Brownsburg School Closed Tuesday In Wake of Hallowe'en Upheaval

Pranksters Flood Basement Floor

Hallowe'en vandalism was in evidence Tuesday morning at the Brownsburg Consolidated School, where four inches of water flooded the basement floor and school books and papers were scattered helter-skelter.

School Principal King Amos and Jack Golphin, chairman of the School Board, believed the school building had been entered during the night by means of a window. Little material damage resulted from the escapade, but the classrooms of the upper grades were in such a shambles that school classes were cancelled for the day.

Janitor Archie Robinson reports that the drains in the boys' basement lavatory were plugged and the water taps turned on. The only drain in the basement is located in the furnace room, a section of the floor an inch or so higher than the remainder. Water was four inches deep in the girls' playroom at 10.30 a.m. Mr. Robinson reports that, in his 19 years as janitor at the school, this is the first time that anything worse than a few minor tricks has been attempted.

The miscreants left a thorough upheaval in the principal's office, scattering books and papers, also tearing and disordering teachers' notebooks. Most of the vandalism, however was apparent in the upper grade classrooms. Grade VII classroom took the brunt of the book-scattering and the desk upturning.

The library and book-room were not entered, nor were the science room and laboratory, which were locked. The rooms most affected by this cyclonic assault were all located in the recently built section of the school. Desks were emptied and overturned, and the teachers' desks were loaded down with heavy chairs, etc.

The School Board chairman stated that a meeting of the commissioners took place in the building Monday evening until eleven o'clock, and at that time everything was in order.

Det. Ralph Allan and the local Police Chief, M. Parent, were investigating the trouble the following morning.

The scattered remains of Grade VII books and papers piled on the classroom floor following Hallowe'en mischief at the Brownsburg Consolidated School Monday evening. Scenes similar to this were in evidence throughout the school building, and the basement was flooded with four inches of water.

Auto Out of Control Overturns in Ditch

A 1949 car, owned and driven by Marcel Lacroix, of Stonefield, was wrecked following an accident on Route 29, two miles east of Grenville, on Sunday evening shortly after 10 o'clock.

According to Traffic Officer Howard Jones, who investigated, the car was headed west, when the steering, according to the driver's statement, became useless and he took the ditch. The car hit a tree and rolled over, the four wheels remaining in the air.

Lacroix, who was treated in the Smith Clinic, Hawkesbury, stated afterwards that the door flew open and he jumpjed as the car entered the ditch.

Industrial Pace Sets New Demands In Engineering

Rotary Speaker Gives Insight into Modern Training Problems

Mr. Donald Mordell, professor of Engineering at McGill University, was guest speaker at last week's meeting of the Rotary Club. He spoke of the problems which face engineering educators today.

The speaker stated that Canada was undergoing an industrial revolution at the present time which was comparable to that of the United States which began about 1870. Whereas there had been considerable exploitation in that country right up to the present time, it was fortunate that Canada was not "making the same mistakes". The people today are trained to make better use of our natural resources. Evidence of this may be seen in new methods of reforestation and in the fields of agriculture, mining and the development of the oil resources. Sir Wilfrid Laurier is quoted as saying that the 20th century belonged to Canada, and it is generally conceded that history will prove him right. The next 40 or 50 years will be in the hands of the engineers as this country continues to forge ahead at an ever-increasing pace.

This presents a major problem to those charged with the responsibility of educating the engineers in the classrooms of our universities today. It is said that an engineer was one who was trained to solve problems, and in the past, this training consisted of showing people how other people solved problems. This meant that engineers graduated from the colleges with the knowledge of how to solve problems which had already been confronted. However, in this so-called atomic age, it is evident that, 30 or 40 years from now, there will be problems to be solved which have never been heard of before, and the students in the classrooms today will be faced with these problems.

The records show that of 100 boys graduating in engineering, 60% will continue through life at routine jobs, 30% will progress further and possibly end up in executive positions, while the remaining 10% will be the creative people who will develop the new ideas and the new methods of solving problems.

The big weakness in the present-day training system throughout Canada is that, while there are many different kinds of engineers, there was only one course of training. While this might be suitable to a few, it is inadequate as a system of training for those who will be faced with the major problems of tomorrow. People are not all alike, and their different abilities require different attention. The bright, creative people should be provided with the opportunities to get ahead and not be held back to the slower pace of the other students, who in later life will never advance beyond a routine position. Science is rapidly changing the face of the world, and there is no doubt but that creative engineers of today will have a great influence on society of tomorrow.

The speaker was introduced by Bob Wyse and thanked by King Amos.

Corporation Will Borrow $30,000 To Bolster Town's Ailing Finances

Lachute Town's languishing finances were once again to the fore, at an adjourned meeting of Town Council last Wednesday evening. A full council was in attendance at the meeting, under chairmanship of Mayor Dr. F. W. FitzGerald. The sitting was held following a 35-minute caucus.

Secretary-Treasurer C. Daoust indicated that, as of the middle of October, accounts payable stood at $14,000 while the Corporation had but $1,400 in the bank. Outstanding taxes from last year were approximately $8,000, while taxes amounting to $25,000 are due for the present year. It was pointed out, however, that there is a usual carry-over of $20,000 in unpaid taxes at the commencement of a new year. It was decided to table the matter until the regular meeting (held last evening) — at which time it was decided to borrow $30,000 in order to pay all outstanding bills.

A donation of $300 was given to the Federated Charities, on a motion by Ald. Wilbrod Cousineau, seconded by Ald. Romain Desjardins.

It was decided that tenders for sand and salt for winter maintenance of the sidewalks be asked by telephone

A request from the Bell Telephone Company to move a pole, was left to the Roads Committee.

Business Tax Complaints

A sizeable list of complaints concerning the business tax was tabled for a special meeting, at which time, all particulars concerning the tax charges will be available.

A "general resolution" requested by Bell Telephone Company in order to speed up and facilitate their work, was passed on a motion by Ald H. S. Church, seconded by Ald. E. O. Pollock. The resolution authorizes the Roads Committee to okay all projects requested by the Company, without such projects having to come up at a Council meeting. If general study is necessary, the project is held up until a Council meeting.

A letter from the Parish of St. Jerusalem objecting to Lachute collecting the water tax direct from the ratepayers of the Parish, was tabled for study.

Parking Meter Committee

Mayor Dr. FitzGerald informed the Council that he had received considerable information and literature on parking meters, and appointed a committee of Aldermen MacRae, Pollock, Cousineau and Desjardins (the latter as chairman) to study the question.

An increase in salary of $5 a week was granted Adelard Malette, night watchman, on the understanding that continuous attendance be maintained in the Police Department and that he be paid no more overtime.

Dump Problem

A complaint was read concerning the filthy condition of the dump and property adjoining, and it was decided that the dump be cleaned up immediately. Ald. Romain Desjardins brought up the question of the new dump and general discussion followed, with no immediate decision, however.

Tenders for fire hose were received from Geo. Y. Deacon, Farmers' Supply and Arc Supply. The Police and Fire Committee, headed by Ald. Ross Muir, were authorized to purchose the hose immediately after perusing the tenders.

Tenders for anti-freeze for the town vehicles were received from Murdoch Bros. Garage, Pollock & Graves Motors and Deacon Motor Sales, ranging in price from $2.50 up to $3 a gallon. It was decided that the anti-freeze be purchased from Deacon Motor Sales at $3 a gallon.

Secretary Resigns

Mayor Dr. Walter FitzGerald read a letter of resignation from Secretary-Treasurer Claude Daoust; it was moved by Ald. Romain Desjardins, seconded by Ald. Real Morrissette, that the resignation be accepted with regret, and that tenders be advertised to fill this position.

Building permits were granted to Messrs. Gordon McOuat, for a store on Main Street, and Jas. McOuat for a house on Main Street East, both under supervision of the Roads Committee.

A Mr. Robinson, representing his father-in-law Felix Marinier, of Chatham Street, was present at the meeting and lodged a complaint that Fire Chief Descon answered a fire call to the Marinier residence with his car only, and did not bring the fire truck. Following considerable discussion, it was decided that the Police and Fire Committee chairman, Ross R. Muir, would investigate the incident. Damage of $150 was reported as a result of this fire, which started from overheated stove-pipes.

"Right to Strike" Abused, Says Premier Duplessis

Quebec (CP) — Strikes to settle labor disputes should be the exception, rather than the rule, Premier Duplessis said last week.

He described the right to strike as "sacred" but said it should be exercised only by exception because of its damaging effects on society. He added that "certain quarters" were abusing this right and distorting its meaning.

He said the modern trend is towards glittering social formulas and plans, but really fundamental social principles do not change.

Mr. Duplessis made his remarks at the closing banquet of the three-day annual convention of L'Association Professionnelle des Industrielles.

Although there were financial opportunities everywhere in Quebec, a big problem was the amount of leisure time people had to spare; despite this, he said, people still want a reduction in the work week.

Fine Qualities in Husband-Wife Duo For Community Concert Here Nov. 9th

Margaret Parsons and Clifford Poole, piano team.

There is some intimate history in the biographical notes concerning Margaret Parsons and Clifford Poole, the husband-and-wife piano team coming to Lachute November 9 in the first of this season's Community Concerts at Lachute High School. The concert commences at 8.30 p.m. sharp; all members have been notified of the season's recitals, by letter from the secretary.

Versatile is perhaps the word that best describes this energetic couple. As if their heavy concert and teaching schedules did not give them enough to do, they have branched into various other fields of musical activity.

But here is a glimpse of the personalities behind this successful Canadian concert team.

Margaret Parsons and Clifford Poole are the parents of a six-year-old son, Douglas. Several years ago they lost another son to the dread killer, cancer. As a memorial to their child and in the hope that their work might ensure other children the right to live and enjoy life, they have established a fund for research in children's diseases to be carried out at the War Memorial Children's Hospital in London, Ont. Each season they offer a series of concerts to raise money for the fund and to bring to the attention of the public, through music, the need for such research. The idea caught on immediately and has

Rouge R. Landmark Goes with Removal Of Bremner Bridge

(Our District Correspondent)

Avoca — Final demolition of the old "Bremner Bridge" over the Rouge River, removed a landmark from this countryside last Monday. The steel structure was removed in pieces by means of derricks, a number of district road workers being called in to assist in the operation as the steelwork was lifted from its piers.

The Bremner Bridge was a private utility built by the late Wm. Johnston, who, as keeper and toll-collector, was for long years almost as much of a landmark as the bridge itself. (The late Mr. Johnston was, incidentally, an ardent advocate of water conservation in the Rouge watershed; he made representations to Quebec Legislature and published plans of his pet project for that area.)

The bridge was taken over by the Quebec Department of Public Works a number of years ago, and the toll was removed on traffic crossing the river at this point.

The Bremner Bridge has now been replaced by a new steel and concrete structure, not yet passable to traffic but open to pedestrians, which should be completed within the next few weeks. The people of these parts are proud of the addition, both for its appearance and its usefulness; the new bridge greatly enhances the beauty of the "rugged river" at this point.

James Young To Face Charge Of Manslaughter

James Young, 35, of Ville St. Laurent, was charged with manslaughter when he appeared before a St. Jerome Justice of the Peace early this week. Young, who was found criminally responsible by a coroner's jury, is being held in the St. Jerome jail, but is expected to be released on bail tomorrow.

Young has been charged in connection with the death of Alden MacLeod, 34, of Harrington, which occurred in Pointe-au-Chene on October 16 last.

The trial date has not been set.

B'burg Youth In Fatal Crash With Doctor's Car

Marcel Demers, 19-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Réal Demers, Brownsburg, was instantly killed early Wednesday morning when the car which he was driving swerved out of control on a curve two miles east of Hawkesbury on Route 17. The car struck a culvert and climbed a telephone pole before coming to a halt upside down.

The 1955-model sedan, owned by Dr. Jacques Castagner, of Brownsburg, was demolished. The auto was reported missing early Tuesday evening, but the Ontario Provincial Police had not received the report, and on arriving at the accident at 2.15 a.m., they believed the victim to be the physician and owner of the car, as his medical satchel was found in the vicinity of the wreck.

Papers on the victim proved otherwise, however, and two hours following the accident, Brownsburg Police Chief M. Parent was informed of the accident and fatality. Demers, who was alone at the time of the crash, was found in the ditch in front of the smashed automobile.

Investigation was made by Ontario Traffic Officer J. L. Cordell. No inquest into the death will be held.

12-Year-Old Boy Shot by Companion In Rifle Mishap

Bullet Through Both Legs, Lad in Hospital

Jules Dumas, 12-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Ferdinand Dumas, of Meikle Street, was accidentally shot in both legs by a companion, of the same age, last Saturday.

According to the local officials, the youth was taken to Dr. Roger Lavigne, who reported the shooting to Police Chief Laurent Ducharme. Youths present at the time of the accident report that Bernard Gagné, 12-year-old son of Mrs. Jean Durand, of Filion Street, was loading a single-shot .22 calibre rifle when it discharged. The gun, aimed towards the ground, was but four feet from the victim, and the bullet discharged passing through both his legs. Young Dumas was taken to hospital in St. Jerome after receiving medical treatment.

Four Seriously Hurt In Road Mishap At Marelan

Four persons were treated in Hawkesbury hospitals for injuries received Sunday morning in an accident on Route 8, near the Canadian Refractories plant at Marelan. The car, a 1955 model hard-top, was damaged to the extent of $3,000.

According to investigating officers, Albert Legault and Gerard Loyer, the car, owned by Mrs. Claire Liboiron, 47, and driven by Gerard Lauzon, 49, both of Ottawa, went into a skid while passing another car and crashed into a tree. It was raining at the time of the accident.

Mrs. Liboiron was treated for a fracture of the skull and the right arm and was transferred to the Montreal Neurological Institute, while Mr. Lauzon was treated for a broken shoulder. Two other passengers in the car, Wilfrid Racine, 58, and Miss Florence Racine, 22, both of Gatineau Point, were treated for various bone fractures, Miss Racine having her pelvis broken in four places.

Driver Faces Charge

Maurice Belisle, 26, of Brownsburg, was arrested and charged with driving while his ability was impaired, Saturday evening by the Lachute Town police. The case was transferred to Det. Ralph Allan, and the accused was released on $103 bail to appear before Judge E. Archambeault in St. Jerome court tomorrow.

Cache of Stolen Arms, Ammunition Discovered by Police on Vacant Lot

Sporting Goods Taken From Local Stores

A cache of firearms, ammunition, hunting equipment and cigarettes valued at over $500 was recovered near the old C.N.R. right-of-way Saturday afternoon, following a two-hour search by Police Chief Laurent Ducharme. The articles recovered had been stolen from stores owned by Russell Rodgers and Jean-Jacques Dupré, Lachute.

Two youths were questioned following recovery of the stolen goods, which were buried in bush-land between the Barron property and the North River. The youths had erected a rough shack in the vacant terrain, to cover their cache.

All the articles known to have been stolen were recovered with the exception of some cash and the ammunition which had been fired from the guns.

The robberies took place last Wednesday night. Russell Rodgers' establishment had also been entered two weeks previously.

The case has been transferred to Det. Ralph Allan, who is presently investigating.

Cache of firearms, ammunition and hunting equipment allegedly stolen by a gang of juveniles from local stores, and hidden in a makeshift shelter in bush between the Barron property and the North River. The stolen items were recovered by police after a 12-year-old youth was accidentally shot through both legs.

Former Lach. Man In News Drama, Brought for Burial

The tragic story of a former Lachute man, Godfrey Poirier, 69, member of an old family hereabouts — who succumbed to a heart attack in the Toronto Don Valley area, and remained undiscovered until his pet dog revealed his whereabouts two days later — is told in a recent issue of the Toronto Star.

Godfrey Poirier had been living in Toronto for a number of years. He was employed as a night watchman at the Simpson Co. Ltd. The body was brought here for burial last week. Born in Lachute, he is survived by his family in Toronto; his wife, the former Amanda Legault of these parts; also two sisters and two brothers residing here — Ovila and Francis Poirier, Mrs. Philias Masson and Mrs. Hector Chartrand.

Following is the story of his death, as reported in The Toronto Star of October 24:

The night janitor left his apartment on Thursday about 10 a.m. When he didn't return within a few hours, his wife and family notified police and all downtown officers were alerted to look for the short man with the little brown dog on an electric-wire leash.

Then, almost at dusk Saturday Harry Becks of Merton St., who went for an autumn stroll in the Don Valley south of the Bloor St. bridge, heard a dog barking.

The noise came from a seldom-used path, west of the Don river, hidden from passers-by by several thick bushes.

Mr. Becks approched the barking dog and saw Butch, her hind quarters bleeding from rubbing against the leash, sitting on the still body of her master.

Police arrived; they looked at the body, then called a coroner. All the time the officers and Mr. Becks waited — and it was more than an hour — Butch just sat and looked sadly at her master.

Then, the coroner's examination completed, she was taken to the police station. There she refused to eat or pay any attention to any of the policemen who offered her some of their lunch.

Finally, after an officer had brought some bones from a butcher shop, she broke down and ate.

Today, while Mr. Poirier's family is in Lachute, Que., for his funeral, Butch is in a kennel at the Humane Society's Wellesley St., pound. She is finally eating, and wags her tail . . . But she keeps looking around for a friend she only knew a week.

Social Service To Town Hall

Citizens of Lachute, St. Jerusalem and Ayersville are advised that, effective November 9, the Social Service office will be situated on the second floor of Lachute Town Hall. The bureau has previously been operating in the basement of Ste. Anastasie Church.

Pending the engagement of a permanent officer, the Rev. Canon Paul Manseau will be available at this office on Wednesday afternoon of each week, as previously.

How YOU Can Help

When electric service is interrupted be SURE to turn off the heavy appliances such as ranges, water heaters, other heating devices and motors.

Otherwise, when service can be restored, an exceptionally heavy load is put on the system which sometimes causes the circuit breakers to open again.

Leave at least one light on so you will know when service is restored. As soon as the light comes on you can turn your appliances on again without further delay. It only requires a few seconds of light load to enable the power houses to get back to normal.

By reducing the load to a minimum you can help to restore service promptly.

Help us and also help yourself by making SURE that all heavy appliances are turned off when service is interrupted.

Farm Topics

Surface Drainage

Surface drainage by itself is not a remedy for all poorly drained land, but according to D. J. Cooper work must be done on the farm. in Ottawa, Canada Department of Agriculture, it will at least improve conditions and in some cases be adequate.

After the crop has been removed is the time when most drainage work must b done on the farm. By that time the farmer should have plans made concerning what drainage work he proposes to carry out. The amount and type of drainage work will, of course, vary from farm to farm, and will be governed by the time that is available and the cash outlay contemplated.

In its simplest form surface drainage may consist of plow scores located in such a way as to drain out low spots. Dead furrows are often used in surface drainage but if they are to perform efficiently they must be sloped. An extra cut or two with a plow through high spots in a dead furrow may be necessary.

Headlands are frequently a source of trouble in blocking off dead furrows. If this is the case suitable outlets should be provided. Another factor in good drainage management involves filling in low spots in a field. This is an operation which some farmers attempt to do over a period of years as time permits when the field is in fallow.

Surface drainage work has been used at the Central Experimental Farm in Ottawa with reasonable success. The program consists of shallow bottom surface ditches spaced at intervals of 75 to 150 feet. The land between the ditches is smoothed and levelled to take care of the low spots and surface water is diverted to collection ditches by minor grading. In some cases this method of drainage has permitted spring cultivation from one to two weeks earlier than on undrained land.

Drainage methods of this nature have special application in areas where the value of land does not warrant the higher cost of the drainage. Conditions may also arise where outlets are not deep enough for tile drainage and soil texture may be too impermeable to allow tile drainage to work efficiently.

Fire on the Farm

One of the farmer's greatest fears will be discussed on Farm Radio Forum next Monday night at 8.30 on the Trans-Canada radio net work. The topic is "Fire on the Farm", and the members of the panel will be Wes Downs, a farmer from Hilton, Ontario; M. S. Hurst of Toronto, assistant deputy fire marshal for Ontario; Ross Switzer of Regina, fire marshal for Saskatchewan; and chairman Jack McPherson. They will talk about effective control of farm fires from two angles: what the farmer himself can do to prevent or control fires, and what steps the community can take.

In the first six months of this year Canada admitted 58,417 immigrants compared to 85,765 admitted in the first half of 1954.

DAIRY PRIZE

Bank Loans on Prairie Grain

Ottawa, Oct. 28 (CP) — Prairie farmers unable to market huge quantities of grain still on their farms, are to be offered help in the form of government guarantees on bank loans. Farm held grain would be used as security.

The government announced its intentions, but still to be arranged with the banks are details including interest rates and maximum size and duration of loans.

The announcement came eight days after a prairie delegation — headed by the agriculture ministers of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Albert — told Prime Minister St. Laurent that western sales and tax collections were falling, and warned that the prairies' economic decline could spread to the east.

Prairie producers sell their grain through the Canadian wheat board which makes its initial payment only when farmers make a delivery. But the board has imposed strict marketing quotas and thus curbed deliveries.

Similar to 1951

Trade Minister Howe said loan arrangements would be "somewhat similar" to those made in 1951 when the government guaranteed bank loans with unthreshed grain as security.

In 1951 bad harvest weather forced farmers to leave the grain in the fields. This time the loans would be on threshed grains since virtually all the prairie crop has been harvested.

The 1951 interest rate was 5½ per cent, and maximum individual loans $1,000.

At July prairie farmers held about 200,000,000 bushels of grain on their farms, about one-half of it wheat.

Says Hogs Provide Steady Farm Income

Edmonton (CP) — Hogs appear to be the most profitable farm livestock over a long period, says Alf Petersen of the Alberta Agriculture Department.

Mr. Petersen, who has been conducting a mixed farm study for the last four years, said that of 50 mixed farms studied, the three with top income over the last three years kept hogs as a major livestock enterprise.

"These farms averaged well over $5,000 per year for their own labor management and risk as compared to only $1,200 for the total group of 50 farms and $1,800 for the 19 farms carrying hogs," he said.

The three top income farms each produced more than 175 a year, or nearly double the number produced by other hog-raising farms.

Wear A Poppy For Remembrance

THE CANADIAN Legion Poppy Campaign is rooted in the cities, towns and villages of the nation where more than 2,000 Legion branches conduct individual campaigns. The organization of the campaign is such that well over half of the total funds raised, remains in those communities for local veteran welfare work, and since all the work is done voluntarily, all the profits are reserved for this work.

Local assistance takes many forms. It may be aid to a disabled veteran unable to provide his family with the necessities of life, payment of medical bills for a veteran in financial straits when D.V.A. hospitalization is not available. Whatever the cause, as long as it is a just one, all veterans may look forward to a Canadian Legion Branch for assistance.

The Legion's Dominion Command Service Bureau in Ottawa acts as a contact between the veteran and the Federal Government. It is staffed by experts with long experience in veterans' welfare and with a long record of achievement in veterans' legislative measures.

While direct assistance to the needy veteran or his beneficiary is the primary function of the Service Bureau, it also exerts an effective influence upon the Department of Veterans Affairs in helping to ensure that all veterans receive the various forms of assistance to which they are entitled under law.

In a very real sense, this is a service of the Canadian public, for it is supported in part by the contributions made during the National Poppy Campaign.

The poppies and wreaths that will be offered to you again this year are the product of disabled veterans and those too old for the highly competitive labour market. Some poppies are assembled in the homes of veterans too greatly disabled to seek normal employment and definitely provide a useful occupation. The poppy has become a powerful symbol of the blood that was shed on foreign ground in two world conflicts.

Between the wars, the world forgot the price in blood that had already been paid.

Probing the Ionosphere

OVER THE NEXT few years, another set of initials will become familiar to newspaper readers.

IGY, standing for International Geophysical Year, is a great world-wide study of natural physical forces on the earth in which thousands of scientists from 36 nations will take part.

Actually, it's not a "year". The period starts from July, 1957, running into 1958, and that 12 months was chosen because that's when the sun will be particularly active, with greater effects on the ionosphere.

How the sun behaves is, of course, a matter of vital importance to everyone. Dr. D. C. Martin, assistant secretary of the Royal Society in London, among those who have been busy planning for the big scientific effort, points out that the sun not only governs the weather and affects ocean currents, but also determines conditions in the upper atmosphere.

And the study of the ionosphere is one of the major projects of IGY. Long-distance radio communication is one big field that is vitally affected by ionospheric conditions. The ionosphere acts like a mirror and reflects radio waves back to the earth's surface. If the sun becomes unusually active — perhaps shooting out an excessive amount of charged particles from a solar flare — then the ionosphere is so disturbed that it loses its mirror-like qualities.

Preparations being made all over the world include big expeditions to wrest more geophysical secrets from the Antarctic. Here in Canada, one of the sites selected for rockets to carry instruments high into the ionosphere is at Fort Churchill, Man.

This particular project at the joint Canadian-U.S. military base 610 air miles north of Winnipeg is being carried out by the United States navy and air force, but Canadian scientists will be quartered with American experts at Fort Churchill.

It will take some time afterwards for the world-wide findings to be studied, and no one knows beforehand just what to expect. But one result is sure — the new knowledge will help improve weather forecasting and long-distance radio communication, and pave the way for further advances in stratospheric flight.

Industrial Pollution

ON LAKE ONTARIO some 14 miles west of Kingston, there's a long strip of waterfront that has been used by thousands of people for swimming and picnicking. For years adults and children have enjoyed its coolness during hot summer days.

Some two years ago word got around that a huge multi-million-dollar plant was to be built on the property adjoining the waterfront. Apprehension arose among many bathers that their strip of outdoor paradise would be spoiled by pollution — as other beaches have been by other industrial plants.

Last September the Millhaven plant of Canadian Industries (1954) Limited, which manufactures the new textile fibre "Terylene", was officially opened by the Right Hon. C. D. Howe, federal Minister of Trade and Commerce. In the news stories which emanated from Millhaven following the opening, one item was significant: the plant was equipped with an efficient disposal unit which rendered effluent harmless before it was discharged into the lake.

This was good news for the people who use Lake Ontario in that part of the province as a playground. And it serves as a good example for others faced with pollution problems.

Although the number of offenders is decreasing, many bodies, including municipalities, discharge their sewage into public waters without proper treatment. Some waters are polluted so badly, farmers will not allow their cattle to drink from streams which run through their pastures. Coarse fish, tough as they are, can't be found in them. And there is a great health hazard to people using them.

Something can generally be done about pollution. But it requires serious and continuing attention. The problem can be licked if taken under serious consideration by all Canadians.

CANADA has been extremely well-served by her dollar-a-year men, of whom the last is now returning to private business.

This is an occasion for gratitude to the men involved. But, says The Financial Post, it should not be allowed to obscure the fact that dollar-a-yearism has its infirmities, particularly in normal times.

If the Government wants a job done, it should pay — and pay well enough to get it properly done.

Canada has grown up enough now that we don't need to impose on individuals and firms in this way, and we don't need to kid ourselves that we get work done for nothing. It's a good thing to abandon this practice now — says The Post.

OF MANY THINGS

Make A Comeback

I am afraid I don't listen to the radio very much, but I tuned in this morning for a very special reason. I heard a man with a beautiful voice do the morning wake-up show, that starts at 6 o'clock — a difficult hour in which to be bright and cheerful, but this man was. I know the reason.

Six months ago, the man was down and out, a human derelict who had lost the respect of family, friends, society — and worst of all, his self-respect.

He had been an announcer in his early days, one of the best. He had moved into the Big Time and earned fabulous sums of money. Then, for some reason known only to himself, he disintegrated. He says he came to believe his success was due to his own cleverness, and forgot what talent he had was not his personal property but a gift from God, given to him only in trust.

Whatever the reason, he sank lower and lower. All that he had ever achieved was taken from him. Then, through a friend, came a remarkable re-birth. The friend merely handed him a slip of paper on which he had written, "You aren't much, but you are someone; you can't do much, but you can do something. Start trying — and leave results to God."

This morning, with many misgivings I am sure, a Western radio station gave him a chance to start his new life over again. His comeback during the past six months has been incredible. From washing floors in a restaurant, to street sweeping, to Department Store shipping clerk — to his old, original job again.

His remarkable progress from the bottom up should be a lesson to us all. Starting from where we stand at this moment — no matter how high that may be — we could all take tremendous forward strides by trying harder, as he is trying, and by leaving the results to God, as he is doing with such sublime confidence.

You don't have to be a derelict to make a comeback. We could all benefit by recapturing some of the faith and enthusiasm of our youth.

"HAVE YOU SEEN A DOOR ?"

The other evening, a lady acquaintance graciously offered me a lift home after work. Unfortunately, however, it took me much longer to make the trip with her than it would have done had I entrusted myself to the whims of the MTC. When we went to pick up the car on a little side-street near the office, we discovered that it was hemmed in by a monstrous Cadillac fore and a late-model Buick aft. Between the Caddy and us there was no space whatever and there was a scant two feet between us and the Buick.

The area where the car was parked teemed with residences and industrial offices and it was useless to ask who had done this dastardly deed. It was also useless to ask where the owners might be. There was, clearly, only one thing to do and we did it. We shivered and shook in the cold night air for a solid hour and a half until the owners of the two vehicles came along and let us out. They were, it turned out, members of a certain Lodge which was meeting nearby, and both swore up and down that they hadn't even seen Winnifred's car when they parked theirs.

Well, the upshot was that we did get released and the Brethren of the Order were subjected to a hot and heavy tongue-lashing by Winny. And on the way home, Winny and I discussed fraternal orders, lodges et cetera and I regaled her with my favorite tale of encounters with members of secret societies.

In the palmy days of my college life, I toyed with the idea of studying for the ministry. As a result the college authorities found me a room in the Divinity residence and liberally seeded my course with theological studies. This was a change from the usual, since Divinity Hall had more non-divines in it than any other residence on the campus.

Among the crew inhabiting Divinity Hall was one Osmond Hopworth, a studious type most of the time but a bit of a rake on the side. One evening, when Hopworth was known to be in the city engaging in a spot of secular revelry, the inmates of the Hall removed the door of his room and hid it in the basement back of the furnace. Then, they returned to their studies and waited for Hoppy to come home.

The boys were asleep when Hoppy finally blew in; only old John, the night watchman at the door, was on deck to greet him. Hoppy dutifully signed the late book and weaved his way upstairs to bed. Arriving at his room, he fumbled around in the dark trying to find the door-lock. And then, after several minutes searching, it suddenly dawned on him that his room no longer possessed a door.

Hoppy put his keys back in his pocket and returned downstairs to talk with John.

"Excuse me, John," Hoppy said, a trifle thickly, "have you seen a door?"

John leapt to his feet, clapped Hoppy roundly on the back, shook his hand vigorously and mysteriously, and then beamed.

"Glad to know you, Brother!"

"I'm afraid I don't get it," Hoppy answered. "All I know is that some goon has taken the door from my room and I want it back. Have you seen a door?"

"Don't believe me, do you?" answered John, fumbling in his pocket. "Well, here's the proof!"

So saying, he withdrew membership cards from every conceivable lodge in the country. He was a Mason, an Oddfellow, an Orangeman, a Buff, Moose, Elk, Forrester — in short, a professional joiner.

So Hoppy gave it up as a bad job trying to sound John out about the disappearance of the door. And he doesn't know to this day which lodge ritual he stumbled on unawares.

I've told this story to various lodge members on a number of occasions. On some it doesn't register but on others it brings smiles of joy. I know now which lodge it concerns, even if my good friend Hoppy doesn't.

What, tell you? Certainly not! Do you want me to get chucked out of my lodge?

75 Years Ago

November 5, 1880 —

Business in Lachute was never more brisk than at present.

The branch railway to the Lachute Paper Mills is about completed and several carloads of machinery for the mill have arrived.

Mr. E. Mathieu caught a fine muskalonge in the North River by trolling line Saturday. It weighed 10½ pounds.

We are informed that the work along the Long John Rapids, near St. Andrews, has been successfully prosecuted and that a channel five feet deep and fifty feet wide at low water has been made.

Mr. Wilson is Lachute's best benefactor; he informs us that he has paid out over $30,000 for material and in wages on behalf of his paper mill.

Five carloads of wheat for Lachute mills is expected today. This makes 13 carloads of wheat which Messrs. Fish and Ireland have brought into Lachute within the last four months, being over 5,000 bushels.

25 Years Ago

November 7, 1930 —

The Provincial Government has now launched its Health Clinic in Lachute with offices in the Court House.

Mr. Lemuel Barron appeared before the Town Council with a complaint of abuses practised on his cow, which was taken from the pasture and converted from an Ayrshire to a Holstein by the free use of black motor oil. Mr. Barron claimed damages of $50 and although the Council felt that they had taken all necessary precautions for Hallowe'en, they decided that the mayor and police committee should take steps in making the lads responsible pay the damages.

Sees Brownsburg Council Stalling on Sewerage

(LETTER TO THE EDITOR)

Brownsburg, Que.

The Editor,
The Watchman,

Dear Sir:

The powers that be in Brownsburg must be somewhat anxious for the freeze-up to come; the old routine is being upset just a bit, we who have been around for a long time and who know both sides of the story feel that someone among them will come up with the solution.

The routine, in making excuses for failure to provide sewage disposal for a few houses which are very centrally located, is to blame the uncooperative landowner during the summer and well on into the autumn and then switch to the freeze-up which makes digging too difficult.

This year an error was made by someone, who led the local correspondent to believe that an agreement had been reached with the uncooperative landowner, and now the freeze-up is holding off, and the unreasonable property owners who want village facilities to go with village rates of taxation may ask a few embarrassing questions—hold hard, boys, the freeze-up can't be far away.

Atom Power Stations, Present and Future

Electricity will pour next year from the atomic power station pictured above. Britain's first of 18 planned over the next ten years, it is nearing completion at Calder Hall, Cumberland.

On the left is a drawing of another to rise on the rugged coast of Scotland at Dounreay. The ball-shaped center will be of steel to house the reactor, a "breeder" because it will produce more "fuel" than it consumes.

The reactors of both stations will produce steam to drive turbines to produce the electricity.

Relatives have received word that Mr. Rowland Matthew, of Valois, Que., is seriously ill and is a patient in the Lachine General Hospital. Best wishes are extended for his speedy recovery.

Scottish Girls Enjoyed Canada

Montreal (CP) — Two Scottish girls returned recently to their homeland wiser in the ways of life in Canada.

Sheena Wilson, 24, and Jean Anderson, 26, said they have acquired the Canadian's lack of respect for distances during their two years in this country.

"At home, we lived 40 miles from each other and used to think it was far," Jean said. "Now we'll think nothing of dropping into each other's home just for coffee."

The one bit of home life they missed was sitting in front of an open fireplace.

"On a cold damp day in our apartment we just didn't know what to do with ourselves since there was no open fire," Sheena said.

Both girls, graduates of the Western infirmary in Glasgow, worked as physiotherapists. When they arrived in Canada Sheena worked with the Canadian Arthritis Society and Jean at the Montreal Children's Hospital.

Later, Jean went to Vancouver for a year but rejoined her companion for the summer at the Province of Quebec camp for crippled children.

Both girls, who said they earned twice as much in Canada as they could in Scotland, spent much of their money travelling. They both travelled through the Maritimes and Sheena went to Florida for a vacation.

They believe the Scottish method of training physiotherapy is better than the Canadian system.

"In Scotland," Jean said, "we studied and worked in hospitals at the same time for three years and three months. Here there is too much theory and not enough practice."

Lesson in B'burg Hallowe'en Havoc

(Our District Correspondent)

On whose shoulders falls the blame of Monday's shocking vandalism? On the irresponsible shoulders of the young hooligans who wreaked such havoc? Maybe we, the wise adults, should examine our consciences. Maybe we actually put the bugs in the kids' empty heads — in fact, it could be that we issued a challenge!

Surely we cannot expect children to choose between right and wrong when we, the supposedly responsible grown-ups, glorify tales of equal vandalism of days gone by. When we as kids were brainless enough to think fun was destroying property and making people's lives miserable, perhaps we could be excused on grounds of immaturity. It's hard to realize that, after reaching that abstract stage we flatteringly call "maturity", we bask in the glory of our past conquests!

Each Hallowe'en we repeat with more ardour, and a few more preposterous exaggerations, the vandalistic things we did "when we were kids". We tell our youngsters with glowing pride about knocking over outhouses, hiding washings, stealing garbage cans and doormats, and generally making people realize that a bully's fun is one-sided. We almost say to the kids, "Today's children have no backbone". . . . Is it any wonder, after we cry "Chicken!" that the children give us cause to cry "Wolf!"

Let's hope that these young gangsters who outdid any of the fathers' handiwork, will eventually realize how shocking and disgusting an act they committed, and that they will be too ashamed even to mention it to their children.

Let's hope, too, that the other children will be discerning enough to realize that Hallowe'en can be fun only if the funsters know what fun is, and where fun stops.

"My Responsibility ?"

The Communists see to it that some 15 million adults who learn to read each year are handed Communist doctrine. When we realize that the Bible is our greatest weapon of peace, are we not shirking our responsibility if we do not see to it that each receives a copy of God's Word?

Remember — a Bible that in 1939 cost $1 to produce, now costs $3.50, so when the collector calls, please give generously.

The annual meeting of the Lachute Branch of the British and Foreign Bible Society, will be held at 8 p.m. on Tuesday, November 15, in the Lachute Baptist Church. The Rev. DeCourcy Rayner will give an illustrated lecture. . . Won't you encourage this great work by being present?

ISLAND VEHICLES

Vows Pledged in Double Ceremony At St. Simeon's

Hewitt - Clifton
Hewitt - Webber

A double-ring double wedding ceremony was solemnized in St. Simeon's Anglican Church, Lachute, on Saturday, October 29, between Mary Rose, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Clifton, Fort McLeod, Alberta, and Brian Malcolm, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Hewitt, Lachute, also between Joan Elizabeth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Webber, Digby, N.S., and Petty Officer Bruce Ian Hewitt, R.C.N., younger son of Mr. and Mrs. Hewitt.

The Rev. C. R. Lang officiated, and the ladies of St. Simeon's Choir, under direction of Mrs. J. H. Pollock, organist, sang the hymns, "Blest Be the Tie that Binds", "O Perfect Love", "The Voice that Breathed o'er Eden" and the 23rd psalm set to "Crimmond".

Mr. Bories Arran and Mr. Richd. Dorney acted as ushers.

The brides, who were given away respectively by Mr. Walker K. McArthur, of Lachute, and Mr. Alec Roy, of Montreal, wore identical strapless gowns in Princess style, of lace over satin, this being divided at knee-height by ruched net with pearl trimming; net was also used to form a full floor-length skirt over satin. The matching jackets of lace had long sleeves ending in a V over the hands. The brides' veils were held by coronets of pearl with rhinestone trimming. Each bride wore pearls, the gift of her groom — Mary carrying deep pink roses in a cascade arrangement, and Joan carrying deep red roses in an arm bouquet.

The brides were attended by three junior bridesmaids, Rosalind Dorney, Janice and Judith Scott, carrying posies of yellow and white baby mums with ribbon streamers in maize and blue, and wearing dresses of maize rayon taffeta, styled with close-fitting bodice with Peter Pan collars and full-length skirts, caught up at intervals on the hemline by blue ribbon bows. The blue was repeated around the waist, ending in a long bow at the back; around the wrists, forming rosettes on maize nylon gloves, also the centre of maize rosettes on their maize Alice band headdresses. The two younger maids also acted as cushion-bearers for the brides.

The groom's mother wore a full skirted street-length gown in teal blue with matching hat and alligator accessories, with shoulder corsage of pink carnations.

Mrs. Brian Hewitt wore an olive green suit, trimmed with brown, and brown accessories for travelling, while Mrs. Bruce Hewitt wore a suit in mushroom brown with matching hat, alligator accessories and muskrat fur jacket.

The honeymoon is being spent on a motor trip in the Niagara Peninsula.

The church and church hall, where the reception was held, were decorated with white, yellow, and bronze mums.

The out-of-town guests included: Mrs. Hewitt, grandmother of the grooms, Mrs. F. Taylor, Mrs. Edgar Davies and Master Frank Davies, Mrs. P. E. Bocking, Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Hewitt, Mr. and Mrs. A. Bocking, Mr. and Mrs. W. Williams, Mr. David Hewitt, Miss Joan Farrance, Mrs. Davies (senior) and Mrs. Denning, all of Montreal.

Social and Personal

Mr. and Mrs. Keith Gordon and family visited their former home in Lakefield last Sunday.

Mrs. W. H. Heustin, of Millbrook, Ont., is visiting her mother, Mrs. Wilbur Walker, this week.

Bill Steeves, of Bishop's University, Lennoxville, spent the week-end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Steeves.

Mrs. Dave Schwartz is in Buffalo for a few weeks, visiting relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Pearson, and daughters Donna Mary and Heather, of Shawinigan Falls, spent the week-end visiting relatives in Lachute.

Ogdensburg Couple Feted On 45th anniversary

A number of friends and relatives met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. Wert at a surprise supper, given by their family in honor of their 45th wedding anniversary. A three-tiered wedding cake decorated the table. The Rev. D. C. Merrett proposed a toast, to which Mr. Wert responded. After supper the couple were presented with a set of dishes.

There were over 40 present at this pleasant function. Those attending from a distance were Mr. and Mrs. Carl Wert and Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Wert, of Normetal, Que., and Mr. and Mrs. S. Wert, of Avonmore, Ont.

Mrs. Ken Bradford and son, Stewart, of Beaconsfield, are visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Stewart.

Mrs. Burns Kingsbury returned home this week following a lengthy stay in the Royal Victoria Hospital.

On Tuesday evening the Rev. Horace G. Baugh, of Morin Heights, was guest speaker at the Saint James Literary Society in Montreal, his topic being "Prayers for a Rainy Day".

The Rev. D. C. Merrett, Mr. Nelson Tomalty, Miss Lois Silverson and Mrs. David Brown were in Toronto last week attending the second annual convention of the Fellowship of Evangelical Baptist Churches in Canada.

Legion Whist

The second military whist drive of the season, sponsored by the Ladies' Auxiliary, was held in the Legion Hall last Wednesday evening with players participating at 22 tables. The following were the prize winners:

1st — Mrs. G. Brown (Capt.), Mrs. F. Gauley, Mrs. R. Owens, Mrs. R. Nixon.

2nd — Mrs. D. Bourgouing (Capt.), Mrs. G. Pilon, Mrs. J. Thorpe, Mrs. G. Tabrett.

Door prizes were won by Mrs. G. Pilon and Mrs. J. Berry.

Refreshments were served at the conclusion.

Emcee for the occasion was Mr. T. Iddon.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Robinson spent the week-end in Ottawa.

Mr. and Mrs. Stuart J. McFaul left last evening to spend the winter season at Clearwater Beach, Florida.

Congratulations

Good wishes are extended to Mrs. James Johnston, of the Cottingham Apartments, who will reach her 82nd birthday on Friday of this week, November 4.

AMONG THE CHURCHES

Special Activities at Brownsburg United

During the month of October, the Young People's Group held two meetings. The first, a business meeting, presided over by the Rev. Bruce and Mrs. Bruce; and the second, in the form of a Hallowe'en party, on October 24, with a program, consisting of games, etc., planned by Rev. G. and Mrs. Bruce and Mrs. F. S. Kettyle. There was a good attendance, and prizes were given for the best costumes, and for games.

A Hallowe'en party was also put on for the Mission Band, on Oct. 31, under leadership of Mrs. Bruce and Mrs. R. B. Johnston.

Sunday, October 30, being W.M.S. Sunday, Mrs. McNicoll, 1st Vice-President of the Montreal Presbyterial, was the guest speaker, and took for her topic, "The General Aspect of W.M.S." Mrs. H. Graham, the president, presided, and Mrs. T. Izzard read the prayer.

Flowers placed on the altar, were in memory of the late Mrs. Wheeler, (a W.M.S. life member), Mrs. White and Mrs. Graham.

The Junior W.A., of which Mrs. W. Campbell is president, are planning for their Christmas Bazaar, to be held on November 12; and the Senior W.A. plan to have a tea and sale of home cooking, novelties, aprons, etc., on December 10, with Mrs. R. B. Johnston, president, in charge.

The Sunday School, with Mr. C. Wheeler as superintendent, assisted by Mr. S. Rose, is gradually coming back to its usual good attendance, after having been closed for the summer holidays.

25th Anniversary Event For Morin-Shawbridge Minister and Wife

(Our District Correspondent)

Morin Heights — On October 27 the Rev. and Mrs. Robert Blair celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary.

A surprise party was arranged by the congregations of Morin Heights United Church and Shawbridge United Church to celebrate the occasion. The party was held in the church hall at Morin Heights.

The hall was decorated for the occasion with white bells and streamers. The table was centred with a three-tier wedding cake and red roses. The presentation of a chest of silver cutlery was made by Mayor C. D. Campbell, who, with a few well chosen words of congratulations and best wishes, presented the gift on behalf of the two congregations. The Rev. Blair then thanked the many friends for the gift. He said he "not only thanked them for the gift, but for the spirit in which it was given".

A musical was then enjoyed. The music was provided by Mrs. Hamilton, pianist, Mrs. Geo. Manthorp, violinist, both of Montreal, and Mr. Mead of Shawbridge, soloist, and some local talent.

The evening concluded with the serving of refreshments. Mrs. Wm. Doherty, of Morin Heights, and Mrs. Campbell, of Shawbridge, presided at the tea table and poured coffee and tea.

Ministerial Association

The Argenteuil Protestant Ministerial Association will meet in the United Church at Ste. Adele-en-Haut on November 7 at 10 a.m. Guest speaker will be the Rev. P. R. Stote, of Grenville. All members of the Protestant clergy are invited to attend.

Bible Briefs

By A.A.M.

The Bible is rich in stories, and the purpose of this series is to encourage readers to look up for themselves the Bible versions of these incidents. If there are children in the family it is suggested that the story, and the Bible verses on which it is based, be read aloud.

Who was the boy, clad in a linen coat, who served in the Temple under the direction of the High Priest Eli? Each year when his mother travelled with her husband to offer their sacrifice, she brought with her a little robe, for the son whom she had lent to the Lord. He was kept busy helping in the temple. There were many tasks which he could do for Eli, whose eyesight had begun to fail.

One evening the old man and the boy both went to bed, Eli on his couch in his own place, and the boy within the temple near the ark of God. The lamp of God had not yet gone out when the lad thought he heard someone calling his name twice over. "Here I am!" he answered and ran to Eli. He asked him, "What do you want?"

But Eli replied, "I did not call, lie down again." The boy obeyed. But two more times he was sure that he was being called by name. When he came to Eli the third time, insisting, "Here I am, for you called me," the old man perceived that the Lord was calling the boy.

Then the High Priest instructed his young charge to go and lie down. If he heard his name called again, he was to answer, "Speak, Lord, for Thy servant heareth."

The boy did as he was commanded. He must have felt very sad when the Lord called still a fourth time and later told him that He was going to punish Eli for not restraining his two grown sons. They were young men who had acted very wickedly and brought disgrace to their father.

The lad was afraid to tell the High Priest this when he urged him, "What was it God told you? Do not hide it from me." So Eli learned God's prophesy of the doom which was to fall on his house. He answered "It is the Lord; let Him do what seems good to Him."

Read this boy's name and how he grew to be a great prophet in 1 Samuel, 2 Chapter, verses 18 to 21, and in 1 Samuel, Chapter 3.

A Door to What ?

WHAT DO THE SCRIPTURES SAY ABOUT SURVIVAL AFTER DEATH?

Is the belief that departed spirits hold intercourse with human mortals by means of physical phenomena based on a reality? Can mediums communicate with the dead? Does spiritualism hold the key to unlock death's door and peer into the realm of a "hereafter"? Is spiritualism's use of the Bible authentic, or is it just a lure, a disguise? Do the Scriptures uphold the teaching of human immortality, or do they strike at the very foundation underlying the spiritualist movement? Why are world leaders turning to spiritism? What do the Scriptures say about "survival after death"? Do you know? You can! Jean Beliveau Keeps His Promise

During his recent visit to Lachute, Jean Beliveau, the Montreal Canadiens hockey star, promised his young admirers that his "next goal was for them" and that he would send them the puck with which he scored the tally.

"Le Gros Bill" kept his promise, and Gaetan Cousineau, Grand Knight of the local K. of C. Council, informs us he has received the puck — the specific goal being scored by Beliveau October 27 against Chicago Black Hawks.

The puck will be on exhibit in l'Ecole Supérieure, along with photographs taken when Beliveau visited here.

'Has-Beens' Plan District League Hockey at Arena

The Sports Scene at Brownsburg

(Our District Correspondent)

Brownsburg — A meeting was held here Tuesday to launch a district "has-beens" league. The intentions are to form a four-team league composed of Lachute and Brownsburg hockey enthusiasts who are not good enough to play for any team. A total of about 60 names has been received, and an offer is to be made to the rink for a lease for one night for 18 weeks at a special guaranteed rate.

On the larger scale, 'Burgers are disappointed that Lachute will not participate in senior hockey this year. Practices have started in Brownsburg and three of Lachute's top imports of last year are working out; Norbonne, Giroux and Bouvrette, together with Roger Leclair, look as if they will be sure starters.

The bowling alleys are well patronized this year, with 5-pins the big attraction. Twenty-two five-pin teams and four ten-pin crews are bowling every hour of the schedule, Monday through Friday.

LONELY OLD MEN MAY BE SCURVY SICK

Unless a person gets enough Vitamin C by eating fruits and vegetables, he is in danger of scurvy, a deficiency disease that can be fatal. Because most people do get enough of the vitamin each day, the disease is considered rare in most countries. However, a Scottish scientist recently found that the condition is more common among old people than previously believed. He also discovered that most of the cases were among old men who lived alone and did their own cooking. Very few were among elderly women or among men whose wives cooked for them. Ninety-five per cent of the cases were cured when the doctor gave them extra Vitamin C daily. In commenting on his findings, the doctor said: "It is possible that a good deal of vague ill health attributed to old age may actually be due to mild scurvy that is not suspected".

Group Committee Of Boy Scouts Reports Activities

The monthly Group Committee meeting of the Lachute Boy Scouts Association was held on Wednesday, October 23, in the office of Dr. W. M Hooper.

Alex Vessie, chairman, welcomed Dr. J. C. MacKimmie to the Group Committee. Dr. MacKimmie is a possessor of the Gilwell Badge and his knowledge of Scouting will be an asset to the Committee.

A report from Scout-master Fred Tait indicated that the recent paper drive was a real success. Twenty-one Lachute Scouts under Scout-master Tait and 7 Hawkesbury Scouts, under Scout-master Frank Knights collected in excess of seven tons of paper. Trucks for the collection were generously donated free-of-charge by the following local firms: Geo. Y. Deacon, Pollock & Graves and Welden Motors. A special word of thanks goes out to Boyd's Lachute Express, for providing a semi-trailer to transport the paper to Montreal and for the generous assistance of their personnel during the day. The Lachute Boy Scout Troop are most grateful to the citizens of the town for helping them with their "good turn" by providing paper and particularly to those who made cash donations.

Cubmaster W. Brown reported a successful apple tag day.

Gordon Dobbie reported that the cost of sound proofing material and labor to reduce echo in the school playroom used by the Scouts would be approximately $2,000. After some discussion this item was tabled until the next meeting.

It was announced that the Cubs and Scouts will attend the Armistice ceremonies to be held in the Memorial Park on November 11.

Other members attending the meeting included Dr. W. Hooper, Stewart Jones, Don Heggie, Chas. Duncan and Raymond Underhill, secretary-treasurer.

Football Fever Hits the Maritimes

By KEN ROMAIN,
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Football fever has hit the Maritimes and as a result the Canadian Rugby Union soon may be represented by club affiliation from coast to coast.

The CRU has no representation in the Maritimes at present but the Nova Scotia and New Brunswick leagues intend to apply soon.

Jess Fitton, secretary of the CRU's junior committee, left recently for Halifax to talk with Maritime fooball officials and to assess football calibre on the east coast.

"If Nova Scotia and New Brunswick decide to affiliate with the CRU we will then have junior and intermediate groups in every province," said Fitton.

Football in the last 10 years has overtaken rugger, baseball and hockey in fan appeal in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.

Last year the Nova Scotia senior league drew 35,000 customers, far different from the old times when players often outnumbered fans.

"It was a case of promoting the game and educating and customers," said Jack Funston, of Halifax, president of the Nova Scotia Canadian football league.

Strictly Amateurs

And amateurism still reigns with a healthy flourish.

"The only things the players get are uniforms and oranges," says Funston. The players are drawn from the universities and the armed forces.

Five senior teams and three junior clubs operate in the Nova Scotia league. New Brunswick has a four-team senior circuit.

Funston said it cost about $150 to operate a team for each game and $100 to outfit a player at the start of the season. The oranges are passed around after the game.

Making up the Nova Scotia league are two navy clubs, Stadacona and Shearwater, Greenwood RCAF, and two University teams, Dalhousie and St. Francis Xavier. Junior clubs are located at Shearwater, HMCS Cape Breton, and St. Mary's University.

University of New Brunswick, St. Thomas University, Moncton Tri-Service and Moncton Trojans comprise the New Brunswick circuit.

Two former Big Four players are coaching in the N.S. senior league, both formerly with Ottawa Rough Riders. Don Loney handles Shearwater Flyers and Ted McLarty, a flying officer in the air force, coaches the Greenwood squad.

A former Toronto Argonaut player, Al Haig of Toronto, is coaching at Mount Allison University at Sackville, N.B. He is studying theology at the university.

Most of the finances for league operation come from gate receipts. There are three stadia in the Nova Scotia league, at Dalhousie, Halifax, and one on reclaimed swampland at Greenwood. All the RCAF base personnel pitched in to build the field.

Funston, who was in Toronto recently to talk to CRU officials, says he expects the two leagues to be admitted to the CRU sometime next year.

The senior teams would enter the intermediate play. The juniors would stay in their own bracket.

Down the Alley

Fina Garage leaders in the Mixed Commercial League took 5 out of a possible 7 points from the second place Flukers last week, to consolidate first position in the loop. . . . Led by Marcel Chartrand, who rolled a single of 238, and Yvon Dupuis with identical triples of 497, Fina had an easy time in knocking off their closest rivals. . . Chartrand's 238 single is high for the year in the Mixed League. . . As a result of a 5 to 2 victory over Dominion Prime Wood, Kingsbeer are now tied for second spot with Flukers in the standings.

Holding down fourth position are John Deere who only managed to pick up 2 points from Lachute Lumber. . . Marie Jeannine Joly of Hotel Hebert with a single of 156 and a triple of 384 topped the women in last week's play, while Marcel Chartrand led the men in the single department with a score of 238 and tied with Yvon Dupuis for high triple honors with a 497. . .

Jim Duncan, although dropping 2 points in the individual scoring race still has a commanding lead over his closest rival, Paul Sauve, who was idle last week. . . It is hoped that Marcel Brunette, major domo of the Bolodrome, who was recently laid low with illness will be back on his feet soon again. . . Don't forget to buy a poppy this week-end. . . Lachute High School Sports and Activities

By Eileen Dwyer

The first dance of the year was held last Friday night. It was well attended, and profits amounted to almost $50. The chaperons were Mr. J. Martin and Mr. A. Petersen. Costumes were judged before the dancing started, and according to the judges, the job was not an easy one. There were, as usual, clowns and hobos. Unusual costumes were an Indian, cannibals, a Scotch gentleman, someone dressed in Daisy Mae's rags, and a couple from the Middle Ages. The cannibals, June and Brooke Copeland, and the couple from the Middle Ages, Robert Robinson and Yvon D'Aoust tied for first place.

Later on in the evening, an elimination dance was held. Joan Dwyer and Vincent Trayers won this dance. A spot dance was also held, and this was won by Eileen Dwyer and Jackie Gordon.

November — a month of occasional sun and frequent gray days — a month looked forward to all year by the small game hunter. Now most of the leaves are down, with here and there the russet of an occasional oak to catch the slanting sunlight and contrast with the bare branches of the surrounding trees. By this time too, there has been rain and snow; you can move through the woods quitely and you can see and be seen.

It Shakes Me

Driving into town the other morning with a friend of mine, whom I hadn't seen for quite a while, we quite naturally, got to talking of hunting and fishing. What shook me was his telling of what had happened to one of his closest friends a couple of weeks back, and this makes one stop to wonder just how well some of the hunters who wander through the bush these week-ends, can see, even the leaves down. This friend of his and his brother were hunting deer north of Montreal, and they had been successful in knocking over a fair-sized doe, which are legal game in that zone of Quebec. Why they didn't rig their kill on a poll and carry it out between them I don't know; in any event the chap who had shot the white-tail decided he could get it out on his back, which he preceded to do, all this time wearing a red cap and shirt of same hue. What happened? — Well some trigger-happy nimrod pulled the trigger of his trusty 30-30 on the deer being toted out, and got this poor fellow through the neck. By some miracle the shot didn't prove fatal and the victim is now recovering in the hospital.

How Long Will It Be?

—Before the Quebec authorities get wise to the fact that there are some areas in the province, which because of the population density and the number of hunters taking to the bush each week-end, where the carrying of rifles should be prohibited. And when I say rifles I include 22's. Of course, the biggest hue and cry against this proposal will come from the deer hunters. Personally, here in eastern Canada, with most shots at deer well within the hundred yard range, it is my feeling that a shot gun with a single barrel sighting plane and loaded with rifled slugs or a heavy buckshot is about as useful a weapon as you'd want for bagging venison.

The Best So Far

There are of course books of all kinds and almost without number that deal with hunting and fishing, some in a general way and others that specialize on some particular aspect of these sports. Every now and then one comes across a particular aspect of these sports. Every now and then and then one comes across a particualr book that seems to leave everything else you have read on the subject miles behind. And so it is for my money with John G. MacKenty's "Duck Hunting", published for the first time in Canada in 1953 by the Copp Clark Company of Toronto.

The Contents

Copiously illustrated with excellent photographs by the author, the subject material has been treated in an extremely lively manner and although packed full of facts, makes for really entertaining reading. In this book you will find the different types of ducks accurately and concisely described. You can read in detail, how to build and camouflage blinds, what boat to use and how to load it, what gun to buy and how to use it, the clothes and equipment and food that should accompany the duck hunter, the types and uses of decoys, the proper way to prepare and cook wild duck, and how the hunter must show his sportsmanship. Also included is a helpful chapter on things not to do, for the hunters who might fall into dangerous habits while concentrating on getting their quarry. Without a doubt this is a book that I have enjoyed more than any other that I have read on this subject. An excellent addition to the sportsman's library.

Racial Segregation On Playing Fields

By Gerry Lougheed,
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Racial segregation can extend right on to the playing fields. No natives compete in any major sporting events in South Africa. That country's major sports, rugby football and cricket, are entirely "white".

Africans play the games among themselves but are never seen in top competition. South Africa's teams to the Olympic Games, the British Empire Games and other international events are composed entirely of whites.

There has been criticism of this from other countries but a South African sports leader defended his country's stand at a meeting of the Transvaal National Sporting Club recently.

Ludwig Japhet, honorary life president of the club, argued that non-whites have natural physiological advantages over white men and should not compete against them.

He contended white and non-white world champions would be good for sport and good for business.

"Following the successes of Jesse Owens, the American Negro, and marathon runners from Japan, it was noted that the sinews of the back of a non-white man's heel were built differently from that of a white man," he said.

"That is why they can run faster and have greater endurance."

Japhet is entitled to his own opinions, of course, but if champions are going to be determined by their color or creed, then the book on sport might as well be closed.

A hillbilly rode into town carrying a jug of liquor in one hand and a shotgun in the other. He stopped a pesserby on the street saying, "Here, friend, take a drink outa my jug."

The man protested that he never touched a drop.

The hillbilly levelled his gun at the stranger and commanded, "Drink."

The stranger drank, then he shuddered, shivered and coughed. "Gad, that's awful stuff."

"Ain't it?" said the hillbilly. "Now you hold the gun on me while I take a gulp."

First Great War Epic by Welsh Writer In Radio Presentation

CBC Wednesday Night Remembrance Theme

"In Parenthesis" is an experiment in writing, prompted by what David Jones saw and felt as the infantryman in the London Welsh Battalion, Royal Welsh Fusiliers, on the Western Front during the winter 1915-16. It has been adapted for broadcasting and produced by Douglas Cleverdon and it presents Richard Burton in the leading role, that of Private John Ball. It tells the story of a doomed battalion, or rather of the men in it, from the time of their parading for overseas in December, 1915, until their assault on the German position near Neuve Chapelle in July, 1916.

David Jones served in France with the Royal Welsh Fusiliers, consisting mainly of Londoners, with an admixture of Welshmen. He lived, according to Gwyn Jones in Radio Times, as at no other time, with a consciousness of the past; and behind his exemplars ("at once men of a reddened world and a white imagination") loomed two long lines of Welsh and English. Published in 1937, In Parenthesis (Gwyn Jones writes) "is a book in which the past and the present are one, and where not to understand yesterday is to be ignorant of today . . . It is a book full of compassion, for friend and foe and beast . . . a singularly noble book, written by a master of prose and verse. It is in content and manner one of the indisputably great books of our time."

Born in 1895, David Jones is among the most distinguished of living Welsh writers. He is also a well-known painter.

'Breakdown', Radio Story Of A Mental Illness

Once again the CBC has planned an ambitious series of weekly half-hours for radio, as entertaining as they can be, with the skilled support of leading writers, players and production staff, but with the underlying idea of helping to draw back the curtain separating so many people from a fully happy life.

As in past seasons of "mental-health" broadcasts, some of the scripts commissioned for the new series starting November 7 on CBC Dominion deal with extreme, abnormal cases of mental derangement. But for most of them the term "mental health", with its positive, hopeful connotation, is apt. A great variety of troublesome but by no means critical problems of personal adpustment will be covered.

The net result, it is hoped, will be to enable "average" listeners with "typical" problems to tidy up their lives and clear away some of the obstacles to happier living.

If the pill is sometimes bitter, the sugar-coating will always be rich and tasty. This is assured by the production arrangements made by Marjorie McEnaney of the department of talks and public affairs. The producer will again be Esse Ljungh and he will be using top players to project scripts from the pens of some of our leading writers — Charles E. Israel, Len Peterson, Rita Greer Allen, Lister Sinclair, George Salverson and Sidney Katz.

Sinclair will be contributing to the show for the first time; he will look at sickness and health from the point of view of organization and balance, in a series of four titled Back to Normal, starting February 20. Peterson has prepared a six-part serial story of a family which came to Canada from Scotland 60 years ago; what interests this writer is the effect of changing scenes and mores on attitudes and personalities from generation to generation. Rita Greer Allen and George Salverson have each prepared four scripts directed to the parents of small children. Katz has gathered together the latest information on scientific research for four more programs under the title What's in Your Mind?

Reviews of Current Canadian Novels

Three new novels by young Canadian writers will be reviewed on Critically Speaking November 6 by Nathan Cohen. The books are "Dust Over the City" by Andre Langevin, "Judith Hearne" by Brian Moore and "Son of a Smaller Herd" by Mordecai Richler. Chester Duncan of Winnipeg, the radio reviewer on the same broadcast, will be heard in this capacity once a month throughout the winter. On November 13 Roy Daniels of Vancouver will review two important critical works by the Canadian scholars — "The Letters of Sara Hutchinson," edited by Kathleen Cobourn, and "Coleridge and Sara Hutchinson" by George Whalley. On the 20th, Sally Creighton will talk about the number of new books for young readers.

FAMILY ENJOYS LIFE ON ISLAND

Fernwood, B.C. (CP) — Ten years ago Jean and David Conover realized their dream to own a British Columbia island, and today they are highly pleased with the results.

They own Wallace Island, reached from Fernwood just north of the international border. On it they have built up a nice little tourist business and have paid off the mortgage from rental of five cottages they put up with their own hands. They also have a store.

A kitchen garden, hens and sheep keep down living expenses for themselves and young son.

Cute Songstress

Joyce Hahn has been in show-business since she was four, touring with her family in the West on a rough grind of honky-tonks, and in New York with Major Bowes. For some years now she's been heard on "A Date with Fred Hill" on CBC Dominion, and is now featured on television's "Cross Canada Hit Parade". This variety series has Austin Willis as emcee, Bert Niosi's orchestra, vocalist Wally Koster, and a well-known guest. The series is weekly on the CBC-TV network.

Tips on Touring

Is your car ready for Winter?

It's not pleasant to hunt for help through snow, sleet or wind. Auto service experts offer this "stitch-in-time" advice on car care that can take the worries out of Winter driving.

(1) To be sure your car will start easily in the coldest weather, spark plugs should be cleaned and adjusted; battery and all ignition points checked.

(2) A complete lubrication job and motor oil change are needed for easy starting, as well as protection for engine, gears, and other parts of your car.

(3) Have your radiator and cooling system flushed and anti-freeze added. Most people prefer a permanent anti-freeze, but if you use the alcohol type be sure to remind your service station attendant to check it frequently.

(4) Skid chains and tires have to be in top condition. Inspect chains for breaks and tires for tread as they are safety guards against Winter driving hazards.

(5) And for your driving comfort be sure to have the operation of your windshield wiper, heater and defroster tested. While these rarely go out of order, it costs nothing to make sure. We'll soon be gripped by old man winter's frosty fingers.

more arias per hour

Dark, dreary days depress canaries, too. They just don't feel like singing. But now—good news for canary coloraturas! If they'll arrange to have the bottom of their cages lined with aluminum, they'll sing through the darkest day. The light reflected from the sparkling metal foil gives their souls that springtime lift.

People find endless household uses for aluminum foil. So does industry—for everything from fire-fighting clothing to photo-flash bulbs, to wrapping for candy and food. Canada used 8 million pounds of foil last year.

snowballed. Their concert series has been so successful that each year they are able to add a sizeable sum to the growing fund. And their example has inspired others to make contributions of their money or their services. Last spring Sir Ernest MacMillan, the eminent conductor of the Toronto Symphony, went down to London to conduct the final concert of the series, which featured Parsons and Poole as soloists with Mr. Poole's chamber orchestra. Although the fund was only established in 1952, last March the new research laboratory was opened at the Children's Hospital. "It was one of the biggest thrills of our lives," says Miss Parsons. "You can imagine how happy it makes us to know that through our humble endeavors a new world can be opened up to so many children in the future."

As a change of pace from their strenuous winter activities, when summer comes Parsons and Poole head for their cottage on an island in the wilds of northern Ontario. There they relish all the joys of primitive living — no running water, no electricity. Last summer they added an extension onto their cottage and built a boat. The prize example of their ingenuity is a home-made washing machine powered by a windmill.

Ways With Pork

Consumer Section,
Canada Dept. of Agriculture
Marketing Service

For top favorites on cold days, look to the family's favorite pork cuts. Pork is full-flavored and tender, but like other fresh foods it is wise to check pork for quality when buying it. It is sensible too, to know the pork cuts by name and how to cook them to obtain the maximum number of servings.

The home economists of the Consumer Section advise the shopper to look for pork that has a firm, fine-grained lean that is greyish pink in color. High quality pork has a uniform covering of firm, snowy white fat, with tiny flecks of fat well distributed throughout the lean. The bones which are porous should be pinkish red in color.

Pork, like other fresh meat should be stored with care. A roast brought in a cellophane wrapper, should have the wrapper removed as soon as it is brought home. The roast should be wiped well with a damp cloth, rewrapped again loosely in waxed paper and stored in the coldest part of the refrigerator. It is not wise to keep a roast of fresh pork for more than two or three days after cooking it. If it is to be kept for a longer time, it is best to freeze it.

The secret of cooking pork well, regardless of the cut, lies in cooking it slowly for a long enough time so that the meat will be done right to the centre. During this long, slow cooking the rich pork flavor and juciness is fully developed, with a minimum of shrinkage and the outside becomes an attractive golden brown color.

Fresh pork should always be cooked to the well-done stage with no tinge of pink remaining even in the centre. There is no question of rare, medium and well done meat when it comes to pork. Since it must be thoroughly cooked, it is well to use a meat thermometer and roast the pork in a moderately slow 325° F. oven to an internal temperature of 185°F. It will take at least 40 to 45 minutes a pound for a pork roast to reach this temperature.

Like fruits and vegetables, different kinds of meat are better buys at certain times of the year than they are at others. Right now pork is one of our best buys. It can be bought either fresh or cured and there is such a choice of cuts that it is an easy matter for the shopper to find just the one she wants.

For family meals a popular buy is a cut from the pork shoulder, either a "fresh picnic" or a fresh "Boston Butt". These shoulder roasts have a fair amount of bone but it can be removed to make the carving easier and to make a pocket for stuffing.

Other very good roasts are those from the leg or the fresh ham as it is sometimes called. This large cut is divided into two parts, the shank and the butt. One or two slices are sometimes cut off the shank end and cooked as fresh ham slesks.

The loin may be divided in three sections the ham end, the centre and the rib end, and sold as roasts. However, they are more often cut into rib and loin chops.

For those who are not familiar with the many cuts of pork, the Department of Agriculture has an excellent pork chart which shows them all. To obtain a copy, write to the Information Service, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Because pork is such a rich meat, many people enjoy something tart with it. Apples seem to team naturally with pork. Applesauce or spiced pikled crabapples goes well with roast pork and apple stuffing is delicious in pork tenderloin. Apple rings complement pork chops perfectly and are extremely good with broiled sausages.

Cookies Versatile Fare

Ever hear of cookies that would just as soon gad-about as stay-at-home? "Travelers" are like that. Pack them off to work, send them to school or let them go on a motor trip, they love it! On the other hand, they're right at home for afternoon refreshments, too.

You'll especially like the way this recipe lends itself to so many good variations. The ingredients make a full five dozen cookies, so try an assortment of toppings such as chopped nuts, chocolate bits, raisins or cinnamon and sugar. That way, you'll have enough variety to keep everybody happy and enough cookies to keep the cookie jar filled for a few days.

Travelers

1¼ Cups shortening, 1 cup sugar, 3 eggs, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 3¼ cups sifted, enriched flour, few grains salt.

Cream shortening and sugar. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well after each addition. Add vanilla. Mix and sift flour and salt; add gradually. Drop by teaspoonful on greased baking sheet. Top with semi-sweet chocolate pieces, raisins, coconut, chopped nutmeats or cinnamon and sugar, or make one dozen of each kind. Bake in hot oven, 400° F., ten minutes. Makes five dozen cookies.

Assorted Fancy Biscuits from Single Recipe

Now that Fall is here, the wise housewife keeps plenty of fancy biscuits on hand. Those shown here find a welcome place in the lunchbox of both the schoolboy and his dad. When served with freshly made coffee, they make a dainty household snack.

SWALLOWING SUNSHINE

Vitamin D is necessary in order that the body may use calcium and phosphorus to form good strong bones and teeth. Called the "sunshine vitamin" because it does the job the sunshine would do if we could obtain it in sufficient and regular amounts, it is essential to the growth of all children from birth to the age of sixteen. The substitute for the natural sun-produced vitamin is the chemically produced vitamin D, which is available in tablet, liquid or capsule forms, which, unlike the old-style oil from fish liver, is tasteless and acceptable to youngsters.

Q.W.I. Executive Holds Meeting in Montreal

The executive of the Quebec Women's Institutes is meeting today (November 3) in Montreal. The two current projects, Civil Defence and Training for Retarded Children, are two items on the agenda and matters connected with next year's Triennial Conference of the Associated Country Women of the World. Mrs. G. D. Harvey, of Stanbridge East 1st vice-president, will be the Q.W.I. delegate in the Canadian group attending this conference, which meets in Ceylon in December, 1956.

The International president, Mrs. Alice Berry, of Queensland, Australia, will be visiting Canada next summer. Plans are being made, nationally, to arrange a schedule which will take her to the various provincial conventions. It is expected she will be in Quebec for the Q.W.I. convention at Macdonald College the end of June.

Plans for the usual semi-annual board meeting will also be made at this executive meeting, the last one before that date. This will be the third week in January; final details to be given later. Mrs. G. E. Cooke, of Arundel, Q.W.I. treasurer, is in charge of arrangements.

Paint brush colors have been chosen for Arnel new-fabric blouses appearing in the fashion stores this fall. This sleek shirt, by Frankroy of Winnipeg, is an excellent example of how the new fabric tailors. The fly-away color and cuffs give a sporty air that won't be lost through machine washings. And there's no glazing if a touch of the iron is required.

WOW THE CROWD WITH A WONDERFUL MEAL

By Anne Marshall

Next time the crowd comes to your place for a big feast, Madam, take it in your stride. With so many nearly-ready foods at your grocers today, the job of cooking for 2 or 20 is becoming easier and more fun.

Pick up a frozen chicken or turkey at your food market or from your own home freezer. Completely cleaned and packaged, frozen poultry is a real time saver.

Commercially frozen chickens and turkeys are packaged at the peak of perfection and are government inspected. And of course, if you've frozen your own prize gobbler, you're sure of the best. Either way you can't go wrong.

Vegetables for your meal can come from the freezer, too, but a few fresh vegetables add to that honest-to-goodness good eating. Like the tiny white onions so plentiful this time of year. Dress them up with a smacking-good mushroom sauce like this . . .

HOLIDAY CREAMED ONIONS

2 pounds small white onions
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
1 can (1¼ cups) condensed cream of mushroom soup
¼ cup cream or top milk
½ cup chopped walnuts
¼ cup shredded Canadian cheese

Cook onions in lightly salted boiling water until almost done; drain. Place in a 1½-quart casserole; dot with butter. Meanwhile, stir soup until smooth; blend in cream and walnuts; pour over onions. Sprinkle cheese on top. Bake in a moderate oven (350°F.) about 30 minutes or until cheese is melted and slightly browned. 6 servings.

Round out the meal with buttered sweet potatoes; hot biscuits with homemade jam, a molded fruit salad (made the day before), and a heaping tray of relishes. Choice of dessert . . . pumpkin pie and coconut cake. Make these from prepared mixes if you're too busy to start from scratch.

Then sit back and bask in compliments that come your way. Sure enough, you're a champion cook!

SALESLADY SOLVES PROBLEM

A Canadian doctor saw a pretty blouse in a small store window in Paris. He went in to get one for his wife. He spoke no French and the saleslady spoke no English. Problem was — What size? As he was leaving the store without making a purchase, the saleslady took his arm and halted him at the door. As one young lady then another passed, she pointed interrogatively to each. The doctor stood beside her, sizing up the girls who passed. Many time he shook his head. Finally a girl passed who was his wife's size. The problem was solved and a sale made. — Marketing

A sweet flavor is often associated with pork — particularly cooked pork. For this added sweetness either brown sugar, apple jelly, honey or maple syrup may be used. A baked ham slice glazed with apple jelly or maple syrup is a taste-tempting treat. Sometimes the tart and the sweet are combined as in the sweet and sour sauce in which spareribs are cooked.

Parents, Children and Safety on Thoroughfares

Greater driving care than ever before will be needed this fall now that children are back at school, says Carol Lane, travel authority and women's travel director of Shell Oil Company of Canada.

With an enrolment of over 2,500,000 children going to elementary and secondary schools in Canada, a great many of them will be riding bicycles to and from school.

These children will be sharing the road with nearly four million motor vehicles.

"It is shocking to realize," says Miss Lane, "that the biggest single killer of children in the country is motor vehicle accidents." With more children going back to school this year than ever before, and more bicycles and cars on the road, the greatest safety precautions must be taken while driving. This is especially true in School zones, near play grounds and in residential areas.

Bicycle riders are supposed to observe the same rules as those that prevail for motorists. "But," says Miss Lane, "remember that children are children. It is up to the adult driver to assume the responsibility. Regard every child on a bicycle as a danger signal to slow down, drive with even more care."

Parents must do their part, too, by teaching children the elements of safe bicycle riding, and making sure that the bicycles are kept in perfect working condition.

Watchman Proves Helpful To Housewife – Recipes, Hints, Even the Jokes!

(LETTER TO THE EDITOR)

Dear Sir:

I often felt like writing to you to tell you that I had found your Cooking Recipes so good — but just didn't get around to doing it. In fact, some I use very often, although I copied them years ago from The Watchman.

But right now I appreciate very much a recipe for destroying litte flies on house-plants, published in Dean Halliday's "Garden-Graph". These little flies have bothered me by eating holes in the leaves. I tried many ways to get rid of them, but nothing seemed to work, till I read a few weeks ago to add one teaspoonful of Blackleaf 40, a nicotine sulphate solution, to one gallon of water, and spray the leaves. I did so and I have had good results. An "Aeromist" glass-cleaner sprayer is ideal for the job; this can be bought for only a few cents. There are many people who have the same trouble with their plants, so I want to pass this news along.

I also enjoy the odd jokes you include in your paper. We often get a good laugh; This is what we need nowadays.

A joke from recent personal experience may interest your readers. . . . While staying in a Montreal hotel last week, a knock came to my door, and it was the window cleaner. He asked if it would be convenient to let him do the windows in this room. I said, "Yes." I watched him clean the inside, then he stepped outside on the ledge with a safety belt. . . .

"Are you not afraid sometimes to do that job?" I enquired afterwards.

"No", he said, "the only thing I am afraid of is my mother-in-law."

Conquered Illness To Enter Nursing

Ottawa (CP) — Isabelle Riley, a pretty 22-year-old nurse from Annapolies Royal, N.S., had to win a battle against tuberculosis to get her diploma.

She has graduate from the Ottawa Civic Hospital nursing school, two years behind her classmates.

Isabelle came to Ottawa five years ago to begin training. After 2½ years a routine medical checkup revealed she had tuberculosis. Then began 15 months in hospital and a sanatorium — tough months for Isabelle, who liked swimming and skating and being outdoors.

"It wasn't so bad the first couple of days," she said. "It was fun staying in bed and having meals brought to me — but after that I couldn't stand it. I didn't feel sick. I didn't look sick. I was a nurse and felt I should be up and helping others."

After a few months in hospital, she was transferred to a sanitorium, where she met other tuberculosis victims, "many of them much worse of than I was."

Her main problem was resigning herself to the long months of convalescence.

"But when I saw some patients who had been there as long as eight years, my few months seemed like nothing. I began to think how lucky I was that I was not really so sick."

She went back to training last fall and graduated this year. After a holiday with her family in Annapolis Royal she is returning to Ottawa for her registered nurses' examinations. After that she will do private nursing in Ottawa, and perhaps go on post-graduate work.

A Weekly Feature of Helpful Hints on Child Training

"See the Snowflakes!"

(Copyright) — By NANCY CLEAVER —

"Mummy, come quick! See the snowflakes! Millions and millions of them!"

To a little child, a fall of snow is a marvellous thing. All that white, moving loveliness he can see out his window. Before long the earth is covered with a magic carpet. No wonder it thrills him.

Appreciation of beauty comes easily to a small child. It is the wise mother who puts aside her work for a few minutes to enjoy the floating white flakes, "softly, softly falling" with her little son or daughter.

Watching a fresh snow fall, and tramping along the drifted paths in the frosty air, will prepare a child for real eenjovment of poetry about the snow. At bed-time, instead of a story, read aloud to your child a poem such as Elinor Wylie's "Velvet Shoes." Read its words slowly, or better still, if he has learned to read, let him read aloud to you the verses and memorize them.

If you like poetry and your child has begun to enjoy the music, the rythm, the word pictures, why not encourage him to write his own "Snow Poem?" Your son or daughter may never be a "great poet" so far as earning money writing poetry. But if a child enjoys expressing his ideas and emotions, if he gets satisfaction from his own "word pictures," this is worthwhile in itself. It will also deepen his appreciation of other people's potry or prose.

An eight-year-old, after the first fall of snow, produced this little rhyme as a surprise for her parents. Her sheet of paper was smudged with much rubbing out of her print-script words — but the glow of literary creation was in her eyes!

"The snow comes falling down in flakes,
All on the trees and on the lakes.
As we take our sleighs and slide,
Over the drifts we gaily glide.
I like the snow, it is so white,
It falls by day, it falls by night."

Children are full of questions about the snow or anything else which interests them. "What is snow made of?" "Why does it fall?" "Why is snow white?" "What is snow for?" — the queries sometimes seem endless to a busy mother. The older boy or girl can be encouraged to look up information on any topic in a reference book, but here are simple snow facts for the younger child.

In summer we have raindrops falling from the clouds, but in winter when it is colder, the moist air is formed into snow flakes. Snow falls to the ground, although the flakes are each so light, by a force or "pull" which is called gravitation. This force pulls anything in the air down to the surface of the world unless it is able to stay up by some special means like the propeller and wings which hold up a plane.

Snow flakes are different sizes. The largest ones are seen on mild days when the thermometer is just below the freezing mark (at 32 degrees). The small flakes fall when it is very cold. The different patterns, for snow flakes are six-sided. In one snowstorm the flakes are usually all the same design.

Snow is white because the combination of the different colors of a prism produce white. Snows may fill the roads and have to be cleared away. It is fun to watch the snow clearing equipment at work! Snow is valuable to the farmer. He knows that the snow blanket, covering his fields, conserves necessary moisture and protects roots from the frost.

If a child is interested in snow crystals, do have a board covered with dark cloth (preferably velvet) ready to catch flakes on its surface during the next snow fall. Many of the flakes travel a long distance and are broken in their descent. But the perfect flakes are beautiful with their lacy outline.

An inexpensive magnifying glass shows the outline more distinctly. A good magnifying glass is a splendid piece of equipment in a family where even one child has a nature lore hobby. The amazing loveliness of snow crystals has been copied by designers of wall-paper, of cloth, of jewellery and of fancy work, too. Encourage your child to try to copy the pattern of a snow flake with white chalk on a slate or blackboard. He will have to work quickly to get its outline before it melts!

Throat specialists say that smoking makes women's voices harsh. If you don't believe it, try flicking your cigarette ashes on the rug.

The France-Canada Exhibition was opened to the public at the Hotel de Rohan (French National Archives), in Paris, with a large collection of items from both countries on display. This girl visitor is admiring a model of a Canadian canoe.

STERN VIEW

Red Deer, Alta. (CP) — Fred Turnball, president of the Red Deer Advocate, recently recalled the magistrate in prohibition days who did not approve of "dry" legislation. After convicting a bootlegger, he fined him $250, not for the offence but because what he was selling was "beastly stuff".

HELICOPTER HELPS

Edmonton (CP) — A helicopter is being used in an Alberta soils survey from a base camp on Cutbank river 250 miles northwest of here. The helicopter lands at intervals to permit the usual type of sampling — the old pick and shovel way.

Avoca

W. M. Muriel Smith accompanied by some of the other members of Alexandria Lodge 119, of Avoca, attended a joint meeting of Harrington and Grenville Lodges to meet the R.W.G.M. of the Province of Quebec, Sister Boland, of Sherbrooke.

Two initiations took place, and other interesting events during the evening included the presentation of gifts to the G.M. from each lodge. Refreshments were served in conclusion.

"Lucky Find" Brings Relief to Allergics

"Lucky finds" are few in scientific research. But sometimes a scientist does find something he was not looking for. The discovery of the histamines, mysterious chemicals produced by the body itself, is an example. At a recent international conference, the British scientist, Sir Henry Dale, said that his discovery in 1910 of histamine was a "chance observatiion" because he was working on another problem at the time. However, it took the trained mind of a great scientist like Sir Henry to recognize the significance of what he observed.

We now know a great deal more about histamine through carefully directed, painstaking work in the laboratory. When it was found that histamine had a relationship to allergic conditions, scientists created anti-histamine drugs to provide relief for allergy victims. The first of these drugs had adverse effects, but these have now been overcome. For example, a team of reserchers developed bristamin, an anti-histamine which is effective in providing relief from mild asthma hay fever and other allergic conditiions. In a series of tests in more than 2,000 patients, only three instances of side effects — a mild drousiness — were found.

SCIENCE IN YOUR LIFE

Laboratory Earth

The ancient Greeks pictured the earth as a flat disc floating on the surface of a world ocean.

Today, almost any schoolboy can describe the earth's true shape, its dimensions and its major land and sea masses. He can probably tell you something about the other planets in our solar system, too, and about stars and galaxies.

The naive conjectures of antiquity have been displaced by a body of precise knowledge drawn from centuries of scientific observation, experiment, and exploration. But much is still to be learned about our physical world.

More than three million square miles of Antarctica remain unexplored. The ocean depths still hold many mysteries. Weather and climate are not fully understood.

Scientists believe that many of the blank pages in our terrestrial book of knowledge will be filled during the forthcoming International Geophysical Year.

Since the earth itself is the laboratory of the geophysicist, nature's routine must be observed on a global scale.

Beginning in July, 1957, scientists of 39 countries will co-operate in a simultaneous probe into the physical nature of man's environment. They will join in an intensive exploration of the Antarctic. A network of observation sites will be established all over the world. Rockets will be launched to explore heights up to 250 miles.

From this mass of concerted observations, scientists expect to gather data to answer many of the unsolved questions in our physical universe. They also hope that the Geophysical Year will provide a common effort on which all nations can agree. The planet Earth is, after all, the one place that all people can claim as "home."

H-BOMB ONLY ONE WEAPON

By Lewis Milligan

Public opinion in Australia is being aroused against the subtle spread of Communism in that country through the medium of labor unions. The official organ of The People's Union (non-party) tells the story and calls for a popular awakening to the reality of the menace. In a front-page editorial headed, "Strikes! H-Bomb Only One Weapon," the paper begins by quoting a statement recently made in Melbourne by General Augustin Guillaume, chief of the French General Staff, as follows:

"The fight against Communism is world-wide. It is a new kind of warfare which has little connection with national boundaries and weapons of defence. France has been defeated in indo-China by a new type of psychological and political warfare."

"Somewhere," says the editorial, "in the conspiratorial hideouts of the highly-trained Moscow executive, the Red plan to subjugate Australia is taking definite shape." The Australian Labor Party Conference is said to have "openly endorsed Moscow's policy for bringing it into effect by revolutionary and industrial action. The average union official is a marionette — cries to high heaven against Communists and, at the same time, endorses their policies."

The immediate object is to bring down the Menzies government, and the policy is to start a "wave of strikes". Four newspaper plants were closed down by strikes and a new paper, The Clarion, "appeared like magic" while other Red-tinged journals issued more editions featuring the strikers' case. The unions are thus said to have secured "almost a monopoly of publicity mediums".

The rank and file of union members are said to have only a vague idea of what the trouble was all about. "Running like an evil thread through all Communist activity", says the editorial, "is the removal of men's minds from reality. To vaguely dangle hopes of more money and less work keeps the minds of the innocents from the sinister aspects."

Communists are said to be boasting that Australia will fall to them without fighting in the military sense. That will be achieved by an extension of what is happening today. "Strikes have stopped the wheels of industry, held up ships, transport and services on specious pleas of increased margins, in defiance of moderate union officials. . . Red strike manoeuvres are a test of strength, so far, confined to New South Wales. Their success has been frightening when we recognize that many of the key unions are controlled by Communists and have not yet been brought into the fight. . . Arbitration is to be destroyed if Communists have their way. It is hampering Red militancy in blackmailing employers and workers alike."

All this comes to us as a surprise, for we have always thought of the Australians as very English and the most loyal of all peoples to British traditions. That is still probably true of Australians as a whole, but, as in Britain, they were for some years under a Labor government, which was dominated by the trade unions. That presented the desired opportunity to the Communists, whose policy is to infiltrate and gain control over labor unions as the first step to undermining the capitalist system. The strike is the most effective weapon for that purpose because it strikes at the base of the industrial and economic structure of the country. Once that is overthrown the way is wide open for the revolution and the advent of the Communist State.

Australia is at the other side of the world, and it must be remembered that it comes within the orbit of Moscow's Eastern strategy, both military and economic. This is pointed out by the editorial as follows: "As we go to press, we express the opinion that the spate of strikes is a military manoeuvre — a trial run, as it were, in Moscow's Asian strategy to test the Menzies Government. The full strength of the Communist-Leftist Labor Movement in Australia will be felt immediately Chou En Lai is ready and when the revolutionary situation in Australia has matured."

Papermaking at St. Jerome

75 YEARS' EXPERIENCE in the making of the fine paper on which Canada Savings Bonds are printed, are represented here in the persons of Camille Bouvrette, Plant Superintendent, and his two sons, Jacques and Jean-Paul, both of them machine tenders. They are seen here verifying the quality of the half-stock in one of the beaters which are in use at the St. Jerome plant of Rolland Paper Co. Ltd. The refining of the materials that go into fine paper is one of the most critical operations in the whole process.

Butter Surplus

Ottawa (CP) — Estimates of Canada's butter surplus seem to differ sharply. The National Dairy Council said in Ottawa last Wednesday that the country will have a record 73,193,000-pound surplus by next spring. But agriculture Minister Gardiner was reported as saying in Edmonton last Tuesday that the surplus now is 10,000,000 pounds.

The government has always maintained that a certain amount must be held back to fill the country's butter "pipeline" during the winter months when production is at its lowest. The government says this butter is not surplus.

The Council said the surplus was 58,000,000 last May and 43,000,000 pounds in May, 1954.

How times have changed for the better!

Not so very many years ago, people with a history of certain ailments or diseases were unable to buy the life insurance they needed. Often, this resulted in considerable hardship for their families. But today . . . thanks to the results of new knowledge and research in controlling diseases, many such people are now accepted by life insurance companies — and can provide their families with vital financial protection.

This is another example of the many ways in which the life insurance companies in Canada have advanced with the times . . . offering better service to Canadians in all walks of life!

Property Foreclosures Ordered For All Taxes In Arrears Since 1953

Former Secretary Germain Filion Fills Breach in City Staff Pending New Appointment

All properties on which taxes have not been paid since 1953 are to be put up immediately for Sheriff's sale — according to a motion unanimously passed at the monthly meeting of Lachute Town Council. The session, held last Wednesday evening under chairmanship of Mayor Dr. F. Walter FitzGerald, was attended by all councillors with the exception of Ald. Wilbrod Cousineau.

Temporary Loan

The decision to "sell-out" delinquent taxpayers came following several discussions on the corporation's dwindling cash balance. "Our financial condition is the best," stated Mayor FitzGerald, "but we just don't have the cash available." Following the same lines, it was decided to make a temporary loan of $30,000 at 4½% interest in order to pay all due accounts, the total of which was $20,000 as at October 1.

It was pointed out by several of the aldermen that the year's budget of $141,000 had been all but spent in the first six months of the year, and as Ald. Ross R. Muir put it, "We have been spending money like drunken sailors."

Department Audits

Gordon Tabrett, representing the firm of Thomas C. Corry, the corporation's auditors, quoted a fee of $5 an hour to compile an audit of all departments of the corporation from the first of the year until the middle of November, the report to be available for an adjourned meeting November 16.

Following a request from Germain Filion, Ald. D. G. MacRae moved that the corporation accept the upkeep of a 4-inch water pipe owned by the Laurentien Hotel and cancel a charge made for repairs to the pipe. The pipe supplies water to several business taxpapers in the immediate area. The motion was seconded by Ald. E. O. Pollock and, at the same time, the representative from the Laurentien Hotel agreed to the town using the pipe to supply water in the immediate neighborhood.

Immoral Literature

Relative to the Ste. Anastasie and St. Julien Parish Committees' request that the Council take action in cleaning up local newsstands, the Council was informed by legal authority that the situation was out of their hands, as far as the Cities and Towns Act was concerned. The firm of Legault & Legault stated that the Criminal Code allowed action to curb distribution of such newspapers, but that it was in the hands of the Attorney-General and the Provincial Police. The Corporation's lawyers suggested that the Council contact the proper authorities.

Permission was granted the Canadian Legion Branch 70 to sell poppies from November 4-11.

It was decided that 200 feet of high-pressure booster hose for the fire truck be purchased from Geo. Y. Deacon, for the tendered price of $230.

A request from Asst. Secretary Jacques Poitras to be allotted space in the municipal garage during the winter was turned down by the Auditorium Committee, which has charge of the garage.

Flags To Fly

Council was informed that the flag-poles on the front of the Civic Building would be erected this week and it was decided that the Union Jack would be flown on Friday, November 11, Remembrance Day, as the "special occasions" flag. Commencing this week, the Red Ensign and provincial Fleur-de-Lis will be flown from the building every day.

Tenders for coarse salt for road and sidewalk use were tabled for further study and additional information.

A motion to construct a considerable length of sidewalk on George Street was made by Ald. Réal Morrissette, but found no seconder.

The secretary was instructed to notify the Social Credit organization that the only room available for political meetings was the Auditorium, and that a charge would be made.

Catholic School Commission

Following considerable discussion, it was decided that, while the accounts for the Catholic School Commission would be sent out by the corporation staff, such bills would be payable at any of the chartered banks in Lachute.

Engage Office Help

Germain Filion, former secretary-treasurer, was engaged as assistant secretary-treasurer on departure of Claude Daoust, commencing November 14. Mr. Filion, who will receive a salary of $50 weekly, is engaged in a temporary manner only until the position is filled.

It was unanimously passed that the ante-room would be put at the disposal of the Social Service for a one-year period, and that a private telephone line be installed. This agreement can be terminated on a month's notice by either party.

The meeting was adjourned until Wednesday, November 16, at 8 p.m.

POLICE DEPT. UNDER CENSURE, CHIEF SUSPENDED

Program Outlined for Remembrance Ceremonies

Commencing Tomorrow at 11.35 a.m.

Remembrance Day ceremonies at the Memorial Park will get underway at the World War II monument at 10:35 a.m., at which time Mayor Dr. F. Walter FitzGerald will lay a wreath for the Town of Lachute. From this point the remainder of the service will be held at the World War I monument, where, following the Mayor's address and the singing of "O Canada", two minutes' silence will be opened and terminated by the firing of a cannon — the silence ending at 11 a.m., after which the Last Post will be played. This will be followed by addresses by Philippe Valois, M.P., and the Hon. W. M. Cottingham, M.L.A., the laying of wreaths, and singing of "God Save the Queen".

The annual parade will commence at the Legion Hall at 10 a.m., with pipers and drummers, color party, Legion members, 131st Field Battery, R.C.A., guns and tractors, Highland Cadets, Scouts, Guides, Cubs and Brownies will take part — the High School pupils joining in the parade as it passes Harriett Street.

Ottawa Topics – Trans-Canada Pipeline And Aircraft for Northern Transport

THE WEEK AT OTTAWA

By Roy LaBerge, Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Nov. 9 (CP) — Canada now has two cabinet ministers who hold dual portfolios. Trade Minister Howe is also minister of defence production. And Prime Minister St. Laurent announced last week, following a cabinet meeting, that veterans affairs minister Lapointe would be sworn in immediately as postmaster-general.

Filling of the post, left vacant by the death last August 7 of Hon. Alcide Cote, was the first cabinet change since the general shuffle on July 1, 1954.

There has been speculation that Mr. St. Laurent wants to bring into the cabinet Brigadier Jean Allard, 42, Commander of the 3rd Infantry Brigade at Valcartier, Que.

Mr. St. Laurent also announced that a by-election is to be held December 19 in the Quebec riding of St. Jean - Iberville - Napierville, formerly represented by Mr. Cote.

The possibility exists that Brig. Allard might seek the Liberal nomination in St. Jean-Iberville-Napierville, a Liberal stronghold. If he should run and win, the prime minister might then relieve Mr. Lapointe of his postal duties and turn them over to Brigadier Allard.

The Liberals likely will put up a very strong campaign in the by-election December 19. They lost the Liberal stronghold of Toronto Spadina to the Progressive Conservatives last October 24, and New Brunswick's Restigouche - Madawaska — another constituency considered strongly Liberal — to the Opposition on September 26.

Pipeline Talks

Heads of Trans-Canada Pipe Lines Ltd. conferred in Ottawa with trade minister Howe last week. Formation of a federal-Ontario government crown corporation to build a section of the proposed $350,000,000 line was believed in its final stages.

Mr. Howe was expected to confer later with Ontario officials to discuss setting up the corporation to finance the $118,000,000 northern Ontario section of the 2,200-mile line.

Part of last week's discussions dealt with arrangements whereby the government would lease the northern Ontario section to Trans-Canada Pipe Lines Ltd., which is to construct the remainder of the line between Alberta and Montreal.

The Federal and Ontario Governments have agreed in principle that Ottawa should put up two-thirds and Ontario one-third of the cost of the Northern Ontario leg.

Canada's North Opens Up

Trade Minister Howe said last week Canada's north is opening up and that aircraft have an important part to play in Northern development.

He told a joint meeting of the Canadian Aeronautical Institute and the Institute of Aeronautical Science that many centres are served entirely or almost entirely by aircraft.

Parents and Councillors Incensed by Arbitrary Tactics Against Youngsters

Chief Upholds Stand, Will Take Action

J. Laurent Ducharme, Chief of Police here for almost two years past, was suspended from his office for a one-week period, following a lengthy caucus at an adjourned meeting of Town Council held Saturday afternoon. The caucus and meeting, at which Ald. Réal Morrissette was absent, followed several complaints from local citizens received at the regular meeting last Wednesday, relative to the police department.

Chief's Statement

Present at the meeting at which the suspension announcement was made, Chief Ducharme publicly declared that he intended to take action against the municipality as well as the sponsor and seconder of the motion (these being Aldermen Stanley Church and Wilbrod Cousineau, respectively). Following his declaration that he would take action, Chief Ducharme stated that in his opinion the suspension was illegal, that he had acted in good faith and that he could prove his action.

Chief Laurent Ducharme

Chief Ducharme's statement was preceded by a discussion between Fernand Legault, Q.C., the corporation's legal advisor, and Mr. Ducharme. Called upon to present explanations of certain clauses of the Criminal Code, Mr. Legault explained that it was illegal to put behind bars any youth under 16 years of age. To this, Chief Ducharme replied that the law was flexible and that police in other towns acted in this manner. Mr. Legault affirmed that the law was explicit, and that it clearly stated that "a youth under the age of 16 years could not be held in any place or prison where adults were, or could be detained." In addition, added Mr. Legault, a police officer found responsible of this act is liable to a penalty of one month in prison or a fine of $100, or both. (The statements by Mr. Legault are based on Clauses 160 and 217 of the Criminal Code.)

All aldermen present, under the chairmanship of Mayor Dr. F. Walter FitzGerald, voted in favor of the Chief's suspension without pay. Chief Ducharme is being replaced for the week by Assistant Chief W. Lepine.

The Complaints

One of the principal complaints lodged against the Police Department was the Hallowe'en night arrest of Bobby Campbell, 15-year-old son of Mrs. Kenneth Campbell, and a 15-year-old companion.

According to Mrs. Campbell, who testified at the regular Council meeting last Wednesday evening, the two boys stated they were on Main Street and that Assistant Chief W. Lepine threatened to shoot them if they ran away. This incident followed the kicking over of a garbage can some time previously, by some of the boys in the group. The boys were taken to the Police Station and held in cells. This occurred about 7:45 p.m., and several friends of the two detained boys informed Mrs. Campbell of the incident — something which the police failed to do. Mrs. Campbell stated that she awaited official word of the arrest until nine o'clock, at which time she informed Mayor Dr. FitzGerald and Ald. Ross R. Muir, Police Committee chairman; and an hour later, still having heard nothing from the police, she decided to go to the Police Station, accompanied by Ald. Muir.

"Solitary Confinement"

Mrs. Campbell informed the Council that both boys were in cells in solitary confinement, her son being locked in a cage in darkness. Mrs. Campbell added that, when she complained to Chief Ducharme about the treatment and asked why she had not been notified, he was "extremely rude, overbearing and threatening."

In closing, Mrs. Campbell said, "I feel the Police used very poor judgment and tactics in their treat-

Lions Member Urges Fluoridation For Dental Health

Develops Community Theme, Pinch-Hitting in Lack Of Regular Speaker

In filling the breach for lack of a speaker, a member of Lachute Lions Club, Dr. Eric Mongeon, came up with a public health proposal which enlisted some enthusiasm among the membership, while promising a project which Lachute may see fit to adopt in the not too remote future. Artificial fluoridation of drinking water to reduce tooth decay is not new, although it required a long-term survey of results to prove its effectiveness, and thus, has come under public scrutiny only of recent years. . . As far as Dr. Mongeon, dental consultant of the County Health Unit, is concerned — he required only the official "go-ahead" to publicly air his views and agitate for fluoridation. (Dr. Mongeon also spoke during the past week at a meeting of the Women's Institute.)

On a lengthy subject, suffice to say that the City of Brantford, first Canadian centre to add fluorine to its water supply, has shown a definite 50% drop in tooth decay in 10 years. The city has become a sort of fluoridation centre for the study of experts from all over the world. . .

Also, of immediate local interest is the fact mentioned by Dr. Mongeon, that the nearby town of Hawkesbury is among Canadian centres to have adopted fluoridation.

As regards the cost of this process, which is simple, this would amount to approximately 10 cents a year per person. Initial installation for treatment of the water supply would cost in the neighborhood of $4,000.

Dr. Mongeon was introduced by the new program chairman, Roger Regimbal, and thanked by President Ian Gordon for his thought-provoking topic.

Club plans were discussed, including the public bingo to take place December 9, the father-child Christmas festivity on December 20, and the Santa Claus treat to school-children — Geo. Y. Deacon again accepting the committee chairmanship for this major venture.

Two new members were inducted — Armand Desrosiers and Gordon Higginson, both newcomers to the business sphere of Lachute. These were happily introduced by Phil Tremblay as sponsor and welcomed into Lionism by the president.

There was considerable discussion on work among school children instigated by T. Zaplaski, local fieldman of the Institute for the Blind, and the club voted its support, both in principle and by financial means, to overcome visual handicaps among pupils in an organized manner.

The attendance numbered over 50, and the meeting concluded on a satisfying note of further community achievement.

Football Topic By Sports Authority At Rotary Club

Mr. Gordon Marriott, of Reliance Chemical Company, Montreal, was guest speaker at last week's meeting of the Rotary Club. He came on a day's notice as a substitute for a friend, who was scheduled to speak at this meeting but fell ill at the last minute. . . Mr. Marriott was a football player in his younger days and later a coach for an American team. He also served as assistant coach with Vic Obeck at McGill University.

The subject of his address was a popular and timely topic — football. He said that this sport was fast becoming the country's national game, and was drawing larger crowds than hockey. It was "big business" today, as may be seen from the fact that last year's play-off in Toronto meant that about $1,000,000 was spent in that city. There was a definite need for larger stadiums in all larger cities in Canada, in order to accommodate the thousands of fans who were interested in watching these games. At a recent game in Montreal there were 500 taxis lined up outside the stadium, together with about 50 special buses.

The players are paid higher salaries than ever before, and these are constantly increasing. Coaches are in great demand in Canada, as may be seen from the fact that most of them at present come from the United States.

The speaker also claimed that the sport contributed to better relationships between cities, and between the East and the West. Thousands of people came from the West last year to see the play-offs and thousands will be going to the West Coast to see those games this year.

The speaker was introduced by Dudley Boal and thanked by Phil Grant.

Ground Observer Corps Instruction Course

Local Ground Observer Corps members have been receiving instruction in the operation of the Filter Centre at St. Jerome during the past two weeks, and Chief Observer Lucien Hamel informed The Watchman yesterday that a course will be held every two weeks — the time and day to be set by those participating.

The course, a total of 40 hours divided into 20 sessions, will commence shortly, and it is hoped to have an average of from 15 to 20 persons at each session. Free transportation will be provided, and anyone interested is requested to contact Mr. Hamel (phone 1592 during office hours or 396-J at his residence). Present members may contact their Official Observers.

Veterans at Legion Armistice Dinner Pay Tribute to Their Fallen Comrades

Capt. Lawrence Robinson, Principal Speaker, Gives Recognition to Older Comrades for Canada's Lead in Veteran Rehabilitation

Ex-servicemen of the two World Wars gathered Saturday evening at the Legion Hall for their annual banquet and for remembrance of their many comrades who paid the supreme sacrifice. New and old faces appeared and varied experiences were exchanged as the boys sat around and chatted over old times.

Guest speaker of the evening was Capt. Lawrence Robinson, who spent five years with the Royal Canadian Artillery of Nova Scotia, and is at present on the teaching staff of Lachute High School. Capt. Robinson said, in part:

"Tonight we are meeting on a very solemn occasion. We are paying our respects to those whom we have had no chance to address as comrades, because they have given up their lives in order that our way of existence may continue. They have had no chance to become members of the B.E.S.L. It is fitting that we should set aside at least one day in the year when we can formally remember our lost friends.

"It is also fitting, however, that we should pay some attention to those who remain. We can never reach the heights of honor attained by our dead comrades-in-arms, but we can earn some merit by remaining as an organization that will continue to give aid to veterans in need. Perhaps our situation can be best understood by reference to one of Lord Dunsany's poems, in which he expresses his views of his coming alive out of World War I:

'I met Death in his country
With his scythe and his hollow eye
Walking the roads of Belgium.
I looked and he passed me by.

'Since he passed me by in Plug Street,
In the wood of an evil name,
I shall not lie with the heroes,
I shall not share their fame.

'I shall never be as they are,
A name in the lands of the Free;
Since I looked on Death in Flanders
And he did not look at me.'

"So, although we can never 'lie with the heroes', we can continue in helping to re-establish each other in civilian life. It is about that problem of re-establishment that I will speak for a few minutes this evening.

"Never in the whole development of civilization has any wartime veteran been as carefully looked after as the Canadian veteran of World War II. . ."

B'burg Legion Plans Fitting Program for Armistice Anniv.

Brownsburg—The Remembrance Day ceremony November 11 at the Cenotaph in Brownsburg will commence at 10:45 a.m. This year the program has been altered to make use of Brownsburg's excellent Male Choir, who will sing two appropriate hymns during the ceremony. On parade, as well as local veterans, will be the Legion Auxiliary, the Boy Scouts, Girl Guides, Brownies and Cubs. The Rev. N. H. Brock and the Rev. Father Clement, representing the English and French speaking clergy, will also take part.

On Saturday at 6 p.m. there will be an Armistice Dinner in the Legion Hall, provided by the Ladies' Auxiliary, at which all local veterans, whether members of the Legion or not, and local servicemen on leave, will be welcome. During the course of the dinner an address will be given by a member of Quebec Provincial Command. The proceedings will be followed by an admission-free dance for the veterans and their guests.

On Sunday, November 13, at 2 p.m. the Remembrance Day observance will be concluded with a church parade to the United Church, where the Rev. G. Bruce will hold a special Remembrance service for Branch 71 and the Auxiliary. The general public are also urged to attend this service.

Brownsburg Branch of the Canadian Legion would like to express appreciation to those who bought poppies to help veterans in need.

Sentences for Theft And Impaired Driving

Laurian Gauthier, 22, of St. Philippe, was sentenced to 15 days in jail on a charge of theft of copper wire. The man had been placed under arrest by Det. Ralph Allan after he had been spotted near some wire cable in the Pine Hill area.

Roger Durand, 36, of Lachute, was sentenced to a fine of $75 plus costs, with no suspension of his driving permit, when he appeared on a charge of driving while his ability was impaired. The arrest was made following an accident on Main Street East, October 3. Durand was released on bail of $103 following his arrest.

Andreoli Pasquale, of Montreal, received a similar sentence on the same charge. The accused was not involved in any accident, however. Maurice Belisle, 26, of Brownsburg, failed to appear Friday on a charge of driving while his ability was impaired, and following his re-arrest, will appear in court to face the charge.

Victim Succumbs To Recent Injuries, Marelan Highway

Mrs. Wilfrid Racine, 47 (the former Claire Liboiron) of Ottawa, died in a Montreal hospital following injuries received in a recent accident on Route 8 near the Canadian Refractories plant at Marelan.

According to information from Officers Albert Legault and Gerard Loyer who investigated the mishap, the car, driven by Gerard Lauzon, 49, of Ottawa, went into a skid while passing another car, and crashed into a tree. It was raining at the time of the accident.

Mrs. Racine was treated for a fracture of the skull and was transferred to the Montreal Neurological Institute, where she later died. Three other persons were injured in the incident.

Seasonal Unemployment Study for Lachute District

The following is the first in a series of articles, written and contributed by Mr. G. A. Downing, manager of the National Employment office at Lachute, dealing with the subject of "Seasonal Unemployment in our Area."

Our district has experienced a period of extremely active employment since early June of this year. The number of persons seeking work has varied from 200 to 250 throughout the whole county. In effect, there has existed a shortage of skilled labor in many trades and competent workers in unskilled classes were hard to locate. Mr. Downing is in a good position to view the picture as a whole and has at times had difficulty in locating workers suitable for the needs of local employers. These latter have also admitted that good employees have been scarce. Latest figures available show that the number looking for work are as follows: Lachute — 50, Lachute Mills — 44, Ayersville—30 and Brownsburg—37. Persons out of work in the balance of the county bring the total to 250 men and women. It is estimated that these statistics may serve as a basic minimum, normal for the most active season.

This pleasant situation will unfortunately not remain with us throughout the coming winter months and all within our own locality will suffer from it, to some extent or other, unless we can forestall it.

Transport Spill Near Grenville

A new tractor and trailer owned by Boyd's Lachute Express piled up on Route 8 at the outskirts of Grenville Tuesday morning, causing considerable damage. The tractor was being driven by Lister Ward at the time of the upset.

The mishap occurred around 8 a.m., when the trailer, loaded with Masonite, was headed towards Boyd's Lachute warehouse from Gatineau. The outfit took the ditch and went for a considerable distance, the load being dumped off. The tractor hit a filled-in section of the ditch, wrecking it completely, while the trailer crashed into a tree.

The driver was not seriously injured and the material was reloaded on another vehicle by the company. This is the first major accident the local company has experienced in almost two years.

CROWDED FUTURE

Surrey, B.C. (CP) — This municipality has doubled in population in 10 years and Reeve Charles Schultz warned that schools will be on swing shifts for 10 years unless senior governments aid building.

Despite its being one of the three prairie provinces, Manitoba has greater wealth produced by manufacturing than by agriculture.

More than two out of three families in Canada own their own homes.

Gatineau Lines

Prompt Payment

Under the regulations of the Provincial Electricity Board, an electricity bill is required to be paid within 15 days from the date it is sent to the customer.

The great majority of the Company's customers take advantage of the liberal discount of 10% offered for payment within this 15 days.

It is suggested to those who do not take advantage of this discount that they should endeavor to secure this saving for themselves.

Following this 15 day period the Power Company is authorized to disconnect the service.

The Power Company would be delighted if everyone paid up promptly and no one had to be disconnected for being in arrears.

Seasonal Farm Topics

Hog Prices

Ottawa (CP) — Federal officials fear that Canadian hog prices may fall to the government support price level of $23 a hundredweight for Grade A at Toronto.

Reason for the decline is heavy marketings by farmers, especially in the west, where farmers have been converting large stocks of feed grains to livestock use.

If hog prices drop to the support price it would put the federal government back into the pork business for the first time since 1952, buting hogs in order to maintain returns to farmers.

The federal government entered the market in 1952 during the United States embargo on Canadian meat exports which followed the foot and mouth disease outbreak.

New Discovery May Aid Fly Control

Agricultural research scientists have discovered that houseflies feeding on sugar leave behind some kind of substance, called a "fly factor" at present, which attracts other flies to the feeding source.

The scientists have yet no idea what it is in the fly saliva that makes it more attractive to other flies, they do know how to extract the substance from fly-specked sugar. When this is added to fresh sugar, flies are attracted to it. The presence of this substance can also be detected by a delicate instrument called a spectrophotometer.

Research is now underway to learn more about it, for it may be useful as an addition to poisoned fly baits. If flies can be attracted to feed on poisoned food in preference to other food sources, then the importance of this research is obvious. Once the scientists discover the nature of the substance left behind by the fly, it might be possible to make a synthetic product in quantity.

Flies are particularly dangerous in the home because when they feed on dry sugar they, in a way, "spit" on it and suck up what dissolves. It has been known that some of the saliva remains on and in the sugar, the bacteria or other filth picked up by the fly is washed out on the sugar and left behind.

Henhouse Requires Ample Ventilation

Saskatoon (CP) — Installation of a ventilation system in the henhouse is essential in good poultry management, says A. R. Wood of Luverne, Minn.

Mr. Wood told the annual convention of the Canadian Federation of Hatchery Associations, western section, that a good ventilation system results in increased egg production and less disease in the flock. The system involves more than a fan placed in the wall.

One thousand laying birds give off 55 gallons of water daily. A ventilation system capable of removing 432 pounds of moisture a day must be installed in a hen house.

A continuous-duty, two-speed motor, enclosed and equipped with ball-bearing, is basic for a good ventilation system, he said. New air should be distributed slowly and evenly but it is no problem in a well-planned system to remove 18 pounds of moisture an hour from a hen house.

Alberta still has some 30,000,000 acres of unoccupied land suitable for cultivation.

Farm Ponds Store B.C. Winter Rain

Langley, B.C. (CP) — Dugout ponds to store winter rains have eased the stock-watering problems on a number of farms.

Hugh Hamilton, who retired from the Vancouver police force 11 years ago, built himself such a dugout near this town 20 miles east of Vancouver and ended the drudgery of watering his cattle from wells.

It cost him $50 for a bulldozer to do the job, plus his own labor for the finishing touches.

The provincial agricultural department has issued a circular on dugout water storage with detailed instructions.

In the coastal area large dugouts can be used to store winter rains for summer irrigation and are said to be cheaper to build and pump than deep wells.

Police Dept. Under Censure

ment of these boys, and in their attitude to me and one of your own Council members (Ald. Muir). Rather than giving the youth of this town a healthy respect for law and order and for those who administer it, methods such as this will encourage them to look upon authority with contempt and ridicule."

Another parent, Mr. Robt. Cairns, spoke following Mrs. Campbell, and informed the Council that it was not the first time that incidents of this kind had happened and that his 13-year-old son had been held in the local cells for breaking a window. "It is perfectly obvious that we can't have conduct like that from our police," he concluded.

Aldermen's Opinions

Following the parents' reports, several of the aldermen voiced their opinions, as follows:

Ald. Ross R. Muir: "I feel that for such a small infraction, the boys should have been taken home. It was not necessary to lock them behind bars and I think that we should expect more common sense and good judgment from men in such authority."

Ald. Romain Desjardins: "It is my opinion that the police should have informed the parents in question, and that such rash treatment should not have been used" — to which several other aldermen agreed.

Ald. D. G. MacRae: "If the youths were threatened with a gun, I think that we should ask for the officer's immediate resignation."

Ald. E. O. Pollock: "I think it is terrible that the youth of this town have been put behind bars and treated in this manner. It is high time something was done."

Additional Complaints

Secretary - Treasurer Claude Daoust read to the Council a letter from Lachute High School Principal F. H. J. Royal, stating that the previous day (Tuesday, November 1) a police officer entered the school and requested that a boy be released from class. Mr. Royal informed the Council that, according to instructions received from the School Board following a similar experience, he had refused permission.

In closing the business relative to the Police Department, a letter from W. W. Nutman was read lodging a complaint concerning a parking ticket. Mr. Nutman stated that he had stopped on the north side of Main Street early Friday evening, his tire had been marked and he had later made four different stops in various sections of Lachute, returning some time later to a similar spot on Main Street. It was only a few minutes after he had left his car that a policeman issued the ticket. He added that the chalk mark was still on the car after 75 miles of driving.

FIRST AID KIT PROVES ITS VALUE IN INDO-CHINA.

—Central Press Canadian

Col. R. J. Nodwell, deputy director-general of medical services for the Canadian army, displays a first-aid kit carried by all 150 members of the army who spent a year in Indo-China. The kit was designed to provide protection against rare tropical diseases as well as the usual run of likely happenings — snakebite, rabies or tiger-bite. The RCAMC is proud of its record in Indo-China—not one serious illness during the year even though the members worked in small groups often in out-of-the-way villages with the first-aid kit as their only medical supply.

OBITUARY

Lifelong Resident Died at Centerville

Late James Ernest Hammond

At his residence in Centerville, the death of James Ernest Hammond occurred November 1, after a lengthy illness.

A lifelong resident of Centerville, he was the son of the late James Hammond and his wife Ellen Jane Knox. He was predeceased by his wife, the former Elma De Hertel, in 1942.

He is survived by his four sisters and two brothers, Elizabeth (Mrs. Frank Gaston, of Centerville), Harriet (Mrs. Wm. Chambers, of St. Philippe d'Argenteuil), Lily (Mrs. Albert Mitchell, of Lachute), Laura (Mrs. Chas. Thompson, of Ceylon, Sask.), Robert, of Montreal, and William, of Ceylon, Sask.; also by his two nieces, four nephews, and 12 grandnieces and grandnephews.

The funeral, largely attended by relatives and friends, was held at his home in Centerville on Thursday, November 3, and was conducted by the Rev. Wilson Bridge.

Pall-bearers were — Messrs. Wm. Shaw, Lemuel Hammond, Arthur Billingham, Arnold Parker, Daniel De Hertel and George MacDougall.

Comrades' Tribute At Armistice Meet

Capt. Robinson here went back over the history of wars, 2,000 years ago, tracing the experience of militiamen in rehabilitating themselves — a story of dissatisfaction and of political upheaval in which men "whose only trade for years, had been war" were a factor to be reckoned with. . . "Even as late as Queen Victoria's time there was slight recognition of the needs of veterans discharged from active service. That there was some rehabilitation in those days can be noticed in many of Kipling's accounts of conditions in the Queen's service, and the four-pence a day granted to men returning after six years' active service.

"In modern times the requirements of the discharged veteran have been given more and more attention. After World War I service men had an opportunity to advance their education and could obtain money grants to set themselves up in business. Pensions were based on amounts suitable for the economic conditions of the time. However, through ignorance or carelessness, mistakes were made that caused hardships for thousands of ex-service men who were doing their best to get used to 'civvy street'.

"The biggest change in veteran rehabilitation occurred at the end of World War II. Then the process was not accompanied by the confusion that attended the close of the first World War. Re-establishment credits, rehabilitation grants, payment for education, veterans' preference, all were arranged smoothly with a few rough spots.

"The reason for these unusual conditions can be attributed directly to our comrades who served in World War I. We newcomers to the B.E.S.L. should never forget this fact. From past experience our older comrades knew what we would require to help us set our feet straight on 'civvy street', and they knew how to organize the distribution of the benefits as smoothly as possible. Their suggestions and advice to the government gave us the best rehabilitation system the world has ever seen.

"It would be well for us to remember, though, that the best system of any kind is subject to human error. We all must be ready to keep what our older comrades have gained for us. So far it has not been necessary for us to take part in politics to gain the ear of the government of our country, but if such a drastic step is ever required, in my opinion, we should not hesitate to take it if we are in danger of losing what we have earned."

Capt. Robinson was introduced by Comrade Des Browne and thanked by President Comrade Vincent Elliott.

Special thanks were extended to the ladies of the Auxiliary branch, who supplied an appetising turkey dinner.

Poppies were in evidence, and the district campaign, which will continue this week, is showing progress.

No Mining Concession Given to Kaiser Firm, Says Hon. Wm. Cottingham

Quebec (CP) — Mines Minister W. M. Cottingham stated last week that no mining rights have been conceded by the Quebec Government to the Henry J. Kaiser Corporation.

Mr. Cottingham said there "is absolutely no foundation" for a report published in Toronto that the corporation has been offered vast new mineral exploration concessions in the area east and south of James Bay.

"My Department has offered nothing to these American interests," he said, "and not a single ministry official has been authorized to make any offers or to negotiate with the Kaiser Company."

Mr. Cottingham said that the only person to whom he has spoken and who is indirectly connected with the Kaiser Company is C. E. C. Chiasson of Montreal, director of the James Bay Railway Company. The railway company was reported to have acted as intermediary for the Kaiser Corporation.

The Minister added, that Mr. Chaisson had assured him that no mining concession has been made to the Kaiser Corporation through his intervention.

Mr. Cottingham also made a statement that the "recent order-in-council withdrawing for staking purposes a large part of the Ungava region, is not equivalent to the nationalization of the mining resources of this region." . . . "The Provincial Government has always favored private enterprise, to which we owe so much in the realm of the development of our natural resources. We owe to private enterprise the fact that the enormous sum of $250,000,000, necessary for the development of Ungava, has been obtained fairly easily," he added.

Ste. Dorothee Couple Fined In Old Age Pension Fraud

Montreal — A public warning was given in Criminal Court, when Judge Rene Theberge imposed a maximum $500 fine on a Ste. Dorothee couple for defrauding the Federal Government by drawing upon an old age pension of a deceased person.

The court was told that Mr. and Mrs. Celestin Lavoie had continued receiving and cashing pension cheques under the Old Age Security Act, for Mrs. Lavoie's mother, for one year after the latter's death.

"My clients told me they didn't think it was serious," the defence lawyer said.

"It's time then the public be told this is serious," Judge Theberge replied in imposing the fine.

MEMBER AUDIT BUREAU OF CIRCULATIONS

The Community Challenge

THE LACK OF organized social activity for our youth is blamed, by some, for the evidences of juvenile lawlessness reported in recent issues of The Watchman. Arrests and convictions have been made on various charges, and undoubtedly there will be more before long.

The most serious instance of recent weeks is that of a group of 12 to 14-year-olds, against whom a charge is now pending. Over five hundred dollars worth of firearms, ammunition and hunting equipment was recovered, several of the youths questioned, and numerous robberies thereby solved. . . But, there are other juveniles falling into the same unpromising rut.

General opinion points to the long-felt need of a Social Club of some sort. There are sufficient service and social groups in this area who have the welfare of local youth as their prime interest, and if they joined together in this one cause, there would be headaches in the enterprise, but great benefit could result for those now lacking "something to do."

It is time for some action. This is a challenge to collective study and concerted effort. If a Social Centre is the practical solution, let's start something — now!

Calling "George"

GEORGE — the good old let-him-do-it George — is a convenient character to have around. Out here where the country meets the suburbs, the municipality surrounds the parish, or vice-versa, one can nearly always pass the buck on some other authority for a job left undone.

(A news item this week reminds us they have the same situation in Ottawa too, even in those compact and sacred precincts known as Parliament Hill. Seems there is a sidewalk which "bulges and sags" on the north side of Wellington Street, but nobody knows who's responsible for its upkeep — the Federal District Commission, the Federal Works Department, or what have you.)

Coming back to local cases: For several weeks now we have been passing, en route between Brownsburg and Dalesville, an old rusty stove which has been discarded beside the highway. It is another blot on a particular landscape which is fast deteriorating with jerry-built dwellings and workshops. These, while offending the eye, presumably transgress no by-law. But there must be some legal provision against dumping on the roadside, even beyond Brownsburg limits in Chatham Township. And if not, there must be some civic-minded johnny in one of these jurisdictions, or in the Roads Department, or even the County Council, who will back up his truck and carry this stove to the dump.....Where's George!

The Cost of Newsprint

A PRICE INCREASE announced by one newsprint company, but not as yet matched by leading Canadian manufacturers, has had the immediate result of spotlighting significant facts about the growth and unprecedented prosperity of the industry in general. In a series of articles published in The Toronto Telegram, Financial Editor Fraser Robertson has shown that the Canadian pulp and paper industry is enjoying a record-breaking year of profits. Only a cursory look at the facts and figures relating to this industry is needed to show that a boost in newsprint prices is not justified.

It is appropriate to mention that newsprint in 1945 was laid down in Toronto at $58 a ton, and is now $123, irrespective of any meditated increase.

The source of the newsprint industry's raw material is the forests of Canada, over which the industry exercises a trust. If it enters upon a form of exploitation in the pursuit of ever higher profits, its action will cause the Canadian people to wonder whether the industry is properly fulfilling its trust.

With the cost of publishing already assuming serious proportions, a decision of the newsprint companies to test the newspapers' ability to bear a rise in newsprint price would be most untimely. Publishers would have to pass on the increase to advertisers and subscribers, and advertisers to consumers of their products and purchasers of their services. That applies equally to the United States, which in recent years has tremendously increased newsprint imports from Canada. Prospect of a general increase in price has already brought demands for a Congressional investigation, and threatens to affect adversely Canada-U.S. trade relations which representatives of both countries have been trying to clarify and improve.

Seam-Busting Schools

ALL ACROSS Canada there is a problem which isn't a problem, a paradox if you will, the case of the expanding population which grows so fast that it pushes out the walls of even new schools — almost before they are finished.

Canada is teeming with children and this is a condition which the countries of Europe have been striving to attain for years, either by means of edict, bonus or tolerance, knowing full well that in a coming generation of strong, healthy children there is a wealth that cannot be duplicated.

So this school problem, which is undoubtedly an expensive one to solve, meets this half of the 20th century as a challenge which must be met. It is difficult to persuade taxpayers to pay out more money than is absolutely necessary, yet this is the economical way to foresee and meet expansion. We have passed the day of "make do" in the educational field, and we will have to recognize the fact.

Probably one answer may be found in paring down the luxuries and leaving the necessities intact — lighting, sanitation, room to breathe, facilities for recreation — these are important. Frills, and what were formerly extra-curricular activities, come in the class of at least temporary non-essentials. In a free and democratic country one of the most important of the trusts given into the hands of its government is an adequate education to equip a child to meet the demands of living.

And while it may seem expensive, it is one of the best investments in the world today — this investment in the future of our children, those marvellous, healthy babies that you can see in every city — the Canadians of tomorrow. The schools are bursting at the seams and it is a good thing. Because Canada can use them all to develop its riches, of which they themselves are the greatest single item.

Rushing the Season

MOST OF US haven't given much thought to Christmas yet, but in the coming weeks we'll be lucky if we get a chance to think of anything else.

Every year the Christmas season, as it is known in commercial circles, becomes longer and longer. If the trend continues we may some day find ourselves with a year-long festival.

It was September when the Wolf Cub from up the street came around with his samples of Christmas cards and wrapping paper. He delivered them just after Thanksgiving.

At that he was only a few days ahead of the ladies of the W.A.

The next sign was the chain store's advertisement for its Christmas Club — Start saving now, avoid the last-minute drain on your pocket book.

The phonograph record companies decided this year not to rush the season — they would wait until November to put their new Christmas records on the market.

And sure enough, on November 1, with the leaves still on the trees and the autumn flowers still blooming in many parts of the country, the squeaky juvenile voices that peddle so many of these records came piping across the air waves with the very newest disclosure of "what I want for Christmas."

Week by week, from now to December 25, the numbers of these songs will mount and will be replaced by so many different disk jockeys that any resemblance between the Santa Claus of our childhood and the modern jazzed-up version will be in name only.

There must be some, possibly more than we believe, who approve of this modern approach to the Christmas season, but there are many who yearn for the good old days when the planning and the excitement were reserved at least for the Christmas month of Deember.

Half the fun of Christmas, we have found, is the last minute rush — the dash to the drug store on Christmas eve for some perfume for Aunt Em or some shaving soap for Uncle Jim. Sure, we were broke for a few weeks into the new year, but we expected that.

And we had more of the Yuletide spirit than that friend of ours who smugly announced last week that she has finished her Christmas shopping and now can sit back and relax.

OF MANY THINGS

By Ambrose Hills

Two Merchants

The two merchants set up shop in a small Ontario town together. After a couple of years, they decided to split up. The town was growing and there was room for another General Store. Besides, they didn't always agree. Each one felt he could hold his own in competition, so they parted good friends, and they were soon in competition for trade.

Both did well. George was a heavy advertiser and was always coming up with special sales and attractions to bring shoppers to the town. Tom didn't advertise much. He used to say he'd let George spend the money to bring the folks to town. "They all know where I am — been established long enough," he said. And he was a shrewd buyer and made a good profit on anything he did sell. . .

But they both got too old for tending store, and last month when a fellow from Toronto arrived in town looking for a business to buy, they were each anxious to sell to him.

George set a high price and Tom was pretty sure that would settle the matter. His own price was much lower, his inventory bigger, and he'd been established at the same stand a couple of years longer.

But the fellow from Toronto (they're good business heads, anyhow!) bought from George, and paid the higher price. . . He gave his reason, too.

Among them was the fact that George's inventory, though smaller, was all spanking new because of his rapid turnover. George's customers were younger, too, while many of Tom's were retired and not too free with money. George's customers would be around longer. Besides, they were raising families and had more veriety in their shopping lists. There were many other reasons, too; but most of them could be traced back to advertising and promotion.

Tom still can't figure it out. "Everyone knows where I'm located," he says. . . Trouble is, he is still located there. Nobody wants to buy.

One out of every five families in Newfoundland has seven or more persons.

New Canada Year Book

The new 1955 edition of the Canada Year Book, authorized for distribution by the Rt. Hon. C. D. Howe, Minister of Trade and Commerce, has now been released.

The year book, a handsome volume which would add much to anyone's library, may be obtained in the cloth bound edition. In addition a limited number of paper-bound copies have been made available at a very reasonable price to bona fide taachers, university students and ministers of religion from the Dominion Statistician, Dominion Bureau of Statistics, Ottawa.

The Canada Year Book information is an absolute must for schools and public libraries. Recognized by thousands of Canadians in office, library, classrooms and home, as an authentic information regarding the national economy and the people's welfare, the book touches on every phase of Canadian life including labor, social, population, and others.

It is authentic because it is based on the actual facts as recorded by the Bureau of Statistics and all other departments. We strongly recommend its usage by every Canadian citizen interested in learning more about the Canadian way of life.

One of the newest wrinkles in home building is insulation with polythene. Prospective home builders are investigating the value of polythene as a moisture vapor barrier in the home. Already used to some extent by industry, this new use for polythene is sparking a great deal of interest with the home-building consumer.

"A LITTLE LESS LITTLE LEAGUE"

Two years ago, I wrote an article on the manners of an English choirboy. I told you how they impressed me and suggested how a Canadian or American youth might behave under the same circumstances. The Editor discussed the matter further under his editorial banner and expressed the hope that Geoff 'exaggerates (we hope) the uncouth conversation of the average Montreal school-ager.' I regret to say that events since the writing of that article lead me to believe that I did not exaggerate by any means. In fact, I was lenient with the little outfits, to a degree!

A week or so ago, I was unhappily detailed to accompany one of the Little League baseball teams to the Presentation Dinner put on by the Montreal Kiwanis Club. It was held in the Mount Royal Hotel, and was open to every youngster and coach in the Little League setup. In all, some 300 persons sat down to a sumptuous repast which included grapefruit, turkey (with all the trimmings), ice cream, cake, and coffee or milk.

The dinner began with a concerted attack by every Little Leaguer on the Hotel's famous crusty rolls. There was no question of waiting for head-table guests to seat themselves. Nobody waited to see if Grace might be said. No sir! Get as many buns into you as fast as possible, and to heck with even elementary etiquette.

After each child had gorged himself on buns, the scurrying waiters got around to serving the first course — grapefruit. It was unfortunate that the entree — or whatever they called it — turned out to be a trifle sour. Most of the youngsters took one bite of grapefruit — which included the half-cherry garnish — and occupied their time till the waiters returned by dumping sections of grapefruit in their glasses and swishing around in the water with knives.

For the duration of the turkey, ice cream and milk courses, there was comparatively civilized behaviour. But at the conclusion of the meal, when a sing-song started, pandemonium broke loose. Every piece of cutlery that could be found was stuffed into all available glasses and the entire collection was vigorously shaken. This, coming from some 30 tables, had the effect of an air compressor being operated in a hall cupboard. And the few who didn't engage in this sport — which managed to break some 50 drinking glasses — just enjoyed themselves by banging cutlery against any handy crockery.

I don't know why the waiters abandoned the job of clearing tables at an early hour. Suffice it to say that they did, and the hotel ended up the loser. During the speeches, the little darlings, in league with one another, bent or broke as much of the cutlery as they could lay hand to. I retrieved one fork which a pint-sized pop-fly expert had worked on, and stuffed it in my pocket. I forgot to give it to the maitre-d'hotel on leaving and, when I got back to my home, discovered it had been bent until it looked like a figure 7. I hope the hotel will forgive me for keeping it, but I want it as Exhibit "A" for future reference.

The climax of the evening came when the last speaker finished talking and the last prize was presented. Then, bidden to go home, a number of the Little Leaguers hastily stuffed whatever they could carry into their jacket pockets. Nothing escaped their clutches, knives, forks, spoons, cups, saucers — yes, even plates — all were carted away. Whether they were rescued at the main door, before the bearers cleared the hotel, I didn't wait around to find out. I was fed up to the teeth with the whole affair, and beat it for home as fast as I could go.

No, Mr. Editor, I didn't exaggerate two years ago, and I'm not exaggerating now. One of the speakers spoke in glowing terms of the effect Little League baseball has had on the youth of America and Canada since its inception. He intimated that we need more teams, more players, more interest. However, if that dinner — the first and last I'll ever attend — is an example of what Little League baseball teaches, then we certainly don't want any more. . . If anything, we want a little less Little League, thank you!

O Come Ye Back

Tune: Londonderry Air

Oh darling boy, the shades of night are falling,
The days are lone since you no more abide,
Through the years I hear your spirit calling
And I would fain be there by your side.
Ye'll come no more across the summer meadow,
Or o'er the fields all white with winter's snow;
Could I but see your face in light or shadow
Oh darling boy, I miss you, miss you so.

I hear your voice when Autumn winds are sighing,
Though you are dead you still must live for me,
But oh, to see the place where you lie sleeping
Away, away, beyond the rolling sea.
For you on earth there are no more tomorrows,
Your life you gave to set your country free,
While I must bide within this vale of sorrows —
Oh come ye back, across the lonely years to me.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT

HAMMOND — The family of the late James E. Hammond wish to express deep gratitude to all friends and neighbors, for assistance, messages of sympathy and floral tributes during their recent bereavement.

IN MEMORIAM

CUNNINGHAM — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, John Cunningham, who passed away Nov. 2, 1953. — Always remembered by his wife, daughters, Bella, Beatrice, Barbara and Gertie, and son, Hugh.

"The covers of life's book are closed
For one we loved so well,
But kindly tales of years well spent
Are what the pages tell.
Each chapter in it leaves a thought
As lovely as can be,
For us to keep within our hearts
Enshrined in memory."

HOARE — In loving memory of a dear son and brother, Harlow, who was accidentally killed Nov. 12, 1954. — Always remembered by — Dad, Mother, Pearl, George, Ruby and Willie.

"Deep in our hearts your memory is kept,
We loved you too dearly to ever forget.
The blow was great, the shock severe,
We little thought his death so near.
Only those who have lost can tell
The sorrow of parting without farewell."

MacLEOD — In loving memory of a dear husband, Bond MacLeod, who passed away Nov. 7, 1948. — Always remembered by his wife and family.

"The evening star shines on a grave
Of one we loved but could not save,
His memory in our hearts today
Means more to us than words can say."

McRAE — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Wyman, who passed away Nov. 9, 1954. — Sadly missed by wife Hazel, son Ian, and daughter Judy.

"One year has passed, since that sad day
When one we loved was called away.
The blow was great, the shock severe,
We little thought death was so near.
And only those who've lost can tell
The sadness of parting without farewell.
Please God forgive a silent tear
A constant wish that he were here."

McRAE — In loving memory of a dear father, who passed away Nov. 9, 1954. — Sadly missed by his daughter, Pearl, and son-in-law, Merwin.

"What would we give if we could say
'Hello, Dad' in the same old way —
To hear your voice and see your smile,
To sit and chat with you awhile."

McRAE — In memory of our brother-in-law, Wyman, who left us one year ago. — Sadly missed by Johnny and Dora.

McRAE (Wyman) — In memory of our brother-in-law and uncle, who passed away Nov. 9, 1954. — Remembered by Wesley, Rita and family.

"You bade me one a last farewell,
Nor ever said goodbye;
You had gone before we knew,
And only God knew why."

MacRAE — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Malcolm R. MacRae, who passed away Nov. 11, 1948. — Ever remembered by his wife, son, Russell, daughter, Ethel.

"Like falling leaves the years slip by,
But memories of you will never die."

MacRAE — Loving memories of a dear father and grandfather, Malcolm R. MacRae, whom God took home to rest Nov. 11, 1948. — Ever remembered by his daughter, Maude, son-in-law, Joe, and grandchildren.

"Somewhere back of the sunset,
Where loneliness never dies,
He dwells in the land of glory
Midst the blue and gold of the skies.
And we who dearly love him
Whose passing brought many tears,
Will cherish his memory always,
To brighten the passing years."

TRINEER — In loving memory of our dear father, Henry Trineer, who passed away, Nov. 13, 1954. — Lovingly remembered by The Family.

"What would we give if we could say
'Hi, Dad!' in the same old way —
To hear your voice and see your smile,
To sit with you and chat awhile."

DISTRICT NEWS FROM OUR COUNTY CORRESPONDENTS

Brownsburg

Mr. Chester Fletcher and little daughter, Irene, of Montreal, were week-end guests of the former's mother, Mrs. Wm. MacRae.

Mrs. Annie Horner is visiting her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Wm. Horner.

Sympathy is extended to the relatives of the late E. Secker, who passed away suddenly at his home in Toronto.

Mrs. Wm. MacRae spent part of last week with Mr. and Mrs. John MacRae, Bell Falls.

Mr. M. MacAdam, of Chapleau, Ont., is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Percy MacAdam and other relatives here.

Miss Annie Petley left last week to visit Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Petley and family in Pittsburg, Pa.

Thank-Offering Speaker

Miss Charlotte Evans, Christian Fellowship leader for the Ottawa Baptist Association, was guest speaker at the thank-offering meeting of the Maple Avenue Baptist Church Mission Circle, which was held in the church Friday evening. Miss Evans states that over a million new Canadians have arrived in Canada since 1945; it is safe to say that almost half of this number have settled in Quebec and Ontario. It is an appalling fact that some of these people have been in Canada for two years and have not had the opportunity to learn the English language. A book entitled, "Learning the English Language" may be obtained free. (Anyone interested may contact Mrs. N. E. Smillie, Brownsburg, in regard to this matter.)

Harrington

Mr. R. Dobbie spent last week-end with his aunt, Mrs. A. Bothwell, in Lachute.

Miss Debbie Davis, of Montreal, was a week-end visitor at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. Bennett.

George Bennett, of Vankleek Hill, also Miss Mary Bennett, of Montreal, spent the week-end at their home.

The monthly meeting of the Harrington Ladies' Aid was held on Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. Sanford McVicar.

Prize Costumes

Prize-winners in the Frontier Women's Institute costume party (received for publication after printing of Cushing news, page 9) were as follows:

Boys & Girls, 1 to 5 years — 1 Jerry Plummer, 2 Nancy Black.

Girls, 5 to 8 — 1 Heather Tomalty, 2 Janet Clark.

Girls, 9 to 12 — 1 Grace Donaldson, 2 Joy Hicks.

Boys, 6 to 8 — 1 Terry Swail, 2 Earl Hicks.

Boys, 9 to 12 — 1 David Black, 2 George Clark.

Girls & Boys, 13 years and up — 1 Paulette Gauthier, 2 Jean Clark.

Adult Ladies — Mrs. I. H. Fuller, Mrs. John Douglas, Mrs. L. Plummer, Mrs. John Heatlie, Jr. — all equally good. (Mrs. Fuller's costume as "Miss Evergreen" was the most original.)

Premier's Warning to Newsprint Manufacturers

By Brian Selwood

Quebec (CP) — Premier Duplessis has given a stern warning to newsprint manufacturers whose recent price increases have sparked protests from newspaper publishers in Canada and the United States.

In his first policy statement since the increases of from $3 to $5 a ton were announced, Mr. Duplessis described state controls as "detestable" but "necessary under certain circumstances."

He reminded Quebec newsprint manufacturers that they are "only lessees" of publicly-owned forests. Like all lessees, he said, "they must use their lease in a reasonable and just manner. . ."

The Premier said the companies and business leaders must not make decisions likely to provide ammunition to Socialists and Communists "and thereby harm private enterprise as a whole."

He followed this with his reference to state-control sometimes becoming necessary "when abuses take the place of self-control." However, he said, "self-control is the best kind of control."

It was clear that the Quebec Government is concerned primarily with the cost of newsprint to Quebec Province newspapers.

The province is Canada's largest producer and exporter of newsprint. Before the recently-announced increases, newsprint sold for $126 a ton delivered in New York, while the basic Canadian price was $123 a ton.

Mr. Duplessis also referred to statements by Lord Rothermere, president of Associated Newspapers Ltd., of England, and by R. M. Fowler, president of the Newsprint Association of Canada, that a newsprint shortage is in sight. He said these statements are "part of a propaganda campaign."

Northern Grenville

Mrs. Wm. H. Gill spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Verner Hilliker at Thurso, and attended the turkey supper held in that community on Friday evening.

Miss Lillian Murray is spending this week with her sister, Mrs. E. Matthews, in Kilmar.

Mr. and Mrs. Adelard Dinnelle spent the week-end with their nephew, Mr. N. Desjardins, at Grenville.

Mrs. E. O. Bennett, Mrs. Harold Moore and family, Mrs. F. S. Cooke and family, also Miss Iris Frost, of London, England, were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. Russell Owens.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Howell, of Montreal, spent Sunday last at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Densmore. . . Miss Ethel Densmore, of Ottawa, also spent the week-end at her home.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex Bevin are now spending a holiday in Edmonton, Alta.

Mr. and Mrs. Eric Cahill, of Calumet Island, spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. B. McCart.

Mr. Howard Sproule spent the week-end with his sister, Mrs. L. Cowan.

Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Cowan, with Norma and Carol, motored to Montreal on Saturday and spent the day with Mrs. Cowan's sister, Mrs. Raymond Heath, who is leaving Montreal shortly to take up residence in Edmonton, Alta.

Congratulations to the boys and girls of Grenville High School in their basketball victory over Lachute on Friday. The boys' score was 29-18. Our special congratulations to the Grenville girls, whose score was 38-8. We hope the young players will keep up their good work.

Morin Heights

A tea and sale of Christmas cards was held in the Red Cross Room under auspices of the Guild of Trinity Church on Wednesday afternoon.

The Rev. and Mrs. H. G. Baugh attended the Molson-Faulkner wedding in Montreal on Friday evening, at St. George's Anglican Church.

The Firemen's annual dinner, with entertainment afterwards, was held at the Alpino Lodge on Thursday, November 3, and was thoroughly enjoyed by a large gathering.

A dance held in the School Auditorium on Friday evening was well attended.

The marriage of Ethel Mariane Greene, widow of the late Edwin Greene, to Herbert Lacken, of Morin Heights, took place recently in St. Matthew's Church, Hampstead, with the Rev. Canon S. Andrews officiating. The couple are now residing in Morin Heights. Congratulations are extended by their friends.

Sympathy is extended to Mrs. William B. Blair, in the death of her husband last week. The funeral service was held on Thursday, conducted by the Rev. H. G. Baugh, with interment at St. John's Cemetery, Kilkenny.

The Rev. H. G. Baugh attended the Argenteuil Ministerial Association meeting in Ste. Adele-en-haut, on Monday of this week.

Mr. and Mrs. David Wills and son, Michael, of Valois, spent the week-end with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Gillingham.

Christening Ceremonies

On Saturday evening at Trinity Anglican Church the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Grant Seale received the names William John in a baptismal service conducted by the rector, the Rev. H. G. Baugh. Sponsors were Mrs. Rudy Baumel, Messrs. Gordon Seale and Robert Earle.

At Trinity Memorial Church in Montreal on Sunday afternoon the Rev. H. G. Baugh held a baptismal service in which the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald W. Cumming received the names David William. Sponsors were Miss Mildred Pollock, of Morin Heights, and Mr. Chester Pollock, of Chatham, N.B.

Social Club And Rink Affairs At Brownsburg

Brownsburg — At this week's meeting of the Social Club, finance was reviewed, and, as always, the subject of more bowling alleys was chewed over. As always, however, it was ruefully pigeon-holed for another year. The estimates point towards perhaps $500 more spending money next year, including the new subsidy from the Company.

The club membership is on the upgrade and participation in tennis, bowling and badminton is at a new high. Shooting experienced some decline in enthusiasm.

The big point of discussion was the bingo for this Friday night. Hopes are high that a large attendance will help swell the kitty. Actually it takes a pretty fair crowd to pay for 13 turkeys!

The Rink Association have just been billed for entertainment tax on all of the season tickets. Unfortunately they will have to pay out of the coffers, and those who bought early have an additional advantage. The 14 percent tax will be applied to all future tickets, so that a child's ticket will cost $4.56 against $4. Similar increases apply to all tickets.

Home-School Speaker Next Wednesday

The Brownsburg Home and School Association meeting next Wednesday evening will feature as guest speaker Mr. Douglas Walkington, president of the Quebec Federation of Home and School Associations.

A resident of Hudson, Mr. Walkington is a C-I-L employee in Montreal, and doubtless has much in common with his prospective audience at Brownsburg. The meeting will get underway at 8 p.m.

Bell Falls

Week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. Smith were Mr. and Mrs. Albert Pearce and sons.

The Bell Falls Women's Association met on Wednesday at the home of Mrs. John MacRae.

Misses Isobel and Edith McCallum spent the week-end at their home here.

Mrs. Gerald Tomalty visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Fox, last week.

Dougal Page is presently working in Montreal. Friends wish him success.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Carruthers spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Henry Page.

Mr. Billy Fox has returned home after spending some time in the Western provinces.

Weir

Week-end guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Kerr included Mr. and Mrs. Lionel Kerr and family, of Rosemere, also Mr. and Mrs. E. Booth, of Montreal.

Mrs. R. G. Bowie was home from Val d'Or to spend a week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Craig.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Hendry and family, of Montreal, visited at Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Williams' last week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Beaven moved into their new house on the mountain last week.

Mr. Jas. Kerr renewed old acquaintances in the Eastern Townships last week, after an absence of a number of years.

Friends are pleased to see Mr. E. J. Craig home from hospital in Sherbrooke, and convalescing favorably.

Mrs. A. J. Kerr is spending a few days in Montreal, visiting friends.

Fire Destroyed Home

Sincere sympathy is extended to Mr. and Hrs. E. L. Trottier and family in the loss of their home, which was completely destroyed by fire on Friday evening.

Service in the Church of the Redeemer will be Holy Eucharist at 11 am. Members and visitors are cordially welcome.

Remembrance Day Observances at Morin Heights

(Our District Correspondent)

Morin Heights — The Legion Remembrance Day Service followed its usual custom. Branch 171 held its annual service at 11 a.m. in the auditorium of the Protestant School, kindly loaned by the Board of Commissioners. Also, through kindness of the Officer Commanding No. 11 A.C. & W. Squadron, R.C.A.F., about 100 members of the force together with a compliment of its officers helped make this parade the success it was. The parade formed at the T-Bar and Boyd's restaurants, at 10.35 a.m., and proceeded to the Protestant School, where the colors were received by the chaplain of the Branch, Comrade the Rev. Robert Blair. The parade and civilian population then participated in the service, the two minutes' silence was observed, and buglers sounded the Last Post and Reveille — a bugler and drummer being present through the kindness of the Royal Canadian Air Force stationed here. Boy Scouts under the command of Scoutmaster Ross Gillingham, and the Cubs under Cub Leader Sgt. Peter Dyson, of the RCAF Station; the Girl Guides under the Command of their Guide Leaders, Mrs. Doris Kirkpatrick, Mrs. Henry and Miss B. Bell, and Brownies under command of Mrs. Judge and Mrs. Wilson, were also present at the service.

Returning to the village the parade halted at Trinity Church, where wreaths were deposited in the church. The parade then proceeded past the Municipal Building, where the salute was taken by the Commanding Officer at the Air Force. The parade then proceeded to the Legion Hall, where sandwiches were served through kindness of the ladies of the Legion members.

this stake is TOUGH!

The stakes surveyors use to mark land boundaries have a way of disappearing—and that can mean a whole survey has to be done over again. But now there's a new all-aluminum stake that is tough for time and weather and playful animals to handle. It won't rust, rot or weaken. And two barbs open out at right angles, underground, to prevent its being rooted out by even the most muscular bear. It's a Canadian invention, made of Canadian aluminum, by a Canadian company, to meet a typically Canadian problem.

Week at Ottawa

Mr. Howe said about 700 aircraft are engaged in bush flying in Canada but they were getting "fairly ancient" and urged Canadian aircraft builders to develop a plane to develop transportation in the north.

DeHavilland Aircraft Company of Toronto had developed the Otter and Beaver planes, but a larger carrier also was needed in the north.

The Trade Minsiter also commented on the part played by aircraft in building the DEW (Distant Early Warning) and Mid-Canada radar lines, the railway in Labrador and the Kitimat aluminum project in British Columbia.

Trade With Russia

If the United States relaxes controls on export of peaceful goods to Russia, Canada will likely follow suit.

In Washington, commerce secretary Sinclair Weeks said last Thursday that his department is preparing an initial roster of non-strategic goods which may be shipped to the Soviet bloc without advance application for a license.

Canadian trade department officials said the department welcomes the American move. If Canada relaxes control the main effect would be to permit trans-shipment from Canada of American goods no longer on the ban list.

An Ottawa official said he does not think the move — if made — would increase Canadian trade with Russia because Russia had ample supplies of the type of goods which could be shipped from Canada. In October, Trade Minister Howe said Canadian prospects with Russia are "limited" mostly because "the Russians produce the same things we do."

There would be no relaxation of regulations banning export of strategic materials.

Commission to West

The five members of the Gordon Economic Commission now are preparing for a jaunt through the Prairie Provinces and to the Pacific Coast. Before setting out from Ottawa, however, they are digesting the findings of their recent Maritimes trip, during which hearings were held at St. John's, Nfld., Halifax, Charlottetown and Fredericton.

The commissioners — charged by the government with preparing a forecast of Canada's economic prospects for the next quarter-century — begin their Western hearings at Winnipeg, November 14. Others are scheduled to begin in Regina, November 17; Edmonton, November 21; Calgary, November 24; Victoria, November 28 and Vancouver, November 30.

Their central Canada itinerary calls for sittings at Quebec City, January 16; Montreal, January 18; Toronto, January 23, and final round-up sittings in the Capital, commencing February 13.

AMONG THE CHURCHES

Ministerial Association Goes to Ste. Adele

The Argenteuil Protestant Ministerial Association met last Monday in the Protestant Church at Ste. Adele en Haut. The president, the Rev. J. R. Watson, was in the chair.

Final plans were made to observe the Universal Week of Prayer, January 2 to 6, 1956, in Brownsburg and Lachute.

The Rev. G. T. Spriggs was appointed to represent the County of Argenteuil on the Quebec Temperance League.

The Rev. P. R. Stote gave an interesting address and led discussion on the subject of Christian Character, how it develops and what are the chief enemies the individual Christian must contend with in attaining such character.

Everybody Welcome!

NOBODY wants to die!

Yet the greatest crisis of all time is at this generation's door and the vast majority ignore it. Do not delay! You May Survive Armageddon Into God's New World. That is the reassuring message of the new 384-page book bearing that title. From its opening chapter, "Proclaiming the Good News", to its last, "Individual Decision Now for Surviving Armageddon", you will be gripped with the overwhelming proof that the greatest catastrophe of all time impends and that the way of escape is at hand! Forty-two types and prophecies of the earthly heirs of the new world add documentary evidence. Read it! You will be glad you did. Sent anywhere postpaid for 50 cents.

Get the above-mentioned books from your nearest congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, or write 40 Irwin Avenue, Toronto 5, Ontario.

Gideon Speaker in District Next Sunday

Mr. Cecil Roberts, field secretary for the Gideons, will bring a message on the Gideon work, in the United Church at Morin Heights at 11 a.m. Sunday, November 13. He will speak at 3 p.m. in the Masonic Temple at St. Eustache-sur-le-Lac, and in the People's Church, Lachute (Legion Hall) on Sunday evening at 7.30.

Special Features At People's Church

This is a special week-end for the members and friends of People's Church, Lachute. . .

The evening service will feature a message from the field secretary of the Gideons, Mr. Cecil Roberts, and the latest Moody Science Film, "Time and Eternity". The former promises to be an inspirational hour with Mr. Roberts telling of the work of the Gideons and the many varied experiences resulting from their ministry. . . The latter should also prove to be an educational and challenging theme. The film is a simple explanation and application of Einstein's Theory of Relativity. It is rated as a powerful, awe-inspiring film that explores the mysteries of time with actions, too fast or too slow for the human eye to catch, captured on film with weird sound changes. A message is contained in this colored movie that appeals to reason and reaches the heart.

One and all are invited to invest their time in an evening of blessing, at the Legion Hall this Sunday.

Bible Briefs

By A.A.M.

The Bible is rich in stories, and the purpose of this series is to encourage readers to look up for themselves the Bible versions of these incidents. If there are children in the family it is suggested that the story, and the Bible verses on which it is based, be read aloud.

Who was the woman follower of Jesus, living in Joppa, who made coats and garments for the poor people who needed them? She was described as being "full of good works and acts of charity."

The small city Joppa, which was her home, was built high on a rocky prominence over one hundred feet above sea level, and about thirty-five miles from Jerusalem. It is likely that she was a woman who was fairly well-to-do, owning her own home, but without near relatives.

Because of her practical Christianity she must have been well known by the other Christians. When she fell ill and died, those whom she had helped sent for Peter, who was in Lydda, not very far away, saying "'Please come to us without delay."

Peter rose and went with the two messengers. When he came to the home of this woman, the widows who were weeping outside her room showed him the clothing she had made.

Peter insisted in going alone into the room where this woman's body was lying. He knelt down and prayed, then he said "Rise" and she opened her eyes.

When she saw Peter she sat up. He helped her to stand and together they went out to the Christians in the hallway who were stricken with grief over this woman's death. This miracle became widely known throughout Joppa and many believed in the Lord.

You can find this woman's name and this story in Chapter 9 of the Book of Acts, Verses 36 to 42.

Women's Institute Hears Interesting Talk On Dental Health

The regular monthly meeting of Lachute Women's Institute was held in the Legion Hall, Mrs. A. Bothwell giving an interesting account of the semi-annual convention. Methods of raising money for the County funds were also discussed.

It was decided to hold the Hat Modelling course during the third week of February next.

A card table is to be purchased for the library, which is now open every Thursday from 3:30 to 5 p.m. Many new books have been added. Residents of Lachute and vicinity are welcome; the fees are moderate.

Highlight of this meeting was an instructive talk given by Dr. Eric Mongeon on Fluorine and its beneficial effects in prevention of tooth decay.

A map is one of the strangest places in the world to track down tooth decay; yet that is where it was found.

At different times in the past, scientists made guesses about the possible relationship of water to the mottling of teeth. So water was the first thing to check. To their surprise an unusual substance discovered in the water was fluorine. In places where drinking water contained too much fluorine, teeth were chalky and mottled; where it did not, tooth enamel was normal.

Dr. Mongeon then described methods used by the investigators, and results obtained in the different districts. How the amount of tooth decay has been materially reduced by proper concentration of fluorine in the water intake. The cost is very little, less than 10 cents per person per year.

Dr. E. Mongeon is dental surgeon with the County Health Unit, also conducts a private practice in Lachute. His talk proved most interesting and informative.

The speaker was introduced by Mrs. Linton Armstrong, convener of Health and Welfare, and thanked by Mrs. A. Taylor.

Next meeting will be on December 6 — Christmas program, also a shower for needy families.

Quebec to Challenge Legality of Federal Order-in-Council

Quebec (CP) — Quebec Province plans to question the legality of the Federal Cabinet's order-in-council October 14 last, referring the case of Wilbert Coffin back to the Supreme Court of Canada for a recommendation.

All judicial recourses had been exhausted in the case of the 44-year-old prospector convicted of killing an American bear hunter. The Supreme Court of Canada had declined to hear his last appeal and the matter rested with the Federal Cabinet, which has the power to commute death sentences to life imprisonment or to order a new trial.

However, the cabinet, in an unprecedented move, referred the case back to the Supreme Court for an opinion on points of appeal rejected unanimously earlier by the Quebec Court of Appeals.

The Supreme Court will hear the appeal arguments December 5. In the meantime Coffin's lawyer obtained a seventh stay of execution for his client. The latest date set by the Quebec Superior Court is February 10.

Coffin was convicted of killing Richard Lindsey, 17, of Hollidaysburg, Pa. His body was found with those of his father Eugene, 47, and a friend, Albert Claar, 20.

The Nature of a Cough

Coughing can save your life. Yet too much of it, at the wrong time, may cause serious, even permanent harm.

Scientists have learned that coughing, normally, serves an important purpose. It helps remove material that obstructs or irritates our breathing passages. If we couldn't cough, we would always be in danger of choking to death. This is a real peril in patients weakened by severe illness.

On the other hand, persistent coughing can also be dangerous. A recent report in the New England Journal of Medicine noted:

"Functionally, cough itself can initiate bronchial irritation, thus beginning a cycle that may become progressively more severe."

Medical literature, the report states, is "replete with references to cases in which cough has directly or indirectly resulted in death." The most common consequences are loss of sleep, chest pains and similar annoying but not dangerous effects.

The causes of coughing are many in number. In some cases, a cough may signal the onset of a grave disease such as tuberculosis. But most coughs are transient and not of a serious nature.

Particularly common at this time of year is the cough associated with the common cold. To relieve it and the other symptoms that frequently accompany this ailment, scientists have devised potent multi-action drugs.

YOUR LIFE IS A SERMON

Your life is a sermon.

Other lives take up its theme, and so, on and on, runs your influence. You are moulding other lives as you live your own.

Is your child actually meeting Jesus in his home life, or merely hearing about Him? Do you send him to church and church school, or do you go along with him? Are your words and works fully Christian?

Your life is a sermon. And other lives will hear.

75 YEARS AGO

November 12, 1880 —

The new English Church is beginning to present a very elevated appearance.

The tower of the new paper mill is nearly completed.

On Sunday night last, John Hay, of Chatham, had three very fine lambs worried to death by dogs.

50 YEARS AGO

November 10, 1904 —

Mr. W. J. Todd and Capt. John Earle returned on Saturday from their hunting expedition back of Labelle. They were successful in landing seven fine deer during their stay of 17 days.

25 YEARS AGO

November 14, 1930 —

St. Andrews East has gone "dry" without a vote, as nearly every cistern in the place is empty or nearly so. Some who live near the North River have run pipes into the stream and have been pumping from that usually ample supply, but the river seems inclined to favor the dry side of the question and the pipes have had to be put in lower.

The 1st Lachute Troop of Boy Scouts recently commenced work in their toy repair shop.

Lady Curlers Hold Semi-Annual Meeting

The semi-annual meeting of the Ladies' Curling Club was held on Monday afternoon. Mrs. R. P. Fraser, vice-president, occupied the chair.

Play gets underway next week, the turkey bonspiel being the first event.

The following ladies played in friendly games at Royal Montreal Curling Club on Tuesday: Mrs. L. W. York (skip), Mrs. G. A. Muir, Mrs. D. MacKimmie, Mrs. E. W. Rodger

An opening buffet supper for all members is scheduled for Wednesday, November 16.

Gladiolus Grower Helped Worthy Cause

A cheque having been acknowledged by Col. E. Emmett, president of the Lachute Association for Retarded Children — the donor, Mr. Lem Hammond, East Ward, wishes to pass on this acknowledgment to friends who co-operated. Following is the message to those concerned:

Many thanks to the friends who called for flowers during the past summer and who by their generosity (since no price was asked) made it possible for me, after deducting growing expenses, to hand Col. E. Emmett a cheque for $31.60 for benefit of the Retarded Children of our district.

Visitors and tourists from Montreal, New York, Philadelphia, Detroit, etc., joined local friends most heartily in assisting the above cause. Thanks again.

Catholic Women's League

The monthly meeting of the Lachute Sub-division of the Catholic Women's League was held Monday evening at the Health Unit, with the president, Miss Lydia Lowe, in the chair.

The secretary, Mrs. C. McGill, read the minutes and the treasurer, Miss L. Harrison, gave her report.

The president thanked the convener, Mrs. I. Oswald, and all the other members for their co-operation in the recent food sale. The ladies voted to sell raffle tickets on a fruit-cake in aid of the Lachute Association for Retarded Children.

It was voted to hold a social evening in the near future, for the members and their families.

The president welcomed six new members to the League.

The meeting was adjourned, after which refreshments were serv'd.

Cdn. Heavyweight Crown Goes to Parker, of Barrie

SPORTS CAMERA
By Milt MacPhail,
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The biggest punch to hit Canadian boxing in several years was uncorked last week by heavyweight champion Earl Walls. He knocked himself into retirement and the blow is still echoing in fistic circles.

Walls said he retired because he thought a man raising a family and engaging in other business should not risk being injured. He also disclosed that he never really had any great desire to fight and that only the lure of quick profitable paydays kept him in the ring. Earl was careful with his ring earnings and saved enough to get himself started in a couple of businesses.

But that doesn't blunt the surprise of his announcement. Most fighters don't quit until the forceful reminder from Father Time that the punch and reflexes are gone. And many without financial foresight finish broke and bitter.

The pattern doesn't fit Walls, the native of Windsor, Ont., who gained fistic success on two continents.

There are other facts which Walls himself concedes run against the grain of ring rules. He is 27, comparatively young for a boxer, and is in good condition. World champion Rocky Marciano is 29. Ring Magazine, boxing's bible, ranks Walls the fifth leading contender for Marciano's title.

Moreover, Walls retired on the eve of a bout in England with Ewart Potgieger, the giant South African. A victory would have been one of the biggest in Wall's career and conceivably would have led the way to a shot at Marciano.

Walls knew and felt the door open for a possible comeback.

Meantime, Canada's heavyweight crown is vacant with only one logical contender, James J. Parker, of Barrie, Ont. Parker lost a close decision to Walls once and has agreed to take Wall's place against South African Ewart Potgeiger in London, England, November 15.

SPARK BOMBERS TO PLAYOFF BERTH

GERRY JAMES LORNE BENSON

—Central Press Canadian Photos

Credit for Blue Bombers' 24-13 victory over B. C. Lions goes to this pair of young native Winnipeggers. In clinching the third and last playoff position in the WIFU, Bombers were sparked by homebrews Gerry James and Lorne Benson. The 21-year-old James scored two majors and bulled his way for 142 yards to set a new Conference ground-gaining record of 1,079 yards. Fullback Benson also starred on the ground, plowing for 81 yards besides scoring one T.D. James' record later was eclipsed by Edmonton's Normie Kwong, who now has 1,250 yards.

Canada's Mister Hockey

Foster Hewitt doesn't need any introduction to Canadians. Enough to say that he's on hand once again to broadcast the National Hockey League games every Saturday night — a weekly assignment he's had since the Maple Leaf Gardens opened in 1931. Hewitt holds a world's record for length of service in broadcasting; he started in 1923 when he was eighteen, and shortly afterwards made the first broadcast of a hockey game in Canada. Ever since then he's been so closely associated with the game that he is as well known to hockey fans as any of its greatest players. While in college he was an undefeated boxing champion, and has written many books on hockey.

Down the Alley

By S-T-RIKE

The Flukers, captained by George Gordon and receiving strong bowling from the women members of his team, vaulted into a tie with Fina Garage for first place in the Mixed Commercial League last week, when they trounced Kingsbeer 7 to 0.

Marion Mason, Odette Labelle and Freda Gordon all put together one good string to spell out a crushing defeat for the highly touted Kingsbeer entry, who now find themselves buried in eighth place in the league standings.

John Deere, as a result of a 7 to 0 swamp over Windsor Hotel, are all alone in third position, while Lachute Lumber, in taking 5 out of 7 from La Ruche, hold down the fourth slot.

Other results for the record were: Molson's, 5 to 2 over Hotel Hebert; Ink Spots 7 to 0 against Lamarche Furniture. Lachute Tourist Inn rounded out the night's play by taking all points from Giles Publishing House. Dominion Prime Wood and Fina Garage were idle. Lachute High had no opposition, and automatically gained 7 points.

Jim Duncan, who hasn't been coming through with any big scores of late, still managed to cop the high triple laurels last week, when he rolled a 433.

Howard Ward came up with a 152 single, to lead in that category.

Larraine Carriere of Lachute Lumber and Freda Gordon of Flukers topped the women with a single of 140 and a 355 for three, respectively.

Standings and top bowlers, as released by Eileen Morrison, recorder, are as follows:

Lachute High School Sports and Activities

By Eileen Dwyer

Basketball

On Friday, November 4, the Intermediate teams competed against Grenville's teams.

The girls lost 35-5 in a very exciting game.

Girls scoring points for Lachute were as follows: Rosalind Croucher 2, Marjorie Hay 6.

The following girls piled up points for Grenville: G. McMichael 17, E. McVicar 6, B. Stewart 5, B. Bigelow 3, C. Barclay 4.

The boys came out second best in their game, a fast and furious encounter. The score was 29-20 in favor of Grenville.

The following boys scored for Lachute: B. Campbell 8, K. Underhill 2, T. Bazinet 4, B. Swail 2, M. O'Brien 4.

Scorers for Grenville were: D. Cowan 20, W. Crooks 3, B. Thomas 2, L. Paige 2, and S. Crooks 2 points.

J. Prophet and B. Cribb refereed for both games.

On Saturday, games were held in Ste. Agathe, Lachute Seniors vs. Ste. Agathe Seniors, both matches being refereed by B. Cribb and Mr. Swail.

In the girls' game, which ended 53-19 for Lachute, the local points were won by — E. Touchette 20, A. Copeland 12, B. Underhill 13, J. Davis 6, J. Steele 2.

The credit for Ste. Agathe's points goes to the following girls — B. Hoyer 11, S. O'Neill 2, C. Edwards 6.

Lachute's guards did excellent work in miminizing their opponents' score.

The boys' game was very close. For the greater part the teams were tied, but at the very end Ste. Agathe drew ahead 54-50.

Lachute boys scored points as follows: M. Cairns 23, W. Berry 5, W. Bradford 2, R. Stansfield 4, A. Gauley 8, B. McDonald 8.

Ste. Agathe scorers were: T. Cole 22, Kjell Haughland 12, D. Beattie 4, Kaare Haughland 8, B. Wong 4, M. Prevost 2, B. Vander Swan 2.

Mr. Swail and B. Cribb also refereed this game.

Junior Football

On Saturday afternoon the Lachute High Junior footballers defeated a team from Van Horne, of Montreal, 11-0. This was the second consecutive win for the Lachute team, as they won the previous week in Montreal by a score of 12-5.

Led by Del MacTavish at quarterback, the Lachute team played very sound football in both games. The spirit displayed by the Lachute team was very noticeable and players such as Bryon Noble, Malcolm MacDonald, and Ronnie Gauley were very strong on the line.

The outstanding play of the game was the touchdown scored by Earl McCaskill. Receiving a kick on the Van Horne 40-yard line, he ran the rest of the way past eight Van Horne players for the 5 points. Ronnie Cairns and Wayne Laurin played well at halfbacks, and Ronnie made several remarkable catches. Football is a team game, and all boys receive great credit for this victory.

Line-up — Centres, Sandy Jones, Randolph Noble; Guards, Bryan Noble, Malcolm MacDonald, Jimmy McCrae, Ronny Peters; Ends, Ronald Gauley, Earl McCaskill, Frank Karch, Billy Damant.

Halfbacks, Wayne Laurin, Ronnie Cairns, Wayne Langille, David Rowe, Peter Riddell.

It is requested that School News be received earlier in the week for publication.

1st Lachute Troop Boy Scout News

At the weekly Tuesday night Scout meeting, many changes took place. Gordon Higginson, a former member of the Hawkesbury Troop, joined the local unit. Earl McCaskill, of the Wolf Patrol, and Bruce Hay of the Bulldogs, became Seconds of their patrols.

In the race for the honor pennant, which is given out after every two months, the Eagle Patrol leads with 319 points, followed by Fox 303, Bulldog 298, Wolf 254.

This year a Toy Shop will be conducted at Albright's Garage — Mr. Albright having kindly allowed the Scouts to use these premises. Toys are to be repaired and distributed among the poorer children at Christmas. Anyone who has old, broken toys is asked to contact Mr. Tom Smith (tel. 1264-J-2) or Mr. Fred Stansfield (tel. 37-J).

On Tuesday night, November 1, Mr. Tom Smith was installed as Scoutmaster of the 1st Lachute Troop, the ceremony being performed by Dist. Com. Linton W. Armstrong. Also five new Scouts were invested: Frank Karch, Wayne Laurin, Terry Scott, Roger Titman, and Douglas MacKenzie.

Outdoor Roundup

with Joe Foster

It was getting on in the afternoon and dusk was already falling as a deer hunter down Moncton way, in New Brunswick, wended his way out of the bush to where he'd left his car. There were only a scant few days of legal white-tail shooting left and he still hadn't filled his license. In the uncertain light that prevails just before night takes over from day, he spied a bulky object on the edge of a clearing just ahead. Convinced that this was the big buck he'd been trying to catch up with all day, he squeezed off a couple of shots — only to find, to his embarrassment and chagrin, that he'd shot up his own automobile.

Nearer to Home

Just recently The Lachute Watchman carried a report of a party of Montreal hunters arriving in town with a doe over one fender of their car and a Holstein calf lashed to the other, a sight that got a well-deserved guffaw from the local citizenry. It is to be hoped that that calf had been paid for; or how else could anyone have the effrontery to brazen out such stupidity!

Look Before You Shoot

These two incidents, humorous as they may sound in the telling, could just as easily have ended in tragedy and the loss of a human life. I can see the raised and quizzical eyebrows of the expert and experienced bushmen, but they too are just as much morally obliged to exercise every possible care in gun handling, as are the novices and newcomers to the sport. Long familiarity with hunting weapons, a keenly developed enthusiasm for the chase and lightning-quick reflexes sometimes get the old timers into trouble. Like the time a seasoned native and deer hunter from the Megantic district over by the Maine border, shot and killed a woodcutter's horse.

One for the Book

This tale as told to me over lunch the other day by Bill Gulline, well known tier of trout and salmon flies, is one for a collection of hunting accident anecdotes that I'm compiling and which because it takes a little while to set the stage for the strange happenings, I'll have to save for another column. With Bill was Terry Thomas, roving overseas sales representative for the Millward tackle people. Bill and Terry had just come back from a very successful week-end of partridge shooting at Megantic, where Bill reports the birds to be quite plentiful this year. A report which contrasts with the spotty shooting in other parts of the Townships, Laurentians and Eastern Ontario.

Red for Rover

If you hunt with a good dog, as this column has advocated on several occasions, you must from time to time have been troubled as I have by some measure of anxiety for the safety of your canine hunting companion. Right now we are more than a little sensitive to the ever-present possibility of losing a valuable dog to the gun of some over-eager nimrod, since we acquired a Weimaraner. These dogs with their all over silver-gray coloring could only too easily be mistaken in the bush for a small deer. A bell on the collar, which when it stops tinkling indicates a "point", is one form of insurance, but not enough. Now we are working out a pattern for a red or orange hunting coat.

Not So Dull, Either

And it won't be the first time that a hunting dog has worn such a garment to identify him to those who pull a trigger on anything that moves. Talking of hunting safety, Reminton's Henry Davis in discussing the ten commandments of safe gun handling, suggests the observance of two of these would eliminate more than 90% of all hunting accidents. These two simple to observe precautions are: "Treat EVERY gun with the respect due to a LOADED gun", and "NEVER point a gun at ANYTHING you do not want to shoot."

Eskimos Attending Technical Institute

A 19-year-old Eskimo who is studying in Winnipeg may be the first of his people to become a fully-qualified watch repairman. Charles Soupay, who comes from Aklavik, N.W.T., is now enrolled at the Manitoba Technical Institute, where he is learning the intricate skills of the trade he hopes to follow.

A fellow resident from Aklavik, Stephen Firth, an Indian, recently learned how to operate crawler shovels in Montreal and Cedar Rapids, Iowa. When his course was completed he returned to Aklavik, to help move the townsite to its new location.

These two men are among a number of northern Canadians who take vocational training in the "south" under a plan jointly administered and financed by the Department of Northern Affairs and National Resources, and the government of the Northwest Territories.

All told, 50 northern Canadian men and women are at the present time taking advantage of the plan which provides them with free tuition, transportation and keep. They are enrolled in 20 courses, ranging from dressmaking to electronics. Some are studying to be forest rangers, some nurses' aides and some mechanics. Although most are taking training in Alberta, there are a number in Ontario, Manitoba and the Territories. Two are in Iowa and one in Saskatchewan. Most of them will work in the north when their courses are finished.

The primary objective of the vocational training plan, according to Hon. Jean Lesage, Minister of Northern Affairs, is to provide local skilled labor in the north. "Only a few years ago there was little demand for many types of skilled help in even the more settled areas of the Northwest Territories", Mr. Lesage said. "Today, with the frontiers being pushed back, skilled help is in greater demand."

Applicants for training under the plan have to be recommended by the local school principal and their qualifications examined by experts in vocational training.

Future prospects in the north look bright for the trainees. Some have already shown exceptional skill in the trades they are learning, and all will be better fitted to play a significant part in the development of Canada's northland.

'Fidelio' - Radio Actuality From Vienna Opening

A new era for the Vienna State Opera began November 5 with a performance of Beethoven's Fidelio in the newly re-built Opera House in the Ringstrasse. More than 30,000 applications for tickets were received, some accompanied by blank signed cheques; from these 2,595 were carefully selected for the honor of attending the re-opening of the House which had been closed since it was almost totally destroyed by bombs and fire on March 12, 1945.

CBC Wednesday Night offers a box seat at this gala affair (worth $200 or more to a Viennese) to Trans-Canada network listeners — from 7.30-10 p.m. on November 16.

A transcription made at the opening, with a commentary prepared for the CBC by Charles Wassermann will be presented as a "delayed actuality", only 11 days after the actual performance.

In an article in the November Holiday magazine W. H. Heinsheimer, himself an ex-Viennese, describes the destruction of the Vienna Opera House: "Bombs obliterated the stage and auditorium and left only the outer walls and a few staircases . . . The fire, unchecked for hours, destroyed everything from powerful steel beams to the intricate stage machinery, and brought the roof crashing down. The whole interior, one of the largest theatres in the world, covering over 100,000 square feet, was turned into a gigantic heap of debris, which included the ashes of 15,000 costumes, 4,000 wigs, 2,000 pairs of shoes and the scenery and props for 140 operas and 28 ballets."

The cost of reconstruction was 10 million dollars, a huge sum for the little country of Austria, hard-hit by wartime bombing, looting and occupation by four conquering armies. "Yet", Heinsheimer goes on, "the first thing the city set out to do, almost before the smoke of war had cleared, was to rebuild the opera house, and to make it more beautiful and lavish than Franz Josef I, ruler over the great Austro-Hungarian empire, had done when he built the original in the peaceful, prosperous 1860's."

The rebuilding took over nine years, but the result is a magnificent structure worthy of Vienna's pride.

Whither Local Govm't In Rural Areas ?

Farm Radio Forum on November 14 will consider the question of local government in rural areas — its functions, value and effectiveness.

One of the speakers will be Professor W. B. Baker, director of the School of Agriculture at the University of Saskatchewan. He is a chairman of the Royal Commission on agriculture and rural life in Saskatchewan which is just completing a three-year investigation of the province's agricultural set-up, and planning a 25-year pattern of development. One of its recommendations concerns local government, where functions have changed but the set-up remains the same. Should people be involved themselves in hospital and school boards, for example, or merely contribute the money to run them?

Other members of the discussion panel will be Eric Hardy, secretary of the Citizens' Research Institute of Canada in Toronto; L. Jasper, a farmer from Mildmay, Ontario, who takes an active part in his local government and in the school board; and chairman Dr. Norman High, director of the diploma course at Ontario Agricultural College.

FINDS MANY ESKIMOS NATURALLY ARTISTIC

Toronto (CP) — Seventy per cent of Canada's Eskimos take part in artistic activities which provide them with auxiliary income, the Women's Canadian Club was told.

James Houston, head of Eskimo projects for the Department of Northern Affairs and Natural Resources, said Eskimo carvings possess an almost unique knowledge of anatomy. He attributed the feeling in the carvings to the tightly knit family circles of the northern natives.

Tips on Touring

By Carol Lane

Women's Travel Authority

Car accessory manufacturers have a number of gadgets and gimmicks up their sleeves which are designed to make car travel safer, more convenient and more pleasant for today's motorists.

For car comfort, there's a handy electric shaver which plugs conveniently into the cigarette lighter. If the man of the house dashes out too fast to get his morning shave, he can have it in the car while his wife drives him to the train or office.

Are you an inveterate car snacker? There's an easy-to-install car tray for handy auto eating. It also serves as a writing desk, a make-up table and a utility table for mothers travelling with infants.

Whether you're looking for car gadgets to amuse, amaze or aid, you'll find them at your local car appliance shop.

YOUNG EXPERT

Sudbury, Ont. (CP) — Bill Livingston, 13, started playing the bagpipes at age four, under the guidance of his bagpipe-loving father. To the gold and silver medals he has won in many contests, Bill has just added the prizes for junior and open contests in local games.

Pipers must learn to read music, and Bill Junior was so advanced that he was able to transpose music from books to blank manuscript when he started school. At seven, he was rated the youngest piper in Canada.

Soup's On!

Consumer Section,
Canada Dept. of Agriculture
Marketing Service

When chill November winds begin to blow, steaming hot soup steps in to take the place of cold appetizers as a "curtain raiser" at meal time. Yes, now is the time to start including soup on the family menu, and it is a good idea to fit the type of soup to the particular meal. If the rest of the meal is to be rich and hearty it is best to start off with a thin soup which has an enticing aroma and zestful flavor to awaken appetites. On the other hand when lighter food is to follow the soup can be more substantial. For a thin clear soup there is the choice of a bouillon or broth made from beef, veal, or fowl; or consommé which is similar to bouillon but more highly seasoned and usually made from a combination of beef, veal or chicken and vegetables. The thicker more satisfying soups include bisques — rich cream soups made from fish or shellfish; chowders — thick soups made with fish, meat or vegetables, milk and seasonings; cream soups — made with a thin cream sauce to which has been added cooked puréed vegetables, finely diced poultry or flaked fish; and lastly, unstrained soups — soup stock to which either vegetables or cereals or a combination of both have been added.

Soup may well be acclaimed for its versatility. Bouillon and consommé can act as an "elegant prelude" to a dinner or luncheon while a vegetable or cream soup can round out a meal which might otherwise be lacking in vegetable and milk. In addition to this when it is teamed with a sandwich, salad or dessert and beverage, a substantial soup can be the main-stay of the luncheon or supper for it will help to satisfy both appetite and nutritional needs. It is quite easy to imagine the taste-tempting appeal of a big bowlful of creamy chicken or turkey chowder followed by a crisp green tossed salad, warm buttered whole wheat rolls and tea, coffee or milk.

Soup is easily served and very appropriate for informal entertaining after fun and game outdoors. It will not take long to warm everyone up when steaming ham and bean soup or vegetable chowder is brought forth. Lunch box toters, too, will welcome nourishing soup these days. There are bound to be smiles galore when colorful tasty cream of tomato soup is discovered in the vacuum bottle.

It has always been felt that the secret in good soup is in cooking it very leisurely, just simmering it in fact for several hours. In this day and age of pressure cookers good soup can be made in a very short time. Of course, less water is needed as the water dos not have the same chance to boil down in a pressure cooker as in a soup kettle. As for cream soups they can be made in just a little more time than it takes to make a cream sauce. Taking even less time there is the host of canned, frozen and dried soups which are ready to serve in a twinkling.

Soup garnishes, no matter how simple, are likely to cause even those family members with the most delicate appetites to "sit up and take notice". Eye and appetite appeal can be added to a cream soup by simply sprinkling it with crisp ready-to-eat cereal, crumbled potato chips, buttered popcorn, sieved hard cooked egg yolk or grated cheese. A dollop of whipped cream to which salt or horseradish has been added is also most effective. Clear broths, bouillons and consommés can look rather plain and unappealing but here are some ideas for dressing them up, remembering that the flavor of the garnish should always blend with the flavor of the soup. Paper thin slices of raw vegetables such as carrots or onions, minced parsley, chives or green onion tops all look very attractive atop any of these clear soups as also do cooked slices of mushrooms or slices of hard cooked eggs. Hearty soups are more attractive with hearty garnishes such as crisply cooked diced bacon, thinly sliced frankfurters or smoked sausages, buttered croutons, toasted slices of French bread or grated cheese.

Finally there is the question of what to serve with soup. If the soup is to be a bright beginning to the meal, melba toast or small savoury crackers will be quite sufficient to serve with it. When soup forms the main part of the meal, accompaniments should be chosen with an eye to their ability to help satisfy the appetite, for example, small sandwiches, rye bread, French bread or hot rolls.

"With your permission, madame," said the chef, "I will read a few notes I have made on the subject of preparing vegetables for cooking.

"Scrub and rinse all root vegetables thoroughly. Wash peas, lima and all shell beans in the pod—not after poddling them.

"Wash all greens and salad plants thoroughly in cold water. After washing rinse greens to be cooked, such as spinach or kale, in warm wate to remove any grit or sand.

Use A Potato Peeler

"Cook root vegetables with the skin on if possible. If it must be removed, pare very thin; a potato peeler is good and very quick for peeling most root vegetables.

"If vegetables are to be cut in dice or juliennes, do this just before cooking, because exposure to air causes the vitamins to deteriorate.

Never allow vegetables to stand in cold water after making ready to cook. No exceptions.

Before Baking

"Scrub all vegetables to be baked. Do not peel. Dry and rub all over lightly with fat before putting into the oven.

"When winter or acorn squash is to be baked, cut or saw into halves with a meat saw. Remove the pulp and seeds. Turn upside-down on an oiled pan to bake. This keeps the pulp soft."

"There are a few things I'd like to add, chef," I said.

"When boiling or stewing vegetables add as much monosodium glutamate to the liquid as salt, to heighten that fresh, youthful flavor lost soon after harvesting. And remember, the less water the better. Pressure-cooking is the best and quickest method— three or four minutes and it's done."

Panning Vegetables

This is the best way to plain-cook vegetables top-of-the-range.

Use a pot with a tight-fitting cover. Heat-resistant glass is preferable, as one can then watch the water level.

Put in the prepared vegetable, salt, and monosodium glutamate. Add boiling water to the depth of 1 inch; cover and steam-boil until bite-tender and of bright color. The liquid should have evaporated.

Add 1 tbsp. butter (preferably unsalted) to each 2 cups of vegetable (add a squeeze of lemon or lime to a naturally sweet vegetable) or pour in ¼ cup sweet or commercial sour cream.

Tomorrow's Dinner

Cottage Cheese Vegetable Salads
Boiled Smoked Beef Tongue
Flaky Potatoes
Horseradish Sauce
Mashed Turnip
Little Fruit Plates
Coffee Tea Milk

Little Fruit Plates: Use bread and butter plates. Arrange on each a few sections, slices or pieces of chilled fresh fruits — such as melon, pears, plums, seedless grapes and banana fingers, canned pineapple fingers, orange or grapefruit sections.

Sprinkle with a mere drift of powdered confectioner's sugar.

Trick Of The Chef

Season mashed turnip with butter and a little lemon juice.

Hard-Cooked Eggs Make Versatile Supper Dish

Supper dishes are frequently the hardest main course of the day's menus to plan. Breakfast and dinner seem to offer a wider choice but too often variety is lacking at supper.

Egg dishes present a wide choice to the imaginative homemaker. For example Poultry Products Institute offer a variation on the theme of creamed hard-cooked eggs served on toast, in pastry shells, cream puff or croustads. Variety may be obtained with the creamed eggs by adding one of the following: sauteed mushrooms, cooked or canned shrimps, canned salmon, chipped beef, cooked frozen or canned peas or green beans.

The cream sauce may be altered by adding cheese or curry powder. Or, in place of cream sauce, use any one of the many canned condensed soups such as celery, mushroom, chicken, pea, etc.

Using a canned condensed tomato soup with the addition of lightly sauteed sliced onions, chopped green pepper and celery will change this egg dish into something quite different which may be served on spaghetti, noodles or rice.

Eggs cooked in the shell are at their best if cooked at a temperature below the boiling point. The whites are tender and firm rather than rubbery as when eggs are boiled.

To cook eggs in the shell the modern way, place required number of eggs in pan, cover to a depth of one inch with cold water. Bring water to a boil, turn off heat at once or set pan off burner where water will keep hot but not continue to boil. Cover pan and let stand 3 to 20 minutes, depending upon degree of doneness required. Three minutes produces a set white and soft yolk, four minutes produces a slightly set yolk and 20 minutes a hard-cooked egg. Be sure water comes to a boil before setting pan off heat. Large active bubbles should be rising to the surface. The water is only simmering when tiny, slow bubbles rise to the top. Accurate timing after the water has come to the boil is the secret of having eggs in the shell the way you want them every time.

To stop further cooking of soft eggs when removed from the pan, dip into cold water. Hard-cooked eggs should be chilled rapidly in cold running water to help prevent the dark ring from forming around the yolk. This ring may be caused by too long cooking or too high a temperature.

Marriage Problems Subject of Study By Montreal Group

Montreal (CP) — Formation of the Montreal Marriage Conselling Agency — believed first of its kind in Canada — was announced here. Rev. Angus Cameron of the Church of the Messiah is president and Mrs. Dorothy Barrier executive secretary.

The initial meeting which appointed the executive laid down a program which includes service to people whose marriages are in danger of breakdown; pre-marital counselling; development and preparation of marriage education programs for schools and colleges and on a community wide scale, and initiation of research on the present programs and training of professsional workers in the counselling field.

Creation of the centre resulted from a survey conducted by the Montreal Council of Social Agencies in 1950. The survey showed an urgent need for this type of agency, and a council committee was formed to organize the centre.

Preserve Marriages

Mr. Cameron said in a statement: "One marriage in five in North America ends in divorce." He said that while the centre is new in Canada, agencies of this description are operating successfully in Britain, the U.S., and some European countries.

He said the centre will provide a sympathetic ear to the differences and grievances between man and wife that they cannot usually bring themselves to discuss with others. This in turn will allow the husband and wife to view their problems in perspective.

The aim of the centre is to preserve marriages, he said and where possible, to help all comers with their marital and pre-marital problems.

Precision Parking for Curb-Seeking Driver

By Carol Lane

Parking parallel to the curb in a narrow space seems to hold terrors for many a woman — yet it's as easy as running your carpet sweeper under a couch, and involves exactly the same principles.

Just remember that the rear wheels of your car, like the wheels of your carpet sweeper, do not turn. So to manoeuvre the rear end of the car where you want it, you must swing the front end around, much as you swing the handle of the sweeper.

Bearing this comparison in mind, follow these simple steps next time you have to squeeze into a tiny space between two cars:

(1) Measure the space by drawing alongside, making sure it is at least three feet longer than the length of your car.

(2) Drive forward so that the rear bumper of your car is at the end of the parking space.

(3) Shift to reverse and back up slowly, turning the steering wheel clockwise. This swings the front (the "handle") end of the car out and swings the hard-to-manoeuvre rear wheels in.

(4) When the rear wheel is two feet from the curb, twist the steering wheel hard in the opposite direction, and the car will ease neatly into the space.

And don't forget to play extra safe when parking on a hill. Set the emergency brake firmly, and leave the car in gear (low gear when headed up hill, reverse when headed down.)

A leading bedding manufacturer is now producing buoyant pillows filled with synthetic fibre for those who are allergic to feathers. They measure a standard 20 x 26 inches and weigh about 22 ounces and they're covered with a closely woven brown-and-white cotton ticking. According to a test by the manufacturer, another advantage of this type of pillow is that it can be bundled off to a commercial laundry when cleaning is necessary.

DUTCH DIETICIAN HAS WIDE CAREER

Ottawa (CP) — A Dutch nutritionist who was instrumental in founding the International Dietetics Association now is teaching diet therapy in an Ottawa hospital.

Diane Ten-Haaf, 39, says she took the job "to widen my experience". She spent last year in Australia and in 1952 studied public health at Harvard University.

Her breadth of interest in her career stemmed from the bleak final year of German occupation of her homeland in 1944, when she became the youngest president of the Netherlands Dietetic Association, a job she held until 1950.

She toiled through Holland's starvation winter of 1944-45 caused by the railway strike ordered by the Netherlands government in exile as a weapon against the Germans.

With liberation came Canadian, British and American medical teams and she worked with them in rehabilitating the civilian population.

"After those years when we had been so confined, it was wonderful to talk to those scientists and find out what had happened in dietetics throughout the world," she said in a recent interview.

FOR PARENTS ONLY...

Hurting Others

(Copyright) — By NANCY CLEAVER —

Have you ever gone to the window to see how your Junior and his small neighbor Tommy are playing together in the said pile, just in time to see Junior lift his little shovel and give the unsuspecting Tommy a vigorous bat over the head? What have you done about it?

A mother is usually annoyed and dismayed when she sees her child hurt another child. Her usual reaction is to rush to the scene of action, comfort the sobbing victim, and scold her youngster for his cruel behaviour. Her son certainly must not grow up to be a little savage!

Perhaps he didn't realize that he was inflicting much pain on Tommy. Junior may have been experimenting. He wanted to see what Tommy would do if he gave him a wallop. Or Tommy may have been in his way. Junior had told him a couple of times to get out of the road of the tunnel he was digging. Tommy had acted as if he didn't hear. So this was Junior's method of making Tommy, who was smaller than him, do as he was told.

Mother may find the weeping Tommy insists on going home to mother. She will do well to take her son indoors, remove his shovel from him, and tell him firmly, "You cannot hurt Tommy. Mother will put your shovel away until you can play with it in the sand and not hit another child over the head!"

Likely Junior will learn this lesson that he cannot harm others without severe punishment. Some parents think that if their child shows his hostility to another by hitting, or worse still, by pulling hair, or kicking or biting or scratching, that they will cure him by treating him in the same way. A mother may boast, "I made him know what it feels like — and then I stood over him and forced him to apologize." This strong-arm method may seem to work, but it doesn't remove the cause of the child's behaviour.

Why has he hurt his companion? Children have reasons for their actions. It is natural for a mother to want to excuse her youngster. If, as she sooths the hurt child she says of her own boy, "Junior didn't know he was going to hurt you so much!" or "I guess Junior is getting too tired and that's why he gave you a bang. It is time he came indoors and had a little rest before his meal."

It is true that a very young child may hurt another unintentionally. Junior may be so absorbed in having his turn to go whizzing down a sider that he may land on Ann. slide that he never stops to con-She is rather slow-moving and is still sitting on the ground at the bottom of the slide right in his way. She should have gotten out of the road.

This kind of hurting is an accident. But the slide for small children must be supervised until Junior learns that he cannot take his turn until the way is clear. Mother may try to impress on him that he must take care in his play not to hurt another child. Responsibility for another's safety rests rather lightly on the shoulders of a member of the "Small Fry"!

But it is quite possible he knew what he was doing. If a child often hurts another child, and seems to get pleasure in this anti-social action, then the mother is indeed concerned. She can do a lot indirectly to give sufficient supervision, that the aggressive hurting action is avoided. When Junior is annoyed at Tommy's refusal to move, mother can give an "assist" in carrying out this reasonable request, or she may divert the children's attention by suggesting another play activity.

Perhaps Junior is bursting with energy and needs more physical outlets for his aggressiveness. If he is occupied with climbing equipment, a swing, a big ball to kick, or pounding board, he is not so likely to be pushing his chums around or hurting them. Satisfaction in these activities may prevent him from indulging in getting his fun out of hurting others.

No parent wants his child to grow into a sadistic adult who gets pleasure in making others squirm. Grown-ups do not clout another over the head. But by the weapons of ridicule and sarcasm, they do reveal inner hostility and the desire to harm another. Be sure you save your child from forming the habit of inflicting pain on another and getting a kick out of it!

Garden-Graph

Mortality among newly planted evergreens is frequently caused by lack of moisture at their roots. It is often the result of the trees not being staked. When left unstaked, strong winter winds may loosen the roots in the soil before they have had time to become firmly established.

A method of bracing tall evergreens is shown in the accompanying Garden-Graph. Use three guy wires staked at even distances around the tree. Protect the bark of the tree trunk by running the wires through sections of rubber hose. Anchor the guy wires to stakes driven solidly into the ground, and notched to prevent the wires slipping.

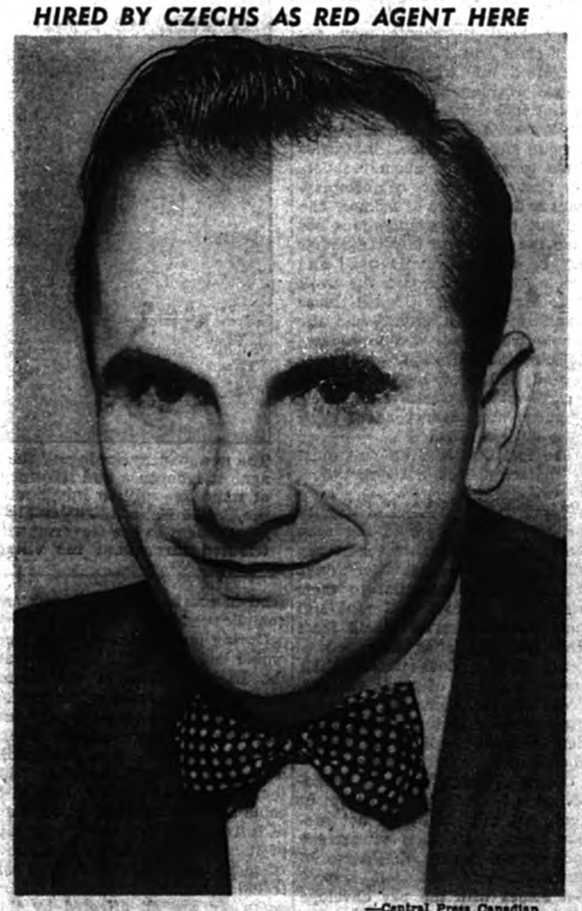

It is important to the future of the tree to have the loop of cable large enough to allow for the growth of the tree trunk, as shown in the Garden-Graph.

Evergreens are never dormant and throughout the winter give off moisture. Therefore, they must be well supplied with water before the ground freezes.

As soon as the ground has frozen, mulch evergreens with a strawy manure to help conserve their underground supply of moisture. Extend the mulch well beyond the spread of the branches.

Evergreens planted in exposed positions will require a windbreak on the exposed side to protect them against winter burning by wind and sun. Burlap, canvas or heavy cheesecloth stretched on stakes will make a good windbreak.

School Board Meeting At Morin Heights

(Our District Correspondent)

Morin Heights — The Protestant School Board met in session last Monday to adjust the various valuation rolls of the School Municipality. Present were the chairman, the Rev. H. G. Baugh, Mrs. M. A. Dey, N. Kirkpatrick, F. T. Watchorn, Geo. Watchorn with A. Hamilton, secretary-treasurer.

A lengthy discussion was held, as facts were produced to show that Mille Isles had not paid a fair proportion of the school expenses. The secretary was asked for certain figures and he stated that during the past five years Morin Heights had paid in towards the school costs the sum of $81,644, whereas Mille Isles during the same period had paid in only $28,734, and out of this had to be taken the sum of $10,000, cost of transportation for their children — which meant that during the five-year period Mille Isles had only paid $18,734 towards the cost of educating their children.

Various other figures were also produced to show that past methods of trying to adjust the valuation rolls were antiquated, and that some new system should be tried. N. Kirkpatrick made the motion that the valuation rolls be adjusted on the same basis as last year. This was followed by an amendment by Commissioner Geo. Watchorn, that Mille Isles and the Cote valuation rolls remain as presented by the municipalities, but that the valuation roll of Morin Heights be reduced by 35%, and a mill rate be set to cover the costs of the budget. . . The chairman then put the amendment to the vote and Commissioners N. Kirkpatrick, M. A. Dey and F. T. Watchorn voted against the amendment, which left the original motion as carried. Commissioner Geo. Watchorn was the only member to vote for his amendment.

Fire Brigade Celebration Enjoyed at Morin Hts.

(Our District Correspondent)

The annual dinner dance of the Morin Heights Fire Brigade under Chief Henry Gillingham was held November 3 at the New Alpine Lodge. The brigade, their wives and guests, numbering about 100 persons, enjoyed an excellent dinner of barbecue chicken, after which a program of dancing, entertainment, fun and prizes, was enjoyed. Excellent entertainment was supplied by Joyce and Jimmy Murphy, ever-popular vocalists of Morin Heights; Shandu, "man of mirth and mystery", ably supported by those comical characters of music, Warren and the New Tones. The highlight of the evening was Joyce, in her wonderful rendition of "Over the Rainbow", while swinging from a gaily decorated trapeze. Responsible for the decorations and program were — P. Whalley, B. Stoecker, P. Poirier, E. Firn, Ray's Service Station, A. Vaillancourt and C. Baumel, who also acted as m.c. Prizes were won by Mrs. K. McPhee, Mrs. A. Vaillancourt, Mrs. C. Moore and Marcel Girard.

HUGE ICE FLOE IS CANVAS FOR ARTIST OF RCN

There must have been a former advertising man aboard this RCN helicopter when it landed on an Arctic ice floe. Seeing so much blank space, he wrote the name of his ship and showed some artistic talent, then hovered above to admire his handiwork. The helicopter is from HMCS Labrador, which has been on radar station duty in the Aretic since June.

Study of Seasonal Unemploym't Here

Seasonal Unemployment

What are the main reasons of seasonal unemployment in our district? Winter interrupts agriculture and puts a stop to construction. The canning industry must obviously operate largely in the summer and fall when fresh fruits and vegetables are available. On the other hand, woodcutting is largely a winter industry, for, snow makes bush transportation easier and the spring thaw is depended upon to provide high water for the log drives. These are not the only industries affected by seasonal declines. Employment in retail trade reaches a peak at Christmas. Most of us do a lot of special shopping at that time. This special shopping is primarily connected with Christmas and not with the weather. In other words, there are really two causes of seasonal unemployment. One is our climate and the other is our customs and traditions like buying gifts at Christmas, or new clothes at Easter, or starting to build a house in the Spring.

We pointed out above that the number of unemployed in our locality is presently at 250. Before we know it, a few building contractors will be thanking their carpenters, bricklayers, laborers and painters for their services, saying that all their projects are completed and that they will probably call them back next Spring. This same situation repeats itself regularly each year at this time. This is particularly true of construction and the same applies to agriculture, or industries where work must be done out of doors.

Our local merchants may ask themselves why they should be so interested in what happens to people working in construction or similar industries.

We must realize that unemployment in any of our local industries tends to set up a chain reaction. The first consequence of unemployment is the absence of income. The lad out of work simply does not have the money to buy the things that he and his family need and which are made through the work of other people. Those things therefore, remain unsold and the people who make these products find that their efforts are no longer needed and they too find themselves out of work. This circle broadens until every one of us is more or less affected.

The fact that it is only seasonal in character does not only affect the original group. They may have suffered from restricted incomes for only a short period but very frequently, during that time, they will have incurred debts for things that are really essential to their lives, such as food and rent and these debts must be repaid from their earnings after they recommence work. Consequently, their future purchases of goods and services too are decreased and the effect of their period of unemployment extends beyond the period when they were out of work.

Unemployment Insurance benefits are a blessing to people out of work, but they really do not provide much more than subsistence and do not satisfy the sense of accomplishment and self respect that comes with the pay envelope or cheque that is earned. The Unemployment Insurance Plan was not instituted to provide an income whereby unemployed could live as comfortably as when they are working. Such economy would tend to create other problems and complications.

During the months between December last year and April this year, the Lachute office of the Unemployment Insurance Commission issued 12,023 cheques to the unemployed of the district. These cheques totalled up to a sizeable amount of money, but where did that money come from? Part of it came from the employees, and part of it from their employers, and part of it came from the Federal Government funds which had been collected from all of us as taxes. There again we are all affected by this seasonal unemployment.

Elimination of seasonal unemployment would not merely spread the same amount of work over the whole year instead of just part of the year. On the contrary, it is evident that in reducing seasonal unemployment, which occurs mainly in the winter, we will provide more jobs and more work for our locality year round. In looking at our immediate surroundings, we will see that the service stations will sell more gas and oil, the grocers and butchers will sell more food, the dairies will sell more milk and ice cream, and the list could go on indefinitely. In short, everyone of us would progress more rapidly and a sounder prosperity would develop among our population.

Next week's article will deal with the "Problem of Winter Unemployment in Construction."

Leo Dolan Defends Press Criticism On Shortcomings of Tourist Trade

The quick-kill days of the tourist trade are over and the Canadian tourist operator who criticizes the press for adverse comment had better improve his services and facilities.

This was the main theme of Leo Dolan's talk before the recent annual meeting of the Canadian Tourist Association in Ste. Adele, Que. Dolan is director of the Canadian Government Travel Bureau.

"I think the time has come," he said, "when somebody in this industry should speak out plainly on this question of criticism of our tourist industry. As an old newspaperman, I think I should tell you at the outset, that there is no percentage to be gained in feuding with the press — newspapers, magazines or trade papers.

"The tourist industry is essentially a servicing industry. As it is, we at once submit ourselves to criticism — good, bad and indifferent."

"No servicing industry — or any other industry for that matter — can win a controversy with a newspaper writer," Dolan continued. "The editor will always have the last word and I'm not at all disturbed over that situation, either."

Knowing the integrity and honesty and responsible outlook of Canada's newspaper and magazine editors, I am very happy to leave the situation that way."

Big Enough

The poor publicity that resulted from a critical article in Maclean's Magazine was, Dolan maintained, a "useful service for the tourist industry." The tourist industry, he said, is big enough to face the fact that it must root out the causes for such poor publicity.

"What I am afraid of," he continued, "is that a great many who are directly cafering to the tourist trade have not yet realized some basic elements of good salesmanship."

"We may think that the attitude of certain salespeople, inn-keepers, gas station attendants, hotel and motel operators in the United States is somewhat superficial, but, I submit that it makes you feel you are somebody important to them when they are serving you."

Canadian tourist operators should pay more attention to the advertising of competitive touris tinterests, Dolan emphasized. They should realize that every potential American customer is being urged to go to every part of Canada . . that when a United States citizen is finally sold on visiting Canada, the tourist operator should see that the tourist isn't disappointed with his choice of vacationland.

"I urge you to take steps that may result in an agitation for improved Canadian services and facilities, remembering that you can never offer a sufficiently exotic setting to offset a lack of simple creature comforts and cordiality"

Armistice Day Throng Acknowledges Debt to Community's Fallen Warriors

Thanks to the initiative and planning of Legion Branch 70, Remembrance Day was again adequately observed here, in ceremonies at the Memorial Park last Friday. The program followed its customary procedure, with one or two innovations. These latter included the presence of a reserve field battery crew, who discharged a 25-pound gun nearby to signify the two-minutes silence, and to terminate the silence. Meanwhile the color-bearers dipped their flags, and Last Post and Reveille were sounded over the public address system.

The gun-fire was an impressive addition to the routine; however, the salute back-fired to a degree, since the first boom of the cannon came unannounced, and excitement among the children detracted from the solemnity of the period, largely nullifying its purpose. In other details, however, the program was efficiently planned throughout.

The parade from the Legion Hall to the Memorial Park was led by four pipers and two drummers, followed by the Legion color party, veterans, 131st Field Battery, R.C.A., with two guns and tractors, Highland Cadets, Scouts, Guides, Cubs and Brownies — the High School pupils joining in the parade at Harriett Street. Parade Marshal was Comrade Bob St. Laurent. Four young Highland Cadets stood motionless at the base of the Cenotaph throughout the proceedings.

Mayor Dr. F. W. FitzGerald deposited the Lachute Town wreath at the World War II plaque, and the ceremonies then continued at the 1914-1918 War Memorial centering the park. A fair crowd of the civilian population was in evidence, and the schools were also well represented — in the case of Lachute High School, the entire faculty and all pupils attending.

Sentiments from Speakers

As initial speaker, Mayor Dr. FitzGerald addressed the gathering in both English and French. . . "Were it not for those whom we remember today, it is possible that I would not be permitted to speak to you, or you to listen," he said. Voicing the sentiments of many adult listeners, he continued:

"I am sure it is sometimes difficult for young people to appreciate why their elders take time and

Controversial Issues On the Bill For Session to Reopen January 10

THE WEEK AT OTTAWA

By Roy LaBerge, Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Nov. 14 (CP) — Fisheries Minister Sinclair — only senior member of a western government to visit Red China in recent years — held a 70-minute press conference last week, his first since his return from Russia and Red China September 26.

He told reporters the Russians held him to his agreement to visit Communist China even though he sought to return directly home after he was injured last summer in a Siberian fishing port.

His legs and back were injured August 4 when a catwalk on a dry-dock at Petropavlovsk collapsed under him. He spent a month in hospital and was still in bad shape when he left, he told reporters, but when he suggested passing up the China visit the Russians would not agree.

Route Laid Out

Mr. Sinclair said he got the Russians to let him visit Siberia only if he first arranged onward transportation through China. They told him if he visited Siberia and then returned to Moscow it would be very difficult to refuse other westerners the same privilege.

The Russians took Mr. Sinclair by fishing boat to Vladivostock, where he took a plane to Peiping, the Communist Chinese capital.

Mr. Sinclair told reporters he had learned much about the Russian fishing industry that would be of use to Canadian fishermen. It was hoped arrangements could be made for an exchange of Canadian and Soviet fisheries scientists next year.

Mr. Sinclair indicated he is not in favor of recognition of Red China, nor of the country's admission to the United Nations.

"The cat-and-mouse game the Chinese are playing makes you feel they are not quite ready for recognition," he said, referring specifically to "the dribbling out" of westerners held prisoner by the Reds.

Expect Stormy Session

Controversial issues expected to be discussed at the new session of parliament include Canada's wheat surplus, an all-Canadian natural gas pipeline and federal-provincial taxation arrangements.

Prime Minister St. Laurent announced last week, following a cabinet meeting, that the session will open January 10.

The Prime Minister did not discuss with reporters the legislation which the government plans, but subjects which have aroused much controversy in recent months likely will make the session one of the stormiest of recent years.

The government hopes the session will finish its business before June 27, when the commonwealth prime

Sewerage, Waterworks, Police and Fire Reports At Brownsburg Council

(Our District Correspondent)

Brownsburg — The placing of an order for new streetlights was the first item dealt with after the usual Council opening. The Councillors could remember only five locations which were badly needing lights, so an order for five new lights was drawn up.

Gaston Legault was present to give his official estimate for the Woodbine sewerage installation. Including 2% as the engineer's fee, the cost will be $7,866. This figure, together with the plans, will be forwarded to Quebec for approval. On this subject it was learned that the septic tank in MacVicar's field may be unsatisfactory. The rental arrangement proposed was itself unsatisfactory to most of the councillors, and they discussed at some length the possibility of running right through to the existing, unused sewer behind the wartime houses.

Fire Chief A. Robbins reported a fire in the bush at St. Antoine, which had threatened a garage, but was extinguished in half an hour. The only other fire was at Lepage's house, opposite the convent. Chief Robbins reported that it was a short chimney serving four appliances, which in his opinion constitutes a bad fire hazard. Mr. Robbins' opinion on fire matters is usually the best in town. At his request an order was placed for a heater for the fire truck. The Chief also brought to notice that single-brick chimneys are condemned by local by-laws and that anyone building them would inevitably be made to change to the accepted brick-and-tile or double-brick.

Police Chief Parent asked the Council to supply him with a copy of the Police Code, which, he says, is handier and more useful to policemen than the Criminal Code, a copy of which he had just received.

He reported issuing 17 tickets for disregard of traffic lights, four warnings and four parking tickets. There were three accidents, all minor, 19 complaints, and J. P. Larocque had his car stolen.

Chief Parent told Council that he had been invited to attend a meeting of Police Chiefs at the Seigniory Club and that he intended to go. The Councillors voted $5 towards his expenses.

Councillors E. Lavoie and J. Golphin reported that they had consulted legal counsel about undeserving welfare cases. On advice from him they had decided that, if the Council thought anyone undeserving, they would stop payment. Mayor Lepine asked them to check very carefully the cases on the books, and to make their recommendations at the next meeting.

Secretary Emile Hebert reported that he was worried about the tax position for season tickets at the rink. After quite a "gabfest" the councillors agreed that they would charge a flat rate of 14%, report and return it to Quebec, and no doubt they will hear if their procedure is incorrect.

Returning to water-mains and sewerage, the councillors more or less agreed that it would be May before the Woodbine sewerage system would be installed, but that Percy McAdam's pipes would be connected to water and sewer line this month to enable him to complete his own reconstruction. The cleaning of the 10-inch pipe between the dam and the reservoir seems to have solved, for the time being, the local water problem.

The councillors decided to approach C-I-L about an increase in the flat rate obtained from them for water. A satisfactory agreement would probably decide the

Philippe Valois Appointed to UN Legal Committee

Philippe Valois, M.P. for Argenteuil-Deux Montagnes, has been appointed to sit with the United Nations Assembly as a member of the Canadian Legal Committee of the U.N. This is one of the six committees of the Canadian Delegation, headed by the Hon. Paul Martin, Federal Minister of Health, which sits permanently at Lake Success.

Mr. Valois, who leaves shortly to take up his new duties on November 21, will be in New York for several weeks on his first session.

Convene Last Session of 24th Quebec Legislature

Quebec (CP) — The fourth and probably last session of the 24th Quebec Legislature will be inaugurated Wednesday with traditional pomp.

Premier Duplessis is expected to dissolve the legislature some time after the session ends, probably in March next year. If past practice is any indication, the election will be held in July of 1956.

Facing each other across the floor of the legislative assembly will be 68 members of Premier Duplessis' Union Nationale party and 23 Liberals. One independent completes the 92-member house representation.

Liberal Leader Georges Lapalme has said during a series of summer speeches he will criticize the Quebec government for its policies on the development of natural resources.

Mr. Duplessis, contrary to his usual practice, has said little about the legislative program he intends to introduce during the forthcoming session.

Seek Public Support In Worthy Project

Local citizens are well aware of the work carried on by the Rotary Club of Brownsburg - Lachute. Their supervised swimming pool and picnic grounds are open to the public from June to September and ever increasing numbers are availing themselves of a refreshing swim and a family outing in the natural, beautiful setting of this park near Brownsburg.

As no charge is made for the use of the swimming pool and park, the Rotary Club must raise the necessary operating funds from their own endeavors. You can assist them in their work by attending their annual Turkey Bingo in the Lachute Auditorium on Friday, November 18. (See their advertisement for details elsewhere in this paper.)

'Not Guilty' Plea On Charge of Manslaughter

James Young, 35, of Ville St. Laurent, pleaded not guilty to a charge of manslaughter, at his preliminary hearing before Judge E. Archambeault at St. Jerome on Tuesday.

Young was charged in connection with the death ot Alden MacLeod, 34, of Harrington, which occurred in Pte.-au-Chene on October 16 last. He was released on bail of $950 on November 4, shortly after a coroner's jury had found him criminally responsible in the death. The manslaughter charge was laid prior to his release from jail.

The case has been "sent to trial", but as yet no trial date has been set, nor the procedure of trial decided upon.

Council Backs Aldermen in Possible Lawsuit

Lachute Town Council decided they would assume full and complete responsibility in any legal action that might possibly be instituted against Aldermen Stanley Church and Wilbrod Cousineau relative to the one-week suspension of Police Chief J. Laurent Ducharme — in which they were mover and seconder of the resolution concerned. The Council backing was given in a formal manner Saturday at a special meeting, at which a full membership of aldermen was in attendance.

The meeting was called for Thursday afternoon but had to be re-scheduled due to lack of a quorum, Aldermen Muir, Pollock, MacRae and Desjardins being the only ones present, along with Mayor Dr. F. Walter FitzGerald. The aldermen in question did not vote on the Council's decision.

Prior to the close of the meeting, building permits were granted to Lachute Lumber and Millwork Ltd. for the erection of two houses — one for Miss Fleur-Ange Carriere and the other for Mozart Carriere.

Sees Tax Boost as Solution To Build Operating Surplus

Lachute Town Corporation has been operating on a deficit since December 31, 1952 — according to a report made to the Council by auditor Gordon Tabrett, of the firm of Thos. C. Corry, at an adjourned meeting last night. Ald. Ross R. Muir was absent from this session, at which 10 bids for the position of secretary-treasurer were opened, among other business on the agenda.

Elaborating on his statement, Mr. Tabrett emphasized that the present weakened finances had not come about during the past year. He observed that the effects of the deficits and lack of working capital had not been apparent previously because the Council had been using cash received from sale of bonds, borrowed for the purchase of capital assets, to finance ordinary operating expenditures. It was only after the various projects, for which the money was originally borrowed, were completed and paid for, that a shortage of cash for current operations was felt.

He reported a small surplus of $1,000 and $1,300 in 1953 and 1954 respectively, and predicted that the present year would end with a deficit of from $10,000 to $15,00.

"The Council should have an accumulated operating surplus of from $15,000 to $25,000 to provide working capital, and the only possible way to obtain this surplus and clear up the present deficit is a special tax or an increase in the general taxation," he added.

The auditor's report, from January 1, 1955, until October 31 last, indicated that receipts in the general fund were $229,308 while expenditures left only a present cash bank balance of $543. This does not include the recent loan of $30,000, it was pointed out.

Mr. Tabrett reported that the revenues for the year would be several thousand dollars less than estimated in the budget, while expenditures would be up slightly. There is approximately $20,900 still to be collected in the general fund, almost all of which was owing to suppliers as of October 31, the last date included in the audit.

The Council proceeded to other business, including complaints on the Police Department, personnel problems and tenders for the position of secretary-treasurer — to be reported next week.

Hawkesb'y Woman Found Drowned In Grenville Canal

The body of Marie Jeanne Berthelette, 49-year-old spinster, of Hawkesbury, was found last Wednesday afternoon in one of the locks of the Grenville Canal.

Jack Cameron of Grenville discovered Miss Berthelette's purse near Lock No. 7, behind the Manoir, and notified the authorities, who thereupon decided to empty the lock. Peter Cameron, also of Grenville, was the first to discover the body, which was taken to the Deforges Funeral Parlor in Grenville.

Det. Maurice Lamoureux, of the Montreal Detachment of Provincial Police, was called to investigate, along with Police Chiefs Laurent Davidson of Grenville and Remi Lecot of Hawkesbury, and Traffic Officer Roger Massie. Henri Sauvé and Jean Bell assisted in the removal of the body.

It was learned that the victim was an employee of St. Lawrence Textiles in Hawkesbury, and disappeared from her Hawkesbury boarding house on Sunday evening. No date was announced for the inquest.

New Installation To Enlarge Local Phone Capacity

An additional switchboard position is being installed in the Bell Telephone's exchange building on Water Street, R. Dupuy, the Company's Manager for the region, announced this week.

Extension of the central office facilities will help to relieve congestion on the switchboard during busy hours, a result of the ever-increasing volume of local and long distance calls handled daily by the operators in the Lachute exchange.

Work on the installation is progressing rapidly, and it is expected the new position will be placed in service around December 15.

"The enlarged switchboard will provide facilities for as many as 11 operators to be on duty as a time," Mr. Dupuy said. "During peak calling periods, the operators sometimes are unable to answer promptly because nearly all available lines are in use. We expect that the new extension will remedy the situation and that service on local and long distance calls will be faster."

On an average day, the exchange handles about 14,700 local calls and 760 long distance calls. The volume of local calls has increased by nearly 50 per cent since 1950, when the daily average stood at approximately 10,300. And the increase in volume for long distance calls is even higher, going from a daily average of 450 in 1950 to the present average of some 760 calls. Meanwhile, the number of telephones served by the Lachute exchange has risen from 2,213 in 1950 to 3,087 at the present time.

Canadian defence expenditures run close to $2,000,000,000 a year.

Ladies' Night At Rotary Club

Last week's meeting of the Rotary Club took the form of a Ladies' Night. About 150 members and guests gathered in the Brownsburg Legion Hall for this social event. Dr. Cecil Martin, Professor of Anatomy at McGill University, was the guest speaker. This was Dr. Martin's second visit to the Club and, as usual, his address was both very interesting and most amusing. A native of Ireland, he was educated at Trinity College in Dublin. He served with the British Army in World War I and was severely wounded. He has been on the staff at McGill for many years and is the author of several books. He has a country home at Hill Foot, where he spends as much time as possible.

Dr. Martin spoke on anatomy and the changes that have taken place in the human form down through the centuries.

The speaker was introduced by Fred Royal and thanked by Wes Freeland.

A three-piece orchestra furnished the music for dancing, which occupied the remainder of the evening.

Industry Sues Town Corporation Of Hawkesbury

Hawkesbury — A writ has been filed before the Ontario Supreme Court at L'Orignal in behalf of Ideal Dress Company Ltd., of Montreal, against the Corporation of the Town of Hawkesbury in which the plaintiff firm seeks redress over an alleged breach of contract.

Maurice Wright, of Ottawa, is acting on behalf of the firm.

The plaintiffs allege that the municipality entered into an agreement under which property, owned by the town but upon which the dress company's factory is situated, was to be sold to the firm for $25,000.

It is further alleged that, upon advice of the Ontario Municipal Board, the town decided to sell the property by calling for tenders, and that the municipality finally arranged to sell the land to a third party whose bid was $28,100, without informing Ideal Dress Company Ltd. of what was taking place.

In the action the plaintiff seeks: (a) specific performance of the original agreement; (b) a declaration that the plaintiff is the purchaser of the property by virtue of the agreement; (c) an injunction restraining the municipality from selling or negotiating to sell the property to any individual or group other than the plaintiff; and (d) damages for breach of contract.

Finances Viewed By Rink Assocn. At Brownsburg

(Our District Correspondent)

Brownsburg — Finance, and the continuing war against insolvency, occupied the major part of this week's rink meeting. Big payments which had been unforeseen were the tax on season tickets and service to the ice machine. No one on the committee imagined that they'd have to pay tax on the season tickets, and when the town secretary, Emile Hebert, brought it to their notice, they had sold over $1,000 worth of tickets. The tax bite on arrears amounted to $131.50.

When the committee decided to open up for the winter, they asked the Canadian Ice and Machines, the company who installed the ice plant, to send up an engineer to supervise operations. This man, who admittedly was a great help, had to stay three days on account of the summery weather, and his wages and expenses amounted to $250.

Concessions and caretakers were discussed mainly from the point of view "How much expense?" In view of the poor offer received for the restaurant concession, the committee decided a few weks ago to buy their own equipment, and hire someone on a 50-50 split of the profits. André Pilon, a pretty reliable teen-ager, took the job and everyone seems well satisfied with the way things are going. The equipment itself cost close to $400, and although it is evident the profits will be quite a bit above the tender offered, it's unlikely that they will offset the capital outlay.

Paul Goudreau is at present dispensing the caretaker's duties, but is dissatisfied with the pay of $30 weekly. The feeling was that Mr. Goudreau is doing an excellent job and that probably he is worth more, but that the committee just doesn't have the funds. It was decided to offer Mr. Goudreau an extra $5 a week, and if this was not enough the rink should make do with a less efficient worker at a price commensurate. Mr. Goudreau purchased, for $45, a six months' concession on skate-sharpening.

On discussing the caretaker's duties some members expressed disgust at the total disregard for property shown by many patrons.

Hornets in Big Construction Job

A hornets' nest measuring 13-inches in diameter, 17 inches in length and 40 inches in circumference was found recently by Lloyd Hume near his Hill Head residence. The nest is pictured here beside a soft-drink bottle, giving a visual idea of its size.

Gatineau Hydro Lines

Winter Is Coming

Ice and snow falling from the roof across service wires cause interruptions to a number of individual customers each winter.

Service wires should be located where snow and ice will not slide onto them from the roof.

Heavy wet snow causes branches to sag under its weight. Cut down all branches which are overhanging the wires leading to your house. It is much easier to do it now.

Unusually severe winter weather may occasionally damage power lines. When this occurs skilled repair crews will be out doing all that is humanly possible to make interruptions as brief as possible.

Artificial Lights For Laying Hens

Artificial lights to maintain egg production during the shorter days of the winter months, will make a laying flock more profitable. However, the effectiveness of lights will depend on their proper use, report poultry officials at the Brandon Experimental Farm, Manitoba.

Lighting should commence in time to maintain a 12-hour day once daylight alone is inadequate. This is sufficient while production is on the increase but should be stepped up to a minimum of 13 hours, when production levels off.

Once started, the lighting schedule must be regular. An abrupt reduction in either length of time or strength of light may cause egg production to stop. A time switch is considered essential to insure against forgetfulness. When lights are started in fall, there is nothing to be gained by doing this gradually. However, when they are discontinued a gradual 15 minutes per week reduction is recommended.

Laying houses should have one 40-watt bulb for each 200 square feet of floor space. When all-night lights are used, this intensity may be reduced to one-third.

The location of the lights will depend on the type and width of the house. In houses not more than 24 feet wide, the lights should be placed in a single row at intervals not exceeding 10 feet, midway between the roosting quarters and the front of the house. In wider houses a double row of lights is necessary. The lights should be suspended about six feet from the floor. The greatest light intensity should fall on the water fountains and feeders, with a lesser amount on the roosting quarters to induce the hens to leave them.

Aside from convenience there apparently is little difference in the various methods of supplying light. If morning light is provided, feed and water must be available at the time the lights come on. When the birds are receiving light and feed in the evening, it is necessary to have a dimming device to induce them to return to the roosts.

More Horizontal Silos in Use

About 2,000-horizontal silos were in use in Canada at the beginning of 1955 according to a preliminary survey conducted by the Field Husbandry Division at Ottawa. The majority of these silos were in the provinces of Quebec, Ontario, Manitoba and British Columbia. Most of them were of the ground surface type, requiring no excavation. Experimental work on this method of ensiling crops, particularly for grass and legume silage, was started at the Central Experimental Farm in 1951. Results of this work have been sufficiently encouraging to secure growing adoption by farmers of the horizontal silo.

World Champions At Royal Winter Fair

(CP) — Bob Cochrane, of Grande Prairie, Alta., is the new world wheat king, crowned at the Royal Winter Fair at Toronto. A sample of Saunders wheat won the title for Mr. Cochrane, who went on horseback to the Grande Prairie area 250 miles north of Edmonton in 1911 to begin farming.

The other world crowns of the Royal Winter Fair:

Oats — William Sharp, of Castleton Banff, Scotland.

Barley — R. W. Hummell, of Milk River, Alta.

Rye — Jack McBride, Bonalto, Alta.

Corn — W. C. Kirk, Jeffersonville, Ohio.

Potatoes — S. A. MacAuley, East Baltic, P.E.I.

Soy Beans — Gilles and Cornelius de Putter, Appin, Ont.

Forage feed — Myles A. Macmilland, Dalkeith, Ont.

BETTER LAMBS

Truro, N.S. (CP) — A carload of 200 Western Canada ewes arrived here for distribution to buyers throughout the Province. The breeding experiment aims to produce high quality market lambs.

Hens in Nova Scotia laid an average of 201 eggs each last year, the highest average production of any of the provinces.

Miss Rachel Brown Died Recently in Nursing Home

Another aged member of the former generation passed away recently, in the person of Miss Rachel Brown.

Born December 22, 1869, at Plaisance, Que., she was the daughter of the late Wm. Brown and his wife Margaret Calder.

She spent the greater part of her life in the old homestead, but when failing health forced her to dispose of her farm, she came to reside with friends in Brownsburg and Lachute. Six months prior to her death she was removed to the nursing home of Mrs. Charbonneau at Rigaud, Que., where she passed peacefully away on October 3.

Funeral service was held at the funeral parlors in Thurso, the Rev. Geo. B. Hicks of Brownsburg officiating. The remains were placed in the family plot — a nephew and several old friends acting as pall-bearers.

Friends attending the funeral were from Ste. Anne de Bellevue, Montreal, Lachute, Brownsburg and other points.

The deceased lady was an aunt of Mr. Chas. Moseley, of Brownsburg.

B'burg Council

council against the expense of installing meters.

A discussion about cutting expenses found the councillors in agreement that, although local pay rates were not too high, perhaps the Village was paying for too many man-hours, and an attempt is to be made to reduce pay costs, especially in the police department, where extra expense was about $100 a month.

Also, on the economy half-hour was a decision to spend up to $50 on tools so that the town workers will be able to caulk the pipes on the Park Avenue sewerage system which is being laid this month.

Mr. Hebert read an agreement from C-I-L whereby the town gets the land for the garage extension and C-I-L gets the piece of old road along the company's fence at the river. It was not on the agreement, of course, but Mr. Hebert said that C-I-L would in the near future move out their fence enclosing this newly-acquired piece of land and build a sidewalk alongside it, parallel to the existing sidewalk on the other side of the road.

The Mayor introduced for discussion, the possibility of building a second storey on the town garage, while building the extension. The upstairs part would eventually be finished as a hall and offices. The councillors agreed that they'd like to see such a set-up, but that, in view of existing funds, they should put a semi-permanent roof on the extension and perhaps expand upwards when and if the budget allowed in future.

Among the correspondence was a request for funds from the Canadian National Institute for the Blind. The Council repeated their $15 donation of last year.

Another letter was received, asking the Council to join in the war against obscene literature. The councillors agreed to provide the police officer with a list of the more objectionable current periodicals and give him the power to confiscate them from the local bookstalls. No official action was taken just yet, however.

Government Plans For Winter Immigration

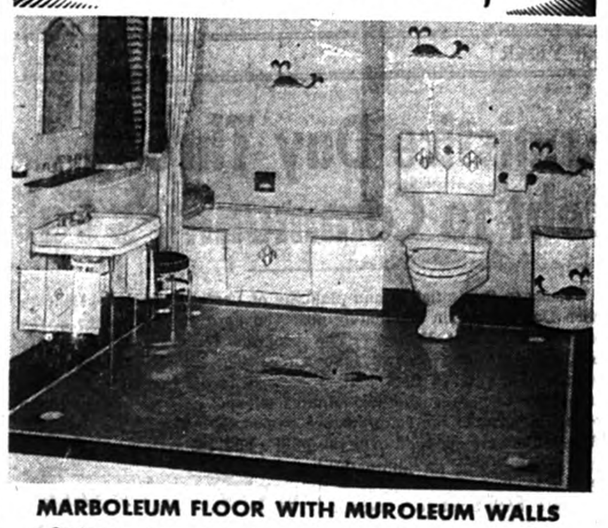

(CP) — Federal government plans to encourage immigration during the winter months, when jobs are scarcer, have qualified approval of Canada's two big labor organizations.

The plans are described as "a new position" by Immigration Minister Pickersgill. "We are not going to encourage immigrants who are at all likely to be jobless," said Mr. Pickersgill, "nor are we going to encourage movements that might displace labor."

A spokesman for the Canadian Congress of Labor said his organization does not object to winter immigration provided it does not displace labor or under-cut wages and working conditions.

Claude Jodoin, president of the Trades and Labor Congress, said his group prefers that there be no winter inflow of New Canadians, but if there is, it should not displace Canadian job-holders.

Best Buick yet

Illustrated — ROADMASTER 6 passenger 4-Door Riviera

IT COMES UPON the heels of the most successful Buick in history—and beats it on every score.

In shimmering steel and solid sinew, it's Buick for 1956—and there's never been anything like it for pure automobile.

You get a good hint of what we mean when you take in the sweep-ahead styling of it—from the air-splitting prow of its V-front grille to the robust rake of its canted rear profile.

You get an even better hint when you open the doors and see the dazzle there—in the decorator fabrics and décors—in the jewel-like finish of the fittings—in the precisely shaped steering wheel and controls—in the rich new instrument panel with soft-padded top and glowing dials that detail your progress in changing colors.

But it's when you put this beauty to the city streets and the open highways that you learn the best of it.

Performance Without Parallel

A new advance in Variable Pitch Dynaflow* goes airplanes one better—steps up your getaway in normal driving without flooring the pedal to switch the pitch. But when you need that extra surge, it's there, instantly—and in extra abundance.

The mightiest V8 engines in Buick annals bring 255 h.p. to the ROADMASTER and SUPER Series. Yet this is such high-compression power, such dynamic driving power, such completely usable power at the rear wheels—the whole rear end had to be endowed with extra brawn and heft and solidity to handle it.

We could spread before you an acre of blueprints on the engineering gems that spark the spectacular performance and ride and handling and roadability of these great Buicks for 1956.

We could tell you about a new double-Y manifolding of the engine for more usable power. And about a brilliant new front-end geometry that adds a whole new "sense of direction" to the car's travel. And about massive new direct-action shock absorbers that move three times more oil to cushion your all-coil-spring ride that much more buoyantly.

But you can get the full and magnificent story for yourself, at our showroom, in a face-to-face meeting with the best Buicks yet. They're all ready to set a dazzling new pattern for 1956.

*New Advanced Variable Pitch Dynaflow is the only Dynaflow Buick builds today. It is standard on Roadmaster and Super Series.

An Old Friend

THAT FAMILIAR Sunday morning radio feature, "Neighborly News", will be originating in Montreal this Sunday as a salute to the Quebec Division of the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association. The Watchman will be represented at the annual conclave of this group.

Started as an experiment by the CBC in 1940 in co-operation with the C.W.N.A., "Neighborly News" broadcasts human interest items from the rural scene.

Commentator for the first series was Andy Clarke, whose cracker-barrel comments and friendly manner contributed considerably to the program's success and soon earned him the title of "Mayor of the Little Places". Upon Andy's death in May, 1948, Don Fairbairn, who had taken Andy's place during his illness, became the new Neighborly News commentator. Since its inception, the program has had CBC's Reid Forsee in the producer's chair.

Each week the commentator pores over more than 200 Ontario and Quebec weekly newspapers, seeking the interesting and unusual happenings of the "important centres that lie outside the big cities". With the accent on human interest, these items may vary from the story of a villager getting caught in his own animal trap to a municipal election sidelight, from a report on a prize pumpkin to the asthmatic experience of a rural-ite, and so on.

The CBC gets a great many invitations to originate this popular program from Ontario towns and villages, and manages to accept several of them each year, usually during the warm weather months. These visits are accompanied by a special broadcast which takes the form of a "salute" from Neighborly News to the place being visited.

Very popular with the listeners is the weekly "over 90" period, in which Don delights in expressing Neighborly News greetings to those celebrating a 90th birthday or more. Among various things, the program has been instrumental in discovering long-lost relatives (people hear in the news names of relatives with whom they have long been out of touch), in creating a "Plaid Shirt Day", and in tracing the trail of a meteor.

Neighborly News is broadcast every Sunday morning at 10:03 a.m. (following the 10 o'clock news) on Ontario and Quebec stations of the CBC's Trans-Canada network. When the program originates outside Toronto, the "salute" to the host-town (as in the case this Sunday) is scheduled at 9:45 a.m.

Safe For A Day

A NATIONAL campaign to eliminate all automobile accidents for one 24-hour period in every Canadian community will be spearheaded by Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent.

The Prime Minister has announced Thursday, December 1, as S-D (safe driving) Day. Mr. St. Laurent has urged every community to join in the one-day safety crusade. Prime Ministers of all provinces are expected to lend their support to the campaign.

S-D Day will be observed at the same time throughout the United States under the sponsorship of the President's Action Committee for Traffic Safety. They will work hand-in-hand with the Canadian Highway Safety Conference in promoting the simultaneous safety drive throughout North America.

In announcing S-D Day, Mr. St. Laurent stressed the need for a broad and continuing drive against traffic accidents.

"Both in Canada and the United States, the mounting accident toll has become a matter of grave public concern," the Prime Minister said. "It is only natural therefore that the two countries should concentrate on the same day to avoid all traffic accidents for 24 hours."

Most Canadian communities are expected to set up their own campaigns in an effort to keep the local S-D Day accident count at nil.

Purpose of the campaign is two-fold. If each area and community across Canada can keep accidents at the zero point, the total will represent one full day without an accident. And, if accidents can be wiped out for 24 hours, the individual driver and pedestrian will have proof positive that accidents can be eliminated not just one but every day of the year.

Leaders of the Canadian Highway Safety Conference say they are not hoping for a perfect record. However, even an appreciable cut in the number of accidents on December 1 will prove that concentrated public attention to traffic accidents and their causes can pay off.

Whoopers Still Fly

BIRD LOVERS were disturbed when the National Audubon Society of the United States pronounced 1955 "the year of decision" for the whooping crane. Were the giant birds on the way out like the passenger pigeons that once darkened the skies in their flights over the continent?

The question was partially answered recently when word came from Texas that 28 whooping cranes had been counted at their Aransas wintering grounds. The number, which included eight young birds, was an increase of eight over the flock that last spring, made the long flight to nest in the Northwest Territories.

And the Aransas report noted that it was possible more would arrive at the refuge.

Not only the ornithologist has been stirred by the plight of the whooping crane. The bird's game fight for survival has caught the imagination of the man on the street and for years reports of the spring and fall migrations have been watched and studied as much as anything in the world of nature.

The world total of the cranes fell to 15 in 1941, but rose to 24 in 1953. Their numbers started dropping again and last spring only 21 were known to exist.

Until the early part of the century the big birds, with a wingspread of seven feet, had been fine targets for hunters in Canada and the United States. Then came the campaign for their preservation and the search for their nothern nesting grounds so that they might be protected.

The long hunt ended successfully in 1954. Driven ever northward by the advance of civilization, some of the cranes were found to be nesting in Wood Buffalo National Park on the Alberta-Northwest Territories border. The Canadian wildlife Service this year kept a watchful eye on this group which late in the summer was reported to number 11 adults and six young ones.

Echoing the words of the Audubon Society, Canadian wildlife officials said the survival of the youngsters during the southward migration could save the species from extinction.

Fate and the hunter have been kind this year. Continued protection may yet save the beautiful white birds.

FOR THE Church of England to have altered its views regarding re-marriage of divorced persons would have been unthinkable, not because those views are necessarily right, but to have done so would have been manifestation of weakness on the part of spiritual leaders at the very time when need for stabilizing influence of Christian leadership is greater than at any time in history — says the Fort Erie Letter-Review.

"ROOM SERVICE"

For reasons best known to the veteran, Armistice Day has become a day to remember in more ways than one. It is invariably a cold and cheerless day with an easterly wind blowing which is equipped with a fine cutting edge. For most vets, it is also a day upon which they get a holiday. And if they don't, well it's another of those times when the wife is called on to telephone the office and say that hubby won't be in. The excuse given is that friend husband is under the weather, which may not be the case at 8:45 a.m. but usually is by the same time on the same night!

What does the veteran do on Armistice Day, you ask? He does a lot of things! Like what, for instance? Like what? Hm, let me see! Let's take last Armistice Day, for illustration.

At 7:00 o'clock in the morning, old Fred Murphy — my next-door-neighbor, and a veteran of two wars — was leaning hard and heavy on my doorbell.

"Don't want to miss the start of things," he chirped as I let him in. (The start of things in Fred's books is always the 8:00 a.m. opening of the nearest tavern.)

"Gets pretty chilly standing 'round a cenotaph," he said, "if you haven't got some staying power. It's worse than a colonel's inspection on a British Sunday morning, and you know how cold that used to be!"

"Want some bacon and eggs or coffee?" I asked.

"Heck no! Do you want to spoil my breakafst?"

Fred planted his weather-beaten beret on his head, clamped on a huge collection of medals, and buttoned up his overcoat.

"Come on, let's get cracking," he said, and sailed out the door.

True to form, Fred made tracks for the nearest tavern. Once inside, he fortified himself for the ordeal to follow.

"Not having a couple to keep me company?"

"No sir! Cold beer on a cold morning just doesn't appeal. I'll have a couple after the do, though!"

Well, the upshot was that by the time we formed up at the cenotaph, I was blue with cold and Fred was as red as a boiled lobster. When it was all over, Fred gathered up a dozen of his pals and led us all across the square to the closest hotel.

Over his next beer, the old boy broke down.

"Don't know how you do it," he mused.

"Don't know how I do what?"

"Face that awful ordeal without a drop inside you. I couldn't do it. It'd kill me. There's too many thoughts that crowd in on me on a day like this. They're all thoughts I wish I could erase from my mind forever, but when you've lived and died with soldier buddies, there's things you never forget!"

We had to agree with Fred and seeing why he always got well fortified before the cenotaph service we understood why there were so many others like him. And after a while, we got to telling the happier tales a soldier tells when he's out for the day with his fellows.

"Do you remember old Stan Sykes?" Fred looked around us.

"Yeh," said Bert Fails. "Batman for Major Sweet, wasn't he?"

"The same," Fred replied. "Did you ever hear about his first morning on duty?"

We all agreed that this was a new story to us.

"Poor Sykes. Had the happy idea that being a batman was a lead-pipe cynch. Got the surprise of his life when they made him take a morning cup of tea to the major."

Fred chuckled to himself.

"He walked right over to the major's bed, gave him the shaking of his life, and bunged the tea at him. Then while the poor old guy is mumbling his thanks and sipping his brew, old Stan fixes him with a glassy stare and says:

" 'If I'da known I hadda give room service when I took this job, I'd never took it!'"

Fred was silent a moment.

"Sykes lost his own life saving that major before the show was over. I saw him get it, too. That's the kind of thoughts that bowl me over on days like these!"

And we all fell silent for a time, for each of us remembered similar thoughts that none of us could ever forget, try as we might!

OF MANY THINGS

By Ambrose Hills

Farmers, Wake Up !

Hunting pheasants down around Souris, Manitoba, I saw carloads of wheat stored in the fields. When it seemed certain I would get no pheasants, I decided I'd at least have some wheat to take home to my wife. Nora was raised on a farm and when she was a youngster she liked to chew wheat until it turned to gum.

So I bought a bag to take home. Nora washed it and let it dry out in our back yard. Our children are learning to chew it like gum. Bill took some to school and a classmate, a Ukrainian lad, asked him for some to take to his mother. She makes a swell Ukrainian dish of boiled wheat with sugar and poppy seeds. My bag of wheat is the talk of the neighborhood. It seems everybody in the city wants a bit for some purpose or another.

I am sure some smart farmer could make a pretty penny fast. Wash up a few bushels of plump wheat. Put it in one-pound transparent packages. Peddle it door to door in cities and towns, with a few recipes for its use. (Write me for recipes if you like, in care of this paper.) I think he'd sell it at mighty good prices. Along our street he'd have no trouble getting forty cents a pound.

Farmers just don't seem to have any merchandising instinct. Look at the ads in your paper. Everything else under the sun advertised — but few good ads about butter or cheese or eggs and the like. Editors sometimes run free publicity for such protein food — but this needs following up with hard-hitting and persuasive display advertising.

In my opinion most farm organizations need a good shake-up. They try to force people to buy farm products. Why not persuade them with smart ads?

I refuse to eat twice at a restaurant dishing out tiny daubs of butter. There should be a series of ads letting folk know the war is over and that they are entitled to insist on generous servings of butter at restaurants. But farmers themselves meekly accept little dabs that won't cover pee-wee buns!

Farmers, wake up! You are proud of modern production methods. Match them with modern selling!

ALL ABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore

A desperate Toronto woman hanged herself in jail after she and her husband were arrested on a $10 shoplifting charge.

Police learned that the family had been getting along on $28 or $30 a week.

When the case hit the newspapers, everybody wanted to help with jobs, money, advice and clothes for the children.

Toronto proved itself a city with a heart. The husband's worries are over. He must be grateful. But he would have been even more grateful, I suppose, if Toronto had found its heart a few days earlier, when his wife was still alive.

One should not be cynical about human distress. It is a good thing that this poor man and his children have been relieved even though it took such a sacrifice to make their plight known.

At the same time, one cannot help wondering about the other poor people who have managed to refrain from shoplifting or hanging themselves. How are they getting along?

When a house burns down and a family is left homeless and destitute, there is often a great outburst of human kindness. Someone creates a special fund, and the people of the neighborhood rush to help with money and goods.

Before the ashes are cold, the victims are better endowed than they ever were before. Good luck to them.

Meanwhile, however, a great number of people who still have their houses, or rent a corner of someone else's house, are leading a precarious life — stopping the chinks in the wall with old newspapers and trying to make a couple of cans of beans last until the pension cheque comes through.

Even in our prosperous society, there are thousands who live a painful existence in that no-man's land between starvation and a living income. They are not poor enough to receive charity. Many of them would be too proud to accept it. But they are not rich enough to live like human beings.

So they drag along in silence at the edge of respectability, with nothing to console them but their pride.

The bitter moral seems to be that it pays to let the house burn down.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT

VILLENEUVE — We sincerely thank all our kind friends, relatives and neighbors, the Rev. Fathers of Ste. Anastasie Parish, and the Catholic Women's League, for kind deeds and messages of sympathy, Mass cards and flowers received during the sad bereavement of a loving wife and aunt.

— Mr. and Mrs. Fred Berniquer,
Mr. L. Villeneuve.

IN MEMORIAM

CUNNINGHAM — In loving memory of a dear son and brother, John Raymond, "Jock", who passed away Nov. 20, 1946. — Ever remembered by his mother, sisters and brother.

"There is no final parting,
For all are in His care,
And those that seem to leave
Are waiting for us there.
Where we shall meet our loved ones
And understand at last
That dawn is always waiting
After the night is past."

DINELL — In loving memory of my dear husband, Pat, who was accidentally killed Nov. 18, 1954. — Sadly missed and ever remembered. — Your ever loving wife, Milly.

"It is so lonesome here without you, Pat,
And sad the weary way,
For life is not the same, dear,
Since you were called away,
I still remember the way you looked,
The way you spoke and smiled,
And all the things you said and did
Are with me all the while.
Just how much I miss you, Pat,
Only God will ever know,
For the ache in my heart is here today
As it was a year ago."

DINELL — In loving memory of our dear daddy, who passed away Nov. 18, 1954. — Sadly missed by your little children, Larry, Murrian and Patrick, Jr.

"Dear God, please take a message
To our daddy up above,
Tell him how much we miss him
And give him all our love."

DINELL — In loving memory of a dear son, accidentally killed Nov. 18, 1954. — Sadly missed by Mother and Dad.

"Time rolls on and we are reminded
Of a day our hearts were crushed,
When God took you, oh, so quickly,
And we all in gloom were thrust.
In the bloom of life, death claimed you,
In the prime of manhood days,
But we hope some day to meet you,
And to be with you always."

HESS — In loving memory of a beloved husband and father, Bob, accidentally, Nov. 18, 1954. — Sadly missed by his wife, Bella, and son, Ronnie.

"There is no parting from those we love,
No distance can divide,
For today in memory's garden
We still walk side by side.
Each dawning day a thought of him,
At eventide a prayer,
And in the hearts that loved him
He always will be there."

HOLLOMBY — In memory of a dear wife and mother, who left us one year ago. — Sadly missed by Ken and Susan.

HOLLOMBY (Morrison) — In loving memory of a dear daughter, Jean, who passed away Nov. 21, 1954. — Sadly missed by Dad and Mother.

HOLLOMBY — In loving memory of a dear sister and aunt, Jean (Morrison) Hollomby, who passed away Nov. 21, 1954. — Always remembered by Mary, Wenville, Gloria and David.

HOLLOMBY — In loving memory of a dear sister, Jean, who passed away Nov. 21, 1954. — Always remembered by Bill and Edna.

MARTIN — In loving memory of a dear wife and mother, who passed away Nov. 18, 1950. — Sadly missed by her husband, Percy, and children.

"A thousand tomorrows we would give,
If God had only let you live,
To be with us in the same old way
Would be our greatest wish today."

Sterling Citizen Of Riverfront Community

The Late Archie Graham

The many friends of the late Archie Graham of Cushing will sincerely regret his apparently sudden passing, on Sunday evening, November 13. Although he had been ill for some months, his bright, cheery "business as usual" contacts with the many he dealt with gave them no inkling that "for him the sands of time were sinking fast."

During his 57 years of dealing with the public as a cattle buyer and farmer he was noted for his uprightness and honesty, as well as his kindness and his readiness to help in every way possible.

An elder of St. Mungo's Church for a great many years, also for many years chairman of Chatham School Board, a one-time councillor and sheep valuator for the Council, many looked to him for advice in their troubles.

He was a true friend to all who knew him, as well as a loving husband and father. He leaves to mourn his loss his wife, the former Janet Pollock, of Lachute, his daughters, (Ivy) Mrs. John C. Dougall, of Cote St. Luc, Elsie, and son Allan, at home, and one grandson, Edward Graham Dougall, a large number of nephews and nieces, his son-in-law, J. C. Dougall, of Cote St. Luc, also his two brothers, Andrew R. Graham, of Monalea Road, and Frederick Graham, of the Fuller Road.

The funeral service was held at St. Mungo's, the church which he had attended all his lifetime, with the pastor, the Rev. Ralph Watson, officiating, assisted by the Rev. George Moore of St. Luke's United Church, Montreal, a close friend and former pastor. Interment was made in St. Andrews East Cemetery.

The many beautiful floral tributes were a mute testimony of the great esteem in which he was held. Some of his former employees came slightly more than 100 miles to attend. Among those noticed at the funeral were Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Kerr, of Aylmer East, Que.; Mrs. Milton Walker and Mrs. Thos. Kinchen, of Bussel, Ont.; Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Banks, Mr. and Mrs. R. Small, Mr. Jack McDowell, Mr. Allister Innes, the Rev. and Mrs. A. G. Moore, Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Blore, Mr. S. H. Beacher, Miss Eleanor Spearman, all of Montreal; Miss Ann Hawk, of Ste. Anne de Bellevue; Mrs. Douglas Vickers, of St. Jerome.

USEFUL SUGGESTIONS

Trail, B.C. (CP) — To date $100,000 has been paid to Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company employees for job suggestions. Latest award was $500 to John Clifford for an idea to improve gas purification in the ammonia plant.

IN MEMORIAM

MARTIN (Mrs. Charlotte) — In loving memory of a dear sister, who passed away Nov. 18, 1950. — Always remembered by Dad, sisters Margaret, Maud, Elizabeth and Winnifred.

"At early morn when all was still
God gave His great command,
You passed away in silent peace
Into a better land;
And when we saw you sleeping,
So peaceful, free from pain,
We could not wish you back
To suffer that again."

NIXON — In memory of my dear wife, Rhoda, who passed away Nov. 18, 1949. — Sadly missed by Eddie.

"Although you are not beside me,
You are never far away,
You are always in my heart and thoughts,
Through every passing day."

NIXON — In loving memory of a dear mother and grandmother, Rhoda, who passed away Nov. 18, 1949. — Always remembered by her son, Alton, Ety and grandchildren.

"What we would give, if we could say,
'Hello Mom' in the same old way,
To hear your voice and see your smile,
To sit with you and talk awhile.
No length of time can take away
Dear thoughts of you from day to day."

NIXON — In loving memory of a dear mother and grandmother, Rhoda Nixon, who passed away Nov. 18, 1949. — Ever missed and remembered by her daughter, Rita, Irwin and grandchildren.

"Dearer to me than words can tell,
Was a mother I lost and loved so well;
Wherever I go, whatever I do,
Always, dear Mother, I think of you.
There's still an ache in my heart today
That countless years won't take away,
A place in my heart no one can fill —
I miss you, dear Mother, and always will.
Watch over me, Mother, from above,
Dear Mother, protect me here below;
Guide me always in the paths
As you would want me to go.
Take my hand, when days are dark,
Comfort me when I cry,
Walk beside me in this weary world,
Until the day I die.
I often think of happier days
When we were all together —
The family chain is broken now,
But memories live forever."

FREE
CLOTHESPIN BAG
with your first purchase of a PURINA LAYING CHOW for fall pullets

Once again it's Ladies' Month at our store. And you can help us celebrate with this first-quality clothespin bag. We'd like to see all our old friends . . . and many new ones, too. Drop in and ask for your FREE clothespin bag when you make your first purchase of 100 pounds of any Purina Laying Chow for fall pullets.

If you can't come in, call us on the phone or drop a card.

It's our gift to get you to try PURINA and prove that you'll get up to 40% more fall eggs over U. S. average

Nice as the clothespin bag is, we think you'll be even more pleased with the EXTRA EGGS over U. S. average you'll probably get on Purina. Last year 1,033 ladies kept records on their flocks and sent them to the Purina Company. These Purina-fed flocks averaged 3 dozen MORE eggs per pullet during fall and early winter than the average flock in U. S. was laying (U. S. Department of Agriculture report).

Figuring the EXTRA eggs at only 40¢ a dozen, these ladies made an EXTRA $120 per 100 pullets by Christmas.

Wasn't that a nice Christmas present to themselves for doing a fine job with their hens? Won't you feed and manage your flock for EXTRA EGG MONEY, too? Come in for Purina and for your free clothespin bag.

Recent Wedding In Brownsburg Parish Church

Auffrey - Doucette

In the Roman Catholic Church at Brownsburg, Que., the marriage took place at 10:30 Mass on Saturday, October 29, of Florence Agathe, daughter of Mrs. John M. Doucette and the late Mr. Doucette, of Brownsburg (formerly of Prince Edward Island), to Dr. Paul Eugene Auffrey, son of Mrs. Alphée Auffrey and the late Mr. Auffrey, of Moncton, N.B. The Rev. Father Leo Clement officiated at the double-ring ceremony.

Mr. Lupien played the wedding music and Mrs. Nankivell sang "Dieu de paix et d'amour", "Ave Maria", "Sancta Maria" and "Je vous salus". White flowers arranged with lighted candles in candelabras were used to decorate.

The bride, given away by her uncle, Mr. Ernest W. Richards, of Lowell, Mass., wore a floor-length gown of white chiffon velvet lined with white taffeta, with bodice fastened at the front with a row of tiny velvet-covered buttons, having a Queen Anne neckline and sleeves ending in points over the hands, and full skirt panelled in front. Her finger-tip veil of tulle illusion was held by a velvet coronet adorned with seed pearls and rhinestones. She carried a white prayer book decorated with white carnation and streamers. Her only jewelry was a silver cross and chain, gift of the bridegroom.

Miss Kathleen Cannon, of Montreal, as maid of honor, wore a floor-length gown of American Beauty velvet with V-neck bodice and sleeves ending in points over her hands, and bouffant skirt. She wore a matching Juliet cap and carried a muff trimmed with white carnations. . . Mr. Francis Bourgeois, of St. Jerome, acted as best man for Dr. Auffrey, and the ushers were Mr. Leonide Ouellette and Mr. Guy LeBlanc, both of Montreal.

Mrs. Doucette, the bride's mother, wore a plum-colored taffeta gown with navy blue accessories and a corsage of white and pink 'mums.

After the reception, which was held at the residence of the bride's mother, Dr. and Mrs. Auffrey left by motor for the Eastern United States, the bride travelling in a jacket frock of Burgundy wool tweed with brown accessories and a corsage of yellow roses. . . They will reside in Moncton, N.B.

Dr. Auffrey is a graduate of the University of Montreal.

Out of town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Richards, of Lowell, Mass.; Miss Jeannine Auffrey, of Moncton, N.B.; Miss Irene Auffrey, of Hull, Que.; Mr. and Mrs. Henri Renauld, of Chandler, Que.; and Dr. Richard Auffrey, of Moncton, N.B.

Doucette and the late Mr. Doucette, and Dr. Auffrey is the son of Mrs. Alphée Auffrey and the late Mr. Auffrey, of Moncton, N.B.

Customers Differ, Says United Church Cleric

At a recent convention of Advertising Managers, held in Montreal, the Rev. Geo. W. Goth, minister of Metropolitan United Church, London, gave "a word of advice to folks whose business is promotion and salesmanship."

"Not all your customers are products of assembly lines and mass education, content to sit in front of TV sets.

"Not all must be buttered up by politicians, or told that he is the most wonderful guy in the world, or sold on the fact that a certain type of air conditioner is best if so many million other people use them.

"Some put their intelligence to work, don't want to be shelved and labeled."

75 YEARS AGO

November 19, 1880 —

We were treated yesterday to the first fall of snow of any consequence. It snowed from early morning until about 3 p.m., during which time about six inches fell. Some few turned out with sleighs, but we imagine they found it rough sleighing from the previous state of the roads.

Brownsburg — Rivers and creeks are very high, caused by the slight snowfalls nearly every day.

50 YEARS AGO

November 17, 1905 —

For the second time this year, the Lachute Mills post-office has been destroyed by fire. Shortly after midnight on Wednesday, the brakeman on a shunting CPR train noticed flames coming from the building and gave the alarm, first rousing the inmates of the house adjoining. It was only a short time until the building was demolished and had it not been for the prompt service of water supplied by the J. C. Wilson Company, Fish's Bridge would also have been destroyed.

At an adjourned meeting of the Lachute Town Council, a communication was received from Mr. Wm. Berry, requesting the Council take over a lane in the rear of his property and have the same gravelled.

25th Anniversary Party

Last Saturday evening about 50 persons gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Felix Touchette, of East Settlement, as a surprise party in honor of their 25th wedding anniversary, given by their family and neighbors. Among those present was Mrs. Touchette's sister, Mrs. H. Tassie, of Detroit, Mich., which was also a surprise, as Mrs. Touchette had left her sister only the previous Sunday in Detroit. The honored couple received many lovely gifts, and a pleasant evening was spent by those present.

Week at Ottawa

ministers are to begin a conference in London. New rules of procedure, adopted last session, may shorten debate, but prorogation date depends largely on whether opposition parties find issues which could extend the session beyond June 27.

The last session, which opened January 7 and ended July 28, lasted 140 sitting days, a modern record exceeded only by sessions in 1903 and 1907-08 of 155 and 148 days respectively.

Transport Problems

High transportation costs over Canada's vast areas will be the object of special study by the Gordon economic commission, it appeared evident as commission members opened sittings in the West this week.

During their hearings in the east the five commissioners — charged by the government with making a 25-year forecast of Canada's economic future — were presented with a picture of long expensive hauls and a dearth of markets looming as dark shadows over the development of an area in some ways rich in natural resources.

The commissioners have become so impressed with the essential need of resolving some of Canada's complex transportation problems that it now seemed likely they will go further than merely forecasting future haulage trends. They may also seek and offer solutions.

No Shipping Aid

Cabinet has turned down a request by deep-sea ship operators for government aid to build up the Canadian flag fleet, but the operators are continuing the fight.

A cabinet decision to let the fleet sail under its own steam without government financial aid became known last week. The cabinet also decided against letting the operators sell off approximately 90 Canadian vessels that have been placed under the British flag to reduce their operating costs. The vessels cannot be sold without government permission.

Shortly after the Cabinet stand became known, Transport Minister Marler received new representations from M. G. Angus of Montreal, president of the Canadian Shipowners' Association. It was understood Mr. Marler repeated the cabinet view against a subsidy now, and in favor of holding Canadian ownership of the vessels as an element of defence.

Mr. Angus commented, in a statement, "apparently Canada is to continue indefinitely with no maritime policy at all."

Toronto Baptist Seminary Quartet at Brownsburg

A representative group of consecrated young people, in training at Toronto Baptist Seminary for ministerial and missionary work at home and abroad, will be ministering at Brownsburg Regular Baptist Church this Saturday evening and Sunday morning.

The male quartet is composed of men from England, Ireland, France and the U.S.A. One of its members is an accomplished violinist. The young lady accompanist is a talented pianist. She will be giving a flannelgraph talk to the Junior Department of the Bible School on Sunday at 10 a.m.

By sermon, testimony and song these splendid young folk will witness to the "saving, satisfying and keeping power of the Gospel of Jesus Christ." A rare treat is in store for all who attend. The public are cordially invited to enjoy these services.

Our spiritual output in a world of need depends on our spiritual intake. We must take in power and goodness before we can impart these in our sphere of influence. We must take Christ unto ourselves before we can give the world a Christlike life.

Bible Society Held Annual Meeting

The annual meeting of the British and Foreign Bible Society, Lachute Branch, was held Tuesday evening in the Baptist Church, Lachute.

The Rev. D. C. Merrett conducted the devotional service and the Rev. C. R. Lang read the scriptures.

The Rev. De Courcy H. Rayner showed films in color depicting the beginning of the British and Foreign Bible Society and the story of "Mary Jones"; also the works of the Society in Japan. Mr. Rayner mentioned that, from the 3rd Jubilee Fund the Society is now able to employ a colporteur for the Province of Quebec.

The meeting appointed the following officers: the Rev. C. R. Lang president; Miss Gertrude McMahon, secretary; Russell W. Elliott, treasurer; J. S. Giles and the Rev. G. T. Spriggs, hon. presidents.

Sincere thanks were expressed for the devoted work of Mrs. G. McGibbon and Mr. Burns Kingsbury.

Mr. Kingsbury reported that the sum of $169 had been collected to date, and hoped, when final returns were in before the end of the year, that the objective of $500 would be reached.

TAKE YOUR BIBLE OFF THE SHELF

Read it in the Living Language of Today

Are you getting the most from your Bible reading? Are you getting the understanding? The "New World Translation" makes reading of the Scriptures a joy and a lasting benefit. The easy flow of language does not minimize the sense, rather it enhances your appreciation of the original written Word. And to strengthen your grip on the Word of life, its publishers offer you in addition detailed studies of God's Word in book form.

The "New World Translation of the Hebrew Scriptures," Vol. 1, 864 pages, contains the books from Genesis to Ruth, inclusive.

The "New World Translation of the Hebrew Scriptures," Vol. II, 720 pages, contains the books from I Samuel to Esther.

The "New World Translation of the Christian Greek Scriptures," 800 pages, contains all the Christian writings, Matthew to Revelation.

Each volume contains comparative footnotes and an abundance of cross references. Helpful maps and drawings add value to each work. Volume I of the Hebrew Scriptures and the volume of the Christian Greek Scriptures have a Foreword and extensive Appendix. Your choice of one volume with one of three hard-bound Bible study aids for $2.00. All six for $6.00. Send today.

Get the above mentioned books from your nearest congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, or write 40 Irwin Avenue, Toronto 5, Ont.

Bible Briefs

By A.A.M.

The Bible is rich in stories, and the purpose of this series is to encourage readers to look up for themselves the Bible versions of these incidents. If there are children in the family it is suggested that the story, and the Bible verses on which it is based, be read aloud.

Who was the man who cursed King David and threw stones at him when David was fleeing from an uprising led by his own son, Absalom? This man belonged to the house of Saul and he was angry that David was King of Israel in Saul's place. He held it against David that he had to wage war continually against the Philistines and other hostile tribes and now was engaged in civil strife. As this man strode along the hillside on the other side of the valley, he threw rocks at David and his companions, and cried, "Begone, begone, you worthless fellow! The Lord has avenged upon you all the blood of the house of Saul and given your kingdom into the hand of Absalom. See, your ruin is on you; for you are a man of blood."

This curse so angered one of David's near companions, Abishai, that he asked impetuously, "Why should this dead dog curse my lord the king? Let me go over and take off his head."

But David restrained Abishai, saying sadly, "Behold, my own son seeks my life; how much more now may this Benjamite. Let him alone, and let him curse; for the Lord has bidden him. It may be that the Lord will look upon my affliction and will repay me with good for this cursing of me today."

So David and his men ignored the insults of this man and trudged on until they came to the river Jordan. There they rested and refreshed themselves.

You can find this man's name and read this story in Second Samuel, Chapter 16, Verses 5 to 14.

Rink Finances

The washrooms bear the brunt of this peculiar brand of vandalism. A common mishap is for someone to stuff cigarette butts into the drains of the hand-basins, and to turn on the taps, causing an overflow.

An offer was received on behalf of a proposed town league, to rent the rink one night a week throughout the season for $350. On a three-hour basis this amounts to only about $7.50 an hour, whereas the usual tariff is $10 an hour. However, this was a guaranteed sum, and it was decided that this league would be offered the deal at $400, but that if after the first two games the league felt incapable of guarteeing $400, they would be charged a straight $60 for those first six hours.

On the subject of the recent proposal to have annual elections, only one of the organizations notified had made any comment — and that an encouraging "All Okay".

Hockey dates were discussed, and although the season doesn't start till December 11, several exhibition games are planned. Only one has actually been set. The Bank of Nova Scotia team will play here against the local Bombers this Sunday, November 20, at 2:30. It will be the first chance to see the revamped local team in action and it's hoped that the strong Financial League team won't be out of our class. It looks like a hard game, with several youngsters fighting for a berth on the varsity.

Lachute Curlers Open Seasonal Program

The season's activities in the "roarin' game" are now well underway, and the MacKimmie mixed bonspiel is being keenly contested. Highest-plus so far stands to the credit of F. Stein's team, with a score of 12 points.

Several rinks have been away visiting, and report good games.

The Saturday afternoon and evening mixed event is being well attended, with keen interest — a social evening with cards and refreshments adding to the enjoyment.

Present interest gives promise of a successful season in store.

Students Launching Salesmanship Campaign

The students are launching their own salesmanship campaign within the next few days in this district. This project is sponsored by the Students' Council, under the supervision of the Council president, Bev. McDonald, Treasurer Malcolm Cairns, and Campaign Manager Ernest Morrison, and with the co-operation of the Maclean-Hunter Publishing Company. The High School students are hoping to raise enough money to boost Council funds, and citizens of the community are urged to support this endeavor.

County Hockey League In Formation

Organizers of the "Argenteuil Hockey League" held their opening meeting on Tuesday of last week at the Palace Hotel; Armand Sabourin was named league president, and Gaetan Legault, last year's secretary of the league, was named vice-president.

Representatives of three clubs entered in the league last year were present at the meeting, which also accepted three new entries, namely Molson's, North River and Hotel Brownsburg.

The next meeting will be held at the Monette Hotel, St. Andrews East, on Thursday, November 24, at 8:30 p.m., when the new secretary will be chosen and regulations drawn up for adoption.

Scouts' Repair Shop Asks Donations of Toys

This week, one boy joined the local Scout Troop, namely Walter Karch, who was placed with the Eagle Patrol. Donald (Buzz) MacRae was also in attendance and agreed to act as another assistant of the troop. Fire Chief Geo. Y. Deacon spoke on fire prevention, emphasizing safety rules.

In the race for the honor pennant, the Wolf Patrol gained 11 points, and is standing on top with 384 points, followed by Fox 338, Eagle 319, and Bulldog 315.

It is planned to operate a toy shop this year at E. W. Albright & Sons', and the Scouts need public help. They will gladly receive broken and useless toys, to be found in almost every home. After a slight overhaul, these will be handed on to the poorer children, thus making everyone happy — the donor, the repairer, and the child. Please contact Tom Smith (tel. 1264-J-2) or Fred Stansfield (tel. 37-J), if you have broken or discarded toys to contribute to this effort.

THERE'S AN AIR OF CONSPIRACY ABOUT THIS

A civic secret is whispered to Toronto's Metro chairman, Fred Gardiner, by Helen Dzihra. Mr. Gardiner was trying out his best city garments—hat, chain of office and cape—which he will wear in Vancouver to witness the East-West football game on Nov. 26 when Miss Dzihra, also wearing what looks like parade costume, let him in on what a few other Torontonians plan for the event. Mr. Gardiner promised he would guard the information as though it were an atom formula. On Nov. 19 a 16-car train will take 200 Torontonians west for the game.

The Canadian Label

How do you spot a Canadian in the United States? Writing in The Financial Post, Napier Moore tells of this conversation with a chance acquaintance in a New York City restaurant:

"You're from Canada, aren't you?" I said yes, and asked him how he knew.

"Vest", he said, pointing to my waistcoat. "Nobody down here wears a vest."

I said that a lot of Canadians don't wear vests either, but that I found four extra pockets useful. Besides, it kept me warm in cool weather.

"Well," he said, "You've got to look after yourself."

Outdoor Roundup

with Joe Foster

It was the late Teddy Roosevelt, history book statesman and one of the greatest hunters and outdoorsmen of the 20th Century, who penned this philosophy: "In hunting, the finding and killing of game is after all but a part of the whole. The free, self-reliant, adventurous life, with its rugged and stalwart democracy; the wild surroundings, the grand beauty of the scenery, the chance to study the ways and habits of the woodland creatures — all these unite to give to the career of the wildnerness hunter its peculiar charm."

How Right He Was

Hunting is not all killing, at least not for the majority of hunters, or so I like to think. Of course there will always be the so-called sportsman who feels that he can only prove his masculinity by shooting at everything in sight, it doesn't much matter what, so long as it moves and has life. This is the fellow that David McCord must have been thinking about a few years ago when he wrote his satyric poem called "The Sportsman." After spending years pursuing every sort of furred and feathered creature, right down to the humble crow,

"Then suddenly, for no conspicuous reason,
He up and shot himself — well out of season."

Trophies Aren't Everything

If there's a moral, it is that the end of outdoor recreation is not the kill. It is not the dead bird in the game bag, the moose head dangling its dewlap over the dining room sideboard, the stuffed duck on the desk in the den. These things have a certain significance as trophies, yet no more than a rare wildflower pressed between the leaves of a book, or a good color photograph of some beautiful and inaccessible waterfall. For most who live in city or town there is undoubted physical and mental life in just getting out into the country. Another value of outdoor recreation is the solitude we can find only in wilderness environment. The opportunity to know and enjoy this solitude shrinks steadily for the simple reason that wilderness itself has shrunk to the vanishing point. Nor is this due only to population growth and the increased need of human beings to use the land. Even when we discover some bit of untouched wilderness and set it aside for preservation, the instinct to exploit it at once comes to the fore.

Wildland Husbandry

A final value of outdoor recreation is the thing we call wildland husbandry, in which is developed the sense of perception and the understanding and appreciation of nature which create something rather than consume it. Compare the satisfaction that comes from making it possible for ten instead of two families of ruffed grouse to be raised in the local woodlot with that which comes from bagging a day's limit. The first involves many things — the willingness to set aside land for food and cover, to learn what constitutes food and cover, to work with your hands providing these things, to understand the nesting habits of the birds through hours and days of observation in the field. These things are, in essence, creative. Bagging a day's limit on the other hand, involves no more than knowing of a good cover, ownership of a bird dog, a shotgun and a box of shells. It is a pleasant pastime, involving a few hours mild exercise, with the importance of a full game bag diminishing through the years.

Tricks of Tobruk In Camouflage for TV Sherwood Forest

Toronto — Th man who fooled the German and Italian air forces at Tobruk during World War II is using some of the same camouflage tricks on the great TV audiences who are enjoying "The Adventures of Robin Hood" (presented in Canada by Johnson & Johnson Ltd., and Wildroot Ltd.)

He is 43-year-old Peter Proud, Glasgow-born art director, whose work as camouflage officer to General Wavell's Western Desert Force saved thousands of Allied lives and preserved millions of dollars worth of stores and equipment from destruction by Rommel's bombers.

Proud devised innumerable camouflage tricks to hoodwink raiders during the historic seige of this desert fortress. Using an enormous cover of wire netting decorated with salvaged canvas, he was able to hide British naval vessels in Tobruk harbour — among them a gun boat, H.M.S. Gnat. The camouflage was erected at night. The next day, from the air, it looked like land, and when enemy planes came over none of the pilots spotted that Tobruk harbour had grown smaller and the land had grown bigger.

From then on, no enemy plane dive-bombed any vessel beneath Proud's faked cover. They were completely fooled.

Another trick devised by Major Proud was the building of dummy hangers and make-believe Hurricane fighter planes which the Germans bombed incessantly. Yet no damage was done to any one. He also had a team of men who used to strew around faker pieces of broken wood and metal as bomb damage so that Rommel thought his pilots had done much more harm than they really had.

On "Canadian Scene" The Mysterious Lure Of Oak Island, N.S.

It all started 160 years ago. Three young adventurers, making their way among the 365 islands that dot a section of Nova Scotia's south shore, chanced to beach their canoe on one of the islands and set out to explore its groves of oak trees. What they found began the legend of fabulous buried treasure that still has fortune-hunters punching holes through Oak Island.

Just a matter of weeks ago the latest expedition, headed by George Greene, an exploration engineer backed by Texas oil men, completed the first stage of the latest attempt to determine whether or not a treasure exists.

A CBC producer and technician were on the scene during the drilling and will give Canadians a word and sound picture of the hunt for the treasure — on "Canadian Scene", November 20 at 5 p.m. on Trans-Canada.

Back in 1795 the first men to come upon the possible treasure site were Vaughan, MacGinnis and Smith. In the middle of a clearing they found a single great oak, one mighty lower branch sawed off at a considerable distance from the trunk. Marks on the branch indicated that long ago a block and tackle had been swung from it. The trunk of the tree bore curious markings, and under the improvised derrick there was a depression in the grass extending in a circle about 13 feet in diameter.

The trio dug down 10 feet and struck an oak platform. Unable to make any further progress they went to Mahone Bay, a small fishing settlement, to get help. No assistance was forthcoming, however-owing to a local superstition about ghosts on the islands. After a few more futile attempts at removing the planking, the three young men were forced to give up.

News of their discovery spread. Six years later, a doctor in Truro, Nova Scotia, contacted the three men. Impressed with what he heard, he formed a company and opened a shaft at the location to a depth of 95 feet. Every 10 feet a new protective platform had to be removed. At the 90-foot level a stone with a "curious inscription" was found. One self-styled expert claimed that the stone indicated that "10 feet below two million pounds lies buried."

After reaching a depth of 95 feet the crew broke off for a day of rest. By the time they returned disaster had struck. The pit was filled with water to within 25 feet of the top. Bailing was to no avail and another shaft dug near the original was flooded when attempts were made to tunnel through to the point where the treasure was thought to be. Its funds exhausted, the company collapsed.

In the years that followed several other companies were formed and thousands of dollars invested. But the secret of the treasure still remains with its legend. However, early explorations have uncovered some interesting facts. It is not now believed that the treasure, if any, was that of any pirate. A large force, toiling for weeks, would have been needed to provide the hiding place. Furthermore, the elaborate protective devices, including what is thought to be a system of flooding tunnels, are the work of an engineer.

The mystery of Oak Island remains to be solved. Perhaps no treasure will ever be found. Yet this story of a buried fortune is still one of the most thrilling in this land filled with reminders of the past.

Prisoners Enjoy Useful Hobbies

Kingston, Ont. (CP) — A 30-year-old landscape artist who had no formal art training is one of about 250 prisoners engaging in hobby-crafts at Kingston penetentiary.

An article in the prison paper says the men are permitted to spend up to $50 a month on materials for their crafts, and may sell or give to the members of their family the products of their labor.

Hobbycraft was introduced in 1950 as an activity calculated to ease the boredom of prisoners, in accord with the report of the Archambault commission on prison reform of some years earlier.

So far however, the article claims, "no effort has been spent by the authorities to supply leadership and training essential if original Canadian designs are to be created."

The hobbyists concentrate on such items as lamps, ashtrays, wallets and other saleable items, and with the proceeds buy more material. One prisoner, a one-time embalmer, lacking clay creates his models from a mixture of newspaper sheddings, flour and water.

Another prisoner, a former tailor, developed an urge to carve wood and work in wood inlay. He has made lamps, jewel boxes and inlaid pictures, and in three years has sold more than 200 pieces.

Canadian Artists in Opening Recital Of Community Concerts Season

It was refreshing to note that Lachute Community Concerts Association had engaged two of Canada's leading piano artists to open its season for 1955-56. Canadians at last are beginning to realize that musicians trained and developed in this country, when given the opportunity, are on a par with those from other lands.

Margaret Parsons and Clifford Poole, man-and-wife piano team, gave an outstanding performance last Wednesday evening in the High School auditorium, before a large and appreciative audience. Both artists are accomplished performers, with many years of experience in solo and orchestral recitals. Poole, a member of the Royal Conservatory Faculty, University of Western Ontario, London, is an ardent arranger of music, and many of his scores were played at this concert.

The first part of the program was composed of three fairly light musical fantasia, Waltzes by Mozart-Poole, a graceful pastoral score by Bach, and Toccata (Bach-Poole). The last piece was a bright and cheerful number, with the harpsichord effect.

Part II featured an unusual inspiration by Moussorgsky, and arranged by Poole, entitled "Tableaux d'une exposition", a musical drawing based on an art exposition by Victor Hartmann, an intimate friend of Moussorgsky. Fourteen different tone poems filled the theme of this musical number interpreted by the duo team. . . The intermission followed.

Contemporary France, musically speaking, was the composition to follow. Francis Poulenc, a war prisoner of World War I, and an individualist composer, had arranged a duo-piano setting of his modern "Sonata". This was in the usual musical trinity (Prelude, Rustique and Finale), though the composition was far from usual, being quite modern in its rhythm, and of close harmonics. Another French composer, Saint-Saens, was featured with the next two numbers, his "Aquarium" and the familiar "Danse Macabre" — the latter always a favorite with pianoforte-loving audiences.

The final part of the program could be termed "ultra modern" for the untrained ear, as two compositions by Clifford Poole and the late modern master, Gershwin, featured the closing numbers. "Harmonic Surprises" was the description given to the first composition of Poole's Aeolian theme, a blending (or clashing) of close harmonics in the scale — a very unusual number. His "Prelude" was also contemporary, with modern designs, though the layman might not appreciate these pieces as much as some of the old masters. Gershwin's immortal "Rhapsody in Blue" a semi-jazz composition that has now reached the symphonic stages and is widely acclaimed, was the closing rendition of the pianoforte team. It made a strong finale.

After enthusiastic acclaim, Margaret Parsons and Clifford Poole gave three encores, the Russian composition, "Peter and the Wolf", a modern fairy tale for the young, a Brazilian Dance, and a pleasing transcription "The Nightingales".

Live Fish Demonstrate Pump

Having perfected a non-clogging pump without restrictive passages that cause stoppages, a manufacturer's engineers present a dramatic demonstration to prove their claims. Prospects in the food industry, municipal authorities, and industrial waste engineers, are shown the pump at work pumping live fish, whole and undamaged, into a large glass tank. — Marketing

Oven Meals

by the
Consumer Section,
Canada Dept. of Agriculture
Marketing Service

One way of preparing meals that has continued to win favor over the years is that of cooking everything in the oven. Sometimes even the next day's dessert or meat course is included in order to save time and to make full use of the oven heat. Oven meals should be timed in such a way that everything will be cooked to perfection at serving time.

Oven-cooked foods retain their good flavor and attractive appearance — a decided advantage when the meal cannot be served quite as soon as planned. This, and the fact that there is practically no last-minute preparation, makes an oven meal a good choice when entertaining for the hostess is then free to join her guests and can always delay serving a few minutes if necessary.

The Consumer Section recommends a 325°F. oven for roasting or baking most cuts of meat so this is the temperature at which a good many oven meals are likely to be cooked. Other dishes which cook well at this temperature should be chosen to complete the meal. For example, if a roast of pork is being cooked, the potatoes may be cooked whole around the roast or they might be scalloped. In either case they will cook in about an hour.

Baked pepper squash halves and cut up Hubbard squash are both good with pork at this time of year and they take approximately the same time to cook as the potatoes. Of course, grated or sliced vegetables — carrots, turnips, parsnips and so on can be baked, too. A little water, about one-quarter cup, and salt should be added to these vegetables and they will cook in approximately an hour in a tightly covered casserole. Frozen vegetables may be baked, also, but less water and less time will be required. Canned vegetables will heat in 15 to 20 minutes in a 325°F. oven.

For dessert there are many choices including apple up-side-down cake and other apple puddings, custard, rice pudding, bread pudding, baked apples or other fruit, gingerbread and meringues.

Casserole dishes, according to one definition, are delightfully mixed-up affairs which may contain all the ingredients of a complete meal. In addition, they are easy to prepare and require little or no attention while cooking. When brought to the table piping hot and fragrant, these one-dish meals look tempting, taste delicious and are nourishing as well.

There is no limit to the kinds of casseroles for besides the different basic ingredients that may be used, the sauces, seasonings and toppings can also be varied. For example a macaroni and cheese casserole is good made with milk or canned tomatoes or a cream or tomato sauce. Chopped onion, parsley, or other seasonings provide a change in flavor and anyone of the following — buttered crumbs, grated cheese, crumbled prepared cereals, a little paprika or chopped parsley may be sprinkled on top. In any case, when making casseroles it is important to combine foods and seasonings that team well together — foods that harmonize in color, texture and flavor. When this is kept in mind it is easy to make a dish that is good-tasting and unusual with eye and appetite appeal to please everyone.

It is important for the housewife to have a hand towel close by on all occasions. Today the housewife makes use of so much electrical apparatus, and none of this equipment should be touched by wet hands, since water is a conductor of electricity. . . The housewife often has her hands in water; she should therefore keep a towel handy to dry them before touching any of this equipment.

SOUTH AFRICAN WOMEN FIGHT RACIAL POLICY

Vancouver (CP) — Racial segregation in South Africa is being determinedly opposed by many women of that country, Thomas Franck, 24-year-old Vancouverite, said in an interview here.

A University of British Columbia and Harvard graduate, Mr. Franck has just returned from a world-circling tour sponsored by the Canadian Institute of International Affairs.

He said South African women had formed the Women's Committee in Defence of the Constitution and had marched to the Pretoria parliament buildings 10,000 strong with a petition containing 1,000,000 signatures.

They also attend every function where a cabinet minister appears — dressed in full mourning. In absolute silence they line the route the minister is to take.

Color in the Home!

By G. E. Mortimore
("All Aboard" Columnist)

We were talking about colors. "I can't get used to these domestic appliances in varied hues," I remarked. "Good old white suits me A red fringe leaves me cold."

"Does a green stove get you heated up?" asked the girl cashier in the cafe.

"I burn when I see one," I said glumly.

"The other day I saw a fridge in the tired red-brown color they paint railway stations," said the girl. "Railroad station red."

"No doubt it's a sign of decadence," I observed. "The machine age bursting into unhealthy bloom Approaching end of our civilization."

"My washing machine and fridge and everything else in the kitchen is colored rose and gold," said the waitress at the end of the counter.

"Oh, no," I muttered. "You mean everything in the kitchen? The refrigerator too?"

"Yes," said the waitress.

"I'm sorry," I said.

"The rest of the kitchen was in those colors, so I thought the appliances should be rose and gold too," she said defensively. "They look good."

"I'll bet it's an attractive kitchen," I said, without enthusiasm.

"It isn't exactly rose, come to think of it," said the waitress, "It's more passion pink."

"I don't question your taste," I said, "but isn't passion pink a bit out of place in the kitchen? I don't like the idea of passion in the kitchen. Sounds as though it would interfere with the dinner."

The waitress gave a shrug and delivered my bacon and tomato sandwich. Then she returned to her seat at the end of the counter and held up an open magazine, in which a passion-pink sink blushed in all its glory.

"That color," she said.

"I can see how you might be very happy with it," I said. "I suppose I could learn to live with a pink sink. But a pink car, or a blue and crimson car, no. I don't think an automobile has any right to look like a sunset on wheels."

I couldn't stir up any argument on that subject, so I finished by sandwich in silence and left. Later I ran into a man who spoiled the rest of the day for me. He claimed he had actually seen a tartan refrigerator.

Fashions

Three good pieces add up to one excellent spectator sports outfit that fits neatly into the wardrobe of the college girl or careerist. The blouse is of striped jersey, green on taupe, with a drapable neckline and push-up sleeves. The slim skirt goes in for a minimum of waistband, preferring to rest snugly on the hipbones. To top it off, there is a sleeveless jacket with rib knit at the armholes and neck, the fabric, taupe jersey. The skirt is lined to prevent sagging.

Carpet Squares Like Tiles

A carpet firm has taken a tip from the hard flooring manufacturers, some of whose products are made in squares to be laid like tiles. The new type carpeting is in 18-inch squares, any of which can be replaced if damaged in any way. Squares are available in twelve hues, can be arranged in any color pattern desired. — Marketing

Q.W.I. and United Nations

Mrs. G. E. LeBaron, of North Hatley, president of the Quebec Women's Institutes, is spending a few days in New York. Mrs. LeBaron is among the group making the trip to visit the United Nations while it is in session.

Mrs. LeBaron is convener of the Committee on United Nations and International Exchange Programs for the Federated Women's Institutes of Canada. This is a new committee and was initiated two years ago after the Toronto Conference of the Associated Country Women of the World. Its purpose is "to foster understanding among women of all nations and spread the contacts made at that time," to quote from Mrs. LeBaron's directive to provincial conveners of that committee.

Special projects for the various UN agencies are also promoted, and information collected from provincial units. This is sent to member societies in the ACWW and to Mrs. Geo. F. Roberts, consultant for ACWW at UN headquarters in New York.

Books in Your Budget

(Copyright) — By NANCY CLEAVER —

Are there books in your family budget? If they have no definite place, they are apt to be crowded out by other leisure activities and other demands on your purse. Young Canada's Book Week in November is a good time for parents to discuss with each other and their children this vital topic.

Most people spend their spare time on what they really want to do and their money on what brings them most satisfaction. When mother and dad look back on their childhood, and compare it with their children's lives, today's world is a different less leisurely one. A generation ago there was no TV, much less radio listening and movie going. But if in their youth, parents gained a love of books, they will want to pass on to their sons and daughters this great source of joy.

Because reading must compete with so many other exciting activities, it is more important than ever that good books, attractive and worthwhile, should be readily available in our homes. If children are "exposed" to books, the right choice of books for their age, they are almost sure to "catch" a love of literature.

Regular visits to the public library are valuable. A teacher who is enthusiastic about books may stimulate a child's reading. But there is no substitute for parents who love books and take time themselves to read. Fathers and mothers who believe that a good book is always an excellent investment are likely to have children to whom books matter.

Reference books such as a good dictionary, Rodget's Thesaurus, Bartlett's Quotations, etc., should have their own place. Then they can be found quickly when any member of the family wishes to check on a fact.

A number of homes also have a section in the family library for plays, for poetry and for other type of books. The supplementary reading list for schools offers a wide range of titles in various classifications. These frequently give guidance in the purchase of a book.

Not long ago a librarian mentioned that she had often seen an adolescent discover the fascination of biography in reading one of these prescribed books. She added "once a reader of biography, always a reader of biography."

We agreed with her and we recalled that Archer Wallace, when he was a guest in our home years ago, was asked "What is a good rule in choosing a book?" He answered, "You'll never go wrong on a biography!" This stimulated us to explore more faithfully this fascinating field.

In a fine biography the reader enters into the life and thought of another person to an amazing degree. In such a book as "We Keep a Light" by Evelyn H. Richardson (Ryerson) the reader finds himself sniffing the salt sea air of the Atlantic and tending the precious light whose beams keep ships on the right path, or in "Emily Carr as I Knew Her" by Carl Pearson (Clark Irwin) the reader visits on the B.C. Coast and lives among the giant trees. In "The Old School Tie" by Arthur Tuckerman (MacMillan) we enter into the experiences of an American at an English School and enjoy his comments on the life there.

A book case for a child's room can be made by painting an orange crate. A book shelf is an inexpensive addition. A boy or girl likes beloved books among other prized possessions.

Don't reserve buying books, just for Birthday and Christmas gifts! Give them the place they deserve in the family budget! Then no matter where you live they can echo Edgar Frank's words:

"Think not my life is small
Because you see a puny place;
I have my books; I have my dreams;
Enchantment that transcends
Both time and place.
And so I live in Paradise,
Not here."

Says Men's Rights Equally Important

Calgary (CP) — Women today are robbing men of their masculinity says B. D. Treat, educationist of Flint, Mich.

Women, he told a mirriage guidance clinic here, have taken over smoking, drinking, many jobs and even the modes of dress that once were masculine symbols.

He outlined the methods to "re-establish men as men in our culture, beginning with expectant fathers and their feelings." The feeling of the prospective mother has always ben taken into consideration, he said, but no one ever bothered to think about the father.

He said the fathers should be taken through the maternity ward before the child is born, and afterwards he should be allowed to handle the child and help look after it.

Mr. Treat said children can do much at the elementary school level to develop a man's personality, since to the child the father represents masculinity, the outside world and competence.

The educationist said parents should not tease children about adolescent love affairs. He said such action is one sure way to cause a rift in the child-parents relationship.

"What we do to adolescents is terrific," he said. "Their love affairs mean as much to them as ours do to us, and our treatment of the situation is sad."

THE THOMAS

Morin Heights

On November 16 a Legion Night was held at the Legion Hall, when a pleasant social evening was enjoyed by all present.

Education Matters

Following the report of the school board meeting printed in last week's Watchman, it is now learned that a petition has been forwarded to the Superintendent of Education, on behalf of the Protestant School ratepayers of Morin Heights, asking him to invoke the second paragraph of Article 373 of the Education Act.

Transportation for Morin Heights

On November 13 there was a session of the Provincial Transport Board, who will be hearing complaints against the bus service provided in this section. The Village of St. Sauveur and the Municipality of Morin Heights will be represented by Camille de Martigny, lawyer, of St. Jerome. Witnesses will be called and heard by the board. . . It is hoped that improved transportation between Montreal and Morin Heights will be the outcome of this hearing.

Party and Presentation

On Thursday last at the Legion Hall, about 75 citizens of this community gathered to honor Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Lacken, who were recently married. With a few well-chosen words Mayor C. D. Campbell presented the couple with a coffee table and silver hot water jug, on behalf of their many friends. Mr. Lacken then thanked the group for their gift and good wishes. The Rev. Robert Blair and the Rev. H. G. Baugh then wished the couple every good wish for a happy future.

This function, incidentally, was the first community event to be held in the Legion Hall. A social evening and refreshments were enjoyed.

Special Speaker

At the Sunday service in Morin Heights United Church, guest speaker was Mr. Cecil Roberts, of the Gideon Association. His address was on behalf of the Gideon work. The service, largely attended, was conducted by the Rev. R. Blair, B.A., B.D.

Mr. Douglas Blair, who is a student at McGill, was the week-end guest of his parents, the Rev. and Mrs. R. Blair.

Mrs. K. Nesbitt and daughter, of Montreal, are spending a couple of weeks with Mr. and Mrs. W. Nesbitt.

Mrs. F. T. Watchorn and Miss Doris Watchorn were in Montreal recently, visiting friends.

Marriage

On Saturday last the marriage of Miss Dorothy Jean Elder and Mr. Bertram Holmes was performed by the Rev. R. Blair in Morin Heights United Church. Friends wish them much happiness for the future.

Mrs. H. Lacken entertained her sister, Mrs. Robinson, and other friends from Montreal, to dinner recently.

Avoca

Mrs. Wm. H. Kelly and daughters, of Aylmer, Que., Mrs. Beaufoy, of Montebello, and Mrs. Thos. J. Young from Port Colborne, Ont., were visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. McPhee last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Irwin Arthurs and family, Mr. and Mrs. Grant Arthurs, all of Green Bank, N.B., have now returned home.

Mr. Claude Andrews and Mr. Houben, of Labrieville, Que., have returned to their respective homes.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Bates gave a birthday party for the former and his brother, James, of Lachute, on Saturday evening. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. James Bates and family, of Lachute, and Mr. and Mrs. Wm. McGill, of Grenville.

Mr. and Mrs. Sandy Bates spent Sunday at the home of their daughter, Mrs. Hugh Bates and Mr. Bates.

Mrs. Truhine and family, of Montreal, spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Tomachevsky.

Miss Marie Provencal and a friend, from Lachute, spent the week-end with her parents.

Mrs. Jos. E. Provencal is visiting her sister in Montreal for a week.

Visitors of Mr. Jos. E. Provencal during the week-end were Mr. and Mrs. Edward Provencal and family, and Mr. Windsor MacRae, of Harrington; Mr. and Mrs. Shirley Mahon, Eileen and Joyce Dewar, from Vankleek Hill; Mr. James Garland, Irving Crawford and Edward Graham, of Ottawa.

Grateful Acknowledgment

Mr. Sidney McNeil wishes to sincerely thank his friends in Avoca, Pte. au Chene and Calumet, for money collected on his behalf by Herbert Brown and Percy Young, following the fire which destroyed his home. These funds have been devoted towards his re-establishment in a comfortable little home.

St. Andrews East

Miss Valerie Roberts, of Westmount, Que., spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. L. York.

Mrs. Townsend, of Rosemount, Que., is spending this week with her daughter, Mrs. George Gates.

Miss Harvey and Miss Robertson, of Montreal, spent Sunday with Major and Mrs. S. Forbes.

Mr. and Mrs. John Rayson, of Dorion, Que., and Miss Helen Rayson, of Dorval, Que., spent the week-end with Mrs. Hugh Rayson.

Mrs. Harry Coles, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Coles and family, of Toronto, spent a few days last week with Mr. and Mrs. D. Morrison.

Mr. and Mrs. Benj. Howell and Mr. E. Mount, of Montreal, spent Saturday with Mr. and Mrs. D. Morrison. Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Snadden, of Lachute, also visited them on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Calder and Bill were in Montreal on Sunday and were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Fotis Mavriplis, who were entertaining in honor of the silver anniversary of the marriage of Mrs. Mavriplis' parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Calder, of the Town of Mount Royal.

Miss Heather Rodger, of Bishop's College, Lennoxville, Que., spent the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Rodger.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Entwistle and little daughter, Maureen, of Montreal, spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. W. Entwistle.

Musician Evangelists In Rivington, Avoca

Mr. and Mrs. Greenway will conduct an evangelistic campaign in the Rivington and Avoca Baptist Churches. Meetings will be held in Rivington November 24 through November 29, and in Avoca November 30 to December 4 (no meetings Saturday). Weeknight services will be at 7:30 p.m.

Evangelist Reginal Greenway is a former concert artist, and Mrs. Greenway a skilled performer on the Irish harp.

Mr. Greenway, in addition to his violin playing, adds vocal numbers, but the most novel feature is the Theremin, an electronic instrument played entirely without touching, and responding to the wave of the hand.

All are welcome to come and meet the Greenways and hear their message.

Christieville Girl Is Bride at Morin Heights

Holmes - Elder

On Saturday, November 12, at two o'clock in the Morin Heights United Church, the marriage was solemnized of Dorothy Jean Elder, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Elder, of Christieville, and Bertram Garnet Holmes, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Stanley Holmes, of Montreal.

The Rev. Robert Blair officiated. Mr. Carl Elder, cousin of the bride, played the wedding music. Standards of white mums and pink gladioli adorned the church.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was gowned in a ballerina-length gown of white net over taffeta. The fitted bodice was of lace, with matching lace panels on the skirt; her fingertip veil was held by a lace coronet, and her bouquet was a semi-cascade of red roses and white carnations.

Mrs. A. J. Faulconbridge, sister of the bride, was matron of honor, wearing a ballerina-length gown of powder blue net over taffeta, and carrying a nosegay of pink carnations.

Mr. Stephen Holmes, brother of the groom, acted as best man, and Mr. Howard Elder, brother of the bride, was usher.

Mrs. Elder, mother of the bride, wore a grey flowered nylon gown with black accessories and a corsage of red roses. Mrs. Holmes, mother of the groom, was gowned in mauve flowered charcoal-grey tissue taffeta, with black accessories, and a corsage of pink carnations.

Following the reception at the home of the bride's parents, the couple left for a motor trip to the United States, the bride travelling in a grey suit, powder blue hat, black accessories, and with a corsage of yellow roses. Upon their return they will reside in Montreal.

Weir

Mrs. P. Story, of Gray Rocks Inn, St. Jovite, spent the past week at the home of her sister, Mrs. E. M. Schippel and Mr. Schippel.

Mrs. D. Labrosse, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Noel Labrosse and family, is spending some time at her residence here.

Mrs. Stan Smith, with her small son, spent the past week visiting friends in Montreal.

Mrs. Basil Kerr spent a few days at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Thompson, in Montreal last week.

Mrs. Chas. Mountain, of Montreal, is spending a fortnight at her cottage, having as her guests Messrs. John and Clifford Mountain, of Montreal and St. Eustache.

Mr. Gordon Beaven is here from Belcourt, to spend the present week.

Sunday guests at Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Williams' included Mr. and Mrs. Wenville MacMillan, of Montreal, and Mr. and Mrs. S. Richer and daughter, Connie, of Dorval.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Williams, of Montreal, were recent guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Williams.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Thompson, of Montreal, spent the week-end visiting their parents here.

Mrs. Jos. Gelinas, of Montreal, spent the week-end at the home of her sister, Mrs. E. J. Craig and Mr. Craig.

Remembrance and Pre - Christmas Themes in W. Inst. Branch Meetings

Most of the W.I. branch meetings heard reports of the county semi-annual convention, and also observed the two-minute silence in honor of these who died in the service of their country.

Arundel branch had 23 members and three visitors present. The Arundel History will be on sale this month, at $1.50 per copy. The sum of $46.80 was realized by the sale of poppies. A donation of $25 was given to the Quebec Service Fund. A Christmas parcel was sent overseas, and it was planned to make wearing apparel for three little girls attending the local school. An interesting film depicting the life of an Eskimo boy was shown.

Brownsburg members donated articles for Christmas Cheer parcels. The Christmas meeting was planned and Christmas parcels are to be sent to military personnel outside of Canada. Remembrances were sent to members and friends ill in hospital. Eleven more books were donated to the school library. An entertainment for teachers, school board and the Home and School executive was planned, with Mrs. Stevens acting as convener for this project.

Jerusalem Bethany had 14 members, answering the roll-call by buying a poppy and wearing it. A paper on Canada was read, also two poems, "Whoever Makes a Garden" and "Where Poppies Grow." The sum of $5 was donated to the Salvation Army, and donations were given to two members who had suffered fire losses.

Lachute members responded to the roll-call with a health hint. A letter was read from the Town Council asking for recommendations from the Lachute W.I. branch to improve the town. Dr. Eric Mongeon gave an interesting talk on fluorine in drinking water, and its effects on dental health.

Pioneer branch meeting was attended by 14 members and three visitors. Films on a trip through the Southern States were shown by Mr. Jack MacKimmie. A quilt is to be made to swell the funds. A cup and saucer was presented to a member who is moving away.

Upper Lachute - East End realized the sum of $8.75 for the Legion, from the sale of poppies to members. Mrs. Geo MacGibbon gave an interesting talk on the "Rights of Married Women in the Province of Quebec." A donation of 25 cents per member was given to the Educational Fund. A Christmas party is planned by this branch.

From 1945 to 1954 registration of motor vehicles in Canada increased from 1,497,081 to 3,641,065.

Appreciates Service of St. Andrews Fire Crew

TO THE EDITOR

Cushing, Que.,
Nov. 15, 1955

The Watchman, Lachute.

Dear Mr. Editor:

I would like to express my appreciation through your paper to the St. Andrews East Fire Brigade for their prompt and speedy service to a fire in Cushing on Sunday night at the home of Mr. Henri Renaud, where the Volunteer Fire Brigade appeared at the scene of the fire within ten minutes of being called by telephone with their hose wagon and 500 gallon auxiliary water tank, under the management of Fire Chief Edgar Monette, Assistant Chief Antonio Cousineau and firemen René Charron, Gaëtan Lavigne and Michel Legault.

Most Travelled Family of Bell(e)s

WHEN IT COMES TO TRAVELLING—by telephone wire that is—you'll go far to match the accumulated record, of the five Martin sisters of Montreal. Reading from left to right, Marguerite, Raymonde, Lillian, Yolande, and Huguette, all work at the Bell Telephone Company of Canada. They share a mutual interest in providing fast, courteous Long Distance Service to thousands of telephone customers. Marguerite, an assistant chief operator, was the first to join the company, ten years ago. She must have said some nice things to her sisters about the Bell! Huguette, the youngest, completed the quintette just over a year ago. We like having more than one member of a family sharing in telephone work. It says more forcefully than we ever could that "The Bell is a good place to work." We think, too, that as long as we have employees like the Martin sisters, you'll have the kind of telephone service we want you to have always.

Seasonal Unemployment Study for Lachute District

Following is the second in a series of articles written and contributed by Mr. G. A. Downing, manager of the National Employment office at Lachute, dealing with the subject of "Seasonal Unemployment in our Area."

"SEASONAL UNEMPLOYMENT IN CONSTRUCTION INDUSTRY"

It is estimated that the number of persons who ordinarily work in this industry, is reduced by between 25 to 85% during the winter off-season, depending on the locality.

Why does winter become an off-season for construction? There is a fake impression that winter building is costlier and that the finished project is not as sound as one constructed in warm weather. Winter construction can be as sound as that of summer, provided that some planning and foresight is used.

In many instances, contractors will submit lower price quotations on work which is to be done during their slack season, as compared to work which would be done during their peak period. A very important factor is the availability of the most competent skilled labor and choice material in stock. Consider a construction which has been closed in before the snow flies and men can work under cover; costs can certainly be comparable to warm weather building. Such wintertime progress will lead to earlier occupancy and often, more than compensate for extra precautions on the part of the builder.

The reason that construction workers demand such high rates of pay is certainly due to the seasonal duration of their employment. Considering the probability that they will suffer a winter of unemployment, they demand rates which will compensate for their period of unemployment and reduced income. Should these workers be afforded the occasion to work at their occupation year round, there is a possibility that rates could be decreased. Most employees in this industry whose services are retained year round by their employer, receive a commensurately lower rate than those who are employed on a seasonal basis. Another point of interest is the shortage of manpower created by such a large demand during the peak season. What causes prices to rise in any market? Supply and demand is the reason. The same applies to the labor market. Where the bricklayer demands $2.75 per hour during the season where his kind are scarce, he will only receive $2.00 or $2.25 per hour during his slack season. The same applies to local qualified carpenters who are paid $1.50 an hour during the summer, their rate of pay will be but $1.25 an hour or less during the off-season, because other qualified carpenters are available then and are not during the summer months.

Reductions in building costs would not be limited to manpower alone. Manufacturers and suppliers of construction supplies and equipment experience costly production and storage problems due to the fact that there is a peak demand for their products during the summer months and considerable falling off during the cold months.

In the foregoing, the practical and economic sides have been presented. Let us now consider the human aspect. To the man or woman who honestly wants to work and needs employment, nothing is more depressing and demoralizing than not being able to find a suitable job. To this person, who might even be your next door neighbor, no amount of unemployment insurance benefits is a satisfactory substitute for the regular pay envelope, for steady work. Unemployment has a serious psychological effect on any capable person. Such persons sense a feeling of lack of confidence, uselessness, lack of responsibility and many times this even affects their output upon returning to work.

The problem of seasonal unemployment, in the construction industry, cannot be solved by any one man or industry. This requires ingenuity, imagination and ambition on the part of businessmen, workers, unions and governments at all levels. This is your problem as well as mine and we can all combat it by making it a community effort, by planning some of our construction projects during the winter months. If you have contemplated construction, you would be wise to start it now and take advantage of the benefits to be derived.

Next week's article will discuss the "Effect of the Manufacturing Industry on Seasonal Unemployment."

Long Journey Ended

Armistice Day Rites Observed

effort, year after year, to commemorate Armistice Day. It is so easy to forget, with time, the sorrow and devastation that the two Great Wars brought. . . I believe that our young people should be occasionally reminded of the horrors of war and the need for peace. It is, after all, these young people who will one day make it possible. we pray, that universal peace may prevail."

Philippe Valois, M.P., in tribute to those who made the supreme sacrifice "not for money — not even for courage — but for the principles of right living" observed that it was not enough to make speeches on this great day in our national life, but it was befitting that we remember always, that our lives be so guided as to preserve the peace. He added, to similar sentiments from the Mayor, a note of personal sympathy to those for whom this day had a personal significance.

The Hon. W. M. Cottingham, Minister of Mines, voiced fitting remarks, concluding in this vein:

"There are few of us today who cannot recall the loss of a father, a son, a brother or a dear friend. It is proper to repeat here the famous sentence uttered fifteen years ago by that great leader, Sir Winston Churchill, during the battle of the air over Great Britain: 'Never was so much owed by so many to so few.' So few indeed, by comparison with the millions who stayed behind and whose lives were saved, thanks to the courage of brave men and women. . . They have not died in vain. We cherish their memory. We shall never break faith with those who died. Their past is still alive, their spirit is not dead. Long live our heroes!"

The Rev. Wilson Bridge, United Church minister, while dwelling on the Remembrance theme also stressed the obligation which it implies:

". . . We remember them, not casually, but with pride and thankfulness.

"But is there anything else we can do? Yes, there is another thing. We can, and must, strive to be worthy of them and their sacrifice. They died to defend those things which we must ever hold dear — freedom, justice, tolerance, mercy, honesty and fair dealing. . . It is not enough merely to hold a memorial service such as this, once a year. We must, by striving to uphold the things in whose defence they died, prove that we always remember them. If we fail them, then they, the great legion of the Mighty Dead, will become the forgotten army of two World Wars. . . May God keep us steadfast, and may we prove worthy of our heritage."

The Rev. Paul-Emile Lauzon, vicar of St. Julien Parish, was the concluding orator. Speaking from the tenets of the Catholic faith, he mourned those who had died without expiation of their sins, "the soldiers, airmen and sailors who gave their lives for their country, being no exception to this general creed," and advocated prayer for their salvation as the most eloquent gesture of remembrance.

The depositing of wreaths by representatives of numerous groups, clubs, business firms and families, concluded with the playing of "God Save the Queen."

Delay Issue of Phone Directory

In view of the many changes which will soon be made in some of the Bell Telephone's exchanges in the Laurentian area, the local telephone directory, usually distributed in December, will not appear before March of 1956 — R. Dupuy, Bell Manager for this region, announced this week.

The next issue of the telephone "who's who" will list hundreds of new numbers, including all those of customers in Ste. Adele and St. Sauveur where the new two-letter five-figure numbering plan will be introduced on April 1.

Also listed in the directory will be the new numbers of Mont Rolland customers for whom individual and two-party telephone service will be available at the beginning of April. These customers are now served by rural lines, but additional dial equipment is being installed in the Ste. Adele exchange building to extend individual and two-party service to them.

As in the past years, the Laurentian directory will contain the names, addresses and telephone numbers of all subscribers in Brownsburg, plus those served by the exchanges in Lachute, St. Andrews East, Ste. Scholastique, Ste. Agathe, Arundel, Labelle, L'Annonciation, Nominingue, St. Jovite, Val Barrette, St. Jerome, Morin Heights, Ste. Adele, St. Lin, St. Sauveur and Shawbridge.

HAY AHOY!

Some farmers in the picturesque, low-lying Suffolk Broads district of England bring in the hay by water. So it was logical for a British boat builder to use lightweight aluminum to produce a 650-pound punt capable of carrying a load of hay more than six times its own weight.

In Canada aluminum is better known among farmers as a non-rusting, heat-reflecting, easily handled material for barns and roofs and silos . . . though of course it has many other farm uses, from milk cans to windmill blades. No hay-boats, though.

Quebec Weeklies Assn. Takes Shape With Holding of First Annual Meet

For a number of years the weekly newspapers of Ontario and Quebec were in a united association. Circumstances however made a change necessary, and they separated; as a result, a newly formed offspring of the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association has been formed, known as the Quebec Division.

The first gathering of this group was held last week-end at the Queen's Hotel, Montreal, with a very good attendance and an initial membership of 28.

Various topics of interest were discussed to the advantage of both publishers and readers, and it is expected that the Association will steadily grow in numbers and prestige.

Officers for the ensuing year are: President, Ken Chisholm, St. Laurent News; vice-president, D. R. Wilson, Shawinigan Standard; secretary-treasurer, R. A. Giles, Lachute Watchman.

Directors — Lucien Guertin, St. Maurice; Lloyd Bliss, Stanstead; David Dickson, Shawville; J. P. Legare, Rimouski; André Wallot, Valleyfield.

Among those attending the gathering were John Vopni, president of C.W.N.A.; Wm. Telfer, manager of C.W.N.A.; Don Fairbairn, Neighborly News commentator of the CBC; and Roy Conway, of Cockfield, Brown and Co.

Sponsors of social events were the Canadian Bankers Association, the Shawinigan Water and Power Company, Dow Brewery, Johnston, Everson and Charlesworth, Household Finance, and Canadair Limited.

Next year's convention will be held during the fall months at Quebec City.

Hockey Stars at Weeklies' Convention

Executive members of the Quebec Division of the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association were greeted by Maurice (Rocket) Richard and Bernard (Boom-Boom) Geoffrion during their annual convention in Montreal last week-end. Canadiens' high-scoring pair welcomed officers of the Quebec Division on behalf of Dow Brewery, which they joined this fall as sales representatives. Left to right are: Lucien Guertin, of L'Echo du St. Maurice; R. A. Giles, of The Lachute Watchman; André Wallot, of Le Progrès, Valleyfield; Boom-Boom Geoffrion; Ken Chisholm, of the St. Laurent News and president of the Quebec Division; Rocket Richard; W. Sawdon, immediate past-president of the CWNA; and D. R. Wilson, of the Shawinigan Falls Standard. Among those attending the convention were Raymond Douville, president of L'Association des hebdomadaires de langue française du Canada, and Lionel Bertrand, M.P., secretary-treasurer of the same organization.

Radiology Topic At Lions Club

Dr. Roger Vallee, radiologist at the Verdun General Hospital for the past seven years, was speaker at the Lions Club meeting Tuesday evening, giving an insight into the specialized field of X-ray diagnosis and therapy — with which a fair proportion of people, within their lifetime, have some contact or other. Of special interest to listeners who had been at the receiving end of an X-ray machine, the topic was also informative to those less directly concerned.

The discovery of penetrating rays by Roentgen, and later development by the Curies (Marie and Pierre) and other physicists, was acclaimed with such public excitement as no other scientific discovery has ever provoked.

The high voltages used in diagnostic radiology (40,000 to 90,000 volts) and in X-ray therapy (up to 250,000 volts) entails the use of protective devices, lead fabrics, and equipment to safeguard the operators exposed to these rays.

Dr. Vallee touched upon visual diagnosis by X-ray, and the manner of outlining parts of the human interior by introduction of opaque fluids; he admitted the limitations of the X-ray as a means of diagnosis in certain diseases and conditions. The various ailments responsive to X-ray therapy were also mentioned, and the effectiveness of this treatment.

Dr. Vallee was introduced by Gerard Lefebvre and thanked by Col. Ernest Emmett.

President Ian Gordon paid tribute to the team captains, seated at the head-table; and Roger Gravel was honored as Lion of the Day, with a biographical eulogy by Phil Tremblay.

Geo. Y. Deacon, perennial committeeman for the Santa Claus visit to local schools, outlined plans for this effort, on December 21.

An approaching fund-raising venture for Lions charity work is the public bingo, Friday, December 9 at Lachute Auditorium.

The president urged the cooperation of all members in the "S.D." (Safe Driving) Day, announced as a national safety effort for December 1.

Among the guests at this meeting were Dr. Marc Papineau, Mr. Tom Ayers and Mr. André Lebrecque, engineer in charge of the airfield construction at Ayersville.

Fellow Rotarian Addressed Club on Cadet Movement

Rotarian Gordon Tabrett filled in as speaker at last week's meeting of the Rotary Club in the absence of the scheduled visitor, Major Gibson of Montreal. The subject was "Cadet Training", and Gordon explained that this was his hobby, which he enjoyed doing just as others might enjoy hunting or fishing. He explained that he had been a cadet in Montreal while a student, and had found it so interesting that he decided to continue in the field as an officer.

The Cadet movement started about 1870 and was confined almost entirely to students in schools and colleges. During the early days the boys bought their own uniforms and paid all their own expenses. Interest sagged to a very low ebb between World War I and World War II, but has now been put on a permanent basis with a permanent Cadet Staff in Canada consisting of some 40 officers and men. Uniforms and practically all other necessary equipment are furnished free of charge.

Boys must be between the ages of 14 and 18 in order to join the movement, and while there is not sufficient time during training periods to try to make soldiers of the boys, an attempt is made to teach some basic training such as drill, the care of firearms, first aid, etc.

Gordon was introduced by Dave Schwartz and thanked by Mac Walker.

500 Attendance At Ayers Limited Employees' Dance

Approximately 500 employees gathered at the Lachute Golf Club on Saturday, to attend the Ayers Limited annual employees' dance. Numerous prizes were given.

Square dances, Paul Jones, waltzes, tangos, etc., were stepped to the lively music of the "Star Boys" orchestra of Hawkesbury, while Gerry Lemay entertained in the Catalogne Room.

Everyone brought his own lunch, and coffee was served at midnight.

The success of this dance is due largely to the organizing ability and congeniality of the company's Personnel director, Roger E. Regimbal.

Two for Preliminary Hearing, Charge Possession of Bonds From Grenville Bank Robbery

Two men formerly of this district, Claude Chausse, 33, and Hector Duhamel, 46, have been arraigned in St. Jerome court in connection with the 1953 Christmas Eve robbery from the Grenville Branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia. Duhamel was arrested in North Bay, Ont., last Thursday, while Chausse was arrested in Rouyn last May by Det. Ralph Allan (now stationed here, who at that time was in the Rouyn-Noranda district).

Charged With Possession

Duhamel is charged with being in possession of $8,700 in registered bonds listed as part of the loot from the vault. Ontario Provincial Police arrested Duhamel on a taxi driver's tip. He was driving a car owned by a Montreal man and in the trunk were found eight $1,000 bonds. The suspect carried three complete sets of identification papers, including driver's licences, auto insurance cards, and memberships in auto clubs.

Claude Chausse, alias Marcel Hall, alias Edward Small, is presently serving time in Val d'Or where he was found guilty of selling stolen bonds from the Grenville robbery to stock brokers in that locality. He was reported to be making further contacts in Rouyn at the time of his arrest. Both suspects will appear for their preliminary hearing shortly in St. Jerome.

Additional Charges Possible

Duhamel may be returned to the Ontario Provincial Police for further questioning and possible additional charges. Police said bonds from the bank robbery have turned up on several occasions in Eastern Canada, one instance being in Cornwall several weeks ago.

The robbery occurred on Christmas Eve, 1953, a Wednesday night, and was discovered by J. C. Bedard, an accountant, as he entered the building early the next morning. According to G. G. Higginson, then manager of the branch in question, 27 holders of safety boxes robbed, lost approximately $110,865 in bonds. Only some $3,000 were in bearer bonds, the remainder all being registered. Mr. Higginson is now manager of the Lachute branch of the bank.

Almost $8,000 of the bonds were recovered when the mess left by the burglars was cleared away, he added. Circulars showing serial numbers of registered and non-registered bonds stolen from the 27 safety deposit boxes were sent to all banks in Ontario and Quebec, in an effort to trap the thieves.

"We believe four men took part in the job", said Det.-Sgt. Nick Anderson, assistant chief of the Provincial Police hold-up squad the day following the robbery.

Seen Inside Bank

"Two were seen inside the bank during the night, and another outside. The fourth was probably in the get-away car. The whole gang would have been nabbed if a man who saw 'suspicious looking' characters in the bank had notified us right away, instead of two hours after the burglary was discovered."

The theft took place sometime after midnight on December 23. The culprits gained entry to the Grenville Main Street building by propping a ladder against the back wall and smashing a window. Using an 'acetylene torch,' they cut their way through the steel front of the vault, then peeling the front panels off 27 safety deposit boxes, one of which is reported to have held $23,000 in cash and securities.

Echo of Halloween Arrests Complaint on Police Dept.

Session Last Wednesday

A letter was received and read from Mrs. George S. Payson, relative to her son being imprisoned on Hallowe'en night, along with Bobby Campbell. Mrs. Payson made several statements similar to those of Mrs. Campbell and added that her son's request to telephone her (his mother) was refused. She added that "since his incarceration in the local cells, he has been very nervous, afraid to walk down Main Street, afraid of the policemen, in short, very upset.

"I wish to notify the town officially that, should there be an aggravation of his nervous condition, that I will hold the Town responsible for it, in addition to the fact that I reserve all my recourse for the illegal incarceration of my boy."

The letter closed in stating, "We are fighting for freedom and not to have a big, burly, nasty policeman terrify the youngsters who have done nothing serious."

Tenders Received and Opened

Ten bids for the position of secretary-treasurer were received prior to the session, one late arrival being refused. The tenders, five being from local citizens, requested salaries ranging from $2,500 to $5,400 a year. All applications were turned over to a committee comprising Mayor Dr. F. Walter FitzGerald and Aldermen W. Consineau, D. G. MacRae, E. O. Pollock and H. S. Church.

At his request, German Filion was engaged an an office clerk and not as assistant secretary-treasurer, so as he would have no direct responsibility as to cash. (His duties consist of assisting the office staff and the Council as a former Corporation secretary-treasurer.)

Asst. Secretary-Treasurer Jacques Poitras was authorized to sign all cheques and legal documents jointly with the Mayor until the appointment of a new secretary-treasurer.

Several Police Committee matters were tabled for further study, as was a request by Jacques Poitras that he receive all of the allotted revenue from the Amusement Tax collection, as he is doing all the work in connection with the tax. In recent months, he has only been receiving one-half or 5 per cent of the revenue.

The meeting was adjourned sine die, with a decision that a Council caucus would be held last Tuesday evening to study the budget for 1956.

Old-Timer Pens His Early Recollections

Hugh B. Mitchell, of St. Philippe d'Argenteuil, old-timer of almost 85 years' residence in these parts, promises a record of recollections which may prove interesting reading to the older generation of Watchman readers. Mr. Mitchell, a native of Beech Ridge, was a brickmaker by trade; his handiwork, he claims, contributed to many of Lachute's early homes and business buildings, and his recollections of these surroundings go back to his early childhood. He has been assisted in his writings by his daughter, Mrs. G. G. Goodenough, of Potsdam, N.Y.

Upsurge of Enthusiasm in B'burg Home and School

Discourse by Practical Authority Enjoyed By Large Gathering at November Meeting

Brownsburg — The November meeting of the Brownsburg Home and School Association was a resounding success, perhaps the most successful in the short history of the Brownsburg organization. Close to 120 members attended the meeting, the feature of which was supposed to be a talk by Mr. Douglas Walkerton, provincial president of the Home and School Association.

Mr. Gervais, Brownsburg's president, was delighted at the large attendance and thanked the parents for their enthusiasm and the encouragement their presence gave to the executive. Mr. Lang read the minutes of the last meeting, and had them duly approved. Mrs. Hamilton, the treasurer, read out the state of finances.

Mr. Gervais introduced Mrs. Woolgar, 1st vice-president to Mr. Walkinton, to deputize for him as guest speaker. He gave a thumbnail sketch of Mrs. Woolgar's history in the Home and School Association; she has served as president of Kensington branch in Montreal, also in B.C., and on the Canadian board.

Mrs. Woolgar said she was amazed at the great turnout, with such a night and such a topic, then immediately contradicted herself by stating that the Association is now 200,000 strong and that it is the largest voluntary organization in Canada. It was formed in 1912 for the parents — the producers and consumers of the product of education. The organization is proud of its record of "never having shot off its mouth without first finding out the facts."

Mrs. Woolgar started to enumerate the objectives of the Association. The first, of course, is to promote the welfare of children and youth. It is, after all, our own duty much more than the schools', to produce good citizens.

The second objective is to raise the standards of home life, and that means starting with ourselves — the members. Our children, after all, spend less than 20% of their time at school, and no matter how well they are taught at school an adverse influence at home has four times as much scope. In this matter the metropolitan groups of Home and School have special discussion groups on home life, and in particular on the effect of broken families.

The third aim is to promote and secure adequate legislation for children's welfare. The Home and School Association is strongly behind the drive to curb the sale of horror comics and indecent literature. The National Association is right now studying devotional symptoms in pre-teens, hoping to find a measure to decelerate juvenile delinquency. On the smaller scale the local groups frequently obtain municipal traffic legislation and make suggestions to the school boards.

Montana Spring Is Strange Memorial To Western Plainsman, Old Lachute Boy

The following story from the Great Falls (Montana) Tribune is sent by J. Stewart Dewar of Hoosier, Sask. It has reference to John Ernest William Simpson, member of an old family whose name is linked with local history. Ernie Simpson, better known as "Sim", left Lachute in 1907, but is still doubtless remembered by a few old-timers here. A photograph of the roadside shed housing "Sim's Spring" illustrates this article in the Western paper.

Scobey — On Route 13, between Scobey and Wolf Point, stands Montana's most unusual memorial — a small frame shed housing a clear, cold spring — dedicated to the memory of John Ernest William Simpson, of Saskatchewan, veteran of the Boer War and World War I.

The memorial is all the more unusual because Simpson spent only the summer of his long and adventurous life in Montana.

The story of "Sim's Spring" is told on a typewritten sheet of clear celluloid:

"Sim's Spring — Named for John Ernest William Simpson, veteran of the Boer War and World War I, an early-day settler in Saskatchewan. 'Sim', as he was affectionately known from the muddy trenches of France to the trails of Peace River, spent one summer in Montana.

"Once, early in the season, Sim stopped at this spring and was delighted with the fresh, cold water. Later in the summer, while hauling corral poles from the Missouri River to the present Neil Taylor ranch, Sim insisted that the noon camp be placed at this spring; but when the teamsters — hot, dry and dusty and an hour past lunchtime — reached the spring, there was no water. (In hot, dry summers the water did not rise to the surface.)

"As the weary men were obliged to hitch up and continue on to Box Elder, Sim was razzed unmercifully and was told by his cowboy friends there never had been any water at this place.

"Sim was much chagrined. However, before he passed away at Calgary several years ago, his Montana friends sent him word that the State of Montana has built a road across his spring and had been obliged to spend thousands of dollars draining the water from beneath the road bed."

Now passing motorists stop at the spring to quench their thirst and farmers of the vicinity bring milk cans to fill with the good, cool water for table use.

Hawkesbury Contractor Victim of Fatal Crash on Highway Near Rigaud

A widely known Hawkesbury contractor, Ovide Daoust, 47, died in hospital at Lachine Friday morning, 12 hours after his car went out of control on Highway 17 and collided with an oncoming vehicle.

Mr. Daoust was returning from Montreal alone when his auto slid on the icy highway just outside Rigaud, and collided with a car driven by Ramsay Chassay, 33, of Montreal. Mr. Chassay escaped with only a broken left leg and was also taken to Lachine.

The impact of the crash threw Mr. Daoust's body some 33 feet from his car. Both vehicles were demolished.

An excavating contractor at Hawkesbury for the past eight years, Mr. Daoust was owner of the Daoust Construction Company.

MISSIONARY NURSE TO AMAZON RIVER

Montreal (CP) — Priscille Roy, a graduate nurse, will leave here shortly to fly to Peru where she will serve for five years at a missionary outpost on the shores of the Amazon River. A native of Fabien-sur-Mer, Que., Miss Roy obtained her nursing degree from Hotel-Dieu hospital in Sherbrooke, Que.

Farmer in Vehicle Hit by Automobile

Hermas Girard, 58, of St. Philippe, received injuries to the left leg when he was thrown from his buggy into the ditch along Route 8, in the St. Philippe vicinity. He was accompanied by his two sons, Gilbert, 14, and Alex, 6, who were also thrown from the vehicle.

The incident occurred when the buggy was struck by a car owned and driven by Euclid Carrière, of Brownsburg. Mr. Carrière was accompanied by his wife.

Mr. Carrière stated that he was meeting a car with bright lights when he saw the buggy a few feet ahead of him. His car crashed into the buggy. The horse-drawn vehicle was demolished, the horse injured and the car damaged to the extent of $250.

The accident, which occurred during the early evening, was investigated by Traffic Officer Howard Jones.

Arg.-Two Mountains Teachers' Assn. Now In Seventh Year, Well Supported

The Argenteuil - Two Mountains Teachers' Association was first formed seven years ago under the presidency of Austen E. Thompson, formerly of Lachute. From the beginning all teachers in the area have supported it wholeheartedly. All meetings, both regular and special, have been well attended, some meetings having practically 100 percent attendance. A variety of speakers, both local and otherwise, have helped to make the programs interesting. In several instances discussion groups were formed to discuss and report on given topics, and one meeting was unique in that the Association members were guests of the Central Board at a banquet held in Lachute High School.

One serious problem which the Association faced was that of the long distances some teachers were forced to travel in order to attend meetings. This problem was met by assessing each member a Transportation Fee of $2, this year raised to $2.50. The amount thus collected covers travelling expenses to regular meetings as well as executive and special meetings.

Probably the best known activity sponsored by the Association is the Annual Argenteuil-Two Mountains Track and Field Meet. This event usually is held on the Saturday preceding Teachers' Convention. Several hockey tournaments have been organized by the Athletic Committee, but these posed such a problem that they have not been attempted during the past few seasons. Debates and Public Speaking contests have been held at various times, each one through the efforts of the Educational Committee.

The Argenteuil-Two Mountains Teachers' Association, like other locals throughout the province, is affiliated with the Provincial Association of Protestant Teachers. The presidents of all locals and other official delegates chosen by the locals, make up the body of voters at the annual business meeting of the Provincial Association. Nevertheless each local association is autonomous, having its own constitution, which it may amend from time to time. Many present and past members of the Argenteuil - Two Mountains Association have been active in the Provincial Association. At present a local teacher is one of the three "off-island" directors of the PAPT, and several others are attached to Provincial committees.

The local organization meets regularly four times a year, in September, November, February and May. The November meeting is being held in Lachute High School this Thursday, November 24.

Large Meal for Small Rabbit

THIS RADISH (Japanese Nerima Oriental), planted from seed last June, weighs 9 pounds 11 ounces, and should provide a hearty meal for our long-eared friend. Pulled last week from the garden of an East Ward resident, who planted the variety as an experiment, the largest of the radishes (above) measures 20½ inches in circumference and 11½ inches from the foliage to the tip of the main root. Two other specimens each weighed over seven pounds. The foliage is up to 26½ inches in length. A special variety of green beans, measuring 23½ inches in length, was also produced by the same grower. Gatineau Lines

Please Report Changes

Gatineau Power supplies electricity to world-famous vacation areas, so naturally the demand for electricity is exceptionally high both in summer and winter.

When fall and winter visitors make normal, planned-for use of electricity, there is no problem. Sometimes, however, heavy electrical equipment is brought to cottages and semi-permanent winter homes, without advice to the power company.

In their own interests, customers should advise the company when about to install such items as a stove or a water heater.

Such advice enables the company to take steps to avoid the annoyance of low voltage, by checking the size of the transformer serving the premises and those of neighbors.

As well, it is important to make sure that the wiring will carry the electricity to the new appliances efficiently — that it is adequate to handle any new demands to be placed upon it.

Does Farmer Have Time For Bookkeeping?

Why Keep Farm Accounts?
Forum Topic November 28

The modern farmer has a big investment in his business. Mechanization has changed the whole pattern of his farming operations, and he is now a bigger business than he ever was before.

If the farmer is going to make an adequate living from his business, he must be skilled in many trades. Most important of all, he must be a capable manager. There may not be a great deal that he can do about prices, but he can look after the efficiency of his own operations. Some farmers make money even when prices are falling.

How does keeping records help the farmer? It does not of course automatically produce profits. Some farmers make money even when prices are falling.

How does keeping records help the farmer? It does not of course automatically produce profits. Some farmers say, "What's the point of keeping farm accounts just to find out how far I'm going in the red?" His records can help to show up the weak points in his farming operations. — Farm Forum Guide

Not Our Ideal Of Farm Life

(The Rural Scene)

"Have you seen the Ford plant at Detroit? There you find one worker, all day long, doing a single operation. The whole process is broken into small specialties. That is what we see in the future of farming. More and more specialization, the transplanting of the Ford factory technique to the fields."

The above is quoted from the remarks of Vladimir Matskevich, acting Minister of Agriculture in the Soviet Government, after his recent tour of American farms.

Mr. Matskevich was not at all impressed with the well-cultivated fields, or the modern, well-kept farm homes he saw in America. What he saw was the possibility of immense state-owned farms, highly mechanized, and operated like factories, with the farmers working at monotonous, repetitive operations that require no thought or initiative on their part, nor anything to stimulate their mental faculties, and living in such dwellings as the state provides.

Do we want that kind of farming in Canada? We don't think for a minute that Canadian farmers would take to such a system, not even if it doubled the yield per acre of land or per man-hour of work.

The Canadian farmer wants to be a man in his own right. If he can't manage his farm well he will manage it badly — but he will be the manager.

He will make his own decisions, will plan his own operations and conduct them in his own way, and he will abide by the consequences whether they be good or bad. If he is ever reduced to the necessity of working as Mr. Matskevich suggests, we will find it hard to keep him on the farm. Men who work on farms in Canada today are either farm owners or they aim to be. It is the hope of owning their own land that attracts our young men to the farm.

Before the Revolution, Russia had many thousands of successful farmers who managed their own farms, and who produced foods in such quantities that Russia was the greatest exporter of food stuffs in the world. But the Communists liquidated all these as enemies of the people. Since then, Russian agriculture has never produced enough food to supply her own people.

The experience of the western world is that the land yields its best return when turned by the owner's plow, and that men do their best work when they are allowed to reap the fruits of their labor.

The Farm Tractor

The diesel tractor will supply the most economical power when it is used for at least 500 hours or more per year on the farm. A diesel tractor used for 500 hours per year will more than take care of the higher original cost by fuel savings over a period of five to six years. When less hours are worked per season the high compression gasoline tractor would be the most suitable choice.

The diesel tractor at present fuel prices supplies the most economical power. The overall saving secured is a result of the lower fuel bill. This saving is obtained because of the lower price per gallon as well as the lower fuel consumption per hour. Attention then should be given to the fuel consumption of both gasoline and diesel tractors as well as the price. This information can be found in the Nebraska Tests, if the tractors have been tested. A fuel spread of a least five cents a gallon should prevail before buying a diesel tractor.

Another important factor in selecting a tractor is the size. If possible, a tractor should be chosen of such a size that its load for most of the time will be at or near the rated load for best economy. Either over or under powering results in an uneconomical farm unit. Consult the Nebraska Test figures when selecting the size. Be careful to use the rated load rather than the maximum load figures. Horse power requirements for hilly or soft footing conditions should be increased approximately 25 per cent to insure adequate power.

Youths Leaving Farms

Halifax (CP) — The chairman of the Nova Scotia Housing Commission says the way youth is moving off farms can be compared to the expulsion of the Acadians.

Dr. S. H. Prince says healthy farming communities are essential to the well-being of the province, but farmers face two choices: To return to the golden age of farming through agricultural reform, or to slowly deteriorate to the peasant-type farming known in Europe.

Albertan Wins Agricultural Scholarship

—Central Press Canadian

Mrs. John David Eaton has the pleasant task of presenting the Eaton Agricultural Scholarship to a young Alberta farmer which will take him to the agricultural college of his choice. He is Park Smiley Letts, of Westlock, who was chosen from among representatives of nine Canadian provinces. His scholarship, which was presented at Royal Winter Fair, now under way in Toronto, covers four years' tuition, lodging and board. At 19, the native of Edmonton is president of the Westlock Beef club and past-president of the Westlock Beef Breeding club, a member of the Westlock Agricultural society and the Canadian Hereford association.

Electronic Harness for Steers

A steer has been "wired for sound" at a British research farm so that scientists can learn how to get more milk from cows and provide tender meat for the table. The steer wears a harness carrying light-weight recording equipment. This registers how many times a day a grazing animal stretches its neck to chew grass, how many times it lies down and stands up — and even the number of times it twitches its tail. The results are transmitted via micro-switches and show as a series of wavy lines on a constantly moving paper tape. This novel equipment was first used at the Grassland Research Institute in Berkshire. Tests there enabled scientists to find out which grasss cattle liked best and, by recording how many mouthfuls went to each pound increase in live weight, which grasses were best for the cattle.

Still Use Oxen In Some Areas

Amherst, N.S. (CP) — Hefty teams of oxen, a favorite camera subject for visitors, are on the decrease in Nova Scotia, but two farm veterans say they will never disappear entirely.

James Collins of New Ross, a blacksmith by trade and a farmer "between times" for 50 years, says "there are certain kinds of land where oxen give results better than horses or even modern machines."

Lawrence Keddy of Graton, who uses oxen on his farm and also in woods operations, says "you just can't beat them when it comes to hauling in the rough woodlands."

Rabbit hordes in Britain have been cut in half by the virus disease myxomatosis, which crossed the Channel from France in 1953 and has since raged through the land. By declaring wide areas as clearance zones, in which owners and tenants are obliged to finish the extermination job started by the disease, the Ministry of Agriculture hopes to conserve a major portion of the $50 million worth of farm produce annually consumed by these pests.

High-Record Deposits In Bank of Nova Scotia

Marking a new high of $1,192,967,000 in assets, the Bank of Nova Scotia's annual statement for the year ended October 31, shows a record increase of $167,610,000 in deposits by the public. This growth is reflected on the assets side of the statement by an increase in loans other than call, of $105,703,000, and in securities of $44,946,000 over last year's figures.

The balance sheet reflects the increased activity of the bank across Canada during the past fiscal year, which has seen the opening of 34 new branches. Total deposits now stand at $1,120,934,000 with call loans at $81,690,000, other loans at $584,418,000 and securities at $312,699,000. The bank's liquid position continues strong, with cash resources standing at 15.81 per cent of public liabilities and quick assets at 50.35 per cent.

Profits, before depreciation and taxes, amounted to $7,664,000, an increase of $633,000 over last year. Provision of $1,362,000 was made for depreciation on bank premises and $2,800.00 for taxes, leaving a net profit of $3,502,000. Dividends and extra distributions to shareholders, including one of 20 cents declared October 18 last, amounted to $3,000,000, or $2.00 a share. The balance of $502,000, when added to undivided profits, brought this account to a total of $1,027,000.

MEMBER AUDIT BUREAU OF CIRCULATIONS

"S.D." Day

ALL OVER CANADA, December 1 will be observed as Safe Driving Day, during which all Canadians are urged to exercise special caution on the roads in order to achieve the goal — no traffic accidents whatsoever during the 24 hours of December 1. The urge is extended to every user of the highways, to make December 1 an accident-free "S.D." Day.

The Time-Saver

THERE'S ONE expert driver who makes a living by breaking traffic rules and regulations in different cities. With the full co-operation of the police and traffic officials, he gets into his car and races through the city ignoring red lights, stop signs, speed laws and go-slow warnings.

Then, when his hair-raising course has been run, he goes back over the same route and obeys every traffic rule to the letter. . . The difference in time usually amounts to about three minutes.

You and I have both seen this type of driver — only he's not an expert, and not paid to demonstrate safety lessons. He's the fellow (or woman) who screams by you on highway hills, dodges in and out of city traffic like a broken field-runner, and makes you uneasy about your children going to school a few blocks away.

These devil-take-the-hindmost drivers are problems for your local traffic officers and the courts — but there are two immediate steps you can take now: (1) drive sanely yourself, and (2) teach your youngsters, by example and explanation, safe driving habits. There is no need for your son or daughter to face manslaughter charges later, if you start your own family driving education now.

Arms and the Armed Forces

THE ADVENT of new weapons is creating big and perplexing problems for Canada's armed forces.

These problems involve not only the uses of the weapons and the need for more and more engineers but the very structure of the armed forces themselves.

Lt.-Gen. Howard Graham, the new chief of the general staff, was getting at the root of this matter in a speech the other day in Montreal.

He said it is possible that one atomic tactical weapon will have 100 times the destructive power of a corresponding conventional weapon in the Second World War. Thus only one gun would be needed instead of 100, one man instead of 100 men.

Does this mean, one asks, that an infantry division will comprise 180 men compared to 18,000 in the Second World War? That is one of the many questions the defence department is tackling.

The problems raised by new weapons are probably nowhere more apparent than in the navy.

It is almost impossible for the captain of a modern warship to know the inner workings of all the equipment he has at hand — radar, sonar, homing torpedoes, anti-submarine mortars, radar-controlled anti-aircraft guns and the like.

To understand how all this gear works, the captain probably would have to be an established scientist. The best he can do under the circumstances is to know the capabilities of his equipment — what each piece will do.

The field of weapons is so complicated now that Canada has tried to concentrate on development of only a few of them. Defence scientists have been working for years on an air-to-air guided missile to arm the CF-100 jet intercepter and on better sonar for the anti-submarine navy. They have succeeded in developing for the army a new anti-tank weapon for the infantrymen and a new flame-thrower.

But research and development on many other weapons has of necessity to be left to Canada's allies. It is fortunate that this country has such allies because without them we would be left far behind our potential enemies in weapons development.

Good Time to Act

THE RECENT close of the deer hunting season brings forth the question of wolves — which (believe it or not) last winter killed more deer in the Hill Head area than this autumn's hunters.

The population of Calumet Island have organized a "wolf hunt" to take place in December, in an effort to get the marauders before they get the deer in their feeding yards. A similar effort might possibly be put into effect here, and would pay good dividends in deer conservation.

Within a few days, there should be sufficient snow to permit tracking of the animals, if they are still in this area. . . Last year's kill was but one wolf for approximately 20 deer which fell prey to these animals. Possibly an earlier start would increase the chances and round up more of these wolves, thus lowering the toll on our deer population. It's worth a try at least.

Headaches of Progress

PRESS photographs and artist's drawings have depicted, in the past week, practical layouts of atom-powered plants already in operation. . .

As it moves out of the laboratory into the workshop during the next two decades, the atom may well change the complexion of industry as we know it today. Many business executives who today can barely boast even a conversational acquaintance with nuclear fission or radioisotopes, will be called to make decisions in this field which at the moment is little more to them than a house of shadows and unexplored hallways — says a timely article in the bulletin, "Industry".

An attempt to convert business executives into atomic energy experts would be utterly unrealistic. But it would be equally naive to expect executives to approve astronomical expenditures at the word of scientists whose only common characteristic, as far as the executive is concerned, is their use of an incomprehensible language.

Despite warnings by scientists that widespread use of fissionable materials won't come about for some time yet, new uses of by-products are discovered almost daily. Research since the first atomic explosion at Alamogordo in 1945 points more and more to the benefits not of direct atomic power, but from a multitude of by-products, chiefly reactor wastes and radioactive isotopes. Already things have been done with these substances that were never believed possible.

The problems that will arise with the advent of fissionable substances in industry cannot be solved on a hit-and-miss basis. Since radiation — the chief hazard — can't be felt, seen, heard or smelled, there is a vast danger more workers will be hit than missed. This factor alone could make the factory of the future a completely different concept than even our most modern plants today.

The problem of atomic fallout in the event of an uncontrolled chain reaction is a hazard that can't be summarily dismissed, since it affects not only the confines of the factory, but the community in the immediate area also.

If the 1955-version executive is harried, let him not envy his successor in future generations. The cost of scientific advance runs high. But, then, progress never comes at cut rates.

A PRESS despatch from Washington says: "Enough Canadians have emigrated to the United States in the last 135 years to populate the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, and established a city nearly the size of Metropolitan Vancouver."

It would take a statistician to figure it out but, if you took their off-spring into account, the number of former Canadians and their descendants in the U.S. also probably could re-people the whole of Canada with its 15,600,000 population." Therein lies the secret of why the United States is one of the greatest nations in the world — so much Canadian blood flowing through its veins!

BEARFOOT BOY WITH CHEEK

• Geoff's Journal •

". . WATCH ! "

The following is purported to be a true tale. I first got it from my revered mother, who got it from another source, and so ad infinitum. Each source attested to the veracity of the story; personally, I have my doubts. However, as the locale of the narrative is set in Argenteuil, and it happened within the memory of man, I shall relate it here. Perhaps some reader may be able to tell me where it happened and whther it be true or false.

Some years ago, a little Anglican church in this county reached the 100th year of its founding, and it was decided to celebrate the event with fitting ceremony. Accordingly, as many former dignitaries of the parish as were then living got roped in, and the Dean of Montreal and the Bishop were added for extra effect. In deference to the bishop's high office, he was also called upon to do the preaching.

Back in Bishop's Court, His Lordship labored long and hard over a suitable address for such an auspicious occasion. He dug up parochial histories and anecdotes of the various clergy who had served there. He investigated the statistics of the parish and toted up the number of people that had been baptized, confirmed, married and buried in the little church since the day of its opening. He dwelt upon his own long association with the people there and counted the numbers he had personally confirmed in the faith. Then, to top it all off, he added a word in season about the future. Finally, his research completed, the bishop meditated upon a suitable text. Something for the future! Ah yes, what better admonition than the familiar words of Mark 13; verse 37: "And what I say unto you I say unto all . . . watch!"

Thus armed, the bishop set forth for the centenary. On arrival, he was lodged in the rectory and given free rein to do further work upon this all-important address. His Lordship added a few touches of local color — gleaned from the church wardens and other stalwarts — but the meat of the sermon remained the same. Boiling it all down to a few notes, the bishop completed his work. Then he sat back to await the great event.

Naturally, for such an occasion, the little church was packed to the doors. The choir, rehearsed for weeks ahead of time, was up to full strength as well as vocal power. Special seating was arranged for dignitaries of church and state. And, with the stirring strains of "Onward Christian Soldiers", the service got under way.

Just prior to the sermon, the incumbent got a word in edgewise to welcome the bishop and other visitors to the parish. He paid glowing tribute to the founders of the church, the generations of loyal workers, and clergy before him, and a hundred other things. He also impressed upon the congregation that the church was just as it had been 100 years earlier. Nothing had changed. The very furnishings that were used at the opening service a century earlier, all were still part and parcel of the church. In short, before he stood down, the parson said almost everything the bishop planned to say.

With all due solemnity, the choir and congregation rendered a hymn of thanksgiving and the bishop, escorted by his chaplain, proceeded to the pulpit. At the conclusion of the hymn, choir and congregation stood in silence while His Lordship pronounced the ascription. Then all sat down, and a deathly hush descended on the little church.

The bishop, high above his hearers in the ancient pulpit, adjusted his notes and put on his glasses. Leaning forward slightly, he said in clear and deliberate tones: "And what I say unto you I say unto all . . . watch!"

With the final word of the text, there was a resounding crash. Down came the pulpit, bishop and all, before the eyes of the startled congregation.

Needless to say, confusion reigned supreme for the next few agonizing minutes. His Lordship was rescued from the dust and debris that was once the church's pulpit. Order was restored among the junior members of the choir, while the visiting clergy tried valiantly to collect their wits and appear saintly.

And the outcome? Well, the bishop continued his address from the chancel steps and the service concluded without further incident. What worries me most, however, is whether the story actually happened or was merely the figment of someone's overactive imagination. Does any reader know?

The Weeklies Say

LOST HUNTERS

As this is the season for lost hunters, it is well to remember that the first safeguard is to let your friends know the general area in which you are going to hunt. Three shots fired in rapid succession is the accepted distress signal. But the best advice is to sit tight and wait to be found.

AGE OF "GIMME"

No matter what the federal government does in arranging loans to farmers based on wheat in storage there are many wiseacres who know of a better way. It seems that the more paternalism governments practise to satisfy increasing demands there is always a cry going up for more. It is an age of "gimme".

OIL IN NORTH

Interest in the north's oil possibilities appears to be as likely as ever and the search this winter will probably range over more country than ever before. It may not be too much to say that oil and gas will be the keys which will unlock the door to the industrial future of the Peace River district.

OF MANY THINGS

By Ambrose Hills

Meditation

I number only one millionaire among my close friends. Naturally, I have studied him a lot to see how he does it. He is about my own age, has a bright mind, but is no genius. He works hard, but so do I. He is meticulously honest, somewhat over-generous, but otherwise a pretty normal man as far as I can see. I looked in vain for any secret of success. But last week I was given a clue.

We hunted together down around Souris, Manitoba. Guess we tramped all the cover both sides of the river for ten miles. That night we were beat. We surrounded a delicious steak at a fine little bowling alley and restaurant in Souris, then checked in at the hotel. I was under blankets within five minutes. But not my friend.

He got into his pyjamas, spent a good ten minutes on his knees. Then he drew a chair to the window and sat down, his feet up on the window sill. It was another half hour before he hit the hay.

In the morning I asked him what the long vigil was all about.

"When I first started in business" he said, "I had some upsetting experiences. Fussed so much and worked so hard I never had time to think. Then, one day at my service club, the speaker quoted an old Greek philosopher. The idea was that you shouldn't let yourself be spun around. You should find time, somewhere, for some quiet, meditation on the eternal verities. I started that night and I've kept it up. I suppose you'd call it a spiritual exercise. Anyhow — I wouldn't miss it. Seems to keep me on the beam."

So maybe that is his secret. Anyhow, I pass it along to you at no charge — just share your first million with me if you wish.

India, a growing threat in the world textile market, has a lower textile wage scale than Japan, generally felt to be the lowest in the world.

Quick Canadian Quiz

1. Newfoundland has 2.44 persons per square mile, P.E.I. has 45.07. What is the national average density of population?
2. When it is 12 noon at St. John's, Nfld., what time is it at Winnipeg, Manitoba?
3. In 1954 the personal income of Canadians was $18,144,000,000. What part of this income went to tax payments?
4. The unfortified boundary between Canada and the United States was established by what agreement, in what year?
5. Are the special taxes levied to pay the federal government's universal old age pension meeting the pension's full cost?

ANSWERS: 5. No; the fund has a deficit of about $60 million a year. 3. About $7 billion or more than one-third went to taxes. 1. National average is less than 4 persons per square mile. 4. By the Rush-Bagot Convention of 1817. 2. 9:30 a.m.

New Rules Govern Advertising of Textiles

Textile advertising and labeling will be subject to new government regulations effective January 1.

Coming after five years of policy discusion, the textile materials marking regulations were spurred by the Canadian Association of Consumers and retail organizations.

The regulations, which affect descriptions of textile materials by manufacturers, advertisers and retailers, cover all forms of publicity except group display posters.

Briefly, the regulations say:

— All descriptions must name all component fibres in order of weight, unless there is 95% or more of one fibre.

— All components must be given equal billing in type.

— Material forming less than 5% of total weight cannot be named unless it performs a special function (e.g. reinforcing) which must be named.

— The words new, hand-knitted, handspun, hand-woven and hand-printed must be used only in one sense — the true one.

The law, subject to revision, will be administered by the Department of Trade and Commerce.

Better days are here for Phil Fraser!

In all his years of railroading, Engineer Phillip Fraser has seen some big changes.

"Rolling along in this smooth diesel locomotive," says Mr. Fraser, "is a real thrill — a far cry from driving the old steam jobs. Its extra power gives it quicker pick-up and more speed on the grades. Besides, it can run from coast to coast without a change. That's what I call progress!"

Phil has seen progress in the life insurance business too. As a family man, he knows that this business offers better service today than ever before.

Take life underwriters, for instance. Modern training makes these men better qualified to guide people through the complex problems of planning for future security.

Today, too, life insurance is more flexible. There's a wider range of plans — allowing people to meet their own individual needs.

Moreover, people with certain physical handicaps, can now enjoy the protection of life insurance.

In these and other ways, the life insurance companies in Canada have progressed with the times to meet the changing needs of people in all walks of life!

OBITUARY

Late C-I-L Pensioner Was World War I Veteran

Late James Herbert Hazel

Another veteran of the Black Watch of World War I passed away, at the Queen Mary Veterans' Hospital on November 15, in the person of James Herbert Hazel.

Born in Bristol, England, February 8, 1886, the eldest son of James Edward Hazel and his wife Florence Hemmers, he came to Canada at an early age. Most of his life since that time was spent in Brownsburg, where he worked for C-I-L, being pensioned in February, 1951.

His wife, the former Lucy Maud Cooper, is left to mourn his loss, also three daughters, Mrs. Donald Beers (Irene), of Lachute Mills, Mrs. Harold Smith (Eva), of Dalesville, Mrs. K. G. Watson (Myrtle), of Liverpool, N.S., as well as four sons, James E., Wyman, Herbert, of Brownsburg, and William, of Lachute Mills.

The funeral was held from his late residence on Oak Street last Thursday, with his pastor, the Rev. G. Bruce, officiating. Burial was made in Lachute, where his Legion comrades and the Rev. Mr. Bruce conducted the graveside service.

Brownsburg Business Man Dies in Local Hospital

The Late Yvan Cyr

Yvan Cyr, former Brownsburg chief of police and garage operator in that village, passed away Sunday in the Providence Hospital, Lachute. He was in his 41st year.

Funeral service was held yesterday, Wednesday, at the Ste. Anastasie Parish Church.

Besides his mother, Mrs. F. X. Cyr of Montreal, he leaves to mourn his loss, his wife, the former Réjeanne Carrière, two sons, Bernard and Francois, and a daughter Renée, as well as three brothers and five sisters.

Births, Marriages, Deaths, etc.

Births, Marriages, Deaths, and In Memoriam, etc., 75c; 5 cents per type line extra for verses with In Memoriam (estimate 8 words per type line).

BIRTHS

BOYD — At the Providence Hospital, Lachute, on Oct. 31, 1955, to Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Boyd, a son.

MacLEAN — At the Royal Victoria Hospital, Montreal, on Monday, Nov. 21, to Mr. and Mrs. Frank MacLean, a daughter, sister for Connie.

MOONEY — At the Catherine Booth Hospital, Montreal, on Nov. 18, 1955, to Mr. and Mrs. Alex Mooney (née Patsy Dorion), a son. Both well.

MOORE — To Mr. and Mrs. Stanley V. Moore (née Patricia Ryder), at the Catherine Booth Maternity Hospital, Montreal, on Sunday, Nov. 13, a son, brother for Garry and Nancy. Both well.

DEATHS

ARMSTRONG — At Waterford, Ont., on Nov. 17, 1955, Jane MacVicar Morrison, wife of Tom Armstrong and sister of Mrs. James Morrison, Lachute, Que., and Robert MacVicar, Niagara Falls, Ont. Funeral at Waterford, Ont., Saturday, Nov. 19. Interment at Lachute on Tuesday afternoon, Nov. 22, from MacKimmie Funeral Home.

HAZEL — At the Queen Mary Veterans' Hospital, on Nov. 15, 1955, James Herbert Hazel, beloved husband of Lucy Maud Cooper, in his 70th year. Funeral held from his late residence, Brownsburg, Que., Thursday; interment Lachute Cemetery.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

GRAHAM — Mrs A. Graham and the family of the late Archie Graham, Cushing, are grateful for kindnesses and sympathy expressed in many ways by neighbors, relatives and friends, in their recent bereavement — with special appreciation also to the pall-bearers, Messrs. John Black, Irvin Clark, Rene Fournier, William, Cecil and Melvin Graham, who were unintentionally omitted last week.

HAZEL — Mrs. J. H. Hazel and family wish to thank all friends, relatives and neighbors for kind deeds and messages of sympathy received during their recent bereavemnt.

SECKER — We wish to extend our heartfelt thanks and appreciation for the acts of kindness, messages of sympathy and beautiful floral offerings received from our kind friends during our recent bereavement, in the loss of our beloved husband and father. We especially thank the Rev. C. B. Lang, and Mr. and Mrs. J. Cumbers.

— Mrs. E. Secker and Family.

IN MEMORIAM

CUMBERS, ANN — In loving memory of Mother, who passed away Nov. 25, 1950. — Always remembered by her son, Joe, and daughter-in-law, Elisabeth.

Rescue Seaplane Is Rescued By Ship

IN TOW by the British frigate H.M.S. Wakeful in the Mediterranean is a U.S. Army Air Force seaplane that had gone to the rescue of a Liberian merchant ship 18 miles east of Malta. It was damaged when it landed alongside the merchantman and the Royal Navy vessel went to its aid, taking it safely into Malta despite strong headwinds that made towing difficult by day and impossible at night. Its crew, replaced by five British sailors from Wakeful, were taken to Syracuse, Italy.

Duffield, of Houston, Texas, is presently spending some time with her.

Fourth Current Session Opens at Quebec

Quebec (CP) — The fourth session of the 24th Legislature was inaugurated last week with customary pomp and pageantry and amid speculation that it will be the last before a general provincial election.

The speech from the throne contained a continuing note of optimism about Federal-Provincial taxation matters.

During the past 10 years the province has declined to take part in Federal-Provincial taxation agreements, accepted by all other provinces in Canada.

However, during recent Federal-Provincial talks in Ottawa, a new formula was put forward calling for an equalization payment to Quebec estimated at $40,000,000 by Federal authorities. Premier Duplesis has not said whether he will accept or reject the offer.

Under this plan the province could continue to tax directly, a right which Mr. Duplessis said the province would never relinquish.

Legislation planned by the government was outlined in a set of 15 bills tabled in the legislative assembly after the throne speech was read.

The legislature will be asked to vote a $93,000,000 public works program and additional funds of $25,000,000 for farm credit, housing aid and rural electrification.

Largest single item is a proposed $75,000,000 roads and bridge building program spread over a five-year period.

Brownsburg Home and School

The fourth intention is to foster co-operation between the parents and teachers in child supervision. This liaison has led to the inauguration in some schools of a system whereby parents are granted interviews by appointment at regular intervals, to discuss the child's progress and report card with the teacher. Meetings and "open houses" get the teachers and parents together and, provided both temper their criticism with discretion, these discourses are highly beneficial to both.

The fifth aim is to obtain the best for each child's physical, spiritual and mental needs and recognize the diversity of these needs and also of the children's aptitudes. In this respect, the Association studies the recreational and educational facilities of the school, and, being careful not to criticize, makes constructive suggestions.

The sixth objective, is to give the parents a clearer insight into what's going on in the school, and to publicize the school work. Some parents are too lax about the school's function and overlook important deficiencies in the system. Others, without looking into the matter, are inclined to criticize the school, when in effect they don't know what they're talking about. The "open house" and the frequent discussions at Home and School tend to open parents' eyes.

The seventh aim is to co-operate with other organizations in child interest when their aims are exactly the same as ours. In this line the Association would co-operate with any organization which was organizing a library, or in any way furthering education or healthy sports.

The eighth aim sounds rather grandiose — to promote the feeling of good will and peace; but in actual fact the Association has been active in this field. The work has been in making New Canadians feel at home. On the higher level the Association was represented at the World Health Congress in Toronto last year. At one Parent Education session, 20 countries aired their views, and it was interesting to note that in some countries parent participation in education is compulsory.

Mrs. Woolgar, who has plenty of practical experience, being the mother of three teen-agers, wound up her talk by pointing out that there's a hundred years' work ahead, and that we must decide which problems are most pressing and tackle them first. Towards this end she suggested that the audience split up into discussion groups of eight or ten to decide what was most pressing and write out their findings for discussion at future meetings. . . This was duly done.

A count before refreshments were served revealed that Grade XI, with 90% parent-attendance, had retained the pennant.

INSURANCE COMPANY HELPS TRAIN MOTORISTS

An insurance company offers premium discounts of up to 15% to male drivers under 25 years of age who have completed a course of driver training in high school. In a folder, "Teach Them to Drive and Survive," it notes that 29% of fatal accidents and more than 31% of all accidents, occur to drivers in the 16-to-25 year age group. Folder urges formation of high school training courses and indicates how these can be brought into being. It commends the summer teacher training courses of the Division of Public Safety, University Extension, University of Toronto, and has made a substantial grant to provide scholarships for high school teachers taking a course.

Gideons International Mark Anniversary

A historic milestone was reached by The Gideons International in Canada on Monday, November 21, as the 1,000,000th copy of their special Youth Testament edition was presented to Grade V pupil John Weicker in a public ceremony at Kitchener, Ont. The presentation was made by the National president of the Association, Mr. Roy C. Spatzel.

This particular phase of the Gideon ministry was commenced in October, 1946, and has steadily grown in scope and importance. The program now involves an annual distribution of 150,000 New Testaments and is carried on in Public Schools in all of Canada's ten provinces, the Yukon and Northwest Territories. Gideon Testaments, including the Psalms and Proverbs, familiar hymns and the national anthem, are offered Grade V pupils yearly. The Gideons also place Bibles in Hotel guest rooms, Motels, Auto Courts, Hospitals, Penal Institutions, Military establishments and Schools.

The Gideons International in Canada was organized nearly 50 years ago and the head office is located at 146 Jarvis Street, Toronto, Ont.

THEY COST NOTHING!

Words are powerful! They can give hope to the discouraged, ambition to the defeated, smiles to the sad, life to the despairing. They can also break hearts; sow sorrow, discontent, and confusion; wreck homes and churches; demoralize communities.

Kind words cost nothing, but oh, their value! Give them abundantly. Speak always as a Christian and you'll leave a trail of happiness and encouragement behind you.

Junior Auxiliary Formed at Weir

(Our District Correspondent)

Weir, Que. — Mrs. A. Pennington, of Montreal, conducted the opening meeting and election of officers at a J. A. meeting, which was held in the church hall on Wednesday evening of last week. Following is the slate of officers elected: President, Diane Owen; vice-president, Audrey Colquhoun; treasurer, M. Diver; secretary, Jean Burns.

The branch will be under the leadership of Mrs. Wm. Owen and Mrs. R. A. Craig, and the meetings will be held fortnightly in the church hall, on Wednesday evenings — the next meeting to be on November 30. New members will be cordially welcomed.

Baptist Minister Ordained At Rivington

(Our District Correspondent)

Rivington — An ordination rite was held last Thursday in the Rivington Baptist Church for Mr. Wm. Toller.

Among those who took part in the service were the Rev. Earl Cameron, the Rev. E. K. Smith, the Rev. Stuart Ivison, the Rev. B. Frank Rice, all of Ottawa, the Rev. A. Eikenaar, of Cornwall, the Rev. N. H. Brock, of Brownsburg, and the Rev. John Amy, of Vankleek Hill. There were also about 20 delegates from churches in the Ottawa Association.

Supper was served in the Orange Hall and a very impressive service of Ordination followed. (This service was held in the Orange Hall because the roads were too slippery to return to the church.)

The good wishes of this community are extended to Rev. Wm. Toller in his fields of service.

Features at United Ch. Anniversary Services

Next Sunday, November 27, at both morning and evening services, the Lachute United Church will celebrate its anniversary and remember those who have served the Christian cause in the past history of this church for 124 years. The minister of the local church, the Rev. Wilson Bridge, will preach at both services, speaking on "The Church and the Wild Birds" at the morning service, and, "Our Eternal Home", in the evening.

The church choir has been preparing special music for the occasion, and will render at the morning service "Rejoice in the Lord, Alway", and "Send Out Thy Light."

The Junior Choir, under direction of its founder and director, Wayne Riddell, will lead in the song of praise at the evening service; the anthems will be, "Once to every man and nation", "The Lord's My Shepherd" (Brother James' Air), and a duet, "Abide With Me" (P. A. Schnecker) sung by the Misses Jean Taylor and Jean McOuat.

Bible Briefs

By A.A.M.

The Bible is rich in stories, and the purpose of this series is to encourage readers to look up for themselves the Bible versions of these incidents. If there are children in the family it is suggested that the story, and the Bible verses on which it is based, be read aloud.

In whose home in Bethany was Jesus a guest, when a woman came to him with a jar of alabaster full of very valuable ointment and poured it on His head at the table?

The disciples, watching the presentation of this unexpected gift, were most annoyed. They asked indignantly, "Why this waste?" Judas, who was the trasurer of the twelve pointed out that the ointment might have been sold for a large amount and given to the poor.

Jesus, who had graciously received this present, was well aware of his disciples' carping criticism. He rebuked His followers by asking them, "Why do you trouble this woman? She has done a beautiful thing. You will always have the poor with you, but I will not always be here. In pouring this ointment on my body, she has prepared me for my burial."

Then Jesus added, "Wherever the gospel is preached in the whole world, this deed which this woman has done, will be recounted in memory of her."

Versions of this story may be found in all four gospels. Look up the name of the man who extended hospitality to Jesus at the time of this incident, and read the account in Matthew, Chapter 26, Verses 6 to 13.

Car Drivers!

I think that I shall never see,
Along the road an unmarked tree,
With bark intact and painted white,
That no car ever hit at night.
For every tree that's near the road,
Has caused some auto to be towed,
Sideswiping trees is done a lot,
By drivers who are not so hot,
God gave them eyes so they could see,
Yet any fool can hit a tree.

WEEK IN OTTAWA

By Roy LaBerge,
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A giant United States company has become a partner in Trans-Canada Pipe Lines Ltd., the Canadian company that plans to build most of the 2,200-mile line to carry Alberta gas to eastern Canada.

The $826,000,000 Tennessee Gas Transmission Company — operator of the world's largest natural gas transmission network in the U.S. — will hold an interest of about one-third of the undertaking. It will become an equal partner with the interests behind Canadian Delhi Petroleum Ltd., original founders of Trans-Canada, and the sponsors of Western Pipe Lines Ltd., which has been absorbed by Trans-Canada.

Entry of the U.S. company into partnership became known in the capital last week as the federal and Ontario governments worked out details of an agreement to build the 675-mile Northern Ontario leg of the line. This section would cost about $118,000,000 and would be leased to Trans-Canada under agreement that the company buy it from the governments over a period of years.

Informants said Tennessee's direct participation will bolster the Canadian company. The U.S. company is expected to contribute financial strength and management experience. It carries weight with the federal Power Commission in Washington. That commission's decision on allowing Trans-Canada to export gas to the U.S. midwest is a determining economic factor in the fate of the Canadian line.

Tennessee's interest is not to exceed one-third, and Trans-Canada is committed to offer more than half the voting stock — expected to total approximately $50,000,000 — to Canadian investors.

Russia's Objective

External affairs minister Pearson, returning from his 45-day, 12-country tour, told a press conference that one of Russia's primary objectives is to destroy the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

He said that what he learned in Moscow has confirmed in his mind the importance of keeping NATO strong and united, and suggested that next month's meeting of the NATO council will give western nations an oportunity to reappraise their policy toward Russia. He said they should be careful not to regard Soviet policy as fixed or final.

At the same time, he said, the west should not withdraw into a shell because of the negative results of the Big Four conference at Geneva, but should explore every possible diplomatic avenue for possible agreement with Russia. "In my view, for what it's worth, Russia is not planning aggressive war against the west," Mr. Pearson said. "They are no more anxious to commit suicide than anybody else."

The external affairs minister said the Soviets professed to be frightened by what they called the west's "aggressive tendency". He had tried to convince Russian leaders that NATO is a defensive security arrangement.

"I don't know that I made any impression on anybody," he added.

Trans-Canada Highway

A two-day highway conference in the capital last week closed with reluctant provincial acceptance of a federal "gap-closing" proposal to complete a trans-Canada highway by 1961.

The meeting paves the way for a new agreement with the nine participating provinces. The new agreement would continue the existing 50-50 federal-provincial cost formula but would provide 90 per cent federal contributions to the cost of building federally-approved links of up to 10 per cent of the total trans-Canada highway mileage in any one province.

The 4,580-mile highway project, begun in 1950, now is about one-third complete.

Mr. Winters indicated the objective of getting a through roadway may be met by using existing roads as links where feasible, even though they may not meet entirely the minimum standards.

Most provincial delegates said the new proposal does not go far enough. They urged revision of the 50-50 split provision and argued the federal government should shoulder more of the road's financing.

Unemployment Plan

Final terms of a federal-provincial agreement on unemployment-relief aid from the central treasury were being drawn up by legal experts in the capital last week. Federal officials expect eight provinces will sign them. The exceptions are Quebec and Ontario.

The provisions are substantially the same as those offered by Prime Minister St. Laurent at the October federal - provincial conference, though some of the changes have been made following correspondence with the provinces at that time.

Substance of the federal plan is that the central treasury would bear roughly half the cost of unemployment relief for those persons able to work and not drawing unemployment insurance when that province's unemployment exceeds 45 per cent of its population.

Over the Years with THE LACHUTE WATCHMAN

75 YEARS AGO

November 26, 1880 —

There is now good sleighing, and the streets are lively with teams and pleasure drivers.

An unusually great quantity of snow is reported at Bell's Corner just now, and many teams are being detained by the roads being completely blocked.

The North River was crossed by teams and loads on Wednesday of this week, the earliest for many years.

Victoria Hall was sold yesterday, the purchaser being Thomas Barron, Esq.

Mr. John Nicholson, of Cushing, has a turkey which has continuously laid eggs from May 1 to November 1 of this year.

— Johovah's Witnesses —

Are you a SIT AND LISTEN Christian or a HEAR AND DO follower of Christ?

James said, "Be not hearers only but doers." (James 1:22). Are you one who says, "How can I when I am not learned?" (Isaiah 29:12.) For instance, could you write a composition on a given subject? Could you prepare and deliver a talk to edify a congregation? Could you explain the difference between true and false religion? Could you go from house to house as Jesus did preaching the good news? Could you make return visits and give qualified instruction in the Bible?

QUALIFIED TO BE MINISTERS — is a 384-page book that will help you to do all these things and more. It will help you to be a real DOER of the Word as were Jesus and the apostles. It will qualify you for the ministry of life. Send 50 cents for your copy today.

To get the above-mentioned book, enquire from your nearest congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, or write 40 Irwin Avenue, Toronto, Ont.

Dominion Stores Report Wins Another Award

Toronto, Nov. 19 — The 35th annual report of Dominion Stores Limited has been judged best in the field of retailing and distribution, in the annual competition sponsored by The Financial Post. It is the fourth time in five years that Dominion Stores have won top honors.

Judges included representatives from the Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants, the Investment Dealers' Association of Canada, and the Association of Canadian Advertisers. The November 19th issue of The Financial Post states: "This report is so good it is almost cavilling to suggest any deficiencies."

Earlier, the Dominion Stores' report was awarded two "Oscars" in U.S. competitions.

Disappointment In Attendance at Exhibition Hockey

(Our District Correspondent)

Brownsburg — The Bank of Nova Scotia team opposed the locals in the first exhibition game of the season, and from most points of view it was a disappointment. The turnout was poor, about 150 — which means that the rink's revenue for a Sunday afternoon was reduced more than a little.

The hockey was for the most part mediocre, although there were several patches of fast, cohesive play. The way things went, you got the impression that Borwnsburg's team was just about ready to take off, but maybe they needed just a little more practice, or maybe just a little more challenge. They scored their five goals with pretty good hockey, but between times didn't show too much.

For Brownsburg, the established players played well, and Mel Tomalty and Brent Steele made some sparkling plays, each scoring. Keith Hazel, without starring, showed that he should make the grade.

Possibly a more enthusiastic crowd would have made for a much better game, for the players were certainly in a mood for good competitive hockey. Maybe by the next game, with the passing of the football-TV season, we'll get some more fans out and we'll see some action.

One thing's sure, that is — our hockey team got the type of practice they can't do without.

SPORTS CAMERA

By Gerry Lougheed,
Canadian Press Staff Writer

There's a big question coming up in Canadian football and the sport's governing body, the Canadian Rugby Union, is going to need the wisdom of Solomon to find the answer and keep everybody happy.

A short time after the Grey Cup classic is decided at Vancouver the CRU will have to come to grips with the question of where to hold next year's Dominion final.

Since the Grey Cup was first put up for competition in 1909, it has been held in Toronto, Hamilton, Kingston, Ont., Montreal, and Sarnia, Ont. For the last 10 years it has been a fixture at Toronto's varsity stadium.

Then last year the CRU, enticed by the rent-free offer of the 36,886 seats in Empire Stadium at Vancouver switched the contest from the Toronto park with its 27,000-odd capacity. The larger seating accommodation and the fact that the CRU didn't have to shell out to use the Vancouver park was sound business. It meant more money in the CRU coffers and larger shares for the leagues connected with the CRU.

Juicy Sports Plum

But shifting Canada's top sports spectacle to the West Coast City trod on a number of tender toes.

Toronto fans were disappointed but many had realized that they couldn't keep the juicy plum in their midst forever. Montreal, for instance, had been itching to hold the game there for a number of years before upstart Vancouver — which last month had just completed its second season in big-time football — had made its bid.

And if the CRU was determined that the final shouldn't be held in Toronto each year, why were the older members of the Western Interprovincial Football Union — Winnipeg, Calgary, Saskatchewan (Regina) and Edmonton — passed up in favor of Vancouver?

The businesslike answer to that, of course, is that the parks in those cities are too small in terms of gate receipts.

But should the size of the football stadium decide where the contest is to be held? That applied when Toronto's Varsity Stadium had the greatest capacity and now when Vancouver's fine field has displaced it.

Economics Decide

Disregarding the economics of the question, it would be nice if the classic could be held in a different football centre each year — giving the fans in that area an oportunity of sitting in without having to take a week or so away from business and travelling thousands of miles.

But for business reasons, the final must be held in a relatively large park to accommodate as many people as possible to swell the gate receipts. Present-day professional football clubs have heavy expenses — park rentals or upkeep, salary contracts high enough to entice U.S. players and coaches away from the American clubs seeking their services, spring and fall training camps, expenses for scouts hunting new talent in both Canada and the U.S., team travelling expenses and equipment, etc.

The Grey Cup melon is split among the CRU and eastern and western leagues competing for the trophy.

The two teams in the final, of course, get more playoff money than those eliminated. But all share in it to the same extent. If some of the clubs have had a "lean year" at the gate, their money from the Grey Cup final is usually enough to ensure that they are able to carry on.

Basketball

On Friday evening, the Lachute Senior teams played host to Brownsburg. Mr. P. Clarkin and Mr. C. E. Franklin refereed both games.

In the girls' game, which ended 47 to 15 for Lachute, the following girls scored for the home team:

E. Touchette, 9 points, A. Copeland 13, S. Pollock 2, J. Davis 4, B. Underhill 16, P. Stansfield 2, M. Hay 1.

For Brownsburg, the following girls scored: M. Dixon 7, G. Hazel 1, R. Dixon 1.

The game was a very exciting one, the guards being hard put to keep the ball from going in the basket too frequently.

The boys' game ended with a score of 57-24 for Lachute. The local team's most outstanding player was Arthur Gauley, who piled up 31 points for Lachute, and only had one foul. Others scoring for Lachute were:

D. MacTavish 9, W. Berry 5, W. Bradford 12.

For Brownsburg, the following boys scored: B. Brownrigg 12, R. Cruise 6, A. MacGibbon 2, S. Parisien 4.

On Saturday morning, the Intermediates were matched against Brownsburg.

In the boys' game, which ended 21-15 for Lachute, the following boys made points for the LHS team:

D. MacTavish 7, G. Swail 2, B. Campbell 4, M. O'Brien 6, W. Laurin 2.

The following scored for Brownsburg: P. Villard 2, E. Clausen 2, J. Martin 5, J. Smith 2, L. Murdoch 4.

The girls' game ended 15-14 for Brownsburg after three minutes of overtime. Girls scoring for Lachute were:

M. Hay 6, C. Parker 1, M. Underhill 7.

For Brownsburg, the following girls scored: M. Dixon 7, R. Dixon 2, G. Hazel 3, M. Hebert 1, E. Stilwell 2.

Down the Alley

By S-T-RIKE

Miss Lachute B.B.Q. have taken over the Fina Garage franchise in the Mixed Commercial League, and with it, the first place in League standings, just released. Playing under their new banner last week, Paul Sauvé's sextet downed Giles Publishing 5 to 2 to take over sole possession of the lead. Flukers dropped out of a tie for the top when they went down to defeat at the hands of Hotel Hebert by the same score, while Lachute High came out on top over John Deere and vaulted into third position, in another 5 to 2 decision. Kingsbeer slipped to the fourth slot when they only managed a 4-3 victory over Lachute Lumber. Lachute Tourist Inn 5 - 2 over La Ruche; Molson a 7 - 0 sweep over Dominion Prime Wood; Windsor Hotel 5 - 2 over the Ink Spots; and Lamarche Furniture automatically picking up 7 points by drawing a bye in the schedule — were other results for the record last week.

Larry Brasseur of Dominion Prime Wood came up with one of his better nights to take top single honors among the men, while Bud Langille finally broke into the scoring records this season, tripling for a 521.

Among the women, Freda Gordon, L. Giroux and Eileen Morrison tied for high triple laurels with 385, and Eileen Morirson dented the scoring record for the second time on the night's play by topping the fairer sex in the single department with a pin-fall of 158.

Marcel Chartrand of Miss Lachute, who holds the high single of all league play to date at the Bolodrome with a 238, came close to losing that distinction when Howard Ward, playing for Dow in the Monday night Commercial League, came through with a 237 score.

Standing and top averages as compiled by Berthe Lafontaine, recently appointed League Statistician (replacing Eileen Morrison, who resigned due to pressure of other duties) are as follows:

'Burgers End Deer Season With Annals for the Book

(Our District Correspondent)

Brownsburg — The deer hereabouts must be hard-pressed for excitement this season. Two of them decided, on the last week of the season, to go out and get themselves a couple of hunters!

The more incredible story occurred right here in town on Sunday. Alan Moore and his father were preparing to go hunting when Mrs. Moore noticed a doe right outside the window. Alan grabbed his .303 and hotfooted in pursuit across MacVicar's field. The doe, about a 125-pounder, was in clear view, but Alan couldn't risk a shot in that direction — up towards the cross.

The deer skipped across the road at MacVicar's farmhouse and up towards the C-I-L. Alan, still without shoes, chased it up till it settled on the steps of the C-I-L office—still not the best place to shoot! The deer made several attempts to get over the fence into C-I-L. (Even the animals figure there's more security at the plant.) When it tried to go under the fence, Alan decided to risk a shot, and hit the luckless brute on the jaw, but it wasn't too badly hurt to hoof it back down towards Maple Avenue.

By this time John Moore, Alan's father, was waiting on Maple Avenue, and he grabbed the doe, A fair crowd had started to gather, and when they saw that Alan intended to stab her, they ganged up and helped her to escape. This is a new sentiment — it's a sin to kill a deer.

Anyway, the deer had its fun and came out of it with a broken jaw. . . Alan wasn't so fortunate. He had his fun too, but he discharged a rifle in town and some citizens, angered by the thought that a youth should try to kill a deer, vow they'll make sure the law doesn't ignore it.

This column certainly doesn't condone firing a rifle in town — and on Sundays yet. But the sentiment than condemns a hunter from tasting hors d'oeuvres when they're put down before him, surely is quite illogical and if the act can't be excused, surely it can be understood.

The other story concerns the birth of a new sport, akin to bullfighting — that of deer-wrastlin' Archie Robinson is the present champion. On Saturday, when Archie was out at his place at the lake, a deer came looking for him. Archie's gun, a .38-55 Winchester was handy, so Archie shot, and the buck got it in the neck physically as well as metaphorically.

The deer dropped instantly, but as Archie reached it, it sprang to its feet again, ready to leave the scene. Archie grabbed at its leg, and after the animal had dragged him back and forth across a log, he managed to get a lock on its antlers and throw it to the ground, rodeo style. Archie had his knife with him, and this poor deer became just so much venison.

The story goes that Archie used to bulldog steers out West. He certainly inaugurated a novel way of killing deer, and one incidentally that gives the deer a sporting chance.

About killing deer — for those of us who don't like the idea, maybe we should do something about outlawing hunting; but don't let's condemn one guy for trying to do it in public.

I. K. Gordon Rink Wins MacKimmie Memorial Trophy

Finals in the MacKimmie Memorial Competition were played off at the curling rink on Tuesday evening, with a hard fought battle between Skips Ian Gordon and Fred Stein. In the semi-finals, played Monday evening, they won over Skips G. F. Calder and J. R. Charron.

Until the last end in the finals it was a toss as to who would win, as half way through the score was tied at 5-5. At the start of the 10th end the count was 8-9 for Ian. Freddie's last stone was well played and lacked only an inch or so to tie, but Ian counted, giving him a win of two points.

Teams were — Mrs. S. Jones, A. O. Phillips, Mrs. R. Cairns, I. Gordon (skip). Mrs. Janet Wilson, A. Stewart, Mrs. L. York, F. Stein (skip).

Refreshments were served and Mr. W. S. MacKimmie made the presentation of the Memorial Trophy and individual prizes to the winners.

The industrial "Twilight League" play is now in full swing and games are held each Monday at 5.30 p.m.

The Match Committee Prize games have now started, and so far the season seems to be off to an enthusiastic start.

Saturday afternoon and evening mixed games, with a social gathering, are drawing a good attendance.

Outdoor Roundup

with Joe Foster

Over the years sportsmen have been building up a fine reputation in the avoidance and prevention of forest fires and yet every fire during the hunting season is invariably blamed on hunters. And hunters actually do cause forest fires; some by accident and many through carelessness. The record is good when you compare the number of fires with the numbers of hunters, but when you consider the total number of fires, the record is bad.

Here's What It Costs

Ever stop to think what can happen when even a little fire starts? Well, first it takes nearly an hour to get an adequate crew of fire fighters to the average fire. In that hour, with a dry woods and a good wind, that forest fire could increase from a match, cigarette, pipe ash or warming fire to an 80-acre fire. It would take 36 men, working as hard as they can, four hours to put a control line around that fire. It would take six cars to haul the men and one truck to transport fire fighting tools to the fire. It would take half of those men eight hours the following day to put out all the smokes inside the fire. It would take $95.00 worth of food to feed the fire fighters on the fire. If everything went smoothly — the fire didn't jump the control line — that one little match or cigarette would have cost about $500.00 — of your money — to put out. As hunters we have too much of an interest in the forests to let this sort of thing happen.

What About That Motor?

Before you retire your outboard motor to the mothball fleet for the winter, there are a number of things you can do which will prolong its life and lessen your make-ready chores in the spring. If you can't take your motor to an authorized outboard service shop for winterization, you can do the job at home by following these suggestions. . . .

Six Steps for Winter Care

First, place your motor on a stand in an upright position. Take out the spark plugs and GROUND THE SPARK PLUG LEADS. Failure to do this may result in serious damage to the coil in some engines. Pull the starter cord slowly several times to drain out any water trapped in the water pump. Second, drain and clean the carburetor bowl, filter bowl and fuel lines. Third, drain built-in fuel tanks and discard the gasoline mixture, since it is likely to deteriorate before spring. You can save the fuel in pressure tanks if you maintain the pressure. Fourth, squirt enough good grade motor oil in both cylinders to provide adequate lubrication. Don't use penetrating oil which might cause corrosion. Pull the motor over several times to distribute the oil. Utilize the old spark plugs for winter storage. Fifth, after replacing the motor cover, open both plugs in the lower gear-case and drain the gear lubricant. Check it carefully for traces of water, which will appear in the form of bubbles in the oil. If you find numerous water bubbles, it's possible that gasket or seal in the lower unit is leaking. Have this checked by your local outboard service man. If the lubricant is water free, refill the gearcase with new lubricant. Force the lubricant from a pressure can through the lower plug until it runs out the top vent. Sixth and last, grease all external moving parts of the motor. Then go over the entire surface with a cloth soaked in gasoline and oil. This will prevent corrosion from forming on the outside of your motor during the winter.

Did You Know?

It has been estimated that in Canada and the U.S. combined, the northern pike devours almost nine million wild ducks annually, and that the legal bag for both countries runs around nine million ducks a year.

Star Footballer Goes to Sidelines

By Bob Smylie,
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Annis Stukus, one of the most colorful figures in Canadian football, is back at a sports desk.

The player, coach, reporter and philosopher of the autumn pastime, fired recently as coach of the British Columbia Lions, now will do his footballing in the sports columns of the Vancouver Sun.

Much has been written about the loquacious Lithuanian, but perhaps one or two incidents of his long career will point up his colorful character.

Stukus started kicking a football around when he was a rough and tough school kid in central Toronto. He played in strictest secrecy; his father didn't approve of the game.

Stuke kept his secret until the afternoon of an important game. He glanced over to the sidelines and saw a familiar figure, that of Papa Stukus. And Papa wasn't smiling.

Stuke kept right on running when the final whistle sounded and hovered in laneways until it got dark. Then he bought an evening paper, folded it under his arm and strode bravely home. He dashed in the front door, thrust the paper at his father and said: "Look, Pop, I got my name in the papers." A headline on the front page read: "Stukus stars for Central."

From then on Papa Stukus was football's most ardent supporter.

Star Kicker

Stukus became one of the game's great kickers. One year he headed the ORFU scoring race and didn't count one touchdown. He got all his points on kicks.

In later years, as playing coach of the Edmonton Eskimos, Stuke's audacity gave home-town fans a treat and confounded the best efforts of his opponents.

He'd trot on the field minus helmet, pads or any other equipment just to kick field goals and converts. What hurt the opposition most, however, was the huge bejewelled watch he wore on his wrist.

Stuke loved the game so much in his early days he never thought of being paid. When his teammates discovered he was playing for free there was near mayhem in the dressing room. So he asked for money and got it.

"I would have asked for the dough before that," Stuke confessed, "but I was afraid they wouldn't let me play."

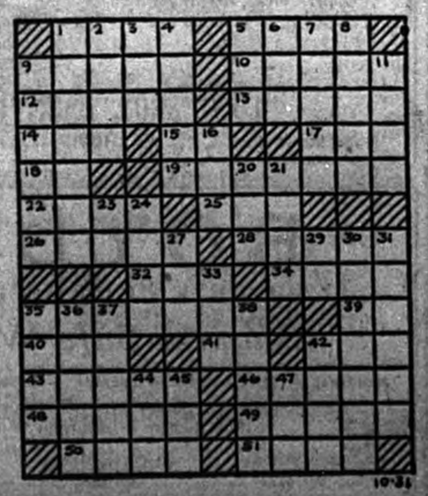

Stuke may not coach any more, but sport fans can rest assured the big guy will be around in some capacity at football games for years to come.

A Scottish Journey For St. Andrew's Day

A journey through Scotland, visiting places made famous in song, will be presented on CBC on the eve of St. Andrew's Day — Tuesday, November 29, from 9 to 10 p.m. "A Scottish Journey" features the BBC Scottish Variety Orchestra and the Glasgow Police Male Voice Choir.

The program was prepared by Francis Collinson, an authority on folk songs, who made a 1,500-mile pilgrimage to obtain material for it. His journey took him from Liddesdale (of the border ballads in the south) to Dunvegan in the Isle of Skye (where the MacCrimmons had their school of piping) and to Boat of Garten and the Buchan country in the North of Scotland.

Scotland, Collinson believes, is one of the few countries in the world where a man can visit the birthplace of a famous old song and find, still living and perhaps in the very same house, the namesake or who, representative of the person who, centuries ago, created the melody, the story or the legend.

At Maxwelton, for instance, in Dumfriesshire, he spoke with Maj.-General Sir John Laurie, a descendant of that beauteous Annie Laurie. At the farm of Tullochgorum, on Speyside, he traced a descendant of that Grant family for one of whom the tune Tullochgorum was composed more than two centuries ago.

Sir Walter Scott's great-great-grand-daughter invited Collinson into Abbotsford to inspect, among other relics of the famous writer, the desk at which he wrote his masterpieces; and Collinson describes Scott's Tweedside home as it is today. Miss Jean Maxwell Scott, asked for her favorite among her famous forebear's songs, chose "Blue Bonnets over the Border."

The Burns country, too, is covered in this journey and represented by the voice of James Barke whose books about the poet have delighted so many.

Fifteen Years in Showbiz

Canada's best known and most popular comedians, Johnny Wayne and Frank Shuster, have just started their fifteenth season in showbusiness with their new television series on the CBC. It all began while they were at the University of Toronto; from there they moved to "The Army Show" during the war, and started on CBC networks in 1945. Soon after that the first "Wayne and Shuster Show" made its debut on radio and, as we've said, is now in full swing on Canadian television.

Radio Quiz Experts

Here are three of the six experts who make up "Trans-Canada Matinee's" two quiz panels — along with announcer Bill Bessey on the right. The quiz is a weekly feature of the daily CBC Trans-Canada Network show, and questions pertaining to all phases of modern living are fired at them by listeners. Mary Humphreys (left) is the authority on textiles and appliances; Dr. Carleton Williams and Dr. Elizabeth Robertson handle child behavior and domestic relations matters. The letter they're holding is from the youngest questioner to date — a nine year old in Calgary who has "Problem Parents".

Should Government Support the Arts ?

For the first Citizens' Forum production from Vancouver the topic will be: "Should Government Support the Arts?" The discussion on this subject will be presented on Tuesday, November 29, on TV and on Thursday, December 1, on the radio. It will come from the Vancouver Art Gallery with an audience of interested citizens participating in the question period.

The question to be discussed is an active one in the minds of many Canadians who are anxious to assist the country's artists but not sure how financial aid should be given. Already some support is given by municipal, provincial and federal governments to the development of Canadian artistic talent. The Massey Commission in general favored increased government patronage and specifically recommended the creation of a Canada Council. So far this suggestion has not been implemented.

Tips on Touring

By Carol Lane
Women's Travel Authority

Even if you just came back from your vacation, and it is still fresh in your memory, it's not too early to begin thinking — and saving — for next year's annual outing.

And there is a simple and relatively painless method of making certain now that, when next spring or summer rolls around, you'll be in financial shape to enjoy the best vacation you've ever taken.

The method is simplicity itself: determine now about how much you'll want next year, and then start a weekly vacation fund.

Be realistic about expected costs, divided by 52, and you have the basic figure for the weekly saving.

But, like all such plans, to be effective it must be consistent — and no fair dipping into it for an extra show or unnecessary indulgence.

Next year's vacation may seem a long way off — but when it comes you'll be ready, and happy that when the snow was flying in 1955 you were already preparing for that glorious two weeks of sunshine and fun in 1956.

Three Books for School Listeners

A three-part series called "Adventures in Reading" begins Friday on the National School Broadcasts, 9.45 - 10.15 a.m. on the Trans-Canada network. It is planned for Grades 6 - 9, and its purpose is to encourage students to read good Canadian books.

In each broadcast the main theme of a Canadian book will be suggested, and episodes from it will be dramatized. The three books are: " A Land Divided", by John F. Hayes (published by Copp Clark); "Young Mac of Fort Vancouver", by Mary Jane Carr (Thomas Y. Crowell); and "Temagami Guide", by Jack Hambleton (Longmans Green). Each book is set in a different part of Canada, and each represents a different period of its history.

The first program, November 25, deals with the expulsion of the Acadians in 1775. The struggle between French and English settlers is very real to two 14-year-old boys, Pierre Duchene and Michael Harvey, since Michael's father is an English officer and his mother is Acadian French, the sister of Pierre's father. Michael's father is captured by Indians who hand him over to the Acadian Louis Vaudreuil, and the broadcast tells of their adventures in trying to rescue him. When they have finally succeeded, Captain Harvey is forced to help evict the Acadians, including Pierre's family, from their homes, but the story ends with the hope that Pierre may some day come back to Acadia. The script, based on "A Land Divided", was written by Clyde Douglas of Halifax.

Annis Stukus

On the eve of the Grey Cup Final, "Vancouver Theatre" (Friday at 11.30 p.m. on CBC) presents the dramatized story of Annis Stukus, former coach of the B.C. Lions, whose recent release has been the subject of much debate in sports circles. The author is Eric Whitehead, sports writer for the Vancouver Province; he traces Stuke's life from his childhood days in Toronto to the present time, telling how he "sold" Canadian football first to Edmonton and then to Vancouver. The climax came in the forties when Calgary stampeded Toronto, proving the west to be a strong contender in Canadian football.

"Community Concerts Of Canada" Opens Office in Toronto

Last December, official announcement was made of the formation of Community Concerts of Canada, Ltd., in recognition of the continuing expansion of the "organized audience" movement in Canada. After many months of discussion and planning, an office has now been opened in Toronto, in the Heintzman Building.

The aim in establishing a branch office in Toronto is to serve Canadian associations more personally and efficiently, and to facilitate the exchange and flow of ideas in the ever-increasing growth of music in Canada.

This office will be open daily Monday through Friday from one to five in the afternoons, Miss Nancy Whitehead is the secretary.

Dessert Sauces For Every Occasion

by the
Consumer Section,
Canada Dept. of Agriculture
Marketing Service

Sauces complement many desserts for they give color, flavor and moisture to foods that need these qualities and in addition they provide a texture contrast and a more attractive finish to desserts. A rich sauce is well suited to a simple dessert and a light sauce to a richer one. For example, desserts like plum pudding, fruit crisp and apple dumplings are best when served with a delicate brown sugar or other light sauce which has not too pronounced a flavor and a more simple dessert like cottage pudding is set off to advantage with a heavier one such as chocolate fudge sauce.

Hard sauces seem to be favored on hot desserts like steamed puddings. They are very easy to make — just cream butter until it is soft then gradually add sugar, three times as much sugar as butter and mix until smooth and creamy. Brown, white, icing or maple sugar is good in hard sauce and sometimes the sauce is tinted and formed into fancy shapes. Nuts or coconut may be added if desired.

The fluffy sauces such as those made by adding whipped egg white or cream to ordinary lemon or custard sauce just before serving, are good on almost any dessert. The same is true of fruit sauces made from crushed fresh, frozen or canned fruit and sweetened to taste. These, like the others mentiond, should be chosen for their color and flavor contrast with the dessert itself.

Sugar sauces are probably the most common of our dessert "toppers". They should be smooth, of course, and thick enough to make a coating but not so thick that they will set. Either cornstarch of flour may be used for thickening — when cornstarch is used the sauce will be more transparent. Some of the sugar sauces are caramel, butterscotch, fudge, chocolate, marshmallow, maple, honey and fruit sauce. To make any of these last three, just use a recipe for medium cream sauce and for the milk substitute maple syrup, honey or fruit juice. The fruit sauce should be sweetened to taste and a little lemon juice will bring out the flavor. If the leftover syrup from canned fruit is used, extra sweetening will not likely be required. Butter, of course, improves the flavor and gives a velvety texture to all these sugar sauces.

When the right recipe is not available for a caramel, fudge or butterscotch sauce, a candy recipe may be used instead, and the mixture cooked for a shorter time. Also, when time is short a chocolate sauce can be easily made by mixing melted chocolate, corn syrup and cream to the desired thickness and taste. A small quantity of corn syrup added to any chocolate sauce gives it extra body and for flavoring either cinnamon or vanilla is good.

Just like a new hat brings sparkle to an old outfit, so a new sauce adds glamor to leftover desserts. And to save the effort of making a fresh dessert every day, why not plan to make enough so there will be some left over? Most sauces except the fluffy ones can be prepared ahead of time and kept a day or two in the refrigerator all ready for a busy day. The homemaker who keeps a supply on hand will be able any time to transform leftover cake or pudding into superior desserts or plain ice cream into delightful sundaes.

Either caramel or maple sauce is very tasty with the old favorite, bread pudding when it is served cold or if the leftover pudding is reheated, hard sauce may be preferred. All fruit sauces are particularly good for bringing new character to leftover rice or tapioca desserts for their tart flavors blend well with the blandness of such puddings. Other happy combinations are chiffon cake with cherry sauce, angel cake with foamy sauce, chocolate cake with peppermint sauce, and gingerbread with molasses-flavored whipped cream, hot apple butterscotch sauce or this Apple Meringue Sauce as made in the Consumer Section kitchen.

Apple Meringue Sauce

2 Egg whites, 1/16 teaspoon salt, 1/2 cup sugar, 1 1/2 cups grated raw apple (unpeeled), 2 teaspoons lemon juice.

Add salt to egg whites and beat until in round peaks. Add sugar gradually and continue beating until mixture is stiff and glossy. Fold in grated apple and lemon juice. Yield: six servings. Use on gingerbread, pumpkin pie or chocolate cake.

"I'm Mr. Brown's wife," said the brunette, introducing herself to a blonde at the party.

"I'm his secretary," said the blonde.

"Oh," said the brunette, arching her eyebrows slightly, "were you?"

"Wiggle Platform" for Young-Fry in Transit

Make a "wiggle platform" and you and your children will travel better on your next week-end trip. Carol Lane, Women's Travel Director of Shell Oil Company shows how it's done.

Stack suitcases to the level of the car's back seat. Cover the surface with a crib mattress or quilt, and the children are provided with a play or rest space.

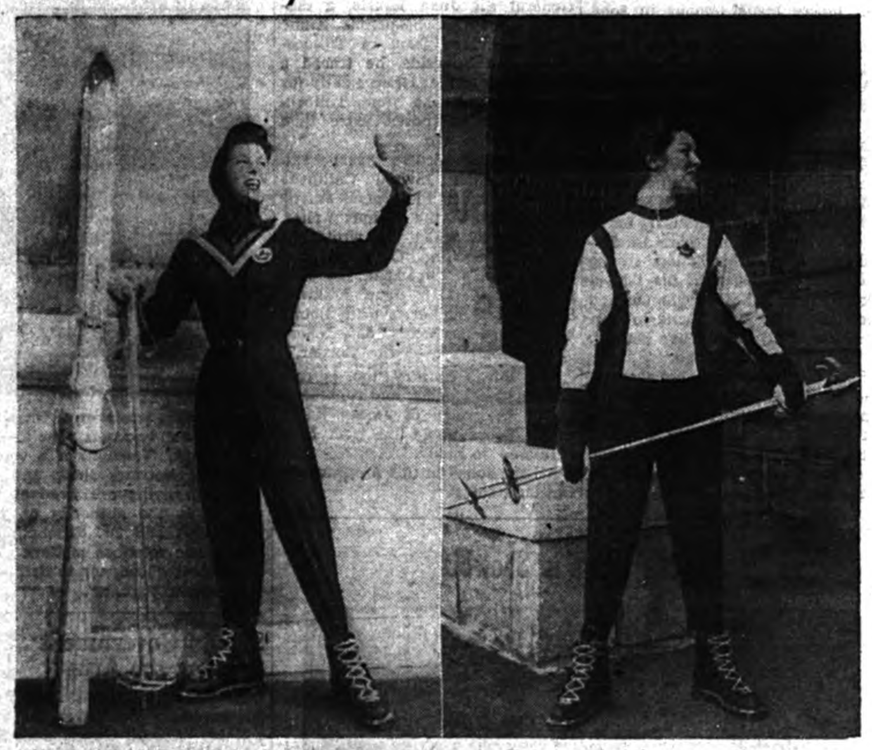

Other travel-tested tips: Packed right, the average car trunk can hold one 26-inch suitcase, a two-suiter, three 21-inch bags, two large duffle bags, a golf bag and clubs fishing tackle, souvenir box for the children. Camping equipment goes back in the special roof top carrier. Distribute baggage weight evenly — you will have a smoother ride and it is easier on the car.

PLUCKY TRAVELLER

Sidney, B.C. (CP) — Miss H. M. Williams, who crawled 2½ hours down a logging trail after breaking her leg in a fall from her bicycle, is recovering. A motorist picked her up just as she was losing consciousness.

The rich flavor of pork blends well with many other foods. Pork chops for example, are very good baked and served with hot sauerkraut or basted several times while cooking with a tangy barbecue sauce. Baked beans and pork chops make another good combination.

Styles for the Ski Trails

Canada's Olympic winter sports team competing at Cortina, Italy, next January, will wear these ski suits designed by Irving of Montreal. The suit at left, a blend of 50 per cent "Terylene" and 50 per cent wool, is navy blue with red and white one-inch V's across the zippered front. The racing jacket at right, for slalom wear, is of white "Terylene" with navy elasticized cotton in side panels and in bands at neck and wrists. Both jackets bear the Canadian Olympic team crest with a red maple leaf.

Let's Eat

BY IDA BAILEY ALLEN

"In your opinion, is candy a suitable food, Madame?" the Chef asked.

"That's a good question, Chef," I answered. "All normally healthy children and adults like candy, and as we all need a reasonable amount of sugar a day, some of it can be in the form of candy.

"Of course, the right type should be selected.

"For instance, children should not be allowed to stuff themselves with chocolate candy, because it contains considerable fat. And adults combating overweight should not eat chocolate or chocolate-covered candies because they contain so many calories.

Hard Candies Best

"But hard candies and taffies are not overrich.

"One or two pieces are good in place of other desserts. A piece of candy after school often proves a pick-up for youngsters; a piece of plain candy can help to solve the late afternoon fatigue problem for grown-ups."

The following taffy, calling for corn syrup, can be made in quantity, wrapped in squares of waxed paper and kept indefinitely.

Pulled Taffy: In a 2 qt. saucepan, combine 2 cups dark corn syrup, 1 cup sugar and 2 tbsps. butter or margarine. Add 1 tbsp. vinegar. Bring to a boil over a medium heat. Stir constantly until the sugar dissolves.

Continue cooking to the hard ball stage, 260 deg. F., or until ½ tsp. of the mixture forms a hard ball when dropped in very cold water. Remove from the heat.

Stir in ¼ tsp. baking soda and 1 tsp. pure vanilla extract. Beat until smooth.

Pour into a 7"x11" buttered pan. Cool until it can be handled. Then butter your fingers and pull the candy with the hands until it has a satin-like finish and is light colored.

Form into long strips ¾" in diameter. Cut into 1" pieces with scissors. Wrap individually in waxed paper. Makes 1¼ lbs.

Baked Limas with Bacon Squares: In a 3 qt. saucepan, put 1 lb. dried lima beans; soak 50 minutes in boiling water to cover. Bring to a boil. Simmer boil 1½ hours, or until nearly tender.

Add 1½ tsps. salt, 1 tsp. monosodium glutamate, ¼ tsp. pepper, 1 minced peeled onion and 1 tsp. sugar. Pour into a wide topped casserole or baking dish.

Cut a 1 lb. piece of bacon into 2" squares. Score the rind of each into ½" squares. Place on the beans; press down so only the scored top of the bacon is uncovered.

Bake 2 hours in a moderate oven, 350 deg. F. Add a little extra water if necessary during the first hour of baking.

Handsome Model Enjoys Travel on Job

Ottawa (CP) — Ever wonder why models model? So did a reporter So he asked one.

"I suppose," drawled Nancy Bass, "it's because they want to make the most of what they've got to sell."

Nancy has been a New York Powers model for 10 years, and although she unhesitatingly confessed to having just turned 31, to a reporter's roving eye she looked fit for many more.

She has brown hair and blue eyes. She stands a willowy five feet, nine inches in bare feet, and weighs 125 pounds.

The other measurements?

"Do I have to give them," she asked. "I worry a little about my hips, you know. The way they sound. Well — 34-24-35. That's what I am."

Former Stenographer

Seriously though, said Nancy, when a legal stenographer from Raleigh, N.C., discovers after three years that she takes pictures as well as she takes dictation, why then you just "sorta capitalize on being photogenic."

Nancy, who is Mrs. Richard Lansing in private life, said she got her job with the New York model agency during a vacation in New York City. She's been at it ever since.

She started at an hourly rate of $10. Now she earns $25 an hour. A few New York models, she added, earn up to $50. "But just a few."

Her face has appeared on the covers of "maybe six or eight" national magazines in the United States and in countless fashion advertisements. Lately she has done much television modelling, she said, including appearances on Jimmy Durante's show.

Once he surprised her by inviting her to dance with him on the show. "I'm not a dancer," she smiled, "but with him I guess you don't really have to know how to dance."

She has appeared in TV cigarette ads, smoking. But she doesn't smoke.

Nancy was in Ottawa for a week-long cosmetics promotion job at a department store. She said she goes on these road trips for the agency five or six times a year because she likes travelling and meeting people.

"There's nothing more interesting than talking to all kinds of different people."

She likes "all kinda sports," but cooking and reading are her favorite off-duty pastimes.

She said she doesn't swim as well as she wears bathing suits.

As for clothes, she explained that she was wearing a cloche hat with a wide band of mink — "I wear my mink on my head instead of around my shoulders" — a beige wool dress and black suede pumps.

"And Powers makeup, of course," she added.

Immunize Your Child

(Copyright) — By NANCY CLEAVER —

Centuries ago, a Greek writer, Hesiod, looking upon the illness of people around him, wrote these pessimistic lines:

"For full indeed is earth of woes, and full the sea; and in the day as well as night diseases unbidden haunt mankind, silently bearing ills to men . . . so utterly impossible is it to escape the will of Zeus."

In the 20th century, many of us do not believe that it is the Creator's will that men and women and little children should languish from diseases which can be prevented. Countless research scientists have given their lives to the study of the cause of various sicknesses. One by one, many diseases have been conquered, although some, like cancer, still in part puzzle the most brilliant of doctors.

We are apt to take the disappearance of the terrible scourge of infections like smallpox for granted, so seldom do we see a face disfigured by deep pox marks from this disease. Once it was the most dreaded of all diseases. It wiped out one-tenth of the population at one time. Smallpox is a "killer", and rare cases do still occur in Canada. There is no natural immunity against it. People of any age can catch it.

Before he reaches his first birthday, every child should be vaccinated against this germ. This is usually done on the upper left arm. It leaves only a small scar it it "takes". If it does not "take", there is no scar and the individual continues to be susceptible. Vaccination should be repeated in this case and again after seven years.

Triple toxoid is a preparation which combines whooping cough and diphtheria and tetanus toxoids. This reduces the number of visits to a clinic or a doctor. It provides immunization against diptheria and lockjaw, or tetanus, and partial protection against whooping cough.

Diphtheria is more apt to attack young children and it, too, is a killing disease. Even when a patient survives it, often it leaves serious nerve and heart complications. Tetanus or lockjaw sometimes follows puncture wounds or other injuries. Triple toxoid is a protection against these diseases. A "booster" does to re-enforce its effectiveness is needed to continue the strength of the protection as the years pass.

In the case of whooping cough, the vaccine provides about 80 per cent protection. If the disease is contracted by a child who has been given this treatment, it is much milder than it otherwise would have been. As this communicable disease is one which is apt to attack babies and very young children, the vaccine should be given at or before the baby is six months old.

School-age children may not be so sick with whooping cough as tiny tots, but it is a long drawn out disease. The sleep of the whole household is apt to be broken by the distressing sound of a child "whooping". For maximum immunity, recall doses are given up to school age.

To emphasize the importance of parents protecting their children from smallpox, diphtheria, whooping cough and tetanus. National Immunization Week is observed throughout Canada. Doctors, clinics, school nurses, departments of health, as well as newspapers and radios, bring this vital duty to the attention of fathers and mothers. Do not neglect to act in this matter! Do all you can to help your child escape these diseases.

WINS HER "WINGS" ON 17TH BIRTHDAY

Best birthday present this 17-year-old could hope for was a pilot's license which makes her one of the youngest licensed fliers in Canada. Pretty Helen Bradley of Picton, Ont., comes by her flying talent naturally. Her father is instructor at Picton's Prince Edward Flying club.

Nurse Served Indians For Many Years

Vancouver (CP) — Nurse Harriet Gerrie, who now devotes her time to pottery and club work here, can look back on 30 years of service to the Indians of British Columbia, Alberta and Saskatchewan.

She was born at Indian Head, Sask., and trained as a nurse at Edmonton and Toronto. Edmonton was her first headquarters for the Department of Indian Affairs.

"I travelled Alberta by dog-team, canoe and wagon, and, if lucky, with an old motorcar which could run on its rims as readily as on its tires."

Fought Epidemics

For 17 weeks she battled a typhoid epidemic at Onion Lake Agency near Bonneville, Alta., travelling by team and democrat from one encampment to another.

She prepared medicines and food and put them in sealers for her patients, each sealer marked with numbers to correspond with numbers on a clock so they would know when to take them. She lost only one patient.

When smallpox broke out among the Muskegs near Portage la Prairie, Man., she was rushed in to take charge. She crowded 23 of the more seriously ill into a small log dance hall, patients lying on cowhides and blankets on the floor. Potato sacks were sewn together for curtains to divide families.

For weeks Nurse Gerrie lived with her patients, preparing their food with the aid of one Indian youth.

Now, still youthfully middle-aged and an active member of the Business and Professional Women's Club, she finds time to take long auto rides to visit old patients.

Fashions

The smart coat chooses the straight and narrow line and if it has a standaway neckline, so much the better. This one not only has all these fashion attributes but sports an inside collar of mink. The fabric is rough tweed in a grayish brown mixture with buttons of brown plastic. Two small pockets are placed high on the chest and the sleeves, full above the elbow, narrow down to slim lower arms.

Wife Preservers

To remove adhesive tape stains from cotton fabric, apply kerosene, then wash in soapsuds.

A man had an attack of pneumonia, and a doctor was called in. After an examination the doctor said, "You are a musician, I think, and play a wind instrument?"

"Yes."

"That explains everything. There's a distinct straining of the lungs, and the larynx is inflamed as though by some abnormal pressure. What instrument do you play?"

"The concertina."

The slick surface of wet asphalt roadways has sent many a motorist limping to the garage with flattened fenders and shattered headlamps. But now research engineers have come up with something that sharply reduces this accident hazard. When their special aluminum oxide abrasive is applied to the road surface, it cuts down by more than 30% the stopping distance of your car when you apply the brakes at 30 m.p.h.

...So in addition to saving weight and work in a thousand everyday and special applications, aluminum may prove a major factor in saving lives, too.

"EXILE FROM SUNNYACRES"
by Margaret Cook

We write on a grey November day. The chrysanthemums have, just this week, changed from a mass of pinkish-mauve to a depressing froth of yellow-brown; they sink slowly toward the hard, clay earth, under successive blows of the frost. The house plants, brought in to save them from a like fate, sulk in their new pots, and drop their leaves morosely. No amount of watering and attention rewards them for having lost the warm, radiant sun they enjoyed so many months this year.

People, too, are beginning to lose that warm tint the sun gives; the skin fades, the eye dulls, the step slows — but soon, we, too, having got over the shock of change from tropical to arctic life, will begin to revive, and to engage enthusiastically in the pursuits of life proper to a northern winter.

Already, the Church Bazaars are in full swing. For the first time, the daughter of the house assisted in the capacity of waiter at a church supper, and she came home exhausted and subtly exalted. "Do you think I could wait on table next summer?" The dubious delights of youth!

Sometimes we feel that November is maligned. The delicate tracery of trees against the blue-grey sky is a beautiful thing, as subtly pleasing as is the New England character, which it resembles. Hardness is unpleasing to the sight and touch, but how reliable! Then, too, there is another color that is peculiar to this month, a warm mauve. Looking across the hills from Sunnyacres to Oka, it is as if one looked through a mauve veil. White stands out in this purplish landscape, and water looks like tarnished silver. Yes, November, were it not for the hunters, would not be a bad month. I often wonder what the rabbits, deer and bear think of this time of slaughter. How puzzling it must be, after months of pleasant security. How frightful to walk always in fear of death, how dreadful to find that a little frolic in the infrequent sun is the signal for that loud bang, and the searing pain. . . Oh, we know the arguments of the hunter, but our heart refuses to accept the reason. We should be happier if no hunter ever set foot on Sunnyacres.

Life at Sunnyacres on November week-ends is satisfying. We sail about in the sunshine, if any, and admire the vivid green mosses, the grey-green of the lichens, the red of the various berries, especially those of the Canadian Holly. But we walk with caution, mostly on the road, and always wearing bright colors. It would be painful to be taken for a deer. We realize that remark is an opening for a cynical friend, so we hurry on. . . Going down to Long Lake last week-end, two shots rang out, close by. Rounding a curve, we came upon a hunter. "Were you shooting at me?", we inquired a little curtly. "No, m'am, just a little rabbit in there", pointing to some shrubs within the wood, where the hunter promptly disappeared. As this was the general direction where husband and daughter were foraging for mushrooms, we were uneasy, until they appeared safe and sound.

If it is not sunny, what pleasanter than a couch, a book and a blazing fire? Or, perhaps popping corn whiles away an hour. And, how nice to have an hour to while away! Down here the hours chase themselves around the wheel of the day, this hour for dusting, those for meals, that for washing; never, till we fall into bed, is there an hour for just living. "Getting and spending, we lay waste our powers, little we see in Nature that is ours." Wordsworth may be out of fashion, but he does make some pithy remarks.

November, too, is the month for that first set of exams, and the subsequent first report. Trying to assist our daughter, we are appalled by her ignorance of current and common business terms and practices. "If a merchant allows discounts of 25% and 10% on purchase marked 50% above cost, what per cent does he actually make?" To Betty, the answer is crystal clear — 15%. In fact, she wonders at the simplicity of the question. A Bank Note is a thing you sign at the Bank (how logical!); a note is something you write when the teacher isn't looking; and a Promissory Note is an unknown quantity because of the word "promissory". As for Stocks and Bonds — before the teacher, often perfectly innocent of any first-hand knowledge of the workings of the Stock Market, has "explained", the pupil thinks of stocks of marbles, lapel pins, etc., and of chains. To tell the truth, the examples on Stocks and Bonds in the text-books are largely useless, since they are of operations never carried out by the investor. They are the problems of the brokers, and why not let them do them? It would be most interesting, fitting and useful to teach the pupil to read the stock market reports in the daily papers, and to study the reports and general make-up of the companies listed. That way, he would not get a distorted picture of the Stock Market as, variously, a jungle where lurk financial tigers looking for an unwary investor, or as a sort of magic machine where you put in $100 and extract $1,000. Nothing, so far as we have been able to ascertain, is ever said about romance of the Market Reports, how they represent hundreds of ways of living, and thousands of workers; that upon the successful operation of the companies listed depends to a large extent, the prosperity of the nation.

Similarly, in History, there is a sad lack of appreciation of the "livingness" of the characters and events. Simon Fraser, whose house still stands in Ste. Anne's and whose gravestone may be seen at Senneville, was as much a man as Davy Crockett. Only Shakespeare defies the bungling attempts of some teachers. The language of Shakespeare appeals to the adolescent, because it is forceful, colloquial and uninhibited. His love-making makes them laugh, his plots are tortuous enough to rival the young imagination. Some day, they will grow to understand the beauty of some of the passages. In the meantime, Shakespeare is fun. And so much learning is deadly dull. Give us gifted teachers and all the text-books could be burned — except Shakespeare, that is.

Speaking of Stock Markets, fortunes have been made on two issues in the past month, as you have probably noticed. If you are following the football results, you have ignored the Stock Market. Foreign affairs have worsened, according to the Americans; this is denied by the British. President Eisenhower has returned home, and Princess Margaret is not going to marry Group Captain Townsend. Aeroplanes continue to crash with depressing frequency, and the right of freedom of worship has been upheld by the Supreme Court of Canada. Quite a month! Just as I typed that, the sun came out. So unusual a sight demands our attention. We shall go for a walk and see if we can think up something for Christmas!

10-YEAR-OLD COMPOSES SONGS

—Central Press Canadian

Marie-Elizabeth Morgan of Welland, Ont., is only 10 years old, and like other 10-year-olds she has to be coaxed to play the piano. But the similarity ends there, for Marie rattles off original tunes, four of which have been published. Her mother, shown with her, writes down the music as she plays it. All told, she has written 15 tunes, which even Marie admits isn't bad for a 10-year-old.

Boscoe - Crooks

On Saturday evening at Trinity Anglican Church the marriage of AC-1 Earl Johnson Boscoe and Cpl. Delphine Angela Crooks was performed by the Rev. Horace G. Baugh, rector of Morin Heights.

Massive baskets of white 'mums, roses and carnations decorated the chancel.

The bride, given in marriage by P/O Frederick W. Wood, was attended by LAW Shirley A. MacDonald. Best man was J. M. Daly, and the organist was Carl Elder.

A reception was held at the RCAF Lac St. Denis Station. The couple will reside in Morin Heights.

Remembrance

On November 13 a Remembrance Parade was held at St. Sauveur, with many Legion members and visitors participating. The parade, led by the Boys' Farm and Training School Band, marched to the Sir Arthur Currie Memorial Plaque at Hill 70, where Remembrance Day ceremonies were carried out by the Rev. Horace G. Baugh and the Rev. Father A. Paquette. Parade Marshal was Mr. Howard Holgate. Taking the salute in front of the Church of St. Francis, were the rector, Cmdr. N. Bannatyne, Mayor Bastien and Mayor Filion, Chief T. Durocher, and Father Paquette.

Seasonal Unemployment Study for Lachute District

Following is the third is a series of articles written and contributed by Mr. G. A. Downing, manager of the National Employment office at Lachute, dealing with the subject of "Seasonal Unemployment in our Area."

EFFECTS OF THE MANUFACTURING INDUSTRY ON SEASONAL UNEMPLOYMENT

At first sight, anyone would be prompted to say that the manufacturing industry is reliant upon the consumers and therefore cannot alleviate, on its own, the problems of seasonal unemployment in our locality. Let us look at the reasons for seasonal unemployment brought about by the manufacturing industry. Its production is largely affected by the climate in our surroundings. Demand for agricultural implements is highest during the spring and early summer of each year. Restaurants, hotels and resorts are more occupied in some seasons than in others, consequently manufacturers of goods do not hope to supply an equal amount of their products during the off-season. This is where ingenuity and ambition come into play. To illustrate this point, I would like to give an example of an incident which occurred in the shirt manufacturing industry a few years ago. Producers of such goods introduced the fashion of men wearing sport shirts during warmer weather and thereby increased their potential output for many years to come. This change in style, however, struck a severe blow at the tie manufacturers as the male sex did not wear ties with sport shirts. Artists went to work to design a new type of tie and changed its shape and colors and in turn introduced the panel tie. This stimulated tie sales and its factories could maintain a more or less stabilized output. Instances such as this occur every day in business and every one of us should be on the alert for new markets.

Where manufacturers order their raw material in a partly prepared state, there exists the probability that with some initiative this primary material could be ordered in its crude state and processed during slack periods.

There are some immediate steps that the manufacturing industry can take to help in the solution of the problem. Some or all of these things are already being done by certain companies or by certain branches of the industry. A company engaged in the production of seasonal goods can seek to develop diversified lines which give rise to employment in the otherwise slack season. Where future market requirements can be estimated with a reasonable degree of accuracy, a fair level of production, based on a year's anticipated sales, can be undertaken, though it may involve carrying higher inventories than normal at some periods of the year. Even with today's interest rates applicable to inventory financing, the somewhat added cost of carrying larger stocks at certain times may well be off-set by a stabilized and so more efficient labor force. Some goods that were once regarded as highly perishable and so could only be manufactured to satisfy immediate demand, can today, thanks to newly developed processes, improved chemical ingredients, or better protective wrappings, be produced and stored for extended periods under both extremes of temperatures without loss of quality. When new plants or extensions to existing ones are to be built, planning can be such that much of the work can be carried on in the winter months, thus affording employment to people in the construction industry in their normally off-season.

Much common sense can be applied to the alleviation of seasonal unemployment. We have pointed out some possibilities and others can be thought out and applied to the manufacturing industry. It is highly recommendable that all concerned take this attitude and do his own share to make his contribution in this respect. If this is repeated again and again by all our manufacturers, a great stride will have been taken in the right direction.

Next week's article, "Achievements of the Construction Industry in Winter."

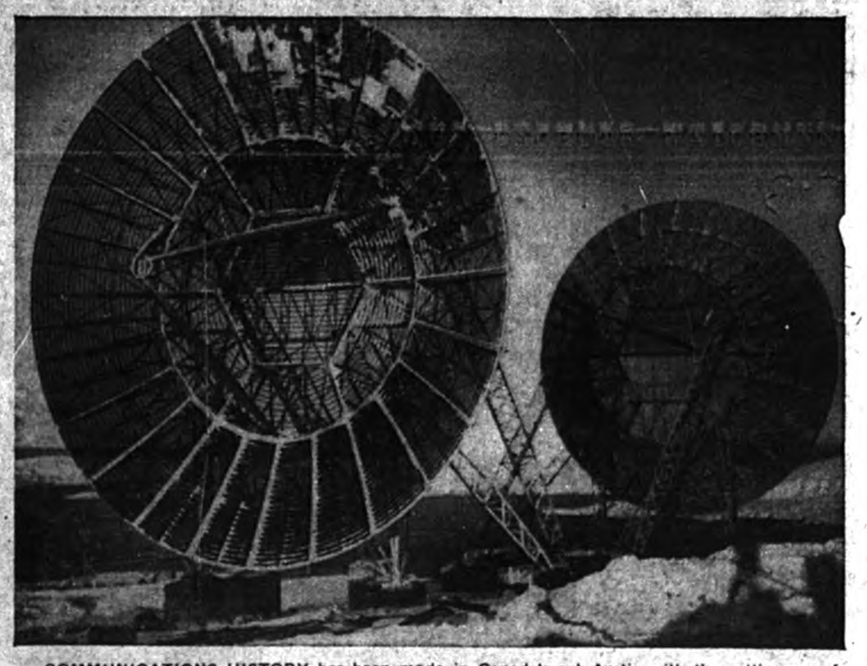

Ste. Adele Airstrip Volunteer Enterprise

Ste. Adele, Que. — Something new in parties — where everybody works — was planned for the Ste. Adele area last Saturday and Sunday, in the form of a "bulldozer party."

More than 200 volunteers turned out to build an air strip. They were residents of four Laurentian villages — Ste. Marguerite, St. Sauveur, Mont Rolland and Ste. Adele.

The folk decided that the all-year vacation district needs some kind of an airport, especially since private aircraft are becoming more and more popular. Planes now have to use such fields as the Cartierville Airport, 40 miles away.

Contractors and farmers in the resort area made equipment available free — bulldozers, power diggers, rollers and whatnot.

COMMUNICATIONS HISTORY has been made in Canada's sub-Arctic with the setting up of the world's first full-scale installation of over-the-horizon mivrowave transmission equipment, using the "tropospheric scatter" principle. The installation, employing huge dish-like antennae such as these, was built by the Bell Telephone Company's special contract department.

Over-Horizon Communications In Sub-Arctic

Up along the wild and rocky coastline of eastern Canada's sub-Arctic, communications history is being made by a team of Canadian experts working on a vital continental defence project.

According to the November issue of "The Blue Bell", Bell Telephone's employees' magazine, members of the company's special contract department have set up the world's first full-scale installation of "tropospheric scatter" microwave transmission equipment. With this installation an accomplished fact, Bell's special contract people are now devoting their energies largely to the Mid-Canada Line.

In this new and advanced concept of over-the-horizon radio relay transmission, antennae resembling giant dishes are used for gathering in the tiny microwaves.

Before the development of over-the-horizon microwave transmission, microwave towers had to be located within line-of-sight — or not more than 30 miles apart — because microwaves do not follow the earth's curvature, and tend to eventually diffuse into space.

On the new "tropospheric scatter" installation, however, Bell crews were able to locate their antennae many times more than the conventional 30 miles apart, because engineers had discovered, that, given sufficient power, the microwaves tend to bounce back to earth again in little pieces. The huge dishes can collect enough of these pieces to produce an effective signal — hence the term "scatter".

The voice channels used on this type of installation are so high-grade that two people located a thousand miles apart could converse as though they were in the same room.

"This construction job was no mean challenge," the Blue Bell article discloses. "The over-the-horizon transmission principle had been tried out on small test links set up in the southern United States and in our own country. But no one could forsee all the difficulties ahead in setting up and maintaining a high fidelity radio communication system in the frozen north.

"When plans for the project were drawn up, swift decisions had to be made on slim facts, because our people had little to go on other than the precise paper calculations of the experts. Bulky, book-size files of detailed specifications had to be drawn up, double-checked, transformed into factory-built equipment and transported to the scene of operations in the north.

"Buildings and tower structures had to be completely designed, with the aid of consultants, translated into materials, transported by sea and air to the northern bases, and erected by sub-contractors. Shortly after they had received their contract, the special contract people had moved $10,000,000 worth of construction materials and equipment into the north and were busy setting it up. To get it up there they had the European market scoured for ships available for chartering. They used everything from the d'Iberville, pride of the Government's icebreaker fleet, to small sealers and landing craft, and from flying boxcars to helicopters."

The Bell Company's special contract department is a top-level contractor in defence communications and associated construction for the Trans-Canada Telephone System and the Government of Canada.

Its personnel consists mainly of technicians and engineers recruited from within the Bell, from other telephone companies, or from outside industry. They operate over a sweep of territory stretching from Baffinland and Greenland to the borders of British Columbia.

Municipalities Blamed for Apathy To Increasing Pollution of Waters

Montreal — Water pollution off Lakeshore cities and towns will get worse at an increasing rate of speed, Dr. Lucien Piche, head of the Chemistry Department at the University of Montreal, told the Montreal District Chambre de Commerce last week.

Dr. Piche, who is also president of the Quebec Association of Professional Chemists and a member of the Fisheries Research Board of Canada, said the pollution was spreading at an alarming rate and would become worse if it were not checked.

This District Affected

He said the pollution was spreading rapidly along the Lakeshore from Ste. Anne de Bellevue to Lachine, along the Ottawa River from Hull to Thurso and from Hawkesbury - Grenville to Carillon.

Dr. Piche said the North River flowing from the Laurentians and the Back River opposite Ahuntsic were dangerously contaminated. He said the Lake of Two Mountains was threatened because practically all the other rivers flowed into it, including the Ottawa, carrying organic matter and bacteria.

Dr. Piche said the Mille Iles River had been kept in a fairly good state.

He blamed all levels of government for the condition, but mostly the affected municipalities, whose ruling bodies refused, he said, to do anything about it.

The situation did not only affect the Province of Quebec, but was also general throughout many parts of the world, he said. Great Britain had checked it by setting up a River Conservation Board, and Ontario had its Pollution Control Board.

HOSPITAL COSTS

Vancouver (CP) — Health Minister Eric Martin said in an address here that an 82 per cent increase in British Columbia hospital costs was due to the justifiable 150 per cent increase in salary and shorter working hours to the staff. He said health services absorb 33 per cent of the provincial budget.

Neutralize The World

By Lewis Milligan

Scanning the pages of an old bound volume of Punch for the year 1894, which I picked up on a second-hand book stall for $1.50, my eye was arrested by several letters to the editor on the question of "Neutralization" which was a current topic of political discussion at that time. It seems that someone had proposed that the Mediterranean should be neutralized and the British squadron withdrawn from that sea.

One correspondent, signing himself, "Yours, unblushingly, Cosmopolite," thought the "plan an admirable one. . . Let's do it at once! Then we can sell a lot of our ships, and cut down the Naval Budget by one-half, and with the money so obtained, give all the unemployed pensions of five shillings a day, together with free dinners, beer, tobacco, and room-rent, for the rest of their lives."

Another letter, beginning, "Esteemed Editor," runs: "Glad to find dear Old England is talking about neutralizing the Mediterranean. Always thought it was the best policy. . . Give up Gibraltar to Spain. Malta of course will go to France, Cyprus and Egypt to Russia, and you'll find the Cape route to India far pleasanter in every way once you've got accustomed to it." This letter is signed, "Yours, disinterestedly, Alexis Slykoff."

The final letter is enthusiastic: "Let's neutralize everything! So much safer. I know, from an intimate friend of the late Lord Tennyson, that the line he really wrote was 'The Parliament of Man, the neutralization of the World,' only some printer's devil altered it to 'Federation', and the Poet Laureate never noticed the error! Then, if the principle were once adopted, we could go on to neutralize the property of all millionaires; that would render it available for the use of the public, and of yours, cheerily, Imperial-Social-Democrat."

These letters were written sixty years ago, and a reader might shrewdly suspect that they were composed by Mr. Punch himself. They provide an interesting peep into world politics in the last years of the nineteenth century when Czarist Russia was at her old game of stirring up trouble in the Near East, and the young Kaiser Wilhelm was competing with Bismarck for political control of a Greater Germany. The British Navy was the invincible guardian of the seas, and the Mediterranean was a vital link with India and a free highway for all world trade betwen the East and West. Both Russia and Germany were casting jealous eyes on the British Empire, a jealousy which led eventually to the First World War.

Germany as a nation is now shattered and is too much preoccupied with the job of reconstruction to care about who controls the Mediterrean. But Communist Russia's foreign policy is no different from that of Czarist Russia, except that she is more boldly aggressive and is in a stronger position to fulfil her old ambitions. Thanks to Hitler and the assistance of Britain and the United States in the last war, the new Czars at Moscow have taken possession of Eastern Europe and have full control of the Baltic. All that they need now is to take over control of the Eastern end of the Mediterranean. With that, the Middle East with Turkey, Palestine and eventually North Africa would be all their own. The present dispute over the ownership of the Island of Cyprus would be settled, and the Greeks themselves would soon lose the ownership of their own country.

To neutralize the Mediterranean today would be to throw that sea into the hands of Soviet Russia. But, with the British and United States fleets on guard in those waters, the Western World can say to Russia, "Thus far and no farther."

'Independent Merchant' Scores Court Triumph

By Richard Daignault

Quebec (CP) — An unusual story about a stubborn sausage-maker in a bush town on the St. Lawrence River north shore entangled in legal suits with a large newsprint manufacturing company came to light last week.

Quebec North Shore Paper Company of Baie Comeau, which owns the town of Frankuelin, about 230 miles northeast of Quebec City, had been trying since July to stop Frank Lejeune, father of nine, from operating his sausage-making and meat-preparing business. It had asked the Superior Court for an injunction to prevent the butcher from building himself a new shop and carrying on business in the company-controlled town.

The company alleged that, since it owned the land under a 75-year-lease with the Provincial Government, Lejeune had no right to build a new shop without company consent.

However, last week, a Superior Court judge rejected a company motion to amend the form of its suit and warned the company its main action seemed ill-founded.

The company, in a surprise move, dropped all suits against the butcher, who announced he would complete his shop and carry on his business as usual in the 85-family community.

DOOLITTLES PROUD OF THEIR DOINGS

—Central Press Canadian

There are 10,000 Doolittles in North America and they are proud of their historic record which, they say, puts their family name in the Who's Who of science, politics and war. They say there was a Doolittle among the Normans who conquered England. Doolittles started, fought and finished the U.S. war of independence. One member of the family helped Alexander Graham Bell invent the telephone and another is father of the Trans-Canada highway. The achievements of the family are related in eight volumes which were discussed at great length in a family gathering at Biloxi, Miss. Recently returned from the reunion is William Doolittle of Toronto, shown with his wife, who was elected president of the family association. "Our motto," he says, "is to do a little more, a little better."

No one is actually hanged for lack of courtesy at the wheel, even though, as it sometimes happens, discourtesy is responsible for the death of a traffic victim.

Adell: "Don't you think, dear, that a man has more sense after he is married?"

John: "Yes, indeed, but it's too late then."
