Mayor Outlines Plans for Constructing New Town Hall Adjoining Auditorium

May Borrow Up to $100,000 for Public Works With No Resultant Increase in Taxes

In accordance with Private Bill 209 passed by the Quebec Legislature, and following lengthy study by the Town Hall construction committee (Aldermen Alcidas Laurin, Judes Charlebois, E. O. Pollock and W. Consineau), Mayor Dr. Jules Lafleur has revealed plans for Lachute's new Town Hall. Construction of an extension to the Civic Auditorium, at an estimated cost of $50,000 - $60,000, will commence this summer, if the plans are approved by Council and receive sanction in a public referendum.

The committee found that it would be less expensive to erect an addition to the front of the present Auditorium, the new structure to be used for the purposes of a Town Hall. By comparison — estimates for a completely new building ranged upwards of $120,000.

"We know for a fact that the Auditorium is in dire need of repairs, and by moving into it, we would save considerably on the upkeep of the building," Mayor Lafleur explained. By building an extension at the front of the Auditorium, construction costs would be lower, he said, since there would be only three walls to erect.

The present Auditorium will be repaired and made available to local organizations who wish to use it, as it has been in the past. Plans for improving the acoustics are in preparation, and work is slated to commence shortly. If the new building project is approved, entry to the Auditorium section will be by means of a side doorway.

The building presently housing the civic offices and council chamber (Victoria Hall) has been condemned by the provincial authorities for some several years past, and while it has been in use for some time, it does not actually fill the purpose required of it, according to the civic officials. By placing all municipal services in the proposed new building, the Council will fulfill the demands of the Quebec Public Works Department.

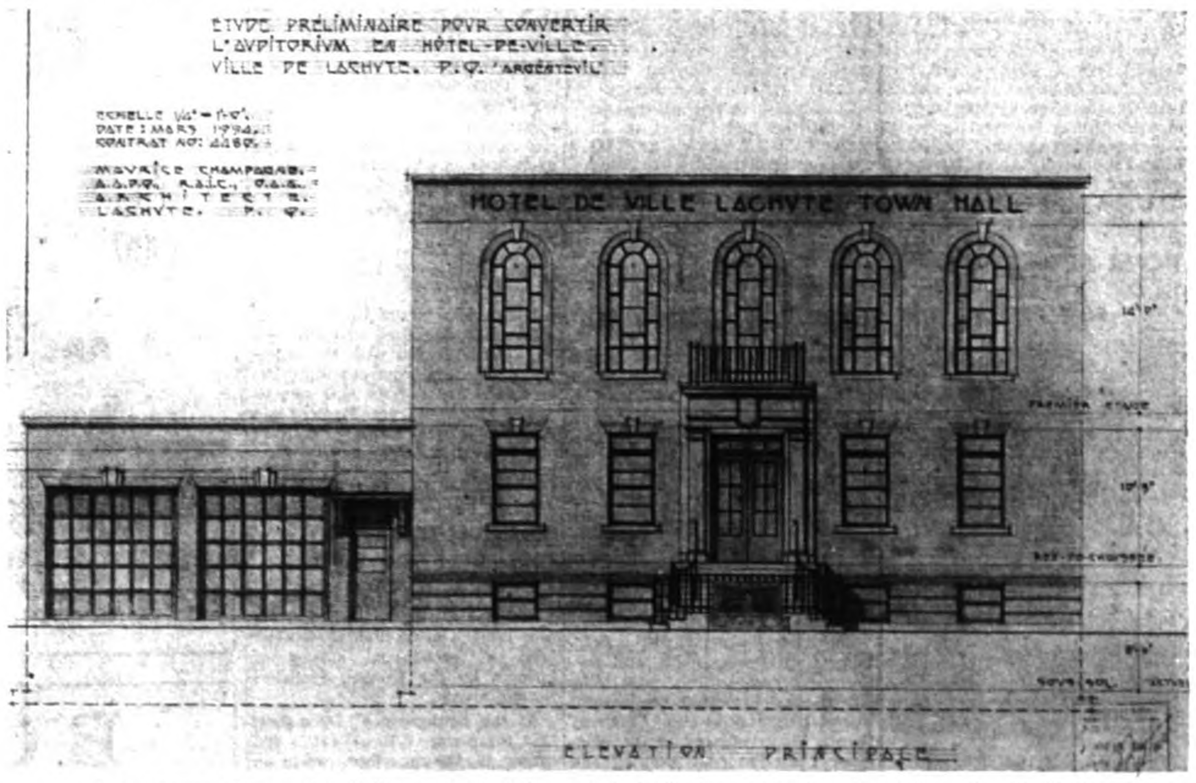

The Mayor also pointed out that although the governments were claiming there is no serious unemployment problem, there are a large number of local citizens suffering from lack of work, and many of them are on relief. "If we do build, we will be in a position to provide work for some of these citizens and at the same time, get some returns for our money which is presently going out for relief."

The new Town Hall will include offices for the secretarial staff, and ultimately will house the Fire Department, in a garage to be embodied in the new constructon, although it will not be used as such for some time. Part of the basement of the present Auditorium and the new building will accommodate the Police Department, offices for the Roads Department, and a long-needed warehouse for storage of materials.

These tentative plans for the civic building were released by Mayor Lafleur on Monday; he made it clear, however, that all the above details were in the preparatory stage, and would be discussed further at the coming Council meetings in May and June.

"The citizens may be assured that this long-needed building will not increase their taxes as the present disbursement will not be increased," stated Secretary Treasurer Antonio Laurin, who pointed out that the municipality could borrow up to $100,000 to be paid off in 20 years without increasing the present tax rate.

Citizens and taxpayers are requested to voice their opinons to the Council members, either privately or at any of the evic meetings, which are open to the public. A floor-plan of the proposed building will be made available for public consideraton as soon as the blueprints are prepared.

Proposed new civic quarters built onto front of the present Auditorium (extending forward to the World War II monument) with addition to the left for the fire hall. Front elevation of a plan prepared by Maurice Champagne, Architect — approved by the Quebec Department of Public Works and by the town authorities.

Hawkesbury Gets New Industry

Hawkesbury — The Colonial Home has purchased six acres of land from the Hawkesbury Realty Co., to build a factory in which prefabricated homes will be constructed.

Fifty men will be employed in this enterprise, and it is hoped that in the near future 150 men will be required to operate the plant.

The Mayor says that he expects that other factories will come to Hawkesbury before long.

Halifax (CP) — The fact last year's forest fire record in Nova Scotia was the best for many years gives no indication of what may happen this year, warned R. H. Burgess, provincial forest ranger. He asked Nova Scotians to be especially careful in the woods in the next few months.

Provinces Agree To Control Truck Transport

Ottawa — Transport Minister Lionel Chevrier said last week that the provinces had been asked by the Federal Government to take responsibility for controlling highway transport crossing provincial boundaries and the Canada - U.S. border. He made the statement during a three-day Federal-Provincial conference.

Provincial delegates indicated their governments would be willing to take over this responsibility. Tentative legislation, Federal or provincial, or both, will be drafted and go to the various provincial governments for study.

Three provincial premiers and 13 provincial Cabinet ministers attended the conference. At the same time, directors of the Canadian Trucking Association were meeting in Ottawa.

Gatineau Power Appoints Officer For Industry

In line with consistent efforts to serve its territory adequately, Gatineau Power Company has appointed a full-time Industrial Commissioner. The appointment was made known by Alan Brown, vice-president of the Company, conferring here Tuesday with the local manager, Rod Carreau, and with Horace Lamarche, Laurentides Chamber of Commerce administrator. The move by Gatineau Power concurs with suggestions made by the district Chambers of Commerce, and will be generally welcomed by business interests in this area.

Appointed to the position of Industrial Commissioner is Maurice Lavallee, with headquarters at Ottawa. Mr. Lavallee, an electrical engineer, may be consulted on matters of industrial promotion throughout the Gatineau Company area — not only insofar as power service is concerned, but also in the exchange of information as to sites and facilities for industrial progress in the district.

Progress on Post-Office

Steady progress on Lachute's new Post Office is in evidence. Workmen are now busy placing the polished stone blocks, which, along with the windows to be placed by next week, will form the facade of the building. There is much more work to be done before the structure is completed, but the present progress is receiving favorable comment from the kibitzing public.

Shuffle in Ayersville Council, Gaetan Paquette New Mayor, Secretary A. Brisson Resigns

Gaetan Paquette, who last week resigned as alderman on the Ayersville Council, was nominated Mayor replacing Gilbert E. Ayers, who also resigned at the regular meeting a week ago. The nomination of Mr. Paquette took place at a special meeting of Council, held under chairmanship of the pro-mayor, Douglas Bradford, on Monday evening.

Armand Brisson, who has occupied the position of secretary-treasurer since the inauguration of Ayersville as a municipality, tendered his resignation at the special meeting, giving the Ayersville authorities 30 days' notice to find a replacement.

Gaetan Paquette's nomination as Mayor was proposed by Ald. Albert Seguin, seconded by Ald. Laurent Tessier, and unanimously approved by the council. Mayor Paquette will complete the term started by Mayor Gilbert Ayers, which comes to a close January 19, 1955. Present at the meeting, the new Mayor, second appointee to the mayoral office of the municipality, was sworn in and took over his duties forthwith.

Alfred Campeau was nominated to replace Mr. Paquette as alderman. Also sworn into office at the meeting, Ald. Campeau will occupy the seat until January 1956, the term for which Ald. Paquette had been formally elected.

A committee comprising Aldermen Germain Poulin, Laurent Tessier and Alfred Campeau was formed to divide the municipality into electoral districts and to report on their progress at the next general assembly. Three proprietor-ratepayers, Messrs. W. E. Hammond, Gaston Plamondon and Philippe Desormeux, were also nominated to the committee.

Concerts Assoc'n With 527 Members Books Recitals

A few of the Community Concerts executive met Tuesday evening at the office of Dr. Marc Papineau, to take stock of their resources following a successful membership campaign, and to approve a contract with Columbia Artists Inc., New York, for a series of four recitals in the 1954-55 season.

Result of the annual campaign was considered highly gratifying — the roll closing with 527 paid memberships, including 45 student tickets.

With the finances thus subscribed, four choice and varied programs have been selected, as follows:

The Ruthanna Boris dance trio (modern ballet).

Joseph Battista, American pianist.

Jan Rubes, brilliant New Canadian bass-baritone.

The Becker four-piece instrumental ensemble.

Dates of these recitals will be duly announced.

Lions Club Visited By Popular District Deputy

Roger Regimbal, acting-president, chaired another enthusiastic session of the Lions Club Tuesday evening. With District Deputy Governor Ed McLean attending on his official visit, and a dozen members from the Lachine - Lakeshore and Montreal clubs, the total attendance was almost 60.

Bill Shields, one of the visiting Lions and chairman of the Zone Rally, had a word concerning plans for the gathering at St. Johns, Que. — which will be attended by a local delegation of 25-30 Lions this Friday, leaving the Legion Hall by chartered bus at 4.30 p.m.

Herb Graves, local chairman for the district golf tournament and car drawing, gave a boost to the ticket sales, and mentioned that Paul Hahn, trick golfer, had been booked for the two days of the tournament, July 31 - August 1, at Lakeshore.

The Deputy District Governor of Region 12, District A-8, Lions International, proved himself — despite this imposing title — a songster and a good fellow, besides a personality dominated by the spirit of service. Ed McLean paid sincere compliments to the Lachute Club, now in its 20th anniversary year, for a record which had made its imprint in Canadian and in International Lionism. Besides International Counsellor Jack Giles and Zone Chairman Horace Lamarche (both active in a wider sphere), he paid tribute to other hardworking members individually.

"The Lions Club . . is not just another service club," said the speaker. "Lions can lay claim to being the very first service club — it was the first to incorporate the word Service in its constitution. . . Today it is the largest of all service club organizations in the world, contributing something really worthwhile to the communities and countries where it is established."

A fable was cited, to illustrate how qualities of power, leadership and community spirit, dormant in many good but non-constructive citizens, were brought to action through membership in the Lions Club. . . . With this and other sidelights, the speaker presented an old theme in a new and inspiring manner.

The District Deputy Governor was introduced by Jack Giles and thanked by Phil Roy, who also presented a token to Lion McLean from the Lachute Club, in appreciation of his devoted services.

Traffic Penalties Include One Local Offender

Fines and Jail Terms Imposed at St. Jerome By Judge E. Lafontaine

The crack-down on heedless drivers continued at St. Jerome during the past week, as Judge Eugene Lafontaine sentenced five men for infractions of traffic laws.

A Lachute resident, Belmont Periard, was one of the five sentenced to two days in jail by Judge Eugene Lafontaine and fined a total $100 and costs — or 60 additional days. In addition his driving permit was cancelled for a year. Half the fine was for driving 55 miles per hour at Lachute and the rest for driving with impaired faculties. Periard was charged by Police Chief Laurent Ducharme, who transferred the case to the provincial authorities.

Judge Lafontaine also fined Roland Rivest, of Ste. Anne des Plaines, $50 and costs or 30 days for a hit-run accident at St. Jerome on March 27. His permit was suspended for six months.

Andre Constantineau, of Lac Manitou, was fined $50 and costs or 30 days for a hit-run accident on Route 8. His permit was suspended for six months.

And John W. Sharples, of Ville St. Laurent, was fined $50 or 30 days for travelling at 55 miles an hour at the intersection of Route 11 and Route 29. His permit was suspended for three months.

Alfred Bigras, of Ste. Therese, received an identical fine.

Top-Price Heifers at Sherbrooke Beef Sale Consigned from Argent'l

"Tutira Secret", a yearling Shorthorn heifer consigned by Mrs. T. C. Stuart of Arundel, brought the top price of $800 at the Quebec pure-bred beef cattle sale held at the Sherbrooke fair grounds recently. The animal was purchased by Mrs. Mary Dobell, of Magog.

The most successful sale since the inauguration of this event three years ago, the sale average for 48 head, 13 bulls and 35 females, was $348.45, just slightly below last year's average. The sale was made up of 11 Angus, 18 Herefords and 19 Shorthorns.

A Lakeside farmer paid the top price for an Angus two-year-old heifer, consigned by Dr. G. R. McCall, of Lachute. The $625 was paid for the "Pride of North River 10th." Another heifer from the McCall herd brought $600 at the sale.

Traffic Zone Sign Erected on Main Street

Drivers on Main Street are warned to "Keep to the Right" by means of a triangular traffic zone sign now erected at the west approach to the centre parking lane. The sign provides a protective zone for vehicles parked in the centre of Main Street at this section, and also acts as a traffic island for the school crossing.

Plans for the school traffic police are in progress, and it is expected the young patrolmen will be seen on duty at the school crossings shortly.

Waterworks, Sidewalks Again at B'burg Taxi Insurance By-law Is Repealed

"In Brownsburg"
(Our District Correspondent)

Off Again, On Again

We feel like the station agent who was reprimanded for sending lengthy reports about a recurring incident on his railway line, where at a particularly bad bend in the tracks the old freight train jumped the rails and was the subject of a lengthy report on the details of how the train left the rails and was put back on again. The last report of the station agent was brief and to the point. "Off again. On again. Gone again. Finnegan. . ."

While the taxi insurance situation in Brownsburg cannot be summed up in such a euphonious alliteration, Councillor Lavoie felt much this way about the cancellation of his by-law passed less than a year ago — even though Councillor Lupien's philosophy that a by-law is enacted to see if it works, and if not it is cancelled — failed to explain how the cost of such legally expensive trial and error methods can be justified. The Council's legal advisor opined the by-law was in the public interest and a sound law. Nevertheless, like Finegan's train, it is gone again.

Councillor Rose, while in favor of taxi insurance, felt that it did not meet its purpose.

A Need or A Danger

One time people set fire to their house chimneys to clean the accumulation of soot. Nowadays, a call is put in for the fire brigade — and 10 or 12 men pour gallons of water down into the rooms below — and the owner cleans up for days after and becomes a statistic in a report that reads: Three fires on April 8; no damage in two. One at C-I-L, electrical, damaged a switchboard. . . One on April 22; another chimney, no damage. . . Another on April 27, again a chimney and again no damage.

Well it's good fire prevention practice, anyway.

More Reports

Amusement tax revenue falling. Less tickets sold. There are less tickets sold at hockey and baseball games too, but all those amusements are on TV. Perhaps that's the answer to the falling revenue. Not that it costs less to the spectator.

Eight people are not seeing red. Nine park a car where it has no right to be; and six are in a very great hurry. Well, it costs money to do these things, and the Police Chief collects it.

Parking in this burg is like communistic conferences — all talk! It was back on the agenda, and will be again at a later date.

Waterworks

The question of extending the waterworks system at Maple Avenue was again discussed, and ways and means suggested of doing so and avoiding the cost or at very little cost. Surprisingly enough, it was discovered that this can't be done.

The questions at issue seem to be: How to get the project surveyed and estimates drawn up without the cost of a Civil Engineer? How to execute the project without paying a contractor? And

Eight Arrested in B'burg Fracas

Eight Brownsburg residents were arrested and charged with fighting and disturbing the peace in Brownsburg, last Saturday afternoon and evening by Brownsburg Police Chief Marcel Parent, assisted by Provincial Detective Maurice Lamoureux with Chief Laurent Ducharme and Asst. Chief W. Lepine of the Lachute force.

Six of the offenders were arrested by the officers after Chief Marcel Parent of the Brownsburg police department had asked the provincial authority for assistance, due to the number engaged in the fracas.

The six men were transferred to St. Jerome by Chief Parent and Det. Lamoureux and it is reported that, while they were away, the Lachute police received a request to go to Brownsburg and cope with another disturbance. Det. Lamoureux was summoned and returning from St. Jerome, he picked up the Lachute police. On the second trip, two other Brownsburg men were arrested on a private charge, in the absence of the Brownsburg Chief. Both were then transferred to St. Jerome.

Catholic Women's League Formed Here, First Group In St. Jerome Diocese

A new subdivision of the Catholic Women's League of Canada was organized in Lachute last Sunday. This will be known as Lachute Subdivision, with the Rev. J. Harold Conway, O.M.I., as director.

This is the first subdivision to be organized in St. Jerome diocese and the newly elected president, Miss Lydia Lowe, will represent the diocese on the Quebec Provincial C.W.L. Council.

The meeting was held Sunday in the Ste. Anastasie Parish Hall under chairmanship of Mrs. C. McGill, and was organized by Mrs. W. J. Dundin, of Montreal, the C.W.L. Quebec Provincial Organization convener. The Rev. Father Conway and Miss Mary M. Ramsay, provincial president, addressed the meeting.

Others elected were: 1st vice-president, Mrs. T. E. Dwyer; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. C. Robinson; secretary, Mrs. C. McGill; treasurer, Miss L. Harrison. Councillors, Mrs. Bernard Lowe, Mrs. Emmett Lowe.

New Distributing Centre Established Here

A manufacturer of detergents and chemical soaps for the domestic and textile trade has commenced operations in Lachute. The firm of Barson Products Ltd. is owned by Frederick A. Barnes. James Barbour, a well known resident of Lachute, is connected with the company and is the Eastern representative. Mr. Barbour was formerly connected with Ayers Limited.

The new industry, which commenced operations Tuesday morning, is located in the Ernest Laurin block on Robert Street. The detergents now manufactured by this firm are used in the washing of textiles and are shipped to the customer in cans. At present only a small personnel is concerned in this new enterprise, but it is believed that additional help will be engaged in the near future.

Montreal May Ban Children on Bicycles

Montreal (CP) — Reports at city hall last week said a by-law is under preparation which would make it illegal for children under 10 years of age to ride two-wheel bicycles in Montreal.

It was understood the law, aimed at accident prevention, would be presented at the council meeting this week.

In addition to making it illegal for bicycle permits to be issued to children under 10, the by-law would also prohibit bicycle stores from renting the machines to youngsters.

ALWAYS PLAY IT SAFE WITH ELECTRICITY

Electricity can be dangerous if handled improperly or carelessly.

Complete control of this force at all times is the way to insure safety — keeping in mind that it is not the electricity which may cause an accident, but rather the way in which it is used.

Here are a few electrical safety rules to follow:

When renewing fuses, pull the switch FIRST, always stand on dry board or other insulating material, and, if possible, replace the fuses during daylight.

Replace fuses with fuses — not coins. This latter practice might allow overload on the circuits which could cause a fire.

Use correctly-rated fuses for the wiring.

Replace frayed cords. Use permanent wiring instead of extension cords — cords hanging on nails or hooks are fire hazards.

SCARING BIRDS BY RADIO

Farmers may soon be equipping their tractors with radios to frighten birds away from their crops. Since recent press reports told of scaring starlings away from urban communities by broadcasting recordings of sounds made by frightened starlings, the Field Husbandry Division at Ottawa reports that amplified radio programs have been used on at least one farm in eastern Ontario to protect a field of grain corn from bird damage.

TREES BY THE MILLIONS

Tree seedlings for prairie farms have been moving out from the Forest Nursery Stations at Indian Head and Sutherland, Sask., at a rapid rate. During 1953 a total of 5,775,092 seedling trees were distributed. Since the establishment of these stations — Indian Head in 1901 and Sutherland in 1913 — a total of 361,809,000 trees have been distributed for planting on prairie farms.

Reforestation Plan Yields Good Profit

Woodstock, Ont. (CP) — A Blandford township farmer, 10 miles northeast of here, is proving that tree farming is a profitable and pleasurable operation.

Lawrence Mitchell, 70, owns a plot of hard maple trees that is said to be unique in Canada. And he started his reforestation program 30 years ago. Last year a report by an Ontario government economist said that land crop produced more revenue than land under forest cover.

Officials of the forestry department commented on the report. They assumed that if taken literally farmers would clear more of the lessening forest cover in the province and convert it to cropland. Foresters say the ideal forest cover is 20 per cent of the land.

But for decades Lawrence Mitchell has made it a practice to reforest some land each year. Now he is ready to reap the profits and with practically no work involved.

He owns a 300-acre farm and of this 100 acres is hardwood bush. He has one of the largest maple syrup evaporators in the area and this year tapped 2,000 trees.

Took a Chance

His most ambitious reforestation project was an eight-acre plot that had been cleared of trees. Even strawberries wouldn't thrive in the light sandy soil.

Mr. Mitchell with his "green thumb" planted hard maple saplings, one of the most difficult hardwoods to propagate, and neighbors told him he was crazy.

That was 30 years ago. This year 50 of the 5,000 trees planted in the plot produced sap and more trees will produce next year. The largest of the trees are now 40 feet tall and 13 inches in diameter.

Sap gathering is easy in the tree plantation. Saplings were planted in neat rows 15 feet apart with 15-foot spacings between the rows. A cannon ball could be shot in any direction and not hit a tree.

The trees are well branched at the top. They will yield from 25 gallons to 35 gallons of sap.

The woodlot in time will also yield firewood and saw logs along with maple syrup. For practically no work each year the plot will yield a good profit.

Good Pasture Makes Good Beef Cheaply

Ottawa — Cost of production studies indicate that pasture is cheaper to produce per acre or per pound of digestible nutrients than any other crop forage or grain. The importance of this relationship, says P. E. Sylvestre, was demonstrated in an experiment conducted by the Animal Husbandry Division, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, on the use of aftermath in the finishing of two-year-old steers.

Two lots of two-year-old steers on permanent pasture to the end of August made an average daily gain of 1.5 pounds per head. From the end of August to the middle of October, one lot remained on the same pasture and was fed five pounds of grain per head per day. The other lot was placed on aftermath with no grain. During this period, which lasted 550 days, both lots gained at the rate of 2.2 pounds a day. At marketing, both lots produced approximately 90 per cent "red" carcasses and the balance "blue".

If the permanent pasture is valued at ten cents per head per day and the grain at three cents a pound, the aftermath has a value of 25 cents per head per day. Whatever the value put on pasture and grain, it is apparent that considerable economy was realized by the use of aftermath.

With declining market prices, a lower cost of production is important for profitable beef production. The use of pasture and aftermath is one means of making greater profit with little extra labor.

Not So Many Grasshoppers

Analysis of forecasts of grasshopper conditions in the Canadian prairies for 1954, based on adult and egg surveys during 1953, show very slight likelihood of serious loss for the forthcoming season.

In Manitoba the numbers have declined for the fourth successive year; only one light infestation in an area of 78 square miles in the Red River Valley probable. In Saskatchewan the adult survey which indicated a possible light to moderate infestation in an area of 75 square miles in the Robsart district failed to suggest an outbreak of any consequence when the egg survey was completed.

Increased numbers in Alberta are probable in several locations amounting to a total area of light infestation embracing 1,700 square miles. The largest area is in a narrow zone between Taber and Walsh. As in other provinces the egg output was much below that promised in the adult surveys.

This statement is a consolidation of the surveys made in the Brandon, Saskatoon and Lethbridge Entomalogical laboratories and is in contrast to the forecast in the United States where very severe upswings in abundance are expected in many regions though not in States adjacent to Canada.

Chicken Styles Change In Marketing

Eviscerating of poultry has helped to increase the consumption of chicken, according to authorities. The ease with which the homemaker can prepare a so-called "ready-to-cook" bird makes it no chore at all to have a delicious roast chicken for dinner, compared to grandmother's time. Then the homemaker frequently not only had to pluck, draw and generally prepare the bird, but frequently had to kill it, into the bargain.

While all communities do not have sufficient quantities of eviscerated chicken to meet the demand, this condition is gradually changing. Before too many years have gone by, homemakers from coast to coast will be as unfamiliar with the "dressed" bird (one with feet and head on and undrawn) as they are now with a side of beef hanging in a butcher shop.

Rotation vs Permanence In Pasture Crops

Ottawa — An increase of 39 per cent in total production by more uniform production of pasture throughout the grazing season and forage production for late fall grazing, has been obtained at the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, by employing a rotation of pasture crops instead of depending on permanent pasture alone, says W. J. Pigden.

The production from a fertilized permanent pasture was compared to the production from another area equal in size and which received the same fertilizer treatment, but was divided into four quarters and devoted to a rotation of pasture crops. The four year rotation was handled as follows: Each year one quarter was grazed closely in the spring and then plowed and seeded to rape in June. The following year this area was seeded down to a suitable pasture mixture with a nurse crop of oats and sudan grass. Thus during the grazing season, one-quarter was devoted to rape, the second was seeded down with a nurse crop and the third and fourth quarters were in sod. The sod was grazed rotationally during the season. The rape provided pasture during August and for late fall grazing. The nurse crop on the new seeding was grazed during June and July, care being taken that it was not grazed closely enough to injure the young seedlings.

This rotation of crops has produced 39 per cent more than the fertilized permanent pasture over a thirteen year period. Part of this increased production was obtained during the dry mid-summer period when the permanent pasture was short, but the rotational pasture provided good feed.

The increased production has been found to more than pay for the extra seed, tillage, and fencing costs.

Love Conquers Insects

Love may soon be used to conquer insects. This is because they often develop resistance to standard insecticides. The new approach is based on the fact that male insects are drawn to the female by a characteristic scent of the species. If such scents could be isolated, the scientists explain, they could be used as lures to ensnare the excited males.

The problem is how to isolate and build up such scents, since they are extremely volatile. However, in the case of two insects this has recently been accomplished. From Germany comes a report that an alluring extract of the female moth of the silkworm has been prepared, and from the United States comes the news that seductive substance has been isolated from the female cockroach which drives the male love-crazy.

According to the scientists, this new approach to trapping insects has one great advantage over other techniques — it overcomes the problem of resistance. If the males should develop resistance to the scents, they would simultaneously develop immunity to the females' attraction — and stop propagating their kind.

Building Up Libya's Exports

Libya is one of the many underdeveloped countries which have enlisted the technical assistance of the United Nations to help strengthen their economic structure. The U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization has contributed with a large mission of experts in agriculture, forestry, agricultural statistics and marketing. In the above photograph, R. F. Innes of the United Kingdom, an FAO hides expert working in Libya, examines some hides which are being prepared for export. Skins like the above have increased their quality export value by 10 per cent through the work of the FAO mission.

Dr. Alfred Valdmanis, former minister of economic development in Newfoundland, has been arrested by the RCMP in New Brunswick. Newfoundland Premier Smallwood announced the arrest saying his former principal aide is accused of "extortion involving very large sums of money from various firms with whom he dealt on behalf of the government of Newfoundland."

Inspection of C.I.P. and Harrington Forest Farm

Montreal — The president and directors of the Canadian International Paper Company, directors of principal subsidiary companies, some department heads and representatives of the banking community went on a week-end tour of C.I.P. properties adjacent to Montreal. A motorcade of 10 cars set out Friday morning, first to stop at Hawkesbury, Ont., there to visit the Company's pulp mill and the laboratory of Industrial Cellulose, Ltd.

The party journeyed to the Seigniory Club Friday night, and Saturday proceeded to Gatineau Mills where they inspected the several plants operated by the Company there. They returned to the Seigniory Club Saturday evening and Sunday proceeded to the Company's Forest Farm development at Harrington. There research and practical experimentation is being carried out primarily to promote the farm wood lot harvesting idea. Other interesting and constructive ramifications of the Harrington establishment include forest and wildlife conservation.

Purpose of the tour was to bring members of the party up to date on new departures inaugurated by C.I.P. in this district in recent years.

Purina Event Held With Lachute Firm as Sponsors; Frank Ryan in Hawkesb'y

Frank Ryan of CFRA radio station was guest speaker at Hawkesbury Dairy Factory Hall recently, at a meeting sponsored by Purina Feeds — reports the Eastern Ontario Review, Vankleek Hill.

Farmers' Supply of Lachute, who has the Agency for Purina Feeds and who are co-sponsors of the "Farmers' Notebook" with Ritchie Feed and Seed of Ottawa, held this meeting for farmers in the area to explain the Purina System.

The meeting was opened by Roy Stringer, who introduced Colin McOuat to a well filled hall. Mr. McOuat explained what Farmers' Supply in Lachute were endeavoring to do to give district farmers the proper service and benefits of Purina. Films were shown of the Purina Research Farm at St. Louis, where experiments and research are carried on to improve Purina Feeds and gain knowledge of farmers' difficulties in raising stock.

Lunch was served by the ladies of the district and all who attended were well pleased with the knowledge acquired from attending the meeting. Paper hats and pencils were distributed by Purina, and Coca Cola was supplied free of charge by J. P. MacKimmie & Sons of Lachute.

Unemployment

THE LACHUTE Town Hall project — now approaching the category of Essential Works as the town grows and the needs increase — is supported by Mayor Dr. Jules Lafleur also on the grounds of providing local employment; in plain words "to get something in return for money now being spent on relief." The Mayor leaves no doubt that — despite contrary impressions from government sources — there exists an unemployment problem, as far as this town is concerned.

Whether Ottawa presents a realistic view on Canada's employment picture, only the Department of Labor can say — that department having ALL the current figures for an accurate appraisal. It is consoling at least to find the Hon. Milton Gregg, Minister of Labor, at grips with the concrete problem of seasonal slackness. This is one reality not lightly brushed aside. Here is how the Minister viewed this situation at the Canadian Manufacturers Association in Quebec last week:

"While I cannot claim that we could completely eliminate seasonal unemployment with a climate like ours, I firmly believe that we can do a great deal more than we have done in the past. It is a question largely of finding ways and means of providing greater stability of employment in our seasonal industries. This will require the co-operation of employers, unions, consumers and governments. No single agency can master the difficulties alone. It will require a series of steps, none of them very dramatic in themselves, on the part of many people.

"I don't believe that we should accept the limitations which weather and custom have imposed on us in creating seasonal unemployment. All who have shared the rewards of Canada's boundless advantages have a special responsibility in working together towards lessening this production handicap."

Mental Health Week

ONE FAMILY out of every 48 Canadian families has a member a patient in mental hospital, while only one family in 1,471 families has a member stricken with polio. Even these striking statistics do not tell the whole story, for to them must be added the thousands of mentally ill who are awaiting hospitalization and the hundreds of thousands of persons whose emotional disturbances impair their ability to work and to carry life's normal responsibilities.

Mental Health Week is observed annually — this year the official date is from May 2 to 8. Mental Health Week is being observed in thousands of communities throughout Canada and the United States to bring the plight of the mentally ill — both children and adults — to the attention of the people so they will act to provide the same kind of medical care for the mentally sick as they do for the physically sick. The slogan for the week is, appropriately, "Healthy Bodies Need Healthy Minds." No cause more closely touches the future health and happiness of Canadian families.

The Hues of Spring

SPRINGTIME hues are less spectacular than the flaming reds and golds of autumn, but many a country man with an eye for color prefers their delicate beauty.

The colors of the outdoors during the weeks of first growth have an appeal all their own, possibily because they have been so long awaited through the drabness of late winter.

As snow retreats and watercourses surge with the annual runoff, silvery gray catkins of the pussy willows burst forth. Then maple branches redden with tiny buds that will later turn to the big, green leaves of summer. Still later, as warmth returns to the earth, lime green mantles the poplars, a darker green creeps across the grain fields as wheat spears break through, and grass turns the pastures verdant.

When the farmer plows his fields for spring sowing, the black earth makes a rich contrast with the grass and shrubbery along their borders.

Oddly, the sky itself somehow seems to take on coloring in harmony with the spring scene. It is pale blue and the clouds that ride high in it are thin and ragged. Still weeks away is that midsummer lull when huge, bulgy white clouds nudge their way lazily across a sea of deepest blue.

Always thrilling to the farm boy with his chores is the spring sunrise. The burst of light and color heightens his excitement over the vigor of the new growth all around him and the changing sights that each new day brings.

For a few brief weeks, the woods take on a special beauty as the wild flowers peep forth. Before the blossoms fade, the bracken and the undergrowth take over with their sweet-scented greenery.

Much of the springtime coloring is too elusive for anyone but the most skilful photographer or artist to capture. All too soon, the shades deepen into the maturer tones of summer. However, all through the rest of the year, anyone who has watched the countryside stir into new life will cherish the memory of the changing hues of spring.

Self Help

CANADA will be the scene this summer of what may be one of the most important international events in the history of social work. The Seventh International Conference of Social Work, to be held in Toronto June 27 to July 2, will draw some 2,500 delegates from 50-odd countries to re-examine social welfare in a new light — the light of "Self Help".

In spite of the Lady Bountifuls and the Big Benefactors whose idea of social work is to scatter largesse to a grateful, humble, shuffling, forelock-tugging populace only to have it to do all over again — and again and again from time to time — in spite of these, "Self Help" has always been the keystone of the most effective social welfare programs. If "Social Welfare" has gotten itself a bad name in odd corners of the free world, it is because the "Self Help" idea hasn't shared in the limelight with the "Lady Bountiful" sort of thing. This summer the limelight will be aimed where it ought to be aimed; for many who have been accustomed to think of social welfare in terms of largesse and benevolent bureaucracies, the new emphasis may mean a redefinition of social welfare and perhaps a discarding of time-honored but fruitless techniques. If so, the Conference will have momentous meaning for the world and Canadians will have reason to take pride in having been hosts to the event.

The ineffectiveness of the old traditional approach to social welfare is demonstrable by simple arithmetic. This approach begins with the question: "What needs to be done to help X people? Or X community?" Then, having determined that X people need money or medicine or detective books or goats or galoshes, it proceeds to the solution: "I, the Benefactor, shall now hand it to them on a silver platter." X people, in this arrangement, are merely passive recipients. In due time they use up the money or medicine or books or goats or galoshes that were given them, and once again they are dependent upon the benevolence of the Great Benefactor. This sort of thing gets votes but it is not social welfare.

The "Self-Help" approach begins with the same question: "What needs to be done to help X people?" But it proceeds to another question: "How can I help X people solve their own problems?" Frequently the solution is in education, as ignorance is the root of most social problems; sometimes the solution is a simple reorganization of a social structure; sometimes it involves material aid — money, for example — but in every case X people are active — not passive recipients — with the responsibility of making the most of their own resources to solve their own problems.

The International Conference of Social Workers is independent, non-governmental, non-political and non-sectarian. Its membership includes both voluntary and governmental representatives. In other words anyone whose interests have to do with the social problems of human beings can find a place in the Conference, and can contribute as well as gain ideas and techniques.

Millionaire Writers

Do you remember when the first ball-point pens hit the market?

As I recall it, these new inventions burst upon the sleepy world about the time that Hiroshima and Nagasaki passed into oblivion with the dropping of the first A-bombs. Riding on the crest of a carefully planned advertising campaign, and selling for an astronomical $15-plus, the ball-points went like hot-cakes.

P. T. Barnum once said: "There's a sucker born every minute." The Righto ball-point pen (the true name you most probably remember) the first to appear on the market — proved that not only is there a sucker born every minute, but there are millions of them kicking around today who were born long years ago. Certainly, the Righto hucksters came up with the biggest piece of sucker bait in the history of advertising. And the suckers swallowed it, hook, line and sinker.

"Nobody", the ad-men screamed, "can afford to be without a Righto ball-point pen, because Righto is the only pen THAT WRITES UNDER WATER." The world couldn't believe it. Righto pens became the talk of the nation. "Imagine", sane men would seriously tell their neighbors, "the pens really do write under water."

And the friends, poor or rich, would sink $15 or more into a ball-point, and hurry home to test its submarine abilities in their bathtubs. The whole world submerged itself full fathoms five, and Righto cleaned up a tidy fortune in the space of a few months. There was only one fly in the ointment. Nobody had remembered to invent a paper sufficiently strong to stand the shock of being written on under water. But, evidently, that didn't matter to John Q. Public.

When the Righto patents ran out — if there every were any — the success of ball-point pens was assured. For some bizarre reason, people liked them. They became so firmly entrenched in the pockets of reasonable people that even staid old bankers consigned their quills to the trash can and endorsed them. Simultaneously, every pen manufacturer in creation started producing them.

The price plummeted earthward from $15-plus to a mere $2 or $3. Today, you can get a ball-point of uncertain ancestry for as little as 29 cents on bargain day. If you have executive tendencies, or feel you must keep up with the Joneses, you can get a de-luxe model for $2, with refills at only 50 cents each.

Yes, ball-points, so it seems, are here to stay. But I wonder why? Personally, I can't afford to own one.

Did you ever figure out just how much it costs you to operate a ball-point for a year? Well, let's suppose you are the owner of a de-luxe model at $2, and let's suppose, also, that you're a prolific writer. A refill will last you for two weeks at the outside. So, the original cost is $2, plus 50 cents for refills every two weeks. That, my friends, adds up to the impressive figure of $14.50 per annum.

I have an old fountain pen I bought some years ago for a paltry $3.50. In that time, it's used about four bottles of ink at 25 cents per bottle. Total cost of operation for at least four years has been $4.50 Had I used a ball-point pen for the same length of time, I'd be out of pocket to the tune of $58.

For $58, you should be able to buy the best gold-plated pen on the market. Think that over next time you're tempted to buy a ball-point pen — whether it writes under water or not.

ALL ABOARD
With G. E. Mortimore

Quite early in the morning there was a knock, and I opened the door to find two five-year-old boys carrying home-made flags on long poles.

"We're from the Canadian - U.S. Mounted," they announced.

"Fast work, boys," I said. "I only filed my tax return yesterday."

They glowered at me, with their flagpoles tilted at a menacing agle. The flags were made from chunks of discarded curtain.

"It's a fair pinch," I said. "I knew right along that those medical expenses were non-deductible. They only came to three per cent. But some evil impulse made me put them down."

"I got a knife," one of the arresting officers announced.

"Yes, I realize you boys of the Canadian - U.S. Mounted have to be heavily armed for this work," I said.

They advanced a step toward me, placing my eyes in danger of being gouged by their flagpoles.

"It all started back in my childhood, officer," I said. "My mother never taught me the difference between net and taxable income. I blame her for this."

They clattered into the house. One of them swung a short chunk of lead pipe, as though to indicate that there had been enough talk, and the time for action had arrived.

"One question, before you take me away," I pleaded. I know the Canadian - U.S. Mounted is a fine force. But where are your horses?"

"We got a covered wagon with two hundred thousand horses pulling it," one of them said. "And we're going to put you inside."

"Oh no, you're not, copper," I snarled, dodging behind a chair and loosing a shot from an imaginary pistol. "I changed my mind."

They ran out the door, firing from the hip as they left. "We'll be back with Barry and Wesley, and surround the house," they threatened. "And we'll collect your himcome tax."

"I'll be in Mexico by then," I said. "Don't bother sending me a T1 (short) down there, either, because I won't fill it in."

ENJOYS COLLECTING ISLANDS

St. John's, Nfld. — There is a resident of New York City whose hobby is collecting islands, according to T. J. Dalton, district passenger agent for the C.N.R. at St. John's. Recently the New York resident wrote the Newfoundland Bureau asking for information on any islands there might be for sale in Canada's newest province. He has, apparently, been buying islands in various countries and now would like to acquire an island in this seagirt province.

Healthy Bodies Need Healthy Minds

For Mental Health Week (May 2 to 8) this year's theme, "Healthy Bodies Need Healthy Minds", stresses the important principle that being healthy means being mentally healthy as well as physically healthy. Children who may score a perfect mark in all the characteristics of physical health are not really healthy unless they also enjoy good mental and emotional adjustment. Undue aggressiveness, destructiveness, anti-social tendencies, fearfulness, unusual shyness, and other characteristics of poor mental health in children need to be given as much attention as malnutrition, poor vision, dental deficiencies and other faults in bodily structure or development.

Science has achieved miracles in improving our physical health through the development of preventive measures and through the discovery of miracle drugs to fight disease. And now science is turning its attention to the prevention of the mental disorders, and to more effective treatment of these disorders.

Advances have already been made by the Province of Quebec's Department of Health, the Dominion - Provincial Mental Health grants and through the work of privately supported organizations. Much more will be done as the public recognizes the importance of vigorously tackling Canada's number one health problem.

OUT WEST

All our prosperous friends are away in the U.S. having a dull vacation. That leaves the poor people at home to enjoy life. Give us Saskatchewan with her people busily planning the coming birth of spring. It's a land of perpetual hope . . a country full of ambition and plans. That's why we love Saskatchewan.

— North Battleford (Sask.) News-Optimist

The Prairie provinces are handicapped from an economic standpoint by the high cost of transportation. The region is land-locked and must depend on rail transportation for most of its production and wants. The people of the west are extremely sensitive to increased costs of transportation.

MORBIDITY

Not a very nice-sounding word — and worse-sounding when it arrives to visit you!

Mortality is bad. When an animal or poultry dies, you see your loss and bury it, but when Morbidity hits — well it doesn't look quite the same but it hits your pocket-book just as hard! When your animals are sick, diseased, unthrifty or not eating as they should, you have Morbidity that can cost you more than Mortality.

That is why the Purina Program with its four points or squares, has CAREFUL SANITATION on one of them. You can have Good Breeding, Sound Management and Good Feeding, but if you don't have CAREFUL SANITATION you just won't get the results from the first three points or squares.

Grants to Hospitals and Universities, in Anticipation Que. Income Tax Proceeds

$10-Million to Hospitals $6-Million to Education

By Peter Buckley
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Quebec, May 4 (CP) — Educational institutions and hospitals will receive $16,000,000 in provincial government grants. Premier Duplessis said the grants will be the first to be made with funds anticipated from the new Provincial Income Tax, and the biggest share of them will go to hospitals.

These will get $10,000,000 in the form of increased grants to public charities. It will be used for the most part to cover hospital costs of poor patients. The increases will vary from $54 to $60 monthly per patient, including those in sanatoria, convalescent homes and orphanages.

Mr. Duplessis told his weekly press conference the grants will bring the total of contributions to hospitals to about $50,000,000 annually, compared with $7,770,000 in 1945.

Laval University will get half of the $6,000,000 grants to education announced by Mr. Duplessis. It will receive two $500,000 grants for last year's and this year's school terms. In addition, there will be a straight $2,000,000 for a new school of medicine, scheduled to be part of a University centre now being built.

The other $3,000,000 for education will be divided among universities, colleges and other institutions of higher learning through the province. Details of the distribution will be announced later, Mr. Duplessis said.

The Premier said the government grants are being financed out of ordinary revenue in anticipation of revenues of the tax on personal income, as provided for in the Income Tax Act. The money will be repaid into consolidated revenue when income tax returns, expected to net about $22,000,000, are completed next April. The provincial tax is equal to about 15 per cent of the Federal Income Tax.

Mr. Duplessis said the grants to universities will be more than double the total that would have been received from Federal Government if the latter had been accepted. They were turned down in 1952 by Mr. Duplessis on the grounds they were an encroachment on provincial rights in the field of education.

Brownsburg RCAF Man Married at Stanstead

Mott — Munroe

Stanstead — Spring flowers and potted primroses formed the decorations for a pretty Easter wedding in Stanstead South United Church, Rock Island, on Saturday, April 17, at 2.30 o'clock, when Carolyn Joyce Munroe, eldest daughter of Mrs. Harold Planche, of Sherbrooke, and of the late Mr. Charles Munroe, of Beebe, became the bride of LAC Clarence Gordon Mott, son of Mrs. Leon Woodward, of Rock Island, and Mr. William Mott, of Brownsburg, Que. The Rev. E. Geoffrey Tenneson, of Stanstead South Church, officiated at the nuptial service and the Rev. T. D. F. Everett, of Trinity Church, Sherbrooke, performed the double ring ceremony. The wedding music was played by Miss Cynthia Gordon, and white satin bows marked the guest pews.

The bride, given away by her step-father, Mr. Planche, was attended by Miss Doreen Munroe, sister of the bride, as maid of honor, with Miss Roberta Mott, sister of the groom, and Miss Lois Hartson as bridesmaids. LAC Louis Darling acted as best man and the ushers were AC-1 W. A. Peacock and Mr. James Webb, Jr., cousins of the bride.

The bride wore the traditional gown of white satin, tulle and rose point lace, designed with a double skirt of tulle over satin, featuring a peplum of tulle edged with lace. The fitted bodice of lace over satin was fashioned with a nylon sheer yoke edged with tiny pearl beads and lace flowers centred with rhinestones and long sleeves ending in points over the hands. Her fingertip veil of embroidered tulle was held in place by a coronet of seed pearls and she carried an arm bouquet of red roses and white carnations. Her only ornament was a strand of pearls.

Her maid of honor was in a ballerina-length gown of petal pink, fashioned with a overskirt of accordion pleated tulle, having a lace bodice, topped with a long-sleeved lace jacket fastening up the front.

The bridesmaids wore gowns styled similarly to that of the maid of honor, of ice blue lace and tulle. Their headdresses were bandeaux of accordion pleated tulle and they carried colonial bouquets of rose pink carnations centred with yellow roses.

Mrs. Planche, mother of the bride, was in a frock of iridescent blue taffeta, with which she wore a pink straw hat and accessories with a corsage of pink roses.

Mrs. Woodward, mother of the groom, was in a navy blue suit and wore a pink straw hat and accessories with a corsage of pink roses.

The reception for upwards of 300 guests was held in the I.O.O.F. hall, West Park. The bride's table covered with a white linen cloth, was centred with a three-tier wedding cake.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Mott left on their wedding trip to Montreal and other points in Quebec. For travelling the bride wore a frock of navy blue linen, topped with blue and white accessories, a blue wool coat and a corsage of Talisman roses.

Following his furlough LAC Mott will return to his base at Debert, N.S. and Mrs. Mott will reside in Sherbrooke.

Among the out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. William Mott, of Brownsburg.

At Brownsburg Council

after solving those two problems, how to make it pay its way without sufficient revenue being extracted from the consumers? It's nice going if you can do it. It took about an hour's discussion to find out that it's a tough proposition.

Sidewalks

Another repetitious subject at council deliberations was given an airing when a resident asked direction on erecting a fence where the sidewalk did not meet the property line. Councillor Rose felt that the property line should be used, as a close-to-the-sidewalk fence necessarily narrows the elbow room of the pedestrian. The other members were in agreement. The question was also considered of having fences erected where a hazard exists to passing pedestrians. Some doubt was expressed as to how the cost should be borne. Section 5, Article 395, of the Municipal Code is quite clear on this matter and reads: "Every local corporation may make, amend or repeal by-laws — 1. To order that fences be made along municipal roads, at the places where the council deems expedient. . . "

Why St. Jerome

There was a small fracas at a local hotel on Saturday, which had an echo at the Council meeting. Mayor Jas. Donaldson reported he had called the Police Chief to preserve peace when he saw the disturbance pouring onto the public street. The Police Chief had no sooner arrived than both Provincial and Lachute police arrived on the scene. The incident had quieted down at the time and would have blown over, but for the fact that several arrests were made and six or seven men hauled to St. Jerome. There is a local ordinance that minor incidents be dealt with by the local J.P. either at Brownsburg or Lachute, and there was no need for taking such high-handed action as taking a number of prisoners to St. Jerome. It was a minor affair and higher court action involves the Council in needless costs. The Mayor had spoken to the police chief on this matter and hoped it would not be repeated. The action was rash. Other members of the Council expressed agreement with the Mayor and commended his action. The affair was not of sufficient gravity to take to court at St. Jerome, Councillor Rose commented.

Some other matters were discussed, which we shall deal with next week — particularly the question of a dump-site or incinerator, to consider which a committee of the whole was formed to meet next week.

Municipal Election

Three councillors vacate office this month and will have their places filled by nomination on May 12, from 10 o'clock till noon. Any two electors can nominate candidates for the vacant offices. Electors need not be property holders. Any candidate nominated may withdraw at any time after his nomination and before the closing of the poll, by filing such intention with the presiding officer.

Voting will take place from nine o'clock in the morning until seven in the evening, on Monday, May 17. The retiring councillors are S. E. Rose, Ernest Lavoie and Rene Lafleur.

Bible Briefs

Who Was This?

By A.A.M.

The Bible is rich in stories, and the purpose of this series is to encourage readers to look up for themselves the Bible versions of these incidents. If there are children in the family it is suggested that the story, and the Bible verses on which it is based, be read aloud.

Do you know the name of the woman who caused the death of John the Baptist? The prophet had told King Herod that it was wrong for him to live with this woman who was not his lawful wife, but his brother Philip's wife. Herod wanted to kill John for this fearless condemnation. But the king was afraid to do so because John had many followers. They had gone out to the wilderness and had heard him preach. He had commanded them to repent of their sins and do good instead of evil.

But on Herod's birthday, he had a great feast and the daughter of this woman, who had John the Baptist put to death, danced before the guests. The young dancer pleased Herod so much that he rashly promised, with an oath, to give her anything she wanted. Prompted by her mother, the girl answered "Give me the head of John the Baptist, here on a platter."

Herod was sorry when he heard her request. But he could not "lose face" before his guests. So he ordered John to be beheaded in prison and his head was brought to the girl's mother. John's disciples buried his body and went and told Jesus. When Jesus heard this sad news he took a boat and went away by himself. Who was this vengeful woman? Read this story for yourself or read it aloud to your family in the fourteenth chapter of Matthew.

God's Promise NOW in Fulfilment Is

am creating new heavens, and a new earth." — Isaiah 65: 17, Young.

What do these words mean? The burning up of this earth on which we live? No, not that, for God created this earth for man's eternal home. In the book "New Heavens and a New Earth" read about God's promise now in fulfilment and of the new world of righteousness he is creating. In beautiful blue binding, 384 pages, only 50 cents. — Write 40 Irwin Avenue, Toronto, Ont.

St. Simeon's Teams Win Championship Cup In Church Bowling

The annual inter-church silver cup play for carpet bowling honors, was held in the United Church hall on Monday evening, with teams from St. Simeon's Anglican Church, the Margaret Rodger Memorial Presbyterian Church and the United Church entering the contest.

There were about 80 persons present, and the bowling was of good calibre as two teams from each church battled for the cup.

In the first games the scores ended as follows:

Anglicans 12, Presbyterians 12
United 12, Presbyterians 5
Anglicans 12, United 7

The second games started with the Anglicans in the lead by 5 points over the defending United cup-holders, and interest was keen throughout. The final scores for this round were:

Anglicans 15, Presbyterians 3
United 10, Presbyterians 6
United 11, Anglicans 7

Total scores were — Anglicans 46, United 40, Presbyterians 28, the cup going to St. Simeon's Church.

Ladies of the United Church league served refreshments following the games. The president, Merlyn Evans, congratulated the winners, and called upon Mrs. Wilson Bridge to present the cup. Wyman Strong, president of the winning teams, acknowledged the honors; he expressed appreciation on behalf of his teams for the pleasant evening, and also thanked the ladies for the refreshments. Mrs. Raymond Underhill, of the Presbyterian teams, also congratulated the winners, and added her thanks to the refreshments committee of the United Church.

GRENV'L HIGH SCHOOL NEWS AND ACTIVITIES

By Willis Young

The pupils returned to school last week somewhat refreshed from their welcome Easter break. It is hoped that the forthcoming term will be occupied with diligent work, and that the June finals, looming ahead, will not prove too formidable.

Prizes for the public speaking contest, held at the school here, were distributed last Monday morning. It is hoped that these gifts, which are to encourage oratory among our students, will not go astray in their purpose.

Much preparation is taking place for the coming graduation banquet, exercises and dance. With the committee elected, the invitations sent, and many of the other details attended to, we are hoping this first graduation event will prove an inspiration to all classes in the years to come.

Language of Fishermen In Polite Society

Just in case there are some readers who have never gone fishing, and are therefore unable to understand the lingo of the fishing fraternity, the following daffy definitions are offered. The definitions given here are used only in polite society, definitions actually used by fishermen on streams or lakes are scarcely suitable for publication. Here they are:

FISHING — A disease that formerly infected savages, small boys and village ne'er-do-wells, but now attacks presidents, judges, ministers, doctors and ten million others.

FISHING CAMP — A place to play poker; eat half-cooked food, fight insects — happy parties having been spoiled by erratic individuals who insisted on fishing. Favorite camp motto is: "Fish and visitors smell after two days."

BAIT — A secret word of the fishing fraternity for a beverage carried on the hip. It will remove varnish, counteract heat, cold, snake-bite, bad luck and "that tired feeling."

GUIDE — A conservationist in disguise. He takes you fishing "Where they ain't" and encourages you to come again next week, when the water is lower, or higher, or clearer, or wetter.

WORMS — Greatly scorned in writings and in public, but used widely and secretly by trout fishermen.

PLUGS — Imitations of dill-pickle, bugs, birds and animals, and primarily designed to fool the fisherman and lure a dollar bill from his pocket. However, authentic records exist of many prize fish being taken on these lures.

ROD — A sporty name for a fish pole costing over $5. Rods are sold by weight — the lighter the rod, the heavier the price. Like knights of old who splintered their lances, fishermen strive to have a fish break their rod — an event of great distinction.

REEL — A coffee-mill invented by Satan, and designed to snarl up at critical times, thereby inducing profuse profanity.

FISH LINE — An expensive piece of string. It snarls, gets snagged and is guaranteed to break at the right time, thereby creating an alibi for the whopper that always gets away.

WHOPPER — a term used to describe the fish which get away. Associated words are "whale", "Junker", "sockdolager".

CREEL — The distintive item of a trout fishermen's uniform. A fragile wicker basket in which to hide a worm can, carry a fly book, lunch, etc. Occasionally used to hold small trout.

WADERS — An effective means of carrying water from a stream to a convenient log. Guaranteed to keep the feet hot in summer and freezing in cold weather. "Waders" hold more water than boots and are preferred in putting out camp fires.

FLIES — A feathery imitation of nothing ever seen, with very fanciful names, and the favorite food of house moths. Flies are principally used to decorate fishermen's hats and bushes along the stream.

BOAT — A leaky tub with a tomato can for bailing, and a pair of mis-mated oars. Antique boats command a high rental.

During 1953 8,378 men were added to the strength of Canada's armed forces.

Rare and Genuine -- A Voice from the Wrestling Fraternity

SPORTS CAMERA

By Gerry Lougheed,
Canadian Press Staff Writer

If you're one of the multitude who think modern professional wrestlers are a bunch of actors, don't voice that opinion near Verne Gagne, newest favorite of television wrestling fans.

Gagne, an unbeaten 27-year-old former Minnesota football player, wears a jewel-studded belt proclaiming him "heavyweight champion of the United States." His blood starts to simmer when people start knocking the grunt-and-groan game as 10 per cent wrestling and 90 per cent showmanship.

"That one really gets me," says the muscular bone twister whose style of old-time wrestling brings him about $100,000 a year.

"I played four years of college football and I played professionally for several years and went to the 1948 Olympics.

They Really Hurt

"And let me tell you, I've undergone more damage in four years of pro wrestling than I did in all the years doing other things."

Gagne has had four teeth knocked out while battling for pay. His nose has been broken twice. He has had three ribs cracked and an elbow bone chipped so badly that he can scarcely raise his right arm. "You call that faking?"

Verne thinks the fans today want no funny stuff. "No Gorgeous Georges or English Lords. . . They want straight wrestling," he maintains. "That's why I think we're returning to the days of George Londos or Strangler Lewis — with more relaxed rules, of course, but better wrestling.

"Do I have any gimmicks? I have a pair of trunks and a pair of shoes, that's all. And a pretty good leglock."

Another fellow who sticks to "straight" wrestling and can also testify to the game's hard knocks is popular Billy Watson of Toronto. He's been in hospital for the last six weeks with a neck injury he suffered five years ago in a bout.

For three months before he entered hospital he was bothered with terrific pain in his head and arms. A doctor found that during the Whipper's five years of wrestling after the original injury the discs between the neck vertebrae had been pressed down.

"The neck muscles were holding the bones so tightly that the discs were squeezed out of place," said his doctor.

Treatment with a halter-like piece of harness relaxed the muscles and the neck now is straightened out. The harness, applied over Watson's head six times a day, was "the worst hold I ever had put on me," the Whipper quipped.

"But now I have no pain for the first time in months. I should have four or five good wrestling years left."

Twelve terns, captured on Bird Key, one of the Tortugas Islands off Florida, were banded, taken to points near Galveston, Texas, and released. Five of the 12 returned to Bird Key, a flight of 800 miles, says the current Reader's Digest. Of five others, taken to Cape Hatteras — more than 1000 miles away — two were back in Bird Key within five days.

An exchange says that nowadays curlers don't mind how bad your English is as long as your Scotch is good.

CURRENT SHOWS AND ENTERTAINMENT

Morocco TV Requests Canadian Scenic Film

New York — The fame of the outstanding Canadian CNR motion picture, "Canadian Heritage" — a picture of the Canadian people, their accomplishments and ambitions — has spread to North Africa. This picture, shown over scores of U.S. television stations, is now being sought for telecasting in French Morocco.

Television came to French Morocco a month ago and already there are 3,000 sets in use.

In asking for a print of "Canadian Heritage", Paul-André Falcoz, motion picture editor of Telepictures of Morocco, said they would like to show the picture in its entirety and a combination of French and Arabic narration would be added to the sound track.

TO JUDGE CANADIAN DRAMA FESTIVAL

London — Hugh Hunt, formerly Director of the Old Vic Theatre Company, is to judge the finals of the Dominion Drama Festival, to be held in Hamilton, Ont., from May 10-15. He is the younger brother of Sir John Hunt, the leader of the Everest expedition. A one-time president of the Oxford University Dramatic Society, he has also been producer of the Abbey Theatre, Dublin, and of the Old Vic's Bristol and London companies.

Cue For Fun

Songstress Joyce Hahn plays buffer to the ideas being culled by Bill Bankier (left) and Frank Heron (right) from current literature in a vain attempt to prevent the inevitable explosion of wit, mirth, and zany antics when the two comics get together every Tuesday evening on the CBC Trans-Canada network for their show, "Cue for Fun". In support of Bankier, Heron and the charming Miss Hahn are tenor Fred Hill, the Bob Hahn Vocal Quintet, and Art Morrow who conducts his 18-piece orchestra. The show, which features a guest artist every week, is broadcast before an audience in the Westhill High School Auditorium in Montreal.

British Cup Final On TV Saturday

Films of the English Cup Final are being rushed to Canada and will be shown on Canadian TV stations this coming Saturday, May 8. TV Stations in Toronto, Ottawa, Montreal, Kitchener and London will show the films from 9.30 p.m. to 11 p.m.

The English Cup Final is England's game of the year, comparable to Canada's Grey Cup Game, with all the attendant ballyhoo and publicity.

This sudden-death game for the soccer championship of England was played at London's Wembley Stadium on May 1 before 100,000 screaming fans. Wembley Stadium will seat only 25,000 with 75,000 standees. The result — heard by radio sport-fans here last Sunday — was 3-2 in favor of the West Bromwich team.

West Bromwich Albion and Preston North End were the gest of 500 English soccer teams who met in sudden-death competition for the right to play in the Cup Final.

CANADIAN ACTOR IN COMMONWEALTH PAGEANT

London — The Canadian actor, Robert Beatty, was one of many stars who took part in a Pageant of the Commonwealth staged at the Albert Hall, London, on April 23. Robert Beatty took the part of the Canadian in a scene in which he discussed with an emigrant the advantages of life in Canada.

LITERARY ANGLE

Avonlea, Sask. (CP) — This village 50 miles southeast of Regina was named in honor of the book "Anne of Avonlea", according to a clipping from an early issue of the Rouleau Enterprise. The author, L. M. Montgomery, is said to have had relatives in the district.

CELTIC BALLET TO TOUR CANADA

London — Canada and the U.S. will see an unusual type of Scottish dancing when the Celtic Ballet tours the North American continent this summer. "Our ballet dancing is not the pure classical type", says Celtic Ballet's principal dancer, 24-year-old Bruce McLure of Glasgow. "It is a flowing style which includes both classical and modern movements. We even jive in some numbers."

Stage Manager: "How did the comedian's jokes get across?"

Prompter: "On the Mayflower, I imagine."

The Experiences of A Nurse in the North

A nurse who has spent 10 years in Canada's northland will tell of her experiences there in a series of four talks on "Trans-Canada Matinee," beginning on Monday, May 10. The nurse is Wilma Raynor, for the last two years field nurse at the Rossville Health Centre in Norway House, nearly 300 miles north of Winnipeg.

Trained during the 1930's in Winnipeg's Victoria Hospital, Miss Raynor specialized for 10 years in obstetrics and tuberculosis in Montreal and Ottawa. When she returned to Winnipeg in 1944 a friend suggested that her training would be useful in Manitoba's northland, so she became a "nurse in the north" with the Department of National Health and Welfare's Indian Health Services. Since then she has worked in many isolated communities, travelling up to Churchill and into the barrenlands.

In her four talks on "Trans-Canada Matinee" she will recall her experiences of the last decade. Her opening talk will be about her first station at Gypsumville, Manitoba, where she made friends with the Indians and became known as "Long Nurse"; in the second program on May 17 she will describe some of her first patients; a typhoid epidemic will be the subject of her third broadcast on May 24, and in her last program on May 31 she will reveal what it is like nowadays to be "a nurse in the north".

Over the Years with THE LACHUTE WATCHMAN

75 YEARS AGO

May 9, 1879 —

The man who was so drunk last week that he wanted to kill his wife, was quieted down by being put into the river. This is a good remedy when wisely administered, as it was in this case.

It is said the school boys of Lachute are the most profane lot to be found in any Canadian village. Strangers and pedestrians are shocked at the obscene language used by some of them.

We are pleased to learn that several thousand dollars additional capital have just been placed in the Lachute Woollenware factory.

Mr. F. C. Ireland has sold, during the two years past, $5,275 worth of village lots and mill privileges in the West End, and sales are being effected almost every day.

50 YEARS AGO

May 6, 1904 —

Citizens will be pleased to learn that the C.P.R. have at last granted the request of many petitioners and will put on a local train in the near future.

Calumet — A sad accident occurred here at 5.30 p.m. on Monday last, a short distance west of the C.P.R. station, when James Miller, 22, a lineman in the employ of Messrs. T. Ross and Sons, lost his life by coming into contact with a live electrical wire while replacing a defective insulator.

Calumet — About 75 river hands left here on Monday for the headwaters of the River Rouge, to drive for different lumber companies in that area.

Cushing — The section hands are out on the C. and G.R. getting the track into shape for the coming season. The "Ottawa", one of the two celebrated old engines of this road, appeared up the line last week in all the glory of a new coat of paint.

25 YEARS AGO

May 10, 1929 —

Mr. Jas. W. Gall, as secretary representing the Parish Council, again lodged a protest to Lachute Town Council as to the disgraceful condition of the town dump, and urged action on the part of the Council to have same remedied. Mr. Gall stated that the Parish would take proceedings if same is not attended to, but the Council, recognizing the need, promised to effect a remedy.

Cushing — A fire of somewhat mysterious origin started in the grass on the Sandy Ridge last Monday, and consumed a convenient and valuable barn, the property of Mr. L. C. Wade.

Britain's Bells Will Ring for Queen

London — Bellringers throughout Britain are making plans to welcome the Queen with "merry noise" when she returns on May 15. Britain has about 40,000 voluntary bell ringers, men and women. A relay system seems likely to ensure that ringing of bells will be continuous across many parts of England for hours after the Queen's approach. In the City of London, for instance, the leader of the bell ringers at St. Michael's Church, intends to assemble a team of 10 or more who will go the rounds of St. Michael's, St. Botolph Without in Aldgate, St. Botolph's of Bishopgate, St. Olave's in Hart Street and St. Batholemew the Great of Smithfield, ringing for half an hour at each in turn.

IRISH GUARDS BAND TO VISIT CANADA

London — The Regimental Band of the Irish Guards will travel to Canada this summer to play at the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto. This will be the band's first trip to Canada since 1934. Directed by Captain C. H. Jaegar, the band consists of 60 musicians. Colonel of the Irish Guards is Field Marshal Lord Alexander of Tunis.

FREAK RABBIT

Oak River, Man. (CP) — Frank Hayhurst shot a bush rabbit whose body was encased in a tin can. He believed the rabbit must have been caught in the can — open at both ends — when it was young.

COLLEGE PIONEER

Antigonish, N.S. (CP) — Miss Rebecca MacLean, first woman to join the staff of St. Francis Xavier University, retired after 35 years' service. She was presented with a set of matched luggage at a dinner attended by faculty and staff members.

Hot-House Produce Makes Spring Salads Interesting

As you look at the number of hot house vegetables that are in the stores just now, you are likely to think of them as a fairly recent development. Actually this forcing of fruits and vegetables is a very old art. The home economists of the Consumer Section at Ottawa have been doing a little research and they tell us that the old Romans made sure they would always have fresh fruits and vegetables for their fabulous banquets, by either speeding up or slowing down their growth. Some historians even claim that the Romans had peach and grape houses, which were warmed by hot water in bronze pipes! Unfortunately, horticulture was neglected after the fall of the Roman Empire and interest was not revived until several centuries later, when the monks cultivated large gardens in the monasteries throughout Europe. These gardens were developed to such an advanced degree in the Low Countries that they exported vegeables to England. During Tudor times, it was not at all uncommon for royalty to send a courier to Holland for a salad! However, English gardeners soon developed their tries that they exported vegetables so that at the beginning of the 18th century, an English writer recorded that gardens near Westminster exceeded, "all other gardens in Europe, for whole produce and variety of herbs and they abound in early cucumbers, cauliflowers, and winter asparagus." Later, settlers coming to North America, brought hot house knowledge and skills with them. And so the art of forcing fruits and vegetables developed on this continent, until today we can enjoy quite a number of fresh fruits and vegetables, much earlier than ever before, and at a fairly moderate price.

Thanks to hot houses, your spring salads and sandwiches can be much more interesting now than they used to be. Not so long ago, you had to rely mostly on jellied salads, until the field crop of fresh vegetables was ready. Now these vegetables are forced or speeded up in hot houses and you can buy them quite reasonably very early in the spring. What a boon they are to your meals! The first salad with tomato and cucumber slices in it, will rate cheers from your family. As for sandwiches, what could be better than cool cucumber slices. Whether you decide to use them as open or closed sandwiches, it would be hard to find a more appealing flavour. They are very good throughtout the spring and summer, but the first ones of the season are really delicious. You will have noticed too, that the peel is so tender, you will probably want to leave it on for added colour, as well as flavour. You would make sure that the cucumbers were thoroughly washed. Hot house leaf lettuce which is on the market now, is very good in salads, but you will not want to let the season slip by, without serving these tender leaves in rolled sandwiches.

Rhubarb is another hot house plant which will add a pleasing sharpness to your spring salads and sandwiches. Raw rhubarb can easily be made into curls, just as you would make celery curls, and a little chopped rhubarb is really good in a tossed salad. Stewed rhubarb mixed with softened cream cheese, makes a tasty sandwich filling.

Asparagus

Asparagus is one of the first vegetables to put in an appearance, each spring, and those slender bright green stalks are certainly spring like. Their flavour is so fresh and different that they need very little "dressing up". That is especially true the first few times you serve them. The home economists like asparagus cooked just to tenderness and served with a generous piece of butter. They say that a sprinkle of lemon juice is very good and as the asparagus gets older, they like it served in a cream sauce, or a cheese sauce. The home economists remind you that the first asparagus to come on the market is so tender and juicy that it requires very little water and a very short cooking time. For cooking they suggest tying asparagus in a bundle and placing it upright in a small amount of boiling salted water, then cooking until tender. That takes about 10 minutes. It would take just a minute or two at 15 lbs. pressure, in your pressure cooker. If you are the luckly owner of a home freezer, or rent locker space, then you will certainly want to freeze some of this tender asparagus. The Consumer Section Bulletin "Freezing Foods", will tell you how to do it, and if you write right away, you will have it in time. You can get a copy free by writing to the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Our Wild Flowers

(Copyright) — By NANCY CLEAVER —

"I will be the gladdest thing under the sun!
I will touch a hundred flowers and not pick one."

Edna St. Vincent Millay wrote these lines in her poem "Afternoon on a Hill." They are good words to memorize!

Is there any more joyous experience for a boy or girl than walking over hill and dale in the sunshine in the Springtime? The little breeze carries wonderful scents of the good earth, and of growing things. The birds are calling to each other in the trees, and the ground is soft and springy under foot. There is a tang to the air and the sky is deep blue. The clouds are moving swiftly with strange forms and shades blending into their whiteness.

If the hiker is not too near a town or city the woods are likely gay with flowers. Fortunate the child whose parent teaches him at an early age to enjoy the wild flowers without picking them! It is tragic that some of our loveliest wild flowers such as the trailing arbutus, the white trillium and the Lady's Slipper are becoming very rare in some areas. They have vanished completely from others because they have been thoughtlessly and ruthlessly picked.

Although the Maple Leaf is recognized in the four corners of the globe as Canada's symbol, it is interesting to know that each of our ten provinces chose a flower as its emblem. You will see by the following list that the majority are wild flowers.

Newfoundland, Pitcher Plant; Prince Edward Island, Violet; Ontario, White Trillium; Nova Scotia, May Flower (trailing arbutus); New Brunswick, Blue Violet; Quebec, Iris; Manitoba, Anemone; Saskatchewan, Prairie Lily; Alberta, Rose; British Columbia, Flowering Dogwood.

The youngster who has a talent for sketching may want to attempt some wild flower studies. Snapshots are not too easy to take in the woods. But a clump of wild flowers, or even a single plant presents a real challenge to a photo enthusiast.

Boys and girls like to make a log of their expeditions and on an outdoor hike it is fun to keep a record of the wild flowers, the birds and the trees or any interesting nature lore observations. Eyes which are eager to see make all kinds of discoveries.

What determines what kind of wild flower will grow in any area? The prairie, the woods, swamp, cliffs and dunes each have their own special plants. Many of the delicate woodland flowers become very rare in sections where the trees have all been cut down because they grow best in a partially shaded habitat. Scientists tell us that it is the amount of moisture and the type of soil which determine to a great degree which flowers will grow.

In the pine woods the soil is quite acid from decaying needles and special varieties of wild flowers such as Trillium and Dutchman's Breeches grow readily in this soil. Thus it is difficult to transplant these flowers successfully into ordinary garden earth. It is best not to disturb the wild flowers by picking or attempts to move them.

Getting acquainted with Wild Flower Friends is a fascinating hobby. There are a number of good, inexpensive wild flower guides in color and one of these should be in every home. The Canadian Nature Magazine has published a most attractive booklet on "Wild Flowers". In it are 15 reproductions in full color by Barrie Rennie, which are suitable for framing.

Let's Eat

BY IDA BAILEY ALLEN

Green peas are the national favorite among frozen vegetables.

"They are a fine product," said the hef, "especially when not overcooked. At this season, I like to cook a few scallions with them in the French manner. Or, sometimes, I add a little dried mint as do the English."

"Just look at this exhibit of frozen vegetables, chef. Greens of all kinds, even mustard and turnip greens; and kale, broccoli, spinach, squash, beans, succotash, black-eyed peas, okra, corn, asparagus, mixed vegetables. Why is it that so many of these are passed by in favor of peas?

"It's so easy to prepare vegetable platters with frozen vegetables. And if the vegetable is to be creamed, all you have to do is to add an equal quantity of evaporated milk to the liquid after cooking, and thicken it with a little butter and flour blended together

Garden Plates

"Let's plan some attractive garden plates made from frozen vegetables."

Cauliflower on toast with cheese sauce; cut green beans; frozen French fries

Black-eyed peas with crisp sausages, creamed spinach, sauteed corn kernels.

"Those are very nice, madame, for luncheon or even dinner en famille. I also have a garden combination to suggest in the menu below."

Recipes Serve 4 to 6

Oxtail soup: Order 3 oxtails cut in sections. Rinse, drain and brown in a soup kettle in 3 tbsp. meat fat. When almost browned, add ¾ c. sliced carrots, ¼ c. sliced onion and ¼ c. diced celery. Add 2 qt. cold water, 1½ tsp. salt and ¼ tsp. ground clove. Cover and simmer 2 hr., or until the meat is tender. Then add 1 c. fried onions mixed with 1 tbsp. flour. Bring to boiling point; simmer 3 min. Serve in soup plates. Garnish of sizzling croutons.

Cheese sponge pie: Line a 9-in. pie plate with pie pastry. Dust with ½ tsp. fine dry crumbs and press in lightly. Next, combine 1 (8-oz.) container cottage cheese with 6 tbsp. sugar, 1 tsp. melted butter, the grated rind 1 lemon, ½ c. homogenized milk or light cream, and 3 well-beaten egg yolks.

Fold in the egg whites whipped stiff, transfer to the pie plate. Bake 10 min. in a hot oven, 450 degrees F. Then reduce the heat to 375 degrees F. and continue to bake about 25 min., or until the pie is firm and the top golden brown. Serve cold.

Trick Of The Chef

Add ¼ tsp. thyme when making oxtail soup.

Chemistry Provides Mould-Retarding Ingredient for Bread

A housewife doesn't require a microscope to know when a loaf of bread has gone mouldy. Sometimes her nose detects the musty odour long before the green or blackish clusters of growing bacteria are apparent to the eye.

But she would need a microscope to see the mould seeds or spores that float around in the air and settle anywhere. That is one reason why mould is more common in summer when open windows invite an invasion of spores. The other reason is that mould thrives on summer's moist, warm conditions. Actually, mould grows fastest at temperatures of 80 to 90 degrees Fahrenheit, which is about the normal year-round temperature of most kitchens. So, even when bakers try to discourage mould by maintaining strict cleanliness, housewives may be unwittingly encouraging it.

There are two measures for combatting mould which have been practiced by a number of progressive Canadian bakers for many years. One involves the observance of rigid cleanliness rules. The other is a chemical compound known to scientists as sodium propionate and to bakers as "Mycoban".

"Mycoban" is a white powder that looks like flour and can be baked into bread so that every crumb is protected against bacteria. It is the same substance that Nature puts into some foods such as milk, butter, vinegar and cheese. A well-developed Swiss cheese, for example, contains almost one per cent sodium propionate, which is the reason it is so resistant to mould.

However, Nature neglected to include sodium propionate in some of our daily foods. And so it was up to the chemist to synthesize it for the baker to add himself. "Mycoban" was discovered only after years of searching for a chemical compound that was harmless, but would delay mould and "rope" in bread and other bakery products. It was learned that "Mycoban" effectively retards both mould and rope without affecting the bread's quality, texture, flavor or appearance.

Costing bakers only a few pennies for one hundred loaves of bread, "Mycoban" is harmless since it occurs naturally in some of our most nourishing foods. Its potency is not limited to bread alone. It also makes up for Nature's oversight in baked goods of all kinds, including rolls, buns, doughnuts, muffins and in cakes and pies.

Annual County W.I. Meetings Commence

Annual meetings of County Women's Institutes are beginning. Three are being held this week, the first in Stanstead County, May 5, with Compton and Chateauguay-Huntingdon following in that order. These annual meetings carry on for the remainder of the month, on a schedule arranged by the provincial office in consultation with county presidents.

In this way, members of the provincial executive are given an opportunity to attend these meetings, the one time in the year when there can be a close contact between the members throughout the province and the governing body; a plan that has proved its worth since its inception several years ago.

Fashions

Looking for all the world like dainty dance dresses are some of the new washable summer nightgowns. This one is of sheer batiste in pale blue with little appliqued tufts of medium and deeper blue all over. The bodice has a dainty ruffle top and there is a sheer ruffle at the hem. There are black velvet bands at the shoulders and under the bustline to give an empire line. The sash is also of black velvet, ending in a streamer bow.

CANADIAN GIRL SPIED FOR FBI

—Central Press Canadian

Daphne Price, 19-year-old Ottawa girl, has revealed she was a spy for the U.S. Federal Bureau of Investigation while she was a student at the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor. For three months, she says, she rendered reports on the activities of students suspected of Communist sympathies. She found the "spying" too hard on her mental and physical health and quit the school to return to Ottawa.

"Sister-Dresses" Interest Mothers

London (CP) — "Sister-dresses" styled by a woman who began designing children's clothes as a hobby eight years ago proved one of Britain's export successes last year.

Mrs. Clive Rodney, one of London's leading children's dressmakers, designs the dresses for children from five to 14 years of age.

One series of dresses is for three sisters born two years apart. The identical dresses are made of royal blue wool with horizontal tucks trimming the bodice. Each tuck on the front is caught down with pearl buttons to give detail which the designer insists is essential.

Mrs. Rodney refuses to use "baby" colors which, she says, are neither practical nor smart. Instead, she chooses royal blue or a wine color for the smocked dresses the designs for small girls of from five to 10.

The finest woollens and wool jerseys are transformed into teen-age dresses which encourage the young girl's interest in clothes and help her to develop good taste.

Mrs. Rodney uses fabrics and shades with a definite character. The results are models such as her dress in soft grey jersey which combines a finely (and permanently) pleated skirt with fitted bodice, cut into a key-hole neckline. A narrow patent leather belt matches the simple black buttons. Some of these new wool jerseys have a flannel-like finish, others show a tweed fleck or are striped or checked.

CRAVING FOR SUNDAES

There are still a few rugged old Spartans extant who sneer at obstetrics on the grounds that what was good enough for great grandma is good enough for anybody. They are perhaps at least partly responsible for the fact that out of 100,000 Canadian mothers who gave births to live babies in 1951, there were 107 who died.

An obstetrician must be a disciplinarian. Ill informed Spartanism or over-sophistication may tempt expectant mothers or their advisers to shrug off the regimens imposed by obstetricians as pedantic or unnatural "fiddle faddle", or to go into childbirth without any obstetrical consultation whatever. Fortunately this attitude is on the wane. In advanced countries such as Canada, pre-natal obstetrical care is coming to be taken for granted by more and more people. The 1951 rate of 107 maternal deaths per 100,000 live births is certainly better than the 1949 rate of 143.

Nevertheless it should be pointed out, perhaps rather sternly, that in 1952 Canada ranked only 13th among nations in its infant mortality, rate, with 38 infant deaths for every 1,000 births. This again may be attributed in part to a certain amount of lackadaisicalness or ignorance regarding the importance of pre-natal care. The Health League technical section on Child and Maternal Health was formed to meet this challenge. Here is a typical question from an expectant mother who has apparently been exposed to some bad advice about obstetrical "fiddle faddle."

Question: "Every time I visit my obstetrician he bawls me out for gaining weight. I'll admit I've been a little lackadaisical about the diet he gave me. I have a weakness for ice cream sundaes. But I can't see what difference it makes. They say the average weight of babies born in starving areas of India is just about the same as that of babies born in well-fed areas of Canada; so why worry about diet?"

Answer: Your obstetrician is perfectly right. Undue gain in weight is often the first indication of a toxic condition of an expectant mother or that dreadful and worrying condition known as eclampsia.

When you are paying an expert to take good care of you during the period you certainly should be prepared to take his advice. If you don't it is unfair to him and what is vastly more important unfair to yourself.

Diet has certainly reduced the size of babies. I never see a baby of 11, 12 or 13 pounds anymore, and years ago that was not an uncommon occurrence. Those were the days when mothers died during or shortly after childbirth all too frequently.

As for the size of babies born of starving mothers of India, old Mother Nature sternly protects the newcomer into this world to continue the species even at the expense of the parent.

Some of my patients are put on such rigid diets when they gain enormously that they wish they had even the diet of the Indian mothers.

Next week's Question Box answers a query on this subject from a puzzled mother. Another question illuminates a rather common misconception concerning treatment of alcoholism.

Garden-Graph

Transplant vegetable seedlings outdoors to their permanent location on a day that is cool, cloudy and calm.

Such a day does not always happen when transplanting time comes around, therefore safety-first precautions must be taken to protect the young plants against hot sun and wind.

As shown in the accompanying Garden-Graph, the newly set out plants can be shaded from the hot sun by means of a row of shingles up-ended together to form a covering.

It is always advisable, however, to remove the covering after the sun goes down, as illustrated, so that the plants will get the full benefit of evening dew or any rain which may fall.

Continue to protect the plants for several days after transplanting. If the young plants can be kept from wilting after transplanting they will become established more quickly and will grow just that much faster.

Some gardeners find it a good plan to do transplanting in the evening so that the plants have the cool night to get their roots in working order after the shock of being moved.

Berry boxes can also be used to place over individual plants for protection against sun and wind. On very windy days it may be necessary to place a stone on top of each box to hold it down.

Flower pots or "tended" newspapers held in place by stone can also be used for plant protection.

Shareholders Favor Company Split in Canadian Industries Ltd.

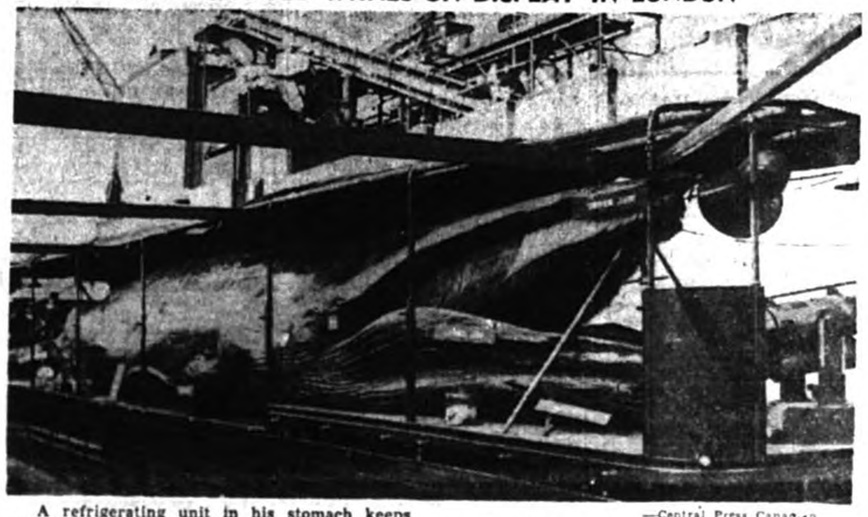

Montreal — More than 99 per cent of the preferred and common shares, represented at separate meetings here recently of shareholders of Canadian Industries Limited, were voted in favor of the plan to segregate the interests of Imperial Chemical Industries Limited and E. I. duPont de Nemours and Company by division of the plants and properties of C-I-L.

The announcement was made by George W. Huggett, chairman of the C-I-L board, who also acted as chairman of the separate meetings.

The company is making an immediate application to Mr. Justice Frederick T. Collins, of the Superior Court of Quebec, for sanction of the plan, and if such sanction is granted, application will then be made to the Secretary of State at Ottawa for confirmation of the plan by means of supplementary letters patent. It is hoped that these steps can be completed in time to permit the division of C-I-L as of July 1 next.

After the division of the entire operations of C-I-L will be continued in two new companies, namely, Canadian Industries (1954) Limited, in which I.C.I. will be the principal shareholder, and Du Pont Company of Canada Limited in which Du Pont will be the principal shareholder.

Keep Gardens Canadian, More Attention to Design

Contemporary building design has undergone a rapid change in recent years, states R. W. Oliver, horticulturist at the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa. Because the average Canadian does his own gardening, the design of our gardens has not kept pace with that of our homes.

Many of the modern ideas in home and garden design have come from California where climate and living habits — the two most important influences in architecture and garden design — are quite different from our own. Rather than adopt these ideas because they are fashionable and "modern", we should sift the good ones and adopt them to our conditions.

Contemporary Californian gardens are designed to "rid us of the discipline of traditional form" to quote a recognized text. The main aim to be the use of structural building materials, rather than plant materials, to extend the lines of the house into the garden and thus reduce the labor of gardening. Opaque glass screens or woven fences are used to provide privacy and wind shelter, rather than hedges or shrubbery borders. In California gardens, shaded areas where one can sit at ease must be provided for all seasons of the year, and so two or more sets of shade trees are needed to take care of different angles of sunlight; consequently space tends to be cut up by lines of clipped trees. Plants are used only as ornaments to provide colorful displays in jardinières, flower boxes, or formal beds.

In Canada, few of us sit or even walk in our gardens for at least six months of the year and we are not interested in winter shade. We prefer open spaces so that we can enjoy our gardens from inside even on summer days. We can get ample three dimensions into our garden pictures by the contrast between conifers and deciduous plants or conifers standing out against the snow, rather than by cutting spaces with confused kidney-shaped beds of plants. Further, we like actually working with plants and watching them develop through the summer season. It is a welcome contrast to winter.

We must, of course, adopt the form of our plantings to the new proportions of our houses. Ground covers are admirable beneath low, broad windows. Clipped and buttressed hedges lend emphasis where needed and provide patterns in three dimensions which match the lines of the houses. We can forget the "rectangular axes" and "symmetry of pact" garden plans, because we have done away with them in planning our homes.

But we still must arrange our gardens to meet the real needs of our family rather than the demands of the latest fad. Canadians will always prefer to watch plants grow rather than admire plywood fences; children need open space to play, rather than surved hedges to trip over. By all means use an outdoor kitchen with a paved area for chairs and tables, but Canada has plenty of attractive stone readily available and more suitable to our tastes when backed by well-arranged hedges or conifer groups, than colored concrete backed by plywood.

Let us develop a garden design that satisfies our needs in a modern setting, rather than trying to follow fashions set under different conditions.

Chief Problem for Rural Mailman — Birds And Family Clans

Navan, Ont. (CP) — David Levy (Dave) Taylor is seldom in a hurry. But he gets where he is going, one way or another.

Dave is one of Canada's 5,019 mail carriers and the mail's got to go through.

The 66-year-old carrier has been getting packages, papers, letters and bills through to the 113 mail boxes on his route just east of Ottawa for 21 years. His job starts with the arrival of the morning train from the capital at 8.37.

Mostly he gets around in his sedan of 1930 vintage which he says operates in all kinds of weather despite its 150,000 miles of travel, most of them over country roads. Come spring and mud, he might just use his old horse and buggy. That's what he did last spring during the thaw.

Once the mail is sorted, Mr. Taylor starts out on his 23-mile route. He's usually back by 1 p.m., except when he has to use the horse and buggy or a "jumper" sleigh. Then it may be 3.30 p.m. when he gets home. Doesn't matter much; he's cheerful one way or the other.

Dave doesn't see many of the people on his route, but he has a way of communicating with them. Rural mail boxes which are all placed on one side of the road, the right-hand side of the driver's route, swivel into two positions. Flush with the road, they're empty; there's somthing in them for boxholder or mailman if their door-end faces the road.

Problem and Solution

About 80 per cent of the boxholders on Dave Taylor's route are French-speaking families, many of them named Cleroux or Lavergne. This poses a problem when mail comes addressed with only one initial, for in the Cleroux clan alone, there are nine persons with the initial "A". What does Dave Taylor do about it?

"I put it in the first A. Cleroux box I come to," he said in an interview. "If it's still there the next time I come around, I take it to the next A. Cleroux, and so on. It could be for Aldege, Albert, Antonio or anyone — I used to worry a lot about it, but I got over it."

He doesn't worry much about the birds, either. Some of them build nests in the mail boxes and once a starling seemed more than a little disturbed when Dave intruded with a couple of letters. So he watched, and sure enough, out came the bird with first one letter and then another.

Another time a man left money in his mail box for a book of stamps and complained that he didn't receive it. Together he and Dave began a search, and there it was in the middle of the gravelled road, a shiny 25-cent piece. Starlines again, but it didn't worry Dave much. It's up to the box-holder, not the mailman, to keep the box clear of birds.

1-Millionth Case Paid by Blue Cross

Expects to Pay 200,000 More This Year

At the 12th annual meeting of Quebec Hospital Service Association, held April 29, E. Duncan Millican, president, announced that Blue Cross has now paid 1,000,000 hospital-surgical-medical accounts for Quebec residents. This total, which is made up of 602,000 hospital claims and 398,000 surgical-medical claims, has been reached in slightly less than 12 years of operation.

Starting from 1,586 hospital bills settled in 1943, the number of hospital and medical bills paid yearly has increased to the point where, in 1953 alone, 205,424 such accounts were paid. "This indicates the constantly growing public use and acceptance of the service provided under this voluntary, non-profit prepaid health care plan." Mr. Millican added that this year again, claims were expected to total over 200,000.

Explaining the use of services by subscribers, Mr. Millican said that, with 140 out of every 1,000 participants requiring hospital care, 1953 saw members use over 850,000 days of hospitalization, an increase of 50,000 days over 1952. Maternity cases paid, also showed an increase, the total for 1953 being 19,103 as compared with 15,456 in 1952.

Operating Expenses

A. Stewart McNichols, who was re-elected chairman of the board, pointed out that in 1953, 91.1% of income had been used to pay current benefits, and that 5% had been added to reserves. Operating expenses for 1953 amounted to 8.3% of earned income, as against 9.4% for the previous year. This ratio is the lowest since the inception of operations.

$100,000 Loan By-law Adopted, Needs Approval at Public Meeting

Public Opinion May Be Aired At Open Session Next Tuesday

The three necessary readings of By-law 192 authorizing the Town of Lachute to borrow $100,000 by issue of debentures, to pay for the cost of building a Town Hall and other public works, were duly approved at an adjourned meeting of the Town Council held in the Auditorium Monday evening. Aldermen Ross Muir, Edgar Pollock and H. G. Beaulieu were absent from the assembly.

Approval or disapproval of the loan will be decided at the next public meeting, to be held in the Auditorium on Tuesday, May 18, at 8 p.m. Mayor Dr. Jules Lafleur explained procedure concerning the adoption or disapproval of this loan by the taxpayers, stating that if six proprietor-taxpayers present at next Tuesday's meeting opposed the project, a referendum would be necessary. But if none, or less than six proprietor-taxpayers present, registered their objection, then the loan would be automatically accepted.

The amount of the loan to commence necessary public works, is made up of the estimated $50,000 cost of building a Town Hall; $34,000 which is believed sufficient to pay for the cost of waterworks and sewers on various streets in Lachute; the estimated $4,000 cost of a new Venturi tube required to maintain the chlorination system in working order; and an amount to pay off a temporary loan of $12,000 from a chartered bank, used for the construction of sewer and waterworks on Sydney Street.

The issue of $100,000 will comprise bonds of $100 denomination or multiples thereof, payable to the bearer at the office of the Bank of Nova Scotia in Lachute, Montreal or Quebec, upon presentation of their issue, and will bear interest at the rate of not more than 4½% per annum, payable semi-annually, the first day of May and November of each year, at the same places as for the capital. The first bonds to be redeemable on the first day of May, 1955, will bear the date of issue of May 1, 1954.

Shuttle Company Sale Is Unfounded Rumor

Numerous reports concerning the transfer of Dominion Shuttle Company Ltd., both to local and to outside interests, have been circulating throughout the district. These rumors are stated by officials of the Company to be absolutely unfounded.

Hawkesbury Meeting Of Blind Institute

Hawkesbury — The Canadian National Institute for the Blind at Hawkesbury held its annual meeting at the King Edward Hotel recently.

A detailed report was given of the activities of the past year. Last year subscriptions in Prescott County amounted to $2,027.53. It is hoped that more will be given this year, as there are 63 blind persons and many cases of prevention of blindness to be taken care of.

Hawkesbury Town Council recently purchased a 1954 Pontiac sedan for their local police force. The new car will be equipped with a 3-way Marconi radio.

Taxi Operators Protest Outside Competition, Town Council Deals With Heavy Agenda

A petition signed by 24 of the 29 Lachute taxi drivers requesting Council to limit the number of taxis operating in Lachute — and thus protect the Lachute operators, who are residents and taxpayers, from competition coming in from outside — was presented at the regular Council meeting in the Auditorium last Wednesday. Aldermen H. G. Beaulieu and Alcidas Laurin were absent from the session, at which Ald. Wilbrod Cousineau gave notice that at the next meeting he would present a by-law authorizing the Council to borrow $100,000 to build a town hall, to install necessary waterworks and sewers and make necessary repairs.

Gerald Berniquer, who presented the petition on behalf of the Lachute taxi drivers, maintained that "taxis had the right to come into a town and pick up specific customers, but should not cruise around and solicit business." The Mayor stated that as far as limiting the number of taxis in the town was concerned, he would have to wait until the end of the year when the budget for 1955 was prepared. He added that he would seek legal advice as to the soliciting of business by outside taxi-men — the information to be available at the next meeting.

Jos. Senecal, town foreman, was asked to study the drainage situation on Paquin Avenue, where the natural flow of water had been interrupted, and to report on the situation at next meeting.

To Clean Up Dumpsite Surroundings

Mr. Senecal was also instructed to take charge of cleaning up the property surrounding the municipal dump. Allan Hay, whose property adjoins the site belonging to the Corporation, was present at the meeting and informed the Council that the pipe would not carry the amount of water necessary, and therefore the water is flooding his property and depositing glass, cans, garbage and paper on his land. Mr Hay informed the Council that he had lost cattle due to lead poisoning in past years and that, while there was no proof, it was possible that this loss was due to litter from the dump. He was assured by Mayor Lafleur that the property would be cleaned up this week.

Ald. D. G. MacRae was appointed pro-mayor for the ensuing three months.

Municipal Valuation

Secretary-treasurer A. Laurin stated he had contacted Messrs. Charles Meighen, Jos. Constantineau and Cyprien Durocher, who had prepared the municipal valuation roll last year, and that they would be glad to do the job again. It was moved by Ald. R. Muir that the three appointed last year be appointed again this year, with Messrs. Philisa Chabot and Wenceslas Chenier to act as substitutes. This motion was not seconded. It was moved by Ald. R. Morrissette, seconded by Ald. J. Charlebois that Messrs. Meighen, Durocher and Chenier be engaged. It was moved in amendment that the matter be tabled for further study at next meeting. The vote was taken and ended in a tie, with Mayor Lafleur casting the deciding vote in favor of the amendment made by Ald. W. Cousineau.

Ald. L. Gibeault, seconded by Ald. W. Cousineeau, moved that the Council sign a contract with the Gatineau Power Company to install five street lights, two on Charles and Hamford Streets and one in front of St. Onge's Hotel on Foundry Street.

The power of several lights already erected was also increased.

Social Service

Mayor Lafleur read a letter from M. l'Abbé Manseau, director of Service Social for the Diocese of St. Jerome. Mayor Lafleur stated that he was well pleased with the work being accomplished, and suggested that a small grant be given. The matter was left for the next general meeting. Secretary Laurin was instructed to write the Social Service office, requesting an explanation as to why one of the Lachute people was on their list. It

To Discuss Proposed Film Service For Argenteuil

On Monday, May 17, the people of Argenteuil County will have the oportunity of organizing their own film service. Notice of the meeting to be held in the Science Lecture Room of the Lachute High School has been sent to some 60 groups. Any other interested persons or organizations are invited to attend without further notice this discussion of local concern.

The project will be explained by the National Film Board district representative, Roger de Bellefeuille. The regional supervisor of the Film Board, Mr. P. Boudreau, will also be in attendance.

The main items to be discussed will be the formation of a county film committee; the supervision of the distribution of nine monthly programs; the membership in the committee, and the training of projectionists.

If the plan is carried, all details will be handled by the county film committee and operations would commence in September next.

In the meantime, workshops will be held in different parts of the county to train people in the care and operation of projectors.

This idea is not new, as there are hundreds of similar circuits organized throughout the country. Will Argenteuil County constitute another link in the chain, to have Canada better known at home?

Gatineau Manager Addresses Meeting At Ste. Scholastique

At a recent meeting of the Ste. Scholastique Chamber of Commerce, Messrs. H. Lamarche, president of the Laurentides Chambers of Commerce, J. Rod Carreau, Lachute Division manager of the Gatineau Power Company, and J. A. Daoust, accountant of the same Company, were present among other guests.

Approximately 100 persons attended this gathering, at which Mr. Carreau gave an interesting talk on Electricity Service, covering every angle in relation to their town. Rates and their application were carefully explained; interruptions, their causes and prevention; overloading of circuits, particularly in private homes, etc. Mention was also made of improvements that had been added, and the Company's willingness to co-operate with the municipality at all times and in all matters within their control.

Mr. Carreau answered numerous questions, and it was felt by all present that it had been an evening well spent.

Appreciation was expressed to the guests for their attendance, and to the speaker for his fine address.

Killer Lynx Shot at Dunany

A 30-pound killer lynx, shot Wednesday morning by Herbert Neil, Dunany, was the centre of interest in Lachute yesterday as people crowded around for a look at this marauder which in the past week has claimed two lambs. Standing beside the animal is Herbert Neil who shot the suspected sheep-killer with a .32 Special at a range of 150 yards.

House of Commons Approves Budget 136-70

Ottawa (CP) — The government's budget policies received Commons approval in a 136-to-70 vote that saw Wilfred LaCroix (L-Montmorency) side with the opposition over the Quebec income tax issue. Major topic during the nine-day budget debate.

Progressive Conservatives and three independent members had urged full deduction of the 15-per-cent Quebec levy. Opposition leader Drew said this should be given this year pending an immediate federal-provincial conference to reallocate taxation powers.

Prime Minister St. Laurent said the door is open for Premier Duplessis to discuss a solution to double taxation in Quebec, a situation arising out of the fact federal law permits only five-per-cent deduction from the federal income levy of the provincial tax. There was no need for a tax conference with all the provinces.

A recent world survey shows that Canadians are the world's leading telephone users, averaging 388 calls per person per year.

Former Alderman, Familiar Citizen, Fatally Stricken

Late Jos. Belanger Was Active Figure, Candidate In Provincial Politics

Residents of this vicinity were shocked to hear of the sudden death of a well-known citizen, Joseph Belanger, which occurred Saturday afternoon at two o'clock in the post-office. Having collected his mail, Mr. Belanger was conversing with Thos. Stewart in his customary pleasant manner, when he suffered a heart attack and passed away.

Dr. Jules Lafleur was summoned immediately, but medical aid was unavailing.

Born in Lachute on July 31, 1889, "Joe" as he was popularly known, was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Napoleon Belanger and the last of a family of five. He received his early education here and later followed the trade of painter and paperhanger. In 1944 he entered politics and ran for the Union Nationale party against the Liberal candidate, the Hon. Georges E. Dansereau. Upon his defeat, he was appointed manager of the local Liquor Commission store, which position he held until 1950.

Mr. Belanger was keenly interested in all sports, particularly hockey, baseball and curling; he participated in the latter as a member of the local club. He served as alderman of the Centre Ward from 1947 to 1951, was a member of the Knights of Columbus, and held the position of church warden at Ste. Anastasie.

Left to mourn his passing are his wife, the former Albina Laflamme of Plaisance, Que.; six sons, Emile, Gaetan, Bernard, Gilles, of Lachute, Georges, of Eastview, and Claude, of St. Andrews East; also three daughters, Margaret (Mrs. Geo. Venes), Thérèse and Jeanne Claire, of Lachute; and 11 grandchildren.

Service was held Tuesday morning from Ste. Anastasie Parish Church, and was largely attended by sympathizing friends and relatives.

Honorary pall-bearers were — J. W. Lefebvre, Thos. Stewart, Ross Muir, Omer Laurin, Donald-G. MacRae and Paul-Emile Lafleur. Interment was made in the west-end cemetery. There was a profusion of flowers and a lengthy cortege followed the remains to their last resting place.

Canadian Lynx, Rare In These Parts, Trapped And Killed at Dunany

A Canadian lynx, first of this species reported in these parts in nearly half a century, was shot and killed by Herbert Neil on his Dunany farm early Wednesday morning.

The lynx, a female almost 30 pounds in weight, had been in the area for some time past, and Mr. Neil reports two lambs, about the same size as the lynx, having been killed and partly eaten since early last Saturday afternoon. The species is noted for killing young deer as well as other wild life.

On the look-out for the animal, Mr. Neil had several fox traps sets, one of which trapped the wild-cat, which was three feet in length and over two feet high. He reports the lynx leaping almost six feet in the air when he discovered it. He shot the animal at a distance of about 150 yards.

The lynx, which looks much heavier than it actually is, has fur up to 3½ inches long, and large sharp claws and teeth. Its whiskers or tufts of hair are on its ears and just below the lion-like face, instead of on the jaw like those on a cat.

Big Pickerel Planted to Restock Lower Ottawa

Hawkesbury — Anglers in this section of the lower Ottawa River are going to catch some big pickerel this year. And it is probable that the biggest of these fellows will be sporting a red plastic tag on their dorsal fin.

The office of biology of the University of Montreal released 1550 pickerel spawners recently in the Ottawa River at MacLeod's Landing, four miles west of Hawkesbury. They ranged in size from two to eight pounds.

Unfortunately damage caused in trucking the large fish to the area brought about a fairly serious mortality. Some 150 of the fish were subsequently found dead along the shoreline, but the experts are hopeful that the remainder of the planting will survive and spawn on the natural spawning areas of the river to help restock the lower Ottawa, now reported badly depleted of pickerel.

Varied Problems At Morin Heights Council Session

(Our District Correspondent)

Morin Heights — The regular municipal council meeting took place with Mayor Chas. D. Campbell in the chair and Councillors Willis Seale, Carl E. Seale, Paul Hurtubise, Paul Baumel, R. E. Jamieson and Edward Greer present.

After the usual prayer and passing of the minutes, the Mayor declared the meeting open to the public for any matters they wished to place before the Council. . .

Lawson Kennedy here spoke on the prevalence of pinball machines and the resolution of the Council dealing with this matter, also upon the appointment of the Municipal Inspector. Fred Kennedy brought up the costs of his winter roads. H. Lacken mentioned certain losses which had taken place, and also spoke of the hydrants. He recommended that a proper store-room be built, and also made mention of the appointment of a Waterworks Commissioner. A. Basler, president of the Chamber of Commerce, Morin Heights Branch, gave a further resumé of progress on the new road to Route 11. Max Baumel spoke on the slot-machine question, and Mr. Gillingham critized the procedure of people contacting the Mayor or individual councillors, instead of taking their troubles direct to the Council, and suggested that the Council take steps to eliminate this practice. F. Weekes brought up the matter of the garbage dump which he offered to sell to the Council.

There being no further matters to be presented to the Council, the regular business was resumed. Coun. Paul Baumel then moved to reconsider the vote taken on the resolution regarding slot machines — this being seconded by Coun. R. E. Jamieson. Mayor Campbell opened the question for discussion.

Coun. Willis Seale stated that he had given the original motion and that he stood by that. . . After further discussion it was finally carried unanimously that the minutes read correctly as recorded, and should stand.

The Fire and Police reports were read and accepted, on motion of Coun. C. E. Seale, seconded by Coun. Willis Seale. The secretary presented the monthly accounts, which were approved for payment.

Coun. Paul Baumel then presented his by-law No. 63 "to regulate dance halls within the limits of the municipality." This by-law was passed unanimously and the secretary ordered to post same for the period required by law.

A letter from F. T. Watchorn was read regarding water and gravel washing down Second Avenue onto his property; a committee was formed to attend to this matter.

Regarding the complaint of Fred Kennedy, a committee of Councillors Paul Baumel and C. E. Seale was formed to look into this complaint, also.

Due to the lengthy agenda, the meeting was adjourned at this point, until May 5.

The meeting was resumed May 5, with the Mayor presiding and Councillors Willis Seale, Carl E. Seale, Paul Hurtubise, Edward Greer and Paul Baumel present.

In reference to Mr. Lacken's request for a Waterworks Commissioner, it was moved by Coun. C. E. Seale, seconded by Coun. Ed Greer, that Seat No. 2 (now held by Coun. Paul Hurtubise) should carry with it the position of Waterworks Commissioner.

Councillors Willis Seale, Paul Hurtubise and Paul Baumel were appointed as a committee to study the question of building a new store-room on the Council lot.

B'burg Garbage Site Problem Again to the Fore -- Impetus to Idea for Tri-Municipality Study

Lachute, Brownsburg and Chatham Confronted With Similar Difficulties in Refuse Disposal

(Our District Correspondent)

Brownsburg — The vexed question of finding a suitable place to use as a dumping ground for the Village of Brownsburg, was discussed at some length during the Council meeting last week. The present site is on the land of Tom Hall, and is almost at the limits of its extent.

Mr. Hall was present to ask that something be done to reduce the fire hazard created by the fire at the dump, which is practically surrounded by bush land. He pointed out the danger of a bush fire if the dry wood caught and carried into the tall trees.

Fire Chief A. Robbins said it was a difficult place to deal with, as there was no water within reasonable distance. Bringing a small tank there was useless as the distance to refill was too great. He suggested a thousand-gallon tanker, which could be an old oil tank and a reasonably good truck. This would be a valuable adjunct to the present equipment as it could be used to fight outside fires in the Quarry area or Chatham, where the difficulty was to obtain water. Perhaps a deal could be made with Chatham to procure a tank between the two municipalities.

Councillor Ouellette said the ground around the dump has been bulldozed to clear inflammable material away, but the area was too small. Councillor Lupien asked if it were possible to purchase more ground from Mr. Hall and have room to move the clearance back. Mr. Hall didn't think it would do much good, and he was not encouraged to sell a wider area by the order the present dump was kept in. Mayor Donaldson said there are a couple of other places, one at Lacasse's, where there is a good fall, one farther up from the old dump, but the same objection prevails, there is bush around also.

Councillor Rose felt that it would take a co-operative effort. Lachute was also having trouble in getting a site and the question of an incinerator was not considered because of the maintenance cost. If the three municipalities got together on the question, the operation might require a crew of three men, who could be in the ratio of population or loads of garbage processed. It is not necessary to have a big fall or cliff. The method now most widely used was the "cut and cover" system. With this it is possible to have an open field with a gulley if possible, and as the garbage is dumped into the gulley a tractor presses it down and covers it over with the surrounding topsoil. In fact, a bulldozer or "cat" could cut a trench and then cover it in after the garbage is laid. The difficulty of this is that it would require a "cat", but if some arrangement could be Announcement is made of the appointment of Mr. Maurice Lavallee, P.Eng., as Industrial Commissioner of Gatineau Power Company. Mr. Lavallee is a graduate electrical engineer with a wide experience in needs of industry and the territory served by the Company.

Police Report For Past Month

Police Chief Laurent Ducharme presented his monthly report at the regular Council meeting. In the absence of the Police Committee chairman, Ald. H. G. Beaulieu, the report was read by Mayor Dr. Jules Lafleur.

The report included the following items: 29 calls for police assistance; 1 summary arrest; 1 arrest by warrant; 2 serious automobile accidents and 6 minor accidents, with total damage in the vicinity of $660; 1 person fell on sidewalk; 2 animals destroyed; 5 requests for protection answered; $104 received from traffic tickets and $40 in fines.

In closing his April report, Chief Ducharme stated that the condition of all town thoroughfares was satisfactory, but that numerous traffic signs were missing.

Water Safety Directors Named for Red Cross

Ross D. Firth, a graduate of McGill, and Roch Roy, a graduate of Ottawa University, were recently appointed co-directors of the water safety department of the Quebec division of the Canadian Red Cross.

They will visit hundreds of camps where thousands of children receive instruction in water safety and life saving technique and will also conduct two instructors' courses.

Lachute and Provincial Police Action Upheld In Brownsburg Arrests

Detective Maurice Lamoureux and the Lachute Police did right in answering the request for help a week ago Saturday, stated Mayor Donaldson of Brownsburg, when questioned on criticism in last week's report.

The Mayor, who stated that the orders given the Brownsburg Chief were general ones, added also that he had given his approval in sending eight arrested men to St. Jerome for trial.

Fines imposed were light in some cases — the six first arrested being sentenced to $5 plus costs or a month in jail, each having to post a bail of $200 to keep the peace for a year.

In the second fracas, one of the men was fined $25 and the other $50, both having the alternative of spending 30 days behind bars. The pair are under bond to keep the peace for a year.

Evidence of Professional Job in Theft Involving $1,200 to $1,300 Cash

The Brownsburg Caisse Populaire, founded less than two years ago, was visited by professional thieves last Thursday evening. The robbers, after cutting through the safe, made good their escape with from $1,200 to $1,300 cash. A considerable amount of bonds and other non-negotiable securities were left untouched.

The bank, located in the basement of St. Louis de France Church, was entered by way of the front door, which was unlocked. During their depredations the culprits covered the windows with large canvas sheets; these were left behind after the robbery — which was discovered by the church caretaker, Jean St. Denis, early Friday morning. The latter summoned Chas. Armand Martineau, manager of the establishment, who at first estimated the loss in excess of what was actually missing.

Entry to the safe was gained by means of an acetylene torch. With this, the main door was opened; a hole was then cut in the strong-box inside, through which the money was taken out. The opening was large enough for a small hand to pass through. The thieves kept the metal and money cool by continually pouring water on the heated section.

Investigations were commenced by Brownsburg Chief Marcel Perent and Provincial Detective Maurice Lamoureux, who turned the case over to Detective Bisaillon. The latter visited the scene with several fingerprint experts.

Voting in Chatham Next Monday

Two Chatham councillors, Adam Fraser replacing Fraser Watson, and Roland Desforges replacing Ernest Lacasse, were elected to office by acclamation yesterday — the vacancy for the third seat having three contestants.

The three candidates for Seat 6 to stand for election May 17 will be Bazil Clark, present councillor, Grant Beatty and Reginald Morrow. There will be seven polling booths for public voting.

Plans Arranged For Annual District Scout-Guide Rally

Brownsburg — The Brownsburg Boy Scout Group Committee had arranged a collection of salvage paper, which had to be concelled last Saturday owing to wet weather. Weather permitting, the collection will be made next Saturday afternoon.

Plans are being made for the 6th annual rally of the Boy Scouts, Wolf Cubs, Girl Guides and Brownies, May 29 at the Lachute Fair Grounds — according to R. B. Johnston, who is Rally Chairman. This rally has been held at Lachute each year for the past five years — the Fair Grounds being considered the most suitable site for the purpose in the Laurentian District.

Guests of honor will be Mrs. John Bishop, Commissioner, Montreal Area of the Girl Guides Association, and F. J. Finlay, Chief Scout for Canada.

A chartered train will bring the Boy Scout Band from Montreal, also residents of Ste. Rose, Rosemere and Ste. Therese, and arrive at Lachute about 10 a.m. Buses will carry groups from such points as Laval West, St. Eustache, St. Eustache-sur-le-Lac, Grenville and Brownsburg. The Lachute groups will also attend. A parade will be held from the station to the Fair Grounds — the Wolf Cubs and Brownies being transported in buses.

The program is scheduled to commence at 1 p.m.

Ladies of Brownsburg Women's Institute will again operate the refreshment booth.

Weather permitting, this is expected to be one of the biggest and best rallies held to date.

Adequate House Wiring

Inadequate or faulty circuits in your home can turn electricity into a dangerous enemy instead of a helpful friend.

This unfortunate situation is likely to arise in those homes which were wired many years ago, when few appliances were available and house circuits were designed merely to carry sufficient current to provide light.

The dimming of lights when appliances are turned on is an indication of inadequate wiring. Burned fuses are a positive sign of overloaded circuits.

Modern home wiring can pay for itself in increased comfort, efficiency and safety.

Your electrical contractor can contribute to your safety by his knowledge of what is unsafe in electrical work.

The steady swing to electrical living, with its many modern appliances, has placed upon old circuits loads which they were never intended to carry. The only permanent solution is a rewiring job to provide adequate circuits.

Agriculture Minister On Farm Surpluses

Ottawa (CP) — Agriculture Minister Gardiner predicts Canadian wheat, now piled up in a record surplus, will bring a good price to producers when it eventually moves to market. He also told the Commons he does not consider the butter surplus is anything to worry about.

Of wheat, Mr. Gardiner said Canada probably has the greatest amount in storage in history. But he added it will be marketed "from time to time, and we expect it will bring a price which will be favorable to the farmers where that wheat is grown."

(Canadian wheat stored in Canada and the United States at March 31 totalled 741,200,000 bushels, compared with 606,300,000 last year.)

Dealing with the 33,000,000-pound butter surplus, the largest the agricultural price support board has ever had, Mr. Gardiner said it could disappear in a few months.

Feeding Mouldy Grain

Is mouldy grain a satisfactory feed for livestock? In the spring of 1952 the Peace River region alone had an estimated one million bushels of mouldy grain on hand. With large quantities of grain stored outside in piles last winter there is considerable likelihood of more being available this spring.

The opinion is generally held that such grain makes poor feed and consequently it sells at a very low price. Most of the common moulds are not poisonous to livestock and therefore grain which is badly moulded may be entirely harmless. It has been suggested that the presence of some moulds such as penicillium may even have a beneficial effect. On the other hand a few moulds are dangerous and an environment which produces moulds will also encourage bacterial action which might in turn produce toxic material.

L. M. Bezeau reports that at the Lethbridge Experimental Station, oats, rejected because of mould, were fed to sheep and swine and in addition mouldy feed wheat was fed to swine. The moulds present on the grains were identified and found to be all harmless types. Bacteria of several species were present and they too were harmless.

The rejected oats, when fed to sheep were 65 per cent digestible, while No. 1 feed oats were 72 per cent digestible. When fed to swine the rejected oats were 49 per cent digestible, and the No. 1 feed oats 65 per cent digestible. The differences in digestibility would warrant only a 5 to 7 per cent per bushel spread in price if the weights per bushel were the same.

No. 5 wheat was 84 per cent digestible when fed to swine while the mouldy feed wheat was 87 per cent digestible. The difference in favor of the mouldy wheat might be accounted for by the presence of species of penicillium which are antibiotic producing moulds. Under the conditions of this experiment mouldy wheat was fully as nutritious for swine as No. 5 wheat.

In some cases, with both sheep and swine, the mouldy feed was less palatable than the non-mouldy feed, but once the animals become accustomed to it their appetite was maintained at a satisfactory level. No digestive disorders or pathological upsets were noted in either sheep or swine.

Although the moulds found on the grain used in these trials happened to be harmless, in practice it would be wise to either test mouldy feeds on one animal first or introduce mouldy grain into the ration gradually and keep a close watch on the animals for any signs of digestive disturbances.

Plant Disease Research Problems Explained

Farmers would find it almost impossible to grow many crop plants if there were no effective controls of plant diseases and insect pests. Research to understand the causes of plant diseases develop effective control measures if of great practical importance to farmers and consumers alike.

These facts were pointed out recently by Dr. W. F. Hanna, Chief of the Botany and Plant Division of the Canada Department of Agriculture. He was guest speaker at the 46th annual meeting of the Quebec Society for the Protection of Plants, which was held at Macdonald College.

Dr. Hanna explained the alarming rate with which disease organisms, and insects, can breed new strains which are less easily controlled. These new forms are often able to attack plants which were formerly considered resistant. As an example, the speaker cited the case of race 15-B of wheat rust which caused an estimated 30 million dollars damage in Western Canada last year. Insects in some cases develop forms which are more resistant to chemical controls such as D.D.T.

Using wheat stem rust as an example, Dr. Hanna expressed his faith in the idea of groups of specialists working together to solve practical research problems. One group of scientists pools their knowledge to find out why certain plants are resistant to certain races of rust but easily infected by another. A similar group studies the rust itself to find out how it produced new strains. Another team continues to develop new resistant wheat varieties to try to keep ahead of the new rusts being produced by nature.

During the one-day meeting of the plow protection society, several papers were presented outlining new research findings in insect and disease control.

NEW BANKING SERVICE INAUGURATED AT LOCAL BANK OF NOVA SCOTIA

A new type of banking service to provide incentive for saving, with life insurance protection, was introduced in Canada for the first time Monday. It was inaugurated by branches of The Bank of Nova Scotia across the country who made available "personal security program" accounts.

From today on, p.s.p. accounts will be a standard service of this bank in Lachute, and may be opened like ordinary savings or current accounts. Under the personal security program the depositor reaches his savings goal in 50 monthly instalments. During this period his savings goal is protected by life insurance at no cost to himself.

"P.s.p. accounts are based on a simple principle — it is easier to save on the instalment plan and when there is a definite amount in mind," says W. S. Brigden, relieving manager of the Bank of Nova Scotia here. "Personal security program accounts are designed to provide this service. There is the added advantage of having the savings target insured."

Anyone between the ages of six and 46 years can open a p.s.p. account. He decides what the savings goal will be, then contracts to make 50 monthly deposits to meet this goal. In turn, the bank provides the depositor, immediately, with an insurance policy. In the event of death before the goal is reached the depositor's beneficiary would receive the whole amount of the goal, plus interest, to that time.

Five different savings goals are provided under the Bank of Nova Scotia security program. These are: $1,000 by $20 monthly payments; $750 by $15 monthly payments; $500 by $10 monthly payments; $250 by $5 monthly payments; $100 by $2 monthly payments. Once the p.s.p. account is opened, payments are made in the same way a deposit would be made in another type account.

P.s.p. accounts do not provide checking facilities. If for any reason, however, the p.s.p. depositor cannot complete the 50-months program or decides to abandon it, he receives all the money that he has paid in, plus interest, less a charge to cover the bank's services. P.s.p. accounts can be terminated and the money withdrawn by merely notifying the bank.

Men, women, and children, married or single, are all eligible to participate in this program providing only that they are within the age bracket and are in good health. No medical examination is necessary. The depositor need only give assurance of good health. As soon as a p.s.p. account application has been filled out and the first payment made, the depositor is covered by life insurance up to the unpaid balance of his goal.

Govt. to Sell Butter 1953 Surplus at Loss

Ottawa (CP) — Agriculture Minister Gardiner has announced that the government is offering its 33,000,000-pound butter stockpile to the trade at 55½ cents a pound — 2½ cents below what it paid for it. This reduction, along with handling charges, may mean a loss to the federal treasury of more than $1,000,000. Mr. Gardiner said the move, at a price sharply reduced from last year's 61 cents a pound, is to dispose of the government's 1953 surplus.

Meanwhile the government will continue to buy 1954 butter from producers at the support price of 58 cents a pound. And if pastures are good, it may be buying more butter this year than it did a year ago.

Commercial Flights Planned Over Pole

Montreal (CP) — Scientists have been busily studying weather and navigation conditions in the Arctic for the last few months preparing for the first commercial flights over the North Pole from Scandinavia to North America.

The route is being planned by Scandinavian Airlines — jointly owned by Sweden, Norway and Denmark — and will operate through Edmonton and Thule, Greenland, to Los Angeles and Seattle.

Hans J. Dedekam, manager of the company's Montreal office — the first opened in Canada — said a "mutual understanding" has been reached between the Canadian government and Scandinavia in connection with the trans-polar flights.

However negotiations with the United States, started in 1952, regarding the use of American bases, have still to be completed. Mr. Dedekam said until these negotiations are concluded flights across the pole will be "exploratory only".

Three experimental flights have already been made. The aircraft have made extra stops en route at Frobisher Bay, Fort Churchill and Calgary to determine where alternative stops might be made if necessary.

During the first flight some 5,000 U.S. airmen turned out to welcome the plane when it put down at Thule to refuel.

CHEST UP, LEGS DOWN HELPS HEART DISEASE

A patient suffering from a serious heart ailment generally needs lots of rest. A growing number of experts, however, are convinced that the resting position should not be flat on the back, but sitting up. They point out that in the recumbent position, a patient's blood does not circulate as fast as it does with the head up and his legs down. Also, the patient's lungs cannot hold as much air.

Thought on Graduation

WRIT LARGE on the immediate horizon of our High School top-graders — is Graduation. The exercises and ceremonies are to be fittingly observed this week in Lachute, and at district schools on appointed dates.

There will be touching references, glowing tributes, public applause, and roseate previews of the future. This is a solemn occasion in youth's experience; and we would detract in no way from its glamor or its sentiment.

There will be exhortations too, aimed to start our younger citizens on the highway to Success. . . And here is where we'd like a word, not to gild a fable of fortune, but to impress a simple fact of experience. Our thought might be more adaptable to School Opening, when the purpose of education is the keynote; it might, however, be more acceptable to the mind matured to Graduation. Here it is. . .

What Business needs today is candidates for careers — capable, first and foremost, of doing the little things. Of spelling — and adding — and writing good letters. A simple thought, but that's what Business needs — that's what Business too often lacks. To the High School graduate it may not appear a big assignment. But these qualities, we contend, are the surest stepping stone to promotion. A busy executive begrudges the time he spends in checking the work and rectifying the errors of a newcomer. Happy is the employer who enlists a new worker dependable in details. The worker who can do the little things well for which he is responsible, contributes to the success of the biggest enterprise. He also paves the way to personal success.

Graduates, hitch your wagons to a star — but pray, keep your feet on the humble earth!

Cheerful Yearful

WE KNEW someone should do something about it — if only to take stock and get our national observances down to a statistical basis. . . The Canadian Association for Adult Education has now issued a list of special Days and Weeks observed nationally in Canada. The information was compiled from a number of sources and is intended only to indicate a trend.

Principal interest lies in the number of subjects observed. Fifty weeks are claimed for some observance or another, with the intention, presumably, of allowing for a two-week annual vacation from observances.

As a matter of fact the weeks do not all follow each other in rotation. They overlap in some places and leave gaps in the calendar in others. It must have been highly interesting for the Canadian Association of Adult Education to discover that, on this account, Education Week is immediately preceded by Frozen Food Week, and shares its seven — or is it eight? — days with Peanut Week, Kraut and Frankfurter Week and Table Tennis Week, and is immediately followed by Cherry Week.

One group of Weeks might be listed under the heading of human relations. It includes such admirable suggestions as Take Tea and See Week, Sew and Save Week, Be Kind to Animals Week, Clean-up Week and Let's Go Fishing Week. . .

In case there's any desire to fill the remaining weeks of the year, here's an extra for this group — Let's Return Our Neighbor's Garden Tools Week. Careful timing would obviously be necessary — perhaps some week in the late fall when no further use for the tools exists and borrowers can save themselves the trouble of winter storage.

Another group concerns itself with the various branches of mental health. March 8-13 is Smile Week and, presumably allowing us ample time to really work our smiles up into something worth while, April 1-10 is Laugh Week.

Since every emotion, to be fully appreciated, must have its complement, perhaps for the 52nd week we could have a Groan and Grumble Week. As the most appropriate time for it, surely nothing could be more suitable than April 23-30. Thus the year would be rounded off in very adequate fashion.

— We are indebted to "Industry", publication of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, for the above advice and commentary. The bulletin however, takes no stock of the Tired Editor, who is bombarded with propaganda for all these national observances — even has no respite during Newspaper Week!

Financing the Team

"THANKS to the skill of two Royal Victoria Hospital surgeons and a radiologist and the combined efforts of the Nova Scotia and Quebec divisions of the Canadian Cancer Society . . . "

Sounds like a fine example of teamwork, this news story — and so it was. The result (although incidental to the idea of this editorial) is inspiring too: a three-year-old youngster completely cured of a cancer that threatened his life, is now leaving hospital and returning to his family in Nova Scotia.

We repeat a statement quoted in this column two weeks ago: Cancer, the second highest killer in this province, is not exclusively an "old folks' ailment", it kills more children in the 1-to-15 age group than any other disease.

Those who attended a campaign rally here at the outset of the Cancer Society appeal, were impressed by this aspect of Teamwork in the fight against the disease. And less conspicuous in the line-up were those doctors and technicians patiently laboring in the laboratories of Research. It is from these unspectacular labors that ultimate triumph may be expected, the weapon that they forge will be — a knowledge of the cause and cure of cancer.

A lion's share of the fund to fight this scourge, is channeled into Research. In terms of personnel, material and equipment, Research is a highly costly procedure; and its progress depends on the funds available. . . We might pen heart-rending paragraphs in support of the Cancer Campaign; but this aspect of the case is plain, practical and pointed — it's there to remember, when the canvasser calls at your door. . . The Watchman again bespeaks your sympathetic support.

Nature's Bondsman

THIS IS the season when Mother Nature puts on new raiment and through her beauty imposes six months' hard labor on millions of Canadians.

A spring sun gathers warmth and bright green replaces the sad brown left behind the snow.

The best laid plans of amateur gardeners go out the window.

How many last autumn — a summer's gardening chores fresh in mind — said "Never again"? How many made a firm resolution to avoid being embroiled in 1954 in the gardener's unending battle against pests and weeds and drought?

Mother Nature lets the resolution simmer while she undergoes her annual face-lifting. And one day she makes her first public appearance.

Our amateur gardener never can resist. He sallies into the garden, pokes a tentative toe at the moist earth, leans down to inspect the first green leaves of crocuses and daffodils, chuckles to himself at the fat robin pulling worms from last year's carrot patch.

The first seed catalogue arrives. The grocer puts up his seeds display. Florists advertise exotic plant creations.

The fight is lost. Our gardener's autumn resolution is still there and the first shovelful of earth is turned cautiously, perhaps with firm intention that it will be almost the last.

But the appeal of fresh earth and growing things is almost irresistible, to the amateur in his small yard as to the prairie farmer whose fields stretch a mile or more toward the sunrise.

And so our gardener accepts Mother Nature's verdict. From now until late fall his spare time is all taken.

Mother Nature, for another year, has made him her slave.

We sympathize with him. Why not? We also are in chains.

How to Win and Influence

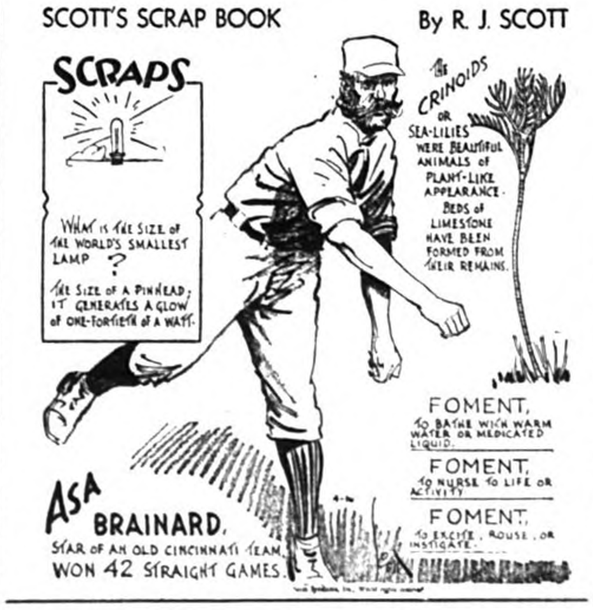

THE national president of the Conservative Association contends that his party must hold the type of political meeting that will entice voters away from television, radio and movies. "Stuffy old political meetings" must become things of the past.

Well, how about serving pop and hotdogs? How about favors, balloons and noise-makers (for distribution AFTER the speeches)? How about door prizes, lucky spot prizes, a comedy film, and a real showman m.c.? The field is unlimited. Let's pep up those election campaigns and make them interesting.

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK By R. J. SCOTT

• Geoff's Journal •

"Nothing Costs A Dollar"

Did you ever apply for a chauffeur's license in this province? I did, a week or so ago, and it's quite an experience for the uninitiated. The cost is low, too, only one dollar —plus the charge of $2.50 for the license.

Having heard dire tales from frustrated Montrealers about the hopeless situation existing at the town licensing offices, I made tracks for a bureau far removed from the metropolis. It was long after closing time, by city office standards, but the suburban agency was operating nevertheless. True, I disturbed the agent in the act of packing a large family off to bed. But that didn't matter, apparently, because I was soon attended to. When the worthy was seated behind the desk, and everything was ready for action, I was fixed with the familiar, glassy official eye.

"What kind of a license did you have last year?"

"Operator's," I replied.

"Same again this time?"

"No," I said, "I'd like to take out a chauffeur's card."

"Oh," said the official, looking up, "you're supposed to have a test for that. It costs an extra dollar, too."

A dollar for a test of that nature seemed fair enough, so I didn't balk at the price.

"When can I be examined?" I asked.

"Right now, I think," the agent replied, handing me a card. "Go and see the man whose name appears on this card. He'll try you out and sign the form. Pay him the dollar and bring the signed form back here. Then I'll make out your license."

The examiner, I discovered, operated a tobacco store at the other end of town — an occupation I had not linked with the serious business of examining aspiring chauffeurs. When I arrived at the store, the gent I sought was engaged in a heated political discussion with some cronies. I sensed immediately that I was intruding.

"You want a driving test?" the proprietor grumbled.

Before I could answer in the affirmative, he'd guessed my reply and passed on to his next query.

"What kind of car do you drive?"

"Hillman Minx."

"That it out there?"

"Yes."

"O.K.", the tobacconist said, as he signed the form, "one dollar."

I thought it would be imprudent to ask about the test at that point, so I paid over the dollar and set out for the license bureau again.

"Stiff exam?" the agent asked.

"Not at all," I said, "it was very easy."

"That's good. He's a good examiner, that fellow."

The agent quickly completed the forms and handed me the license.

"That will be $2.50!"

I paid over the money, left the office, and set my course for the city. En route, I thanked by lucky stars that I had, on several occasions, held licenses in other provinces and other countries. To obtain them, I had been subjected to the most rigorous tests, and they were only for operator's cards, not chauffeur's. They had proved, beyond all doubt, that I knew how to drive a car.

I wondered, as I drove along, how many car operators there must be in this province who haven't the foggiest idea what they're doing when they sit at the wheel of their car. Judging by the high auto insurance rates in effect here, and the equally high auto accident death rate, I assume the numbers are legion.

The silly part of it all is that both these mounting tolls could be reduced to almost nothing. All we have to do is make a dollar pay for something — instead of nothing.

VALUE OF RELICS

The need for some type of campaign to educate the average person in the historical value of relics is definitely indicated. A part of the country as rich in historical lore as ours, must have left thousands of valuable items which are rotting or being destroyed for lack of adequate knowledge and a proper place in which to keep them.

ALL ABOARD
With G. E. Mortimore

The man who takes his work home in a brief case is a familiar figure. Not so well known is the man who takes his home chores to the office.

Some men appear at work with stubbly beards, then dodge into the washroom to shave. Because they are in a hurry, or because they grow tired of trying to shave in a bathroom littered with their wives' cosmetics, they keep an office razor.

I have heard about a prominent citizen who keeps an electric razor in his car — the kind of razor that plugs into an automobile circuit — and shaves as he drives to work. Since this man's driving terrifies me even when he has two hands on the wheel, I am glad I have never been around to see the performance.

An old-time newspaperman of my acquaintance used to keep his toothbrush in a favorite restaurant. That was logical enough, since he ate most of his meals there. The toothbrush was a high tribute to the hospitality of the place. Home (to misquote an old proverb) is where the toothbrush is.

Another newspaperman sometimes came to the office after the paper had gone to bed, and went to bed himself. This happened when he was temporarily out of a lodging.

I use the term "went to bed" rather loosely. The man lay down on what we called the "exchange table", where out-of-town newspapers were kept, and covered himself with such thick, heat-preserving journals as the Toronto Telegram, the Montreal Gazette and the New York Herald-Tribune.

In that case it was possible to say truthfully that a newspaper provided blanket coverage.

Some men who work in big machine-shops have been known to make or fix gadgets of their own — children's wagons, vacuum cleaners — when work is slack.

In machine-shops associated with the Royal Canadian Navy, such a project is called a "rabbit". The term rabbit in naval slang also indicates an item of government property scrounged for private use.

According to legend, the term began thus: In the early days of a certain naval station, a man undertook to bring home for his children one of the rabbits that swarmed on the grounds. He caught one and was taking it out the gates in a box when a guard ordered him to open the box, on suspicion that he was stealing something.

Despite his protests, the guard made him open it. Out jumped the rabbit and ran away. The man went back in and emerged a second time with the box. "I've gone to the trouble of catching another rabbit," he said. "Surely you're not going to make me open the box again."

"Okay," said the guard. And the man went on his way. But this time there was no rabbit. He had wickedly filled the box with pounds of butter and legs of ham looted from the mess kitchen.

The story is probably untrue. Whatever the origin of the term may be, though, some men work on "rabbits" at the shop. Other men shave at the office or sleep there.

Sooner or later an employer will find a man who has moved a camp bed and hot plate into some forgotten back room at the office, and is living there rent free.

NEW WEAPON AGAINST BRAIN INFECTION

Not long ago, almost any disease was considered virtually hopeless, once it reached the brain. In the five years from 1936 to 1940, for instance, the death rate from abcesses of the brain at a large American hospital was 80 per cent. That, however, was before the coming of the earth-mould antibiotics.

In the period from 1946 to 1950, hospital authorities have reported the death rate from brain abscesses fell to 34 per cent — and most of these deaths were of patients whose condition had not been recognized early enough. Both penicillin and streptomycin have helped to establish this record.

In recent years, a newer antibiotic has also proven to be a powerful weapon against brain abscesses. This antibiotic, called bacitracin, is injected with streptomycin directly into the abcess cavity. With such aid, the hospital authorities say, there has not been a single death which could be traced to the spreading of the infection after treatment.

Had your aluminum today?

CHANCES are you have, because practically everything we eat — grains, vegetables, meat, milk, eggs — contains aluminum. This is not surprising, since one-eighth of the earth's crust is aluminum.

Aluminum is most readily available commercially, however, in the form of bauxite ore. Alcan ships this ore from South America to feed its pot lines at Arvida, Isle Maligne, Shawinigan Falls and Beauharnois, P. Que. When the huge new Kitimat development is completed in B.C., refined ore will be shipped up the West Coast from South American or other abundant sources. Aluminum Company of Canada, Ltd. (Alcan).

MORE PROFIT FROM DAIRY COWS

In a recent survey of carefully-kept milk and feed records, it was found that a dairyman had to do two things to make money with his cows. First he had to get lots of milk, as the following table shows:

POUNDS OF MILK GIVEN	COST TO PRODUCE					PROFIT OR LOSS
	Roughage	Grain	Overhead	Total Cost of Feed	Value of Milk Prod.
6,000	$42.00	$39.00	$95.00	$176.00	$153.00	$23.00 loss
8,000	$45.00	$51.00	$103.00	$199.00	$224.00	$25.00 profit
13,000	$48.00	$68.00	$120.00	$236.00	$327.00	$91.00 profit

True, the cow giving 13,000 lbs. milk cost $60 more to keep than her sister who gave 6,000 lbs., but she gave $174 worth of milk more, and made a profit of $91 — while the 6,000 lb. sister came within $23 of paying for her keep!

How many 13,000 lb. cows have you, and how many are 6,000? PURINA CHOWS, milk scales and daily milk record sheets, are the answer. Get a supply today from your first Purina dealer —

To Paul and Wayne Pallister this model of a safety trench is just a new toy, but to construction men who dig trenches and other types of excavation, it is a lifesaver. The model is on display at the Construction Safety association meeting in Toronto and it shows the proper cribbing to be used by construction men under a new Ontario law for protection of pick-and-shovel laborers. Too many uncribbed ditches cave in, burying and often smothering workmen.

Comedy Presented At Morin Heights

(Our District Correspondent)

Morin Heights — Last Friday evening the comedy "Birds of a Feather" was presented by the local dramatic group in the auditorium of the Intermediate School. About 300 people attended and enjoyed the performance.

The play concerns the misfortunes that befall Felicia F. Franklin when she sets free a valuable Bug-Bug Bird, brought back from darkest Africa by Mrs. Johnson-Martin, a big game hunter.

Mrs. Franklin is the kind of woman who is always leading a crusade for something, and her present one — Felicia F. Franklin's "Forum for Freedom for Our Feathered Friends" — irritates her children, Iris, Buddy and Patsey. Mischa Taylor, the most conceited Hollywood star, and a striving playwright, Tony Gardner, become involved, while Patsey's friends, Bibs and Bubs, on arriving at the Franklin home for a visit, are quite taken aback by the reception they receive from Mrs. Franklin. Rosey, the new cook, is quite bewildered — but she is not very bright anyway. Sergeant O'Mahoney, the detective, does not seem to be surprised at anything. John Wingate, a lawyer and old family friend, has his hands full managing Felicia's affairs, but is able to bring the story to a happy ending.

Rosie, the Franklins' new cook, Anne Stelfox.

Buddy Franklin, typical boy-next-door, Owen LeGallee.

John Wingate, Mrs. Franklin's Lawyer, Tony Simms.

F. F. Franklin, an eccentric matron, Doris Watchorn.

Patsey Franklin, typical teenage girl, Beverley Bell.

Tony Gardner, a striving playwright, Frank Stelfox.

Cecilia Post (Bibs), a friend of Patsey's, Grace Gillingham.

Hortence Daniels (Bubs), a friend of Patsey's, Barbara Watchorn.

Mrs. Martin, a big game hunter from Africa, Madelaine Swail.

Mischa Taylor, Hollywood's most conceited star, Basil Green.

O'Mahony, a not too bright detective, George Watchorn.

Archibald, "an expensive Bug-Bug Bird from darkest Africa," was cheerfully portrayed by a bantam rooster.

Recent Wedding At Arundel, Que.

Conway - Moncrieff

Standards of pink and white snapdragons decorated the Arundel United Church for the afternoon wedding, on May 8, of Viola Annie Moncrieff, daughter of Mr. John Moncrieff and the late Mrs. Moncrieff, of Arundel, to Mr. William Conway, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Conway, of Westmount. The Rev. Charles Cushing, of Montreal West, performed the candlelight ceremony. Mrs. Pauline Graham was at the organ, and Mrs. Margaret Sevigny sang.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attended by Miss Edith McCallum as bridesmaid, with Wanda James, niece of the bride, as flower girl. Mr. P. Conway acted as best man, and the ushers were Ernest James and Walter Frase, all of Montreal.

The bride wore a gown of white satin fashioned on classic lines, the skirt falling in heavy folds. Her fingertip veil of silk illusion was held in place by a tiara of white satin. Her only ornament was a gold heirloom locket, and she carried a bouquet of pink roses.

The bridesmaid, in a gown of peacock blue tulle over taffeta, wore a shoulder-length veil falling from a close-fitting headdress of matching tulle. Her bouquet was of pink carnations.

The little flower girl was in pink dotted Swiss organdie, and carried a nosegay bouquet of Pinocchio roses.

Mrs. Moncrieff, step-mother, of the bride, wore a dress of navy pleated sheer, with navy and white accessories, and a corsage of red Sweetheart roses.

Following a reception at the home of the bride's parents, the bridal couple left on their wedding trip to New York. Going away the bride wore a rosewood wool suit under a moleskin jacket, with a blue Milan straw hat and accessories, and a shoulder spray of American Beauty rosebuds. . . Mr. and Mrs. Conway will reside in Montreal.

Red Cross Held May Meeting

At the regular monthly meeting of the Red Cross Society local branch, a good number, including canvassers from Lachute and district, were in attendance.

Reports of the work conveners were most gratifying, showing that since January 1 of this year 79 knitted articles, 118 articles of sewing, 7 donations, and 1,980 swabs had been sent to headquarters in Montreal. The president, Mrs. Howard Watson, commended all participants on their hard and faithful work.

It was approved by the meeting that $15 from the Swimming and Water Safety fund be offered to a pupil from both the Protestant and Catholic Schools taking the instruction course in Swimming and Water Safety sponsored by the Red Cross Society.

It was reported at this meeting that the annual blood clinic would again be held this fall, with Mr. Léopold Carrière the 1954 chairman. It is hoped that all will cooperate in this effort, for during the year many local calls for blood plasma and serum have been received.

With a projector kindly loaned by Ayers Limited, the president, Mrs. Watson, was able to show her interesting film on South America, as well as some pictures she had taken during her stay here.

Tea was served to the group in conclusion.

Council Deals With Heavy Agenda

was also agreed that in future the Council, which pays half the daily cost, will obtain the Social Service cards direct and not from individuals.

The Bell Telephone Company asked permission to move a pole on Barron Avenue, as the pole is directly in front of H. G. Beaulieu's garage. Authorization was granted, the new pole to be erected under supervision of the Roads Committee.

A donation of $50 was granted to the Lachute Spring Fair, for an advertisement in the Fair Program.

Use of the Auditorium was granted free of charge to the Canadian Legion Branch 70, who requested the hall for a benefit bingo in favor of the Knights of Columbus. The privilege was granted on a motion by Ald. R. Muir, seconded by Ald. R. Morrissette.

A request for a hearing aid, and a shoe-stitching machine to help him earn a living, was received from J. Seguin. It was brought to the Council's attention that they were presently paying him 90 cents a day through the Social Service, and Mayor Lafleur thought that the applicant had better see the latter organization for further assistance.

Venturi Tube Tender

A tender of $2,285 was received for replacing the Venturi tube at the chlorination plant. As this was the only tender received, it was suggested that the matter be tabled until further information was received as to extras required.

Notice of Motion

Henri Larocque was engaged to gather up litter and paper on Main Street every morning until snowfall, effective immediately. Mr. Larocque, the present janitor, was given this job to supplement his present salary. Wages for this work, which occupies about 16 hours a week in the early morning, were set at $10 weekly.

Civic Census

Five tenders for taking the civic census were read, as follows: Chas. Emile Shaeffer, 14 cents a family; Henri Prevost, $300 straight, or eight cents a name, or West Ward $110, Centre Ward $110 and East Ward $80; Lucien Lacoste, West Ward $150, Centre Ward $150, East Ward $125, making a total of $425; Charles Legris, Marcel Brunette and Lucien Jodin, 15 cents per copy plus $75 for compilation; and Maurice A. Legault, who submitted his tender for $350 including compilation.

Discussion and questions followed, and it was finally moved by Ald. R. Muir, seconded by Ald. L. Gilbeault, that the tender submitted by Messrs. Legris, Brunette and Jodoin, who did the job last year, be accepted.

A letter was read from Col. Ernest Emmett, asking if the Council would require members of his Imperial Frontiersmen for Exhibition time, and it was decided that three of these men would be needed to supplement the local police officers.

Additional Equipment

It was decided to purchase a rubber track for the caterpillar tractor, so that no damage would be done to the asphalt when this machine is in use during the summer months. This will eliminate transporting the tractor from one job to another on a truck. A two-way angle backfill blade was also approved for purchase from North River Motors, the John Deere agents, at a total cost of $517.

Tenders for water pipes were received from one local concern, R. McArthur and Son Ltd., and from Francis Hankin in Montreal. After reading both tenders Mayor Lafleur noted that the McArthur offer was cheaper in most sections and equal in others. All councillors were in favor of the contract being awarded to the local firm — if and when the referendum is accepted.

Fire Equipment

A report from Edouard Gaudet, Fire Commissioner for the Province, was read, recommending the purchase of a new fire dump. Tenders for this new equipment installed on a commercial chassis were received from all major fire equipment manufacturers, and were tabled for further study after being sent to the Fire Commissioner for approval.

Building permits were granted to Messrs. J. W. Scott, Roger Mallette, Leo Girard, and M. Levesque, subject to approval by the Roads Committee.

The Mayor and secretary-treasurer were authorized to sign all documents relative to the sale of three lots owned by the Corporation on Henry Street, in the Parish of St. Jerusalem.

Houses on Street Line

Surveyor Seraphin Ouimet informed the Council that there were several houses presently situated on the property where Charles Street was supposed to be. It was decided that the Council meet on the site the following day, where possible solutions were discussed.

Accounts totalling $11,920.37 were approved for payment. The account with Seraphin Ouimet was reduced from $3,886.37 to $3,500. This is in payment for work done concerning the water project in the upper lakes, and other surveying in town.

The meeting was adjourned sine die.

Discuss Plans for Appeal, Institute for the Blind — $2,800 Objective in Fall

Plans for the financial campaign of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, Laurentian District, were discussed at an Advisory Board meeting held in Victoria Hall, Tuesday evening. The 1954 campaign dates are set for the fall, the objective for this district will be $2,800. Expenditures for the year are expected to be slightly in excess of this amount.

Numerous efforts to rehabilitate partially and totally blind persons were discussed and approved by the advisors, L. A. McClintock and Tony Zaplaski, and by the local committee members in attendance.

Mr. McClintock reported on most of the 28 registered and five non-registered cases in the district, giving the committee details of what was being done to assist them.

It was decided to send "talking books" to several of the sightless citizens. These stories are recorded and played back to the listeners on a special machine, which is given to the blind person.

It was decided that a nominating committee be formed to present a slate of officers at the next meeting; this will be held at Victoria Hall on June 1, and 8.15 p.m.

Who Was This?

By A.A.M.

The Bible is rich in stories, and the purpose of this series is to encourage readers to look up for themselves the Bible versions of these incidents. If there are children in the family it is suggested that the story, and the Bible verses on which it is based, be read aloud.

Do you know the name of the man who lost his home and had to move quickly to another place because he disobeyed God's commandment? He had a beautiful place in which to live. A great river flowed through its grounds. Life was very pleasant because the climate was mild and the land was fertile. Trees and flowers grew in abundance, and there were all kinds of vegetables and fruit. Cattle grazed and the birds sang joyously.

You would think that this man had everything to make him happy, when he and his wife lived in such a lovely spot. They were happy for a time, but then they did the one thing which God had commanded them not to do. When they thought about their action, they were afraid. They knew that they had done wrong, and that they would have to accept the consequences. As a punishment they were driven from their fine home. Do you not want to read this story for yourself? You will find it in Genesis, Chapter 3.

God's Promise NOW in Fulfilment Is

"I am creating new heavens, and a new earth." — Isaiah 65: 17, Young.

What do these words mean? The burning up of this earth on which we live? No, not that, for God created this earth for man's eternal home. In the book "New Heavens and a New Earth" read about God's promise now in fulfillment and of the new world of righteousness he is creating. In beautiful blue binding, 384 pages, only 50 cents. — Write 40 Irwin Avenue, Toronto, Ont.

Lucky Catch in Nearby Lake

One of the county's best known fishermen, Dan Simmons, reports landing a large grey trout over five pounds in weight last Saturday, but in this case he takes no credit for catching the fish. Dan was fishing in a lake near these parts when he felt the tug on his line and commenced to reel in. He was surprised when he saw his leader and hook coming, but no fish, although he could still feel the fish tugging.

It appears the trout was one of those "that got away"; it had two hooks in its mouth and several feet of line attached, and apparently the line had become tangled with that of Mr. Simmons, who swiftly hauled in his "catch" with the aid of a landing net.

The snowshoe hare of northern Canada goes through an unvarying ten-year cycle from near extinction to super-abundance.

Inter-School Badminton Tournament Held at Lachute High School

The inter-scholastic badminton tournament held at Lachute High School Saturday was a great success. Not until after the last boys' double did anyone know who was winning the trophy.

Hawkesbury boys won over Lachute in the doubles, and then won the trophy, but it was close. Hawkesbury High School got 6 points, Lachute High School 5, and Ste. Agathe High School 4. Hawkesbury got players in every final, but won only one, the boys' double. Lachute was in three finals and won twice. Ste. Agathe was in two finals and won both.

Every participant on Lachute's team played well; especially Marie Zimmer; who won the girls' single. Marie has not lost one game this year, and only lost one set, to a girl from Hawkesbury in the final. Marie is not rated a "strong player", but she places the bird perfectly.

Beverly McDonald and Rose Ann Welden won the girls' double, and this was a surprise. The Lachute girls lost out in the first game against Hawkesbury, but won the second against Ste. Agathe, then getting a chance to play Hawkesbury again; and the local girls really played badminton, and won with ease.

The boys' double games were the best in the tournament. Malcolm Cairns and Gardiner Mander won their first event, against Ste. Agathe, in 3 sets after a well-played game; but in the final the locals were tired (both boys' teams had played softball in the morning). However, they never stop fighting, and lost only 15-12, and 15-13.

Frances Laurin and Jack McMartin lost both mixed double events, but both played very well; they just didn't have the luck.

Jack Gordon won his first game, but lost to the same player who won the boys' single. Jack too was tired in his second game; he had pitched in the softball game in the morning, and also had a sore arm after being hit with a very hard ball last Thursday.

Dorothy Underhill lost out in her first game. Dorothy was fighting well, but it was obvious that she needed more practice.

Billy Scott lost his first game, too. Billy is a good badminton player, but needs experience and must learn to fight for every bird.

Tommy Sullivan Will Bring Boxers Here for B'burg Arena Program

By J. J. Molloy

Brownsburg — Tommy Sullivan is quite a name in Canadian boxing. This Montrealer coached the Canadian boxing team which took part in the most recent Olympic Games. Locally he is known and respected as a coach and as a referee. At the moment he is the coach of the Grenadier Guards Boxing Club.

The most interesting part of the Tommy Sullivan story to us, however, is that he will direct a boxing show in Brownsburg Arena on June 25. There will be three 5-rounders and five 3-rounders. It should be a great show, as most of Tommy's troupe will be Golden Gloves champs.

It's an evening affair, and the big thing is that hockey prices will see you in the gate — 60c for adults, 25c for children.

Pitcher and Catcher A Precarious Pair

SPORTS CAMERA

By Gerry Lougheed,
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A pair of baseball old-timers, each dependent on the other, are finishing out their careers in the major leagues with only a knuckleball pitch between them and the minors.

Johnny Lindell, a 37-year-old pitcher, is on the Philadelphia Phillies payroll because he specializes in the darting, dipping knuckleball pitch. It's a difficult style to hit and also to catch — and that's where the other 37-year-old half of the battery combination comes in, Mike Sandlock.

Sandlock holds his job because he's one of the few catchers who can handle Lindell's knuckler, or at least handle it as well as any good knuckleball pitcher can be handled.

Lindell, without Sandlock's catching, probably would be looking for another job in baseball, because most of his pitches would be a passed ball.

An unpredictable pitch that takes crazy hops as it nears the plate, the knuckleball is thrown after the ball is held between the folded thumb and the tips of the curled fingers. The pitcher has practically a finger-nail grip on the ball.

Former Outfielder

Lindell hasn't always been a pitcher. He played the outfield for a number of seasons with the New York Yankees. His hitting began to fall off and he slipped back to the minor leagues where he developed his hurling talent. A fine season with the Hollywood Stars in 1952 — he was the leading pitcher in the Pacific Coast League — earned him another crack at the majors.

Sandlock isn't sure why he has the knack of handling the pitch.

"You can't lunge or stab at the ball," he says. "You've just got to follow it with your glove, sort-of weave with it. I try to keep my bare hand out of the way, with the fingers curled.

"It's toughest when the pitch is right in front of your face. Your glove hides the ball and in that instant it's liable to float away in a different direction."

Occasionally the veteran catches other pitchers, particularly youngsters. He finds handling them a tougher job than taking care of Lindell's unorthodox slants.

"You don't know how much the youngsters know. And when you call for a pitch, you wonder if the boy knows just where to try to put the ball. And if he is thinking of trying to get the batter to hit on the ground in a double play situation."

Understandably, pitcher Lindell is fond of his knuckleball delivery.

"If it weren't for that, I'd be digging ditches," he says.

A Hollywood producer received a story entitled "The Optimist." He called his staff together and said, "Gentlemen, this title must be changed to something simpler. We know what an optimist is, but how many other people know it's an eye doctor?"

Two ardent disciples of Izaak Walton went fishing. After a while one said to the other, "Had any luck yet?"

"No," was the reply. "I can't get the cork out."

Visitor: "But why are you so angry with the doctor, Mrs. Blank?"

Hostess: "I told him I was tired, and he asked to see my tongue."

The Fishing Fiasco

By G. E. Mortimore

Something went wrong with the arrangements for our fishing cruise the other day.

To begin with, the sun was shining brightly, and the water was calm. The customary weather for a fishing cruise is overcast with squalls of rain. We could tell by that alone that someone had blundered.

When we assembled at the bay, we noted with alarm that only two members of the party were missing.

On every well-organized fishing cruise, at least six persons must fail to arrive. The rules demand it. But the best we could manage was two. We located one of them by telephone, still in bed and 20 miles away. And this man was so lax in his duty that he didn't even urge us to wait. "Go ahead without me," he said.

We exchanged ominous glances when that news came through.

And then we climbed aboard the boat. Panic spread through our ranks when the engine started without a murmur, and the launch whistled away from the dock like a goose heading for the nesting grounds. Under the fishing-cruise code, it is mandatory to wrestle with the engine for at least 20 minutes, and when the engine does run, it must push the boat forward in a series of spasmodic coughs and jerks.

We had broken one of the most vital taboos. We knew then that ours was to be an ill-starred voyage.

Our worst fears were justified. We cruised to the fishing grounds and back. The food and drink lasted all the way. Nobody took too much of it, and nobody took too little. There were enough fishing lines for everyone to have a turn.

On top of all these things, we caught six fish among us. And nobody quarrelled over who caught the biggest. We arrived back at the bay feeling warm and comfortable.

I hope I never get involved in a fiasco like that again.

Harrison, Magician, Brings Uncanny Powers

Harrison, the great magician, appearing May 20-21-22 at the Cinema Lachute, brings a performance acceptable and entertaining to all ages and classes. Known as the "man with the X-ray eyes", he demonstrates his ability to read a newspaper with his eyes blindfolded, and also to see through a thick sheet of metal. Moreover, in demonstrating these feats, he invites physicians, eye specialists or any incredulous spectators to investigate for any possible means of trickery.

The Cinema management, in presenting this show, commends it to the public as a performance never equalled in this town. Harrison is recognized among showmen as one of the greatest magicians of the present time.

One of the feats advertised for this performance is Harrison's demonstration of driving a car with his eyes blindfolded. Weather permitting, he will do this stunt Thursday, May 20, leaving the theatre entrance at 7 p.m. The public are invited to witness this sidelight of the show.

Opinion Advocates National Theatre

Ottawa should support a Canadian national theatre, suggests the concensus of a group of Canadians questioned by The Financial Post.

And if the provinces and municipalities want to get into the act, that, by some, would be welcomed too. "If Canada is to have cultural consequence," public money could be profitably spent on other art forms as well, it's suggested.

Most proponents of a publicly supported theatre say it (or they) should be in the nature of a traveling company, without a fixed base for performance, and should perform the functions of training, enlarging scope for professionals and bringing top-flight drama to Canadians. Recognition is given to the need for both English and French theatres.

Some respondents argue for partial support by Government, perhaps in the form of a national arts council which would itself be financed by government grants and would distribute aid to cultural organizations which were not "government-owned and operated."

Others would leave the job entirely to free enterprise and suggest culture can't be spoon fed, but has to be desired and earned.

John Fisher, Reporter of Canadian Scene

John Fisher is the roving reporter of the Canadian scene. A regular CBC commentator — he's heard every Friday evening right across the country — he spends most of his time on the road. When he isn't exploring Canada to collect stories and facts about its varied life, he's touring the U.S. or Europe to tell other people all about us. His work publicizing the lesser-known human aspects of life in this country has been recognized in a hundred ways by gifts and tributes from admiring listeners — everything from honorary doctorates at leading universities to honorary chieftainships in Indian tribes.

Many Place-Names Recall Incidents Of Pioneer West

Edmonton (CP) — Indians, traders, ranchers, homesteaders, railroadmen and police have contributed to the taming of the once wild west and a record of their presence is seen in the place-names of Alberta.

In the years before the coming of the white man, the Cree and Beaver Indian tribes met on the banks of a swift northern river and there settled a long-standing land dispute.

Translated into English, the site of the agreement took the name Peace Point. In later years it gave its name to the river, a town and the entire Peace River country. A map of 1790 refers to the river as the Peace.

The Beaver Indians gave the name Chinchage — or "beautiful" — to the river that flows into the Hay River in the north.

In the early days the Blackfoot Indians had a ford on Sheep Creek on the Calgary-Fort Macleod trail. They called it Okotoks, "lots of stones", and the name was adopted by the town that now stands on the old trail.

Perhaps the most famous Alberta place-name is Medicine Hat. The name stems from an incident of Indian legend, of which there are many variations. Indian medicine men figure in most.

The town of Wetaskiwin derives its name from a Cree word given a group of nearby hills to mark a truce with the Blackfoot. The name Athabasca, which has been given to one of Canada's largest lakes, a river and a town, is a Cree word meaning "place of reeds".

Named By Traders

The coming of the traders saw a series of new names added to the map. But perhaps the most unique is the Committee Punch Bowl, a lake only 60 feet in diameter at the summit of Athabasca Pass on the Alberta - B.C. border. There Hudson's Bay traders halted their marches to observe an honored ritual of drinking a toast to the company's governors.

In 1868 a group of prospectors lost a pair of pincers near Fort Macleod. They were found in 1874 and the town that rose there took the name of Pincher Creek.

Kew, a small town in the south, took its name from "Q" which was branded on cattle from a nearby ranch.

The town of Hemaruka was named by combining letters in the names of four daughters of a general manager of the Canadian National Railways — Helen, Margaret, Ruth and Kathleen Warren, of Toronto.

Settlers brought a wealth of new names. Cornucopia, Success, Altario, a combination of Alberta and Ontario; Bertawan, a combination of Alberta and Saskatchewan, and Canmer, from Canada and America.

Anzac was named after the Australian and New Zealand Army Corps of the First World War. Balzac was named after the French novelist, Honore Balzac.

Even magic had its place with such names as Merlin Lake, Kizard Lake and Conjuring Creek.

The Sunday School teacher asked Bobby why he was late.

"I was gonna go fishing this morning," said Bobby, "but Daddy wouldn't let me."

"You're a very fortunate boy to have a father like that," said the teacher. "And did your father make it clear to you why you shouldn't go fishing on Sunday?"

"Oh, sure," replied Bobby. "He said there wasn't enough bait for both of us."

75 YEARS AGO

May 16, 1879 —

Flour in our local market has fallen 25 cents a bag and 50 cents a barrel in price since the introduction of the National Policy.

The Lachute Wooden-Ware factory is turning out a new Zinc Washboard which certainly is the neatest, strongest and cheapest we have even seen, and we question if the trade has ever had such an article. The best of it is, the wooden part is made entirely out of refuse lumber.

The person who the other night was taking such comfort out of smoking in bed, got suddenly disturbed when he found the bed on fire. He didn't know his wife had set fire to the bed to try and break him of his bad habit!

Instead of the blind siding which has for some time been in use in the West End, there are several men at work this week constructing, on the opposite side of the track, a good and substantial through siding, which will be a great convenience to the traders of this section. This siding is to be 1,400 feet in length, the longest on the line of the Q.M.O. & O.R.R.

50 YEARS AGO

May 13, 1904 —

Mr. Roy Fraser has been transferred to Ottawa from the Hawkesbury branch of the Bank of Ottawa, and commenced his new duties on Monday last.

Messrs. C. King and G. Drysdale came near meeting a watery grave last Saturday when taking a row in the early morning near Fish's Bridge. On their return, they were caught by the swift-running current and capsized. The boat was righted, but it overturned again when the two endeavored to clamber aboard. By this time, young Drysdale was pretty well exhausted, and King, who fortunately is a strong swimmer, had his hands full in trying to save his companion. When within a few feet of the dam, a long pole was extended to them by young Menard; this was eagerly caught and they were both landed high and dry. The boat went over the dam and was smashed to pieces.

25 YEARS AGO

May 17, 1929 —

Believed to be the oldest person to take an airplane ride in Canada, William Perry, 92, of Lachute, a director of the Ottawa Flying Club, went for an aerial joyride, taking off from that club's airdrome Sunday morning, and enjoyed the experience immensely.

Elected officers of the Lachute Curling Club for the ensuing year were: R. McArthur, president; Jas. W. Gall, vice-president; R. P. Fraser, treasurer; Dr. G. A. Clunie, secretary. Messrs. John A. McGibbon, G. H. Creswell, Geo. Fraser and G. Valois were elected to the board, and F. A. Brennan and H. M. Gall as auditors.

A sergeant was asking some recruits why walnut was used for the butt of a rifle.

"Because it has more resistance," volunteered one man.

"Wrong!"

"Because it is more elastic."

"Wrong!"

"Perhaps it's because it looks nicer than any other kind," volunteered another, timidly.

"Don't be an ass," snapped the sergeant. "It's simply because it was laid down in Regulations."

How to Buy Meat

How to buy meat — what points to look for as regards quality — what cuts to buy — and what to do with them after you have bought them. These are some of the things that trouble many homemakers. And, perhaps they trouble some homemakers more right now than 10 years ago, because then they asked the butcher for what they wanted and he cut it for them right there while they waited. If they were not exactly sure of the name of the cut they wanted they would just explain that they wanted a pot roast or perhaps an oven roast or maybe a steak for frying and he would produce the right cut for the purpose. Today many homemakers shop at big self-service stores where the meat is already cut, packaged, labelled and displayed in large refrigerated counters. This type of merchandizing has changed the personal contact of the customer with the butcher to the newer impersonal method of self-service

Whether this new method of merchandizing is better than the old may be debatable because there is always more than one side to the question. Although there are often attendants in large stores who will answer questions, and sometimes meat is labelled as to the purpose for which you would use it, it must be admitted that with self-service shopping the consumer has to know more about meat. She cannot depend on her butcher to be her source of information. That is why Mrs. Homemaker may need to learn more about meat! And, she can do this by reading everything she can about meat buying, by talking with other experienced homemakers about meat problems and by reading the many pamphlets prepared by the Consumer Section of the Department of Agriculture about buying and using Canadian food products.

Fresh veal, delicate, tender and juicy, is available in butcher shops now. You cannot always buy fresh veal so be sure not to pass it by while it is in season. Many homemakers have already been passing it by, simply because they were not sure just which cuts to buy or how to distinguish good quality veal from poor quality. The home economists of the Consumer Section are the logical people to give information on buying meat — so it is from them that this veal information originates. The Department of Agriculture Livestock Regulations say that "veal shall have fat that is white, creamy white or tinged with pink. The bones shall be soft and reddish and the flesh shall be firm and fine grained. And, this is the important part — the flesh may range in color frim light grey to reddish-brown." It is this business of color that is often confusing. Unfortunately in the past homemakers were told to always look for veal that had a greyish-pink color but it may also be reddish-brown. And why is that? consumers ask. It amounts to this — veal is the flesh of a young calf but it may be a calf just a few weeks old or one a few months old. Naturally, the very young animal has greyish-pink colored flesh, but as it grows, grows older and heavier, its flesh tends to turn toward to reddish color of beef. So veal from an animal of say from four to five months old may be reddish-brown but it is still veal. Veal from young calves with the greyish-pink flesh is only available for a short time, mainly in the areas where it is produced because the tiny young calves could not stand a long journey to transport them to other markets.

There are two types of veal produced in Canada — veal from young beef calves. In the Fraser Valley of British Columbia and in the dairying farming country of the eastern provinces veal calves are usually of dairy breeding and have been fed principally on milk or milk substitutes. However, western veal — from the beef cattle country of the west — comes from beef cattle which have been fed first milk and then grain. This type of veal usually has firmer flesh and may be of better quality. Western veal will have a more reddish colored flesh than will the dairy calves — which will be more on the greyish-pink side.

The cuts of veal sold in the butcher shops may differ in certain areas, but generally there are roasts — similar to those you buy in beef — chops and steaks which are similar to the steaks of beef and, of course, stew meat.

Do not cover a roast of veal. A cover holds the steam so that the meat is steam-cooked, not truly roasted, and there is a great difference in the flavor between steam - cooked and oven-roasted veal.

"Here Comes The Bride"—To The Kitchen

AFTER the honeymoon, sooner or later, every June bride finds herself facing the stove. Her aim . . . to cook a meal her husband will enjoy and she'll be proud to serve.

Whether a freshman or graduate cook, you'll be glad for the many modern foods that help during newlywed days. It's a good idea to browse through your grocery store and note the many cooking helps all ready for you. Then stock up. Canned meats and fish, condensed soups, precooked-rice, biscuit mix, frozen main dishes, etc.

Next step is to stock up with tempting easy recipes. Casseroles, naturally, are one of your best bets. Reach to your shelf of convenience foods for a can of mushroom soup and one of tuna — plus a package of noodles. What a heavenly combination you can create with these three. And the variations possible are dazzling. It can be cream of chicken soup with a can of chicken, or cream of celery soup with salmon. Each comes forth as a knock-out nöodle casserole. Memorize this prize recipe pattern:

Mushroom Tuna Triumph

1 can (1¾ cups) condensed cream of mushroom soup	1½ cups unsalted cooked noodles (2 3 ounces uncooked)
½ cup milk	2 tablespoons diced pimiento
1 cup drained flaked tuna (7-ounce can)	¼ cup buttered bread crumbs

Blend soup and milk; then stir in remaining ingredients, except crumbs, in a 1½-quart casserole; sprinkle crumbs on top. Note: To cook noodles add them to boiling water and cook about 15 minutes, or until tender.) Bake casserole in moderate oven (375° F.) about 25 minutes. Makes 4 generous servings.

For Celery Salmon Casserole, follow recipe with tuna; but use salmon instead of tuna. And use cream of celery soup instead of cream of mushroom.

For Chicken Casserole, follow recipe with tuna; but use chicken instead of tuna. And use cream of chicken soup instead of cream of celery.

SOUP SCOOPS

Vegetable Juices Appease Appetites: Now comes the season for backyard suppers and picnics, happy get togethers where everyone "gets in the act" of cooking. Better have a large can of vegetable juices chilled and ready to offer around. While the gang waits for the franks to fry, serve them the ice cold vegetable juices, and appease the appetites enjoyably.

New Program Interest Is Target in Q.W.I. Leadership Course

"To take part in some musical activity is not only good for the single individual involved, but it is the most useful tool I know for pulling a group together and improving its morale". This statement made by Mrs. D. L. MacFarlane, Macdonald College, on which she enlarged in a talk given to the Quebec Women's Institutes at the convention last year, created an interest in this "tool", and in an effort to further stimulate this a new class entitled, "Music in Your Programs" has been added to this year's annual Leadership Training Course, to be held at Macdonald College, May 24-28. The Q.W.I. has been most fortunate in securing Mrs. MacFarlane as instructor, who has had wide experience in this work, and it is hoped the formation of many singing groups among the membership will be the result.

New Life for Your Programs is a popular class that is being continued, under the able leadership of Miss Roberta Ridley, Information Centre, Macdonald College, and Gardening has been put back on the agenda, with Miss P. Harney of the Horticultural Department in charge. Miss F. Elizabeth Campbell, of the Q.W.I. staff., is leading the class in Recreation, and Miss N. Hasel of the same staff, has a small class in advanced weaving. Basketry is the other craft this year.

The evening sessions are as usual devoted to discussions of problems under the general heading, "Running the Organization", with the 1st vice-president, Mrs. G. D. Harvey, attending as resource person. Mr. Jas. Davidson, of the College, is in charge of the session when discussing group techniques are to be studied.

Applications are coming in at a satisfactory rate and all indications point to another successful year, with the maximum enrolment of 40.

A Weekly Feature of Helpful Hints on Child Training

(Copyright) — By NANCY CLEAVER —

Do you remember when your first-born was put into your arms? There are few moments in all of life which can compare with this experience. There are none greater!

Mother forgets the long months of waiting, the hours of child birth in the joy of feeling this warm, vibrant little bundle, with the soft hair, the long lashes sweeping the delicate pink cheek, the miniature nose and mouth. She slips one of her fingers into a tiny shell-like palm, and baby's fingers close tightly around hers.

"I had no idea a new baby was so small!" a young father said recently, "but when I looked through the Hospital Nursery glass at my son asleep in the tiny crib, did I ever feel big!" Many a father is almost as relieved as a mother, that the baby is safely here — and is perfect in every way. If father had been counting on a boy, and a daughter arrives, any sense of disappointment soon disappears. Little girl babies have ways of casting a spell over their fond fathers'.

One of the loveliest of good wishes for a child's future appeared in "Antony: A Record of Youth" by The Earl of Lytton. Antony writes these lines to Lady Gage, after the birth of her son: "May all the best things in the world be his always, and life fall on his shoulders like a brave, rich and beautiful cloak."

"The best things in the world" — all parents want just that for their children, and whether or not boys and girls will receive this heritage depends to a great extent upon the character and ideals of the parents. The mother or father must try to be what they want their children to become, because example is so much more effective than precept.

A well-adjusted, happy, successful individual usually comes from a home where parents enjoy their children. It is not easy to enter imaginatively into their joys and sorrows and try to understand the reasons for desirable or undesirable behaviour. A good parent views problems objectively and not with a personal or emotional bias.

In a recent book Mary Lincoln, Biography of a Marriage by R. P. Randall, there is a chapter "Four Dollars A Week" of the early married life of the future president of the United States.

The author writes:

"One can picture the anxiety in the deep-set eyes at the birth of his first-born, and then their lighting with the joy of fatherhood. A basic human experience had come to the Lincolns to bind them together; two heads bent over the perennial miracle of a newborn baby, flesh of their flesh. From this time on the name "Molly" disappears from the record. Sometimes Lincoln called her playful pet names like "Puss", "child-wife", or "little woman", but mostly after this he called her "Mother".

Freda Newton Bunner, a Canadian poet who is the mother of three children has echoed emotions of many parents as they look down on the lovely little form of their baby in these thoughtful lines which are quoted by special permission:

NEW BORN

This is our child — at last!
The dream of yesterday is past
And now he lies — a person in my arms
What have we done? What have we done!
Brought a new soul to birth
To face a lifetime on this earth
All lies ahead. And what's ahead?
Oh God! What glory — or what dread!
What can we do?
We are not wise enough we two
To guide this precious life we have begun
God show the way!
We both must pray —
We both each day

COULD THIS BE YOU?

HOT MEALS vs COLD

Say "Nutrition" to some people and they will answer "Vitamins". Vitamins were all the rage during the 1920's and 1930's. One might have gathered from some of the publicity that a taste for old-fashioned food was evidence of unscientific Victorian sentimentality; the way to live a long and sparkling life was to replace the kitchen with the medicine cabinet and subsist wholly on vitamin pills.

Nutritionists of course never expounded such theories; they were generated by over-enthusiastic speed-readers. If nutritionists paid attention to nothing but vitamins, nutrition could easily become as great a killer as malnutrition. One should never underestimate the need of the human machine for vitamins, but one should also remember that ptomaine poisoning, undulant fever and dental caries have come from foods containing vitamins. A dose of vitamin A in a spoonful of potassium cyanide might cure one of night blindness, but not in this world. Grass is rich in vitamins, but the human factory, Nebuchadnezzar to the contrary, cannot digest it.

All these considerations are important in the study of nutrition. And there are many others. A nutritionist must be a physicist as well as a chemist.

The sister of the lady who submitted the following question has apparently been subjected at some time to an over-emphasis on vitamins, and may be surprised to learn that eating is a trickier business than it seems.

Question: "I have been having an argument with my sister about hot meals for children. Her children eat more or less the same foods mine do in the way of meats, vegetables, fruits, etc., only she serves her dinners cold, "picnic style", because she says her children prefer them that way and eat more. I have always been taught that there is no substitute for a hot meal, but she says it's the same vitamins, hot or cold, and it's all the same temperature by the time it's chewed up and swallowed. Who is right?"

Answer: If we work in unison with body demands we give the food to the stomach at a normal temperature. Digestion begins when the food reaches normal body temperature, 98.6 Fahrenheit. Some foods are easily soluble, hot or cold, but if a solid, chewy food is eaten cold some of it will be passed to the intestines and wasted before it has time to reach digestion temperature.

PANACEA FOR ALCOHOLISM?

The following question, received by the Health League technical section on Alcohol, seems almost to be hinting for an individual diagnosis, which is something the Question Box must necessarily avoid. The lady appears to want to be told that her husband is or is not a victim of alcoholic disease. Two bottles of whiskey (pints or fifths?) over a week-end is not precisely "light" drinking, but a qualified doctor would have to see and talk to the man to determine whether it should be called "uncontrolled" drinking. Fortunately, however, the answer to the lady's question would be the same with or without accurate diagnosis.

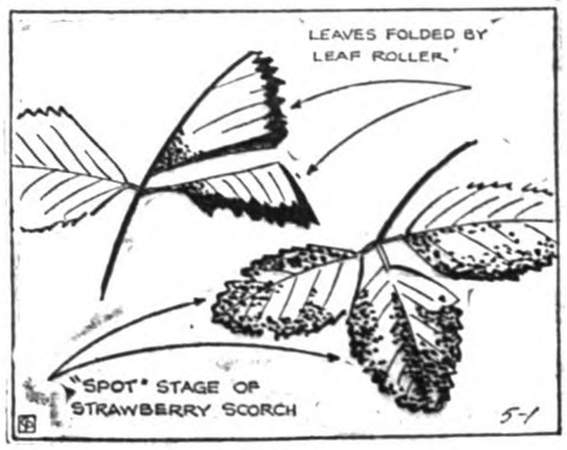

Question: "My husband drinks more than is good for him. He doesn't go out on sprees with the boys, but he does drink at least two bottles of whiskey at home on week-ends and gets quarrelsome and harsh with the children. Is there a pill I could put in his coffee or food to break him of this habit?"

Answer: You may have read of clinical treatments involving the use of antabuse. This is a complicated treatment which requires full consent and co-operation of the patient. Home use of any such drug could be dangerous. You should make an effort to have him seek advice from one of the public or private clinics that now treat these conditions.

All questions submitted are answered anonymously by members of the medical advisory board or special technical sections of the HEALTH LEAGUE.

Garden-Graph

Give strawberries an early once-over for leaf troubles. Leaf roller, leaf spot and leaf scorch may ruine your crop if you don't take precautions.

In April and May, small grayish or brown moths of the strawberry leaf rollers are about ready to lay their eggs on the undersides of strawberry leaves. Young caterpillars hatch from the eggs, then feed on the leaves from the undersides. When about half grown, they move to the upper side and draw the leaf together, as shown in the accompanying Garden-Graph. They then continue to feed on the inside of the leaves.

Should you find strawberry leaves that have been rolled up by this pest, remove them at once. Wrap them in newspaper and burn in order to destroy the caterpillars caught inside.

If the leaf rollers still infest your plants, spray with arsenate of lead. Then spray again a week later. If the rollers are present after the fruit has formed, spray only with rotenone.

Two strawberry leaf diseases, leaf spot and scorch, both are caused by fungi.

Scorch is almost as common as leaf spot, for which it may be mistaken in the early stages, when the spots are irregular in outline, as illustrated.

Control of both leaf spot and scorch can be had by spraying with 4-4-50 Bordeaux mixture as soon as growth is well started in the spring. Repeat treatment in 10 days, if necessary. Fall applications also will aid control.

is situation has now changed definitely. At this time of the preparations are made by the onal Employment Service of Unemployment Insurance Com- ion to help a large number of g Canadians who graduate or school to find suitable em- ment. The NES, in counselling who enter the labor market he first time, assists them in ng employment according to abilities.

order to satisfactorily perform work, the National Employ- Service has a number of well qualified counsellors who visit schools from September to June, deliver informative talks to students, and thoroughly discuss with them labor market conditions; they also inform them as to how to approach employers. In May and June, these students are registered with the National Employment Service for employment.

As soon as the students leave school, they are interviewed by counsellors, at which time a complete inventory of the educational qualifications, preferences, hobbies, aptitudes, work experience, etc., of each candidate is made and carefully studied by the counsellors. Of great help in completing the counselling process are reports containing valuable information submitted by schools. As a rule, more than one interview is required before the candidate is referred to employment.

Employers seeking suitable material, as well as youth entering the labor market, are both assisted by this service. It is a considerable improvement over the haphazard methods of years gone by.

The Problem of Unemployment

By Lewis Milligan

Canada has the raw materials, industrial equipment, efficient management, skilled workmanship, ample capital and business enterprise to provide full employment for its working population. With all these facilities for industrial prosperity, why has there been a falling-off in employment in the last six months? To find an answer to that question I have been making some inquiries at first-hand, and the conclusion may be summed up briefly as follows: We can produce and deliver the goods, but there are not sufficent buyers who will pay the prices we ask and must receive if our industries are to pay the costs of production and marketing.

While on a visit to the City of Welland recently I pursued my inquiries. Previously I had passed through that city several times, but had never realized that it was the centre of one of Ontario's highly industrialized areas, including the urban parts of two adjacent townships, with a total population of 30,735, a gross production of $89,585,132, and a wage total of $23,261,937 in 1952. During and since the war, workers had enjoyed full employment, the average income being $2,891 per year up to the middle of 1952. Managerial-labor relations have been good, and although wage demands have been increasing, productivity of workers is said to have more than offset that factor.

The decline in employment began in July, 1953, when there were 870 out of work. A further decline occurred in September when many were laid off in the heavy industries, and today there are 2,600 unemployed in the area. The three heavy industries affected are, Atlas Steels Limited, Electro Metallurgical Company of Canada, and Page-Hersey Tubes Limited. Diversified industries are said to be doing fairly well, their products being readily absorbed by the domestic market.

In order to discover why these three heavy industries had laid off about half their regular staffs, I interviewed their managers. They all blamed the present situation on the decline in sales, due to their inability to compete with the lower prices of goods imported from countries with low production costs. I was told, for instance, that Britain, Germany and France could manufacture and deliver steel and other such products to any part of Canada at much lower prices than it costs to produce them in Welland.

The annual reports of the three heavy industries showed a steep falling-off in sales during 1953. Atlas Steels suffered a decline of over $9 million in sales last year. Net profits, after provision for income taxes, were $872,680 in 1953, as compared with net profits of $2,706,707 for 1952, a drop of nearly two million dollars in one year. Factors adversely affecting sales in Canada are said to be "production cutbacks and inventory-reductions in many industries. While stiffening competition among recovered European companies, plus lower labor costs, had affected export sales." Moreover, the continued high exchange rate of the Canadian dollar adversely affected trade with dollar-shortage countries which had to restrict Canadian imports.

It will thus be seen that the unemployment problem, at least so far as the Welland industries are concerned, is one of selling the goods they produce. And the sales problem is not confined to European countries. A teacher of languages in Toronto, who translates correspondence for an Ontario manufacturing firm, showed me a letter written in Spanish from a sales prospect in South America. The letter expressed admiration for the quality of the samples of goods submitted, but regretted they could not be handled because the prices were too high. Many such letters must have been received by manuturers across Canada, and they go to show how our products are being priced out of foreign markets and our workers out of employment.

The problem is how to maintain the Canadian market for Canadian manufacturers and this must be seriously faced by employers, by labor, and by the government, which adds greatly to costs by high taxation and has added to industry's difficulties by reducing tariffs. I intend to deal with those aspects of the Welland situation in another article.

"Electronic Brains" Deserибed to Engineers

Quebec, May 12 — "Electronic Brains" are today used to calculate load-distribution on power networks, train aircraft pilots, control airport traffic, keep track of airline reservations; to take mail order house inventories and make stock reports; to control food stocks, predict election results, and even to translate Russian speeches into English." That is what W. J. M. Moore, research officer of the National Research Council, Ottawa, today told engineers attending the 38th annual meeting of the Engineering Institute of Canada, in session here this week.

There are two distinct classes of computing machines available today, he said, "analog" and "digital". With analog computers, accuracy is limited usually to one part in 1,000 or at most one in 10,000. These are probably the most widely used today, being relatively inexpensive and easy to understand. Digital computers are required where greater accuracy is desired, such as in accounting and inventory control.

The aircraft and guided missile industry, in connection with defence contracts, has probably been responsible for most of the postwar compueter development to date. Three companies are developing general-purpose computers.

"The Reservisor", a computer developed by Teleregister Corporation for American Airlines, can check seat availability and can sell or cancel from one to four seats of any eight flights at one time, on a total of 1,000 flights a day for a ten day advance period. During a normal day 22,000 calls are handled by it at the American Airlines office in New York City, the speaker said.

"The Distributor" keeps track of inventories for a large mail order house in Chicago. It takes account of many thousands of items, and prepares totals as to numbers of orders, cancellations and inventory balance. Last Christmas it replaced 60 clerks with ten operators.

J. Lyons and Co., Ltd., of London, have a machine they call "Leo", for accounting and controlling stocks of foodstuffs in their vast restaurant and grocery chains. It works only five hours a week for its owner but does additional work for defence industries.

Mr. Moore also described an amazing statistical computer called UNIVAC which was used in the last U.S. election for predicting the outcome of the voting. Three machines, with two acting as a check on one another and one standing by, took only six minutes to make a prediction on a given group of data. On election night when only a fraction of the votes were in and 21 states unheard from, the machine predicted 100 to 1 in favor of Eisenhower. Since a close election was expected the results were doubted. But ten minutes later, with a slight change in the factor, and when more complete results were in, UNIVAC repeated its prediction of 100 to 1, and it was realized no mistake had been made.

PUBLIC ACQUIESCENCE – CITY FATHERS AUTHORIZED TO BORROW $100,000 FOR TOWN HALL, CIVIC WORKS

The Lachute Town Council was authorized to borrow $100,000 by issue of debentures to pay for the cost of building a Town Hall and other public works, at a public meeting held in the civic auditorium Tuesday evening. The by-law, read in English and French, was heard by 15 interested proprietors and electors, none of whom raised any objection to the proposed borrowing of the money.

The loan will be issued upon approval by the Lieutenant-Governor of the Province.

Other Business

It was decided that Lot 1373 be sold to A. Roy for the sum of $400, with all existing and incoming servitudes included. The mayor and secretary-treasurer were authorized to sign the necessary transfer. The lot, after a recent survey, was found to be 110 feet wide instead of the believed 85 feet when the agreement was made in August, 1947.

Authorization was given to the mayor and secretary-treasurer to sign all necessary papers with Geo. Y. Deacon and Gordon Cruise for the prolongation of Evelina Street to Cruise Boulevard, providing that they are able to purchase a lot belonging to Roland Audet.

Fire Chief Geo. Y. Deacon was present at the meeting, and informed the Council he had received a call to a fire in Lakefield. The truck and men were ready, but he told them to stand by until official

Safe-Crackers Busy Tuesday Night

Burglars left a steel safe at the J. P. MacKimmie & Sons Bottling Works useless Tuesday night after they succeeded in prying and breaking the door open — only to find their efforts unrewarded. Less than $25 in coin was reported stolen; and according to Jas. MacKimmie, this sum was not in the safe but elsewhere in the offices.

Entry was gained to the building by means of a rear window, which was pried open. Tools were taken from the trucks and machinery in the plant and used to open the safe in the upstairs office.

Police report seeing no signs of anything unusual on their rounds at 11 p.m., when it is believed the men were in the building, and again at 2 a.m. Some noise was heard shortly before midnight, but it was thought at the time to have been made by an employee changing a truck tire.

A thorough search of the offices was made by the intruders, who were definitely amateurs, according to Provincial Police who investigated. It appeared that a careful lookout had been kept during their operations, as footprints were visible between the windows.

The thieves, who opened the safe without the aid of explosives, ransacked the offices and consumed some of the beverages bottled by the company.

Local Officers At Conf'ce on Traffic And Police Affairs

District provincial and municipal police attended a rally of police officers held in the Montreal Craig Street Armory and were informed by the Hon. Antoine Rivard that speed limit markers, showing the start and finish of 60 m.p.h. zones, will be erected along highways in this province.

Municipal authorities were requested to amend their traffic by-laws according to the provincial law, so that motorists will know where they stand.

According to Police Chief Ducharme, who was in attendance at the meeting, Lachute's traffic by-law is similar to the Provincial Traffic Law, and therefore no amendment will be needed for some time.

A safety campaign for Lachute and district motorists will be launched June 1, and will continue for a two-week period, according to the Chief, who requests co-operation from all motorists in making the safety campaign a success — and making Lachute a safer place in which to walk, drive and live.

Local officers in attendance at the rally were Chief Ducharme, Lachute; Chief Marcel Parent, Brownsburg; Ayers Police Officers Williams and Levis — as well as Det. Maurice Lamoureux, Traffic Officers Howard Jones, Albert Legault and Roger Massie, of the Provincial Police detachment here.

Old Landmark Razed by Fire At Lakefield

One of Lakefield's residential landmarks, erected well over half a century ago, was destroyed by fire Saturday afternoon shortly after it was re-opened for the season. The fire was burning for some time before it was discovered, razing the old Johnstone homestead to the ground. The building was situated across from the Evans General Store.

The frame house had just recently been renovated by the owner, Bob Andrews, who is related through marriage to the Johnstones. It is believed that sparks from the pipes ignited between the upstairs walls early in the afternoon; the smoke and fire were discovered shortly after 2 p.m. Loss was estimated at well over $5,000.

Residents attempted in vain to save the building and contents; little of any value was salvaged from the building.

Gasoline tanks across the street were kept cool by continually pouring water over them; nevertheless, the heat was so intense that it blistered the paint on the tanks and on the Evans storefront.

Charge Comes from Western Constituency — Political Patronage in Postal Appointments

THE WEEK AT OTTAWA
By Don Peacock, Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, May 17 (CP) — Plodding along towards its hoped-for late-June prorogation, parliament heard a CCF member charge the Post Office department with practising political patronage and advise Postmaster-General Cote to "chop some heads off."

Alistair Stewart, Winnipeg North Centre, based his case on a file of government correspondence concerning appointments of sub-postmasters in his constituency. The correspondence was tabled in parliament recently by the government.

Mr. Stewart read a series of letters — requests to individuals to nominate suitable people for sub-postmasters. In most cases, he said, the letters went to defeated Liberal candidates Peter Karaska and Frank Chester in Winnipeg. He said many were signed by R. H. MacNabb, director of the Post Office department's operations branch, whom he described as "a sort of political commissar for the Liberal party."

Mr. Cote said that for years the department has asked advice on appointments from many people, including the Canadian Legion, defeated candidates, members of parliament and people in the locality.

Ayersv'l Requests Prov'l Permit for A Hotel Orchestra

The calling of tenders to fill the position of secretary-treasurer of the Municipality of Ayersville was the first item of business at a meeting held last week, under the chairmanship of Mayor Gaetan Paquette. Councillors G. Poulin and Douglas Bradford were absent from the assembly.

The secretary was requested to write the provincial authorities requesting that the Tessier Hotel be given permission to have an orchestra. This request was made by Mr. Aubry, proprietor of the hotel, and was unanimously approved by the Council, as it was felt that it was better to keep the people in the community than encourage them to go outside. If permission is granted, it will be under By-law 10, which stipulates that all music will cease at midnight Saturday, and specifies opening hours on Sunday from two in the afternoon until nine in the evening.

It was decided to ask the Department of Municipal Affairs for permission to borrow $12,000 on a temporary loan to balance the budget.

The financial report ending December 31 was accepted and the municipal auditor, Roland Morin, C.A., was appointed municipal evaluator for 1955.

Two Arrested In Robbery at St. Philippe Café

Two Ottawa district residents recently employed with Marcoux Transport Company, were arraigned in Hull court Monday on several charges of theft. The two were arrested by Det. Maurice Lamoureux in connection with a recent robbery at the St. Philippe "Paris Inn", for which they will be arraigned in St. Jerome.

The two, Edgar Cleroux, 25, of Cyrville, Ont., and Bob Lawson, 25, of Chelsea, Que., were arrested last Wednesday when they arrived for work. Det. Lamoureux, who has been conducting investigations on the Paris Inn case for some time, seized a personal car and truck belonging to the men. Both vehicles were reported to be equipped with stolen tires.

Everything movable of any value was stolen from the Paris Inn at the time of the robbery. Most of the restaurant equipment, chairs, cutlery and dishes, and the oil furnacette, were recovered.

Ch. of Commerce Ladies' Night on Tuesday, May 25

On Tuesday, May 25, at the Legion Hall, the Lachute Chamber of Commerce will hold a Ladies' Night in connection with their annual meeting.

A turkey dinner will be served at 6.30, after which Marcelle Barthe, whose voice is well known over the CBC, will address the gathering in both English and French. This distinguished personality, whose radio experience covers some 15 years, had the honor of being the only lady radio announcer to accompany the King and Queen on their tour across Canada in 1939. Her activities have been many and varied, as in the production of her own program, "Letter to a Canadian", she has interviewed countless persons of all classes and nationalities.

The Chamber of Commerce is fortunate in having Marcelle Barthe come to Lachute, and none who hear her will be disappointed.

Later in the evening there will be dancing, and altogether a pleasant and profitable time is expected.

Tickets for this event are available from team captains of the Chamber of Commerce, or at the local office on Main Street. Tickets should be procured without delay by all who desire to attend.

Travel Topic and Club Business At Lions' Meeting

Companions with Jack MacKimmie on this interesting tour were Messrs. Mac E. Walker, Don Wilson and Des Connelly. Most striking aspect of the scenic record was the contrast in landscape, from humid "jungle" to cloudy heights; in the wealth and poverty of the Mexican people; and in the architecture, from ancient to pseudo-ancient and ultra-modern. To many who witnessed these films, they proved a revelation of little-known scenes, facts and customs in a neighboring country. . . Introduced by Ian Gordon, the speaker was cordially thanked by Bob Dixon for the pleasure afforded by his pictures and informal description.

The Lions' meeting was chaired by President E. M. Jones. Membership certificates were presented to three recently inducted "cubs" by Ex-President Phil Roy.

Much correspondence was presented by Secretary Phil Tremblay, mostly in acknowledgment of financial aid or soliciting support of the club in worthwhile causes. . . Such efforts of the club, formally recited by the secretary at the recent Zone meeting in St. Johns, now make a very creditable record of service during the current season.

Herb Graves and Ian Gordon gave emphasis to the golf tournament and car drawing — the year's most important fund-raising project to make these service projects possible. The car will be displayed at Lachute Spring Fair again this year, and there will be ample opportunity for all citizens to subscribe for tickets before the tournament (July 31 - August 1) and thus participate in the Lions' community work.

Local Traffic and Vagrancy Charges

Jos. Denault, 68, was taken to St. Jerome and charged with driving under the influence of liquor, following an accident on Robert Street Friday evening shortly after 9 o'clock. Denault collided with a parked truck owned by Douglas Boyd, of Louisa.

The accident was investigated by Police Chief Ducharme and Asst. Chief W. Lepine, the case being then transferred to Det. Maurice Lamoureux. Denault will appear in court tomorrow.

A Brownsburg resident, Edgar Charlebois, is awaiting trial on a similar charge, resulting from a collision between his truck and a stationary taxi.

Two residents of Lachute, both minors, have been charged with vagrancy and are presently awaiting sentence. Both have caused local police considerable trouble for some time.

The Moore family of Tyrone, Ont., has delivered the rural mail in the same territory for over 70 years; present incumbent is Leon Moore, 42.

L. H. S. Centennial Graduation Stresses Facts of Local History

Colorful Ceremonies Are Interspersed With Reminiscence and Recollection

The High School graduation exercises — held last Friday in the school auditorium before a large assembly of parents and friends — were something more notable than usual. The same colorful setting, the same hushed excitement prevailed as in other years, but there was a factor more important — more impressive perhaps to the adults than to the youthful celebrants: this was the 100th graduation day at Lachute High School!

Contributing notably to the glamor of the occasion was the decorative scheme in the auditorium. The centennial motif was carried out in an elaborate weave of color, the centre of which was an immense birthday cake with electric-lighted candles. The effect thus achieved was a distinct credit to the graduates' committee in charge.

James W. McGibbon, chairman of the School Commission, opened a page from community history. In 1855, he recalled, a bill was passed by the Parliament of Lower Canada granting a charter to Lachute Academy. First classes in this institution of learning were held in the east ward home occupied by the late J. W. McOuat, who became prominent in the educational progress of this district. (These premises are now the Lowe residence adjacent to the dairy.) Concerning that period, Thomas' History of Argenteuil states that farmers "could not protect their sheep from the lynx that roamed the district." A very rare specimen of a lynx was shot here last week — which made the contrast in conditions more remarkable. . . Mr. McGibbon touched upon other tremendous changes and more recent developments, all indicationg that the future holds great possibilities. The graduating class, "representing the results of several years in one of the best schools in our province — representing the best this community can produce" were now embarking on this great and promising future; and the speaker, on behalf of the School Commission and the community, wished them success.

Principal F. H. Royal also touched upon local history, and clarified dates. Prior to the opening of Lachute Academy, the Rev. Thomas Henry was holding classes in the church basement. In the newly formed school, there were doubtless a number ready to pass out of the Lachute Academy that same year, 1855; so it was justifiably felt this could be established as the 100th graduation. . . "Many of your forefathers at that time were toiling to clear the soil and establish the groundwork of community living, for Lachute Town was not actually incorporated until 30 years later."

The principal stressed the present implications of Democracy, as the sharing of responsibility. The job of our future citizenry is to "straighten out the chaos" into which the world has drifted. The speaker pleaded for "individuality" as compared to "similarity"; the latter can only produce mediocrity — while there can be no world leadership without individuality. Finally he wished the graduates prosperity, "not measured in terms of dollars and cents, but in success and happiness."

Clifton Scott, who capably m.c.'d the proceedings, thanked the speakers, and the exercises continued with an introduction of the class members individually by Dorine Laurin; a reading of the traditional "last will and testament" by Frances Hooper and Brent Steele; and the class forecast, by Heather Rodger and Ronald Armstrong. Ruth Cowan gave the valedictory — all the participants fulfilling their parts in the program with poise and confidence.

The young ladies in their white graduation gowns, and their escorts in best bib and tucker, then formed up for the colorful Grand March, opening a pleasant session of dancing for both young and older townsfolk. Music was provided by Al McGowan's orchestra. . . During the intermission, refreshments were served at tables in the school cafeteria.

Serious Bush-fire Occurs North of Lake Settlement

A small camp-fire believed to have been started by local fishermen raged out of hand in Sunday's high winds, and, before it was brought under control by volunteer workers, consumed nearly 15 acres of bush land between Round and Rainbow Lakes, a short distance from Lake Louisa summer settlement. The fishermen escaped through the bush and remained unapprehended.

Discovery of the fire was made by Jas. W. McGibbon when driving along over the private road to the lumber camps, around 2 p.m. At that time the blaze was confined to an area only 25 to 35 feet square just off the road. The McGibbon lumbermen in the vicinity were called out, and close to 40 men from Lake Louisa, Dunany and surrounding country answered the call, many remaining on the scene until the fire was extinguished shortly after nine that evening.

Forest fire-fighting equipment, procured from District Fire Ranger E. Moderie, who lives west of St. Andrews on the River Rouge, was transported to the bush by truck. A large pump was operated with considerable hose, to combat the blaze.

High winds rapidly spread the fire to the young forest growth, and at one time several men were cut off by a wall of flame.

According to Mr. McGibbon, who directed the operations, the wind would have swept the fire clear back to Montfort had volunteers not been available and willing to fight it — and if the outbreak had gained a little more headway before being discovered.

Montreal (CP) — Macdonald College plans to offer courses in farm woodlot management next fall as part of the over-all effort to maintain an adequate pulp and timber supply in the province.

Grant Beatty Elected Chatham Councillor

Chatham taxpayers turned out to the polls in small numbers to elect Grant Beatty to the office of councillor. He defeated his only opponent, Bazil Clark, the retiring councillor, by 100 votes, the count being 294-194. A third contender, Reginald Morrow, withdrew his name from the voting shortly before the election took place.

A turnout of less than 500 of the 1,200 eligible voters exercised their franchise.

The Chatham Municipal Council now comprises Mayor Romeo Lemay, Secretary-Treasurer Gerard Trottier, Councillors John F. Black, Paul Richer, Noel Lemay, Roland Desforges, Adam Meyer and Grant Beatty. (Messrs. Desforges and Meyer were elected by acclamation on May 10.)

Banquet Tendered By Ayers Ltd. for "25-Year Club"

Clément Tremblay 50 Years With Company; Enrolments Bring Select Group to 117

Lachute Golf and Country Club was the setting for a very colorful gathering last Saturday, as members of the Ayers "25 Year Club" and their wives were guests of the Company at the annual banquet, attended by approximately 200 people.

The evening's proceedings were under the chairmanship of Leonard Ayers, vice-president, who welcomed warmly the 19 new members to the Club. A few words were added by Gilbert E. Ayers, president, Tom Milnes, General Superintendent, and Clement Tremblay, Secretary-Treasurer — who is celebrating his 50th year with the Company.

The music was supplied by Romeo Duhamel and his trio, while Ovila Legaré, well known radio comedian, entertained the guests.

Towards the end of the banquet, gold watches and souvenir buttons were distributed to the new members. With the 19 new enrolments, the club's membership has reached the imposing total of 117. New members of this distinguished group are:

Harold Maidens, Melvin Scott, Gordon Scott, Norman Hodge, Arthur Bélanger, Germain Poulin, Geo. Combie, Jr., Harry P. Joly, Ovila Legault.

Léo Robertson, Wilfrid St-Jean, Aurèle Poulin, Oscar Larocque, Léopold Roquebrune, Alderic Poulin, Donat Joly, Gédéon Dagenais, William Graham, and Miss Graziella Brodeur.

Insure Western Cattle On Community Lands

Regina (CP) — Cattle in Prairie Farm Rehabilitation Administration community pastures have been insured for years.

The owner of the cattle pays the premium. If he loses his cow while it is in the care of the community pasture for reasons other than disease or death from natural causes, he collects half the market value of the animal.

Livestock insurance was carried by 32 pastures in 1953 with a total of 57,061 head of stock covered. Losses of 407 were reported, 321 of which were eligible for insurance.

Farmers with livestock in community pastures obtain insurance two ways — through bonded insurance companies or through mutual associations they set up themselves.

No PFRA funds are used for insurance purposes. The farmers pay between 60 cents and $1 a head for insuring cattle with insurance companies and around 50 cents a head with the mutuals.

In the mutual setup, if losses exceed the total premium payments — a rare occurrence — then the farmer-members themselves absorb the additional loss.

Be Prepared for Caterpillar Invasion

Farmers, home owners, park superintendents and resort owners in eastern Canada are urged to prepare against another invasion of tent caterpillars this month.

According to J. G. Hastings of the agricultural chemicals department of Canadian Industries Limited, the invasion will last from May until the end of June. If not controlled, great areas of forest land and many ornamental and fruit trees in parks and home gardens may be stripped clean of their foliage. Evergreens will not be affected.

As weapons, he suggests the use of hand or power sprayers and 50 per cent DDT wettable powder applied at the rate of two pounds in every 100 gallons of water for large areas, or four level tablespoonsful in one gallon of water for a few trees. These rates should be doubled when spraying trunks to control migrating caterpillars.

Mr. Hastings says there are two species of caterpillar prevalent in Ontario and Quebec — the eastern and the forest tent caterpillars. The eastern species constructs a web or tent in the forks of tree branches which serves as a base of operations. The forest species is more difficult to spot as it has no tent but migrates from one tree or shrub to another in search of food.

For summer resorts, wood lots and large forest areas, airplane spraying is recommended, using a 12½ per cent DDT oil concentrate.

Wild Mustard Robs Fertility

The continued use of weed free seed and the exercise of better cultural practices with an assist from the use of 2-4-D, will eradicate and control Wild Mustard.

That Wild Mustard, sometimes called Herrick or Charlock, is one of the worst weeds in Ontario, is the experience of the Ontario Department of Agriculture. It is to be found everywhere. Wild Mustard (Brassica Arvensis) is an annual weed, producing up to 15,000 seeds each year. Its bright yellow flower and a many branched stalk make it easy to distinguish.

It is a land robber, taking more moisture and fertility from the soil than most other weeds. It decreases grain yields and will live in the soil for years, or until it is brought to the surface by cultivation. It is considered as a primary noxious by our seed laws, and will not be found in the better grades of seed. Special pre-season cultivation and good after-harvest cultural practices, will reduce the numbers of seeds found in the soil by encouraging germination.

In 2-4-D we have a potent chemical to eradicate this pest. One acre of Mustard plants carrying 2,000 to 3,000 pounds of living green plant material can be killed by only 4 ounces of 2-4-D acid, and at earlier stages and in good conditions even 2 ounces will destroy this weed. The increased yields from our grain crops makes it economical to try any or all of these methods to control Mustard.

The Dairy Cow in Canadian Economy

The following, from the National Dairy Council in Chicago, is sent to us by the Consumer Section of the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa: "At times of nervous contemplation about the 'World of Tomorrow', it releases me to think about a cow. I guess there is nothing more natural than a cow. Science can manicure her, homogenize her, pasteurize her, advertising can glamourize her, but when you get right down to reality she shill looks like a cow, moos like a cow and in fact is a cow. And I for one, hope she stays that way, chewing nonchanlantly right in the face of the fine, fancy world of tomorrow".

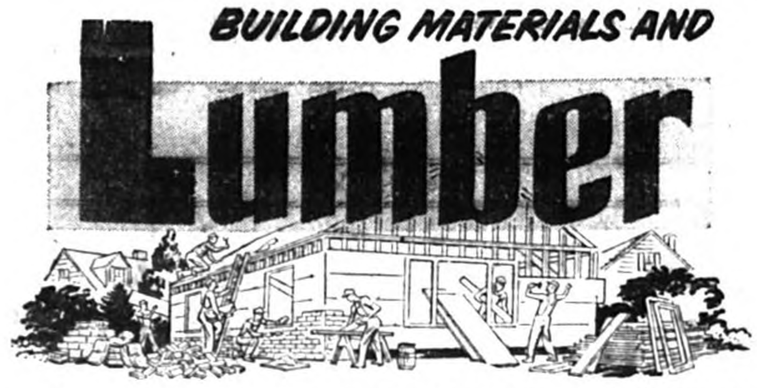

Your Future Hangs On the Dairy Cow

Your future hangs on the dairy cow — writes the Consumer Section. The importance of butter in the economics of agriculture certainly cannot be overlooked. Over two million people in Canada live on farms and naturally a large proportion of them are concerned with dairy farming. As well as that, two hundred thousand people work in plants that process dairy products. The farmer's wages are the cash returns he gets for his products. If his cash income strikes a very low mark, then he cannot afford the products of industry. This eventually has a far-reaching effect, because employment in industry is based on the consumer's ability to buy, and the farmer is the consumer of many manufactured articles.

EXPECT CO-OPERATIVE FARM TO YIELD BETTER LIVING

Ontario's first co-operative farming venture is in operation near Kingston on 1,800 acres along the Rideau canal. Seven farmers and their families have formed a syndicate of effort and by assigning many of the individual phases of farming to individuals, they expect to make their work easier and more profitable. Art Haas, Jim Little, Bob Barkwell and Harold Ghent here show their co-operative equipment in front of their barn. Co-operative farming has proved successful in Western Canada.

MEMBER AUDIT BUREAU OF CIRCULATIONS

Historic Tour Ends

THE BELLS ring out all over Britain on great national occasions, and they were rung with enthusiasm when Queen Elizabeth returned from her Commonwealth journey.

The six-month tour that took the beautiful young Queen as far as Australia and New Zealand was the most arduous of its kind that had been attempted by any monarch. People in Britain were proud that she had carried out all her duties with such success. They were eager to show their affection for Elizabeth and her husband, the Duke of Edinburgh, and for the young Prince Charles and Princess Anne who joined their parents at Tobruk for the last stage of the journey home.

The British people are learning something that was perhaps appreciated better in the overseas portions of the Commonwealth — that as well as being Queen of Great Britain, Elizabeth is also, separately, Queen of Australia, Queen of New Zealand, Queen of the other individual realms and territories — including Queen of Canada.

Elizabeth has become a beloved citizen of the Commonwealth as a whole. People in the countries she visited claimed her as their own.

The historic change which is developing in the monarch's relations with all the self-governing portions of the Commonwealth is not merely a matter of constitutional change in the various lands.

It is fostered and strengthened by the character of Elizabeth herself. None of her subjects is more faithful to duty, more conscious of the obligations of her position, than Elizabeth.

She is not only a gracious young woman who trained long and hard for one of the world's most arduous posts. She is not only a good wife and devoted mother. She has become the living, human link between peoples and places of vast contrasts, scattered all over the world.

She is setting an example of hard work and devotion to duty that is an inspiration to all.

Blasting Caps Dangerous

THE BOYS thought the handful of pencil-shaped objects they picked up near a construction job and tossed into a fire were firecrackers. They stood around waiting for the explosion. . .

But what came wasn't the bang of firecrackers. It was a blast that sent splinters of metal and rock into the faces and bodies of the group. What they took for comparatively harmless firecrackers were actually blasting caps — useful in experienced hands but deadly when handled carelessly or improperly.

From now on many construction projects will be in full swing across Canada. Explosives will be used for excavation work. Farmers will be blowing stumps, digging ditches and blasting boulders with dynamite. To detonate the dynamite they'll be using blasting caps. Some may be left around by careless persons and children will pick them up. Possible results — a blinded, maimed or dead child.

Blasting caps are small aluminum or copper cylinders about 1-inch in diameter and range from one to five inches in length. They are loaded with a powerful and sensitive explosive charge. There are two types. One has an open end and is fired by flame from a fuse. It is often mistaken for an empty .22 cartridge. The other type has two wires extending from one end and is fired by electric current. It could be mistaken for a firecracker or a pencil holder. Either type, if struck with a hammer or rock or placed in a flame, may kill or injure anyone standing within 25 feet.

Parents, teachers and youth leaders are urged to remind children continually of the danger of blasting caps. If they find anything resembling the highly explosive metal cylinders, they must not touch them but should report their findings immediately to police or other authorities.

THE WORLD can judge what a Gibraltar in British hands has meant to freedom since the 1914 war and what a Gibraltar in Spanish hands would have meant. It is amusing of the Spanish Ambassador to have called it a "worthless base" and we marvel at his desire for collecting such useless objects. — Trenton (Ont.) Courier-Advocate

More TV's Than Bath Tubs

IF ANY doubt exists that television has caught on in Canada, it finds no basis in trade computations. . . According to a recent survey on television usage, the television area of Windsor, Ont., now has more sets than home telephones or bathtubs.

There are approximately 77,000 television sets in the Windsor viewing area, according to Canadian Radio and Television Manufacturers' Association sales reports. This compares with an estimated 42,500 home phones in the same area, and the Dominion Bureau of Statistics' latest estimate of 76,000 bathtubs (presumably in use).

A trade spokesman claims that this trend is becoming general in most metropolitan communities which have had television service for the past five or more years. Television sets have been sold in the Windsor area since 1949. The unique feature of this comparison is that Windsor still hasn't a TV station of its own, and won't have until about July of this year, when CKLW-TV plans its opening. Thus far Windsor televiewers have depended on Detroit for their TV fare, to hold first place in receiver coverage over all other cities in Canada.

A Job for Rare Qualifications

A NEW KIND of career in the north is being opened to adventurous Canadians. . . The job is called Northern Service Officer, and the men who are chosen to fill it will live at the edge of the Canadian Arctic: at Aklavik near the mouth of the Mackenzie River; at Coppermine on Coronation Gulf; at Coral Harbour on Southampton Island; at Port Harrison on the east coast of Hudson Bay; at Frobisher Bay on Baffin Island; at Fort Chimo on Ungava Bay.

"This is work with a rare kind of challenge," Northern Affairs Minister Lesage commented when announcing the competition which the Civil Service Commission is conducting for his Department. "Canada is now turning in earnest to the development of its northlands. It recognizes the special problems of the Eskimo, whose traditional life is being changed by contact with men from the south, by new methods of hunting, by new forms of employment. These Northern Service Officers will have a great responsibility for the future of the lands and the people who live there."

The men chosen will work in established communities in Eskimo country. Their job will be to get to know the native peoples, to help them use their available resources, and to develop new resources to improve their economic, social, and cultural conditions. They may assist them with local industries such as boat-building, tanning, or handicrafts, and they will always be on the lookout for new outlets for native talents. Equally important, these officers will advise the Administration in Ottawa of measures which might be taken to imorove the life of the Eskimos, and to help them make a bigger contribution to national life.

Nearly everyone who has worked with the Eskimos has become an enthusiast for Canada's most northern residents, but the job of the Northern Service Officer is not for anyone. It is for men with the qualities of leadership which opened up other parts of Canada in earlier years. Pioneering today is a better life than it was for the first visitors to the west or to the Arctic. The Northern Service Officers will have homes and facilities for their families, if their families are willing to share the life. The radio and aeroplane reduce the remoteness from the south; but it is still a frontier. . . No desk-bound workers need apply.

Uniform Road Signs

LET'S HAVE uniform road signs, urges The Financial Post. The present situation is confusing and dangerous. With interprovincial traffic increasing rapidly, it is going to get more so, and not just for trucks but for all sorts of vehicles and their passengers.

In several provinces and many states, widely different signs are used for marking curves, hills, railway crossings, schools, crossroads, and other danger points. Regulations as to the placing of traffic lights and signalling vary. Driving would be very much safer if all warnings were identical along roads everywhere on the continent.

Surely in this non-controversial business, provinces and states can get together and agree and put into operation a uniform system, at least extending across North America.

Over the Years with THE LACHUTE WATCHMAN

75 YEARS AGO

May 23, 1879 —

Lachute needs a land surveyor and a lawyer.

Messrs. Hamelin and Ayers announce the opening of business here. Their stock of cloth is very large and of excellent quality.

Some very mischievous or wicked person cut the belts in the Lachute saw mill last Sunday. We hear of other depredations being committed also.

50 YEARS AGO

May 20, 1904 —

Wednesday afternoon the fire alarm rang out, and investigation showed the wooden sidewalk opposite the skating rink to be all ablaze. The presumption is that a spark from a passing C.P.R. freight caused the fire. The children, who had just been liberated from the Academy, proved willing workers and carried sufficient water to speedily extinguish the fire.

Mr. O. Robillard, who looks after the drives for the Riorden Paper Mills Co., arrived Tuesday from a trip up the Riviere Rouge. He reports disastrous forest fires are raging, rendering some 15 families homeless besides doing much damage to the forest.

On Saturday, the Bickle Fire Engine Co. gave a demonstration of a pump that was tried out at different parts of the town and had as many as four streams going at one time. The demonstration was such as to prove its efficiency in handling almost any situation that could arise.

FARM INCOMES

Farmers' cash income in 1953 is now estimated as 3% below the all-time high of 1952, The Financial Post says. Total is about $2,741 millions. Some provinces did not suffer a loss though. Nova Scotia cash income was up a shade, and Saskatchewan reached a new record. There was less than 1% drop in B.C. Prince Edward Island was hardest hit, with a 30% decline.

"Nazi But Nice"

Since the arrival in port of the Karel Doorman, Montreal's streets have been a mass of Dutch sailors. The Netherland's big flat-top lumbered up the river last week, and the crew immediately took the city by storm. They visited the shops and the movies, the taverns and the lounges. And, it was in one of the latter, two nights ago, that I met up with one of these lads.

"Where is your home in Holland?" I asked in my best remembered Dutch.

"Den Helder," he replied, and added, smiling, "I know the English language very well."

"Fine," I replied. "Were you living in Den Helder at the close of the last War?"

"Ja, I've lived in that town all my life. I was there when the War ended."

"So was I, and I've been hoping that I might meet up with one of you fellows who did live there. I've been racking my brains lately to try and remember the name of the German commander that was placed in charge of the seaport there, when the Nazis overran the country."

"Ja, I know who you mean," the sailor said, "but I can't recall his name. He was quite old — and stupid, too!"

"Yes, he was old," I answered, "but he wasn't altogether stupid. In fact, he was pretty cute, if you ask me."

"Oh, yes? Why so?"

"When the '39-'45 war ended, our brigade headquarters was moved to Den Helder, and we were charged with the task of herding the departing Germans over the causeway to their homeland. Accordingly, we saw a great deal of the seaport and, also, had to work in close collaboration with the Commander. He was the senior Nazi officer in the district, and all our orders to the German troops had to go through him.

"Toward the end of May, when our job was almost complete, the time came for the Commander to pack up his belongings and make the trek home. Just prior to his departure, he called all the Allied officers to his quarters to thank them for their courtesy and kindness to him and his command. He had, he said, enjoyed the greatest understanding from the officers he had dealt with. All had respected his rank, and, despite his defeat, had considered him an officer and a gentleman. To express his appreciation, he had gifts for all.

To our brigadier, he bequeathed the flags from his staff car. To a Dutch officer, he had bequeathed what remained of his well-stocked cellar. And, to a British Captain, he gave a wonderful woodcut of a battle scene. There were drinks all 'round at the ceremony and an esprit de corps existed that one wouldn't have dreamed possible only a month earlier.

After the party was over, the British officer tucked the woodcut under his arm, and went to call on his pals at the Royal Dutch Navy Mess.

'See what the Commander gave me for a farewell present!' he crowed, on entering the mess. 'Darned decent of him, wasn't it?'

'It was indeed," the Dutch sailors said. 'And it's very decent of you to return that print to this mess, too!'

The British officer's face fell, and turning the picture over it fell even farther. There, on the reverse, was the stamp of the Royal Dutch Navy Mess, Den Helder.

'See,' the Dutch commander said, 'there in the wall. The peg on which that wood-cut used to hang.'

Taking the picture from the crestfallen captain, he put it back where it belonged. Returning to the Englishman, he patted his back and said:

'Don't be too sad, England. That nice old German sailor took the print from us in 1940, when he took over the seaport. We were wondering if we'd ever get it back. And to show you our appreciation for your kindness to us, please accept this little token of our friendship."

"The Dutchman handed the British captain a large case containing 24 bottles of Dutch gin. When last seen, however, the poor Englishman still looked very sad. True, he was a lover of good art, but he was, in addition, a strict teetotaller."

My new Dutch friend was pensive a moment. Then he charged his glass and raised it high.

"That's war," he mused, "down the hatch!"

ALL ABOARD
With G. E. Mortimore

We were touring an industrial plant. Our guide halted and gave a pressure gauge a sharp tap on the face. The needle did not move.

"Goodness knows why I did that," he said. "Everybody taps a gauge from habit. It never serves any useful purpose."

He was an engineer. But I learned after some enquiries that he was partly wrong. Certain kinds of gauges respond to tapping — because they stick. Others don't respond at all.

In the notion of a highly-trained man strolling through an industrial plant, tapping gauges that didn't need to be tapped, I saw something mildly funny.

Possibly the act of tapping is a ritual, like touching wood. It asserts the superiority of man over machine. On the other hand, this may be just another instance of the human mind's failure to cope with the machine age.

People conversing on a telephone can't see one another — unless the phone has a television attachment. And yet the personality boys gesture and grin at the mouthpiece. Women flutter their eyelashes at the telephone and sometimes wiggle their hips at it. But it doesn't move, any more than the needle on the gauge does.

Sometimes when people ask me the date, I find myself looking at my watch as though I could read the answer there.

Men inspecting a car always kick the tires. They learn nothing by this action. If they drove a toe through the rubber, they would be much surprised. But the tire invariably withstands the attack. As a device of appraisal, the tire-kick is worthless.

Believe it or not, I have stopped myself in the nick of time from saying "Thank you" to a coin-in-the-slot cigarette vending machine.

One man of my acquaintance claims he said it. When the machine answers back, he can start worrying about his sanity.

MORE PROFIT FROM DAIRY COWS

Last week we showed you the first requirement in making more PROFIT with your dairy cows — LOTS OF MILK FROM EACH COW, NOT LOTS OF MILK FROM LOTS OF COWS. One 13,000 lb. cow made almost as much profit as four 8,000 lb. cows.

The second necessity is LONG MILKING LIFE. Cows in most herds are sold because of low production or through "breakdown" before they have finished their third lactation. Such cows have only a year or two to make you a profit after paying back the cost of buying or raising them. Then they are gone. Yet any dairyman not troubled with disease should be able to keep his cows through an average of seven milking periods. Such cows should pay for themselves in less than two years, and making $90 or more profit a year for five years, will make you $450 or more profit on each cow.

PURINA DAIRY CHOWS are built to bring out all the milk-making ability your cow has, without the cow having to furnish from her own body what the feed lacks.

Call in, or call us, and get a supply of PURINA MILK-MAKING, COW-BUILDING CHOWS today, and get started making money with your cows!

Dutch Farms and Flood Rehabilitation

Dutch farmhouses and flood rehabilitation in the Netherlands will be the subject of two talks by Lisje Putland on the CBC's "Trans-Canada Matinee" on June 9 and 16.

Mrs. Putland, who is the Dutch member of the Associated Country Women of the World, gave a talk on the CBC last summer when her organization held its international conference in Toronto. At that time she discussed her country's progress with flood rehabilitation. She will add to that report in her talk of June 16.

On June 9 she will explain the continuing use of ancient allegorical signs on the farmhouses in the Netherlands, a custom that originated long ago with the belief that certain symbols on a home would bring it good fortune.

"Trans-Canada Matinee" is broadcast at 2.15 p.m. EDT.

Heartfelt sympathy is extended to Mr. Walter Dewar and family, in the passing of a beloved wife and mother, at her home in Brownsburg early last Wednesday morning after a distressing illness.

Mrs. Dewar will be greatly missed by her many friends. Her genial disposition and her friendly smile brought happiness to all who knew her.

We'll miss her now in her accustomed place,
While she partakes of everlasting joy;
May arms of refuge and eternal grace
Bring happiness and peace for her at rest."

A HANDFUL OF DEATH — Children and adults alike have been maimed or killed by playing with blasting caps similar to those illustrated above. There are two types — both dangerous in the hands of the inexperienced. The electric blasting cap has a coil of wire attached to it. The other type is detonated by fire from a fuse. Made of aluminum or copper, blasting caps vary in length from one to five inches and are approximately one quarter of an inch in diameter. They may be mistaken for empty .22 cartridges, firecrackers or pencil holders. If found, they should not be touched. Police or other authorities should be notified immediately.

BIG SHARE

Victoria (CP) — One-quarter of British Columbia's retail trade in 1953 was done by auto dealers and service stations. The statistics bureau reported that of every $10 spent, $2.08 went to car dealers and 42 cents to filling stations.

Appreciation

We wish to thank all who helped, in any way, last Saturday during the fire which destroyed our home at Lakefield. In such times of trouble one appreciates the number and the loyalty of one's friends. Despite our great loss, we are thankful that no one was hurt and that the fire did not spread to neighboring homes.

— Bob and Doris Andrews

Dr. and Mrs. W. L. Morrison, Arundel, wish to thank all neighbors and friends for their prompt action in ringing the fire siren and arriving at their home early Sunday morning — thus helping to avoid what might have been a serious fire.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Miller would like to thank all their neighbors and friends who so kindly came to their aid in time of sickness, and did all their spring seeding.

Clarence would also like to take this opportunity to thank everyone who so kindly thought of him while in hospital with gifts of flowers, cards, cigarettes and candy.

No Election

The municipal representation which required the election of three councillors, saw the return of two of the outgoing members, Sam Rose and René Lafleur, and the replacement of Ernie Lavoie, who did not seek a return to office, by Jack Golphin. (Jack was a member some years ago, being elected in 1947, so is no stranger to municipal affairs.)

Dress Optional

This is the time of year that thousands of young men and women graduate from our institutions of learning. This act of graduation is becoming a word to be spelled with a capital "G". The object of education has been that "you should learn all that it concerns you to know, in order that thereby you become all that it concerns you to be." In other words, the aim of education is the knowledge not of facts but of values. In connection with this knowledge of values, for graduating girls this final act is a controversion of the facts — an ignoring of values! Graduation, convocation, commencement — call it what you like — has become a formalized event to which the wearing of prescribed raiment is a must. Most universities and colleges have become aware of this costly custom and provide the prevailing mode, namely a cap and gown. High Schools, however, insist on the so-called "formal", which except for the one occasion is a useless and extravagant addition to a young lady's wardrobe. . . Its continuation is an outmoded mistake.

Sunday Observance

There are certain areas in this bailiwick where the Lord's Day is ushered in to the clatter of lawnmowers, the ring of the garden spade, and the swish of the axe. Our present work week of 42 hours leaves plenty of time for home beautification without the sinful example of unnecessary work on the Sabbath. Without being Quakerish, Sunday is also a day of rest — if not for you, for your neighbor, whose right is a respite from the noisy chatter of Sunday busybodies. Think well on it.

LADIES' NIGHT AT ROTARY CLUB

The Rev. Thomas Mitchell, of St. Patrick's College, Ottawa, was guest speaker at the Rotary ladies' night in Brownsburg last Thursday. (A report of this address is held over due to lack of space.)

DARWIN'S DRAMA

One thing stands out in the recent Australian spy case. It was the drama of freedom.

When the Australians were convinced that Mrs. Petrov was being taken to Russia against her wish to seek political asylum, only that fact was considered, says The Financial Post. Relations with Russia, Russian accusations, worldwide repercussions — all those fell into the background. And Mrs. Petrov — the individual — was considered.

More than any revelations of spy-rings, more than any propaganda advantage, this is the lasting importance of the Petrov case.

Bishop Dixon Attends Parish Banquet Held At Morin Heights

Morin Heights — Last Wednesday evening a parish banquet was held in the auditorium of the Morin Heights School, with the Rt. Rev. John Dixon, D.D., Lord Bishop of Montreal, as guest of honor.

Attended by 160 persons, the whole parish of Mille Isles was represented. Chairman was the Rev. H. G. Baugh, rector, and others at the head-table included the Ven. Archdeacon J. F. Morris and Mrs. Morris, Col. and Mrs. Garnet M. Strong, the Rev. and Mrs. C. W. P. Baugh, the Rev. Dr. G. Basil Jones and Mrs. Jones, the Rev. and Mrs. C. R. Lang, the Rev. R. Blair, F O McCaffrey, Mayor and Mrs. Charles Campbell, and Mrs. D. Jackson. Dinner music was provided by Messrs. Douglas Reed and Albert Rutledge.

Following the banquet, a Confirmation service was held at Trinity Anglican Church, where 40 candidates were presented to the Bishop. Assisting in the service were the visiting clergy. The Bishop congratulated this Laurentian parish on its vitality and energy, and expressed his appreciation at the tremendous progress being made within the parish.

City Fathers Authorized To Borrow $100,000

authorization came from two members of the Lakefield Council. As this was not forthcoming, the call was not answered.

"We do not hesitate to answer a call outside the immediate town, unless we have had previous trouble with payments from the municipality concerned," the Chief said. He informed the Council of a previous instance when a call was answered; the truck was taken back in thick fog, and because they were too late to extinguish the blaze, the people in question refused to pay the bill, finally compromising and paying half the stipulated amount. "We will take a chance the first time, but if there is any trouble then, the next call has to come from someone in authority."

Scout Parade

The Laurentian District Boy Scouts Association was given permission to hold a parade from the C.P.R. Station to the Fair Grounds on the day of the Scout Rally. Assistance from the police for directing traffic was also granted.

Ald. Réal Morrissette moved that the Catholic School Commission tax bills be sent out early, as they were last year, but at an increase of $200, making the total fee $600, to be divided as follows: $100 to the Corporation for stationery and stamps, and $500 to be divided equally between the secretary-treasurer and his assistant. The motion was seconded by Ald. Jules Charlebois.

Dumpsite

The question of the dumpsite was once again brought up by Mayor Dr. Jules Lafleur, who made several suggestions from which some definite action is hoped for soon.

Evaluators

Ald. Ross Muir repeated his motion of the last meeting, which at that time had no seconder. The motion — that the three evaluators appointed last year, Messrs. Chas. Meighen, Jos. Constantineau and Cyprien Durocher, be appointed as evaluators, with Philisa Chabot and Wenceslas Chenier as assistants — was now seconded by Ald. L. Gibeault.

Ald. Réal Morrissette moved in amendment that Messrs. Meighen, Chenier and Lacoste be appointed, with Durocher and Constantineau as substitutes. Ald. Jules Charlebois seconded the amendment. The vote was taken, and turned out 5-2 in favor of the main motion made by Ald. Ross Muir. It was decided that the men be paid the same wages as last year, that is, $2 a day for transportation and $1.25 an hour for working time.

It was decided to request the Provincial Government to pave Hamford and Millway Streets to the sidewalk on both sides, as these streets are under the maintenance of the Provincial Roads Department.

Building permits were granted to John Giles, Jr., for a house on Cottingham Blvd.; Philippe Legault, for a house on Hamford Street; and Bernard Allard for a house on Cloutier Street — subject to the approval of the Roads Committee.

Mayor Dr. Lafleur informed the Council that the Venturi tube would be installed and in operation at the chlorination plant by the end of June, barring any major delays.

The meeting was adjourned sine die.

The Town of Pincher Creek, Alta., gained its name from a pair of pinchers lost there by an early prospector.

Week at Ottawa

through two branch-lines of Canadian National Railways.

Transport Minister Chevrier met no opposition as he introduced a bill authorizing the government to guarantee up to $44,562,500 in CNR bonds for the lines. The largest will be built 294 miles into Quebec's new Chibougamau mining area, some 250 miles northwest of Quebec City. The other line will run 27 miles into the rich new Manitouwadge mining district in northern Ontario.

It will be built south from Hillsport on the CNR main line about 200 miles northwest of the Lakehead. The Quebec line will extend in an arc from Beattyville, near Abitibi on the Ontario border, northeast 155 miles to Chibougamau and then southeast 139 miles to St. Felicien, on the west side of Lake St. John at the head of the Saguenay Valley.

Extend Control

The government also introduced legislation to extend federal controls over rail and ship movement of goods in bulk for a further two-year period. Again spokesmen for all opposition groups supported the legislation which would replace an order-in-council passed under the Emergency Powers Act. It was introduced because the government plans to permit emergency powers to expire at the end of the month.

Mr. Chevrier said the powers extended under the bill to federal transport controller Roy Milner are necessary to ensure the movement of bulk commodities such as grain to meet export requirements. The transport controller would have no control over the movement of bulk goods by highway traffic.

Veterans Committee

The Commons agreed to set up a special veterans' affairs committee on the government's terms, but this time with repeated opposition demands that its agenda include study of war veterans' allowances.

Members of all three opposition groups reiterated requests that the 31-member committee be empowered to consider more than the legislation proposed by the government. After a day-long debate, however, the House adopted the motion of Veterans Affairs Minister Lapointe that the committee be formed to study two bills dealing with war service grants and servicemen's benefits.

The chief topic of opposition speeches was the War Veterans Allowances Act under which "burned out" veterans — those whose earning capacity has been lessened by war service — are paid allowances of up to $50 a month for single veterans and $90 for married. They urged the government to boost the allowances this session.

Keep Mine Going

Mines Minister Prudham told the Commons that a plan has been worked out between the federal and Nova Scotia governments for resuming operations for five months at the closed Drummond colliery in Westville, N.S., whose product recently was turned down by the CNR on the ground of poor quality.

The mine employs about 330 men and chief sales have been to the CNR for locomotives. The federal government, which just a week earlier refused to provide extra help for the pit, now has agreed to a five-way deal within the limits of existing subventions but with additional money put in by the Nova Scotia government.

Students to Serve As Interim Pastors

Toronto (CP) — More than 200 United Church theological students have left for northern Ontario and points in the West to serve as interim pastors until their return to college in the fall.

Six of them are young women who aim to make the ministry their life work.

The company is the largest group of student pastors to be sent out since the United Church of Canada was formed in 1925.

Because they have not yet been ordained, the students generally will not perform marriages, baptize children or serve communion. In exceptional cases, however, provision is made for baptisms by the students by special permission from the church's general council.

The 240 men and women will get $30 a week clear of expenses. Provision is made for their board and travelling expenses.

Bible Briefs

WHERE IS THIS FOUND?

By A.A.M.

The Bible is rich in stories, and the purpose of this series is to encourage readers to look up for themselves the Bible versions of these incidents. If there are children in the family it is suggested that the story, and the Bible verses on which it is based, be read aloud.

Here is a story which is told in three of the four gospels. Do you think you can find it?

Jesus' Disciples had a conversation on their way to Capernaum with the Master as to which of them was the greatest. Upon arrival at their desination, when they went into a house, Jesus asked them, "What were you discussing on the way?"

Silence fell on them. They must have been ashamed of their argument because no one attempted to answer. But Jesus knew very well why they had been quarreling, and so he said, "If any one would be first, he must be last of all and servant of all." Then Jesus took a little child and put him in the midst of his twelve followers. Then taking the child up into his arms he added this to his disciples: "Whoever receives this child in my name receives me, and whoever receives me receives him who sent me; for he who is least among you all is the one who is greatest." Perhaps you have guessed where in the Bible this is found. But read this story for yourself, or aloud to your family in Matthew 18, 1-5, or Mark 9, 33-37, or Luke 9, 46-48.

God's Promise NOW in Fulfilment Is

"I am creating new heavens, and a new earth." — Isaiah 65: 17, Young.

What do these words mean? The burning up of this earth on which we live? No, not that, for God created this earth for man's eternal home. In the book "New Heavens and a New Earth" read about God's promise now in fulfillment and of the new world of righteousness he is creating. In beautiful blue binding, 384 pages, only 50 cents. — Write 40 Irwin Avenue, Toronto, Ont.

GRENV'L HIGH SCHOOL NEWS AND ACTIVITIES

By Willis Young

Highlight of this week's column is the Graduation. The first Graduation Exercises and Dance to be held in this school were an outstanding success.

The evening began with a banquet served in the lunch-room at 6.30, at which all the graduates, their escorts, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. McGerrigle, Mr. C. Legault, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Beauchamp, and Mr. R. C. Whinfield were present.

Bob Perry, acting as m.c., announced the toasts — one to the Queen by Willis Young; one to the School Board by Everett Arthurs; one to the Teachers by Harvey Hoare; one to the Graduates by Barbara Dewar, to which Eric Bates replied; one to the Undergraduates, to which Barbara Andrews replied.

Mr. Whinfield, in replying for the School Board, mentioned that in 1941 only one pupil was in Grade IX, while now there was a graduating class of seven. Mr. McGerrigle, who replied to the toast to the teachers, gave a brief summary of his sojourn in Grenville, and was pleased to extend best wishes for success to the graduates.

The Exercises, at 8.15 o'clock, commenced with "O Canada", David Foreman, m.c., then called on Harvey Hoare who gave a brief history of the "eminent gentlemen of the class of '54." Harvey introduced just the right touch of humor into his talk and the audience enjoyed it immensely.

Eric Beauchamp and Eric Bates then gave the class Prophecy. This was very well done and provoked many hearty laughs.

Eric Beauchamp introduced the guest speaker, Mr. Ralph Dale, from the Hawkesbury High School. Mr. Dale, comparing life with a river, mentioned that the graduates of today are embarking "in their own personal boat on a very rough part of the stream." They must have confidence in God and in themselves if they wish to succeed. To show his interpretation of the rapids, Mr. Dale discussed several topics which are troubling the world today. His talk was very much appreciated.

Eric Beauchamp thanked Mr. Dale, and Everett Arthurs and Bob Perry were then called upon to read the Last Will and Testament. This was extremely well done. The class of '54 have now bequeathed every article of this year's requirements (girls and cash exempt) to the class of '55.

Lastly, Willis Young gave the Valedictory and the ceremonies closed with "God Save the Queen".

Bob Perry and Laura McMichael "led off" the Grand March, followed by the remaining graduates and the High School pupils. With this formality the evening's festivities started, and continued to Jimmy Cannon's Orchestra until 1 a.m. During that time, refreshments were served. (We wish to thank those who gave culinary assistance or helped in any way to make the event a success.)

On Saturday, May 8, a group of pupils went to Ottawa — the trip having been postponed from last fall. Mr. McGerrigle, Mrs. Murphy and Miss Hoare accompanied the party to the Parliament Buildings, the Museum, the War Museum, and the Art Gallery. The visitors returned home satisfied that the day had been well spent.

We are pleased to welcome the Kelly family in our midst again. They moved to Niagara, Ontario, last summer, but have decided to rejoin their old friends in their native haunts. We wish them luck — both the children in school and the family in general.

Deep Trolling Offers Change from Bait Casting

Deep trolling for lake trout with a metal line spells drudgery for some fishermen, but hundreds of others think it's tops. Actually it can be an interesting and productive change, from the monotony of bait casting or still fishing.

Few fish can equal the succulent alker as a table tidbit, and when a 10 or 12-pounder smacks into a bait, on 150 to 200 feet of line, the angler gets plenty of exercise trying to boat such a lunker. Down in the Lake o' Lakes section, lake trout fishing is a popular sport, and fish up to 21 pounds are taken every year.

Of course if the angler hits the district in May when the speckles are hitting, he can use the same tackle to go after the lake trout in the shallow water. If they don't take flies, he can use any of the small spinning tackle lures with excellent results. The half-wave spoon is an example, and its a fish-getter if the lakers are inshore

Suitable Baits

When July rolls round and the warm water forces the lake trout to go down deep where the water is cool, the only way to reach them is with the age-old metal wire and spoon. Copper wire and monel wire are used and the favorite baits are the Williams wobbler, the Toronto wobbler, and the Archer spinner. The ruby-eyed wiggler, and many others, even the common daredevil bait are all good.

When slow trolling with an outboard the angler should keep the bait in motion by jerking the rod. Action of a spoon, spinner or wobbler if just trolled is not enough to excite any trout into action. However, if the angler will keep jerking the bait, in a sort of rhythmic motion, he should have little trouble scoring. When you get a strike at one spot, you probably have crossed a deep sand bar or shoal where the trout find their food. It is wise to cruise over that spot several times.

Years ago, this same lake was producing 40-pound lake trout, and according to some of the present-day anglers, there are trout weighing that much still in the lake. They have hooked the fish and brought them into view only to loose them.

The brink of Niagara Falls recedes five feet per year due to erosion.

Goalkeeper Al Rollins of the Chicago Black Hawks has won the Hart Trophy as the National Hockey League player most valuable to his team. But if it hadn't been for the disappointing performance of two substitute netminders he might not have got it.

That's not meant to take any credit from the six-foot-two beanpole from Vanguard, Sask.

Rollins' great value to his club was demonstrated during the four games he missed last season through injury. During the 66 contests he played — behind the team which had the poorest defence and a bunch of loose-checking forwards — Al's goals — against average per game was 3.23.

That average was the highest in the league — Harry Lumley of the Toronto Maple Leafs had the best mark by allowing a measly 1.86 goals per game — but the other goalies weren't playing with a last-place team that counted only 12 wins during the 70-game schedule.

Real Tough Spot

What clinched the Hart Trophy for Rollins in the opinion of most balloting sports writers and sportscasters in the NHL cities was how a couple of replacement netminders, one of them with plenty of NHL experience, shook under pressure during the four games Al was absent from the Black Hawk cage.

Jack Gelineau, who played two seasons with Boston Bruins and was named the NHL's rookie of the year in 1950, was called up from Quebec Aces of the Quebec Hockey League to fill in for the injured Rollins. He allowed a monstrous 18 goals during two games in Rollins' hot-seat and was quickly shuttled back to the Aces.

John Marois, who had been splitting the goaltending job at Quebec with Gelineau, was tried out next and let in 11 goals during the other two contests until reliable Rollins was fit for duty again.

If anyone wanted proof of how Al was holding together a sorry outfit, it couldn't have been demonstrated more pointedly.

However, sports writers did not all favor Rollins for the Hart.

Wrote Elmer Ferguson in the Montreal Herald: "We can't recall when the experts made a more idiotic selection. . . If this sort of mockish sentimental voting is to become a permanency, it's better we should scrap all the awards in the book. . ."

And Red Burnett in the Toronto Daily Star: "It's just possible Detroit's Red Kelly, Canadiens' Maurice Richard and Leafs' Harry Lumley were more valuable to their teams (which finished higher in the standings) than Rollins in the strict sense of the word.

"However, from our point of vantage, the hungry-looking Rollins rates the coveted Hart Trophy — maybe they should spell it 'Heart' in this case — for courage if nothing else."

Nature Shots on Farm Take Top Amateur Award

The Canadian Film Awards is a group composed of the Canadian Film Producers' Association, the Canadian Society for Adult Education and the Canada Foundation. It judged entries from the top moviemakers in Canada.

It was in the fall of 1952 that Chris Chapman decided the time had come to make a nature film. He had no financial backing, but quit his job and retired to the family farm at Lake Simcoe and started filming.

He didn't work to an exact plan. It would have hampered him. "I just took the camera everywhere on the 160 acres around and filmed whenever I saw a good shot." Scene after scene seemed just what he wanted.

There were some exceptions though. One of these is an impressive shot of some ducks feeding at the beginning of the picture. It appears again at the end. For several days Chris waited unsuccessfully in the bitterly cold pre-dawns for the ducks to come and feed on the lake. His camera mechanism stuck with the cold and his legs and arms were numbed. He eventually got exactly what he wanted.

In other shots his luck came more easily. He managed to get some vivid pictures of frozen twisted shapes on the lakeshore which look like huddled petrified mourners; billowing clouds gathering for a storm; and icy water beating on rocks. There's an eerie sequence where a snow-squall whirls across a frozen lake like a dancing ghost.

By the time fall came round again Chris had shot 1,200 feet of film. He had only the simplest machinery for editing film in his lonely cottage. He fitted on the music, which was taken from background recordings, on a portable turn-table.

Chris took the print to Imperial Oil who recognized its unique quality and universal appeal, and bought it. Imperial has presented prints to the National Film Board. Prints may be borrowed from the National Film Board and Imperial divisional offices. The film has taken Canadian film critics, such as Clyde Gilmour, of Vancouver, by storm.

Midst all the praise, Chris, who is now working for Canada's largest maker of industrial movies making pictures on soil conservation, smiles quietly. "It was a fascinating film to make, but I don't want people to read into it anything that isn't there. If it points out the small changes in nature's cycle, it has done what it was intended to do."

Christopher Chapman, 26-year-old amateur photographer, whose first film, The Seasons, has been named the 1953 Canadian Film of the Year. A simple nature film made on an Ontario farm, it brings to the screen the sights and sounds that are commonplace to country folk but which are missed by many others in the rush of modern life. The film was bought by Imperial Oil last year and is being shown on the National Film Board circuit and through the divisional offices of the company.

The 'True' Story Of Robinson Crusoe

On May 28 the CBC radio feature "Speaker's Choice" will begin a series of three talks under the general title of "True Robinson Crusoes", by Capt. R. G. Edwards. The first talk concerns the true story of Robinson Crusoe, outlining Alexander Selkirk's experiences as a castaway buccaneer on the island of Juan Fernandez.

The second talk will deal with the authentic story that inspired "Swiss Family Robinson", describing the shipwreck of Edward Seaward and his family on Providence Island. The final talk tells the story of Robert Drury, a boy who was shipwrecked and lived 15 years among the wild natives of Madagascar.

The speaker, Capain R. G. Edwards, was born at Rawalpindi in the Bombay Presidency and came to Canada at the age of five. He spent 40 years at sea and, since his retirement, has been heard in a number of CBC talk series including "Canadian Yarns" and "The Captain's Log".

Quebec Soirée

"Soirée à Québec", a Saturday-night party from the heart of French Canada, has been a summer feature on CBC Trans-Canada for several years and it's back this year with more old-time songs and dances. The show comes from Dufferin Terrace, at the edge of Cape Diamond in Quebec City, overlooking the St. Lawrence and the City of Levis. A mass-participation program, it attracts to the Terrace many citizens of Quebec as well as tourists who join in the festivities. The assembled company is led by a choir of mixed voices and a group of trained dancers. The orchestra is under the direction of Germain Gosselin.

Sportsmen to Attend Migratory Bird Conf'ce

Montreal — Quebec sportsmen who hunt ducks, geese and other migratory game birds will discuss their 1954 seasons, bag limits and similar matters with Federal and Provincial Wildlife officers, in Montreal on June 2. P. F. Osler, Chairman of the Migratory Birds Committee of the Quebec Federation of Fish and Game Associations, states that W. W. Mair, chief of Canadian Wildlife Service, Charles Frémont, Q.C., general superintendent of Game and Fisheries for Quebec, and other wildlife authorities, will be present to report on duck and other game bird census results and to hear recommendations concerning season durations and other factors.

The annual migratory bird conference, arranged by the Federation, will be attended by delegates representing fish and game associations and clubs located in almost every part of Quebec. The annual conference at Montreal is timed to allow recommendations from Quebec bird hunters to be discussed at a later meeting in Ottawa when all provinces of Canada are represented, and migratory bird hunting laws for each of them are determined.

RUDE INTERRUPTION

Invercargill, N.Z. (CP) — Elderly Mrs. A. E. Birch is a woman not easily disturbed. She sat in the kitchen of her home listening to her favorite radio serial while the Invercargill Fire Brigade fought a blaze in a bedroom in front of the house.

"The serial had just got to a really exciting part," she grumbled when smoke and shouting outside finally attracted her attention.

A New Drama Series On TV Network

"Playbill", the summer CBC-TV drama series, begins on May 25 with a double purpose. First of all, the half-hour plays seen every Tuesday from 9.00 - 9.30 on the CBC-TV network will be as Canadian as possible; the writers will include Joseph Schull, Len Peterson, Stanley Mann, Rodney Coneybeare, Ted Allan, and George Salverson. Secondly, a few of the plays will be experimental in that they will bring before viewers new writers such as Les McFarlane, of Ottawa, and Ernest Watkins, of England; also, new producers will be given an opportunity to develop their talents in television drama.

The first play, "Turn of the Road" by Joseph Schull, deals with the moral conflict faced by a wealthy, pleasure-seeking young man who becomes involved in a hit-and-run accident. Production will be by Henry Kaplan.

World Still Loves A Queen, Tour Proves

On their recent royal tour, Queen Elizabeth II and her husband, the Duke of Edinburgh, covered nearly 50,000 miles, visited 14 countries and crossed three oceans, travelling by train, plane, ship, helicopter, jeep, auto and horse carriage.

Telling of this royal junket, June Reader's Digest says: "By her stunning performance Elizabeth refuted those Socialist critics who had said royalty was getting too expensive. The tour has proved, if proof were needed again, that the people of the world dearly worship a symbol and, if the symbol is for good, then the symbol for bad has no chance against it. You cannot be a Communist or a Fascist and stand for two days in the sun or rain in order to catch a fleeting glimpse of a young girl who wears a crown."

Elizabeth and Philip attended, on the tour, 185 state functions, balls, parties, luncheons and dinners. They planted trees, unveiled memorials, laid wreaths, held investitures, broadcast speeches, opened parliaments. They shook about 50,000 hands, changed costumes an average of four times a day, and reviewed countless troops and constabularies. Through it all, they did not miss a serious engagement or fall seriously ill.

The tour involved a piece of logistics, "roughly comparable to that of a small war." The royal luggage weighed 12 tons, and Army, Navy and Air Forces were deployed in supporting roles.

Elizabeth's wardrobe, which included more than 60 special costumes with shoes and hats, plus 200 pairs of white gloves, "never presented her as anything but immaculate," the Digest observes.

WEIGHTY LITERATURE

Timmins, Ont. (CP) — Those tomes in the Timmins public library must be pretty weighty matter. Councillor J. P. Bartleman reported the east wall of the building is sinking, and an architect has been called in to inspect the matter.

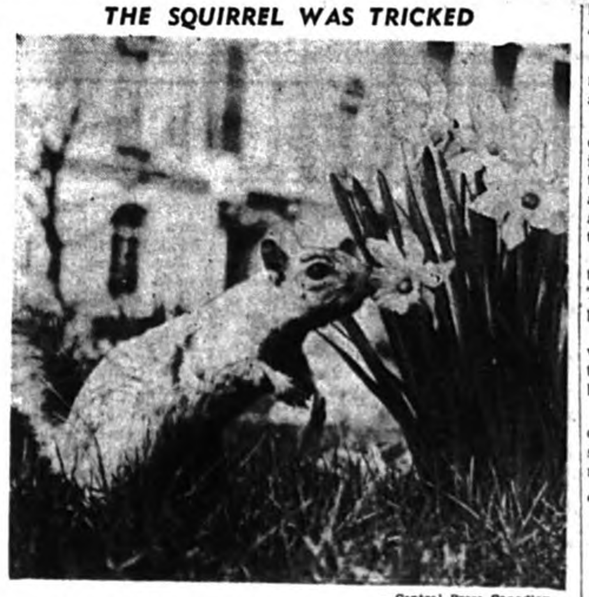

MUSEUM PIECE

Duncan, B.C. (CP) — When Hugh Ferguson, 70, a one-man logging outfit, retires soon, his ancient 25-horsepower donkey steam engine, burning wood fuel, will be retired as a museum piece.

Customer: "That chicken I bought yesterday had no wishbone.

Butcher: "He was a very happy and contented chicken, madam, and had nothing to wish for."

THE SQUIRREL WAS TRICKED

—Central Press Canadian

This might be the only photo ever taken of a squirrel sniffing flowers, in this case jonquils growing in a Washington park. The squirrel was enticed into the photo by a method only brought to light when the photographer sent an itemized expense account to his newspaper. The expense account read: "Special assignment; stuffing peanuts into jonquils — peanuts, 25 cents. Total expenses: 25 cents.

DIAMOND WEDDING

Fort William, Ont. (CP) — Mr. and Mrs. William Westover, who celebrated their diamond wedding anniversary at the home of a nephew, are believed the only married couple remaining of the original pioneers of the Chapple area. Married at Sundridge, Ont., in 1894, they retired from the farm about seven years ago.

MALE ADMISSION

London (CP) — Equality of the sexes is a myth because "by nature women are superior," said Arthur Turner, worthy master of the Incorporated Guild of Hairdressers, Wigmakers, and Perfumers. "Even the plainest women can reduce a man to a child if she dresses well and has her hair styled."

PRAIRIE MERCHANTS ADOPT CASH SYSTEM

Saskatoon (CP) — Merchants in nearly 150 Saskatchewan towns now are operating on a no-credit basis.

R. E. Walter, secretary-manager of the Retail Merchants' Association, Saskatchewan section, said the merchants desire to curb credit as an assurance that a healthy balance of cash sales will be maintained.

"This is not a temporary measure that the merchants have taken. They intend never to leave this policy."

Mr. Walker said the cash system would not work any hardship on the province's farmers who have large stocks of unsold wheat.

He noted that country bank accounts were high and that life insurance and bond sales had been maintained.

Feminine Interests with The Local Touch

By MARGUERITE

At Home

This week, we spent some time looking at a collection of odds and ends of prose and poetry which we have been collecting through the years. We came across the following bit of wonderful advice, written out in longhand on a sheet of yellowing paper. There is no clue as to the author or the date of its writing, but we pass it on to you for your enjoyment.

. . . To be glad of life because it gives you the chance to love and to work and to play and to look up at the stars. To be satisfied with your possessions but not contented with yourself until you have made the most of them. To despise nothing in the world except falsehood and meanness and to fear nothing except cowardice. To be governed by your admirations rather than by your disgusts. To covet nothing that is your neighbor's except his kindness. To think seldom of your enemies, often of your friends, and everyday of Christ, and to spend as much time as you can, with body and with spirit, in God's out-of-doors. These are the little guideposts on the footpath to peace.

Here is a recipe which uses minced beef in a very appetizing way. Three in One. . . 1 pound of minced beef, 1 green pepper (seeded and chopped), 2 onions (cut fine), 1 large can creamed corn, 4 tomatoes (sliced), butter, crumbs, salt and pepper. Sauté the pepper and onions in butter until light brown, add meat and cook until browned. Place alternate layers of meat mixture and corn in a buttered baking dish, seasoning with salt and pepper. Arrange sliced tomatoes over the top. Cover with buttered crumbs. Bake in a moderate oven. Serves six.

Around the Town

We wonder how many local mothers have been called upon for a bit of convincing acting lately. When the toddlers present us with bouquets of flowers we are supposed to be thrilled to death. When the bouquet consists of dandelions it is hard to appear as grateful as expected. And dandelions seem to be the favorite spring flower among the tiniest nature lovers.

There has been talk lately of putting a tax on Canadians travelling to other countries. Someone suggests that the idea is probably to make them feel at home away from home.

See you next week.

Vegetable Recipes

From the Consumer Section, Canada Department of Agriculture

Baked Onions and Cheese on Toast

6 Large white onions, 6 slices buttered toast, ½ cup grated cheese, 1 egg, 1 cup milk, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon paprika, 1 tablespoon butter.

Peel and slice onions crosswise, and cook in boiling salted water until nearly tender — about 15 minutes. Drain well. Arrange slices of toast in a greased shallow baking dish and place onions and cheese on top. Beat egg and milk together, add salt and paprika and pour mixture over onions. Dot with the butter and bake in a moderate oven, 350°F. for about 40 minutes. Yield: six servings.

Potato Loaf

2 Tablespoons milk, ¼ cup butter, ½ cup mayonnaise, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon finely grated onion, ½ teaspoon paprika, 4 cups hot mashed potatoes (8 medium potatoes), 10 thin slices process cheese.

Add milk, butter, mayonnaise, salt, onion and paprika to the hot mashed potatoes and blend thoroughly. Mould in a 4½" x 8½" x 2½" loaf pan. Chill thoroughly. Unmould and cut into 6 crosswise sections. Place 2 slices of cheese between each section, allowing them to extend above the top of the loaf. Place in a baking dish or platter and bake in a moderate oven, 350°F., until cheese is melted and is a golden brown, about 10 minutes. Serve immediately. Note: The chilled loaf may be sliced and served with salads.

Potato and Apple Delight

3 Cups hot mashed potatoes, 1 cup hot unsweetened apple sauce, salt and pepper to taste, ½ cup chopped onion, 2 tablespoons fat.

Combine the potatoes and apple-sauce, mixing gently. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Sauté onion in hot fat and sprinkle on top of potato-apple mixture or combine the onion with the mixture. Serve with sausages, ham or roast pork.

Note: The cooked meat may be placed in a lightly greased casserole, then topped with the potato mixture and heated in a moderately hot oven, 375°F., for 25 minutes or until brown.

SUPPER DISHES

Cottage Potatoes

4 Cups diced cooked potatoes, ½ cup chopped onion, ¼ cup bacon drippings or butter, 1½ cups grated Cheddar cheese, ½ cup milk, 4 teaspoons chopped, canned pimiento (optional), 1 teaspoon chopped parsley, 1½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, 2 slices lightly buttered bread cut in ½ inch cubes.

Mix all ingredients except the bread. Place in a greased, 6 cup baking dish. Spread the bread cubes over the top.

Bake in a moderate oven, 325°F., for 45 minutes. Yield: 5 to 5 servings.

Potato Cheese Soufflé

¼ Cup butter, 1/3 cup flour, 1½ cups milk, 1½ teaspoons salt, 1/16 teaspoon pepper, 4 egg yolks, 1 cup grated chese, 2 cups finely diced potatoes, 4 egg whites.

Melt butter. Blend in flour. Gradually add milk. Cook, stirring constantly until sauce thickens. Add salt and pepper. Add sauce, slowly to beaten egg yolks. Cool. Mix cheese and potatoes into sauce and fold into stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into a buttered six cup casserole. Set in a pan of hot water and oven poach in a moderate oven, 350°F., until firm, about 60 minutes. Yield: 6 servings.

Potato Cheese Puff

1 Cup grated Cheddar cheese, 2 tablespoons melted fat, 2 cups mashed potatoes, 2 egg whites, ½ cup milk, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, ¼ teaspoon mustard, 2 egg whites.

Add grated cheese and melted fat to the potatoes and blend well. Beat egg yolks, add milk, salt, pepper and mustard and mix thoroughly. Add to potato-cheese mixture and beat until smooth.

Beat egg whites until stiff. Fold into potato mixture. Turn into a well greased 4 cup baking dish and bake in a moderate oven, 350°F., until golden brown, about 40-45 minutes. Yield: 4 servings.

Onion Shortcake

6 Medium sized onions (sliced), ½ teaspoon salt, 3 tablespoons fat, 1/3 cup grated Cheddar cheese, soft biscuit dough (using 2 cups flour), ¼ teaspoon paprika, 1 tablespoon chopped parsley, 1 cup medium white sauce, ¼ teaspon salt, few grains nutmeg, 1 egg.

Peel and slice onions and sprinkle with ½ teaspon salt. Stir the grated cheese into the dry ingredients of the biscuit dough before adding the liquid.

Spread dough in a greased 10-inch square pan. Cover with the raw onion slices and sprinkle with paprika and chopped parsley.

To the white sauce add salt, nutmeg and slightly beaten egg. Pour over the onions. Bake in a hot oven, 425°F., for 40 to 50 minutes. Yield: 6 servings.

Butter in Your Home

Butter is something we just seem to accept. We have always had it and we never seem to worry about how butter first came into being. Butter had an odd start in life. Credit for its discovery goes back many centuries to an Aryan horseman. It is said that he put some sour milk in a goatskin, fastened it to his saddle and galloped across a plain of Asia. On reaching his destination he was amazed to find that this delicious sour milk had turned into a yellow mass. He tasted it and liked it. Other herdsmen tasted it and they, too, liked it. Before long the whole tribe was making butter. They put the sour milk in the goatskins and men shook it or beat it until the cream, or butter, had separated from the milk. This same primitive manner is still used today in some parts of the world, but its quite different from here in Canada where the large wooden or steel churns in our 1,600 creameries, turn out from 1,500 to 2,000 pounds of butter each churning.

Butter has two main points of distinction. One is its wonderful flavor which makes it palatable and the other is its high food value.

Canada produces very high quality butter. In nine of our ten provinces, all creamery butter is sold by grade. The grades are Canada First Grade, Canada Second Grade and Canada Third Grade. The addition of the word "Canada" to the grading terms is a fairly recent change in the grading names. It is a fine addition because it denotes that it is a product from our fine Canadian dairy farms.

Let's Eat

BY IDA BAILEY ALLEN

"You don't have to go to a pizzeria to enjoy pizza," observed the chef. "And you don't need to buy it ready-to-eat from an Italian bakery.

"Ah, non, the pizza is now ready to be prepared at home in three different ways!"

Three Preparations

"You can buy it frozen ready to pop into the oven and bake. You can buy pizza mix, complete with the sauce, put it together and bake. Or you can use a yeast mix for the crust, spread with canned marinara sauce spiked with oregano, top as you choose and bake. According to the timing of this chef, any of these methods will produce appetizing pizza in about 40 minutes.

Oblong Pizza

"Instead of the usual pie shape it's really easier to eat if baked in 7x11-inch oblong pans and cut into squares. In any case, the dough must be only a quarter of an inch thick when spread on the baking pan and it should be allowed to rise only 15 minutes; otherwise it becomes too spongy to make a good crust."

"The toppings that can be used on pizza before baking have almost no limit," the chef announced. "For flavor, always brush the dough in the pan with olive oil, then with the pizza sauce that comes with the mix or with marinara or spaghetti sauce and a trace of oregano.

Add Grated Cheese

"Over this, dust grated sharp cheese. Bake as is.

"Or instead, put on any topping you fancy, such as anchovy fillets and bits of black olives; canned minced clams and pimientos; slivers of cooked ham or luncheon meat with thin-sliced onions; then add a little more olive oil, and more grated cheese. Bake always in a moderate oven, 375 deg. F., and serve very hot."

Add 1 tsp. each grated orange and lemon rind and cool. Beat in ½ c. orange juice and 1 tbsp. lemon juice.

Baffin Island Beckons To Saskatchewan Nurse, With Indians Six Years

Prince Albert, Sask. (CP) — Bleak northern Saskatchewan, it seems is not cold enough for nurse Josie Walz. She wants to push northward to Baffin Island, some 1,300 miles north of here.

Josie is a nurse with the anti-tuberculosis league. She covers the northern section of Saskatchewan by dog team, skiff, canoe and plane to check 10,000 persons for the disease.

After working among the Saskatchewan Indians for the last six years, she says she would like to compare her patients and their living conditions with those of Baffin Island Eskimos.

Detecting and preventing tuberculosis in the north is a year-round job. Often it calls for swift action. When tuberculosis vaccine arrives here from Montreal it is only "good" for five days.

"It's my responsibility to get the vaccine to the settlements quickly," she says. She does it, with the help of airways, government officials and friendly northerners.

Indians nowadays are no longer suspicious of the white man's medicines.

"Once they know I am there to prevent tuberculosis they present themselves for examination and vaccination," says Josie.

4,000 Examinations

Between March and October last year she examined 4,000 persons. Some 1,200 were vaccinated.

Josie's winter furs are the envy of her friends. She has a finger-tip length red fox fur parka with mitts to match, worn over woollens and heavy ski-pants on her trips north. In summer she wears slacks and light shirts.

For her ground expeditions, Josie hires an Indian guide.

"It would be impossible to travel without a guide in the north," she says. "He decides on the routes, drives the dog teams, paddles boats and carries bulk during portages."

Nurse Walz carries what she can in the way of medical supplies and her bedroll. She rarely has to take rations as she usually arranges to stay at white people's camps and homes along her route, using her own bedroll and equipment.

The bushlands of northern Saskatchewan are a far cry from the slums of New York, where Josie worked for a time after taking a midwifery course in New York. She has been four years with the Saskatchewan public health department.

Comparing New York and northern Saskatchewan, she prefers the latter. There's much less to be afraid of there, she says.

Glamor goes to your feet for dining and dancing this spring and summer. A Canadian shoe manufacturer has introduced this beautiful evening shoe in a combination of black satin and silver mesh. It is a modified T-strap version, is very low cut and has a tapered heel.

Diet Is Important For Ballet Dancer

Calgary (CP) — How do ballet dancers keep their figures trim?

"Nope of us goes on real certified diets," says Lillian Jarvis, blonde Toronto girl who dances with the National Ballet Company.

"We do eat a lot of proteins like eggs and cheese and we'd like to eat steaks too — but they're too expensive."

Miss Jarvis says all the girls are figure-conscious because the least little bulge shows through the stage clothes.

"Besides, if we get fat we can't dance," added Sandra Francis of Toronto. "We'd get tired carrying ourselves around."

Miss Jarvis explained that quick energy foods are eaten quite often — like figs and cheese. "We're always eating oranges between meals. Then just before we go on we'll gulp down a spoonful of honey — an old standby."

Chinese food is a favorite with members of the company. "We eat Chinese dishes two or three times a week," said Miss Jarvis.

She explained it was something of an adventure "because it never seems to be the same in two places." But it never gives that "awful" feeling of fulness.

Miss Celia Franca, director of the ballet, favors vegetables over meat but summed up a ballet dancer's diet moral this way:

To look light, dance light and feel light you have to eat light.

"Play The Game!"

(Copyright) — By NANCY CLEAVER —

"Play the game! You can't always beat the other fellow, John. If you lose, take it on the chin!" Mr. Brown admonished his son.

"But, you don't like to get licked in a golf tournament," John protested, "and whenever I come home from a school game, you and Mum ask me, 'Did you win?' It's fun to be on top — and I hate losing!"

A child is sometimes unflatteringly candid. John had noticed his father's discomfort when he was beaten at golf. He felt that his parents were eager that his team should invariably be the winning one in the sports at school.

Occasionally he had listened to comments from teachers about good sportsmanship. But John got no pleasure out of a game unless he and his teammates were victors.

What does your child think about winning and losing? Do you know? Have you placed so much emphasis on excelling in sports, that, like John, he hates to lose? Or have you held up the ideal of being a gracious loser and a generous winner?

How much faster a child learns by example than by verbal instruction! It is very hard for a child to play a game fairly, to stick by the rules. He is tempted to blame his partners or complain that his opponents cheated when he is defeated. But if mother and dad take time to play simple games like checkers, parchesi, ping pong, dominoes, and if they themselves are good sports, this is very "catching". Mary soon sees that although she and mother couldn't keep up with Dad and Brother Tom at croquinole, nevertheless mother still continued to have a happy time.

Perhaps more than any other age this is a competitive one. While they are still young, it is in games that children realize the spirit of play is the vital thing, not coming first. The Duke of Wellington said that the battle of Waterloo was won on the cricket field of Eton. He was paying a compliment to the sporting code in the English public schools. This has always asked for triumph if possible, but above all it has expected courtesy and fairness to be shown to one's opponents.

The Duke lived at a time when sports had not been commercialized to the extent which they are today. Now so many adults are spectators, and so few actually participate in games. In this situation it is all the more essential that parents teach their children ideals of sportsmanship.

A boy or girl should learn that there is nothing disgraceful about losing, providing an individual has done his best. But to refuse to abide by the rules or to take an unfair advantage of another player and thus come first must be shunned. The attitude of players and not the score is what builds character.

A man was watching a group of boys playing ball after school in the yard. He asked one lad, "How are you making out? — What is the score?" The boy replied, "the other side has eleven runs and we haven't any yet!"

The onlooker expressed his surprise that the boy wasn't discouraged. But the boy laughed. He was having a grand time. He wasn't disheartened. His team hadn't come to bat yet!

When Junior plays ball or hockey or some other game on a special night of a series for a school or a church team, mother or dad should make a real effort to see the game. It means so much to a youngster to have his parents cheering on the side lines — and how few parents manage to get there! How can they commend their boy for his good sportsmanship if they have never seen him in the moment of victory or defeat?

A boy may have to memorize the fine lines of Sir Henry Newbolt's famous poem "Play the Game." He may admire the ideals expressed there. But his thinking on good sportsmanship will be colored even more by his Dad's attitude in a chance remark such as this:

"Your team played good hockey — but the other fellows had the edge on you in their passing and checking. They deserved to win. But you'll have another chance next year — and I was proud the way you all shook hands with the winners when the game ended!"

BLOOD CELL TRANSFUSION FOR ANAEMIA

New treatment for anaemia is a transfusion of concentrated red blood cells. It acts more quickly than the usual dietary treatment of food with iron in it. The red blood cells may be compared to tiny barges — so tiny, in fact, that from four to six million of them are contained in a single cubic millimetre of blood. These barges are produced in the bone marrow, and carry their cargo — oxygen picked up from the lungs — throughout the body, via the arteries.

In anaemia, the number of these red blood cells may be drastically reduced. One common cause is a deficiency of iron, which is used by the bone marrow to produce haemogloblin, the red coloring matter of the cells. Recently a French scientist reported that iron-deficiency anaemia can be effectively treated with transfusions of concentrated red blood cells. An advantage of this over other treatments, he said, is that the red cells given in transfusion not only replenish the blood, but their iron content is utilised by the patient's bone marrow to produce more red blood cells.

A WESTERN shipper thought this one up. He handles freight to and from Alaska by means of aluminum vans which are loaded, driven to the dock, and there lifted by cranes from their chassis into the ship's hold. Saves a lot of cargo handling, damage and pilfering. The vans can be individually heated or refrigerated to protect special cargoes, too.

More than a thousand different Canadian companies keep busy turning Canadian-made aluminum into everything from ash trays to minesweepers. And it keeps us busy wondering how next they will use this modern metal to save weight, or time, or trouble, or dollars for somebody. Aluminum Company of Canada, Ltd. (Alcan).

Garden-Graph

If your space for potatoes is limited, plant them in "hills," as shown in the accompanying Garden-Graph. If your area is large, plant them in trenches or furrows, as illustrated.

The "hill" method is the easiest for a small planting. First, scoop out holes with a hoe, each one four inches deep and about 18 inches wide. Set the potato, as illustrated.

Although it takes more space, the trench method of planting will probably result in better potatoes and more of them.

The trench should be six to seven inches deep, as illustrated. Spread fertilizer in the bottom of the trench. Mix it well with soil, then cover it over with a few inches of top soil.

Set the potatoes about a foot apart. Cover these seed pieces with the remaining soil. As the roots grow downward, they will be fed by the fertilizer.

As soon as the young plants push through the soil, which is generally three weeks after planting, hoe the rows carefully, breaking the soil into fine particles about the sprouts. When three to four inches tall, hill slightly.

Potatoes and weeds are a heavy drain on soil fertility, so keep the potato patch free of weeds.

Potatoes will grow in most garden soils, but prefer one that is slightly acid. Do not lime the soil for fear of potato scab developing. Plant only certified potato seed which has been treated for scab control.

RETURN FROM OBLIVION

The old saw about the ill wind that blows nobody any good also works in reverse. The material progress of a nation seems to carry certain penalties. For example cancer is a greater killer in progressive countries than in backward countries, because more people in the former live to cancer age. Polio is more common in countries where sanitation is good than in countries indifferent to pollution. Researchers now believe that infants in the latter countries come into contact with the polio virus through filth and acquire immunity when they are too young to experience the full effects of the disease.

Perhaps one of the most tragic of these seeming penalties of progress is alcoholism, which is most common in the nations with the highest standards of living. The United States leads the world in incidence of alcohilism. Canada stands sixth, in a line-up including all the so-called "advanced" nations of the world. In poverty-stricken India alcoholism is so rare as to be hardly worth considering.

Alcoholism is unique in that it is tragic in the Shakespearian sense of the word. Other diseases cause pain and death, but do not necessarily diminish self-pride. Alcoholism undermines, humiliates and impoverishes its victims long before it kills them. There is good historical evidence that it was alcohol and not Cleopatra that caused the downfall of Mark Antony. But that is ancient history. Alcoholism can not be measured statistically except in comparatively recent years, but there is ample reason to believe that there are more alcoholics today than ever before in the history of the world.

The Health League technical section on alcohol firmly believes that alcoholism can be prevented by public education. The section does not take part in pressure activities for special types of legislation, but concentrates its energies on reaching the citizens of Canada with constructive information about the true nature and potentialities of alcoholic beverages, which have become so great a part of social life in modern Canada.

Question: "I know at least two men who became problem drinkers in middle life as a reaction to personal problems. One started because he lost his wife and the other because he lost his business. Both had been fairly heavy drinkers in their thirties and forties. Now both of these men are extremely moderate drinkers. They both say that it took a lot of self-discipline to straighten themselves out, but that they aren't slaves to alcohol any more. This seems to conflict with the AA propaganda that the only way to lick problem drinking is to become a teetotaller. What is the truth?"

Answer: In order to answer your question sensibly it would be necessary to know what you meant by the term "problem drinkers." If it meant that the reaction to alcohol had become atypical and uncontrollable, they would not have been able to return to moderate controlled drinking.

If however they drank to excess for a short period as a reaction to a stressful life situation and stopped before an atypical reaction had been acquired, there is no reason why they could not have retained the ability to drink moderate amounts of alcohol in a controlled manner.

HAPPY HOLIDAY!

... here we come (with our own spare bedroom)

Very soon it will be time to pack our bags and say "goodbye" to the city, because Happy Holiday . . . here we come!

Last year we spent a lot of holiday dollars getting to our resort by train and bus, and phew! were we ever tired when we finally arrived.

But this year it's going to be different. We're going there in style in our new Nash Canadian Statesman, and, we're taking all the luggage we'll need. The trunk space in a Statesman is a vacationist's dream, believe me.

Harry and Hilda, our next door neighbours, are coming with us . . . that'll be seven all told. That's OK, our Statesman has the widest seats of any car on the road, so there'll be plenty of room for all of us to ride in comfort and safety. Yes, safety. You see, Nash's Airflyte construction makes the Statesman a stronger, safer car. It isn't bolted together like other makes. No sir, a Nash is welded into one solid, rattle-free car. And our Statesman is a real gas miser, too. We'll have a lot more hard-to-get holiday dollars for fun—not transportation!

The cottage we stay in has only two bedrooms—so, we're taking a spare bedroom with us. No, I'm not kidding. Our Statesman has something all cars should have, and that's twin beds. All I do when we get there is fold back the front seats, and presto, there's the kids' bedroom for two weeks.

For my money the Nash Canadian Statesman is your best buy—and don't let anybody try to tell you differently. See the low-priced Nash Canadian Statesman and you'll see what I mean. Call in at your Nash dealer's and have a good look at Canada's smartest, most practical car.

Take my advice, go Nash, you'll love it.

Lockjaw – Peril That Lurks in the Soil

A potent new remedy for tetanus, or lockjaw, may soon be announced in the world's medical press. Scientists have discovered that a chemical found in the body, and particularly in the brain, halts the progress of tetanus in laboratory animals. They are nearing the stage when the treatment can be tried on human sufferers.

If hopes are fulfilled, it will be the end of many old wives' tales. These superstitions have gained credence over thousands of years since tetanus is not only one of the worst diseases, but also one of the oldest known. Real progress began with the discovery of the tetanus germ in 1886.

The germ is a hardy little menace — a rod-like organism called "Clostridium Tetani". It is widely distributed in the soil, and breeds through spores, which can live for many years even under adverse conditions. The germ produces a vicious poison, which acts particularly on the nervous system.

The injuries likeliest to lead to tetanus are deep, penetrating, crushing or lacerating wounds, such as punctures by a rusty nail, or any dirty object which harbours particles of infectious matter which can be driven deeply into the tissue.

The more deeply imbedded the tetanus germ can become, the happier it is, for it thrives on the relative lack of oxygen usual in the parts of the body that it invades. Once introduced, the germ soon multiplies, and attacks the nerves with its poison.

The first symptoms are usually felt about a week after an injury, and include tightening or drawing pain in the wound, and a twitching of the neighboring muscles. This is followed by irritability, fever, stiffening of the jaw muscles and neck, until the mouth is seized up so hard that it cannot be opened, hence, of course, 'lockjaw'.

Later, and even more distressing, symptoms include agonising spasms and convulsions, which eventually involve almost the whole body. Fatal results usually follow when the heart and respiratory muscles are affected.

Not so long ago, tetanus was almost always fatal. But increasing knowledge of the germ and its habits led to the forging of two powerful weapons against it. One is innoculation with tetanus toxide, a weakened form of the tetanus poison, which produces active immunisation by stimulating the body's natural defences. People likely to meet with injuries can be given toxide injections that may confer immunity for life, but 'booster' injections can in any case be given every few years.

The other treatment is an antitoxin prepared from animals infected with tetanus. This is usually given early during suspected infection, or immediately after a patient has received a wound which might lead to lockjaw. This antitoxin was pioneered by Sir Almoth Wright, teacher of Sir Alexander Fleming, discoverer of penicillin. In the first world war when tetanus was a constant peril in the trenches, Wright's work probably saved thousands of lives.

The antitoxin is, of course, assisted by more general measures, such as surgical cleansing and opening of the wound. This enables drugs to combat the germs, permitting air to enter their hiding places. Secondary infections are prevented by antibiotic drugs. One of these, terramycin, shows promise of fighting the tetanus germ itself. It has also been found that drugs like curare, which relax the muscles, can be useful in counteracting the spasms.

In spite of these measures, tetanus still takes toll of human life. Work continues to make the antitoxin more effective, but individual patients sometimes react unfavorably to it, and it may occasionally harm the nervous system.

Such patients would be among the first to benefit by the new discovery that minced brain can make the tetanus poison harmless and inactive in laboratory animals. These animals suffer no harm if they are given simultaneous injections of brain tissue and tetanus poison. The tetanus germ poison apparently combines with the cells of the brain tissue instead of attacking the injured animal.

Only a small amount of brain material is needed to minimise or neutralise, a lethal dose of tetanus poison. The active chemical in the brain tissue is believed to be "cholinesterase". If brain tissue is treated so as to extract its cholinesterase, it loses its affinity for the tetanus germ. The logical conclusion is that if a tetanus patient is treated with cholinesterase, the tetanus germs will rivet their attention on the chemical and destroy themselves into the bargain.

Of course, very careful tests will have to be made before the new treatment can be tried on human beings. Meantime, the intelligent use of existing methods can nearly always prevent the worst effects of the peril lurking in the soil.

County W.I. Meetings For Month of May – All Branches Active

Brownsburg Women's Institute heard an interesting talk by Mr. T. E. Zimmer on "Bees and Their Habits". The members held a sale of plants, slips and bulbs, proceeds being given to Sunshine Fund. A singsong was enjoyed.

Mille Isles branch made plans to attend the County Convention. Discussion was held on the proposed audio-visual film service for Argenteuil County. The sum of $6 was subscribed towards book prizes, $5 to the scholarship fund of the Morin Heights School, and $5 to the Lachute handicraft display.

Lakefield had an attendance of 11 members and four guests, the meeting being held at home of Mrs. Edgar Morrow. Plans were made to attend the County Convention on May 15. Mrs. G. Cooke, county president, attended this meeting, and Mr. A. Ogilvie gave an interesting talk on the care of house plants. One new member was welcomed.

Upper Lachute - East End reports 28 members and three guests present. Each member brought a dozen cookies, which were judged by two guests; 1st prize in this contest went to Mrs. Lloyd Hume; 2nd Mrs. Albert Nicoll. A "White Elephant" sale brought in $22.60; $15 was donated to the School Fair.

Lachute had as a roll-call "Something interesting to see in our county." A food sale was held by the branch. Mrs. George McGibbon, who had recently returned from a trip to Springfield, Mass., spoke on "This America, our land of contrasts," and during the meeting also gave a demonstration on the making of drop-doughnuts.

At Jerusalem - Bethany, Dr. L. Turcotte spoke on the Tuberculosis in the Province of Quebec. This county now has less cases than any other, exceept one. Each year since 1947, when X-ray became established here, there have been fewer deaths from T.B. . . . It was arranged to send a plant to the oldest member and mother on May 9, as a Mother's Day gift. $15 was sent to the Cancer Society, and $5 to the Spring Fair W.I. exhibit.

Morin Heights had 32 members and 12 guests. It was voted to give a donation of $10 towards school prizes in June. The branch entertained a number of ladies from the RCAF Station at Lac St. Denis.

Granby Adopts Pension Plan for Civic Employees

The City of Granby recently approved a by-law setting up a pension fund for its municipal employees.

The Plan provides an annual pension of 1% of 1953 earnings for each year of past service, plus an annual pension of 1½% of current earnings for each year of service after the effective date. For example, a member joining at age 55, with 10 years of service with the City and earning $3,000 a year, will have a total pension at 65 of $1,345 per year, of $154 a month.

Generous provision is made for early retirement. On death before retirement and after completing at least eleven years of service with the City, substantial benefits in addition to the return of the member's contributions are payable.

Employees to pay the fund contribute 5% of their earnings and the City will pay the balance of the cost of benefits earned from now on as well as the full cost of past service pensions. All eligible employees of the City including the office staff, policemen, firemen and manual workers have wholeheartedly approved the Plan as shown by the participation results of 10.

All contributions by members and the City will be paid into a Trust Fund.

Women's Institutes Mark Growth in Britain

The Women's Institute in England is growing rapidly. The report of the National Federation for the year 1953, has just been received at the office of the Quebec Women's Institutes and records an amazing expansion in all fields. There are now 8,053 Institutes, the term branch is never used in that country, 194 formed during the year, with a total membership of 464,000. Another rather astounding figure is that 96.5% of the possible voting delegates were present at the General Meeting.

Lady Brunner, J.P. was reappointed National Chairman, and two other familiar names were noted on the N.F.W.I. Executive Committee, Miss M. E. Ransome, J.P. and Mrs. E. Cornell. These were among the delegates to the ACWW Conference in Toronto last summer and Quebec members who were there will remember meeting them.

Several pages of the report were given over to Denman College. This institution has had to expand its facilities to keep pace with the speady growth of the N.F.W.I. Attendance for the year totalled 1,927, many of the students coming from overseas countries.

The College celebrated its 5th birthday, September 22, 1953. A tree planting ceremony marked the day and one of the speakers, Sir Richard Livingstone, stated, "Denman College is in many ways the most inspiring of all adult education colleges that have come into being since the war".

Miss Elizabeth Christmas, who was made an honorary member of the Belvidere W.I., Sherbrooke County, when visiting this province a few years ago, is continuing as Warden.

Japan is generally considered to have the lowest textile wages of any world country, yet India, which is a growing threat on world markets, has even lower rates.

"Think it would save me money too?"

"I see you telephone people always use wood preservative on your poles. Think I should do the same thing when I build my fence?"

"Yes, it's a good idea. We've found at Bell that it saves us plenty on repair and replacement costs. That's why we treat telephone poles against rot; why we keep our trucks clean and in good repair; why we put up exchanges and offices to last.

"It's only common sense, if we are to keep costs down and the price of your telephone service low."

A Helping Hand

These five Korean tots are orphans. Padre Anderson, soldier-chaplain with the Canadian Brigade in Korea, is their unofficial foster father. These are only five of the 130 war orphans of the Young Nak Barinwon Orphanage situated in Seoul, Korea. Padre Anderson has become one of the main links between the Canadian Brigade and the orphanages in Korea. He distributes to them the donations of clothing and money that come from the brigade and various Canadian welfare groups. As senior Protestant padre with the Brigade he is kept busy with the spiritual welfare of the soldiers under his care but still finds time to offer a helping hand to the needy children of Young Nak Barinwon. Padre Major J. M. Anderson, M.C. and Bar, is from Acton, Ont., and Niagara Falls, Ont.

Winnipeg (CP) — Dr. Murdoch MacKay was honored on his 70th birthday at a testimonial celebration by citizens of Transcona for 34 years' service to the community. CENTURY-OLD MILL GOES TO WRECKERS

Meadowvale, Ont. (CP) — An old flour mill whose solid timbers were hewn with a broad-ax 106 years ago is falling to wreckers' bars despite its interest as a landmark and as a favorite subject for painters.

Luther Emmerson of Milton, present owner of the mill that was once the commercial centre of this community 20 miles northwest of Toronto, said he was tearing the building down to make way for a business development.

The mill, with its stone foundation and its weathered wooden walls and roof, has long been painted by artists from Toronto and elsewhere. They were attracted by its picturesque setting in the tree-shaded Credit river valley, south of Brampton.

Built in 1848 by Francis Silverthorn, the mill was taken over soon afterwards by C. H. Gooderham.

Eighty-nine-year-old Wm. Gooderham, who has lived here since he was four, said: "The old mill was a big industry — nearly every male resident in the village was employed there and no one was out of work when Gooderham and Worts operated it."

For more than 50 years the mill, which included a complete cooper's shop for manufacturing barrels, turned out 100 barrels 24 hours a day.

Once milled, the flour was hauled by wagon to the Malton rail depot and shipped to Toronto.

"At one time," Mr. Gooderham said, "they had an order for flour all the way from India."

Inhaling for Health

TB patients in Guayaquil, Ecuador, have waited long for the Martian-looking apparatus seen here. It is one of the many advanced aids for diagnosis and treatment which have been supplied by the United Nations Children's Fund to the government-sponsored anti-tuberculosis program. The complex mask is measuring this patient's breathing capacity. Physicians and other medical personnel from the U.N. World Health Organization are also taking an active part in the program, which has cut TB deaths by more than half.

N.B. Mill Success In Difficult Times

As always, the textile industry is seeking new opportunities in even the most difficult times and the story of a New Brunswick hosiery plant is particularly interesting.

In operation less than a year, the Sussex mill is a comparatively small venture with only 65 employees, but the one-storey, $600,000 building is busy 24 hours a day and plans are underway for expansion.

When the mill opened only eight experienced technicians were brought to the town from other parts, the remainder of the employees being local workers that were trained on the job. Sussex, a bustling community of about 3,500 people which centres a productive agricultural region, is proud of its mills.

The plant knits a variety of ladies' full-fashioned hosiery. Machinery is all new — nothing older than 1949 — and expansion plans include manufacturing of 75-gauge hosiery, the finest ever attempted in North America.

Clearing Bush Land for Big N.B. Army Camp

Fredericton (CP) — The task of preparing Camp Gagetown for its role of Canada's biggest army training centre is proceeding on schedule. Clearance work continues after having been in progress for months.

Contracts for this phase of the program amounted to about $800,000 and involved 5,637 acres. More than 65 per cent of the clearing has been completed. The entire camp area stretches over 274,000 acres or 427 square miles.

Establishment of general services is the biggest project planned for this year and will start soon, with December 21 specified as the latest date for completion. Work on 1,400 housing units for soldier families is expected to get underway next spring. Other buildings are to be erected late this year and in early 1955.

Major services on which work is about to start include 17 miles of roads, 18 miles of sewers, five miles of service tunnels, 21 miles of hot water piping, and 14 miles of water mains. A million cubic yards of excavation will be required. Contractors have been on the scene lining up sub-contractors for various phases of the project.

June 15 next is the date for training to start in the huge area south of Fredericton. From then to July 15 a group of brigade strength — 6,000 - 7,000 men — will live under "active service conditions," meaning tents.

Next year, defence minister Claxton has announced, a similar brigade group will again concentrate for training at Camp Gagetown. Depending on the availability of accommodation, units will begin moving into the permanent camp in the fall of 1955.

After its full occupation the camp will comprise a community between one-half and three-quarters the size of Fredericton. It is planned to handle 5,000 men on a permanent basis and "many more" in training periods. Operations of the camp will cost roughly $15,000,000 annually.

Wages in the Canadian knitting industry are today three times what they were in 1939.

RURAL ELECTRICATION

Charlottetown (CP) — The provincial government announced 80 or more miles of rural electrification work will be carried out in areas not now getting electric power.

General Albert Orsborn, World President of the Salvation Army Boy Scouts, has announced his intention of retiring from office as General of the Salvation Army on June 30, 1954.

Something else that "makes the man"

(and does even more for him!)

"Clothes make the man", says the old adage. But today more and more men are learning that they can also enhance their standing with certain people by owning life insurance.

Take employers, for instance. To them, a man's ownership of life insurance suggests that he is foresighted, thrifty, realistic. Above all, it reflects willingness to accept responsibility — an attitude that impresses every employer.

In fact, anyone who learns that a man owns life insurance regards him with added respect. They know that it represents one of the most important assets any man can have.

Yet perhaps the most important effect of owning life insurance is on the policyholder himself. It gives him a sense of achievement. For in no other way can he create such a valuable estate for so little in so short a time.

So life insurance can do more than provide financial security for your family and yourself in later years. It also influences people in ways that help win success!

Orthodox Doukhobors Form Peaceful Group

Mossleigh, Alta. (CP) — Say "Doukhobor" and most people think of an eccentric sect of firebugs, train-wreckers and nude paraders. But those are just the Sons of Freedom radicals. There are 18,000 orthodox, peaceful Doukhobors in British Columbia, Alberta and Saskatchewan.

The Orthodox Doukhobors in 1924 left what now is the radical group. One of the orthodox group is Sam Samaroden who farms near Mossleigh, about 40 miles southeast of Calgary.

Sam came to Canada from Russia early this century. First he lived in Yorkton, Sask., but later moved to the South Slocan valley, B.C. He bought his present farm 30 years ago.

When he arrived here, Sam found things pretty rugged. Money was scarce. But now he farms with every modern convenience and drives a late model car.

Sam says the Sons of Freedom are like the Indians before the white man came — no government, no schools, a law unto themselves.

The Doukhobor motto is "Toil and Peaceful Life." The orthodox members stick to that.

The Samaroden farm is spick and span, typical of the well-kept Doukhobor farms in the three western provinces.

Mrs. Samaroden makes most of the family's clothes, weaving the cloth herself. Sam has a sweater made from wool from his own sheep and woven by his wife on a birch spinning wheel he made 40 years ago.

The truly religious Doukhobor will not eat meat. This, they say, is part of the word of God, on which their beliefs are based.

Some of the young members however, have developed a taste for meat. The same applies to drink and smoking. The older people are tolerant of the new attitude.

'Lone Wolf" Is Likely Victim of Alcoholism Or Drug Addiction

"Independent lone wolves" who cannot turn to others in times of stress are particularly prone to alcohol or barbiturate addiction. This was stated by Dr. Gordon Bell, medical director of Shadow Brook Foundation Ltd., in a recent issue of "Health" magazine. Dr. Bell is chairman of the Alcohol section of the Health League of Canada, publishers of the magazine.

"Apparently no human being was intended to be strong enough to stand alone," Dr. Bell states. "The adult who cannot depend on other people will, undoubtedly be more tense than those with satisfactory interdependent relationships. He is the victim of uncomfortable emotional states which are not relieved by his own efforts. Denied the comfort from dependence on other people, he can learn to depend on chemicals.

"When a person has learned to protect himself from the stresses of daily life with a chemical, he is inclined to consider himself independent of other people. He really believes that he is strong enough to stand alone. Finally the body becomes so conditioned to receiving this chemical in the quantities required to reduce severe tension states that it begins to accept its presence as a 'must'. At this stage to be without alcohol will produce tension in itself, and an added feeling of physical need for alcohol is revived whenever it is taken.

Dr. Bell concludes by stressing the importance of social re-orientation in clinical treatment. "The clinic", he says, "should continue to recognize the need of each patient for a feeling of security. In order to live happily without chemicals, he must now shift from a dependence upon people. He must begin in a new way to participate in interdependent relationships. This fundamental principle of treatment was first identified and then proven by Alcoholics Anonymous and must always be kept in mind by any clinic undertaking the rehabilitation of the alcohol or sedative addict."

Pricing Canadians Out of Work

By Lewis Milligan

In an article dealing with unemployment in Welland, Ontario, I cited facts and figures showing how sales had fallen off owing to high production costs which had priced Canadian goods out of home and foreign markets — and Canadians out of work. I concluded that the problem of unemployment was one of maintaining those markets, and suggested that industrialists, organized labor, and government should seriously face the situation.

I discussed the problem with the local leader of the United Radio and Machine Workers of America, the union that controls labor in two of the heavy industries. I asked him what he thought was the reason for the lay-offs. He contended that the present slump was due to over-production. He said the companies had made big profits in recent years and had stock-piles on hand out of which they could still make profits while their workers were out of employment. The policy of his union, he said, was to restrict production, prohibit overtime work, raise wages to create purchasing power so as to enlarge the home market and thus prevent unemployment.

I made inquiries as to the "big profits" and "stockpiles", and found that while good profits had been made, about half of these had been taken by the government in taxes, and millions of dollars had been plowed back into the business in plant extensions and new branch enterprises. In regard to stockpiles, the annual reports of the companies showed steep inventory reductions at the end of 1953. While the staffs of the three main heavy industries have been reduced to about half, there is no intention of closing down, although the companies might be better off by suspending operations under present trade conditions. But the companies are just as anxious and eager to get back into full operation as the workers are to get back into full employment.

It should go without saying that the chief concern of the companies, of organized labor, and of the government, is to promote industry and trade so as to maintain full employment for the Canadian people. The Welland industrialists have not been lacking in enterprise to that end. They have built up enormous plants and marketing organizations which have for many years provided full employment for the people of that district. But what have organized labor and the government done to promote those things?

As between employers and organized labor, we have what is called "collective bargaining", which was originally intended to prevent strikes and enable both parties to settle their disputes amicably for their common benefit. But the process has deteriorated into one of collective bartering, which has led to prolonged strikes or to enforced agreements that have proved mutually destructive. With the perpetual demands for increased wage-rates and shortening of work hours, combined with fringe benefits, production costs have mounted to a point where products cannot be marketed. Intelligent and reasonable collective bargaining could have forseen and avoided that situation. And it might even now go far to solve the unemployment problem in Welland.

The average weekly wage in the Welland industrial area in 1952, according to the local Chamber of Commerce, was $67.55. At the present time the 2,600 men out of work are receiving $24 a week in unemployment allowance. That is a big drop in "take-home-pay", and the idle men have been doing some hard thinking and talking about it. A clerk in a local business told me this: I have heard lots of the men say they would be glad to accept seven dollars a week less pay if they could only get back to work again." That, of course, is a matter for collective bargaining. But wage-rates are only part of the problem of unemployment. Increase in productivity per man-hour is even more important. There are also the burden of high taxes and the competitive handicap of low or no tariffs which are matters for government action.

Building Up Tomorrow's Citizens

Mmmmm! It's good! Top photograph shows two of 50,000 Costa Rican children currently receiving free daily rations of milk provided by the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF). Milk is almost non-existent in the diets of many economically underdeveloped countries. The United Nations, through UNICEF, is providing free milk for hundreds of thousands of children in many of these countries. In other instances, UNICEF equipment and technical assistance from the Food and Agriculture Organization, a specialized agency of the United Nations, have helped governments to establish powdered milk plants such as the one recently completed in San Fernando, Chile (see bottom photograph). UNICEF has supplied 23 countries in Europe, Asia and Latin America with equipment to process milk.

Mascot to the Tankmen

It's a big job to be a mascot to a whole squadron and 'Benzine' takes the job very seriously. As mascot to "D" Squadron of the Lord Strathcona's Horse now serving in Germany with the 1st Canadian Infantry Brigade, it keeps him a pretty busy dog visiting all of his masters. Here, he has taken time to pause with two tankmen, Tpr. Pat Barron, left, of Halifax, and Tpr. Fred Walker, of Moncton.

New Officers Elected for Chamber of Commerce at Business and Social Meet

Over 100 members and friends of Lachute Chamber of Commerce gathered at the Legion Hall on Tuesday evening for the monthly meeting, which was combined with a ladies' night.

A turkey dinner was served, after which the gathering was entertained by Miss Marcelle Barthe, noted radio announcer, who elaborated on the many inventions that had been made by women, and the important role played by women in local and world affairs. For the second part of her program she presented two humorous sketches, which were well received.

Miss Barthe was capably introduced by Mrs. André Lefebvre, who referred to her as being the first lady radio announcer, having had the honor of accompanying the late King George VI and Queen Elizabeth (now the Queen Mother) on their trip across Canada.

Mrs. Paul Laliberté thanked the speaker on behalf of the gathering, and presented her with a handsome pair of blankets in token of appreciation.

Business of the evening was confined to the election of officers and the following slate, as presented, was unanimously accepted:

President, André Lefebvre, 1st vice-president, Paul Laliberté; 2nd vice-president Gerald Walker; secretary, Richard Valois; treasurer, Bernard Massicotte.

Directors — L. St. Jacques, R. Hadley, R. Cairns, M. Trickey, G. Leclair, A. Malacket.

Legal Adviser, Roger Lagarde.

Among the head table guests were Mayor Dr. Jules Lafleur, Philippe Valois, M.P., and Horace Lamarche, Chamber of Commerce Regional President — each of whom expressed their appreciation at being present and complimented the Chamber on its progress.

A pianist supplied music for a most enjoyable dance and singsong until midnight.

Ch. of Commerce Regional Meeting At Ste. Agathe

Annual Gathering and Election of Officers Arranged for June 13

The annual meeting of the Laurentides Chamber of Commerce — comprising 14 district groups, among which Lachute has taken a creditably active part — has been arranged for Sunday, June 13, at the Laurentide Inn, Ste. Agathe.

This yearly session, contrary to previous years, is being held in the spring in order to conform with annual procedures of the Provincial Chamber; also to permit the incoming executive to acquaint themselves with their functions prior to the provincial congress in the fall.

Alan Brown, vice-president and general manager of Gatineau Power Company, will speak during the afternoon business discussion. Accompanying Mr. Brown will be the Gatineau Company's recently appointed Industrial Commissioner, Maurice Lavallee, with the Lachute division manager, Rod Carreau, and other managers in this area of power distribution.

Reports will be presented by the member groups, new officers of the respective branches will be introduced, and the Regional officers will be formally elected for 1954-55.

A tour of the Laurentide Inn properties, tea on the terrace, and a boat trip will be provided for lady guests during the business session.

Horace Lamarche, president of the Region, expresses a hope that all district Chambers of Commerce will be well represented, to take part in activities of interest to the entire Laurentian area.

Lions Club Car Appears on Main Street

Symbol of Big Job For Community Betterment

Not "Just Another Car Drawing"

The appearance of the Lions Club automobile on Main Street during busy shopping evenings, is not just the indication of "another car drawing." This venture — a co-operative activity among district branches of the club — represents the biggest fund-raising effort of the year, and all that it means in charity work by this community group. . .

Specifically, it means financial assistance to school groups; maintenance of kiddies' skating rinks; help to pupils in Art, or special studies, or athletics; glasses, medicine, orthopedic aids, milk and food for needy residents. . . It means — in terms more apparent to civic safety — the inhalator and emergency boat for drowning cases, the school crossing signs, the flashing highway signals bearing the Lions Club emblem. . .

These and a hundred other adjuncts, to make this community a better place in which to live, are made possible by the annual Lions Club car drawing. Think on these things, and do not pass it by. Do not hesitate when approached to buy a ticket.

Climax of this effort (in which several other worthwhile prizes are offered besides the sparkling 1954 Meteor auto) will be at the Lions' District Pro Golf Tournament, July 31 and August 1 at Lakeshore Golf Club.

Stiffen Laws For Quebec Forest Fire Protection

The Province of Quebec has stiffened its laws covering the protection of forests against fire.

Smoking in the forest is especially made an offence providing penalties to a fine of not less than $15 nor more than $100, or to jail for not less than 30 days nor more than three months.

Failure to pay the fine and costs means jail, for not less than 30 days nor more than three months.

The new law is more severe than the old one in that any person convicted of any infringement of the new law forfeits his right to enter a forest and loses his permit. This would apply also to a cottager, who thus would be prevented from going to his own property.

The new act, passed by Quebec Legislature this year, applies to any forest area of 2,000 acres or more whether privately-owned or Crown land.

Last year more than 600 men were employed in the County of Pontiac in fighting forest fires.

The new law covering smoking in the forest, burning matches, and so on, declares:

"Any person who, in any part whatsoever of the forest, in cleared fields and other places, smokes while performing any work or while travelling on foot, on horseback, in a motor vehicle or otherwise, or throws matches, cigarettes, cigars, or drops on the ground burning tobacco, wads from firearms, ashes or any other burning substance, without extinguishing the same immediately and completely, shall be guilty of an offence and liable, upon summary prosecution, to the penalties provided."

Entertainment and Livestock Program Taking Shape for Lachute Spring Fair

High wire, acrobatic acts, bicycle balancing and other almost unbelievable feats will be highlights of the grandstand entertainment at the coming Lachute Spring Fair. The big, five-act vaudeville show will feature "The Two Olveras", equilibrists on a high-balancing steel perch; "The Keppo Family" who have perfected their acrobatics into a series of delightful acro-art demonstrations; "The Three Maxellos", who toss one another into the air with their feet in a startling manner; the bicycle act of Bobby Whaling and Yvette, that has thrills for the entire family, and another high-wire act as yet unannounced for the June 9 opening.

This show commences Wednesday night at 7.30, and on Thursday, Friday and Saturday there will be afternoon and evening performances, presented between classes of one of Canada's finest of the smaller horse shows.

Leading horse exhibitors from the immediate area, the remainder of Quebec, Ontario and many of the northern States, will be in attendance, competing for top honors as well as for the enjoyment of the general public. Leading entries for the Horse Show division, which is once again well filled, are Ottawa's Frank Ryan, Lee Side Farms at Ste. Adele, and H. J. O'Connell's stable at Mont Gabriel. Other exhibitors in the various Horse Show classes are H. T. Hobbs and Sons, and Emerson Cotie, of Shawville; J. M. McMahon and Son, Renfrew; Geo. Boyce, Renfrew; Mr. and Mrs. Bloom, Montreal; Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Cundell, Renfrew; Pierre Raymond, Montreal; Miss Lynne Mayburry, Hull; Georges Godin, Ste. Dorothee; L. T. Porter, St. Andrews East, J. A. R. Stable, Hull; Gordon McNeil, Summerstown; Mr. and Mrs. Roy Calder, Montreal; Mr. Albert Quesnel, Hull.

Breeding class entries are 163 in number. Among these are animals from farms of Gilbert E. Arnold, Grenville; Ken Pritchard, of Manitick Station; Liberman and Campbell, of Wyman; Geo. Watson and Son, of Leonard, Ont.; A. T. Cleland, Lachute; and John Heatlie, Brownsburg.

W. Erskine Rodger, Jack Black, Clifford Oswald, Stuart Armstrong, J. P. Bradley & Son and Clement Beauchemin account for the majority of 184 entrants in Ayrshire, a breed that is close to a record entry this year.

Three Jersey herds — exhibited by Bob McElroy, North River Farm (Dr. D. R. McCall), Lachute, and the Boys' Farm and Training School — will be in evidence, as will be Dual Purpose Shorthorns shown by A. D. McGibbon & Sons and Mrs. Ethel McGibbon.

Aberdeen Angus exhibitors are Dr. McCall, L. T. Porter and Chas. Graham, and a good class of Registered Canadians, Guernseys, and Holsteins will be in the cattle barns.

Guerneys are entered by Wal-Ken Farms (Mr. Bellingham), and St. Jacques Bros., while the 143 Holstein entries come from the herds of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ryan, Harold Wilson, John Meyer and other local and district fanciers.

Herefords will be exhibited by Netherdale Farms Reg'd, owned by W. M. Cottingham, M.L.A., and Shorthorns by Saraguay Farms, owned by Mrs. Pittfield.

An unusually large sheep exhibit will have the sheep barns from filled to overflowing, and although swine classes are not heavy, there will be a good, representative show.

Birds of every species on the program are entered in the poultry classes, which are expected to be among the most complete ever presented at the local fair.

Safe-Robbery and Break-in Reported Last Week-End

The second robbery in six months at "La Ruche", local co-operative store, netted thieves close to $2,000. The haul was in cash and endorsed Family Allowance cheques, according to Police Chief Laurent Ducharme. The robbery, which occurred between 3 a.m. and 7 a.m. Monday, was the third safe-cracking job in the district in a little over a week.

Entry to the building was gained by means of the same small basement window that was used in the robbery last November, when the loot amounted to $4,000 cash. The wire mesh screen was removed, as it had been during the previous entry.

The safe, which had been repaired after its manhandling last November, was opened this time with the aid of two axes borrowed from a hardware counter in the store. The loss, estimated at between $1,750 to $2,000, is covered by insurance.

The robbery was reported to Chief Ducharme shortly after 9 a.m. Monday. Det. Maurice Lamoureux was called to the scene, as were members of the burglary squad from Montreal. The local police are still working on several clues in the case.

Entry to the Chatham Street offices of the A. D. McGibbon & Sons Lumber Company, was reported Saturday morning. Nothing was found to be missing. The culprits, who broke a window and entered the building, were apparently scared away as they left an outboard motor and two truck tires, as well as a considerable sum of cash untouched.

Taxi Passengers Injured in Mishap

Minor injuries were suffered by three passengers of a district taxi driven by Laurent Lemay, as it swerved out of control and somersaulted on a stretch of gravel road between Pine Hill and Brownsburg. The car, owned by Edouard Lemay, turned upside down in the ditch, sliding 27 feet on its top.

The injured, Miss Vivian Cousineau, Miss Claudette Denis and Jean Leroux, were treated in Brownsburg.

Traffic Officer Roger Massie investigated the mishap, which occurred last Wednesday.

Macdonald Professor Guest Speaker At Brownsburg Graduation Exercises

Introduced by Norman Holland, Now Member of School Commission; Pleasant and Inspiring Evening

Brownsburg — Mr. J. R. Golphin, chairman of the school board, presided over the graduation ceremonies at the Brownsburg School on Friday evening. There was a large crowd of parents, teachers, students and guests present, and a pleasant interlude of speech-making, dining and dancing was enjoyed by those present.

A delightfully served meal, provided by the local Women's Institute, preceded the graduation ceremonies and set the stage for the "few words".

The chairman called upon the school principal, Mr. G. King Amos, to introduce the members of the graduating class, who occupied a centre table and suitably acknowledged the introductions.

Vincent Trayers set a humorous tempo with his reading of the Class Prophecy, unveiling, in rhymed couplets, the future occupations of his classmates.

Doreen Ball bade farewell to the succeeding Grade IX, in a very nice effort which was much appreciated.

The valedictory was delivered by Lorna Clarke, and was very well done. Her appreciation of the teaching which now lay behind was generously acknowledged, and the happy memories of events incidental to school life pleasingly recounted.

Mr. Norman Holland, in introducing the speaker of the evening, represented the school board, of which he is a member (having being co-opted to fill the incompleted term of the former chairman, Pat Reilly).

Red Cross

Although the Red Cross campaign for $1,081,890 was still lagging, congratulations were offered to the Kilmar and Lachute branches for having over-subscribed their objectives, as also did Ste. Adele in the recent local field. The Montreal blood bank received 22,000 bottles of blood during the first four months of the year; this, of course, includes two huge Marathons held in the city. For the past 14 years the Red Cross has been sending out mobile clinics to the poorer districts of the province to provide both medical and dental treatment in those isolated areas. This year the practice is to be repeated, as the results have been so encouraging in the past.

Fires Subdued In Quick Order

Firemen Minimize Water Damage; Several Chimney Fires

Fire damage climbed well over $5,000 last week as the brigade was summoned to several fires. The worst of these was in an apartment occupied by Cecil Staniforth on Sydney Street, where damage was done to the building, owned by Jean Lemay, and to the furniture which was the centre of the blaze.

The apartment fire was discovered shortly before one a.m. last Thursday, and although both fire trucks were on the scene, the booster pump was used effectively to keep water damage down to a minimum. Dense smoke prevented entry by the door, and a ladder had to be used by the men to reach the burning chesterfield, to quench the flames and shovel the smouldering debris out of the living room.

The fire originated in an extension wire, according to insurance adjustors, who stated they were pleased to pay the full claim for loss to the building as water damage was practically nil.

Following is a letter of appreciation received by Fire Chief Deacon in connection with this fire:

Lachute, May 21, 1954

Mr. Geo. Y. Deacon,
Lachute, Que.

Dear Sir:

With this letter may I express my sincere appreciation for the most skilful and courageous work you performed at my house on 529 Sydney Street during the fire that broke out on the night of May 20. Also my best thanks to your well trained staff, under your direction.

Yours very truly,

— Jean (John) Lemay

Considerable damage resulted from a wall fire caused by unprotected stove-pipes in a house owned by Miss Mary Brown on College Street. The call for assistance was received Saturday morning, and once again, the booster pump was used to good effect. Considerable smoke was in evidence, and damage due to fire was quite extensive.

Members of the volunteer crew have answered several calls for chimney fires in Lachute and Ayersville — none of them being serious enough for the fire equipment to be brought to the scene.

Maintain $2-Billion Defence Budget While Threat of Aggression Remains

Minister Tables White Paper on Defence — No Budget Decrease, No Relief in Sight

By Don Peacock Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, May 25 (CP) — Defence Minister Claxton has tabled in parliament a government white paper on defence, which says Canada must maintain its present $2,000,000 defence budget while the threat of aggression to the western world remains.

However, it said "it is hoped that the situation (in Korea) may improve to permit some reduction in Canadian forces there in the not too distant future."

It said some relaxation in international tension is indicated, but "the need for Canada, in common with other nations of the free world, to maintain adequate defence forces remains a matter of vital importance."

It added that the defence department has spent $5,137,000,000 in a three-year defence build-up begun in 1951. Defence spending planned for the current fiscal year will be $2,010,000,000. Experience over the last three years had shown that to maintain the armed forces' present strength and quality would require "appropriations and expenditures at about the present level."

Most defence costs are about the same or slightly lower this year than last. Personnel cost would be higher this year because of the increased number of persons in uniform — 112,000 now against 104,000 last year — and pay increases. Maintenance and operation costs also would be higher because of jet aircraft and radar installations.

Coldwell Suggests Cuts

A couple of days later when defence department estimates came up in the Commons, CCF leader Coldwell suggested Canada's air strength in Europe be cut by half and its troops in Korea by a third. His proposals were among a list of suggested economies which he said could slice "several hundreds of millions of dollars" from the defence program this year.

Lt.-Col. Douglas Harkness (PC — Calgary North) accused the defence minister of misleading Canadians about a radar air-defence screen which, Harkness said, does not exist. He said Canada needs an early-warning system far to the north. The present radar screen was shallow, based on certain points and backed up by no more than three CF-100 jet squadrons.

Permits Lifted, Fines Imposed In Traffic Cases

Jos. Denault, 68, was fined $50 and costs and his driving permit was suspended for three months when convicted of a charge of driving under the influence of liquor. The sentence, resulting from an accident on Robert Street two weeks ago, was handed down at St. Jerome Court this week.

Edgar Charlebois, a Brownsburg resident, was sentenced to a fine of $50 and costs on a charge of reckless driving, and $25 and costs for driving "under the influence". His driving permit was suspended for six months. The case was the result of a collision between a truck driven by Charlebois and a stationary taxi.

From the Hanover, Ont., Post: A woman told her friend: "I don't believe in shouting at my husband. You can do so much more with a low, nerve-wracking whine." . . .

The provincial government is to build a vegetable canning plant on the grounds of Lethbridge, Alta., jail at a cost of $60,000 and prisoners will do the necessary work. . .

The North Battleford Optimist relates the sad experience of a local car salesman, who had a prospect out in a brand new car; they had hardly got started when a car slammed into their rear fender; no sooner had they left the scene of the accident with all its formalities when a model-A Ford plowed into the back of the car.

Correction

In last week's report of the W.I. County Convention, the amount donated by the Jerusalem-Bethany W.I. to the School Fair work was wrongly quoted as $5 instead of $15.

Order of Notaries Convened at Quebec

Lachute was represented at the annual conference of the Quebec Province Order of Notaries by two local members of the profession, Jacques Beaudoin and Simon Valois, accompanied by their wives. This largely attended gathering was held at the Chateau Frontenac, Quebec.

Among subjects discussed were the Notarial organization and examinations qualifying for practice; youth and the future of the profession; the evolution and prestige of the profession. Premier Maurice Duplessis was guest speaker at the Saturday evening banquet.

Entertainment for the delegates included tours of the Ancient Capital and, on Sunday, a duo piano recital by Victor Bouchard and Mme René Morisset.

Prompt Payment

Under the regulations of the Provincial Electricity Board, an electricity bill is required to be paid within 15 days from the date it is sent to the customer.

The great majority of the Company's customers take advantage of the liberal discount of 10% offered for payment within this 15 days.

It is suggested to those who do not take advantage of this discount that they should endeavor to secure for themselves this saving.

Following this 15 day period the Power Company is authorized to disconnect the service.

The Power Company would be delighted if everyone paid up promptly and no one had to be disconnected for being in arrears.

Farm Fire Protection

Fire is a necessary friend, but also a terrible enemy, as is shown by reports of farm fires in New Brunswick in 1953. The Provincial Fire Marshall reports 84 fires in farm buildings with a loss of $342,881, only $133,458 of which was covered by insurance. The total fire loss in rural areas of the province amounted to $1,781,793, or $5.28 per capita — rather a severe and unnecessary tax that does not require legislative action to repeal.

Among the 30 major fires in the province eight were farm buildings with individual losses ranging from $20,500 to $81,500. The causes, where known, are listed as sparks from engine, electrical, sparks from flue oil burning brooders and short circuits. Among other causes given for rural fires are lightning, grass fires, flues, smoking and matches, petroleum products and rubbish accumulation.

In other words, a little precaution would prevent many farm fires and lack of adequate protection is one reason why the losses are so high. Fire losses in New Brunswick are no doubt representative of those in other provinces.

In listing the protective measures taken at Federal Experimental Stations in New Brunswick, S. A. Hilton, Superintendent at the Fredericton Stations points out that they could be applied to good purpose on farms and in rural areas elsewhere.

1. Regular inspection of buildings and premises to eliminate fire hazards such as defective wiring, accumulation of rubbish, oily waste, etc.

2. Provision of adequate water supply. This may be accomplished in rural areas, as it has been done at the Sub-Stations at MacDonald's Corner and Tower Hill, by the construction of farm ponds, either by dugouts or by damming brooks.

3. Organization of a fire brigade, equipped with a portable pumper and adequate hose lines, also ladder and pails kept in a central location.

4. Keep a power sprayer (200 gallons or more capacity) such as used for orchard or potato spraying, filled with water at all times and equipped with long hose and fog nozzles.

5. Maintain fire extinguishers and stirrup pumps in all buildings. The types of extinguishers selected to be those best suited to control the type of fire most likely to occur.

6. See that all buildings are protected by lightning rods properly installed and grounded. In New Brunswick last year, 22 buildings were burned as a result of lightning. None of these was rodded.

7. Above all, Be Fire Cautious.

Plan New Lectureship Of Woodlot Management At Macdonald College

Ste. Anne de Bellevue, Que. — Plans are going ahead for the establishment at Macdonald College of a chair of woodlot management, as a further step in the organization of Canada's first University-sponsored study centre in woodlot management, it was announced Friday by Dr. W. H. Brittain, Dean of the Faculty of Agriculture.

Speaking to a large group of members of the Quebec Section of the Canadian Institute of Forestry at lunch on May 21, in the Woodlot Chalet of Macdonald College, Dr. Brittain stated that the centre will be supported jointly by McGill University, and by private contributions, principally from the wood-using industries. The financial support received thus far from contributors indicates that the lectureship in woodlot management may be set up in time for the beginning of the fall term. The new course will be directly linked with the administration of the extensive experimental woodlot and fast growing collection of native Canadian trees in the Morgan Arboretum, part of the vast land area operated by Macdonald College.

In the course of his remarks on the new study centre in woodlot management, Dr. Brittain stated that its chief objective will be the teaching of proper methods of forest management to degree students in agriculture, young farmers following vocational courses in practical agriculture, and adult farmers who will attend demonstrations field days and special courses.

"The woodlot still forms an integral part of most farms in Eastern Canada," Dr. Brittain pointed out, "but the idea of wood as a crop has not yet gained wide acceptance. Through good management aimed at increasing its productivity on a sustained basis, the woodlot can provide a larger share of the farmers' income. Forest management research conducted at our new study centre will also benefit the forest industries operating extensive timberlands."

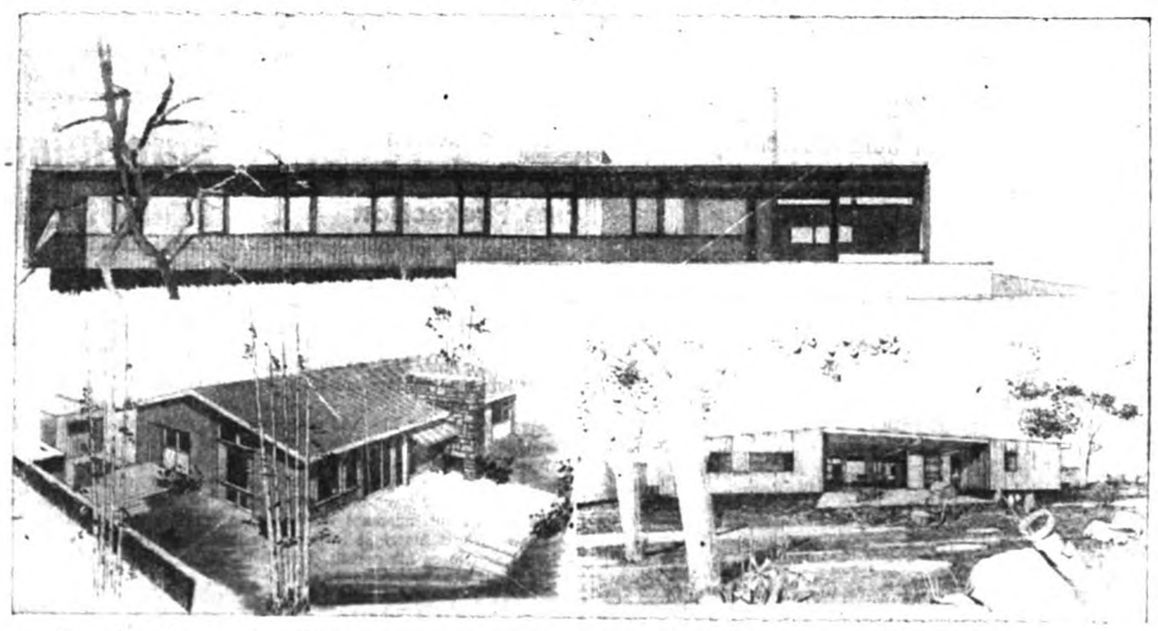

NEW MECHANIZED FARMING CENTRE

London — Courses at the new mechanized farming centre set up at Boreham House Estate near Chelmsford, in Essex, England, by the Ford Motor Company, have recently been opened. It is expected that by the end of the year at least 800 students will have taken the course which enables agriculturists and engineers to work side by side.

International Champion "Homes of Tomorrow"

More than 650 entries from 17 European countries and nine Canadian provinces were examined by the International Calvert House Competition jury before the homes pictured above were selected. Top picture shows the international champion house, winner of the Calvert House International Award of $5,000. Designed by Knud Peter Harboe, of Denmark, it is a long dwelling, considered especially suitable for the Canadian landscape. The Canadian Calvert House award $2,500 for the best design by a Canadian was won by Geoffrey E. Hacker, of Winnipeg, for the design on the left. Gardner Ertman, Edinburgh, Scotland, took the European Calvert House $2,500 award for the home on the right. Two Canadian entries won honorable mention awards.

He commended the fine effort of Lorna Clarke and the kindly sentiments of farewell by Doreen Ball. He referred enthusiastically to the poetic forecast of Vincent Travers, which was somewhat off the beaten track. Mr. Holland gave many amusing incidents of trick mathematics and dealt with the Quaballistical lore and mystical numerology of the number "7" which he felt has a benign influence on life. He is a graduate of McGill, a resident of Argenteuil and executive of numerous large companies engaged in the industrial business.

Prof. David Monroe of Macdonald College, also congratulated the pupils on their speech-making efforts and expressed his pleasure at being present on such a happy occasion. Now that some of the pupils were going on to further studies to prepare for the world ahead, and perhaps some were going directly out into that world, he thought that a few words on the most important concern confronting us today would not be amiss.

Freedom. It may be that here in Canada we do not realize the implications of freedom, we take it so much for granted that we forget about it and what it means to have to fight for it. Our first experience of freedom may be some pleasant recollection, like the first train journey which we made unaccompanied by our father or mother, or when we were given some responsibility where we were master for the time, with a sense of freedom to choose.

Today there is more freedom than there was ten years ago and pupils are more free to choose their world than when it was necessary to don a uniform and be directed into the stream of life that led to war. But there still remain the four freedoms of the late President Roosevelt — freedom from want, freedom from fear, freedom of worship and freedom of speech — which are ever in danger, and which although we in Canada are abundantly blessed with, we must be on the alert that our freedoms are not infringed upon.

Prof. Monroe warned of over-confidence in our abilities, or of a feeling that "at the age of twenty we have nothing more to learn." The facilities offered at Brownsburg were of the finest. Here was a complete school, but no school completed one's education — we learn up to the final day. We have heard much about the three R's which a native of South America understood from a conversation to mean Racing, Rasling and Recess, but which he would like to mean Respect, Restraint and Responsibility. Respect for the opinions and freedom of other people. Restraint from the prodigal use of our national resources, from disregard of Sunday observance. And Responsibility towards the society which we are about to enter, to move within its civic needs and its requirements. He wished the graduating class of 1954 "Bon voyage — you are on your way!"

Shirley Gagne moved a vote of thanks to Prof. Monroe for his inspiring address.

The Hazardous Ice-Box

"FOR SALE" advertisements in springtime indicate that the refrigerator, among other items in numerous households, is being discarded, exchanged or replaced by a newer model. This fact presents a certain hazard spotlighted by past news stories — tragedies indelibly impressed in the minds of parents who have read them . . . So much so, that to avert a tragedy in our own circle and neighborhood, we should stop, think, and do something about it.

Children pounce upon an old icebox or refrigerator as a grand hiding place. But children can get trapped and suffocate in these airtight boxes' . . . They have . . . They may do just that, in your own back-shed or garage. Once inside a closed refrigerator, a child cannot get out; cannot be seen or heard; cannot breathe.

(a) Remove the door.

(b) Remove the latch stop so that the door cannot lock.

(c) Drill holes in the cabinet and remove the rubber gasket.

(d) Destroy the box altogether.

If the icebox, freezer or cabinet is only temporarily out of use, it can be rendered harmless to children while it stands idle.

(a) The latch can be removed.

(b) Move the refrigerator so that the door is against the wall.

(c) Tie a wire or stout rope around the box so the door cannot be opened by children.

Plug for Weekly Press

THIS IS NOT Newspaper Week — but any week is timely to stress the merits of the weekly paper — both on its news and its advertising value (and they are interlinked).

The advertising director of one of Canada's leading banks gives this informal but emphatic reply to the question, "Why we advertise in the weeklies":

"Very simply, we use weeklies because they're a darned good buy for our advertising dollars. If our appropriation ever had to be cut, weeklies would be the last of our media to pay the supreme sacrifice.

"While we're national advertisers, our business is essentially local, consequently we advertise at the local level in the local weeklies.

"Familiarity breeds friendship, not contempt. Our weekly newspaper advertising enables us to say 'hello' in a friendly atmosphere. In return, we get back a friendly 'hello' from the readers of weekly newspapers. They go farther: they stop in for a chat.

"When we advertise in the weeklies, it helps us to identify ourselves with the life of the people around us. Our advertising rubs shoulders with that of the local butcher, baker and hardware store. As a result we become an integral part of the community and accepted as such. Our branch and branch officers are accepted as a friendly part of the community."

Continuing on the subject of the weekly newspaper, this discriminating advertiser says: "Everybody in town reads it. You can't compare it with the big dailies because in the weeklies, the news is right on your own doorstep; in the big dailies, it's a long way from there. By their very nature, weeklies constitute an important part of our overall advertising program."

Do-It-Yourself Movement

AS WITH greatness, some men are born to skill in craftsmanship. They may perhaps spend their days in offices, but, give them a few tools and they take as naturally to doing household jobs as a duck takes to water. . . Then there are those who achieve skill . . . And lastly, the amateurs, who have had skill thrust upon them — largely by the mounting cost of professional services. They do not like handwork and are not very good at it. But if a thing needs doing and money is tight, by tears and sweat they will do it somehow.

The do-it-yourself movement is certainly growing in Canada. Not only is it evidenced by the practical home-owners and the many books published for the purpose, but companies are finding a very valuable market among those who are doing household jobs themselves, and large department stores are running shows, exhibitions and demonstrations for interested parties.

Home repaging by American owners is now held to be a $3,500,000,000 business. This year it is estimated that $24,000,000 will be spent on paint rollers alone and that 65 to 85 per cent of all paint is being used by amateurs as opposed to professionals.

The Changing Life

SOME OF US won't be here to live in the visionary's automatic home, humming with electric butlers. But our children will.

Some of the amazing works of the future, visualized by The Financial Post, are:

— In your own lifetime you may be able to pick up a phone and dial directly any number in any city in North America or even overseas.

— Your TV picture tube of the future may be just that: a flat, portrait-size frame to hang wherever you wish on your wall. "Today's TV sets take up entirely too much room," say the engineers.

— The electronic air conditioner — fully automatic, noiseless, non-wearing — is not far over the horizon.

— Before 1999, electronic circuits will have replaced at least one man in every plant and office in Canada.

Old Problem, New Twist

THERE'S hardly a place these days that isn't faced with a problem in public transportation. Mighty municipal minds have labored over the problem. But A. E. R. Westman of Toronto has come up with an idea that's bound to appeal to everyone — well, almost everyone. His proposed solution: Abolish all fares.

In a letter to the newspapers discussing the financial problems of Toronto's Transit Commission, he terms the present system of passenger fares "the most inefficient tax system in existence, purely a relic of the ancient toll roads." He sees the millions saved in abolishing tokens, tickets, transfers and complicated bookkeeping systems freed to purchase more cars and buses and to provide better service.

Maybe the idea isn't as revolutionary as it seems at first blush. Sidewalks and highways on which anyone can walk or ride really aren't free. They are paid for by the taxpayer.

Perhaps a system could be worked out this way.

The taxpayer would be asked to pay an additional sum in taxes, say $50 or $75 a year. That would permit him and his family to ride on a street-car or bus any time he wished.

Mind you, the motorist who now drives to work wouldn't like the proposal but perhaps he'd be willing to go along for the greater good of all. That would ease the problem of congested streets for he'd leave his car at home if he were assured of good public transportation.

The visitor from the rural town would benefit, of course. That would be one objection, for the city taxpayer might look askance at his country cousin enjoying the benefits the city dweller has paid for. But it wouldn't be too great an objection for the visitor could say:

"Look, you come to Podunk-by-the-River and I'll let you ride in our new village bus for free. You'll enjoy the good country air, too."

On second thought, there's one really big obstacle before municipal public transportation can universally become "free":

The street-cars and buses and subways likely would be so jammed with "free" riders that there would be no room for Mr. Westman.

Carillon — The crops around this part of the country are not suffering from lack of rain but rather from too abundant a supply — much to the dissatisfaction of our few city visitors, who think country life should always be sunshine.

25 YEARS AGO

May 31, 1929 —

The town of Lachute can boost proudly of the wonderful scenery she has in her surroundings — the North River with is many winding, beautiful bends, and the Laurentian mountains gazing down upon the valley of splendor.

It is the sportsman's paradise, the wearied worker's dream of rest. Lachute may also be congratulated on the cleanliness and attractiveness, the many necessaries she has for social standing. Perhaps she is as complete a town as any of the same size, but one thing is missing, and that is what our closest neighboring town of Brownsburg can boast of having over us — It is an athletic club we need. Our young men need the proper physical training and somewhere for them to pass the time. It would be a great asset to our town; we wouldn't find many groups of young fellows "holding the wall up", which looks very bad from the visitors' point of view.

Employment Figures

Ottawa (CP) — Government figures issued last week showed total applications for jobs at National Employment Service offices in mid-April were 549,028, a drop of 20,870 from the previous month, but an increase of 176,000 from the same time in 1953. Bureau of Statistics figures gave the total employed at mid-April at 4,845,000, compared with 4,805,000 the previous month and 4,941,000 in the same week of 1953.

CROWD CONFUSION

ALL ABOARD
With G. E. Mortimore

The ministers of agriculture in the four western provinces are supposed to meet in a ploughing contest at Portage la Prairie, Manitoba, on June 16.

Agriculture minister Kenneth Kiernan of British Columbia doubts if he can make it. But he has invited his opposite numbers in Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba to an apple-picking contest at Vernon, B.C., next fall.

The way things are going, cabinet ministers of the future may be chosen less for their governing ability than for their skill at interprovincial contests. This western ploughing and apple-picking tournamen may develop into an all-Canadian cabinet ministers' field day, in which political leaders of the ten provinces rub biceps in an attempt to prove their fitness for office.

Each province will send scouts all over Canada and the United States looking for major-league material.

The winner of a corn-shucking bee in Nebraska will be approached by a prosperous man in a loud suit.

"Say, you got talent, son. Come with me and I'll place you with a corn-husking team up thar in Canady. Course, you'll have to take an outside job as well, just to make it look good.

"You know how it is — we don't want people saying we're bringing in professional corn-huskers. But you needn't worry about the job, son. All you'll have to be is minister of agriculture."

Right now the western ministers of agriculture must be practising their ploughing, the way golf-mad businessmen practise their putting — in the office.

"See that I'm not disturbed," the minister tells his secretary. As soon as the door shuts behind him, he drags his Little Giant plough from the cupboard and cuts a few practice furrows in the carpet.

Cabinet ministers are used to having other people do things for them. Merely from force of habit, some of the honorable competitors in the apple-picking contest may bring their secretaries with them to the orchard.

Sinking back on a chair-shaped hummock, a cabinet minister rasps an order through his cigar: "Miss Jones, take a ladder."

"What's that strange noise?" visitors to legislative buildings will ask. "Sounds like someone shouting 'Heer, peeg, peeg, peeeeg!'"

"That's exactly what it is. The minister of agriculture is practising for the Canada-wide hog-calling contest."

Perhaps there is still time to add cabinet ministers' events to the coming British Empire Games.

I look forward to the day when education ministers clash in spelling bees, ministers of forestry compete in sawing and axemanship, and finance ministers test their skill in picking taxpayers' pockets.

Housewives! . . How About Eggs?

No, I am not talking about the ordinary egg — with a big air space in the top, a questionable smell, a yolk that is just looking for an excuse to break and beat the white in the race to the side of the pan — with nearly every egg yolk a different color and a white that runs all over the pan — looking more as if it came from the pump than from a hen. . .

No doubt you have seen too many of them. You don't have to put up with this kind of an egg. Get LAYENA EGGS; they are lovely flavored, uniform colored yokes, with a thick nutritious white, so full of vitamins and food value that the yolk has to sit up on top, too thick for it to settle.

Layena eggs have so much more food value that your cake will rise higher and be better than ever.

Ask for Layena eggs, and if you have trouble finding them, call us. But be sure the eggs you are sold meet the description given here. If they don't they are not Layena eggs.

Many Mourn Passing of Young Lachute Resident

Late Mrs. Roland E. Maxwell

The death of Mrs. Roland E. Maxwell after a brief illness, at the Royal Victoria Hospital last Thursday morning, May 20, came as a shock to the entire community.

Mrs. Maxwell, the former Frances Gladys Tomalty, daughter of the late Gordon R. Tomalty and of Mrs. Tomalty, of Brownsburg, was born in Brownsburg November 1, 1927, and lived in this district until a short time ago. Frances was an active member of the Baptist Young People's Union, also of the Badminton and Bowling Clubs. Of a sunny and cheerful disposition, she was loved by her many friends.

Married only two months and one week, she is mourned by a sorrowing husband, her mother, a sister (Norma), a brother (Alvin), and sister-in-law (Rose), also many relatives and friends.

The funeral was held Saturday afternoon, the Rev. N. H. Brock conducted a brief service at the home, and the Rev. Wilson Bridge conducted service in Lachute United Church at 2.30 p.m. Hymns sung were, "Unto the hills around do I life up my longing eyes", and "The Lord's my Shepherd, I'll not want", favorites of the late Mrs. Maxwell.

Many beautiful floral tributes were received, showing the esteem in which she was held and bearing witness to the sympathy of many relatives and friends.

Pall-bearers were — Linton Tomalty, Robert Creswell (cousins), Gerald Maitland, Peter Philips, Robert Ogilvie and Donald McFaul.

Interment took place in Lachute Cemetery.

"He lives to still His people's fears;
He lives to wipe away their tears;
He lives their mansions to prepare;
He lives to bring them safely there."

Are You Discouraged?

— Many persons are; and they have reason to be. Man's present life span is very short, filled with trouble and sorrow. During his few years of life man desires security, peace, happiness and good health, but finds only insecurity, war, gloom and sickness. These conditions cause many to wonder if life is worth living at all.

TAKE COURAGE! — Just ahead, for all lovers of righteousness, is unending life in a paradise earth of God's making. There will be no sickness, sorrow, pain or death in his new world. After reading of God's loving provisions in the 384-page book "New Heavens and a New Earth" and how he is carrying them out, you will be greatly comforted and encouraged. Your copy is waiting for you, together with an arresting 32-page booklet "After Armageddon — God's New World", on a contribution of 50 cents. — Write The Watch Tower, 40 Irwin Ave., Toronto.

Baptist Church Reopens for Worship Following Fire

On March 14 last, the local Baptist Church suffered fire damage, and it was necessary to close the building for repairs. Now the repairs have been done, all by local contractors, and this Sunday the church will open again for public worship. Some minor changes have been made which will add to the effectiveness of the building for general church work. New and better lights have been installed, the centre aisle has been widened, registers for heating of the building have been more appropriately placed, and a change of color scheme adds to the beauty of the interior.

It will be of interest to know that at the evening service on May 30, a new Minshall organ will be dedicated as a memorial to Mrs. Jane MacArthur, now in her 96th year, the only living charter member of the church. This gift and memorial comes from her family; it is a fitting and worthy tribute to a faithful member of the church, and an esteemed citizen of the community.

The church plans to continue its work of building and renovating, and trusts to justify it existence in honoring God, and in serving the district as a source of inspiriation, salvation and blessing.

Bible Briefs

Who Was This?

By A.A.M.

The Bible is rich in stories, and the purpose of this series is to encourage readers to look up for themselves the Bible versions of these incidents. If there are children in the family it is suggested that the story, and the Bible verses on which it is based, be read aloud.

Do you know the name of the man who was so short that he feared he would not be able to see Jesus when he went by, so he climbed up into a sycamore tree? Jesus was passing through Jericho and crowds where surrounding him. But when Jesus came to the tree which this man had climbed, he glanced up into its branches. The Master did not look at this man with critical eyes because he was rich. He had gained his wealth gathering taxes from the Jews for the Romans. But Jesus saw a man who was eager to see Him and who needed Him. So Jesus said to him, "Make haste, and come down; for I must stay at your house today."

So the little man joyfully scrambled to the ground and entertained Jesus to a meal. So great was the Master's influence, that his host resolved to give half of his goods to the poor and to any man he had cheated he promised to pay back four times the sum he had wrongly acquired. Of course some people murmured against Jesus that he had gone to be the guest of a man who was a sinner. But that didn't worry Jesus, who said, "Today salvation has come to this house. For the Son of man came to seek and to save the lost."

Perhaps you have guessed correctly this man's name. But read the story for yourself, or read it aloud to your family in Luke 19, verses 1-10.

Wed in Historic California Mission

Foley - Berniquer

A marriage of interest to many acquaintances here took place recently in California, when Miss Maureen Berniquer, eldest daughter of Mrs. Jos. Berniquer and the late Mr. Berniquer, formerly of Lachute, became the bride of James Foley, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Foley of Halifax, N.S. Both have resided in California for the past several years.

Scene of the afternoon ceremony was the historic San Carlos Mission at Carmel-by-the-Sea, California — Monsignor the Rev. D. O'Connell officiating.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Therese Berniquer, of San Francisco, as bridesmaid. Best man was Mr. Charles D. Flynn, of San Francisco. The altar of the mission chapel was decorated with white carnations for the ceremony.

The bride wore a gown of imported Swiss white organdy with a small cap of organdy and a fingertip veil of illusion. She carried a cluster of white camellias and bouvardia.

Miss Therese Berniquer, as bridesmaid, wore a ballet-length dress of gold organdy and carried a fan-shaped bouquet of gold carnations and roses with loops of turquoise to match the sash.

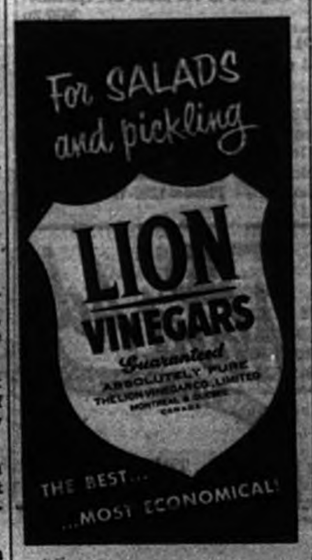

A wedding dinner was held in the Victoria Room of the Pine Inn.

Government Aid In Moving Unemployed

Ottawa (CP) — Supplementary estimates include $125,000 for an experiment in moving jobless into areas where there is work. Informants at Ottawa said the money would be used to help unemployed to move out of the most depressed areas. A number of such areas now being considered are believed to include the coal-mining districts of Dominion and Westville in Nova Scotia and the textile-milling communities of the Ottawa valley.

If all the Federal government's civilian employees — 329,565 as of August, 1953 — were gathered in one city, it would rank as the fourth city in Canada. Add their dependents and you'd have Canada's No. 1 centre, population-wise.

Every member is urged to take part next Saturday, to ensure a good representation. . . The boys will assemble at the School at 9 a.m. (Further particulars may be had from the Cubmaster, tel. 744-M.)

Among a large number of people who were given IQ tests, only 1.1 per cent had marks of 140 to 149, the "near-genius" bracket, writes Bruce Bliven in the May Reader's Digest. In the "very superior" group, with IQs of 130 to 139, were 3.1 per cent; 8.2 per cent had marks of 120 to 129, also judged "very superior"; 18.1 per cent were "superior" with 110 to 119; 46.5 per cent were clustered around the 100 "average", with IQs of 90 to 109; 23 per cent were below 90.

Tigers Resume Winning Ways in League Openers

The Lachute Tigers opened their 1954 season and Gerry Cotnoir led his team to two triumphs against St. Jerome over the holiday week-end. Total hits in the double header were 22-14 in favor of the local Tigers.

Opener

An offensive of 11 hits compared to 5 for St. Jerome paced the Tigers to a brilliant 9-4 victory in the opener. Bougie was the best local at bat, hitting two homers and a single, with Robitaille and Stobbs both connecting twice. Additional homers were from the bats of Cotnoir and Taillefer, while Dubé and Gohier got single hits.

Ready started the game for St. Jerome, but was replaced by Pellerin, who took the defeat — while Robitaille allowed but five hits to his opponents, winning the game easily.

Night Game

The Tigers' Gohier played the hero's role at the opening game in the Lachute Stadium Sunday evening, hitting a homer in the tenth inning with the score tied 7-all. The Tigers came out on top once again, this time with an 8-7 win gained out of 11 hits, while the Cardinals from St. Jerome connected nine times. Lachute's color-bearers committed three errors, against one for the Cards.

GRENV'L HIGH SCHOOL

By Willis Young

We regret that we omitted to mention last week in our write-up on the Graduation, that Principal A. J. McGerrigle presented each of the graduates with a class pin. The recipients wish to take this opportunity to thank Mr. McGerrigle for these pins, and for his good wishes for their success.

TIME IS MONEY

Richmond, B.C. (CP) — Council bought an $18,000 grader on March 30 to affect a two per cent provincial tax saving. Now they know that if they'd waited 10 days they would have saved the 10 per cent federal sales tax, which the Abbott budget removed from municipal equipment.

DRIVERS PENALIZED

Victoria (CP) — Driving privileges of 12,849 British Columbia motorists were suspended in 1953. Of these, 9,000 failed to maintain proof of financial responsibility. Another 319 were suspended for poor driving records and the rest were for various offences.

L.H.S. Honors Basketball Team, Season's Champs

The evening of May 24 will be happily remembered by the senior girls' basketball team, parents and friends, who were entertained at a banquet in Lachute High School.

Paul Villeneuve, president of the Students' Council, acted as chairman, and following a tasty meal, Miss Ruth Cowan proposed a toast to the Champions, which was capably responded to by Miss Dorothy Underhill.

Mr. R. A. Giles then presented his memorial trophy, with congratulations to the winners and special praise for Miss Underhill, who received an individual trophy as the player showing the best all-round sportsmanship during the basketball season.

Mr. Robt. Bailly, who with Mr. Russel Burton coached the young ladies to victory, paid tribute to the hard work, co-operation and determination to win, which had been manifest during the term by all players. It was a year and a record to be proud of, with 25 wins and only two loses. There were exhibition and local league games with Brownsburg, St. Eustache, Buckingham, Vankleek Hill, Hawkesbury, Hudson, Ste. Rose, West Hill High, Montreal Y.M.H.A., Macdonald High, Macdonald College and St. Lambert.

The provincial champions of last year, St. Helen's Ladies' College, suffered defeat in the semi-finals, as did Magog in the finals, with a score of 56 to 44.

Messrs. Baillie and Burton were recipients of cigarette cases bearing the crest of Lachute High School, in appreciation of their coaching and keen interest in this branch of sport. Miss J. Murdoch, who was the team's manager, also received a gift for her very efficient services.

Commissioner Douglas Bradford, on behalf of the School Board, presented each member of the team with an attractive sweater. The recipients included Dorothy Underhill, Ann Hazel, Marilyn Mitchell, Elaine Berry, Rose Ann Welden, Janine Stettler, Betty Underhill, Elsie Touchette, Frances Laurin, Audrey Copeland, Heather Jones and Joyce Davis.

For this kind token Miss Ann Hazel expressed the team's sincere thanks. Miss Marilyn Mitchell offered a few words of appreciation for the splendid banquet tendered in their honor and the sentiment was echoed by Mr. Stewart Jones on behalf of the parents.

Brownsburg Boy on Stanstead Track Team, Inter-Scholastic Winners

Winner of the Eastern Townships inter-scholastic track meet, held in Sherbrooke, May 22, was Stanstead College, which amassed a total of 99½ points to take the lead over Bishop's College School, with 88 points.

Other schools taking part were Sherbrooke, Lennoxville, Magog, East Angus, Drummondville, Richmond, Windsor Mills, Burry, Beebe and Island Brook.

High scorer for the winners was Tommy Houghton, Windsor Mills, who also won the Intermediate aggregate for the meet.

Among the members of the winning team was Jimmy Martin, of Brownsburg, Que.

Gate Loss on Prolonged Amateur Hockey Series

SPORTS CAMERA
By Jim Peacock,
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Summer came too quickly for the good of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association's cash box.

Or, possibly, the CAHA and its so-called amateur leagues this year attempted too long a marathon. Whatever the case, eastern hockey fans obviously ran out of breath before the finish.

The one-time big money maker of the CAHA — the Memorial Cup final — wilted under mid-May heat. On May 16, more than eight months after the opening of the junior hockey season, St. Catharines TeePees made their 96th outing a 6-2 victory over Edmonton Oil Kings and tucked away the first Memorial Cup ever to go to the Niagara peninsula city.

TeePees went five games against Edmonton in the best-of-seven Canadian final, which once drew upwards of 15,000 per game to Maple Leaf Gardens in Toronto regardless of the participants. But in these five games — despite troops of faithful St. Catharines fans who drove 80 miles to Toronto — only 18,000 darkened the Gardens' gates.

The CAHA, which held its annual meeting at Vancouver while the Edmontons and TeePees battled in Toronto, may argue that St. Catharines' lopsided 8-2 win in the series' opener discouraged a lot of paying customers.

Awesome Record

But the Oil Kings came East this year with an awesome record — 60 wins in 65 league, playoff and exhibition games.

With this record touted in the East two weeks before TeePees squeezed into the final after full-length thrillers in three eastern play-offs, what kept the first-game crowd down to 5,000? Could it have been a baseball double-header at the other end of town?

The attendance figure dipped to about 3,000 for the second and third games, won 5-3 and 4-1 by the TeePees, and increased only to 4,100 for a Saturday-night fourth game which was tied 3-3 after overtime.

The final game pulled in only 2,800 — barely enough to pay the lighting bill at the Gardens — and probably the lowest Memorial Cup attendance in 20 years.

The series' gate receipts would hardly pay the bus fare TeePees spent travelling between Toronto and St. Catharines. And what of Oil Kings' expenses from a 4,000-mile round trip and two weeks in Toronto; and the Edmontons' 16-day layoff between the western and Memorial Cup finals, for which the CAHA has said they will be recompensed?

A January blizzard in May probably aided in two other late-season hockey series played in the West.

Penticton V's played to full houses in their 4,000-odd capacity district arenas in defeating Sudbury Wolves 4-3 in games for the Allan Cup. Calgary Stampeders and Quebec Aces drew nearly 40,000 in six games in Calgary and Edmonton in an East-West professional round, in which Calgary won the Edinburgh Trophy 5-1 in games.

School trustees of Saanich district in B.C. were puzzled by the use of a strange word by Secretary A. G. Blair. He employed the term "custodian service"; explanation, "janitor service".

Plan Curling Club For St. Eustache

A three-rink curling club equipped with artificial ice is on the drawing board for St. Eustache — reports George Whittaker in the Montreal Star.

Construction of the site, which is adjacent to the clubhouse of the St. Eustache Golf and Country Club, will get underway next fall. It will be ready for play next winter.

J. H. Lavallee, owner and president of the golf club, and his son, Charles, have been toying with the idea of adding curling to the town's sporting activities for some time. They are in agreement that the time is now ripe to build a "house" for the roarin' game.

New Volume on Folk Songs of Canada

Interest in the folk songs of Canada is on the upswing. We have been hearing them more and more frequently in recent years. On the radio they have been featured in the last few months by Bernard Johnson, Joyce Sullivan, Trudy Carlyle, Evelyn Pasen, Helene Baillargeon and Alan Mills; TV artists like Miss Pasen and Ed McCurdy have also presented many of them.

Now, for the first time, there is a comprehensive collection of Canadian folk songs in book form. It has just been published by the Waterloo Music Company. Included in a handsome volume are 77 varied songs from all parts of the country, chosen by folk-song authority Edith Fowke and Dr Richard Johnston, a professor of music at the University of Toronto, from the heritage of thousands of French, English, Indian and other folk tunes.

CBC listeners will recognize many of the songs — no coincidence, for the book is a direct result of the enquiries received by Mrs. Fowke in response to her CBC Trans-Canada network program Folk Song Time, which has been on the air for several seasons and is heard currently at 6.35 p.m. on Fridays. Listeners wanted to know where they could get copies of the Canadian songs they had heard on this program. In some cases Mrs. Fowke was able to supply references or lend manuscripts. Usually the answer was, "Nowhere . . . until we have a comprehensive folk-song collection." Before the book was ready Mrs. Fowke lent manuscripts of some of the songs to CBC radio and TV artists.

Songs which have been broadcast recently, and which appear in the book with simple piano accompaniments and guitar chord-symbols, complete texts, and historical notes, include: The Kelligrews Soiree, an hilarious account of the high jinks at a jamboree in Newfoundland; Brave Wolfe, a beautiful historical ballad celebrating the death of the famous general nearly two centuries ago; The Huron Carol, the first Canadian Christmas carol, with words attricuted to Father Jean de Brebeuf; Dans tous les cantons, an old favorite in Quebec in which matrimony is viewed with a somewhat jaundiced eye; Old Grandma, an old favorite which has popped up in such widely scattered areas as Newfoundland, California and Saskatchewan; I'll Give My Love an Apple, a Nova Scotian version of a song that has also been sung widely in England and the States; The False Young Man, an old-country song in a Canadian version recorded at a small Irish colony on the Gatineau River north of Ottawa — also the theme of the CBC radio show Songs chez nous; the Anti-Confederation Song, from Newfoundland; and two Newfoundland love songs, She's Like the Swallow and The Morning Dew.

Also in the book are many of the best-known songs, such as A Canadian Boat Song, The Red River Valley, Alouette!, and Vive la canadienne! Published for the first time is An Eskimo Lullaby from Cape Dorset on the southern coast of Baffinland. A song of prospectors and trappers in the far north, the theme song of the trappers' festival in The Pas in Manitoba, is When the Ice-worms Nest Again; the version published in Folk Songs of Canada is one picked up at a bar in Fairbanks, Alaska.

The book, says Dr. Johnson who prepared all the music arrangements, "has not been made for the folk-singer, but rather for those who love folk songs and love to sing them." The songs have been cast in a key which makes them comfortable for voices with a medium range, he says.

"This book was written because up to this time there has been no comprehensive collection of Canadian folk songs," Dr. Johnson adds. "Before now there have been only regional collections representing French Canada, Nova Scotia and Newfoundland, but the store of material to be found in this country is immense. Mrs. Fowke and I cannot claim to have exhausted it, and we doubt if that can ever be done. We have merely attempted a cross-section of one of Canada's most valuable cultural heritages."

In her introduction Mrs. Fowke, who edited the text, prepared notes on each song and translations from the French where necessary, says: "Canadian songs spring from varied and colorful sources: from the French-Canadian habitants' who sang as they cleared their farms along the St Lawrence, and from the coureurs-de-bois who sang as they paddled across Canada's many waterways; from the pioneer settlers who brought to the new world the traditional ballads of England, Scotland and Ireland; from the sailors and fishermen of our maritime provinces who sang as they ran up the sails or pulled in the nets; from the prospectors of the far north, the sod-busters of the prairies, and the roving lumberjacks who sang around the shanty stoves when their day's work was done. Even before the white men came to Canada, our plains and forests resounded to the songs of the Indians invoking their gods, and the Eskimos sang in their igloos to while away the long Arctic nights."

Show Stealer

Juliette, star of "Saturday Night", a CBC Trans-Canada radio show, is shown with arranger-conductor Rudy Toth (left) who leads a noval musical group containing piano, organ, vibes, guitar, bass, flute, and accordian. Big Byng Whitteker, on his otherwise musical show, completes the format by commenting on the week's events in retrospect. In fact that's why the three of them are reading a newspaper, in what was to have been a publicity photo featuring a pretty girl. Juliette's most attractive countenance is already familiar to thousands of Canadians, and Whitteker's grabbing attention for himself (by covering half of Juliette's face) won't fool anyone.

'Oliver Twist' on CBM

Charles Dickens' "Oliver Twist", the melodramatic story of a poor London boy, is being broadcast in serial form, as transcribed by the BBC, each Sunday at 4 p.m. on station CBM. The first of 12 episodes was heard May 16. The adaptation is by Giles Cooper. The emphasis is on the literary aspects, an approach which was considered particularly well-suited to the adaptation of a book which, apart from some passages of magnificent writing, is pure melodrama. The part of Oliver Twist is played by Wilfrid Downing, who was 15 when the series was transcribed. The Artful Dodger is played by Brian Smith, and Fagin by John Gabriel.

Among the Hurons

Ste. Marie was the central settlement of the Jesuit missions to Huronia for 10 years in the early 17th century. After Champlain's first visit to the area in 1615, both traders and missionaries followed. Ste. Marie was near Midland, Ontario. The Jesuits finally burned the settlement rather than let it fall into the hands of the invading Iroquois. The priests retreated with their Huron friends. The ruins were witnessed later by many travelers, and in recent years some archaeological work has been done. Finally, Wilfred Jury, curator of the Museum of Indian Archaeology at the University of Western Ontario, led a determined effort, extending over several years, to solve the mystery of the extent and nature of the settlement.

In a series of three CBC radio programs on Tuesdays at 10.15 p.m. on Trans-Canada (starting June 1) producer J. Frank Willis will interview Mr. Jury about his work, which is also described in detail in a recently-published book.

Stirring Address By Priest-Teacher At Rotary Night

(Our District Correspondent)

(Intended for last issue)

Brownsburg — There was a large attendance, forming a gay and cheerful party, at the recent Rotary ladies' night. The highlight of the evening, following a delightful buffet supper, was an address by the Rev. Thomas Mitchell of St. Patrick's College, Ottawa, which proved to be an excursion into the by-ways of history, civilization, and spiritual values — erudite, entertaining and thought-provoking.

The speaker began by praising the spirit of fellowship exemplified in the evening's gathering. He hoped that the ideal was not merely "tolerance" — a much misunderstood word. Tolerance is the lowest form of human co-operation half-way between hate and charity. "I would never have come here just to be tolerated; for to be tolerated means to be put in a class where people 'put up' with you just like some people in Ottawa 'put up' with other people from Toronto when they rave about their new subway," said the speaker.

The speaker went on to say that, once you are sure of something, once you become certain of something, your tolerance on that point is finished. You cannot tolerate what you know to be false, without mental or moral chaos. You can tolerate and even love the person whose views you cannot stand, much as the teacher can tolerate a student, but cannot tolerate his errors. By way of example Father Mitchell cited several examples from his own experience as a priest and teacher.

The speaker stated that one should have a great deal more than tolerance for one's fellow, for many reasons. All men are descendants from the same unfortunate parents. There is a common origin for all mankind. Vestiges of man's common ancestry are apparent in the most remote races. But this, after all does not mean much when one examines the history of war between nations that have so much in common. "I need something more than prehistoric ancestry to bind me to my fellow man." Father Mitchell went on to analyse the rise and fall of many races. "Group hate," he said, "is made up of all the selfish and lower passions seething under a thick layer of blind and willful ignorance."

This cult of hate reached its zenith in the last two centuries in the false conception of the equality of man. He cited the slogan of the French Revolution as an example of the rise of sentimental rather than reasonal idealism. He spoke of the rise of Imperialism, Communism, Nazism, and Fascism as false conceptions of the superiority of race against the true equality of man with man.

"The reason for all these pagan and debasing philosophies," said the speaker, "is that men have failed to realize that what gives all men of all races equal dignity is something spiritual. There are no two men on God's earth that are really equal physically, intellectually or morally. But what makes every man sacred and sublime, a being in the universe, is the image of the Creator implanted in all men by God. That, plus man's common immortality, makes all men equal, no matter what their race or color be."

Father Mitchell declared a man to be a "person, a spiritual entity, someone that can reason and choose, someone with a fixed destiny that soars above and beyond this visible scene, is therefore sacred and inviolable."

In concluding, the speaker stated that, if man could only accept that conception of the dignity and grandeur of man, civilization would have been spared the bloodshed that has cut down the flower of youth in so many lands during the last 35 years. He furthermore added, "If you deny the obvious fact, the common tradition of Jewish and Christian civilization, that an all-wise God has implanted in all men a common denominator we can all respect — sonship with Him, a universal Fatherhood for all — then Hitler, Stalin and the whole miserable crew of would-be gods are right, and we are wrong; and with that the dignity of man is reduced to the law of the jungle." A parting thought left with the listener was a quotation from Lincoln's second inaugural address: "With charity towards all, with malice towards none. . . ."

No Need to Panic When Baby Gets Rash

There's no need to panic when the children get a rash. So says Grenville Park, M.D., in a recent issue of "Family Doctor", published by the British Medical Association.

"It is a fact", says Dr. Park, "that children can have flat feet, short sight, curvature of the spine or septic tonsils and their parents will remain blissfully happy and unaware of trouble. But a rash always seems to scare them.

"There are only two infectious diseases in which the rash is the first thing to be noticed. These are chicken pox and German measles. It is very rare for either of these diseases to be serious in a child."

As for measles and scarlet fever, which can be serious, Dr. Park says "In neither case is the rash suddenly seen without warning in an otherwise healthy child. The measles child has already had a cold, a cough, bloodshot eyes and a temperature for several days. And she usually feels better when the rash does come. The child with scarlet fever has a sore throat and a temperature as well as the blush-red rash on the trunk."

Quite often these rashes which appear suddenly come from nothing more serious than nettles or flea-bites, Dr. Park says. Occasionally a clean child may catch scabies from one who is not so clean. All these rashes are very easily and quickly cured.

"A rash that appears out of the blue with no other symptoms is very unlikely to be due to anything serious. If the child seems well, just put him to bed as usual, and its an even chance it will be gone by morning. If the thing persists, ask your doctor to have a look."

CHILD TOP VOCALIST, PARENTS BOTH DEAF

Milton (CP) — Marjorie Dolby, 9, whose parents have never heard her voice, won out over 21 other entries in the nine years and under vocal class in the Halton County Music Festival here.

Marjorie's mother has been deaf since birth while her father lost his hearing as a boy.

Mrs. Dolby said her daughter has been taking piano lessons for two years, but has never taken voice lessons.

Marjorie and her sister Sandra, were both taught sign language by their parents when they were toddlers.

Foreign Cookery

Who does not like to get a new recipe? If it comes from a far off country you feel you have something really special. The home economists of the Consumer Section suggest that the best way to get a foreign recipe is from a person who is used to making it. You will really enjoy making up dishes from such recipes if you are told or shown how to make them by someone who is an old hand at it. That is quite possible today. Everyone is travelling more, and even if you are not, so many new Canadians have brought their recipes into our communities that you can get them first hand. That is one of the reasons that foreign dishes and meals are so much more popular just now. You have probably served one or more of these dishes yourself fairly recently. If you have not, perhaps your reason for not trying one is that it calls for so many ingredients and that it takes so much time. That is the big difference between the recipes in North America and those in Europe. Anyone who has been to Europe recently will tell you that the time element is noticeable. The European housewives are not concerned with shortcuts. You do not see the number of pre-packaged foods over there that are in all our stores. It does not seem to occur to them not to make almost everything at home. Actually, it is the variety of ingredients and the long cooking together that gives foreign food the wonderful flavor that no shortcut methods can quite duplicate. Of course many Canadian housewives just could not spend so much time preparing a meal. But it is a great pity not to try these special dishes occasionally. When you get a few you really like, you will probably want to make them a part of your family meal pattern.

Cooking in a cabbage leaf is a new idea to most Canadians, but it is a very old northern European custom. The Arabs practised a similar custom and if you have any Danish or Finnish friends, you will find that they serve cabbage leaves quite frequently. They call them "cabbage rolls". Since most of the recipes have been handed down in families from generation to generation, there can be almost countless combinations for the filling. The following recipe for Cabbage Rolls is one you will want to try for lunch or supper sometime soon.

Cabbage Rolls

12 Large cabbage leaves, 1 green pepper, 1/3 cup chopped onion, 1/3 cup chopped celery, 2 tablespoons fat, 2 cups chopped cooked spaghetti or marcaroni or cooked rice, 1 1/2 cups sausage meat (3/4 pound), 1 cup tomato juice.

Wash cabbage leaves and cook, covered, for 3 minutes in a small amount of boiling salted water. Drain and dry on a towel. Seed and chop green pepper and sauté with onion and celery in fat for two minutes. Add the spaghetti and sausage meat, blending well. Put about 1/3 cup stuffing on each cabbage leaf and roll up, starting from base of leaf. Place in single layer in greased baking dish. Pour tomato juice over the rolls and bake in a moderate oven, 350°F., for about 45 minutes. Yield: six servings.

Canadians Favor Evaporated Milk

Canadians use more evaporated milk than any other people! So the home economists of the Consumer Section, Canada Department of Agriculture, tell us. Thinking of evaporated milk, its story is an interesting one. Production first started in Canada about 70 years ago and from that time on Canadians have steadily used more and more evaporated milk. Statistics over the period of the last 20 years show that our consumption has actually tripled. That fact is rather interesting for it is something that most homemakers probably had never realized. When examining statistics we see how, after World War I, there was an increase in consumption because our soldiers and sailors had become accustomed to evaporated milk. Consumption increased again after this last year.

We first started to use evaporated milk in Canada sometime after 1883 for it was then that the first condensery was built in Truro, Nova Scotia. Incidentally, this oringinal condensery is still operating at full speed 70 years later. Its operation can be attributed to the discovery of the vacuum pan by Gail Borden in 1856. This vacuum pan is used for the removel of part of the water from the milk. The processing is done under vacuum in order that the temperature of boiling may be lowered from 212°F. to 130°F. This boiling under vacuum helps to preserve the natural flavors and qualities found in the milk.

Evaporated milk does not have any social status. It is used by people of all income levels, the high and the low. It is not used just in certain localities either. Consumers in all parts of Canada use evaporated milk although probably homemakers in Newfoundland use more than do homemakers in a city such as say Toronto, Vancouver or Regina, because there is very little fresh milk produced in Newfoundland.

In order to produce the 23 million pounds of evaporated milk used in Canada each year, many factories had to be built and now there are 19 condenseries in Canada which are located in several provinces. A 16-ounce can of evaporated milk, the tall can, weighs one pound and in Canada we each use an average of about 19 of these large tins per year. Now this statement may seem misleading because today many babies are fed on evaporated milk and their mothers use great quantities of the milk whereas other families do not use very much of it. However, the overall picture for Canada breaks down to that figure of about 18 cans per person per year. Evaporated milk, as it pours from the can, has twice the nutritive value of the original milk. During the processing about 60% of the water is removed from the original milk and so it would take two gallons of rich fluid milk to give one gallon of evaporated milk. That is why when using evaporated milk in the home, it should be mixed with an equal amount of water to bring it back to whole fluid milk.

We are always hearing and reading about things that are "a product of our times" and in the food line certainly skim milk is one of them. The first skim milk powder plant in Canada was built in the early 1900's in Brownsville, Ontario. The milk powder produced in this plant and many other factories was used almost entirely by the bakery trade. About 5 years ago, skim powder was first put into packages for consumer sale in Canada. Today we use about 3¼ pounds of skim milk per person per year in Canada and remembering that each pound makes about 4 quarts of skim milk, it is easy to see that the 3¼ pounds give about 14 quarts of skim milk per person which certainly is quite a tidy amount.

Doctors, nutritionists and dietitians are advocating the use of skim milk powder. Today many people are overweight and have to cut down on calories and skim milk powder, which is whole milk from which just the fat has been removed and it is then dried, has less calories than whole milk. In a recent survey conducted on milk consumption in major cities in Canada, it was found that many adults were not drinking milk and Mrs. Homemaker seemed to be at fault more often than other members of the family. If homemakers are the offenders they should try and develop a milk drinking habit just as they probably have a tea or coffee drinking habit, and if they are diet or calorie-conscious, then what better milk to drink than skim milk made from Canadian skim milk powder.

NEW DESIGN FOR SCHOOLHOUSE

—Central Press Canadian

Sixty equal sides to this model of a school now being built in Owen Sound, Ont., make it unique in Canada. The designers say the new school will make maximum utilization of space and that it is easier and cheaper to build. Marg Rainbow points to the third-storey windows which will allow light into the gymnasium. The design allows for an auditorium, cafeteria, gymnasium and 27 rooms.

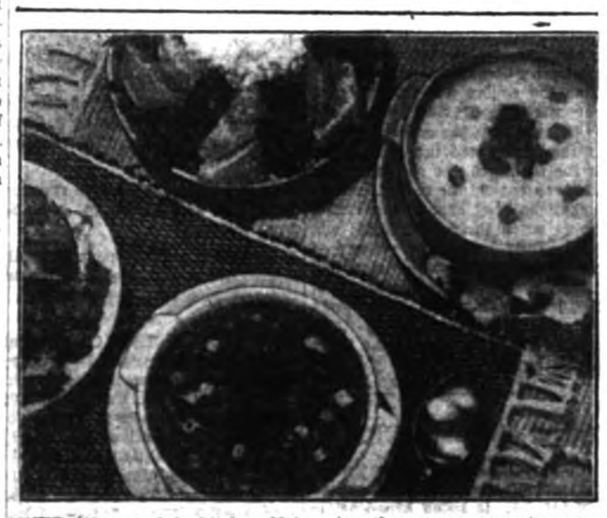

Permanent pleated, sheer, nylon tricot is the fabric chosen for a nice dress good for now and right through the summer. It is pleated from the graceful yoke to the hem. The waistline is cinched by a black patent leather belt. A high round neck is finished by a string bow tie. This is a dress that takes to simple or more elaborate accessories nicely, making it a useful member of the wardrobe, and one that is youthful and flattering.

To protect your bread supply, make it a weekly habit to empty your bread box of all stale pieces, waste and crumbs. Wash it out, preferably with vinegar, and dry thoroughly.

You do not need to sprinkle flour on a roast of veal before roasting; it will brown without flour.

SOUP SCOOPS

Surprise Dad With Dinner: Father is "King of the Mansion" during Father's Day, so fix him a royal feature. Beef burgers that are jumbo-size will guarantee that the meal is a sure-fire success. Crown the burgers with rich beef gravy—Dad's choice anytime. You can use a can of the good gravy that's already to heat and serve. Dish up each plate with a sizzling burger, a scoop of golden corn, and parsley-buttered new potatoes. Fill individual wooden bowls with tossed salad. Pass the rich brown gravy for pour-on with burgers and potatoes. Later carry in the dessert—ice cream and luscious chocolate cake for the man of the house. If you use white frosting, you can spell out "DAD" with chocolate chips (and draw a heart around it).

A Weekly Feature of Helpful Hints on Child Training

Learning to Dress

(Copyright) — By NANCY CLEAVER —

Learning to dress is a real accomplishment for a small child. Mothers sometimes forget this. Pulling off clothes is comparatively simple. It can easily be turned into a game. But few grownups realize how hard it is for little fingers to pull on articles of clothing, do up buttons or tie knots.

Interest is necessary for all learning. Enthusiasm to master a skill, even on the part of a small child, makes accomplishment much more possible. If a child is discouraged by his mother in his first trials in putting on socks or underwear, it may be a long time before he shows any eagerness to become self-sufficient in dressing himself. A parent may even wonder at his indifference to get himself dressed, forgetting that he was denied when he first wanted to try to look after himself.

A mother does well to meet her child half-way. Demonstrate how to put on a certain article. Then let the child struggle to do it himself. His fingers may seem to be all thumbs, but mother must stay in the background. Give only the assistance which is necessary. Encourage the child and praise him for even a small measure of success. Be careful, however, that Junior is not trying to dress himself just in order to get warm words of commendation from mother. Let small Junior get increasing satisfaction from becoming more proficient in his own ability to put on his clothes.

A year-old child or even an older baby may occasionally attempt to put on an article of apparel. But most two-year-olds are quite eager to dress themselves. Their interest wanes from time to time. Not until they are almost five will they be able to assume full responsibility. Tying shoe laces and doing buttons up at the back are often not done correctly till a child is ready to start to school.

It is only fair to the child to teach her that when his first day at school arrives he can dress himself, see to his own needs — and last but not least, have rubbers or galoshes for rainy days which will not cause him tears.

Zippers are a real boon in small children's clothes providing they are sturdy and carefully inserted. Buttons must be large enough for small fingers and button holes roomy. Modern children are fortunate in the well cut, simply made little garments which can be donned with the minimum of effort.

All children do a certain amount of dawdling. Mothers sometime wonder how on the world their children can consume so much time in the simple process of dressing. To nag or to scold a child who is a bit of a slow-poke is worse than useless. But do try to cut out unnecessary distractions or interruptions.

Plan for some enjoyable activity just after dressing is completed. If Mummy will stop and sing a Nursery Song with Junior when he is all clothed — she will be delighted what an impetus this is to his efforts!

THE HIGH-STRUNG CHILD

Not too many generations ago a full-fledged physician was mainly expected to be dexterous with tools.

When a patient's trouble was something that couldn't be sawed or sewed or sliced or pried loose, the old sawbones was obliged to resort to a closet full of pills, elixirs and powders that were rather dubiously guaranteed not to do any harm.

Not very much was said about nerves in those days. It was a dangerous subject. People who insisted that nerves might have something to do with whatever was bothering them were likely to find themselves wearing funny hats and chains in the village square, surrounded by hooting little boys with mudballs.

Nowadays it is almost impossible to conceive of a physician in any field of medicine who is not well-grounded in psychiatry. The borderline between psychiatry and physiology is a very delicate one and in places a non-existent one.

Question:

"Can small children have nervous stomachs? My oldest daughter, age 10, goes at a pace that would kill a high pressure executive. Straight A's at school, creative work at home such as art, chemistry, plays, etc., plus taking care of her little brothers and sisters and the neighbors kids, cooking meals, etc. We try to discourage this, but she insists on doing everything and doing it better than anybody. Half a year ago she began complaining of stomach pains. A doctor decided she should have her appendix removed and did so, but the pains recur at mealtimes and don't go away until the other kids are in bed, when suddenly she is willing to eat. My own stomach acts that way when I am under pressure, and the only thing I can think of is to tell her to slow down and occasionally let things slide. Our local G.P. is baffled.

Answer:

Such a child is a very common type. Ofter the first-born are more highly strung, are more creative and aggressive and drive themselves "for all they are worth." I do not think there is actually anything wrong with the stomach to call it a nervous stomach. The whole child is very high strung and this reflects itself on every part of the anatomy. Stomach pains may be due to a nervous spasm which is part, as I have said, of her general high strung make up, or at times they may be due to some dietary indiscretion.

NERVOUS DURING PREGNANCY

Question:

"People are saying now that if you are nervous or upset when you are expectant it will make your baby high-strung. That's just the opposite of what they used to say. What is the truth?"

Answer:

Simple nervous upsets have no effect on the future of the baby of an expectant mother. However if the mother is a chronically nervous person the outlook is not so good. She may have a hypertonic baby; one who vomits a lot, is hard to find suitable feeding for, and cries a great deal. These babies fortunately can be taken care of readily by a prescription from the doctor of medicine. It is given the baby before each feeding. It must be given over a long period however — at least six months and often for a year.

Shakespeare and Mellow Comfort; Housewife's Drudgery and Pleasure

"SUNNYACRES SKETCHES"
By Margaret Cook

Another "24th" at Sunnyacres. And, as we write, a nasty rain borne on a north-east wind is hurling itself at the windows — also, we hope, on the seeds of nasturtiums, ageratum and sunflowers that we have just planted. Yes, sunflowers; a score of years ago, we would have spurned such coarse flambuoyancy, but now we feel a yen for it. Likewise, in our youth, we felt that pale blue was a beautiful color, but now, it looks very wish-washy and we hunger for a sunny yellow, or even a good clear scarlet. Just a gradual coarsening of the soul. Anyway, we have in mind to startle our visitors this summer with a row of sunflowers standing like sentinels at the end of the lane, so that coming around the bend, suddenly, the weary guest will behold the old house, resplendent in its new paint, with flowers at the side and the sunflowers guarding us from the wilderness beyond the hill. . . It is a lovely thought, even if the reality does turn out to be something else again.

We are soaking in the peace of the country after a very busy week at home. The daughter is reading "Lamb's Tales from Shakespeare", and the man of the house is doing something searching in chemistry. Betty does her reading flat on her stomach before the fire, which leaps upward, casting faint yellow gleams on the green floor. Nearby, Peter, the cat, is content in the warmth. We wonder what Will Shakespeare would have thought of this, probably he would have written a sonnet to the comforts of home. We are amused by the daughter's reaction to Shakespeare. She feels that Romeo and Juliet were silly, but finds Shylock compatible — the old affinity of Irish and Jew. We are reminded of our first acquaintance with Lamb's Tales. We sent away soap wrappers (or maybe the product was oranges); anyway, we achieved the book by our own efforts, and so loved it dearly. Lamb makes a good introduction to Shakespeare, for the obsolete phrasing of the original makes the effort of reading too much for the uneager adolescent. . . We speak bitterly, for it is once more the tutoring season and we are appalled by the barren minds of some modern youth!

We had the pleasure this week of spending a day in a small village in Huntingdon County. True, it was spent in the company of 140 women and four men, but even the clacking of tongues and the diligent clik-clik of cutlery could not dim our pleasure in the scented breeze, wafting into the hall from the apple orchards. After lunch, we had time to walk through a large orchard, along the aisles of pink and white bloom, with the bees buzzing happily overhead.

That district, too, abounds in old stone houses. The man of the house mentions nastily that rheumatism also abounds; but stone houses are beautiful and I, for one, do not believe that rheumatism is caused by an external.

When all 140 of us were safely back in the hall, we had our business meeting. Not being a Club Woman (we speak of a distinct species), I do not listen too carefully, but rather am diverted by the fascinating facets of human nature. As one particularly voluble female took her seat after an impassioned address, a rural voice behind us was heard to murmur, "She reminds me of a cow, which gives a good full pail of milk and then spoils it all by putting her foot in it." Then a woman who would be described as "neat", if she were noticed at all, gets up and reviews a book about Dr. Schweitzer, and in a few moments the hall was hushed and we were transported to that Alsatian home and saw the young Schweitzer suffering through his childhood, as do so many geniuses. It is the cheerful, gay, athletic extroverts that keep alive the legend that the happiest days of one's life are school-days. . . The "brains" know differently.

The "neat" orator took her seat and we were free to look around and discover our old friend, met at every meeting, the sleeper. There she was, apparently asleep bolt upright. We were reminded of the one who slept through last year's meeting and punctuated her rest with good, loud snores. Finally, the ordeal is nearly over and a volunteer is sought to act as secretary at next year's gathering. We hide behind the conveniently bulky member ahead of us, because several of our friends are trying to look meaningly at me. An eager-beaver of a woman finally offers her services, and we are free to sing "God Save the Queen" and hurry home to prepare for the week-end at Sunnyacres. . . Oh Joy, Oh Bliss!

In the course of said preparation, we visit the local chain store and are in time to hear a lady ask in cheerful Cockney accents of the French-speaking attendant if he has an orange drink that is diluted with water for serving. The poor fellow would as readily have understood Cantonese; so, after the third repetition, we intervene and direct the new citizen to the proper department. The salesman's gratitude is short-lived, for we at once fall out over the state of the strawberries, which he described a extra-fine and we as unripe. After we move on, sans strawberries, we are amused to hear him explain to a listening customer that, though we often quarrel, we always make up. Bless his kind, understanding heart! So, we go home and pull rhubarb (who wants strawberries anyway!) and, in half an hour, the grocer who has tried to serve our capricious whims for 20 years, stops by unexpectedly and brings a box of big, red strawberries in a gay yellow, plastic blasket. With true Gallic éclat, he rips the paper off the basket to show how perfect is his offering; he waves his hands and tek-teks with his tongue and I pat him on his white-capped head and all is "merry as a marriage bell". . . So swings a housewife's day through drudgery, comedy and pleasure.

This grows overlong, so we shall hurry on to tell you about nature in the city. Eating our lunch a week ago, we were amazed to see a squirrel come into our line of vision, running along a telephone wire. He whizzed past and on to the corner, where doubtless he continued around the block. Evidently squirrels can adapt to city ways. Will the next generation naturally think of telephone wires as skyways?

Then there was the cock-pheasant we encountered on the sidewalk in upper Westmount. He fixed us with a calm and calculating eye, so that we felt an intruder. But he did comfort us for our sojourn in the city. A city of over a million cannot be wholly lost if it sports squirrels and pheasants. We can perhaps survive till we get to Sunnyacres for the summer. Tugs and Airforce in B.C. Coast Rescue Work

Vancouver (CP) — Seamen working tugboats on the British Columbia coast will no longer be able to catch the hit parade on their radios while standing the midnight watch.

Under a far-reaching rescue and life-saving plan undertaken by the 300-vessel tugboat fleet, hundreds of radios will be altered to force crews to tune in on possible distress calls.

The plan, adopted by representatives of every towboat firm on the coast, fills an urgent need for a coast guard service.

The B.C. Towboat Owners Association have become increasingly alarmed at loss of life and equipment, especially during the winter months, on the storm tossed coast.

The RCAF is an integral part of the plan also and when a vessel radios for assistance on the distress channel, the telephone company will immediately switch the call to the Air-Sea Rescue service of the air force.

The distress call will also be sent direct to Captain Cyril Andrews, or his assistant, representing the towboat industry. Captain Andrews or the vessel's owners, will contact all ships in the area of the accident by radio-telephone and the skipper of one of these vessels will be appointed search master.

By co-ordinating air search and surface patrol, the organizers hope for maximum efficiency and service while the air waves will remain free of unnecessary calls.

Many radio sets are being moved from the captain's quarters to the wheelhouse where night watchmen can monitor them and where a card outlining distress procedure will be posted.

Another Minesweeper For Canada's Modern Fleet

—Central Press Canadian

A new construction, aluminum and wood minesweeper was added to Canada's fast-growing modern fleet when HMCS Miramichi was launched, seen above, at Saint John Drydock, Saint John, N.B., where the ship was built. The vessel is one of 20 of the same class being built for the Royal Canadian Navy in shipyards across Canada. Her sister ship, HMCS Fundy, was launched last December and commissioned at the Saint John Drydock in March. Four of the ships have been turned over to the French navy under NATO mutual aide and two more are slated to follow. Fitted with the latest navigational and radar equipment, HMCS Miramichi will be powered with diesel-driven twin shafts. Aluminum is featured in the construction of the trim 390-ton craft, which has a length of 151 feet and a breadth of 28 feet.

Taking a bath was once regarded as a menace to health, and in 1845 a law was passed in Boston making bathing unlawful unless prescribed by a physician.

Posh Canadian Furs At Big London Fair

London (CP) — Luxurious Canadian mink coats, jackets and stoles worn over model gowns stole the show on the opening day of the British Industries Fair at Earl's Court. The furs make up the London exhibit of the Canadian Government Exhibition Commisson.

The dresses for the exhibit came from the couture houses of Norman Hartnell and Ronald Paterson. Hartnell had also designed four of the silver fox capes which were on view. "He has rounded the shoulders beautifully," declared W. M. Ritchie of Ottawa, well-known Canadian fur expert who is here to answer questions from prospective buyers.

Among the models was Peggy Godfrey, of Vancouver, who shows the furs during the course of the exhibition. Her favorites were a champagne mink stole and a full-length coat of curulean — a sapphire mink mainly smoky grey with just a hint of blue in it.

Mr. Ritchie explained that there were from 65 to 75 mink pelts in a full-length coat and pointed to examples of the unfinished and finished product. Matching furs to make up a garment, he pointed out, was a task requiring great skill.

Asked about the attempt to bring silver fox back into fashion after a disappearance of some 25 years, he said: "Fox is definitely on the way back. Canada has increased her exports of foxes."

He stressed that the Canadian government had set up a system of grading the pelts to help the rancher to determine the value of his pelts and to protect the buyer in regard to quality. Each of the three distinct types of fox — paladium, opaline and onyx — is divided into four grades, A, B, C, and D.

The Canadian stand forms part of the striking Commonwealth exhibit centred round a court. It includes displays from South Africa, New Zealand, India, the Federation of Central Africa, British Guiana, British West Indies, Cyprus, Hong Kong, Malta and Malaya.

Annual Meeting Of Home-School At Brownsburg

(Our District Correspondent)

Brownsburg —

The annual meeting of the Home and School took place in the school cafeteria on May 19. There was a good attendance of members, and the agenda was run through in brisk and business-like fashion. Dave Atkins, president, welcomed the members and gave an interesting account of the year's activities and the progress made in the interests of education in general. Minutes of the previous annual meeting were read by Mrs. N. E. Smillie, in the absence of the secretary, Miss Hanson.

The highlight of the evening was an instructive report from Mrs. Sarah Graham, who had recently attended the anual conference as delegate from the Association. Mrs. Graham was particularly struck by the approach to learning French, as expounded by one of the conference speakers under the title "French Without Tears". She gave several examples of the like difficulties confronting French speakers who were learning English and who had to bring order from the lax and ungrammatical manner with which the language was spoken by English speakers. Mrs. Graham found the conference a mine of educational information and an experience which she recommended most sincerely to other members of the Home and School group.

Mr. Russell Graham, who was also an Association delegate, was most impressed by the discussion on financing education and the levying of taxes to meet the high costs prevailing today. The Quebec system of three panels supported by government grants was fully dealt with by Mr. Graham, and he carried with him from the conference a thought-provoking array of facts on the methods best suited to meet the costs of future educational progress. Other aspects of the conference were also given by Mr. Graham.

The reports of the various officers were read. Mr. Charles Stephens, chairman of the nominating committee, proposed the following slate of officers for the coming term:

President, R. Sugden; vice-president, A. Gervais; recording secretary, Mrs. Sarah Graham; corresponding secretary, M. V. Trayers; treasurer, Mrs. W. Hamilton.

Membership, A. Forbes.
Refreshments, Mrs. B. Clarke.
Social, Alex. Clarke.
Publicity, Miss J. Ford.
Program Planning, G. K. Amos.
Home Study, Miss E. Hanson.
Official representatives, R. Sugden; Miss E. Hanson and D. N. Atkins.

Mr. Stephens' slate was unanimously adopted.

McGill Students Plan International House

Montreal (CP) — McGill University students believe they are part of the most cosmopolitan college in Canada and want an "International House" in keeping with their reputation.

The students started the financial ball rolling toward realization of their aim when a special International House committee presented $650 to William Bentley, the University's bursar as the start of a proposed $50,000 fund.

The committee said McGill is the mecca in Canada for students from other lands. There are more than 1,000 overseas students this year. They come from almost every country in the world.

The organizing committee — headed by George Novotny of Czechoslovakia, Lutz Von Staa, Brazil, and Irena Wisniewski-Chenault, Polland — claims McGill needs an international house to keep up with the well-known international student houses of London, Paris, Edinburgh, Columbia, Chicago, Berkeley and Philadelphia and other universities.

Maintain $2-Billion Budget for Defence

"We are not entirely helpless, but we are very close to it," said Col. Harkness, an artillery officer overseas in the Second World War.

Mr. Claxton replied later with an amplification of his reference to halting nine of 10 planes in practice. He said the figures illustrate an operational study and did not suggest that "if the enemy came tonight, our planes could get into the air and knock down nine out of 10."

Secret Report

Mr. Claxton rejected a demand by Progressive Conservative leader Drew that a secret report on the condition of the reserve army be produced for the Commons before it is asked to consider detailed estimates on the reserve army. Mr. Claxton said he will tell members later what the report recommends and what action the government is taking.

The report was made by three top officers under Maj.-Gen. Howard Kennedy after more than a year of investigations at the request of Lt.-Gen. Guy Simonds, chief of the general staff. Mr. Drew said that without the report, members would be in an atmosphere of unreality in discussing the reserve army.

Supplementary Estimates

The government tabled supplementary estimates totalling $42,314,728, bringing the known spending program for the 1954-55 fiscal year to $4,534,065,000. This would be a peacetime high, compared with an estimated $4,389,979,000 in the fiscal year ended last March 31. The all-time high in spending was $5,322,000 in the war year of 1943-44.

Retail Price Issue

Spokesmen for Canadian bakers and small retail tobacco merchants have urged the government to set up a body to control "loss leader" sales. They maintained that bread and cigaret businesses are being hit by chain store price-cutting.

The baking industry's national council proposed that a board be set up, preferably under the combines investigation branch, with powers to bring opposing busness groups together to resolve loss leader issues.

The retail Tobacco Association of Quebec urged that a body be set up to regulate "fair and honest" cigaret prices, to give the corner tobacco store a chance to compete with the big chains.

Earlier the Canadian Manufacturers' Association proposed that Parliament remove the ban against retail price-setting by suppliers of branded goods, as a means of eliminating the "evil" of loss leader selling.

The CMA said loss leader selling, a "definite evil," would be difficult to define satisfactorily for legislative control.

The best way to fight this price-cutting would be to "restore the right of the manufacturer of branded goods to exercise some measure of control over the price at which his goods are to be resold."

The anti-combines body will hold hearings in Toronto, Montreal and several western centres at the conclusion of its Ottawa sittings.

EXPERT SAYS DIAMOND GIRL'S BEST FRIEND

Winnipeg (CP) — A blue-eyed blonde, who should know, says a diamond is a girl's best friend.

Miss Marjorie Newth, of London, the only woman managing director of a United Kingdom diamond firm, adds that a diamond never wears out and a woman can enjoy it forever.

Although she is on her first round-the-world trip, Miss Newth travels the heart of the diamond industry route — London to Antwerp to Amsterdam — about every six weeks.

The reason for lack of women in the industry may be attributed to the lack of ability on their part to judge good diamonds, she said.

To rise to the top in the industry, a woman must work in the factories, Mrs. Newth said. And there are not enough positions for women there, she concluded.

HOT POT HAZARDOUS, NO CURE FOR PAIN

A doctor in India recently reported that an East Indian who tried a novel home remedy for stomache ache wound up in hospital with second-degree burns.

It happened this way, reported Dr. John B. Oliver: the patient took a neighbor's advice and clapped a round, heated brass pot against his aching stomach to 'draw out the pain'. But once on, the pot would not come off. Both he and the neighbors tugged at it in vain. At last, he went to the hospital. Dr. Oliver and his colleagues "operated" by cutting the pot away with a pair of cutting shears. The patient's skin had been sucked into the pot as a result of the vacuum caused by the heat, and was badly burned. The patient spent 10 days in hospital being cured of the effects of his "home remedy".

"OPERATION ALUMINUM"

BRITISH COLUMBIA 1954

The vast Kitimat hydroelectric and aluminum smelter project will be turning out aluminum by mid-summer this year. Completion of Kenney Dam in October, 1952, was the first major milestone. In December, 1953, the ten-mile, 25-foot diameter water tunnel was "holed through" Mount DuBose in the world-record time of 21 months. Three 140,000 H.P. generators are now in position in the Kemano underground powerhouse, and power will soon pass along the 50-mile transmission line to Kitimat.

At Kitimat, in former wilderness, potlines for the first phase of production have been installed. Aluminum at the rate of 91,500 tons a year is scheduled to flow from Kitimat this year, thus increasing Alcan's ingot capacity to over one and a quarter billion pounds annually.

QUEBEC 1953

In Quebec, Alcan completed two new powerhouses and augmented its aluminum smelting facilities during 1953.

The new generating stations at Chute du Diable and Chute a la Savane on the Peribonka River — one of the principal tributaries of Lake St. John — have a combined generating capacity of 540,000 H.P. The total installed generating capacity of Alcan's power plants in Quebec has thereby been increased to 2,580,000 H.P.

The rated annual capacity of the added aluminum smelting facilities at Isle Maligne is 71,500 tons a year. By the end of 1953 ingot capacity in Alcan's four Quebec smelters — at Shawinigan Falls, Arvida, Isle Maligne and Beauharnois — totalled over one billion pounds a year, or about a quarter of world capacity.

Alcan embarked in 1951 on an expansion programme to meet the increased demand for aluminum. This programme, divided into two principal parts, is completed in Quebec and nearing conclusion in British Columbia.

In the fifty-four years since the first Canadian aluminum plant opened at Shawinigan Falls, Canada's aluminum industry has grown to be the second largest in the world; and Canada now exports more aluminum than any other country.

Still the need grows, both at home and abroad, for this light, strong, modern metal of many uses. And Aluminum Company of Canada is putting man-power, and money, and engineering brains, and imagination into the job of keeping up with that demand.

Aluminum is "packaged power". The electricity needed to produce one ton of aluminum would light the average home for nearly a generation. By making use of Canada's abundant, low-cost power, this Canadian enterprise has created employment and income for tens of thousands: for the men who build and operate the dams and powerhouses, the docks and smelters and power lines it needs; and for the more than one thousand independent Canadian companies who turn aluminum into countless forms important to industry and our own daily living.

Buffalo Displaced

Members of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police may soon wear nylon parkas in place of the shaggy, three-quarter length coats of buffalo hide currently in use.

The parkas weigh only one-third as much as the buffalo coats, have zippers instead of buttons and are said to be more comfortable and more practical.

Some of the nylon garments are currently being worn on a trial basis, to provide a full report of their effectiveness.

HOMO SAPIENS, FIRE-MAKER EXTRAORDINARY

Specially Contributed, by Norman Thorburn

Since the dawn of human history, man has been making things. In the beginning he had just a club or stick with which to do his work. But, somehow, some poor savage, seeing fire in the forest, took up a burning brand, brought it to his camp or cave, and made the first bonfire or campfire.

The man who did this was probably the greatest benefactor of the human race. Once man had learned to make fire, everything was within his reach.

You ask, was man ever so primitive as this? Yes, even in modern times men have been discovered who knew little more than how to carry a stick or spear and how to make a fire.

William Dampier was not one of the truly great English sea-captains. He did not possess an even temperament. Sometimes amicable, he, however, was subject to fits of ungovernable rage. His sailors were ever in a state of mutiny. Finally, on one voyage, like the infamous Captain Bligh of the Bounty, he was dispossessed of his ship by his men.

However, he had one redeeming characteristic; he was unexcelled as an observer of the natural phenomena, the flora and the fauna, of the places he visited. Like the ill-fated Captain Cook, he was of a scientific bent, and everything he saw was written down in his log.

Dampier gives us an excellent description of the first contact of white men with the Australian bushmen. As Dampier's ship came to that part of the Australian coast that still bears his name (Dampier's Land), he saw a group of naked savages on the shore. All they possessed were wooden spears, the points of which they had hardened by fire. So primitive were these aborigines of Australia, that their method of fishing was to dam a little stream with stones, chase the fish down the stream, and scoop them out of the water with their bare hands.

Dampier's men tried vainly to enlist their aid in hauling water for the ship, but they ran away with loud cries of, "Gurry, gurry". They had never worked hard before, and had no intention of working for the white man. . . But they possessed the art of making fire, by rubbing sticks together as Dampier thought.

Man can tell the age of bones, by the amount of fluorine they possess. When bones of man or beast lie exposed to the elements, they absorb a certain fixed amount of fluorine annually.

Anthropologists have discovered the osseus remains of men who died a hundred thousand years or more ago. Piltdown man, Homo Neanderthalensis, both possessed the art of making fire.

In a cave in China near Peiping were discovered bones of men who lived more than a hundred thousand years ago; and in this cave was a pile of ashes 23 feet deep. Man had kept a steady fire going here.

Of course, if we go back as far as Pithecanthropos Erectus, who lived a million years ago (discovered by Eugene Dubois, the Dutch professor who left the quiet walks of Leyden University, where he might have enjoyed a life of ease — to search for man's birthplace in the steaming jungles of Sumatra and Java) we have a close relative of modern man, who did not know how to make fire.

But we know very little of Pithecanthropos, so we can say that almost from his beginnings man has possessed the art of making fire.

Once he possessed the art of making fire, man began to learn how to cook food, to break stones with heat, primitive chemistry, and countless other things. . .

He learnt how to make strange fires, chemical fires, fires with electricity, fires in atomic furnaces, and finally, the thermo-nuclear holocaust.

Prophets of doom foretell the destruction of man by man-made fire. But man, as I have pointed out, is certainly no tyro in the art of making fire.

Now, in the pre-dawn of space-travel, man (I firmly believe) will not destroy himself in one mad impulse. There are yet many glorious chapters to write in the history of Homo Sapiens — God willing.

IMPORTANT STEP IN ANTI-POLIO BATTLE

From Paris it is announced that it is now possible to know within 48 hours if a person is susceptible to polio.

This important development was made public at a recent meeting of the Society of Microbiology by Doctors E. Barski and Pierre Lépine, both of the world-famous Pasteur Institute.

The technique developed by them consists essentially in discovering whether the individual posseses antibodies in his bloodstream which give him a natural immunity to polio.

Have You A Question ON UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE OR EMPLOYMENT?

In this column we publish questions about unemployment insurance and employment, together with answers received from the Unemployment Insurance Commission.

If you are uncertain about any point do not hesitate to send your question to your district Unemployment Insurance office. We will obtain an answer and publish it in this column.

Q. Why am I restricted to receiving benefits based on my last five years of contributions when I have made contributions ever since unemployment insurance started?

A. Unemployment insurance is designed to take care of periods of temporary unemployment and it was considered that maximum entitlement for approximately one year was equitable. Five years' contributions under the present formula provided this. If the maximum period were made longer increased contributions would be required.

Q. I lost my job some weeks ago and have since been looking for a job on my own. When I went to the employment office yesterday they told me I could not get benefits from the time I was laid off. Why is this?

A. Benefit is not paid for any unemployed days that occur before a claim is made unless the claimant can establish that circumstances beyond his control prevented him from filing a claim earlier. Advice to file a claim immediately you become unemployed is contained in your insurance book.

Plans for W. Institute Annual Prov'l Conference

Advance notices are out for the annual provincial convention of the Quebec Women's Institutes. This is being held, as usual, at Macdonald College, with the first business session Tuesday morning, June 8. The convention carries through until noon, Thursday, June 10.

The provincial president, Mrs. G. E. LeBaron, North Hatley, will preside at the formal opening Tuesday evening, her address featuring the theme of the convention, "Ideas plus Action". A welcome from Dr. Brittain, Vice-Principal and Dean of the Faculty of Agriculture, greetings from the Department of Agriculture, Quebec, by Mme P. C. LeBeau of the Home Economics and Handicrafts Division, and several musical numbers by the Harwood Singers, Dorion, and Prof. A. Banting, Macdonald College, will be other highlights of the evening.

A visit to the Morgan Arboretum has been arranged for the delegates Tuesday afternoon, through the courtesy of Dr. Brittain. As a rural women's organization, members are keenly interested in the care of the farmer's woodlot and forest conservation in general. All applications to date have indicated delegates plan to take full advantage of this opportunity to see the work being carried on there.

DIVORCE RATE

In the nation generally, 6,055 divorce decrees were granted last year, against the pre-war peak of 2,226 in 1938. The moral seems to be that high wages and lavish welfare programs do not necessarily strengthen family life.
