in the history of the C.C.E.A.

Entries in all other divisions, including Handicrafts, Hobby Show, Women's Institutes, Highland Dancing, Junior Agriculture and Horticulture have reached record proportions.

Every inch of space in the Lansdowne Park buildings and grounds has been reserved by exhibitors. No fewer than 403 entries have been received for the Horse Show and Horse Department and a total of 694 cattle, both beef and dairy types, have been entered in the Cattle Division. Poultry entries have reached the tremendous total of 2,750. The same success is being enjoyed in the Swine and Sheep divisions.

The famed C.C.E.A. Hobby Show this year has drawn close to 2,000 entries while the total for Handicrafts is 429.

More roadways have been paved and the dust nuisance has been completely eliminated. Many additional park benches have been provided and rest-room facilities expanded.

The comfort of the animals has not been overloooked with a $15,000 addition to the air-conditioning system in the livestock barn. Further, lighting in the park has been virtually doubled with many handsome new pilons being erected along Bank Street.

All in all, the 1953 Ottawa Exhibition promises to be the best ever, and the C.C.E.A. President, Directors, and Management confidently expect that attendance records will be shattered.

Dramatize Canada As Seafaring Nation

The story of Canada's birth and growth under the influence of the men of the sea will be told by the CBC in a series of five weekly programs beginning Sunday, August 23, at 9 p.m. EDT, on the Trans-Canada network.

"Days of Sail"; name of the series, will help Canadians realize that their country was once the leading maritime nation. Producer J. Frank Willis, a Maritimer himself, who along with the writer of the series, Joseph Schull, made a 54-day tour of the Maritime provinces gathering information, says: "She (Canada) had the best of timber and skills to draw on, and her ships were manned by sailors who were something of a phenomenon."

It is the story of these ships and seamen, gleaned from the memories of grandchildren and great-grandchildren of sailormen and the records and books of various archives, that will be told in these five hour-long documentaries. For example, Captain Goudey, who served as a mate on the Buccleuch, the only neutral ship in harbour during the famous battle of Manila Bay in 1898, will tell his tale. Willis and Schull recorded a talk with Captain Walters about the famous racing schooner Bluenose, which he commanded. Captain Manning will tell about his 54 years of sailing and 24 trips around the Horn. These famous seamen and others will be covered in the opening broadcast.

On August 30, the second program will go back to beginnings. Under the title "The Salt-Water Men", it will tell of explorers and fishermen who first visited our shores, with stories from such places at Heart's Content, Harbour Grace, Bonavista, and the Bay of Trinity.

The third broadcast on September 6 will present adventuresome tales of the Liverpool privateers of Nova Scotia — the men and ships who made names for themselves in the War of 1812.

The story of Marco Polo, the great New Brunswick clipper and the largest wooden ship ever to be built in Canada, will be told on the fourth program, while the last weekly broadcast will paint a vivid picture of a great shipbuilding era, a determined seafarer, and his big ship.

F. W. Wallace, authority on the age of sail in North America, served in a consultant capacity for the series.

Cooling Drinks For Summertime

On hot summer days, what is more refreshing than to stretch out under the shade of a big tree with a tall cool drink by your side! If you have actually lost the desire for solid food, then be sure to drink cool drinks that are not only thirst-quenchers but are also wholesome foods. The home economists of the Consumer Section, at Ottawa point out that cold drinks can fulfil a two-fold purpose. They can be refreshing and at the same time very nourishing.

Does your family like egg nogs or do they think of them as a food for invalids? A plain egg nog made of milk, egg and flavoring can be as cool, tempting and satisfying as any other drink. A plain egg nog is very good but the flavor may be varied by substituting fruit juice for all or part of the milk and by beating in either a whole egg or the beaten white. If the whole egg is being used, it is best to mix the fruit juice with the beaten yolk and then, just before serving, fold in the beaten white. Raspberry juice is particularly good used in this way and apricot nectar or grape juice will give an egg nog a party air.

Cool, appetizing and always a favorite with adults is café au lait. This is hot coffee mixed with plenty of hot milk, then chilled and served icy cold. It is a simple drink, easy to make and just the thing to serve to summer guests.

When a scorching day is predicted, a quick drink that is sure to appeal to practically everyone is plain ice-cold milk. The home economists remind us that adults and children alike need milk every day. However, in summertime, plain milk, even though icy cold, does not always appeal to everyone. Often just a slight change in the flavor of the milk will remedy the problem. This is a very easy thing to do. Just add a little chocolate or fruit syrup to the cold milk. As a matter of fact, it is a good idea to keep plenty of these syrups in the refrigerator ready for any occasion. Chocolate or fruit syrups are easy to make and to prepare a flavored drink, you need only add a spoonful or two of syrup to each glass of milk.

Another simple, easy way to change the flavor of milk is to add crushed fruit or even a little jam to the cold milk. The home economists suggest crushed peaches mixed with ice-cold milk and a spoonful of ice cream for a drink which the family will love, right to the last drop. They mention peaches because they are in season now but any crushed fruit may be used. Many milk drinks may be turned into milk shakes by adding a little ice cream to the flavored drink, pouring it into a sealer and shaking it well. The home economists also suggest that in making cool drinks, very interesting flavors may be developed if two flavors are combined. For instance, peppermint flavoring with chocolate drinks or almond flavoring with peach milk drinks.

Fruit garnishes really give drinks a party air so use plenty of them. Fruits such as cherries, melon wedges, raspberries, grapes, are ideal for the purpose. Mint grows in abundance in many gardens, but it is often forgotten until a roast of lamb appears on the table. Pop a sprig in a glass of cold drink. It will give it that finishing touch.

SUPPER SUGGESTION

Looking for something a little different for supper? Poultry Products Institute offers a suggestion. Make a custard omitting the sugar and vanilla and substituting instead salt, pepper and a bit of grated onion or grated cheese, bake as usual and serve with crisp little sausages and cooked broccoli.

"This won't hurt a bit"

FIND IT HARD to relax in the dentist's chair? Then you'll be glad to know that the dentist's drill now has a rival — a new device which "drills" teeth by means of a fine spray of aluminum oxide powder. They say the new technique takes the "ouch!" out of having a tooth fixed.

Manufacturers in many fields keep coming up with new uses for aluminum. And our research people are often called on for help in finding a remedy for their production aches and pains. Many times the result is another Canadian plant opening up to make a new and useful aluminum product. Aluminum Company of Canada, Ltd. (Alcan).

Let's Eat

BY IDA BAILEY ALLEN

A quick look-see at three of the class programs for rural homemakers at the University of Maryland are most enjoyable.

In one auditorium, a group of 200 watched a demonstration on flower arrangement.

Next came a millinery demonstration class.

CHICKEN BARBECUE DINNER

Sliced Tomatoes Scallior Pickles
Barbecued Chicken or Pork Chops
Baked Sweet Potatoes
Green Corn Watermelon Slices
Hot or Iced Coffee or Tea Milk

Barbecued Chicken

Use 3-lb. chickens, dressed and split in halves. To cook, place on the grill; turn often during the first half-hour with tongs. Then turn and swab frequently with a clean dish-mop dipped in barbecue sauce. Cook about 2 hours.

To test for doneness: With gloves on, grasp the thigh joint between the thumb and fingers of the left hand. Grasp the end of the drumstick with the right hand and turn. When the leg bone in the drumstick turns freely from the meat, the chicken is done.

Barbecue Sauce: Heat together 1 cup water, 2 cups cider vinegar, ½ lb. (1 cup) butter or margarine, and 2 tablespoons salt.

THE CHEF'S BARBECUED SWEET POTATOES

Sweet potatoes are a vegetable I like very much for a barbecue, cooked in any of the following ways:

1. Boil or pressure-cook sweet potatoes. Slice and saute in bacon fat or shortening in a skillet together with half the quantity of sliced apples. When half-done, sprinkle with a little salt and two or three tablespoons brown sugar to your taste.

2. Peel sweet potatoes; cover with boiling water and boil three minutes. Dry and cut in thick slices lengthwise. Brush with fat and grill on both sides. Dust with salt and pepper when half-done.

3. Scrub and dry medium-sized sweet potatoes. Brush all over with fat. Wrap in aluminum foil and bake in hot embers.

Junior W.I.'s Hold First Summer Camp

Quebec Junior Women's Institutes are holding their first camp. This is opening today at Bury, Compton County, and will continue until Sunday, August 16. Two girls, the president and secretary, are attending from each branch, with the exception of Scotstown, a total of 14 girls. The groups represented are Athelstan, Bury, Port Daniel, Rawdon, South Bolton, Stanbridge East and Warden.

The Junior Supervisor, Miss F. Elizabeth Campbell, is in charge of the camp assisted by Miss Ida R. Bruneau, Q.W.I. Handicraft Technician; Miss Frances Maunsell, Librarian, MacLennan Travelling Libraries; and three junior counsellors, Mrs. W. E. Bernhardt, Athelstan; Mrs. K. Tarrant, Bury; and Mrs. M. Sicard, Warden, the latter in her capacity as nurse.

A comprehensive program has been prepared, with workshops on various topics of Junior interest and instruction in swimming, folk dancing and group singing. Full opportunity is given for participation in all the events, in the setting of communal camp life, where work and play are shared alike by every member.

It is hoped that from this small beginning will arise an annual camp which will expand and keep pace with the growth of the Junior Institute movement in this province.

Fashions

A trim dress with sailor touches makes a nice choice with which to wind up the summer. It has lines that make it right for the younger or older figure, and is done in rayon shantung in such colors as beige, blue or in black with red and green trim for the contrasting two-color grosgrain trim that marks the front from the V of the sailor collar to hem and for the perky, pointed-upward pockets at the hips.

Variety With Jelly Roll

Fancy recipes are like an elaborate hat, all right in their place. However, the average homemaker today wants recipes which are easy to make and versatile. Such is the Jelly Roll recipe listed below. In its traditional form it makes a welcome addition to the school lunch box or rolled crosswise to form a long roll with a small diameter it cuts into dainty slices attractive enough to grace the fanciest tea party. Versatility does not end there, however. It may be filled with whipped cream, jelly, jam, lemon or chocolate filling or even ice cream and served with a sauce.

Dorothy Batcheller, Home Economics Director for Poultry Products Institute, recommends the following recipe, not only because of the many variations possible, but because it can be "whipped up" in a jiffy.

Simple Jelly Roll

2 Eggs, ¾ cup sugar, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 1 cup sifted cake flour, 1¼ teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, ⅓ cup milk, 1 tablespoon butter melted.

Beat eggs until thick and lemon colored, using electric or rotary beater. Gradually beat in the sugar a tablespoon at a time. Sift dry ingredients together three times (unless yours is a double or triple sifter). Mold flour into egg mixture. Add milk and butter, blending in carefully and stirring as little as possible. Pour into a pan approximately 8" x 13" which has had the bottom greased, lined with waxed paper and regreased. Bake in a moderately hot oven 375°F., for about 15 minutes or until top springs back when lightly pressed with finger tip. Turn out on waxed paper which has been sprinkled lightly with fine granulated sugar. Carefully remove waxed paper and trim off any crisp edges. If paper should stick lay a cold cloth over paper for a moment. Roll cake either cross-wise or length-wise depending upon size of slices desired. Wrap in the waxed paper and cool. When cool, unroll and spread with desired filling, reroll and serve. Rolled cross-wise in long roll cake cuts into approximately 24 small slices, rolled lengthwise cake cuts into approximately 10 slices.

Coffee Drinking At Record Peak

Hamilton — The increasing popularity of coffee with Canadians has sent consumption of the popular brew to astronomical figures in the past three decades.

Canadians coffee lovers drank the whopping total of a billion-and-a-quarter cups in 1952 alone, according to a computation by American Can Company statisticians based on a record importation of nearly 100 million pounds of coffee last year (federal government estimate).

"Coffee-drinking received its biggest stimulus in Canada during World War II", reports K. E. Specht, commodity manager of the can-making firm which in the early part of this century developed the modern vacuum-pack container for preserving coffee's fresh flavor. "Nowadays over 9 per cent of Canadian homes serve the popular beverage at least once a day and many of them pass the coffee-pot two and three times".

Thirty years ago Canada imported only 21,745,500 pounds of coffee, according to official records. Since that time consumption of coffee has more than quadrupled while the population has doubled, the company points out.

Wife Goes to Korea

An ex-1st Canadian Division man recently signed his wife over to the 25th Canadian Infantry Brigade Group in Korea.

Under Quebec law it was necessary for Buddy Della Malva, Second World War veteran, to sign a special release so that his wife, Montreal entertainer Lotita de Carlo, could visit the Far East with a bilingual Canadian concert party. Buddy was glad to sign. He remembers from his own war service how much such entertainment was appreciated.

Lotita de Carlo is a top-flight artist whose specialty is dancing and as an added attraction, sings to her own guitar accompaniment. Her dance career started when she placed second at the "Miss Montreal" contest in 1947.

Lotita is looking forward to her trip to Korea, not only that she may entertain the troops, but in the hope that she may study some of the Japanese dances and create some interpretive routines for herself on return to Canada.

The concert party of which she is a member made the trip to the Far East the first week in August.

A Weekly Feature of Helpful Hints on Child Training

That's Mine!

— By NANCY CLEAVER — (Copyright)

Tommy and John are playing with John's tiny cars in John's sandpile. The noon whistle blows and Tommy's mother calls from the back door in the next house, "Come to dinner, Tommy!" Tommy clutches the small red car tightly in his chubby hand and starts homeward. John suddenly looks up, catches sight of the red car, and with a yell of anger, cries: "My car! That's mine!" He pursues his friend and attemps to recapture his plaything. Tommy runs for home but doesn't drop his chum's toy.

* * *

"The instinct of ownership is fundamental in man's nature", William James declared. A youngster is keen on what he owns himself, but he is not so interested in the possessions of others. Parents are often puzzled about training a child to respect other persons' property. A baby is certainly not born with any regard for what belongs to others! Little tots around two years old enjoy playing along side each other. Their acquisitive instinct is strong, but they are indifferent to the claims of others.

Sharing is something children learn very gradually when they are a bit older. It usually accompanies enjoyment in playing together, in the later pre-school period. But an adult is needed to sort out playthings to their respective owners after a playtime when toys have been pooled.

In a home each small child should have his own playthings and his own corner where he keeps his possessions. Orange crates painted in bright colors make inexpensive, attractive low shelves for toys or books. Mother must often help Junior pick up his toys and assist in putting them away. It is much better to work along along with him to get him started or to finish off his task than to nag at him about the importance of tidiness!

"A place for everything and everything in its place" often sounds like much too idealistic a slogan for a home where there are children — but it is a target to aim at! Boys and girls must have their own special hooks for clothes, a spot for rubbers or overshoes. When they come in from school there should be a definite place for their school books. There should also be a clear understanding that certain articles are kept in their rooms.

The logical consequences of not putting play material or personal belongings in their right place comes home to the child who must waste time and energy searching for lost articles. If mother always rushes around to discover the location of the missing object, this result of not looking after their belonging is not so apparent.

At camp, lost articles are put into a large box and cannot be claimed until a fine is paid. Some homes put this "Lost Box" and payment of a penalty into effect to encourage children to put their things away where they belong.

Who ever heard of a family where there was no quarelling over borrowing without owner's permission, or carelessness in looking after a borrowed article or tardiness in its return? The Family Council is a good place to make rules, which discourage borrowing except under special circumstances. The unhappiness which comes from worry over money debts can be learned from painful experience, but this is another topic which well might be discussed by a family too.

In many homes with several youngsters it is necessary to have a hand-me-down system in operation about clothes. No child should be ashamed of this. But each youngster does need to receive a brand new article of his very own from time to time.

Sometimes juvenile delinquency springs in part from the lack of personal possessions. This is clearly shown in "Spoonhandle", the story of an orphan boy, Donny Mitchell, who is picked up by the police for stealing from stores. The author, Ruth Moore, wrote that the trouble with Donny was that he had never really owned anything in his short life. He never could declare with pride in his voice, "This is mine!"

Crabapple Jelly

Recent experiments conducted at the Fruit and Vegetable Products Laboratory, Experimental Station, Morden, Man., show that substantial increases in crabapple jelly can be obtained without added pectin, says A. L. Shewfelt. A most striking increase resulted from freezing the crabapples prior to cooking them. The freezing process ruptures the tissues throughout the fruit, causing the apple to be limp after it is thawed. Upon heating the fruit with water, the pectinous substances are extracted much more readily from the disrupted fruit cells.

The procedure opens up new avenues of household practice so far as jelly-making is concerned. Fresh fruit need not be processed into jelly at once, but can simply be washed, sorted, and placed in bulk containers in the freezer until more time is available for jelly preparation. Most of the crabapples which are high in pectin are also high in acid and can be stored satisfactorily at zero degrees F. without the addition of sugar or syrup. But the fruit must not be allowed to remain defrosted for any length of time before cooking or the pectin and natural flavor will soon disappear. The frozen fruit may be processed directly from its frozen condition, but partial or complete defrosting when necessary help in separating and handling.

While many prefer to use immature crabapples for jelly, it has been found that the jelly yield from fully ripe firm fruit is usually just as high, and the product is superior, both in color and flavor. The mature fruit requires less water during cooking since the drained liquid is higher in proportion than for immature fruit.

The extraction phase, performed by simmering the fruit and water in a closed container, requires at least 10 minutes to dissolve the pectin from the fruit. The amount of water varies from one variety to another. Varieties high in pectin may be extracted by using equal weights of fruit and water. In others, it is preferable to use only half as much water.

The variety Dolgo has been outstanding for jelly purposes. Other varieties which are recommended for prairie conditions and which are suitable for jelly include Bedford, Columbia, Osman, Quality, Rescue, Robin, and Rosilda. The varieties Renown and Trail have little or no pectin.

Garden-Graph

During hot weather it is a problem to keep cut flowers in good condition in the house.

Here are a few tips that might make your flowers last longer indoors:

Flowers both absorb and transpire water — take it in and breathe it out. When a flower is fresh, it needs the maximum amount of water. As it ages, the quantity needed lessens. When transpiration exceeds the amount of water entering the stem, the flower will wilt and finally die.

Flowers that have wilted may be revived by placing the stems in fresh water in a container with a wide top, cutting the ends of the stems about two inches while in the water. After two hours place the flowers in vases.

If flowers are badly wilted plunge the stems into quite hot water and cut off several inches of the stem as shown in the accompanying Garden - Graph. Then place the flowers in containers of cold water.

Corsages may also be revived by the hot water treatment after the tinfoil has been removed from the stems.

Cut flowers early in the morning when foliage is crisp and stems are rigid. Most blossoms should be cut before they reach full size, though not when in bud. Use a sharp knife to make a sloping cut. A knife is better than scissors.

To give cut flowers a longer life on borrowed time, take a pail filled with cold water into the garden, and put the stems into the water as they are cut.

Strip off all leaves of cut flowers except those needed to make a bouquet attractive. This will lessen the evaporation surface and prevents the decay of the submerged foliage and consequent fouling of the water.

At Morin Heights Council Meeting

Paul St. Denis then mentioned that certain rumors had been circulated regarding the secretary and taxi fares; he wished to assure all those who had heard or spoken about this that Mr. Green paid his own taxi fares, and he brought his book with him to show that in the past 20 months the Council had spent only $1.61 per week for council business. He further stated that he felt he had given good service to the municipality in his operating the fire siren as needed during 24 hours a day, and also the curfew each night. But he felt that he was being discriminated against when he had recently submitted a tender $600 lower than the person the tender had been given to; if the officials of this municipality wished to use the taxpayers' money in that manner he would request that he be paid a fee for continuing to operate the siren, and consequently asked $150 per year.

It was pointed out to Mr. St. Denis that school board matters were not in order at a Council meeting; however, he insisted that it was a question of the taxpayers' money being spent, whether it was the school board who had given the tender or not.

There being no further requests, the Mayor ordered that business be resumed. . . The secretary presented the monthly accounts, which were passed for payment. J. H. McMahon, C.A., was appointed auditor for the year 1953. The case of Henri Masson's permit was studied and the secretary was finally instructed to write Mr. Masson, ordering him to appear at the Council office to settle this matter. Correspondence was then read and dealt with. A purchase of 300 feet of new fire hose was authorized.

The secretary was instructed to arrange with the Health Unit regarding a cesspool which was on a public road. The elm stump in the village was ordered removed. A single blast of the siren was ordered, instead of three previously used, for curfew.

The secretary was instructed to contact Gatineau Power Company concerning the extra cost if larger light bulbs were to be used in the streetlights. Mr. St. Denis, at request of the Council, reduced his price to $100 for continuing to operate the siren. The question of the hydrant was left over to the September meeting, so that the Fire Chief could be present. There being no further business the meeting was adjourned.

Appalling Contrasts Seen in Delhi, India's Most Beautiful City

The City of New Delhi, India, glitters in the sun like something out of a fairy tale. Indeed, it is said to be one of the most beautiful and most perfectly planned cities in the world. But like evil sores, areas so squalid as to be almost past belief lie hard by its sweeping, tree-lined avenues.

From this city of appalling contrasts, Dr. Hitschmanova of the Unitarian Service Committee of Canada describes a visit she paid to one of these districts called, with bitter humor, Karolbag or 'garden'.

In a letter received at the USC Ottawa headquarters, 48 Sparks Street, Dr. Hitschmanova writes: "I cannot tell you how many people live there, but they are mostly quarry and leather workers, a caste almost as low as that of the sweepers. Because quarters are so narrow, tiny and dark, most of the life takes place right in the street, in the lanes and thoroughfares. The dust and dirt you have to experience for yourself, and because there is little of the primitive but most essential amenity, water, cases of malaria and tuberculosis are shockingly high, and so is the death rate."

Dr. Hitschmanova is in India on a survey trip to find some urgent pilot project through which the Unitarian Service Committee can help in India in the most effective way.

In the very heart of the Karolbag district, Jhandewala, the Indian Co-operative Union, has started a community centre, which Dr. Hitschmanova also visited. She writes that the centre provides a wide range of activities for the people of the neighboorhood, from a nursery school to a free dispensary. Nothing too elaborate which would arouse fear and suspicion among the people is attempted.

Encouraged by the great success of the first community centre, in operation just five months, the Indian Co-operative Union hopes to open four other similar centres in the most needy areas of the state capital. The cost to equip one such centre and operate it for a year would only amount to $2,500, Dr. Hitschmanova was told.

Dr. Hitschmanova was especially interested in the sweepers' colony on Reading Road, where Mahatma Gandhi used to live and say prayers among his sweeper friends the Harijans — "children of God" as he called them. Although the new Indian constitution has abolished the caste system, it will take at least one generation to reduce the deep-rooted prejudice which exists against the sweepers, lowest on the social scale, Dr. Hitschmanova said. "I wish our Unitarian Service Committee could assume financial responsibility for a project here, to prove our desire to help provide the basic amenities of life for a class of people who so desperately need them."

Woman Detective Finds Men Worst Shoplifters

Worcester, Mass. (AP) — Thieving men constitute the biggest shoplifting problem in a large food market.

Take the word of Miss Effie B. Densmore, a pleasant woman with a sweet smile who has handled a thousand such larceny cases in the last ten years.

Looking back from her newly-earned retirement, she says that men shoplifters are nearly all the same: They don't like to work. They do like liquor.

Miss Densmore was a store clerk for 40 years — and then a detective for 10. Fifty years in retailing hasn't taken away her kindly look, but it did harden her to the wiles of thieves trying to wiggle out of their self-caused dilemmas.

In spite of such experiences as a smash on the jaw from an apprehended male shoplifter, Miss Densmore felt compassion for some of those she caught. But for others, she felt only contempt.

Good Qualifications

Major qualifications for her job have been sharp eyes, a good memory for faces, a capacity for looking like just another shopper, and an intuition about human foibles and weaknesses.

Much of the time she mingled with customers on the floor of the big market. But she spent other long hours in a high cubicle from which, unobserved, she could view nearly every corner of the store.

Children with straying fingers are an ever-present problem, she says. But thieving men are worse. It was a man walking out with $40 worth of meat who almost drove Miss Densmore's teeth down her throat with a heavy blow. A bystander and a policeman caught him.

Then there was the mother who had trained her six-year-old daughter as a lookout. The woman was caught in a screaming tussle outside of the self-service section as she tried to leave with $24 worth of groceries.

In retirement, Miss Densmore enjoys a different life. She has long hours out of doors near her cottage and time for photography and her 12 parakeets.

Firing Last Shell in Korea

Canadian artillery stopped firing high explosive shells at Chinese positions a few minutes before the truce was signed in Korea, even though officially both sides were permitted action until the ceasefire went into effect exactly 12 hours after the truce signing. Only action during the 12 hours by Canadian gunners was the firing of four smoke shells. Above, firing the last smoke shell, the crew are Gnr. P. A. Roach, New Waterford, N.S., L/Bdr. G. L. 'Imported' Textile Label Leads to Disillusion, Women's Group Informed

The Canadian textile manufacturer who stands firm behind his product, ready to ensure the satisfaction of any purchaser, is coming into his own, Arthur Mills, Toronto textile executive, told the annual meeting of the Ontario Provincial Council of Women.

"The gamble upon an "Imported" label only, without knowledge of his product, or the opportunity to seek adjustment for inferior goods, is proving a poor one to many Canadian consumers.

"The Canadian primary textiles industry is now waiting until disillusion sets in".

Mr. Mills said that the unfortunate phenomenon of "anaesthetizing the shrewd buying habits of Canadian women, when the sacrosanct 'Imported' tag crops up" is working great hardship on the primary textiles industry, Canada's largest employer of manufacturing labor.

A further factor, which, he said, combined with the unwarranted prestige attached to the "Imported" label, has led to depression in the textile industry is the ease with which foreign-made textiles can enter the Canadian market.

"The Canadian industry sells almost no textiles beyond the borders of Canada. It must rely on the domestic market. Between 1950 and 1952 the Canadian industry's share of this market decreased by 10 per cent, and the influx of imported goods is increasing."

Mr. Mills commended the Windsor Local Council of Women for their resolution which seeks equitable tariff protection, to safeguard workers in the industry.

"But, apart from this, Canadian women are now awakening very quickly to the illusion which has been imposed on them for many years.

"The textile industry awaits with confidence the day, not far distant, when purchasers will carefully inspect the 'Imported' merchandise, in comparison with those styled, crafted, and offered for sale under the reassuring 'Made In Canada' standard, by a manufacturer whom they know and respect."

FREE, EASY LIFE KEEPS RESIDENTS AT NORTHERN POST

Stony Rapids, Sask. (CP) — The atomic era could fade to nothing and uranium ore become just another precambrian rock, but Stony Rapids, white-painted community situated beside the uranium-productive Fond du Lac about 600 miles north of Regina, would realize little difference.

Trappers would still work their lines, prospectors would dig, nurses would care for the sick, and the RCMP continue to maintain its vigil.

Here, with a glimpse into the lives of a few residents of this northern settlement, is the reason why.

Douglas Stevens, factor of the Hudson's Bay Co. post, has been at Stony Rapids seven years. In summer he sells outfits to prospectors and mining camps and in the winter he falls back on the fur trade.

"We like this country", he says. "We like the freedom. No one is tied down by social customs. Outside, you're compelled to go places and keep up with the Joneses. We don't have to wait for a gilt-edged invitation to go and visit someone."

Miss Margaret Lewis tends the three-bed hospital. This will be her third year at Stony Rapids. She came from Wales and served as a public health nurse with the health department in Regina before moving north.

Last Easter she fought a measles epidemic among the Indians. Sixteen were crowded into the tiny hospital at one time. Twelve others were kept in the school. After four days, when their fever subsided, they were sent home to make room for new cases.

Travelling Nurse

Nurse Lewis travels about to immunize the Indian children. In the winter she makes her trips by dogteam. In the summer, she's sometimes lucky enough to hitch a ride in an aircraft.

"I like it", she says. "I came for the experience and I'm getting it."

Fred Erickson left Sweden in 1911 and found this country to be like the far north of his homeland. He paddled a canoe into Stony Rapids in 1917 and there he built the log cabin that has served him ever since. He has fished, trapped and prospected in the Northwest Territories just 50 miles to the north.

What does Fred Erickson like about the north?

"That's a hard thing to explain", he says. "It's a free life. After you've been to the outside for a month or so you're always glad to get back."

Of the social life here, Cpl. Stevenson of the RCMP says, "We don't get bushed."

A sleek 38-foot diesel-powered launch called "Stony Rapids" carries the RCMP officer through the endless chain of lakes and rivers of the area. He enforces game and fur regulations and the Indian Act and this takes up a considerable amount of his time. This is his seventh year of northern duty.

Mayor and Council View Water Intake and Supply

Mayor Dr. Jules Lafleur Submits Report in Open Letter to Taxpayers and Consumers

For several years past, the Town Councillors of Lachute have experienced certain anxiety during the months of July, August and September — headaches caused by our waterworks system. This year (to be exact, on the afternoon of August 18) most of the Councillors, the Mayor and the Works Supertendent, made an inspection of the system from its intake up as far as the source of supply, Lake Sir John.

Inspection of the dam revealed that it was in fair shape. However, it will be necessary to repair a small section of the wall which is causing some leakage of water.

The water-course was then viewed at certain spots, and it was decided that a dam situated near the junction of Route 30 and Thomas' Gore road must be removed, since certain people, contrary to notice served last year, make a practice of bathing in the pool created by this obstruction. By this same notice from our local Sanitary Unit, it is warned that this is a danger spot for possible pollution of our water supply.

Here let me point out to all concerned that "the Municipality of Lachute retains exclusive rights to this water-course, from the North River to Lake Sir John, also to two or three lakes situated higher upstream."

The Municipality must exercise its rights accordingly, so that contamination is kept at a minimum, for under no circumstances can we tolerate the possibility of an epidemic transmitted by our drinking water. It may be added here that our chlorination system is no more than adequate. . .

Then subsequently, we came to the outlet at Lake Sir John, which is our natural water reserve. We found the water level very low, indicating that we must economize more than ever on our supply. It was decided then to enlarge the dam at this spot so as to retain a larger volume of water, at springtime level to last for a longer period. There is even a question of establishing a new dam on Lake Williams or some other lake, to ensure more water for the dry months, at small expense.

This informal tour impressed upon the town authorities, more than ever, that we must improve and protect this water-system laid out by our predecessors at considerable sacrifice. It is time that our citizens — and those of the adjoining municipalities which use our water without contributing to the cost of the system — to realize that in dry seasons economy must be strictly practiced in order that all may enjoy their quota of supply.

As our water consumption steadily increases, and we are under obligation also to supply our neighboring municipalities, it becomes apparent that in the near future we will be compelled to make some radical changes. These, we hope, will not prove too costly for our taxpayers.

— Jules Lafleur, M.D.,
Mayor of Lachute Town.

Camper Drowned From Canoe At St. Adolphe

Barney Maksi, 22-year-old resident of Pointe aux Trembles, lost his life when he toppled from a canoe at St. Adolphe de Howard in the early hours of Sunday morning.

Maksi and two companions, Robt. Cloutier and Alexander Watson, of Montreal — who were all vacationing at the YMCA camp on an island at St. Adolphe — returned from a visit to Ste. Agathe. Maksi climbed into the canoe, and Cloutier, searching for a paddle which had been hidden in the bushes, heard a splash and cry for help. Running to the shore he saw the canoe 15 feet distant from shore but Maksi had disappeared beneath the surface of the lake. The pair recovered the body of their companion a few minutes later in water 6 or 7 feet deep, and applied artificial respiration; but the victim failed to respond.

Dr. Dudley Ross pronounced the victim dead, and the District Coroner, Dr. Jules Lafleur, of Lachute, gave a verdict of accidental death by drowning. Det. Maurice Lamoureux investigated.

Charge Pending In Canal Theft

Driving Offences and Robberies Tracked Down By Police Officers

The case of Roger Dupuis, 24, of Grece's Point, arrested by Det. Maurice Lamoureux, of Lachute, in connection with the disappearance of 5,400 pounds of construction metal from the Carillon Canal works, is in suspension pending the laying of a charge either by the Federal Government or the Quebec Provincial Police. It appears the metal was sold to junk dealers in Montreal, and there has so far been difficulty in recovering it.

America Guidolin, 30, of Kilmar, will face a charge of hit-and-run driving at court in St. Jerome, following an accident at Pointe au Chene Sunday night in which he collided with a car driven by Hector Levac, of Vaudreuil Heights, and allegedly failed to stop. Levac's auto was damaged to the extent of $150.

Investigation was made by Traffic Officer Howard Jones; Guidolin was escorted to St. Jerome by Det. M. Lamoureux and ordered to appear in court this week.

Armand Duquette, of Lachute, was lodged in jail at St. Jerome to receive sentence on conviction of stealing automobile parts, particularly wheels, tires and tubes, over a period of time. Latest depredation of the accused was breaking into the home of Marcel Dallaire in the owner's absence, and removing a radio, a camera and other possessions valued at $150. His alleged accomplice was Armand Gagné, also of Lachute. The pair are reported to have boarded the bus to Montreal, but were arrested by Police Chief D. Villeneuve and Det. Lamoureux.

The two police officers investigating other complaints of theft from local garages, pinned on Duquette and another miscreant, Romuald Durocher, the disappearance of two wheels and tires valued at $80 from a car parked in the Lachute Motor Sales yard at the beginning of August. At Pollock & Graves Motors, Duquette allegedly took two tires, a tube and a wheel valued at $60; and at the Champlain Service Station in Lachute, two more tires, value $40.

Invite Donations for Sanatorium Inmates

The nursing administration of Royal Edward Sanatorium, Ste. Agathe, reports a constant need of clothing and recreation articles for patients less lavishly provided for — a need in which many householders hereabouts may be able to assist. Donations may be sent to Nurse L. Harrison at the Argenteuil Health Unit, or will be called for it desired (phone 151, Lachute).

Requirements mentioned are men's suits, bedroom slippers and dressing gowns, all in good repair, also playing cards and such table games as chess, checkers, etc. There is special need at this time for a suit of clothing for a boy patient, stout and short of stature.

Bell Telephone Opening New Business Office

A modern business office designed for the convenience of Lachute residents dealing with the Bell Telephone Company will be opened next Monday morning (August 31), at 506 Main Street — A. D. Connolly, the company's manager here, announced this week.

The new quarters, which were formerly occupied by George Paul's grocery store, are considerably larger than the present office in the exchange building at 75 Water Street, and are up-to-date in every respect.

The new office is large enough to accommodate the increasing staff required to handle the rapidly growing telephone needs of Lachute, and it incorporates modern features designed to contribute to efficiency and to the ease of transacting business.

The Bell Company's telephone number — 133 — will not be changed as a result of the move.

Accident Verdict In Death of Motorcyclist

Accidental death was the verdict given by Coroner Dr. Jules Lafleur in the death of Rene Cardinal, 36-year-old motorcyclist, killed recently on Route 31 a mile or so north of Brownsburg.

Cardinal, an employee of H. J. O'Connell Ltd., contractors on the highway construction north of Dalesville, was returning at 9.05 p.m. Thursday, August 13, to his home on Bedard Blvd., Lachute Mills. His motorcycle hit the rear of a parked truck on the highway. The vehicle, in charge of Patrick Dugas, of Navan, Ont., had broken down, and the driver was absent at the time; it is reported, however, that the truck was well lighted. Driving with considerable force into the rear of the vehicle, on the west side of the highway, the motorcyclist suffered a broken neck and other injuries, to which he succumbed within 15 minutes.

Dr. Jacques Castagner, Brownsburg, pronounced the victim dead. The fatality was investigated by Traffic Officer Albert Legault of Brownsburg and Det. Gaston Archambeault from the Homicide Squad, Montreal provincial police headquarters.

Plans Well Laid For Bigger, Better Annual School Fair

As the summer wanes, many communities are making plans for the Fall Agricultural Fairs, when they will exhibit to the public the fruits of their summer's labors. The junior agriculturists of the Lachute district are no exception in this respect, as they tend their garden plots and train their calves for the annual School Fair and Calf Show.

This event will be held at the Exhibition Grounds on Saturday, September 5, and the School Fair officers, along with the 4-H Club, have gone all out to make this year's show bigger and better than ever.

Many generous prizes are offered, with special prizes for more than 15 classes of exhibits.

There will be the usual classes of vegetables and flowers, as well as handicrafts for both boys and girls. The boys will display their best grains and potatoes, while the girls bring out their sewing and cooking.

At the Calf Show, the members will exhibit their calves, as well as one-year and two-year-old heifers.

Plans are made for a full day of interesting events, and it is expected that many will be on hand to encourage the juniors.

Vivid Narrative By Polish Professor At Rotary Club

Professor Bodgan Zaborski of the Geography Department of McGill University was guest speaker at the August 13th meeting of the Brownsburg Rotary Club. Prof. Zaborski told of his experiences as a political prisoner in Russia during the early part of the last war.

As an officer in the Polish Army he was ordered to surrender either to the Germans or Russians when his army ceased fighting in September 1939. Instead, he chose to try to escape to Western Europe to carry on the war in the French or British Army, and thereby avoided becoming part of the Russian massacre of Polish officers at the Katyn Forest.

Prof. Zaborski was captured by the Russians close to the Rumanian border and immediately sent to Central Siberia as a slave laborer. Working in the extreme cold of 70° North latitude, the Polish prisoners found living conditions were very poor and food was far from adequate. Sickness, malnutrition and overwork were soon responsible for a large percentage of deaths among the slave laborers. Doing 60 per cent of what was expected as a day's work was too strenuous for even the healthier men, and since failure to do the required amount resulted in a cut in rations, conditions in the camp went from bad to worse.

When Germany attacked Russia in the summer of 1941, the status of the Polish prisoners immediately changed, as they were recognized as Russian Allies. They were allowed to go south to a more temperate climate, to join a Polish army which was being formed, or to work in war factories. Prof. Zaborski and two companions decided to try to go to Omsk, where they hoped to contact a Polish Embassy and rejoin their Army. However, travelling through Russia in wartime without proper identification, without money, and unable to speak many of the various languages, was very difficult. They had to travel slowly, taking whatever route happened to be open and living as best they could by doing odd jobs to earn enough to eat. Prof. Zaborski offered his services as an instructor in Geography in various places, but there were no facilities for making use of his abilities, even in many of the cities. Finally he managed to reach Kylishev, the wartime Russian capital. There he found his services were urgently required by the Polish Army in Britain preparing military maps. Transportation was provided for him via Archangel and Murmansk and by sea to Iceland, and then on to Scotland.

Prof. Zaborski stayed in London until 1948, when he was invited to come to Canada to teach at McGill University. After the end of the war his family managed to escape from Poland to West Germany, and on to Britain to join him there. They are now living in Montreal, and two of his children are attending McGill University. . . Prof. Zaborski spoke in appreciation of the wonderful advantages this country has to offer, and how highly he values the privileges of Canadian citizenship.

Prof. Zaborski was introduced by Jack MacKimmie and thanked by Art Lapp for his very interesting talk.

At the Rotary meeting on August 20 the members were shown a very interesting film of the Indianapolis Speedway annual 500-mile car race. The race in used as a test for all types of automobile equipment. Many improvements in automobile design have been the result of the pioneer research work done in trying to build better cars to compete in this event.

Child on Coaster Killed at St. Hermas

Madeleine Paquette, 12, of St. Hyacinthe Range, St. Hermas, was fatally injured on Monday when she backed her coaster wagon into the path of an auto near her home, on Highway No. 8, police said.

Det. Merrill Lawton, of the Provincial Police, reported the driver was René Charlebois, 34, of the same district.

Accident Victim Killed in Second Crash While Being Rushed to Hawksb'y Hospital

On the riverfront highway driving from Carillon towards Grenville on Tuesday night of last week, Laurent Regimbald, 23, a passenger in his brother's car, lost his life when the auto left the highway, with a forceful impact against trees and other obstructions.

The irony of the incident is that the victim, after his own car had taken the ditch and he was bleeding considerably from a head injury, was being rushed to a Hawkesbury hospital by his brother Bernard, who had been driving close behind. Bernard's car swerved off the highway — the driver stating he was crowded by another car approaching from the opposite direction. The accident occurred around 2 a.m. Laurent Regimbald suffered a fractured skull and died at the scene of the crash. Bernard, who is employed here in Lachute, was also injured, and taken to the Notre Dame Hospital in Hawkesbury, but was released early this week.

Traffic Officer Howard Jones, and Det. Maurice Lamoureux, of Lachute, investigated the accident. Coroner Dr. Jules Lafleur was summoned and an inquest will be held here when sufficient evidence, including testimony of the injured Bernard Regimbald, is available for the jury.

Ungava Railway "Major Feat of Engineering" Says Premier Duplessis

By Bernard Dufresne,
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Quebec, Aug. 25 (CP) — Premier Duplessis returned from a four-day trip to Ungava with words of praise for engineers who are building a 360-mile railway between Sept Iles, on the St. Lawrence north shore, and the heart of iron ore developments at Burnt Creek.

The whole development at a cost of $250,000,000 was described as "a colossal enterprise" which will open up 311,000 square miles of territory, much of it still unexplored.

Mr. Duplessis said construction of the railway in barren, rocky country was a stunning achievement.

"Some idea of the difficulties can be imagined when one thinks that all material, man-power, supplies and housing facilities had to be flown into the area. There are 19 bridges on the line.

"So far 228 miles of the railway have been graded and rails have been laid down over a distance of 185 miles. . . It is an incredible achievement of civil engineering."

"A WEEK AT SEA"

Correspondence, From Overseas

Dear Readers:

The term "At Sea" reminds us somewhat of wartime, but with the recent signing of an Armistice and all worries of business left behind we can better describe the first part of our holiday as a "Cruise on the Ocean Blue".

Our Cunard ship, "The Scythia", was due to leave Quebec on Wednesday, so in order to reach our sailing point without too much rush, we started out the previous evening, comfortably motoring, and on our way for our long anticipated two months vacation. The weather was nice and warm, with the sun shining on those brilliantly painted and picturesque buildings which dot the route to Quebec City.

To break our trip of 234 miles, we stayed overnight in a modern Motel, with all the latest comforts, and by early afternoon were on board the liner which for the next eight days was to be our home. Luxurious might well be chosen as the word to describe it, for nothing has been forgotten in making the ocean voyage as happy and pleasant as possible.

We are privileged in occupying a suite, comprising two beds, vanity dresser, individual tables with drawers, two large clothes closets and private bath. Flowers sent us by well-wishers are looked after by our bedroom steward and these have lasted during the whole trip. There is also a plate of fruit brought in for us each night before retiring.

Readers may wonder how the time is put in during the day. Well, as a matter of fact, it passes all too quickly and when bedtime comes the general question is "Where has it gone?"

Arising at 7.30, a salt-water bath puts you in excellent trim for your morning walk of as many miles as you wish to make on the promenade deck before breakfast. This meal, like all others, is large, or small, according to your liking, and is generally over by 9.30 o'clock. What to do next? Well there's deck tennis, table tennis, or shuffle board to keep you fit; you may visit the library, read current magazines, books, or write letters. Should you feel tired, there's a chair for you on deck, where wrapped in a nice blanket, you can relax and forget all your worries. About 11 a.m. along comes the steward with broth and crackers, just to prepare you for luncheon. This mid-day meal is generally over by 2 o'clock, and once again you are free to rest or do as you please during the afternoon. Some sleep, others play games and many attend the Cinema, holding upwards of 200 people and showing the latest films. Afternoon tea is served, a little more relaxation and first thing you know, it's time for

English Catholic Retreat

A retreat for English-speaking Catholics will open at Brownsburg Parish Church on Sunday, and continue for one week. The Rev. Fr. Bouchard has for the past few years provided this service for English-speaking adherents, who, being in a minority in the district, have to attend the French services of their more numerous brethren. A fluent English speaker has been engaged, and those desiring to attend from the surrounding parishes will be welcomed to the services, morning or evening, given by this Redemptorist Father.

English Catholic School

English-speaking Catholics in this diocese have for years been under a severe handicap in providing their children with a primary education. No English course is available at the Catholic schools of Lachute or Brownsburg, and owing to the different tax panel, English-speaking Catholic pupils attending the Protestant schools are obliged to pay five times the fees which ordinarily apply. Parents would be unable to meet such high educational costs but for the good offices of His Lordship Bishop Frenette, in co-operation with W. M. Cottingham, M.L.A., who have obtained grants from the Provincial Government to meet the increased fees. The desire of French-speaking parents to provide a bilingual education for their children has increased the pressure for some means of supplying the need of an English Catholic education. Arrangements have now been completed whereby an adequate English course will be available at Lachute Catholic schools. Some details have to be worked out yet, but a number of English-speaking teachers are to be employed and it is expected that next year English Catholics and their French co-patriots will be enabled to partake of a thoroughly well-rounded bilingual course, with adequate care for the spiritual and moral welfare of the pupils, a matter which the Church guards with careful concern.

Labor Relations

Articles have been signed between the C-I-L and C.S.F. companies and the local union representatives, which constitute a contract for one year. Workers received a six percent increase in rate for a work week of 42 hours, a decrease of two hours from the previous contract. There were a few minor adjustments also arranged.

• • •

Route 31

Increased activity became apparent on Highway 31 during the week. The slow blasting operations and huge fills are now completed at the Dalesville section, and progress should be more marked on the next stretch, which has more even terrain. With the erection of the bridge at Dixon's, things should really move.

Cleaning Chimneys

Fire Chief Arthur Robbins has refurbished his equipment and will be around on the chimney-cleaning chore within the next week, and continue till all chimneys have been cleaned. This year as before, the Fire Brigade bears charge of the job.

Gatineau LINES

This week we continue our report on additions and improvements planned to provide electric service to many new customers while steadily improving service to many old friends.

Here are the highlights of the work undertaken this summer in our Rawdon Division serving the County of Montcalm:

Plans have been made and property acquired for a new 1,000 kva substation at St. Lin:

Distribution lines have been rebuilt at Ste. Julienne and in the Pines at Rawdon:

The distribution system in and about St. Roch has been converted to higher voltage and is now operated at 6,900/12,000 volts:

Voltage has been improved at Lake Quinn, Range St. Jacques, and Morindale, and an extension has been built from St. Lin to service Cote Jeanne.

ELEVATOR LINEUP

Rouleau, Sask. (CP)—When grain quotas were thrown open recently, this town's elevators were besieged by farmers who unloaded 118,000 bushels of wheat in one day. At one time, there were 100 trucks lined up before the elevators.

dinner, so you change for evening dress (if you so wish), take the elevator and once again are ready and seated for another meal.

About 9 o'clock there is horse racing or bingo, at which the excitement runs high and to close the day an hour's dancing before going to bed and wondering just where the time has gone.

Some will be wondering what the weather is like. Often it is quite rough, but our trip has been very smooth and with the exception of a little swaying you would think you were in a large hotel. Passing through the Straits of Belle Isle, the weather was a little foggy and the ship's horn kept blowing. Speed was reduced slightly and later we were in the vicinity of icebergs, although we didn't see any. An occasional whale spouting water has been observed along with a school of porpoises, which leap out of the water and are quite spectacular to watch.

There are six persons at our table, the Purser Mr. Dawes, who has made the trip very pleasant for us, Mr. and Mrs. T. Hunt, returning to England after visiting their daughter at Long Branch, Ont., Miss Louise Mackay, who is going to the Swiss Embassy for several years and who as a young lady lived at St. Andrews East, Mrs. Giles and myself. This has been a very happy group and we have had pleasant times together. Another lady, Miss Marsh, of Vancouver, knows Lachute quite well, and numerous people there, having visited with Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton when the former was manager of the Bank of Montreal, some time back.

On board there is a print shop, where the menus are prepared daily, and a small newspaper is published on current events and news received over the radio. Naturally I was quite interested and paid the operators of this small plant a visit, leaving with them a copy of our Lachute Watchman. News of the strike in France is being received with much concern by those pasesngers disembarking at Le Havre, but arrangements are that they are to go by bus as far as Paris, after which they will have to make their own arrangements. We're all wishing them luck.

It is somewhat difficult to explain in words the largeness of these ocean-going vessels and one really needs to see them and be on them to understand properly. Our ship, the Scythia, has a gross tonnage of 20 thousand tons; it carries a crew of 400, tourist class 650 and first class 250, a total of 1300 persons. There are small stores where cigarettes, candies, and novelties are sold, play-rooms for the children, barber and hair dressing shops, a music room where you may enjoy the ship's orchestra, and a lounge where those who wish to may have their favorite beverage. All in all, it represents a small town of well over one thousand inhabitants with Sunday being properly observed and a large turn-out for the regular services.

With the strike in France still on we reached Le Havre about 3 a.m. I remained up and it was indeed a glorious sight as we entered the harbor to view the thousands of lights flickering along the water front and to see the grandeur of the Mauretania all lit up and already in port, having passed us on the way.

With a warning that the tugs which had pulled us into port, would also be on strike within a few hours, some passengers were disembarked and by 6 a.m. we were on our way to our landing port Southampton. We have passed the Isle of Wight and the shores of England are now appearing. The Channel, while often rough, has behaved quite well, for which we are very thankful, and as we view with wonder the grandeur of this old land with its beautiful scenery and rugged cliffs, we also feel most grateful for such a safe and happy crossing. Soon we will land, say farewell to new-found friends and after a couple of hours be united once again with relatives. The ship's post office is now closing.

So long for now.

Candid Slant on Marriage Customs; Canadian Flag and Historic Quebec

"SUNNYACRES SKETCHES"
By Margaret Cook

We nominate August 22 as the perfect summer day. . . Remember the heavenly blue of the sky, the effect only heightened by a very few puffy, meringue-like clouds; recall the light breeze that tempered the pleasant 80°, above all; hold in the memory the shining, silver moon riding high in the sky, casting blue velvet shadows on the grass. At Sunnyacres, the moonlight changed the masses of lilac and white phlox into ghosts of blooms; they looked like the floral background one sees on very old tapestries. It was difficult getting to sleep on the porch, surrounded by all this magic. But these hours of wakefulness are quite unlike the long, insomniac hours of winter and urban breeding. Here, one looks and looks, sniffs the scent of flowers and trees, thinks lovingly of one's friends and relatives, even the in-laws, writes imaginary articles that make the "Atlantic Monthly", says one's prayers and eventually drifts to a sleep unpunctuated by train whistles or raucous good-nights. We shudder to think of Labor Day. Ugly word, ugly day!

Since we last wrote for our following (we hear we are known and accepted in Boston), we have perforce spent a week in the city. The main reason for our reluctant departure was the wedding of the daughter of a college friend. It was an affair in the grand and conventional style, some 200 guests, a sit-down supper and a kind of second reception at the home of the bride's parents. We entered the church at 3.15, got through the receiving line and at table by 5.00 and emerged from the house at 10.00. We must confess that we sneaked an hour off between times at the home of a local friend, but, for many, it was a continuous performance. The bride, we are happy to announce, escaped at seven. On the other hand, the eldest guest, a lady of 94, was still sitting happily when we left. The second eldest, a male of a mere 86, had had a slight heart attack following the supper, and had retired.

I think I have observed before, that our present marriage customs are abominable, not the least cruel being the fiction that all bridegrooms are capable of replying to the toast to the bride. This poor fellow's ordeal was made worse by the fact that, the bride being French, he felt it necessary to make two speeches, one in each language. Only the friend who proposed the toast to the bride seemed to be at ease; he propounded the theory that it is more blessed to give than to receive should apply in the field of human relationship surrounding nuptials. Indeed, perhaps he was right. The bride's mother had recently lost 15 pounds and the father seemed a shadow of his usual urbane self. Anyway, we can see why the father of the bride in a movie popular a few years ago, offered his daughter a flat $1,500 if she would elope!

The day following the ordeal by marriage, we joined the friends, at whose house we had spent the night, in a picnic to Ile aux Noix in the Richelieu River. There stands historic Fort Lennox, which played a part in the defence of Canada in the war of American Independence and again in that of 1812-14. The fort, whose buildings are intact, is surrounded by a moat, the first we had seen on this continent — that is, the first filled with water. This had a fine green scum on it and a hardy growth of pickerel weed alongside it, so that the effect was more picturesque than warlike. Yet it was undoubtedly a moat, and we were glad to have our offspring see a moat rather than only read about them in a history book. We often wonder why the schools on the south shore of the St. Lawrence do not make use of the historical landmarks so numerous in that district. Besides the forts at Ile aux Noix and Chambly, there are various stone cairns with explanatory plaques, commemorating this and that event. The well-known Canadian modesty of which our visitors so often write, is, we feel, born of ignorance and bred in indifference. We know of no country having a more engrossing early history than that of our own province. The fact that the story was written by French rather than English hands bothers us not at all. If we are really all one country, why should it? The spirit of adventure and endeavor is above and beyond any boundary of race or tongue.

While we are on the subject of one's country, we would like to draw our readers' attention to a recent report in the papers that the member for Bonaventure will, at the next session of Parliament, bring in a private bill to make the Canadian ensign the national flag. We hope that a goodly majority will get behind this bill and thus end a situation that has been a matter of argument for years. It is a sensible idea. The ensign is generally recognized abroad as being the colors of our land; it has served in two wars, it is symbolic of all provinces, and the addition of a maple leaf behind that coat of arms has our hearty vote. It is a good-looking flag; we never thrilled to stripes (too reminiscent of mundane things like prisons and toasters). Likewise, emblems of labor leave us cold. If one has to work, why make a fetish of it? If everybody would register his acceptance of the sensible motion presented by the member for Bonaventure, we would have a flag.

* * *

There is no real conection between a flag and a bear, but that is what we shall next discuss. On the morning of August 17, some friends of ours from Long Lake were going to Lachute about 8:00, when, just this side (I mean the Lakefield side) of Lake Sir John, they had to slow up to avoid a black bear ambling down the road. "It was a real big one", says our friend, a lady not easily intimidated. We mention the incident, in case the people around Lake Sir John are less brave and have conventional ideas about the undesirability of children meeting bears. We have always heard tales of bears in this country, and have seen what was presumably their work, but have never had the luck to see one. If we did encounter a bear in a blueberry patch, we hope we would say "Hello!" casually and leave him to the blueberries. That is what one plans — but one never knows.

Now we must return to Sunnyacres affairs, mostly bulbs. In digging up the bed where the gravel was dumped, we have exhumed all the unfortunate daffodils and narcissi. We have a bushel and a half, and by counting one clump, which came to 50, we estimate we have 500 bulbs. Our backs ache in anticipation of their replanting. If the neighbors feel like having a bulb "bee", they will be welcome, and if we are warned ahead of time there will be food. One thing we know, our dream of having drifts of sunshiny daffodils all through the orchard will come true next spring. Meanwhile there are bulbs at Sunnyacres.

Appoint New Minister Of Municipal Affairs For Province of Quebec

The Hon. Yves Prévost, Q.C., M.L.A., an outstanding member of the Quebec Bar Association, has just been named Minister of Municipal Affairs by Premier Maurice Duplessis. Mr. Prévost replaces the late Bona Dussault, who had led this Department from 1944 until his recent death.

The Hon. Mr. Prévost is a recognized authority in municipal affairs. Son of the late Judge Alfred Prévost, of the Superior Court and of the Court of Appeal, since 1947 he has been professor of Municipal and School Law at Laval University. He has been mayor of the Town of Beauport and president of the School Commission of that municipality. He represents the County of Montmorency in the Quebec Legislature.

Municipal problems have gained increasing attention in the last few years. New centres have opened up throughout the province, due to exploitation of natural resources, and these have created many new problems. The older established centres have also developed at an accelerated pace. The new Minister is well qualified to tackle these problems through his experience in law, having specialized in this particular field of practice.

'MUMS CAN FEED THROUGH LEAVES

Interested in trying out the new leaf-feeding type of fertilizer? Then experiment with chrysanthemums. That's the advice of Bob Keith, Ontario Gardner for the CBC.

Bob says that mums seem to respond very nicely to this form of feeding. Incidentally, these fertilizers can be fed to the plants through the roots as well as the leaves.

Frontiers Still Beckon

A HIGH SCHOOL lad said the other day he wished he had lived during the First Elizabethan Age, or even 50 or 100 years ago, when explorers and developers still were pushing back the frontiers.

To his way of thinking, this 20th century is pretty tame stuff. The seven seas have all been explored, the continents all mapped, men have even rached the north and south poles. All his life he had seen telephones and radios. Automobiles are too familiar to rate a comment.

Compared with the spacious days of Drake and Frobisher, of Cook and Vancouver, of Champlain and La Verendrye, the present has few blank areas left on the map. There are not many places on the surface of the earth where restless man has not yet travelled.

Look at it that way and the days of the globe-girdling explorer appear over. Yet, from other aspects, a wealth of exploration still challenges the adventurer.

All this summer, aerial photographic planes have been ranging Canada's sub-arctic so that Canadians can have accurate and detailed maps of their great northland. The remaining blank spots on the country's map are rapidly being filled in.

Farther afield, a British expedition made history two months ago by scaling the hitherto unconquerable Mount Everest.

Industrial uses of atomic energy offer scope for discoveries that may change the lives of all mankind.

Despite the breathtaking medical miracles of the last few years, the world still awaits the unfailing cure for cancer, and poliomyelitis and heart disease. Some day the researchers may win their battle with these diseases, as they have triumphed over so many other scourges in the past.

No new worlds to conquer? Why, almost every important finding raises fresh questions and points the way to unexplored fields of endeavor. Just as the vastness of Canada's natural resources is being developed at Kitimat, at Niagara and in Ungava, amazing discoveries may be just ahead for Canadian researchers in new frontiers of science and the human spirit.

Polio and Gamma Globulin

SOME CASES of polio have been discovered in the district this year, and the patients are at present undergoing treatment in Montreal hospitals. As usually happens, the dread virus attacked young children, and although adults are not immune the incidence of the disease is much more frequent in young people. The polio virus attacks by entering the bloodstream, and being carried along to the nerve cells, it causes paralysis by damaging the cells. There is no known cure, but the progress of the virus can be prevented if infection is discovered in time to trap it in the bloodstream before it has time to attack and damage the nerve cells.

When the polio virus attacks, the body fights back by building up special polio anti-bodies. The disease-fighting part of human blood contains substances called anti-bodies, or in its extracted form, Gamma Globulin. Persons over 15 years of age usually have anti-bodies to at least one of the known polio viruses, which is the result of contact with a mild form of the disease during childhood. But young children are more susceptible, not having anti-bodies in their blood when the polio virus is contacted. By injecting Gamma Globulin into the muscles where it can be absorbed into the bloodstream, immunity can be obtained; but unfortunately this is only temporary, as no sooner have the preventive anti-bodies been created than the body seeks to eliminate them, until after about five weeks the level becomes too low to be effective.

Thus "G.G." is not a real solution as it does not give positive protection over a period of years. At best it is a temporary preventive, which is the reason why the search for a positive preventive vaccine is being pressed forward continuously. "G.G." is in short supply and at present under government control, because neither facilities nor equipment for widespread expansion to process it are available. As it is, existing plants are working 24 hours a day, seven days a week, in an effort to build up a stock. In this process of extracting "G.G." from human blood, no reduction in blood supplies takes place, as the same pint of blood that provides "G.G." also furnishes serum albumin which is used for shock or blood transfusion. "G.G." is purely preventive; it is not given to patients with symptoms of the disease diagnosed as polio, for by that time the virus has already damaged the nervous system. Once the nerve cells deteriorate, the anti-bodies cannot do any good.

Ageless Man

THERE'S FOOD for thought in the latest finds they've been making in ancient, sacred peat bogs of Denmark. They've just dug up the body of a man, whose head and face is astonishingly well preserved.

This man might have died only last week, to look at the calm face, yet he's been labelled by experts as the Tollund man, who lived 2,000 years ago.

This man, who has slept for 20 centuries, is much like the peasants living in the same district today. The face is narrow and not particularly large. The nose is firm and well set. There are calm furrows on the handsome brow. There are humorous wrinkles around the eyes. He looks like a mild, thoughtful man.

Yet this man was probably living when Caesar ruled the Roman Empire. You wonder what thoughts passed through this perfectly-preserved head in an ancient time; how he got along with his fellows; did he have a happy family?

The archaeologists have clues. They know that these old peat bogs, which have special chemical preserving qualities, were used as the burying ground when the Gods had to be appeased with a sacrifice.

When the settlement was in dire peril, when starvation or other disasters threatened the people, they would sometimes make the supreme sacrifice — they would sacrifice the chieftain himself. Either he was sent to appease the Gods, or he willingly gave his life, because it was his duty to give all for his people.

The Tollund man was not slain in any degrading fashion. In those times, hanging was the sacrificial death. Odin himself was hanged, and the human offerings at the great pagan temples were hanged too.

This man was hanged, and the leather noose was left around his neck to prove to the Gods his honorable death.

It seems a pretty clear illustration that sacrifice has always been — and will continue — one of man's noblest virtues.

Who Pays?

PROOF of who pays for the welfare state was provided recently by Justice Garson who, as reported in Winnipeg Free Press, points out that over two-thirds of taxable income of Canadians is earned by people getting less than $4,000 a year, while over four-fifths is earned by people with incomes of $6,000 a year or less. Mr. Garson rightly concludes that "There is no country in the world today in which there are heavy social welfare expenditures, which does not have to impose upon its citizens in the medium and low income brackets a heavy load of taxation."

THE GREATEST weapon against Communism is an expanding economy under free competitive enterprise, and the soundest aspect of the economic system is its adaptability to meet new situations, said David S. Austin, executive vice-president, United Steel Corporation, when accepting the National Sales Executives' "Business Statesman of the Year" award. "Our allies are awaiting skeptically to be re-assured that our free enterprise system will be able to maintain its uninterrupted growth and development during a period of peace", Mr. Austin said. "Our enemies are embarking on an international economic battle to generate a collapse in the level of our business activity."

Common fallacies of household management and budgeting:

1. The Bargain Fallacy. Nearly all Canadian wives believe that you can save money by purchasing something you don't need at a bargain price.

It doesn't matter a darn what Canadian husbands say. No force on earth will prevent Canadian wives from snapping up a set of chrome-plated finger bowls which is selling at $19.98, today only, or a table-sized horseradish dispenser which is going at $14.99 plus tax because it is shop soiled.

There is only one way to recoup your losses on this type of deal. Scour the neighborhood for someone who actually wants a horseradish dispenser, and trade it to him for an article you can use. Your chances are slim, however.

2. The Hobby Fallacy. Thousands of Canadian husbands delude themselves with the idea that hobbies can be made to pay.

One example of this fallacy is the sport fisherman who thinks he can save money from the meat bill. When he has paid for lost tackle, broken rods and doctors' bills for poison-ivy rash, each fish has cost him $101.05, not counting what he paid the storekeeper for it on his way home.

A tragic case of the Hobby Fallacy was that of the woodworking enthusiast whose home-made table collapsed, shattering a priceless vase. Nothing daunted, the man spent so much time in his workshop that his wife sued him for divorce. He is now several thousand dollars poorer. Don't fall into this trap, men.

3. The Little Tin Box Fallacy. Some women have the idea that if you put the milk money in one little tin box, the bread money in another, the rent in a third and entertainment allowance in a fourth, you can't go wrong.

A friend of mine flies into rages because his wife is guilty of the Little Tin Box Fallacy. He says it shows the illogicality of the female mind, to treat the money in the little tin boxes as though it was different in quality — a different KIND of money — rent in pounds, shillings and pence, entertainment in pesos, bread in rubles and milk in dinars.

The fact is that the money in the little tin boxes is all the same kind of money, and it has a way of disappearing from one box into another, until all the little tin boxes are full of IOUs. You can accomplish the same result by keeping all the money in one box and making entries in an account book. The Little Tin Box Fallacy is, in fact, only a variation of . . .

4. The Budget Fallacy. Anyone but a born fool knows it is impossible to keep a budget these days, whatever you do. That's why I need a raise, boss.

Hartland, N.S., Observer is fascinated at the suggestion that Canada can look forward to having a "prime minister" named Pickersgill, member of Parliament for Bonavisa-Twillingate, Newfoundland. . . Clinton, Ont., town council offered the old public school and grounds for one-dollar, provided same is not used for educational purposes. . . MONTREAL – MAELSTROM AND MILLSTREAM

Addendum to last week's article: Apparently, we never did have it so good. Abbott beat Chambers in St. Antoine-Westmount. However, Chambers did give Doug a good run for his money. An encouraging sign. Also, it was interesting to note that there are only 214 communist types in the riding. At least, that's the number that marked the ballot in favor of the L.P.P. candidate.

Montreal motorists are indignant. So, for that matter, are many car owners from points outside the city. And the reason? They're hopping mad about the vicious ticket racket now being operated by the Ste. Agathe police force. Here's how the racket operates. . . .

The likely prospect is halted by a Ste. A constable and is informed that he was speeding. The motorist's protests are to no avail. The cop said he was speeding and, whether he likes it or not, he's going to get a ticket. So, while the driver fumes, the cop writes out the ducat for $5. Pocketing the ticket, the transient prepares to start up and get out of town as fast as he can.

"Just a minute", the cop bellows, "I haven't finished with you yet."

"Why not? I've got your ticket", the driver declares.

"You've got one", the cop replies, "but I'm giving you another one."

"And what's the reason this time?"

"You stopped your car in a no-parking area!"

Good racket, eh? The cop runs the car to ground in a no-parking area and then penalizes the motorist. And, note this! If the driver is alert enough to notice he is being halted in a forbidden zone and moves on until he reaches a parking spot . . . you guessed it! He gets a ticket anyway for failing to stop when ordered by a policeman.

Under this sheckel-grubbing system, Ste. Agathe's police force is doing wonders for the town's treasury. Many visitors to the Laurentian town are convinced that the council will pay for its new police cruiser in no time at all. Certainly, if the racket is allowed to continue and nobody takes the matter into court, Ste. Agathe will be able to afford four or five cruisers each year.

(Note: "Sheckel-grubbing" is a word-combination a friend of mine coined once upon a time. When I asked him what it meant, he replied:

"Sheckel-grubbing? The unholy practice of securing money by extortion. It's the closest one can come to the name Schiklegruber — or whatever way you care to spell it — and, he was none other than Adolph Hitler.")

The motorists I have talked to, who have been double-ducated in Ste. Agathe, are all agreed that Hitlerism has hit that Laurentian centre. And that's not good for Ste. Agathe. The town has striven too long to become the entertainment centre of the north. Seems as though the chief of police there should be tipped-off to call off the purge. If Ste. Agathe gets a bad name this summer, people will remember it this winter. And Tremblant has better ski-ing, while St. Sauveur, Ste. Adele, and the procession of ski resorts south of Ste. Agathe have good hills too, and all are nearer Montreal. Ste. Agathe merchants won't be favorably disposed towards the constabulary if the winter trade starts looking elsewhere for resorts where the police are on their toes instead of off the beam.

Well, that's it for this week. And, if you're planning to drive up Ste. Agathe way, just load your pockets with $5 bills. You'll probably need them.

Psychiatrists, today, vow that they are the only sane people in the world. Certainly, they don't have to worry as long as everyone else does. And, sometimes, I wonder how it is — if these persons be sane — they undertake to drive their own cars in this traffic-clogged city. It has been reliably proven that he who would conduct his car up and down the streets of Montreal, must needs be bats in the belfry first.

A short time ago, I was riding the Clarenceville bus on another jaunt to the Eastern Townships. As we rolled up Stanley Street, a maroon convertible eased itself out the gate of the Stanley garage and car-wash, into the path of our bus. Why, I don't know, but the car's driver considered that he should have the right of way. So, in order to halt the onrushing bus, he clamped both hands on the horn ring and, standing up in the car, he leaned his full weight upon it.

Faced with a persistent and blaring claxon, the bus driver stopped just in front of the convertible. And from where I sat, I was able to observe the face of the car's chauffeur. It was, without doubt, the most distorted, diabolical and maniacal face I've ever gazed upon. I was convinced that I was looking upon a man about to commit immediate murder. Then, he relaxed, and slamming the car into gear, he careened madly up to the stoplight at the corner of Sherbrooke. We followed after, at a safe distance.

As I look back on that affair now, it seems to me that the license number of that convertible was preceded by the letters "M.D.". I wonder if, perchance, the car was driven by a psychiatrist who was trying to act normal.

"Postal Information" is a handy little booklet issued by the Canadian Post Office authorities in Ottawa. It is designed to acquaint the public with the various charges for postal services from Canada to other countries of the world. As a result, it makes interesting reading.

Page 32, however, is the most interesting of all. There, one finds the Department's notes on the Philatelic Service, also operated in Ottawa. After duly telling us about the service, the GPO goes on to tell us something about our stamps. And in the process, I might add, clears up the great 1953 postal mystery.

"Canada's postage stamps are produced by the line-engraved process, as distinct from the cheaper methods in use in many countries today." (Why be cheap? After all, it's the taxpayers' money!)

"Line-engraving lends unequalled artistic interest and value to stamps. It is an ancient craft that goes back to the Middle Ages", the booklet continues.

And here, my friends, is the punchline!

"Critics say that some Canadian stamps have achieved distinction in the realm of abstract art."

They certainly have, Messrs. Cote and Turnbull! Take that four cent, Elizabeth II Coronation misfire, for example. You know, the purple one! But, isn't "abstract" putting it a little mildly?

In its first ten years of operation the federal Unemployment Insurance Fund had a total revenue of $1,007,730,378, of which employer and employees contributed equal amounts and the federal government contributed one fifth of that total. Cost of administering the Act is also paid out of federal government tax revenues.

It is 1,463 miles by rail from Winnipeg to Vancouver, and 2,012 miles from Winnipeg to Halifax.

OBITUARY

Former Business Man, Lake Louisa Resident, Died on Saturday

Late James L. Anderson

Jim Anderson, a former garageman in this town, died somewhat suddenly at his home in St. Lambert last Saturday, after having suffered the recurrence of a heart ailment at his summer residence on Lake Louisa last week. He was motored to St. Lambert by his son, Donald, but had no sooner reached home than he succumbed.

The late James Loynachan Anderson built and operated the garage which is now Lachute Motor Sales, on Main Street. He sold the business and property to Ed Bourbonniere in 1938 and, residing in St. Lambert, entered into the contracting business. He was in his 68th year at the time of his death.

He is survived by his wife, the former Jessie Stewart, of Howick, Que., and three sons, Stewart, in Tweed, Ont., Hilliard and Donald at St. Lambert; also two brothers Eric and Neill (the latter having also been in business here) and several sisters.

The funeral was held Tuesday in Montreal, followed by interment at Georgetown, Que.

Late J. L. Kennedy Was Esteemed County Citizen

It is with deep regret that we record the death of Joseph Lawson Kennedy, who passed away at his home in Pine Hill, Sunday morning, August 16, surrounded by his family and his sister, Mrs. Allen Kennedy.

Born at Pine Hill, Que., in the year 1882, he was the son of the late Lawson Kennedy and Ann Jane Moncrieff.

The late Lawson Kennedy will be greatly missed in the community as a kind neighbor and thoughtful friend, having lived his entire life on the farm he purchased when quite a young man.

He was a member of Argenteuil Lodge No. 67, A.F. & A. M., G.R.Q., for over 40 years; also a past member of Chatham Council.

Those left to mourn the loss of a loving husband and kind father are his devoted wife (the former Emma Helen Graham), four daughters, and three sons — (Mona) Mrs. Norman MacGeorge, (Muriel) Mrs. Foster Campbell, (Lillian) Mrs. Merlyn Evans, (Elva) Mrs. Donald MacRae, Jr., Gerald, Graham and Grant; also his sister, Mrs. Allen Kennedy, and 10 grandchildren.

The funeral, which was largely attended, was held at his home, conducted by the Rev. N. H. Brock, with prayer by the Rev. D. Merrett, and that beautiful hymn, "Some Golden Daybreak", sung by Mrs. Fred Barker.

There were many beautiful flowers to show the esteem in which he was held.

Pall-bearers were — Messrs. Jack Moncrieff, Jim Trineer, Sandy MacMillan, Jack Dixon, Lyall Kennedy and Leslie Tomalty. Interment was in the Dalesville Cemetery. A Masonic service was held at the graveside, conducted by the Rt. Worshipful H. M. Gall.

Those attending from a distance were — Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Tomalty, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Prophet, of Edwards, Ont.; Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Kennedy, Mrs. Leslie Clifford, of Bellamy, Ont.; Mr. Guy Tomalty, Miss Betty Graham, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Poulter, Mr. Randy McLean, Mr. Keith Cook, all of Ottawa; Mr. John Walsh, Mrs. Margaret Ferguson, Mrs. Jack Shute, Miss Sadie Kennedy, Mr. Albert Burk, Mrs. Rupert Bradford, Mr. Alton Kennedy, Mr. Archie Janes, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Tomalty, Mr. and Mrs. Bolton Rathwell, all of Montreal; Mr. Robt. Kennedy, Los Angeles, Cal.; Mr. Jack Kennedy, Mr. Fred Kennedy, of Morin Heights; Mr. and Mrs. Jack Moncrieff, Mrs. Margaret Boyd, Mr. Hugh Boyd, Mrs. Eddy Grey, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Grey, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Staniforth, all of Arundel; Mr. and Mrs. Jack MacGeorge, of Lacolle, Que.; Mr. Lawson Kennedy, of Niagara Falls, Ont.

Old Resident, Wm. Hutton, Buried at Lakeview

A well known and elderly resident of this county, William Hutton, died recently at his home near Brownsburg, following a brief illness.

The funeral was held from that place, where he had lived in recent years, and he was laid to rest in the Lakeview Cemetery. The Rev. C. R. Lang, of Lachute, officiated at the home, and the Rev. Paul Busing, of Arundel, conducted the committal service.

The late William Hutton was predeceased by his first wife Mathilde Tassé, 23 years ago. The couple are survived by three sons and five daughters — Willie, René and Wilfred Hutton, Mrs. Romeo Farmer (Mariam), Mrs. Bazil Tomalty (Sarah), Mrs. Stanley Campbell (Bella), Mrs. Fred Boyer (Marguerite), and Mrs. Bob Bates (Elizabeth)... He is survived also by his second wife, the former Miss Proulx, and two younger children.

Red Cross Meeting Held at Brownsburg

Brownsburg —

At a recent meeting of the local branch of the Canadian Red Cross (Mrs. N. E. Smillie presiding) Mrs. Elliott, the treasurer, reported on the finances of the branch and on receipt of a cheque of $25 from headquarters for running expenses. The work convener, Mrs. Barker, reported that work was going out well, and quite a lot coming in. Helpers may obtain materials by applying to Mrs. Barker, and thereby help to supply the need.

Mr. Sydney Seary read a long report on the activities of his committee (Messrs. Grondin, S. Istvanffy and the Rev. Fr. Cousol) and relayed the arrangements which have been made to take care of the Blood Donor Clinic organized for September 30 and October 1 at Lachute. There was a discussion on the eligibility of patients requiring blood transfusions at certain hospitals, and as there was some misunderstanding on the matter, it was announced by the president than anyone needing blood will not be denied by the Red Cross. Some difference exists between hospitals under the Red Cross plan and those hospitals which remain outside, but blood donors must be served, no matter in which hospital they are treated.

The next session will be an open meeting, September 14 at the Consolidated School.

The meeting adjourned on the proposition of Mr. Chalmers, who was bid bon voyage by the members present, on his forthcoming visit to European capitals.

Armageddon — God's New World

Here in a printed booklet of 32 pages is the memorable address by the president of the Watchtower Society at Yankee Stadium, New York, July 26. The mammoth stadium overflowed with the largest crowd in its entire history; and many, many thousands of people in the trailer and tent city in New Jersey heard by direct telephone wire. Radio station WBBR flashed the hour-long speech over the air simultaneously so that millions not at the stadium would have the opportunity of hearing this heart-cheering Bible discourse.

If you are interested in news that is really good news, then send for a copy of this booklet. Better still, write for seven copies, on a contribution of 25 cents, and let your friends, neighbors and relatives enjoy the best news people could possibly hear today. "After Armageddon — God's New World" is a booklet you should not miss reading. — Write to 40 Irwin Ave., Toronto 5, Ontario.

AMONG THE CHURCHES

Guest Choristers Heard at Arundel

(Our District Correspondent)

The Arundel United Church was greatly favored on Sunday to have, as a guest choir, members of the Otter Lake Music Festival, under the direction of Mr. George Little, organist. Mrs. Carl Little sang a solo, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Mario Duchenes, flutist and recorder player, and by Mr. Little at the organ.

Bazaar at Lakefield

A successful bazaar was held in the Gibb Parish Hall under the auspices of the Woman's Auxiliary of Holy Trinity Church, Lakefield, Substantial amounts were derived from various tables. Mrs. C. W. P. Baugh, the president, extends grateful thanks to all who assisted in making this event a success.

Missionary Speaker Heard at Brownsburg

Brownsburg — Special guest speaker at the Women's Missionary Service in the United Church last Sunday morning was Miss Frances Walbridge, a missionary on furlough from Angola, Portuguese East Africa. Miss Walbridge gave a fine description of her work, as well as the situation generally prevailing in that part of the missionary world. Using the Laubach method, named after its missionary orginator, millions of people from among what Lauback calls "The Silent Billion" have learned to read and write, and have thus entered a new world. In Angola Miss Walbridge, a W.M.S. missionary, supervises the lessons where one teaches another, in which the Bible is the chief textbook.

A Thought

Who does God's work will get God's pay.
However long may be the day.
However weary be the way,
Though earthly powers may thunder Nay!
No human hand God's hand can stay.
Who does God's work will get God's pay.

Pretty Wedding At Grace Church In Arundel

Craig - Smith

The marriage of Mary Myrtle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Smith, of Arundel, Que., to Mr. Leonard Matthew Craig, son of the late Mr. Craig and Mrs. Matthew Craig, of Port Hope, Ont., took place at Grace Church, Arundel, at 7 o'clock on August 22. The Rev. Paul Busing officiated and the organist was Mrs. W. L. Morrison. Mrs. Stuart Cooke sang "O Perfect Love" during the signing of the register. The marriage was a double ring ceremony.

The bride, given away by her father, was dressed in a floor-length gown of embroidered tulle illusion over net and taffeta. The bodice was fitted and the sleeves ended in points over the hands. The neckline was trimmed with seed pearls. Her long veil of tulle illusion was held in place by a pearl coronet. Her flowers were a cascade bouquet of Sweetheart roses and stephanotis.

The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. Gerald Trineer, of Montreal, as matron of honor, and by Linda Loughren, niece of the groom, as flower girl. The matron of honor wore a floor-length gown of blue frosted organdy over taffeta, with headdress and mitts to match. Her flowers were a bouquet of pink carnations. Trick-Shot Artist At Lions' Golf Tourney September 12-13

Sports fans are in for a treat September 12 and 13, with the personal appearance of Paul Hahn, trick shot wizard and one of the outstanding personalities in golf, at the Lasalle Golf and Country Club — states Frank McGrath, chairman of the Lions C.P.G.A. Golf Tournament.

Travelling pro from the Ellinor Village Country Club at Ormond Beach, Florida, Hahn has a repertoire of more than 30 incredible trick shots. He combines a serious golf clinic and his trick shot exhibition with a hilarious series of fast-moving gags in a comedy routine put together for him by Hollywood gag writers.

Hahn has been invited to return to the Master's Tournament in Augusta, Ga., where he received rave notices last year. He received the same enthusiastic reception at the Bing Crosby Tournament in California, the National P.G.A. Golf Championship in Louisville, and in the U.S. golf capital, Pinehurst, N.C. Such link stars as Jimmy Demaret, Lloyd Mangrum, Jack Burke, Jr., Julius Boros, Gene Sarazen and Horton Smith have hailed him as the greatest showman in golf.

A former player on the P.G.A. tournament circuit, Hahn discovered that there was more money to be made from entertaining than from playing the game seriously. He has the largest golf bag in the history of the game. It weighs 90 pounds and contains 26 clubs, mostly unorthodox, like the piece of rubber hose with the head of a driver tied on it. With it, Hahn knocks them over 200 yards straight down the fairway.

Other shots include hitting four balls at the same time — two go out straight, and the other two plop straight up in the air, Hahn catches them before they hit the ground! His steely-nerved control has astounded audiences in almost every state in the Union, Canada, Australia, Hawaii, Puerto Rico and Cuba. His act has been made into a movie by Columbia Pictures, and Paramount recently filmed "Wizard of Clubs" starring Hahn for a Grantland Rice "Sportlight".

A note of danger is added to the exhibition by Hahn's famous "William Tell" shot. He drives the golf ball from a tee held in the teeth of a volunteer. In case nobody volunteers for the dangerous assignment, a member of his troupe performs the honors.

Fans are invited to bring their cameras and have a field day photographing Hahn's bizarre shots. The exhibition has two other added features, Mr. McGrath said. It is conducted entirely in one spot so that the gallery doesn't have to do any walking, and the comedy routine is funny enough to appeal to non-golfers as well as addicts of the game.

On Rangers' NHL Hockey Line-up

SPORTS CAMERA

By Gerry Lougheed,
Canadian Press Staff Writer

New York Rangers, getting their house in order for next season, have added some new bricks and a couple of old ones.

If all goes well, the oldsters will bolster the forward wall and the newcomers may plug a couple of holes in their defensive set-up.

A last-place club in the National Hockey League last season, Rangers have added two rookies from Cleveland Barons of the American Hockey League — goalie Johnny Bower and defenceman Bob Chrystal—and the veteran Bentley brothers, Max and Doug.

In a way, all four players come attached with question marks.

First, there's the question whether Bower — rated one of the best netminders in minor league hockey — can make the grade in the big-time. If he fails, he won't be the first minor-league star who flopped in the NHL.

To get the Ranger job he'll have to displace last year's custodian, Lorne (Gump) Worsley, who was voted the NHL's rookie of the year last April. Worsley is still listed with the team and although he was a bit shaky in spots last season, perhaps his added experience will give him the edge over Bower. Worsley is 24 and Bower will be 29 this fall.

Chrystal, too, will have his troubles. He'll be attempting to break into a pretty fair defence corps, though by no means the league's best. To get a regular spot he'll have to displace one of three experienced rearguards — Leo Reise, Allan Stanley and Hy Buller — or Harry Howell, a promising-looking junior who went up during the season from Guelph Biltmores.

Bentleys Puzzle

That brings us to the Bentleys, perhaps the biggest question marks of all.

Max was purchased from Toronto Maple Leafs in mid-August. Doug was in the Ranger organization as playing coach of their Saskatoon Quakers farm team in the Western Hockey League.

Doug, who on September 3 will reach the ripe old hockey age of 37, has been out of the NHL for three years. If he shows enough of his former prowess at the New York training camp in Saskatoon, he'll be offered a contract as a player and assistant to coach Frank Boucher.

Max, 33, missed most of last season with a back ailment and failed in clutch spots where it was figured his ability and experience would count. He has been talking longingly of retirement for a couple of years.

Hockey experts figure that Max — with Doug to "father" him and the canny Boucher to guide him — can regain the form he showed with Chicago Black Hawks in the 1940's when he won the scoring championship two years in a row and was named the player most valuable to his team.

Perfect Game

Fitz Luciano, Lachute Tigers, pitched the first perfect game in Laurentide Baseball League last Monday night, against none other than the leader of the league, the Lachine Canucks. Fitz gave a No-Walk No-Hit and the club made No Errors—only 27 Canucks came to bat. The final score for the game read:

In appreciation of this feat the Gagnon Club, with collaboration of all players of the team, gave Luciano a Sunbeam Super Mixmaster. This was presented by René Gagnon just before the game Sunday night.

A big day for the Lachute boys and girls, who accumulated 147 points, to beat Lake Louisa swimmers and divers by a few points. Lucien Labonté and some of his pupils gave a very nice demonstration of swimming, all kinds of strokes, diving, and specially how to save oneself in an emergency. It was a little cold and windy, but everyone seemed to enjoy the afternoon.

At 4 o'clock on the tennis courts there was a match between a Montreal club and Lachute, while a Montebello club came to meet Lachute at croquet.

Film Historic Peak

Jasper, Alta. — Although it's not provided in the script, Mount Edith Cavell, one of the most graceful peaks in the continent's largest national park, Jasper, will be "shot" and included in the finished production of the Technicolor cinemascope "River of No Return" now being filmed in Jasper.

Austrian-born director Otto Preminger stated he had "fallen in love" with the grace and beauty of the ten thousand feet of multi-colored rock and gleaming ice and snow of Mount Edith Cavell, named for the heroic English nurse of World War One fame. He has asked that the original script be rewritten to include the mountain in at least one sequence of the picture starring Marilyn Monroe, Robert Mitchum and Rory Calhoun.

Book Review —

A Distinguished Canadian Novel

Residents of the County of Argenteuil interested in Canadian literature may very well take note of the fact that one of our foremost Canadian novelists, Mrs. Grace Campbell, has recently bought the old Lamb residence, "Braeside", on the Main Street of St. Andrews East — a brick Victorian house with verandahs and a garden. Though Mrs. Campbell is not living there herself at present, but has leased the place to Mr. Alexander McPhee, we are glad that she now has this link with our county. It gives us a new feeling of proprietorship in her work, and adds to our enjoyment in reading her new novel, TORBEG. (Collins, Toronto, 1953).

The scene of Torbeg is laid chiefly in the Highlands of Scotland in the time of Bonnie Prince Charlie. Behind the book is a lot of research into the past. We see just how the people lived, the furniture in their houses, food, clothing, and weapons, their housework and utensils, their farm work and tools, their music and festivities. This knowledge does not get in the way of the story; it only makes it more vivid. Gaelic words here and there lend flavor without being a difficulty, coming in as they do in such a way that we see just what they mean.

The book is filled with a great zest of life. We see the swinging kilts, the prancing horses, hear the roaring cataracts, the chuckling burns and the skirling pipes, and breathe the clean, sharp mountain air. We follow with suspense the adventures of the characters both in Scotland and later in the New World. Along with the romantic old loyalties they have a spirit of democratic independence and love of freedom which fits them well for a new life on this continent.

The descriptive passages are not only true and informative in the painting of Highland scenes, but are often of great beauty in themselves. I select one of many possible examples:

"They were now at the top of the pass. Around them lay mountains, peak on peak to the edge of the horizon. Cataracts fell from the dark crags, and in the folds of the hills little lochs were set like silver medallions. The wind blew thin and free through the stunted shrubbery. It was a high lonely world into which they had come. At the sound of their trampling feet and the skirl of the pipes, the red deer scattered up the corries and birds were flushed from the thickets and went rocketing away across the heather."

The book connects these Highland scenes with our own land. Mrs. Campbell is writing of her own ancestors. Places and clan names are links with many places and families in Glengarry. Even nearer to us, here, is a beautiful old house on the road to Ottawa which still bears the name of Duldreggan, one of the important place names of the story. It was built by an official of the Hudson Bay Company and is now the home of Mrs. Walter Smith of Hawkesbury.

We in Canada are fortunate indeed in having such a novelist as Mrs. Campbell, whose stories are rich in the spirit, ideals and traditions of our country and admirably suited to reading aloud in the family circle.

Shakespeare at Stratford, Ontario

Specially Contributed to The Watchman

An event of major importance in Canadian cultural history was the Shakespeare festival held for the first time at Stratford, Ontario — so highly successful that its term of five weeks was extended to six, ending August 22. With the exception of the first two nights, when the attendance was somewhat smaller, the theatre seating 1475 persons (for the present under a gigantic canvas roof) was packed to capacity. Those wishing to go next year should reserve tickets and accommodations early.

The two plays given this year were "All's Well that Ends Well" and "King Richard the Third". Alec Guinness gave distinguished interpretations of the King of France in "All's Well" and the title role of "Richard the Third". Irene Worth was memorable as Helena, and as Margaret, widow of Henry VI. They were well supported by the rest of the cast.

"All's Well" was a very finished performance, its strange story brought into a surprising psychological unity.

"Richard the Third" as a whole left an indelible impression: the tragic action highlighted on the starkly simple stage — beyond it the sweep and depth of the vast theatre, its hundreds of faces dimly visible under misty beams slanting from the lights at the perimeter.

Dawn Greenhalgh remarked to us on the adaptation of the bare Elizabethan stage (jutting into the audience, equipped with a single curved seat, many entrances, and a balcony): "It serves every purpose; it's lovely to act on; you feel at home, free, and at ease." Miss Greenhalgh (a former high-school pupil of Miss McLure, one of our party) took us backstage, showed us the inner working of a complete modern theatre, and introduced us to some of her distinguished colleagues.

Enormous credit goes to Tyrone Guthrie, Tanya Moiseiwitsch, Cecil Clarke, and others for the splendor of the festival; and Stratford, Ontario, is itself no small factor. It affords a beautiful setting for this national experiment; the park surrounding the theatre; the Avon with its elms and willows, arched bridges, and floating swans; and the formal Elizabethan garden with its bust of Shakespeare and its stone seats among flowers and shrubbery, where one can idle, book in hand, absorbing the poetry and the scenes to be given ever new life by the art of the actor.

Humorist

Old Wes, according to Shottie, had a malevolent sense of humor and a peculiar way of training horses.

Shottie's sister once borrowed a horse and buggy from Wes. She was told to keep a taut rein. Whereat the horse bolted. After three miles along the lake where the then newly installed mail boxes were close to the road, Shottie's sister could pull no longer. She shut her eyes and prepared for a wreck.

As soon as the reins were loose, the roadster slowed to an amiable amble.

Wes told them later he always trained his horses that way — a tight rein for forward speed and a loose one for a jog trot.

He was a bit old ever to have broken in a motor car. It would have been interesting to know what he would have done to the gearbox of a Chev. 4-90.

C.N.R. TO BUILD BIG HOTEL IN MONTREAL — Plans for the construction of a large convention hotel on the Central Station site in Montreal have been approved by the Canadian National Railways board of directors and will be included in the railway's budget when it is submitted to the sessional parliamentary committee on railways as part of the financial programme to be laid before Parliament at the next session, Donald Gordon, chairman and president, has announced. The 20-storey, $20,000,000 hotel will have upwards of 1,000 rooms and convention space capable of seating 4,000 persons at meetings and 2,500 at banquets. It will benefit all agencies engaged in the travel and tourist industry and will do much to attract conventions and visitors to Canada, and will be of great and direct benefit to Montreal, the Province of Quebec and Canada as a whole, Mr. Gordon stated.

Women's Interests -- The Homemaker's Section

The Versatile Tomato

To the legal authority, the tomato is a vegetable. To the botanist it is a fruit, but to the wise homemaker it is both, for it may be used as either. It is the gardener's favorite too, as almost every garden boasts at least a few plants. And since tomatoes are plentiful now, you'll want to use them as often and in as many ways as you can.

First of all, it is important that you make a good choice in buying your tomatoes. The home economists of the Consumer Section say it is wise to buy tomatoes which are well-formed, firm, plump and smooth. They should have good red color and be just ripe rather than under or over-ripe. If you find a few irregularly shaped tomatoes among those you have bought, use them for stewing, or if your tomatoes are underripe, ripen them at room temperature instead of on a window sill. There are two reasons for this — the summer sun is too hot, and too much sunlight may actually prevent the color developing or make the color splotchy. Since light is not necessary to produce good red color, the kitchen cupboard is the right temperature and it makes a good place for ripening tomatoes. While the refrigerator is the best place for storing ripe tomatoes, underripe ones should not be kept in the refrigerator as the cold stops the ripening and the tomatoes become watery.

As for serving tomatoes, the possibilities for using this versatile food are unlimited. What is better than vine-ripened tomatoes for salads! They are good mixers with practically all vegetables and the number of pleasing combinations is almost unlimited. When using tomatoes in a salad, it is better to cut them lengthwise instead of crosswise. This is the French way and you lose much less juice.

A "Dagwood" salad-sandwich is a novelty salad which will appeal to teenagers. To make this treat, you start with a slice of buttered bread, then alternate layers of sliced tomatoes with a layer of sliced meat, potato salad, sliced cheese or egg sandwich filling and then top with another slice of bread.

Stuffed tomatoes are favorites of many people, for either cooked or uncooked, stuffed tomatoes have a definite appetite appeal. They are delicious stuffed with a liver and crisp bacon filling or with cottage cheese seasoned with chives or green pepper and mixed with mayonnaise. They are good too, stuffed with potato salad. The home economists suggest using a scooped out tomato shell as a mould for a jellied vegetable salad. It tastes good, it is attractive, and so easy to make! Simply prepare your favorite jellied vegetable salad and, after you have added the vegetables, spoon it into the tomato shells and put them into the refrigerator until serving time, when you will top them with mayonnaise.

Broiled tomatoes are popular with many families. They are delicious when cut in half, sprinkled generously with grated cheese, seasoned with basil and then broiled. Served this way, they add much to almost any luncheon or dinner plate.

If you are lucky enough to grow your own tomatoes, you might like to try this recipe for ripe tomato marmalade. It is a tart and very different spread for your breakfast toast:

Ripe Tomato Marmalade

10 Medium tomatoes (2½ lbs.), 2 lemons, 4½ cups sugar.

Blanch, peel and cut the tomatoes into small pieces. Slice the lemons very thinly, then cut the slices into quarters. Place the tomatoes and lemons in a saucepan. Cover tightly and cook gently for 45 minutes, stirring occasionally to prevent sticking. Remove cover, increase heat and cook until somewhat thickened, about 15 minutes, stirring frequently. Add sugar, bring to boiling and boil, uncovered, for 2 to 5 minutes or until a thermometer indicates 220°F. Pour into hot sterilized jars leaving at least ¼ inch headspace. Allow to cool slightly, then pour a thin layer of melted paraffin over the marmalade, rotating the jar so that the wax will cling to the jar to form a close seal. When the paraffin has hardened, add a second layer and again rotate the jar. Cover and store in a cool, dry place. Yield: about 5 cups.

Shelf Storage Of Pickles

Prolonged exposure to light and high temperature has a profound effect on pickles, and manufacturers and retailers should take precautions to provide storage conditions most favorable to the retention of quality. Two or three months' storage under unfavorable conditions will seriously lower their quality.

Direct sunlight and high temperatures cause the greatest damage to pickling quality. Dark storage at 98 degrees F. and exposure to direct sunlight at room temperature are equally destructive to the color, texture and flavor. In two months the color becomes dull and faded, texture flabby and flavor deteriorated. Indirect light has less severe effects on quality over the same period, and pickles at room temperature out of direct sunlight retain their full quality for one month. At the end of the second month, however, color, flavor and texture quality are affected — the quality being barely acceptable.

Pickles keep as well for a two month storage period at moderate room temperature in the dark, as at lower temperatures of say 40 or 60 degrees F. The lower temperatures are, of course, better for very long storage holds.

Sunlight and high temperatures above 70 degrees F. are to be avoided even during short shelf-storage. To protect quality, pickles displayed on shelves should have only short-time exposure to indirect light at moderate temperatures. Preservation of maximum quality pays in profits both to manufacturer and retailer, through increased demand for consistently high grade pickle products.

Recipe Serves Six
Rolled Round Steak with Vegetables

Outdoor Cooking: Spread 1-in. thick slices of well-pounded round steak with a savory bread and vegetable stuffing. Roll, tie with string and wrap in cabbage leaves. Then slip into a clean cloth sack. In another sack put scrubbed medium-sized potatoes and carrots, and peeled and quartered medium-sized onions.

To cook, dig a hole-in-the-ground a foot deep and line it with stones. Build a fire in it. Keep it going about 2 hours. Shovel out the hot coals and put in a wet burlap bag to create steam. Put in the 2 sacks of food. Quickly tuck a second wet burlap bag over the top. Pour a half-bucket of water over all. Shovel the hot coals back into the hole, and cover with earth so no steam can escape.

Seven hours it takes to cook this succulent dish. When ready for dinner, just shovel off the earth and coals, lift off the burlap bag and take out the food.

"Angels on Horseback"

Cut 1 lb. American cheese into 1-in. cubes. Cut 16 slices bacon into lengthwise strips. Wrap 2 around each cheese cube, wrapping both ways to cover the cheese. If necessary, fasten the cheese. If necessary, fasten in place with toothpicks. Impale each "angel" on a long sharp stick, and broil over the hot coals. Have ready split rolls lined with lettuce to hold each "angel" when it is "likely to fall off!"

SUGGESTION TO THE CHEF

Just brush finger-length pieces of white bread all over with sweetened condensed milk and roll in dry shredded coconut. Then pierce with a stick and toast over hot coals. Or cook in the oven in a buttered pan.

Handicraft Show Point of Attraction At ACWW Conference

One of the focal points of attraction at the Toronto conference of the Associated Country Women of the World was the Exhibits Room. Every variety of craft made in Canada was shown, including native Indian and Eskimo.

The exhibit was arranged to illustrate the activities of the four standing committees of the Federated Women's Institutes of Canada; Agricultural and Canadian Industries, Cultural Activities, Home Economics, and Citizenship. "Valuable assistance has been given with our displays by the Federal Department of Agriculture; the Citizenship Branch, Ottawa; Department of National Health and the Canadian Handicraft Guild", said Mrs. G. E. LeBaron, of North Hatley, president Quebec Women's Institutes and chairman of the national sub-committee on Exhibits, who hoped from this display women from the 25 countries represented at the conference would glean some idea of life in rural homes of Canada, their culture and ideals.

Special mention should be made of a four-piece coffee set — among the articles selected by the Q.W.I. in this province as typical of this section of Canada — which elicited much admiration. This is of hammered copper, silver lined, of original design and made by an Eastern Townships craftsman — a truly Canadian product, since copper is mined in Quebec and silver in Ontario. A beautifully designed three-piece set of jewelry (necklace, bracelet and earrings) made from silver and lignum vitae, work of the same craftsman, was also noted.

Other articles from Quebec were a wrought-iron bracket lamp, pottery seals, "mother and baby", made by a New Canadian of Quebec clay, and a pottery jar of exquisite design by the same craftsman; pair of petit-point pictures in antique frames, a fitting setting for the fine stitchery; handmade aluminum fire screen (another Quebec product), actual work of an Institue member except riveting of bands ("not enough hands" was the comment), and lino print Christmas cards of artistic and simple design in rural settings.

Canadians use textiles at a rate of about three times the world average; 623 million yards of fabrics of all kinds were used in 1952.

FOR PARENTS ONLY...

A Weekly Feature of Helpful Hints on Child Training

Your Child's Education

— By NANCY CLEAVER — (Copyright)

With the approach of September, parents are thinking about their child's education. The school doors open again and a whole army of boys and girls return to their studies.

The activities at school are very different from play in the familiar surroundings of home for the children who are starting to school. The adolescent entering Collegiate or High School discovers that he is much more "on his own" than he was in the lower grades. But what of parents and the school world?

Mothers try to send their children off to school clean, suitably clothed, fed and in a happy frame of mind. They also strive to see to it that there is not too much hurry at breakfast time. School books should be kept in a definite place and clothes laid out the previous night.

Many mothers set the table before going to bed. It is easy to fuss about the children being late! Agree with them about the best time to leave home for school. Encourage them to watch the clock themselves. Tardy adults are produced by mothers who constantly "timed" their child's day.

A happy start to the day sets the stage for learning which should be a fascinating, a satisfying experience. How eager the little child is to find out about the things which attract his attention! The famous explorer, Captain Scott, in his last message to his wife, wrote, "Make the boy interested in natural history, if you can; it is better than games; they encourage it at some schools".

Why do so many children "hate" school? (or at least they pretend to abhor it!) This attitude arises partly from their playmates' scorn towards a more studious youngster, as "A Brain". Sometimes fear of failing, dislike of the teacher or unpopularity with his school mates makes school disliked.

Parents help their children to enjoy school if they anticipate that it will be a happy experience. They can encourage appreciation of the parts of school the children really do enjoy. Helen may find arithmetic an awful chore, but she may discover painting a satisfying leisure time activity. Richard may be a born mathematician but the art periods are just something to be got through with. No two children are built on the same plan. Both Helen's and Richard's parents can assist them if they expect them to do their best in all their subjects.

In Canada the family allowance plan and provincial legislation, backed by probation officers, combine to keep the majority of boys and girls in school until they are sixteen. It is rather sad to see quite a number of scholars, especially boys, stopping school the day they reach their sixteenth birthday. If only they could measure their schooling in terms of equipment for life!

Children learn a good deal, even in academic subjects, from their chums. Rudyard Kipling in his autobiography wrote of teaching his chum "Turkey" all he ever knew of French, and "Turkey" in turn tried to make Kipling and another lad "Stalky" comprehend Latin. Kipling said, "If you want a boy to learn anything, he will remember what he gets from an equal where his master's words are forgotten."

The extra-curricular activities — Athletics, Choral Clubs, Debating and Dramatic Societies and others — form quite an array in many schools. The members of these voluntary groups benefit greatly from them, provided they do not become more important in the scholar's eyes than his studies!

Learning how to work and play with other people is one of the most valuable pieces of training for adult life. Many famous men such as Winston Churchill, were not at the top of the class. Churchill as an orator has few equals. He once said of his school days, "By being so long in the lowest form (at Harrow) I gained an immense advantage over the cleverer boys. . . . I got into my bones the essential structure of the ordinary British sentence — which is a noble thing. Naturally I am biased in favor of boys learning English; and then I would let the cleverer ones learn Latin as an honer and Greek as a treat."

We Canadians, living in a bilingual country, might well place greater emphasis on our children in English-speaking schools learning to speak French (not just read and write it in the Upper Grades). The exchange in the holidays of Quebec and Ontario students is a valuable project. Educated French Canadians can speak English with a fluency which puts the halting French of Canadians of Anglo Saxon extraction to shame. If there was greater emphasis on mastering French during school days, this would be a vital unifying force in Canada. . . As parents let us do all we can to see to it that our children's education is truly bilingual!

Resolutions of Interest At Triennial Conference

Toronto (CP) — Teach a young farm woman to read and write and you've taken a long step toward improving her community in an underdeveloped part of the world.

That's the view taken by the Triennial meeting of the Associated Country Women of the world which last week adopted a resolution urging UNESCO to increase its help toward providing basic education for rural girls in such areas.

The resolution, introduced by representatives of the National Home Demonstration Council of the United States, said two-thirds of the people of the world are rural and half are illiterate.

"Illiteracy is a barrier to balancing food and people", it said. "And educating a woman tends to educate a family."

Mrs. Matilda Greiss of Cario, Egypt, said that in the last 15 years there has been a movement toward increased education of farmers in her country. She said that in recent years UNESCO has helped with economic, civil, social, recreational and cultural programs.

The conference reaffirmed its support of the objectives of the United Nations and urged that the UN effort be increasingly used to provide technical assistance, particularly in dealing with underdeveloped countries.

Another resolution proposed that ACWW essay contests, until now confined to home conditions of members, be broadened, under the general theme of what the organization is doing to contribute to world peace.

Prize winners in the ACWW essay competition on "The Rural Home" were announced as follows: Mrs. Laura Petinnen, Finland; Mrs. J. Macdonald, New South Wales; Mrs. Hans F. Hinrichsen, Clinton, Iowa; Catherine Hargreaves, 18, Lancashire, England; Mrs. Oledal, Sweden; Mrs. J. Jonkhans-Steerburger, Holland; and Mrs. Beekhoff Van Selms, the only prize-winner present at the convention.

Delegates discussed women's place in politics and a delegate from India appealed to Egypt to give its women the vote.

"Although 8 per cent of the women in India are illiterate, they have the vote and almost all of them exercise their franchise", said the delegate.

A Finnish delegate struck a dissenting note by saying:

"It is all very well to shout for more women in influential positions, but first you've got to educate the women of the world, particularly in underdeveloped areas. The ACWW should concentrate on helping women to understand their responsibilities before encouraging them to step up to the same political levels as men."

Proper Shoes Banish Summer Foot Aches

Indian fakirs make a specialty of walking on red hot coals. Thousands of people match this routine every day by trying to transact their affairs clad in shoes that stifle their feet.

According to a forgotten humorist, there is one virtue about aching feet: they make a man forget about his other troubles! So if burning feet take your mind off the overdue payment on the car or the butcher's bill, carry on!

On the other hand, if your neighbors are beginning to haul in their children when you approach, and your disposition sizzles like the thermometer in mid-summer, you may want a change.

Listening to the advice of the foot experts will help you get relief. As the one basic step in foot hygiene, they recommend the wearing of roomy shoes equipped with supple leather uppers and soles.

Foot doctors have long known of the cooling action induced by the fibrous structure of genuine leather, and that's why they recommend all-leather shoes to their patients. They point out that shoes are the only article of wearing apparel that can cause serious damage to your health. The experts have nothing but harsh words for shoes that are too tight or are made of stiff or rigid materials.

So if you feel shunned by friends and family, don't go running to Dale Carnegie. A little care in the shoe-fitting department, and wearing the right kind of shoes for all occasions, may do the trick.

The post-office lays down five rules to ensure quick and certain delivery: Make certain of the correct address; write clearly; package well; obey postal regulations and put a return address on the outside of the mail.

London to New York in Seven Hours

WORLD'S FIRST delta-wing jet airliner, Britain's Avro "Atlantic," has been designed to fly non-stop from London to New York in under seven hours. Developed from the "Vulcan" delta bomber now in super-priority production for the R.A.F., the Atlantic will be capable of carrying between 76 and 151 passengers at more than 600 m.p.h., at an altitude of over 40,000 ft. This model of the new airliner shows the seating arrangements and general design.

Donors Quickly Renew Body's Blood Supply

The Argenteuil Blood Donor Clinic is arranged for September 30 - October 1, in Lachute. Prospective volunteers who are unfamiliar with the procedure and its effects, will find ample reassurance in the following information:

Withdrawal of a pint of blood from a healthy, well-nourished volunteer leads to a temporary and slight diminution of the volume of circulating blood. This diminution is almost immediately compensated by small alterations in the vast network of blood vessels throughout the body. Some blood may also enter the circulation from the spleen, which apparently acts as a small reservoir.

After a few hours the total blood volume is restored to normal by a transfer of tissue fluids to the blood. The only residual effect after the first few hours is thus a slight dilution of the blood so far as the red blood cells are concerned, a dilution which has no noticeable effect in a healthy person. Replacement of the red cells commences automatically and is completed in about one to three weeks.

Thus only repeated bleedings at short intervals could lead to harmful effects in the donors, and probably only if the diet contained insufficient iron. Prospective donors living on a defective diet would show some degree of anaemia when first seen and such individuals would be detected by the haemoglobin test which is always carried out before blood is taken.

It is obvious from these facts that no prospective donor need have any fear of possible ill-effects from the giving of blood.

Three Airports for Quebec Hinterlands

Quebec (CP) — Three isolated St. Lawrence River north shore centres soon will have airports, Premier Duplessis announced recently.

Cost of the airfields was not announced but Mr. Duplessis said they will be the property of the Municipal Corporations at Riviere au Tonnerre, Havre St. Pierre, and Natashquan.

Riviere au Tonnerre is about 350 miles east of Quebec City, Havre St. Pierre, 450 miles, and Natashquan more than 500 miles east.

Mr. Duplessis, who talked about the importance of communications in opening up the vast northern Quebec region, said construction of the airports was approved by the provincial cabinet.

Currently all distant north shore points are reached by ships which call at regular intervals. In the winter the harbors are closed.

A Sept-Iles-Baie Comeau highway which would make it possible for motorists to travel the 300 miles separating Quebec and Sept-Iles, is under construction. The job will take many years to complete.

Construction of a road linking St. Felicien and Chibougamau, 150 miles north of Quebec City, had resulted in mining development in that area where gold, copper and zinc were found.

Now Campbell Chibougamau Mines Limited had decided to build a $5,000,000 copper ore processing plant in Obalski township. Mopemisca mines planned a similar processing plant.

These developments in a region that were barren a few years ago was made possible both by opening up of modern communications and by extension of power lines over a distance of 150 miles by the Quebec Hydro Electric Commission.

Reply to Premier Nehru

By Lewis Milligan

Since India was granted its independence Prime Minister Nehrd has assumed the role of critic of British rule in other parts of the world, particularly in Africa. In his latest outburst he told his congress party that the natives in parts of Africa "are treated almost like wild animals." "It amazes me", he added, "that this kind of thing should go on. If there is no solution to this African problem very soon, the whole of Africa might be ablaze." In reply to a question in the House of Commons about these statements, Colonial Secretary Oliver Lyttelton said: "We reject these misleading statements about British territorities", and he deplored the possible effects of them upon native people who are already stirred up to rvolt by fanatical agitators.

This lofty and self-righteous attitude is ill-befitting the Indian premier who owes his own education and emancipation to British rule, and who has enough racial and religious problems on his hands which are more acute than those of the British in Africa. The Moslems of Pakistan are threatening to declare war on India for the possession of Kashmir, and Nehru's government is beset by Communist countries that would make short work of his boasted independence. Before the British entered India the country was for hundreds of years subjected to periodic invasions. The numerous independent kingdoms under native despots were continually at war with one another. The people were oppressed and kept in ignorance by cruel superstition and the caste system, which latter still more or less prevails today, with its untouchables, in spite of the efforts of the British to stamp it out.

When I listen to these roving Hindu ambassadors on the radio, speaking in cultured language which they learned at Oxford or English schools in India, lecturing the British government on the principles of democracy, I am set wondering how cultured they and Nehru himself would be today if the British had never ruled and established ordered government and educational institutions in India. They speak about democracy as if they invented it. Gandhi would never have known that his people were ignorant and oppressed by age-old superstitions if he had not been sent to Oxford and educated in British politics and jurisprudence. Judged by his fanatical fastings and posings of martyrdom, Gandhi would have been sitting on nails or performing some other feats of self-torture as a wandering fakir but for his British education.

As for Africa, that continent, including Egypt, owes whatever progress has been made there in civilization largely to British occupation, colonization and missionary work. One has only to think back to General Gordon and his fate at the hands of the howling dervishes in the Sudan, or to the self-sacrificing missionary explorations of Livingstone in Darkest Africa, to realize the great transformation that has been wrought in that continent in the last seventy-five years. Under British occupation, Egypt and the Sudan were redeemed from economic bankruptcy and political chaos; their resources were developed; courts of justice and schools were established and the people of those countries lived in peace where they had previously been at constant strife. Central Africa has been opened up and the savage natives of the jungles have been at least half civilized. The Mau Mau uprising in Kenya is led by half-educated natives who would never have known justice and independence existed if the British had not colonized that country. And if the British were to withdraw they would revert to the jungle.

South Africa was colonized by British and Dutch settlers and has developed from a colonial state, as did Canada and the United States, into independent nationhood. The natives of South Africa and Kenya have never been "treated like wild animals", or even regarded as "untouchable" like the lower classes of Mr. Nehru's fellow countrymen.

Army Headquarters Shifts Commanders

Canadian army headquarters has announced a shift in command involving the 27th Infantry Brigade group in Germany, and the forces of Western Ontario. Brig. W. A. B. Anderson, 38, now commander of the Western Ontario area, will take charge in Germany. Brig R. W. Moncel, 36, now army member of the joint staff at Ottawa in London, will become deputy chief of the general staff at Ottawa. The appointments become effective in autumn.

Many Dead-Letters Provide Much Work

Montreal (CP) — It costs the post office department in Montreal about $60,000 annually to correct the forgetfulness of letter writers.

That is the annual budget of the dead letter office here, and it doesn't include cost of labor involved in handling all the mail that turns up with wrong, or missing, addresses.

All unaddressed material found in mail boxes, unless it is obvious rubbish, ends up in the dead letter office, which then has the task of finding the owner.

"Worst offenders are not forgetful husbands, despite all the jibes levelled at them" says Romeo Papineau, in charge of the Montreal office.

"At least they forget to mail it and don't cause us work. It's the harried traveller and business man who bother us."

Cash in Mailbox

As an example, Mr. Papineau said that a short time ago a businessman dropped his bank book and deposits in the mail box — presumably holding on to his mail with the other hand. They were returned.

The 15 employees of the office here handle all dead letter business for Quebec, the Maritimes, and mail to Europe. There are similar offices at Toronto and Vancouver.

The office here handles an average of 600,000 pieces yearly. They are divided into three main categories: valuables (letters and parcels containing cash, cheques, documents or other valuable material); parcels; and ordinary letters.

Last year, the department returned 97 per cent of all unaddressed under the "values" division.

When mail is received at the dead letter office, it is opened before two witnesses to find the sender's address. If there, the sender is fined a special tax of three cents for not putting it on the envelope.

Unclaimed values are sent to Ottawa after a month here and held in Ottawa for an indefinite period. Ordinary letters are destroyed.

Illegal mail shipments as well as badly-packaged parcels also are the department's concern. Illegal contents, such as liquor, are sent to Ottawa to be destroyed. Badly-wrapped parcels are repacked if the contents are not ruined.
