Pensions Authority Heard By Argt'l Teachers' Group

Mr. Gordon Heslam, former rector of Montreal High School and at present field secretary of the Provincial Association of Protestant Teachers, addressed the Argenteuil Teachers' Association in the Brownsburg School last Thursday. Mr. Heslam, who for 18 years prior to his retirement represented the Protestant teachers as Pensions Commissioner, gave some interesting and little-known information regarding the Teachers' Pension Act and how it operates in certain specific cases.

Generally the Act, which allows retirement of women at age 56 and men at age 60, is considered one of the best schemes in Canada. The amount of pension depends on the number of years taught up to a maximum of 35 and the salaries received while teaching. There are, however, several changes which both Protestant and Roman Catholic teachers favor and representations have been made to the government regarding them.

Mr. Heslam prefaced his remarks by stating that he has, during his tenure of office, visited many local teachers' associations throughout the province, speaking chiefly on pensions but also answering many queries regarding PAPT business in general. He was introduced by A. J. McGerrigle of Grenville and thanked by Laurence Robinson of Lachute.

The business session of the meeting was conducted by President G. P. Grant of Brownsburg. By unanimous vote the name of the Association was changed from Argenteuil - Two Mountains Teachers' Association to Argenteuil Teachers' Association. Teachers of St. Eustache, in the County of Two Mountains, have joined with others in that area to form the Laurentian Teachers' Association. A number of matters concerning the Provincial Association were discussed and questionnaires regarding working conditions in schools were completed by the members present.

The meeting closed with a social period, during which refreshments were served by the members of the Brownsburg staff.

Windstorm Plagues Power and Phone Crews, Cars and Trucks Hurled from Icy Highways

Farmhouse Hit by Hurricane

Damage estimated at over $2,000 was inflicted on the home of Chas. Lummis, North River Road, last Saturday evening when high-velocity winds lifted the roof. A section of roof 25-foot square, severed a 10-inch tree, knocking out the transformer and breaking power lines. . . A few minutes prior to this onslaught, a car was moved from beside the house where, later, a pile of bricks lay in the wake of the storm. A large section of the house will have to be re-wired.

Red Cross Drive, Lachute District, Sets Target $3,000

Campaign Opens Today, Volunteer Canvassers For All Divisions

The Red Cross campaign for this district opens today, to continue during the month of March. In this period canvassers will call for contributions, and it is hoped the area will be covered within the prescribed time and results reported promptly thereafter to the treasurer.

Officers for the campaign this year are — Mr. S. Blais, chairman, Miss Lillian Harrison (1955-56) and Miss Mary Miller, joint organizers. In her perennial role as treasurer is Mrs. H. Rigg. These are personnel in charge of the district campaign, which will include Greater Lachute, the town environs, Grenville, Calumet, Avoca and Kilmar. The organization has temporary space in Lachute Auditorium for the distribution of canvassing material. (The chairman acknowledges this co-operative gesture on the part of the Mayor and Council.)

Canvassers have now been enlisted for each division of the area, and it remains for the public to give full support to attain the $3,000 objective for Lachute District.

Ayers Caisse Has Successful Report

Plan Now in Operation for Schoolchildren's Savings

The annual financial statement for Ayers Limited Caisse Populaire was presented at the general meeting held recently in the St. Julien parish church basement. The report indicated that during the past year the assets increased $73,106.54, this being the largest increase since the inception of this venture in 1948.

Total assets to date have risen to $320,726.33, comprising $93,235.74 in investments, $145,170.75 in loans to members, and $82,319.84 in the bank. The members have subscribed $19,349.73 in corporate capital and $286,474.86 in personal savings accounts.

After having provided for administrative expenses, paid an interest of 3 per cent on savings, and a dividend of 4 per cent on capital, there remains a net surplus of $2,741.79. The reserve fund has been raised to $10,000, the contingency fund to $3,600, and the surplus fund to $607.86, for a total of $14,207.86. These results represent the funds of 772 subscribers.

In addition, the Caisse has introduced a school plan for the school children of Ayersville, and to date, 352 pupils in the two schools have saved and deposited the sum of $2,528.95.

During the past year, the Credit Board loaned out $89,015 to 124 borrowers; 21 of these loans are in the form of mortgages on property renovations or construction of new homes.

With the presentation of this report, the officers of the past year were re-elected to office.

Entomologists figure there are 6,000 pests or potential pests among the 700,000 varieties of insects identified to date in Canada.

Bushman Killed, Hurtled Over Rock Precipice

Malcolm Dewar, a 26-year-old Canadian International Paper bushworker, plunged 25-odd feet down a steep embankment two miles north of Harrington near Fawn Lake on Friday morning, and died of head injuries shortly after being admitted to the Smith Clinic at Hawkesbury. The victim was married and the father of one child.

A coroner's jury inquiring into the victim's death held an inquest at the Court House here Tuesday evening, and pronounced the fatality accidental.

Two fellow workers with Dewar at the time of the incident, Morris Zanth, of Arundel, and Philip MacLeod, of Bell Falls, testified at the inquiry, presided over by Coroner Dr. Jules Lafleur.

Zanth stated that the victim and five other men were occupied making a chute to allow logs to fall freely over a 57-foot cliff to the end of the road. Several of the logs had been cut and lodged in place, when an off-cut some 18 inches long commenced to roll down the embankment.

For some reason Dewar started downward after the log; he remained on his feet for 20 or 25 feet before his momentum carried him over the edge of the cliff, after making a final lunge for the log. Zanth said that Dewar had been standing beside him when he started after the log; there was no footing on the hard-packed snow and Dewar had been unable to stop himself before he plunged over the cliff.

This testimony was repeated by Philip MacLeod, and both men stated that the victim went headfirst over the cliff but that no one saw him land below. Both men affirmed that the victim was a safety-conscious worker.

Positive identity of the body was made by the victim's father, Kenneth Dewar, who stated he had seen his son's body in a local funeral parlor Saturday morning.

The accident occurred around 10 a.m. Friday, Dewar being pronounced dead by Dr. Drummond Smith at 11.45, some 15 minutes after his arrival at the Hawkesbury clinic where he was conveyed by panel truck.

Ernie MacRae, Harrington Forest Farm bush foreman, was in the area although not at the scene at the time of the mishap.

Manny Wilson, Forestry Farm manager, stated that the company has spent considerable time on safety and for the past two years the farm had won the Canadian International Paper Company award for safe practices, having gone longer than any other section of the company without an accident. This he credited to the work of Mr. MacRae, the foreman.

Coroner Dr. Lafleur stated that the skull fracture was one of the worst he had ever seen. He recommended having a portable stretcher in the area of operations in the event of other accidents; in his opinion, however, the availability of a stretcher would have made no difference in this case.

Det. Sgt. Ralph Allen, who investigated the accident, was in attendance and filled in several details.

Those working with Dewar at the time of the accident were Carmen Grey, Arundel; Philip MacLeod, Bell Falls; Morris Zanth, Arundel; Francois Dauphers, Harrington, and several others.

The body was brought from Hawkesbury to the local morgue.

Two Bills Passed on Wheat Debate; M.P. Charges East - West Bickering 'Dividing Country Into Separate Camps'

By Roy LaBerge, Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Feb. 27 (CP) — The Commons has finally given approval in principle to the two bills constituting the government's emergency legislative program to help meet the problems of heavy wheat holdings on farms and in elevators, slow marketings and prairie cash shortages.

The controversial prairie grain loans measure, to ratify treasury guarantees of bank loans on farm-stored grain, received second reading last week after 11 days of vigorous criticism by all Opposition parties who demanded instead cash advances on farm-stored grain.

In contrast, members hustled the second bill through second reading in little more than an hour. This is the measure which will funnel an estimated $32,000,000 this year to the Canadian Wheat Board to help western farmers bear storage charges on the board's big wheat stocks. This will have the treasury bear the wheat board's storage costs on wheat carryover in excess of 178,000,000 bushels.

Both measures required the routine final reading and must get Senate passage before becoming law.

New European Orders

Meanwhile, it was learned that Canada is receiving large new orders from Europe for export wheat in the wake of heavy winter damage to European crops.

No estimate of the size of the orders was available last week from official sources, but officials noted that France said one-third of its winter wheat crop had been lost and two-thirds damaged.

Canada's total wheat stocks in the current crop year, which started August 1, totalled 987,800,000 bushels — about half of it carried over from the previous year. Domestic requirements were expected to take 160,000,000 bushels. There has been strong competition among major exporters for markets.

East-West Bickering

As the wheat debate continued last week Romuald Bourque, Liberal member for Montreal Outremont—St. Jean, said that repeated Opposition demands were "dividing the country into camps."

He said eastern Canadians realized the importance of farm prosperity. But there was a limit to federal aid. Interest-free advances to all Prairie farmers would mean that thousands who didn't need help could invest the money while eastern taxpayers financed the advances.

W. D. Eylie (SC — Medicine Hat) said western purchases of farm machinery, automobiles and other goods help the prosperity of Ontario and Quebec.

Maybe, he said, the west should start taxing money paid for goods bought from Ontario and Quebec. That might be "one way we could show the eastern provinces what the west means to them."

District Traffic Case Goes to Assizes

In the St. Jerome court on Tuesday, Roger Hanfield, 42, of Montreal, pleaded "not guilty" to a charge of "being criminally negligent in the use of an automobile on a public highway". The case was held over to the Spring Assizes by Judge Edouard Archambeault.

Hanfield was arrested February 14 by Det. Ralph Allen. The charge arose out of an accident on Route 8, two miles west of St. Philippe, on December 26 last year.

The cars involved in the accident in which five children were treated in hospital, were driven by Hanfield and René Tassé, 30, of Gatineau (a former Ayersville resident).

Traffic Officers Roger Massie and Gerard Loyer reported the cars collided when an unidentified auto passed Tassé, who was headed towards Gatineau. Hanfield swerved to the left-hand side of the highway in an effort to miss the unknown car and then hit Tassé head-on. Four Tassé children, ages one to six, and 14-year-old Monique Hanfield, daughter of the driver of the other car, were injured; both cars were demolished. The case was postponed until last week for further investigation.

Emile Hebert at Brownsburg Council To Present His Last Municipal Budget

(Our District Correspondent)

Brownsburg — Monday's meeting of the Council will see Mr. Emile Hebert present his last budget, and an interesting one it promises to be. Council is anxious to cut down in various departments — the police force $5,124; the overtime salaries. On this latter point, the councillors feel that they should try to pay competitive salaries, then seek a competitive efficiency with their workers.

There's little chance, though, that the rates will be lowered; in fact it is likely they'll go up to $1.25 or more. Every year there are certain problems come up — moving the electric light poles, for example, which will cost about $750, and always they have to be put off because they have not been budgeted for. This year the budget will include these items, not the least of which is the drawing up of a municipal building code.

Also on the agenda are the two new appointments — Police Chief and full-time Secretary-Treasurer. The building code will be drafted at a special mid-March meeting.

Snakes Alive! Must Be Spring

One usually associates snakes with warm sunshine and sunbaked countrysides; but yesterday (February 29, temperature 10 above zero) Neal Moore, of Hill Head, found a black snake in his spring — wriggling energetically with its full length of 20-odd inches.

Winston Smillie is C-I-L Ammunition sales representative in Saskatoon.

Victoria (CP) — Joseph A. Fortin, 70, voluntarily turned in his driving license when fined $40 for careless driving. He said he was absentminded and "it would cost me less to take a taxi."

Jailed for Issuing False Cheques; Stores Victimized

Ronald Houl, 36, of Montreal, pleaded guilty to a charge of passing a false cheque, and was sentenced by Judge E. Archambeault to a term of three months in St. Jerome jail.

The charge, laid by Det. Ralph Allen, followed a complaint from the proprietor of Clem's Sport Shop that on Saturday a man had made a purchase of two dolls with a $20 cheque and received $12.48 in cash. The man gave the impression that he was an officer of the law.

Several other storekeepers reported similar instances, after which the suspect was arrested by the local police.

Gerard Berubé, of Montreal, was sentenced to time spent in jail when he pleaded guilty to the theft of a cigarette lighter from a summer camp in the Arundel district in 1953. A breaking and entering charge was also laid.

Berubé was arrested following his release from jail on another charge, and was detained a further three days prior to his trial.

Yvon Bilodeau, 18, of Lachute, pleaded guilty to the theft of a clarinet from the "Army On Parade" troupe on February 19, and will be sentenced tomorrow.

The latter two charges were laid by Det. Ralph Allen.

Grenville Man Pleads Guilty on Traffic Charges

Germain Brisebois, 44, of Grenville, pleaded guilty to two of three charges before Judge E. Archambeault in St. Jerome Court on Tuesday, and was fined a total of $100 plus costs, his driving license also being suspended for a three-month period.

The third charge, that of grievous assault, was dropped when his 81-year-old father-in-law, E. Spearant, refused to testify.

Brisebois was arrested January 28 by Traffic Officers Albert Legault and Gerard Loyer and charged with driving while his ability was impaired, "hit-and-run", and grievous assault. The charges were laid following an accident in Grenville in which 12-year-old Georges Bourgette was slightly injured, his bicycle being struck by a vehicle whose driver failed to stop after the mishap.

The traffic officers gathered sufficient evidence to trace Brisebois and lay the first two charges. Arriving at the house, however, they added a charge of grievous assault following an attack on Mr. Spearant.

Brisebois pleaded not guilty at preliminary hearing, and trial was set for Tuesday, when he changed his plea to guilty on the first two charges.

He was sentenced to a fine of $50 plus costs and his driver's permit was suspended for a three-month period on the hit-and-run charge. An identical sentence was imposed, the suspension to run concurrently, on the charge of impaired driving. An option of three months in jail was offered in default of payment of the second fine.

BIGGER GAME

Galt, Ont. (CP) — Two farmers who went rabbit hunting returned with a wolf they had shot. They still hope to get a second wolf which has been reported in the district.

Major Property Damage Occurred In North River Farm Community

Gatineau Power linemen plodded on snowshoes a total of four miles with wire and repair equipment in Saturday night's blustery weather, to repair the worst power break in this district, on the Legault Montée leading off Route 8 from St. Hermas to St. Benoit. Gatineau crews replaced a total of nine poles following the Saturday evening windstorm, according to local manager Rod Carreau.

This immediate section was also the centre of the worst telephone service interruption reported to Roland Dupuy, Bell manager, who states that a cable serving the Ste. Scholastique area was severed, knocking-out the phone service for some time. A total of approximately 400 district phones were cut off temporarily by the storm.

By far the worst property damage was pin-pointed on the spacious farmhouse of Charles Lummis, situated at the St. Philippe end of the Bradford Montée (North River Road), when at 7.40 p.m. Saturday, the roof was lifted from the building. No one was injured although the family was in the house at the time of the disturbance.

Fire Chief Geo. Y. Deacon and his firemen answered 11 calls to chimney fires, and one fire of a more serious nature, in the 36-hour period from 10.30 a.m. Saturday. The fire-truck was taken out twice, once Saturday morning to the residence of Fern Gagné, Grace Street, who reported his taxi on fire, and to approximately the same location Saturday evening, where a power pole was reported ablaze.

Two cars, a gas truck and another large truck were reported blown off the approach to the iron bridge, on the flats just east of Lachute, by high winds which put the vehicles completely out of control on a glare ice-surface.

Tangled wires, broken glass, bent television antennae and toppled signs and branches evidenced the power of the hurricane-force winds, which in other sections of the province indirectly caused several deaths.

Gusts were clocked at 86 miles an hour at their peak Saturday night by the weather bureau at Dorval, which described the air currents as the strongest since first records were kept there 15 years ago.

A CPR caboose was blown loose at Gatineau about six o'clock Saturday and went several miles east towards Templeton before stopping. The local North Shore train to Montreal was held up 50 minutes until a switch engine removed the caboose.

Railway officials said the storm caused minor damage and that communication lines stood up well.

Bell Telephone and Gatineau Power companies report the majority of damage resulted from ice-heavy wires and falling branches, with eight trees reported falling over the Gatineau lines. Sections of Main Street were either blacked out or dimmed for close to two hours before line crews, searching for the trouble, discovered a "short" between two of the main power circuits serving this area. Manager Rod Carreau stated the trouble was of a nature that might not occur again in a hundred years. The Mille Iales area was without power for some four hours.

The majority of minor power and telephone failures were caused from breaks from the main lines and poles to the houses, causing trouble to but one or two customers in each case.

The Gatineau Power men were busy on the lines at the commencement of the storm Saturday evening, and worked until 5 a.m. Sunday; they then took a three-hour break, returning to work at 8 a.m. and working through until suppertime Sunday. The Bell Telephone crews also worked throughout the night, but their trouble was not so serious or extensive.

Linemen have removed numerous dangerous trees and branches from the wires since the storm. It is reported that surrounding districts outside the local territory were hit much harder by the storm than this cente.

Wind Storm Causes $40,000 Feed Store Fire At Vankleek Hill

Vankleek Hill — The high velocity storm sweeping this area Saturday caused a $40,000 flash fire which destroyed the Co-op Feed Store here, also several smaller fires and considerable wind damage.

The fire which burnt the building to the ground began in the rear of the manager's office and lasted for six hours. Fire reels were called from Hawkesbury to assist volunteer firefighters.

High winds threatened the next-door Presbyterian Church and a neighboring service station, but due to efforts of firefighters they were untouched by the flames.

Store manager C. R. Hudson said a complete rebuilding program would get under way immediately, in spite of the fact insurance gave only partial coverage.

In the area high winds ripped a roof from a barn and falling boughs cut hydro lines. Chimney fires caused light damage. One of them was brought under control by volunteer firemen after it threatened a restaurant.

Mowed Lawn In January

This is a rare snapshot of one of Brownsburg's well-known citizens, John Roberts, caught mowing his lawn in mid-winter (January 12, to record the exact date). There was no snow in evidence around Mr. Roberts' premises, and he informed The Watchman the grass was then more prolific than last August, when lawns were in poor shape after the dry summer.

Tradesman Has Monster Showpiece

Next time you are filling a two-gallon pail at the tap, just envision a faucet in your kitchen which would deliver 435 gallons a minute. . . . If you cannot imagine it, there's one answering this description in the showroom of R. McArthur & Son Ltd., plumbers, Lachute.

The immense tap at McArthur's is a display-piece which has been viewed all across Canada. Cast by Wallaceburg Brass Foundries, it is brass throughout, chrome plated, and weighs 175 lbs., being 175 times larger than the standard domestic faucet. A conventional household tap is mounted on the same board for comparison. As stated, the monster delivers 435 gallons a minute, compared with a capacity of 30 gallons from the home faucet at top pressure.

Despite expansion of Canadian manufacturing, only 40 per cent of Canadian exports are fully or chiefly manufactured goods, while raw materials and partly manufactured good make up 60 per cent, exactly the same proportions as in the 1935-39 period.

VISIT TO U.S.

Ottawa (CP) — Prime Minister St. Laurent told the Commons he was "very pleased" to accept an invitation from President Eisenhower to visit the United States. President Adolfo Ruiz Cortines of Mexico also has been invited to the meeting, to be held at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., about March 27.

The value of Canada's primary textile production is greater than the value of the country's annual wheat crop.

What Is "Demand"?

Demand is the word used to describe the amount of electricity used by each customer when his requirements are at a peak. For instance, if you had ten 100 watt bulbs all on at once, your "demand" would be 1000 watts or 1 kilowatt — meaning that the greatest amount of power you needed at one time was 1 kilowatt.

If, however, you also use a 3,000-watt water-heater at the same time, your "demand" would be 4 kilowatts — 1 kw. for the bulbs and 3 kw. for the water-heater.

The "demand" for electricity is the factor which governs the size of the generating, substation, transmission and transforming equipment required to provide the service.

Power companies everywhere are installing "demand" meters so that they can have a more accurate measure of the amount of power actually required by each customer.

With so many appliances used in the home, the "demand" of each customer is many times what it was when lighting was the only use made of electricity.

What Do You Know About Vermont?

From remarks of Hervé J. L'Heureux (Consul General of the United States at Montreal) at the 4th National Salon of Agriculture, on "Vermont Day", February 22:

"Vermont leads the United States in the production of marbles and asbestos. Two-thirds of its total land area is classed as forest land; and it leads other States in the production of maple sugar. Although it depends for the most part on its minerals, forest and agricultural interests for its wealth, it has a number of other great industries. It may be said, however, that Vermont is best known as a dairying State, its ratio of dairy cows per capita being the highest in the United States. It supplies an appreciable part of the milk and cream requirements of the large cities of Boston and New York.

"When, during the latter part of the 18th century, the British Crown opened up lands for settlement in Canada, I am told that, while many parts of the Country were settled by persons coming from overseas, nearly all of the land in the Eastern Townships along the Vermont border was settled by inhabitants of Vermont. As a result, people on both sides of the boundaries have many common characteristics and customs; and thousands of these families have intermarried."

Farmer Nuns Raise Goats at Mt. Laurier

Almost everyone is acquainted with cows called "Betsy" and "Clara", but in the mountains north of Montreal are some goats with far more imaginative names.

"Cascade", "Blanchette" and "Nougatine" are members of a herd carefully tended by a young woman who wears a blue cotton apron over the habit of a nun. The cloistered sisters of the Benedictine priory at Mont Laurier, Quebec, make goat-raising a profitable enterprise.

The milk is rich and provides good butter and cream. Light, digestible cheese is being made on an experimental basis. The Benedictine order is already famous for chocolate-making and some day these cloistered sisters hope to develop a new chocolate made with the milk from their goats. Quite apart from milk, the meat from young kids is delicate and the resourceful nuns hope to be able to tan kidskin.

Behind the main building of the priory at Mont Laurier is land running back to a riverbank. There, this progressive group of women turn from their prayers to operate a highly efficient farm. They keep about 500 hens, grow fruits and vegetables — and raise goats.

The priory's meticulously-clean goathouse has stalls for 25 milking goats. In a corner, a wooden platform equipped with a neck-yoke is where "Nougatine" and her sisters take turns munching from a pail of oats while being milked. On the wall hangs a chart recording the milk given by each member of the herd, for these nuns are business-like farmers.

Along the river bank is the goat pasture. The grass is thick and the land rich, but not because nature made it that way. These farmers in blue aprons are completely up-to-date on agricultural methods. Their alkaline soil last fall was treated with limestone and this spring will be enriched by growing clover and alfalfa. Their pasture flourishes with the help of modern chemical fertilizers, scientifically applied to meet the needs of the soil.

After these lucky goats have grazed their fill, their thrifty keepers protect the grass by driving the herd into a "lounging area" where "Cascade", "Blanchette" and the others take their ease, nibbling on straw and making milk. At sundown, the goats with the quaint names quietly obey the young nun's call and file into the goathouse with its whitewashed stalls.

Fruits and vegetables grown on the priory farm are carefully chosen for their food value. A special variety of black raspberry is cultivated because it is high in vitamins. The henhouse is a model of efficiency. It is not so surprising then, to see these secluded fields being plowed with a shiny new tractor, confidently driven by a nun in billowing skirts.

Vaccination Effective Against Rabies

Vaccination of cats and dogs against rabies prevents possible spread of the disease from wild life, through these animal pets to humans.

Dr. K. F. Wells, Veterinary Director General, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, states effectiveness of vaccination has been shown by the fact that of 15,000 dogs vaccinated during the present outbreak in Northern Ontario, no case of rabies has occurred in dogs that were vaccinated.

Spread of rabies into settled areas has occurred chiefly through wild life sources. Of 100 cases confirmed in Canada during the present series of outbreaks, 19 were dogs, 55 were wild life — chiefly foxes, lynx, wolves and coyotes; 26 occurred in domestic animals — cattle swine and cats. In Ontario, out of 71 cases confirmed, 12 were dogs, 16 domestic animals and 43 wild life. There have been no cases reported of rabies being contracted by human beings during the present series of outbreaks. Vaccination of all dogs and cats, in areas where confirmed cases of the disease are discovered is one of the surest methods of preventing its spread to people, particularly in thickly populated communities.

John Power of Penetanguishene, Ont., shown with three of his six children, is not quite sure if he still is police chief of the town. He was asked to resign by the council, then when the council was criticized in a stormy ratepayers' meeting, most of the council resigned. Only the mayor is certain he is still on the council, but, says he, it is not legal for the council to resign en masse. And to further confuse the issue, he doesn't know which councillors resigned first, so that he doesn't know which resignations to accept and which to refuse.

Soliloquy on Education, Prayer And the Promise of Springtime

"EXILE FROM SUNNYACRES"
By Margaret Cook

Where did February go? I hope some one missed this article last Thursday. Did any of our Lakefield friends adjust their glasses and murmur, "Let's see what that daft Cook woman has written this time" — only to search in vain? I hope so, but I doubt it. More likely they turned on the TV and watched Jackie Gleason. . . Will someone please tell me what is funny about fighting with one's wife? It isn't even a change. We may have been unfortunate, and undoubtedly our comment will be put down to sour grapes, but we have yet to see a really entertaining number on television. (Note, we refer to entertainment.) The televising of sports, etc., is excellent. No wonder the Russians think us childish.

To return to our first question, where did February go? It is probably out looking for the March lamb! Forgive our infantile musings, such a relief from the long, grim hours spent tutoring. It is especially grim this time because no pay-cheque awaits at the end of the lesson, since the pupil is our own daughter. As our readers may have gathered, we are not impressed by the kind of training now deemed sufficient in our high schools; so, at Christmas break, we transferred our heart's delight to one of the older private schools in the city. We were dismayed to find that our Grade IX is at least six months behind the equivalent Form IV. It would seem that the courses in our government schools have been so watered down they offer little incentive to an intelligent pupil. If, added to this meagre fare, one draws a teacher who habitually mispronounces words, who cannot solve assigned Algebra problems, who cannot answer any questions not directly relevant to the lesson, and who faces the class in slovenly attire — then life becomes exceedingly dull, and presently the pupil becomes inattentive, and, if not checked, downright lazy. It is high time that salaries in the teaching profession were made commensurate with the performance of the teacher, and not merely with the years of service. Everybody grows old without effort, so why the reward? . . . If anyone has stayed with us this far, we commend an article on education in Russia, by Dorothy Thompson in the March "Ladies' Home Journal."

Besides battling the dislocations inevitable to being in a new school, the daughter of the house is being prepared for Confirmation. The Rector has our sincere sympathy. The class is currently being instructed in proper conduct on entering church. Excerpt from last week's session:

Rector: "You must kneel immediately on entering your pew, and pray. It doesn't matter what you pray, but prayer puts you in a proper frame of mind. Jimmie, what do you say in your prayer when you first kneel?"

Jimmie: "Er-ah—sir?"

Rector: "Come on, don't be shy. Tell us what you say, the exact words."

Jimmie, doubtfully: "The exact words, sir?"

Rector: "Yes, the exact words."

Jimmie, recklessly "Well, sir, I kneel, sir, and I count to 50!"

There was also some discussion about Ash Wednesday. Only one in the class knew the significance of the ashes. That reminded me of the times a fellow-worshipper whispered to me during Ash Wednesday service, that her neighbor had asked pityingly if we had always to eat Hash on Hash Wednesday. . . We did not have our hash, or even, I fear, the penitential ashes, but we did have pancakes on Shrove Tuesday, and even attended the service on the World Day of Prayer, so Lent was truly in.

The latter service after some years of terrible performance is beginning to have some significance. The little Baptist Church was packed to the doors with women of all sizes and shapes, but all willing to give up an hour to prayer. The sun poured in the windows; someone sang, "Eye hath not seen, Ear hath not heard"; the various women who led in prayer looked effective against a backdrop of crimson velvet curtains; they even sounded well. The hymns were sung with expression. It was good theatre, and is gradually becoming good worship. I think we were all touched by the words, "We thank Thee that Thy Church unsleeping, While earth rolls onward into light." One had a moment's vision of women all over the earth taking up the song — black women, coffee-colored women, copper-colored ones, and we underbaked white ones — all were singing that hymn. I do not know if the services were synchronized as to time, so that we all sang at the same hour, but we all sang the same words. It was a step in the right direction.

It was bitterly cold that day, so, when we arrived home, we were a little envious to find a card from a friend in Jamaica, which read "I could settle down here beautifully for the rest of the winter. The climate and sea are perfect. No radio, no TV, and very few papers. Love, Belinda." The picture showed garden chairs on a green terrace, urns of flowers along the path to the sea, and roses climbing over a fence. Oh, to be in Jamaica, now that snow is here. Apologies to Mr. Browning.

The evening of the World Day of Prayer, we went to see "Sabrina", produced by the local Thespians. We had seen the movie a few months ago, but it could well have been a totally different play. The only thing the two had in common was Sabrina. The dialogue of the play is infinitely superior to that of the movie, but, of course, it could not compete in the setting. Our group had solved the difficulty by presenting the whole thing on the terrace of the estate. There were pseudo brick walls, and the appropriate furnishings. The actors did a good job, marred for your reporter by a few mispronunciations.

The man of the house attended the Macdonald Royal, and came back with alders and pussy-willows from Ile Perrot. The pussy-willows look demure in the big basket in the hall. The alders are sharing the sun-room with the red dogwood. Look around you up there at Lakefield, and you will find all these, the first harbingers of Spring. The dog-wood will leaf out in water, but even without water its deep crimson twigs are beautiful. In another month, the crocuses will venture forth. Meanwhile, there is the fire on the hearth, good food, pleasant gatherings, and for the ski enthusiast, lots of that white stuff. So, count your blessings, and hang on for Spring. Magic word!

It DOES matter which Oil Burner you buy!

If you're in the market for an oil burner, there are dozens for you to choose from. They all look very much alike. They all burn oil. Some are pretty efficient, others less so. But, unless you're an engineer, there's no way for you to decide which burner is best for your needs, except by insisting on one made by a reputable, long-established manufacturer. Like Smart's, for example. We recommend Smart's series "A" oil burners because when we sell one we know that the customer is going to be satisfied with the deal, for a long time. If that seems to you to be a good reason for buying a Smart's oil burner, let us show you the complete range, and tell you all about them.

"People Helping People"

"THE RED CROSS is people helping people." . . This apt definition comes from President Eisenhower. We have heard it described too as "the work of the Good Samaritan being carried on in the manner of neighbors helping neighbors."

How we help others, and what we do, is often a personal thing. The feeling to help those in need is inherent in all of us. It is not something that is learned. Compassion and sympathy come from a greater source.

Most of us share that philosophy but circumstances often prevent us from doing what we would like to do to help our fellow man.

Through the Canadian Red Cross we are able to give that help in so many ways. It may be by devoting our time, our talent or our energy. For others that help might be financial support.

The Red Cross is constantly serving mankind through the work of thousands of volunteers. These are men, women and children of all colors, creeds and political beliefs; all united to serve under the familiar symbol of the Red Cross.

To carry on their work these volunteers need your financial support. If it is not forthcoming, less fortunate people in our community, in our nation and beyond our seas must suffer. Through the Red Cross we can lighten the load of a disaster victim, help brighten the tiresome hours of a veteran in hospital, or even save a life.

Since its inception almost 100 years ago the Red Cross has become the universal hope for mankind. The principles which Henri Dunant proposed have encircled the world. Today, in 74 nations, millions of people embrace those principles and proudly carry on the work of mercy for their fellow man.

The history of the Red Cross is one of achievement. In peace and in war it has served in so many ways. Some of the services have been spectacular. Others, just the day-to-day humanitarian services for those who have needed help.

The Canadian Red Cross is an essential part of our way of life. The dollars you give will do much for so many.

Some time this month a Red Cross volunteer will call on you. — Give generously!

Modern 'Muddling Through'

TWO MAJOR devolopments in the structure of the British Commonwealth of Nations have taken place this year.

Sixteen West Indian leaders have put their names to an agreement that will form a flexible federation of the British possessions in the Caribbean area.

They signed a report that their string of colonies should be "bound together in federation" along Australian lines. The next step is to agree on a formal constitution tying together Jamaica, Trinidad, Barbados, the Windward Islands, and the Leeward Islands. A draft likely will be ready before 1957.

Thus a parcel of small dependencies stands to gain self-government.

Half-way around the world an even more drastic Commonwealth development is taking place.

In Malta, the rocky Mediterranean island, a 3-1 majority of voters in a two-day referendum approved the idea of closer integration with Britain. If the integration plan is put into effect, three elected Maltese will be seated in the House of Commons at Westminster, with the same rights as the members representing England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland.

The Caribbean federation seems almost certain to proceed on schedule, with general elections expected early in 1958.

The Maltese union, on the other hand, faces many serious difficulties despite the one-sided vote. The campaign closed on a note of bitterness, the Labor government of Premier Dom Mintoff fighting for integration and the opposition Nationalists objecting to it. The Roman Catholic Church also was in opposition, its leaders expressing fear that integration would endanger freedom of religion.

But both in Malta and the Caribbean area, Britain has shown an eagerness to go along with the wishes for self-government of its colonial peoples.

It is an indication that in affairs of the vast Commonwealth and Empire, the traditional tendency to "muddle through" has given place to positive and constructive action.

Read the Fine Print

OFFICIALS of the Federal Income Tax offices are finding that many Quebecers who have filed their T1 returns this year have not claimed the full credit in respect of Quebec Tax to which they are entitled.

The "T1 Short" forms printed for use in this province stated that "persons resident in the Province of Quebec for the full year 1955 may deduct 10% of the 'Net Tax' as a tax adjustment. Part-time residents of Quebec and non-residents employed in Quebec may be entitled to a tax adjustment of a lesser amount — enquire at your District Taxation Office."

Similarly, the "T1 General" forms circulated this year for use in Quebec, state that "persons resident in the Province of Quebec for the full year 1955 may deduct 10% of the 'basic tax'."

Although there is a slight difference in the wording because of the layout of the two respective forms, they have the same effect. However, it is found that many taxpayers have not claimed the 10% reduction to which they are entitled by reason of having resided in Quebec during the entire year.

Where persons have failed to claim their full tax credit on returns already filed, federal tax officials will make the necessary corrections and the taxpayers concerned will either receive a larger refund than they expected or have a smaller balance to pay.

It is hoped, however, that persons who have not yet filed their returns will claim their full credit.

This misunderstanding may have arisen by reason of the fact that, on last year's return, taxpayers were entitled to deduct either 10% of the Federal Tax or the amount paid to the Province of Quebec, whichever was the lesser; whereas, this year, full-time residents during 1955 are entitled to deduct 10% of the Federal Tax, regardless of the amount of tax paid to Quebec. In other words, even if no tax was paid to Quebec, they may still deduct 10% from the Federal Tax.

Misconception of Values

A REPORT to Montreal Branch of the Red Cross underlines a condition which we had long suspected in our local observations — namely, that a number of families are putting instalment plan purchases of costly luxuries ahead of adequate fire insurance protection and sometimes even ahead of proper nutrition for their children.

This was stated in so many words by H. M. Suckling, managing secretary of the Branch, in his Disaster Relief work report to the annual meeting.

Mr. Suckling said all district disasters were minor and caused by fire, most of them in outlying districts without sufficient fire protection, with the result the losses were generally complete.

He said most of these victims carried no fire insurance and their savings were wiped out when their homes were destroyed.

"A few cents a week would provide the necessary protection, but it has been noted that the instalment payments on the purchase of such items as motor cars, television sets, radios, etc., bought quite frequently on the no-down-payment plan, have precluded the possibility of providing insurance and, in some cases, proper nutrition for the children," he said.

NEW CANADIANS appreciate Canada more than those who have been here for generations. We were talking to a man whose ancestors were Loyalists and listened to his discouraging forecast for the future. Then we talked to a Danish Canadian. He was enthusiastic about the future with its assurance of continuing freedom and prosperity. — Hartland (N.B.) Observer

WE REGRET the passing of the old molasses hogshead from the general store. Buying a gallon of molasses in the wintertime was a leisurely process — part of the enjoyable fabric of rural life. . . So time marches on and we now buy our molasses in packages — neat, antiseptic and uninteresting, says the St. Croix (N.B.) Courier.

"THE JITTERS"

It's quite easy to cash a cheque in England . . . when you know how!

This thought occurred to me yesterday and I read my way to the end of "Christmas" Parmelee's confessions. Ever since he set pen to paper and gave Canadians a graphic account of his exploits, the bankers of the nation have had a severe case of the jitters. If you don't think so, just try to cash a cheque for even a small amount in some place where you are not well known. When you get through the ordeal, you'll wonder how Parmelee ever managed to get away with so much so easily.

But if you think Canadian bankers are tough people to pry money out of, just try at getting a British banker to part with some filthy lucre. British reserve is at its height in the banking profession. And, very often, it takes a host of local inhabitants, Scotland Yard, and Burke's Peerage to establish your identity. Still, there is an easy way to do it and I pass it along to you for what it may be worth. Who knows when you may have occasion to need extra funds in England.

For a few years of my war-time stay in Blighty, I was the proud owner of a tuppence-ha'penny account with the Purley branch of Barclays Bank. When I left for combat in Italy, the account stood at two shillings and sixpence, so you can see that it was never very profitable. However, it was useful and best proved its worth on one occasion when the regiment was away from its Surrey base, on manoeuvres.

On the way home, our battery stopped for lunch in a small Midland town with the happy name of Chester-le-Street. While gumming a messy concotion of corned beef and water, I began dreaming of more palatable culinary delights and wished I had the wherewithal to buy something decent at the local restaurant when the regiment finally reached home. Then it was that I remembered my little account with Barclays.

Hurriedly rounding up a pal, I set off for the main street of town in search of a branch of Barclays. I didn't have my bank passbook with me and my only identification was my army paybook. I did have my cheque book, however, and hoped against hope that the paying teller would be a good sport and trust my story. But I quickly lost all hope when I discovered the town boasted a branch of almost every other bank but Barclays.

"Oh, come on," said pal Bob, when I gave voice to my misgivings. "They can only say no!"

So, picking on a branch of the Midland Bank, we sauntered in and I went to a side counter to make out my cheque. It was only for a total of four pounds, but British bankers can be sticky as all get out over even a measly little farthing. Breathing a sigh of despair, therefore, I presented cheque and army paybook to the teller.

"It's not on the Midland Bank, unfortunately, and I'm afraid I only have my paybook as identification," I stammered.

"Quite all right, sir," the teller replied. "Four pounds. There you are sir. Glad to have been of service. Good day, sir!"

He handed me my money and, dumbfounded, I staggered out into the street once more. Bob followed after.

"Why, that's amazing," I sputtered, "I've never cashed a cheque as easily before, not even in Canada. No questions asked, nothing. Just hand over the cash and that's that!"

Bob was grinning like a Cheshire cat.

"It couldn't be due to our little friends here, could it?"

I glanced at my own left shoulder. Quietly hanging by their blancoed slings, our Tommy guns glistened in the brilliant sun.

Forum Opinions on "The Family Farm"

"The family farm has made a substantial contribution to Canadian agriculture and to Canadian life as a whole, and it will not disappear as fast as some people think." This opinion from the Heatherdale Forum in Prince Edward Island was supported by 85% of the 800 Farm Forums across Canada, in discussing the future of the family farm.

Almost 125 Forums, however, believe that the family farm will disappear unless there is a change in its economic position or in agricultural policy. The Parr Line Forum in Ontario stated, "The price structure will have to be raised if the family-sized farm is to survive." According to the Ridgedale Forum in British Columbia, "The general buying public will have to recognize that the farmer is entitled to fair wages plus production costs if the family farm is to be an attractive proposition."

Increased farm efficiency was cited by 32% of the Forums as necessary for the survival of the family farm. The Gore Forum in Quebec included several points raised by the Forums in this statement: "The family farm of the future needs to be efficiently run, diversified, and mechanized, with access to good markets."

The need for long-term credit at low interest rates was stressed by one-quarter of the Forums. Said the Club 15 Forum in Saskatchewan, "We feel the government should try the same system as the V.L.A. did with the returned soldiers."

Seventeen per cent of the groups look to sound marketing policies and improved agricultural education as an important method of helping the family farm to survive. A smaller number stated that farmers would have to co-operate more effectively, particularly in the use of farm machinery.

QLC Disapproves Brewery Contests, Says Official

A spate of brewery mass consumer contests in Quebec may eventually result in an over-all ban of beer advertising in the province, according to Aurele Goyer, top advertising official with the Quebec Liquor Commission — as reported in an article in "Marketing".

During the past few months three breweries in the province have started direct consumer promotions — Brading's, Carling's and Labatt's — and to qualify for bonus prizes or grand awards, contestants have to include bottle caps or labels with their entries.

Though not prohibited, direct consumer contests are frowned on by the QLC.

Goyer says the QLC has voiced its disapproval of the contests to individual brewery companies but each brewery passes the buck. Breweries say, in effect, that the business is more competitive in the province now than it has ever been. If one brewery starts something, the others have to follow suit to keep up.

He adds: "We don't approve of these mass consumer contests sponsored by brewers, but the law doesn't forbid them, so there is nothing we can do. However, if brewers continue advertising as they are now my guess is that the eventual result will probably be a provincial order in council, perhaps banning beer advertising altogether."

"Governments must use tax reduction with an eye to stimulating both consumption and investment, rather than the one or the other." — Dr. Frank Burns, chief economic adviser to President Eisenhower.

ALL ABOARD
With G. E. Mortimore

The boy sweeps into the bedroom like a cold wind, lifting the covers from his drowsy parents and tweaking at a half-covered nose or ear with small, eager hands.

Whether his parents have slept eight hours or two, morning always comes at the same time for the boy: 7 a.m.

"Hello," says Mummy.

"G'way," says Daddy, flapping his arm as though to discourage a persistent gnat.

Some time passes before they realize that events have taken an unusual turn. The boy really has gone away.

This fact dawns on them slowly. Still half asleep, they became conscious of a strange calm.

"That little pest has gone," Daddy mumbles. "Yes," replies Mummy. "Isn't it quiet?"

"Quiet?" echoes Daddy. "So it is, by gosh. WHERE has he gone?"

Both of them sit up in bed, listening. Not a single blood-curdling scream, not even a small crash of falling crockery can be heard.

"Maybe he's up on the road," says Daddy, and all of a sudden he begins to think of the little pest running in front of a truck.

Both of them leap from bed without stopping to put on a dressing gown, and sprint into the boy's room. There is nothing there but a jumble of bedclothes and an army of toys which have been sharing the little boy's bed — his rabbit, teddy bear, small stuffed dog, cougar and a couple of toy cars.

They clatter down the stairs. There is no sign of the boy in the living room. The house is still dead quiet, except for the cat miaowing to go out.

They find the little pest in the kitchen, kneeling on a shelf without a stitch of clothing, gobbling marshmallows which he has managed to reach down.

"We thought we had lost you, for a while," Daddy says, as he accepts a sticky marshmallow pressed on him by the boy.

Then he and Mummy try to settle down for another few minutes sleep. They know it is a forlorn hope, because the little pest is now in full cry.

This time, however, they are glad he is there.

PRINTS ON GLASS

A British glass manufacturer has developed a method of printing on glass whereby any design, wording, photograph or sales message, in full color if desired, can be reproduced. The system impregnates the design into the surface so that the glass can be molded into any desired article without destroying the message or illustration.

HOW TO GET MONEY FROM THE BANK

The first way, obviously, is to rob it; and IF you are successful in keeping out of the law's clutches, you may be O.K. . . . That way has rarely been a success.

The second way is to borrow; but again they expect you to repay them with some interest. This is very useful, and can be very profitable.

The third way is to lend them some money and they will repay you any time you need it, and pay you a little interest as well.

The third way holds too true with your dairy herd. If you don't feed them, and depend on grass in summer and hay and straw in winter, they'll never have much in their bank for you to draw out!

WITH YOUR DRY COWS THIS IS TOO SERIOUS A CONDITION TO NEGLECT. Your cows are growing calf at the rate of a pound a day for the last 60 days before freshening, and that takes feed, and a properly balanced feed too. If you don't supply all the necessary nutrients, the cow simply takes them out of the little you have in her bank, and grows a calf; and you get what's left in the bank in milk.

To expect a cow to grow a calf on hay and straw is just like trying to build a car with four tires. It takes a lot more than tires to build a car, and hay and straw to grow a calf.

If you have good cows, feed them DRY & FRESHENING CHOW for 60 days before freshening and 25 days after, at the rate of 1 lb. D. & F. for every 100 lbs. of cow per day — more if she is thin, less if very fat.

If you have medium cows and have grain, feed Purina Dry & Freshening Supplement and your grain 50-50 at the above rate of feeding, or if you don't have grain, feed Bulky Las straight.

If you have ordinary creamery cows and grain, feed Bulky Las and grain 50-50, same as above, or if you don't have grain feed Bulky Las straight. BUT BE SURE TO FEED THEM BY SOME OF THESE PLANS. Any of these plans will put from 1,500 to 2,000 lbs. more milk in your bank; and I don't know of any other way that will give you a bigger return on an investment!

Elderly Resident Died in East Ward

Late Miss Ella J. Jones

The death of a quiet but personable East Ward resident, Miss Ella Jane Jones, occurred Sunday at the home of her niece, Mrs. Fraser C. Morrison. She was approaching her 92nd birthday, but prior to her last few weeks of illness following a fall, had been keenly alert and interested in affairs around her. She came to Lachute about seven years ago from her native city, Saint John, N.B., and had since resided with Mr. and Mrs. Morrison, and with Mrs. R. W. Robinson on Main Street East.

Only surviving relative is her niece, Mrs. Morrison. The latter accompanied the remains to Saint John, for burial in the family plot at Fernhill Cemetery on Tuesday afternoon.

The death of Irvine Perley-Robertson, a prominent Ottawa businessman associated with these parts, occurred in the capital last Sunday. Mr. Perley Robertson, who was in his 74th year, was a son-in-law of the late Sir George Perley, a noted statesman and M.P. for this constituency for many years.

In his earlier years the late Mr. Robertson was an outstanding athlete. He served with the Canadian forces in World War I and rose to the rank of captain, being appointed in 1917 to the War Records Staff in France. Following the war he served in Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment before resuming life in the business sphere as a partner in the insurance firm of Greene and Robertson.

In 1916 Mr. Perley-Robertson married the former Ethel Perley, who survives with five children.

No one will ever know."

STEWART — In loving memory of a dear wife and mother, who passed away March 1, 1955. — Sadly missed by her husband and family.

"The month of March again is here,
To us the saddest of the year.
The blow was hard, the shock severe,
To part with one we loved so dear.
We watched you suffer, heard you sigh,
All we could do was just stand by;
We lived in hope and prayed in vain
For God to make you well again.
But He decided we should part —
We watched you go with a broken heart.
No length of time could take away
Our thoughts of you from day to day."

Quebec Relents Perceptibly On Tax Sharing Plan

WEEK IN QUEBEC
By Guy Rondeau

Quebec (CP) — Premier Duplessis has announced Quebec will accept Federal payments under the new Federal - Provincial tax-sharing plan outlined by Prime Minister St. Laurent. Mr. Duplessis' decision means that for the first time in 10 years Quebec will fall in line with Canada's other provinces in taking part in a Federal-Provincial tax plan.

Mr. Duplessis said, however, he is not satisfied with the arrangement. He stressed he is accepting the Federal payments because adherence to the new proposal will involve no suspension of provincial taxation.

He said he considers the Federal payments "just a part of our own money."

Federal authorities estimate the new plan will bring Quebec $44,000,000 annually on the basis of the current national revenue level.

Mr. Duplessis' move came as no surprise to members of his own political party or to political observers. Hints of a changing attitude toward Federal authorities have come from Mr. Duplessis on various occasions since the Federal-Provincial conference in Ottawa last October. And finance Minister Gagnon in his budget speech February 3 strongly indicated that Quebec was ready to accept the new Federal proposals.

Mr. St. Laurent has informed Provincial premiers that Federal authorities are willing to meet them March 2 or 9 to discuss the plan and Mr. Duplessis has said he will attend the talks if they are held.

The fourth and last session of the 24th Quebec Legislature ended Thursday. A total of 194 bills, 58 of them givernment measures, were approved since the opening November 16 last.

Dissolution of the legislature and the calling of a provincial election are expected within a few months.

Earlier in the week the Legislative Council — provincial Upper House — adopted 10 government measures without discussion. Among the measures approved were the bills providing for the establishment of a provincial farm marketing board and tightening of regulations governing the sale of butter substitutes. Margarine and butter substitutes made with vegetable oils are banned but food products made with animal fats are permitted. The bill bans the use of coloring in butter substitutes.

Health Minister Paquette announced this week more than 500,000 Quebec children will receive anti-polio salk vaccine injections this year. Last year, more than 300,000 Quebec children received the vaccine. Only four of the children inoculated suffered from polio and none of the four died.

A suggestion that appeal regulations in murder cases be changed to allow an accused man automatic appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada was placed this week before the annual meeting of the Quebec section of the Canadian Bar Association. The suggestion was made by Francois Gravel, Quebec lawyer for Wilbert Coffin, who was hanged recently for the murder of an American bear hunter.

The Quebec city branch also asked that the criminal code be amended to eliminate the element of surprise in criminal cases. It recommended that the crown be obliged to reveal to the defence the names and addresses of witnesses to be called and a summary of statements by witnesses to the police.

LET'S FLY TO THE MOON, DADDY — says four-year-old Bobby to Squadron Leader W. H. Bliss, as they warm up a new flight simulator that the RCAF will use to train Sabre jet pilots. Without leaving the ground, pilots in this complex electronic trainer can closely approximate flying in a Sabre and actual flying time and costs can be decreased by its use. Most problems and conditions encountered in a Sabre can be created. Five Sabre flight simulators are to be in the service of the RCAF, each containing 40 miles of wire, 400 gear wheels, 600 radio tubes and 50 motors. Even flight noises can be transmitted to the cockpit. — National Defence Photos

RECALLS WORKING ON PIONEER LINK

Petitcodiac, N.B. (CP) — While attention in the Maritimes was focused on recent storms which tangled communications, one New Brunswicker stopped to recall the first trans-Atlantic wireless message.

John Pentecost, 73, is believed the only survivor of the crew which erected the poles for the historic Marconi wireless message. A native of Cape North, N.S., he said one pole was erected in 1900 in Labrador and another on Belle Isle. At that time, there was no understandable contact made across the ocean, but two years later a message reached Ireland after a third pole had been erected at St. John's, Nfld.

Albert Malacket takes great pleasure in introducing to you, Mr. ADELARD CADIEUX, well known designer, tailor and stylist, from Montreal.

Mr. Cadieux's life has been largely devoted to tailoring, the trade he learned on finishing his commercial course at the Mount St. Louis College in Montreal. His practical knowledge of tailoring and salesmanship came from many summers as far back as 1915.

Mr. Cadieux is the father of Yvon Cadieux, well known jeweller of this town. He was the proprietor of his own tailor shop for 35 years.

Acquisition of this experienced man by Albt. Malacket, gives assurance and guarantee of his new motto, which is "We do not sell a suit unless it fits to perfection."

Over the Years with THE LACHUTE WATCHMAN

75 YEARS AGO

March 4, 1881 —

Building operations are looking brisk for the coming spring, and houses are now being leased by Montrealers for occupation May 1.

Heavy freight trains are still bothered in having to back down from the station away across the bridges, in order to get a start sufficient to ascend the steep grade.

During the debate in the House of Commons on the Pacific Railroad resolutions, one of the most talkative members of the Opposition said to Mr. Abbott, the member from Argenteuil:

"How is this, you haven't opened your mouth throughout the whole debate?"

The member from Argenteuil replied, "Oh yes I have, a great many times, in yawning during your speeches."

The fluttering of a canary bird awoke Rev. Jeremiah Brosnan in the residence attached to the Parochial School early Thursday morning. The clergyman arose immediately and found the adjoining school building burning. The alarm was sounded and the fire extinguished with a loss of $5,000.

March 2, 1906 —

Monday evening the rink was the scene of a very spirited match in which the married men sought for supremacy over the singulars and won by the score of 4 to 1, reversing the score of their previous match. The line-ups were as follows:

	Married Men	—	Single Men
Goal:	O. Paquette	—	John Taylor
Point:	H. Neil	—	H. Charters
C Point:	J. MacKimmie	—	A. Kennedy
Rover:	H. Routh	—	F. Brennan
Centre:	A. Stackhouse	—	E. Simpson
Right Wing:	G. Fraser	—	S. Campbell

Cushing — The engineers were busy in this vicinity last week surveying for the road which MacKenzie and Mann propose to build to Montreal to connect with the G.N.R. at Grenville. It is expected that they will run on the right-of-way of the old C. & G.R. between Grenville and Carillon.

25 YEARS AGO

March 6, 1931 —

The beautiful weather that has greeted the opening days of March, which in past years has been so blustering, makes one feel good.

A building permit was granted to Mr. Lamarche for the extension of his butter factory, at the monthly council meeting. Other business discussed concerned By-law 121 authorizing a loan of $18,000 for unemployment and the first reading of By-law 122 for borrowing $25,000 for the laying of a sewer main on Bedard Boulevard and Main Street.

St. Hermas — As a result of the disturbing rumors that have been circulating since the death of Ferrier Laurin and his sister Malvina, who lost their lives in the fire that destroyed their homes February 16, a Provincial Police detective has been sent to the scene to investigate.

An enthusiastic and inspiring Patrol Leaders' Rally was held at the 1st Lachute Troop Boy Scouts' quarters in the Auditorium last Saturday, with leaders from St. Andrews East, Brownsburg and Lachute in attendance. This was the first such gathering held in Lachute.

Urges Brownsburgers Be Ready to Support Red Cross Campaign

(A Brownsburg Contributor)

There is a constant demand on the individual for charitable donations which obviously are in actual need of funds so as to carry on their missions, but we know of no other than the Red Cross Society which covers such a wide field of mercy in any creed, color or race. We have only to glance back to the immense disasters we have had in Canada (the Eastern part mostly) for proof of what the Red Cross has done on the spot and in the emergency which each required. Each and every one of us will remember if not from actual loss, reading about the floods in Toronto where so many lives were lost, not counting the material loss as well, the land slide and fire in Nicolet, the tornado in Sarnia and the recent flood in New Brunswick and not too far back the fires in Rimouski and Cabano. Just think of the organization having a unit sent out immediately the disaster is known with coffee and food to help the firemen or helper to go on with his task through the night, clothing and temporary shelter for the homeless. These things just don't occur automatically. It means that there are vast groups throughout the cities who work hard and are signalled to come and help no matter what time of day, and most of these people give their time and the use of their cars freely. Consequently, if a small group can give so much of themselves, then, the least we can give is a bit of our earnings to help, and I know in advance from the way the Brownsburg people have always responded to all the different appeals which have been made upon them that they will not fail in this year's Red Cross Campaign.

Mr. Russell Summers has been appointed as campaign chairman, with Mr. Don Cochrane as treasurer, and the campaign has been scheduled for March 15 to 31. There will be a canvasser at your door fairly soon, so please be in readiness to receive him and give generously.

It has been arranged to have a canvasser in the outlying districts such as Dalesville, St. Philippe, Mount Maple, St. Michel de Wentworth, Marelan and many others. Next week we may have a more accurate date as to when these communities will be canvassed.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT

Discover Blood Type Causes Family Illnesses

Montreal (CP) — Although RCAF Sgt. J. T. Callaghan of St. Hubert, Que., and his wife are the happiest of married couples, medically speaking they are incompatible as far as blood is concerned. Mrs. Callaghan's blood happens to be the RH negative type, and her husband's is RH positive.

The Callaghans didn't know this, however, until the third of their seven children was born and had to be rushed to the hospital for a complete blood change.

Each of the four children born since then has suffered from the blood ailment — and each required blood transfusions.

On a recent visit to his daughter's home, Dr. W. A. Brown, the children's grandfather, the obstetrician who delivered the children, said parents with the same blood incompatibility could have as many babies as they wished without fear, if the infants received immediate transfusions.

First Two Normal

The Callaghans' first two children, John, 13, and Richard, 10, were normal babies. But three hours after Mary Lou, 8, the Callaghans' first RH baby was born, Dr. Brown noticed jaundice and destruction of the red blood cells.

The baby was taken from Renfrew, Ont., where all the children were born, to Ottawa General Hospital, where she was given a transfusion. The same routine was carried out when Jo-Ann, 6, Walter, 3, Margaret, 2, and Elizabeth, 13 months, were born.

Probably no other Canadian family can boast so many RH-negative babies. All the children lead perfectly normal lives and "their life expectancy is the same as that of any other normal child," says Dr. Brown.

The Callaghans, who are spending their second winter in St. Hubert, are a much-travelled family because of Sgt. Callaghan's work in the RCAF. He has 12 years' service in the air force and is an air frame technician at St. Hubert RCAF Station, near Montreal.

Taxation to support CBC operations now averages about $8.00 per family per year.

Cancer Society Meeting, Public Interest Urged

Cure and prevention of cancer is one of the most important subjects before the public today. Advancement is being made slowly but steadily, and while doctors and research workers are doing their utmost to curb this dread disease to which we are all subject, this in itself is not sufficient.

Donations are a "must", if this good work is to be carried on; but participation is also required, and more interest is being asked from the general public.

Your attention is therefore drawn to a meeting being held at the Legion Hall on March 12, when the election of officers will take place, along with general business. . . You as a citizen are cordially invited to attend and show your interest.

Bible Briefs

By A.A.M.

The Bible is rich in stories, and the purpose of this series is to encourage readers to look up for themselves the Bible versions of these incidents. If there are children in the family it is suggested that the story, and the Bible verses on which it is based, be read aloud.

What was the name of the King of Babylon who beseiged Jerusalem successfully and then returned to his own land with some of the temple vessels and several of the sons of the nobility, including Daniel? In choosing these young men, the King had commanded that they be without blemish, handsome, skillful in all wisdom and competent to serve in the palace.

The captives were instructed in the letters and language of the Chaldeans. The plan was to educate them for three years and then present them to the King. They were to be fed rich food from the royal table and the King's wine. Daniel, knowing that this was first offered to the idols, resolved not to defile himself with such food. He confided in the chief steward his desire to eat only vegetables and drink water. The man replied, "I fear that my lord, the king, who appointed your food and drink, should see you in poorer condition than the other youths."

Then Daniel and his three friends pleaded with the chief steward to give them a ten day test, feeding them on the simple fare they preferred. This was agreed upon, and at the end of the time Daniel and the other three youths were better in appearance and fatter in flesh than the other young men. God singled these four Hebrews out and gave them special skill and learning, and in addition to Daniel he gave understanding of dreams and visions.

You will find the name of the King of Babylon who captured Daniel and this story in the First Chapter of the Book of Daniel.

Active Month Ahead For People's Church

The month of March will be filled with interesting events, musical and documentary, for the members and friends of People's Church, Lachute.

On Saturday, March 10, the Jack Dawson group will present a musical program of vocal and instrumental numbers. The 32-voice Chorale of the London Bible Institute and Theological Seminary will present a concert of sacred music on Monday, March 19, and finally, on Friday, March 23, the Billy Graham Evangelistic Foundation will present Dr. Graham's latest film release, "Battleground Europe."

Watch this paper for detailed announcements concerning each event.

In view of these activities the pastor of People's Church, the Rev. L. E. Tuck, has made arrangements, at the request of the membership, to remain in Lachute until March 25.

Describes Work With New Canadians and Prison Improvement

Grenville — The Rev. Leonard F. Hatfield, General Secretary of the Council for Social Service of the Anglican Church of Canada, spoke on the work of port chaplains in welcoming New Canadians, and on the work of the Council for Social Service in seeking improvement in prison conditions and a fair opportunity for members of the yellow and black races to get work and experience in Canada.

Over 30 persons from Lachute and Grenville joined with the congregations from Hawkesbury and Vankleek Hill for this well-attended service, last Sunday evening in Holy Trinity Church, Hawkesbury. The occasion was a special service for this section of the Ottawa Valley.

Clergy in attendance were the Rev. C. R. Lang, the Rev. G. T. Spriggs, the Rev. E. C. Royle, Hudson Heights, the Rev. P. R. Stote, the Rev. Canon J. M. Meakin, Hawkesbury, the Rev. James Winters, Vankleek Hill and the Rev. L. H. Hatfield, Toronto.

On the following Monday, Mr. Hatfield began a course of lectures on the work of the Council for Social Service to the students of the Montreal Diocesan Theological College.

Ministerial Association

The Argenteuil Protestant Ministerial Association will convene in the Maple Avenue Baptist Church, Brownsburg, on March 5 at 10 a.m. The Rev. G. W. Bruce will give the devotional address.

Baptist Young People Hosts to Visiting Groups From Suburban Montreal

Last Friday night approximately 75 young people gathered at the Dalesville Baptist Church for a sleigh drive. The Lachute and Dalesville Young People acted as hosts to about 25 of the young church people from Ville Emard and Lakeshore Baptist Churches in Montreal. Three sleigh-loads of young folk enjoyed the outing.

On returning to the church hall, a bean supper was served. Meanwhile a singsong was led by Mr. Hanthorne, pastor of Montreal Lakeshore Church, with Mrs. Bell, from Ville Emard, at the piano.

After the supper, the Rev. D. C. Merrett, pastor of Lachute and Dalesville, introduced Mr. Hanthorn and Mr. Bell, who gave their spiritual testimonies. Ken Tomalty, president of the Lachute and Dalesville Young People's Association, formally welcomed the visitors.

Appreciation is extended to all who helped to make the evening a success, including those who provided transportation and who extended hospitality to the visitors.

On Monday evening the Dalesville and Lachute Baptist Young People met in the Lachute Baptist Church, Miss Lois Silverson was in the chair. Highlight of the session was a debate: "Resolved, that television is beneficial in the home". Nelson Tomalty and Neville Brown spoke for the affirmative, while the negative was upheld by the Misses Ruth Silverson and Annie Laurie Burke.

B'burg Interjects Protest in League Play-Off Strategies

(Our District Correspondent)

Brownsburg played both of the week-end's hockey matches under protest, because Rigaud are icing their third goaler — an Intermediate "A" man at that — when their original sub is perfectly able to play. The first game didn't matter. Brownsburg won anyway, to take a commanding lead in games — 3 to 1. Rigaud came from behind in the last eight minutes of Sunday evening's game to win 8-7 and throw the protest problem onto the league's lap.

Thursday night's victory was due in no small way to the sterling performance of goaler Buddy Racine, who returned to his brilliant best and blanked Rigaud through two periods of the most sustained pressure of the whole season. Buddy wasn't unaided though, for although he stopped 18 direct shots in the first period and 15 in the second, and as many dangerous crossshots, every man in the team was taking his turn at stopping or deflecting one. At the end of the second period the score might well have been 4-0, but it was still 0-0.

It was a different story in the third period. After all their pressure it must have been heartbreaking for Rigaud to see Brownsburg come on with one period's work and trounce them 4-1. It was ironical that, although Rigaud had come so close so often throughout the game — even hitting the posts twice — the goal with which they eventually did ruin Racine's shutout should have been called back for offside.

The Sunday game was an unfortunate affair, marred by uncertain refereeing and rough play; the referees, at best of times maligned and friendless, apparently on this occasion really "lost the place" and various unpopular decisions were handed out. . .

It was, in fact, an unfortunate game in every respect, highlighted only by the brilliant play of Ouellette and Racine. André scored one goal and set up three for Jacques, who picked up another on his own to make four and assisted on André's. Toto Hebert started most of these plays back at his own blue-line, and for his work was awarded four assists. Gerry Tremblay unassisted, and from Bouvrette and Norbonne, scored the other two goals.

Thursday's goals were scored by Tremblay from Bouvrette and MacAdam, Paul Emile Hebert unaided, Ouellette from Racine, and Vary from Leveille.

Rangers' "Bad Man"

SPORTS CAMERA

Canadian Press Staff Writer
By Milt MacPhail,

The National Hockey League has a new "bad man", lethal Louie Fontinato of the New York Rangers.

Last week, Louie reached 169 minutes in penalties to set an NHL record, breaking the mark set in the 1935-36 season by Toronto Maple Leaf's rearguard Red Horner. Horner had 167 minutes in the sin bin.

Its' a sure bet that Fontinato's penalty time will go up before the season ends.

The 24-year-old Ranger defenceman appears to have a particular fondness for the penalty box, at least the one in Madison Square Garden.

The other night, in a game with Toronto, he got into a fight with Leaf defenceman Jimmy Thomson. Louie was so indiscreet as to have it happen right in front of the Toronto bench, where half of the Maple Leaf squad had a good shot at him.

Favorite Seat

But he escaped with a five-minute penalty for fighting. Thomson got one also. Thomson was the first to skate to the penalty box. By chance — or perhaps by intention — he sat on the side provided for the home team.

Fontinato, the former Guelph, Ont. junior, skated over and saw this. He asked Thomson to shift. Jimmy refused. Louie pushed him off the seat and Jimmy kissed the floor.

He came up swinging. But a couple of large Garden policemen got in the way.

Fontinato was satisfied. He had his regular seat in the penalty box. Thomson had to shift for himself.

After the game, Fontinato was asked if he had any feelings on his 'bad boy" championship.

Louie grinned and said: "No, but I wish it was worth $1,000 like so many of the other hockey titles."

SPRING TRAINING

Hockey playoffs are under way and this week the last of the major league baseball clubs started spring training.

At the training camps in Florida and Arizona, there is the usual fanfare about promising rookies, veterans talking of "one more good season," and the annual salary squabbles.

Such things will be forgotten on April 17 when the familiar cry of "play ball" signals the start of another baseball season.

PRESERVE VESSEL

Vancouver (CP) — The parks board has approved in principle a plan to preserve the former RCMP patrol ship St. Roch, first vessel to circumnavigate this continent, in a $500,000 marine museum near Kitsilano beach.

Pictou, N.S. (CP) — Firemen had to be summoned by telephone when a chimney fire broke out here. Heavy drift snow in the siren at the fire station kept it silent.

Supersonic Jump

A test pilot, 31-year-old George Smith, bailed out of a plane traveling faster than the speed of sound. It was an emergency jump, but it provided valuable medical information to the Air Force. Lately, military authorities lifted the security veil on just what happens when a pilot smacks into a wall of air at 777 miles per hour:

George Smith lost shoes, socks, helmet, oxygen mask, wrist watch, gloves and a ring. His clothes were in ribbons, but his parachute held. The impact loosened his knee joints, caused bleeding in all parts of his body, blinded him for a period. Mr. Smith was unconscious for five days; hospitalized for months.

The pilot weighed 215 pounds when he made the jump; he dropped to 150 pounds in the hospital; today is back up to 176 pounds. His eyes are still sensitive to glare, and his right knee is a little stiff. Damage to his liver means he can never touch alcohol. But, on August 23 last, Mr. Smith passed the Civil Aeronautics Administration physical examination for a commercial flying certificate.

The family was objecting to their son's girl, insisting that he ought to be a little more practical about the company he kept.

"I'm sorry, Dad," said the boy, "but that's the best girl I can get with the car we've got."

HOW TO DRIVE AT NIGHT
by CAROL LANE, WOMEN'S TRAVEL DIRECTOR, SHELL OIL COMPANY

SPECIAL GOGGLES, LENSES OR OTHER GIMMICKS ARENT NECESSARY FOR NIGHTTIME DRIVING — BUT A FEW SIMPLE PRECAUTIONS ARE.
HAVE YOUR HEAD AND TAIL LIGHTS CAREFULLY CHECKED. GLARING HEADLIGHTS ARE A HAZARD TO OTHER MOTORISTS; DIM LIGHTS, A DANGER TO YOU.
BE SURE YOUR CAR IS IN GOOD WORKING ORDER, BECAUSE BREAKDOWNS ARE MORE SERIOUS AFTER DARK. BETTER CARRY A PLUG-IN LIGHT OR A FLARE TO LIGHT YOUR WORK AND WARN OTHER MOTORISTS.
REMEMBER TO DRIVE MORE SLOWLY BECAUSE YOUR DISTANCE VISION ISN'T SO GOOD. DON'T BE SPARING WITH YOUR HEADLIGHT DIMMER. IF YOU'LL PRACTICE HIGHWAY ETIQUETTE AND DIM YOUR LIGHTS, CHANCES ARE THE APPROACHING MOTORIST WILL FOLLOW SUIT.
CLEARVIEW 5 MI.
LAST, BUT PROBABLY MOST IMPORTANT, BE SURE OF YOUR DIRECTIONS. IT'S EASY TO LOSE YOUR WAY AFTER DARK WHEN HIGHWAY SIGNS ARE HARDER TO SEE.

Cars ARE MY Line

by ARMAND DESROSIERS

It's no wonder car designs through the years have changed back and forth much like women's fashions. The chrome has come on and off, new exterior colors have been tried; the floorboards have been raised and lowered. It's really the women, a lot of people like to say, who buy cars anyway. Everybody has their own theory, but when a family buys a car, I think it's the husband who decides the year, make and model and the wife who picks the color of the car and its upholstery or seat covers.

That's why used car lots, and of course ours especially, offer such a great opportunity for shopping for a car. There's a large selection of models to choose from in all the price ranges. And unlike women's skirts, which may drop or rise six inches in a year (who knows?) last year's car, or even one several years old, can still be a pretty snappy buggy.

With a car these days you won't have the resale trouble you would have had if people had accepted one of the zaniest ideas in the automobile business I've ever heard of. Although the Russians nowadays say they invented everything, this car really was invented by a Russian.

His name was Count Schilowsky and shortly before the First World War he went chugging around Regent's Park, in London, England, in a two wheeled gyroscopic car. The gyroscope kept the two wheeled car on the level and the Count believed the car would save a lot of money because it would be lighter and need a smaller engine for any given speed.

The strangest part of the story is that after his demonstration the car was never heard of again. Twenty-five years later, just before the Second World War, workmen were excavating for a car factory in Birmingham and there, on the site of a modern factory, they found, perfectly preserved, the Count's fabulous and abandoned old car.

Because "Cars Are Our Line", the old legends of the business have a peculiar fascination for me. If you have a favorite old story about cars, drop in and see us anytime. We like talking shop and there's never, of course, any high pressure to buy.

Government TV and Non-Professional Culture

Ambrose Hills — "Of Many Things"

Not long ago I wrote a column complaining about the fact that governments pay high fees to sexy Toronto night-club singers in the name of Canadian culture, while really fine novelists get no help — and instead pay a terrific sum in income tax if they produce a best seller. I said the whole thing seemed cockeyed to me, and that I think it is a poor way to promote Canadian talent.

Well, apparently many weekly newspaper readers agree with me. One man wrote from Winnipeg to say he was fully in accord with me. His letter was interesting and I'd like to quote part of it.

"More good work along cultural lines is done in one week by various voluntary groups of business and professional people than is done in a month by government TV. Right here in Winnipeg, for instance, the Men's Musical Club does a marvelous job. On March 26, in the City Auditorium, they're sponsoring Mendelssohn's "Elijah" presented by the Philharmonic Choir and full orchestra, featuring Sir Ernest MacMillan. People come in from small towns all over Manitoba to see and hear such performances. It rather burns folk up that though this province has paid in TV taxes something close to three million dollars, a large portion of it is used for the presentation of suggestive dances, sexy night-club songs and neurotic dramas, which, if they must be presented, might as well be done by private interests at no cost to the taxpayer."

He went on at considerable length to point out that in many small towns of Canada, voluntary groups work hard all year to raise money for cultural projects, and they also resent being taxed to provide a TV screen for pop singers. The market for popular songs is great enough, without government money being spent on it.

I agree completely. I think the vast majority of Canadians agree. I hope that many of them will write to the Secretary, Royal Commission on Broadcasting, Ottawa, and tell the commission the same story. We want genuine culture encouraged, of course; but we don't want to pay taxes to hear some night-club type sing "Sixteen Tons". We should get that kind of entertainment for free!

Winning Stories on TV

TV rights for first, second and third-place winners in the recent Maclean's short-story contest have been purchased by CBC and adaptations of them will be presented on "On Camera" and "General Motors Theatre". The stories are "The Magic Life" by Ann Maud Henry (March 27); "The Spirit of the Bank of Lower Canada" by Michael Sheldon (March 24); and "The Burning Crusade of Andrew McNorran" by Doris French (March 31).

"Caesar and Cleopatra" G.B.S. Comedy on TV

Sir Cedric Hardwicke and Claire Bloom will be seen in the title roles when George Bernard Shaw's comedy "Caesar and Cleopatra" is presented on NBC-TV's "Producer's Showcase" next Monday, 8 - 9.30 p.m. on CBC-TV. Jack Hawkins will play Rufio, Judith Anderson will be Ftatateeta and Cyril Ritchard will be Britannus. Anthony Quayle will direct.

Sir Cedric is thoroughly familiar with the role, having played it with some success on Broadway in the 1949-50 season. At that time the critics found it as witty and modern as when first presented in 1899. Life magazine reported:

"George Bernard Shaw, who has spent most of his 93 years wittily trying to educate the human race, wrote this play in 1898 about the education of a queen. In Shaw's comedy the teacher is Julius Caesar and young Cleopatra is teacher's pet. . .

"The first thing Shaw's heroine learns from Caesar, who visited Egypt in the year 48 B.C., is not to cringe. He teaches her to be regal but humane, outspoken but considerate — as he is himself. In her boudoir he advises her not to squelsh her minions: 'Let your women talk; and you will learn something from them'. When Caesar's power is endangered by Egyptian plotters, Cleopatra has one of the plotters stabbed. Whereupon Caesar rebukes Cleopatra for her deed, saying that vengeance can only lead to more vengeance: 'And so, to the end of history, murder shall breed murder, always in the name of right and honor and peace, until the gods are tired of blood and create a race that can understand.'

"At the end Caesar, knowing he is too old to be Cleopatra's lover, returns to Rome, promising to send her a handsome young Roman named Mark Antony. The tragic sequel of their love Shaw left, not too confidently, in the hands of Shakespeare."

"Caesar and Cleopatra" has been adapted for TV by Joseph Shrank, who was also responsible for "Cyrrano de Bergerac", on TV last fall. Director Quayle has been a leading player and producer at Stratford-on-Avon in England since 1948; recently he was the star of the Canadian Stratford company's "Tamburlaine the Great."

ADDITION TO ROYAL YORK HOTEL: This architect's drawing shows how the Royal York Hotel in Toronto will look when the new $10,000,000, 400-room, air-conditioned addition east of the present structure is completed by late in 1958. In announcing the new wing, N. R. Crump, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, said excavation was expected to start next November. It will increase total room capacity to 1,600, and the addition of several banquet rooms, one with capacity for 3,000, will enable Toronto to maintain its position as Canada's leading convention city. The addition to the famed hotel is shown on the right of the drawing.

New Brunswick Is Star in Color Movie

New Brunswick Travel Bureau has put its province's attractions on film.

The 16mm 14-minute color movie, "Picture Province", shows the tourist attractions of the Maritime province, with its fishing spots, lobster festivals, covered bridges, towns and cities. It was written and produced by Crawley Films, Ottawa.

"Picture Province" is to be shown on U.S. and Canadian television, and made available for public showing.

Asked what he'd learned at Sunday school, the ten-year-old began, "Well, our teacher told us about when God sent Moses behind the enemy lines to rescue the Israelites from the Egyptians. When they came to the Red Sea, Moses called for the engineers to build a pontoon bridge. After they had all crossed, they looked back and saw the Egyptian tanks coming. Quick as a flash, Moses radioed headquarters on his walkie-talkie to send bombers to blow up the bridge and saved the Israelites."

"Bobby," exclaimed his startled mother, "is that really the way your teacher told that story?"

"Well, not exactly. But if I told it her way, you'd never believe it!"

Tips on Touring
By Carol Lane
Women's Travel Authority

Cupid is as old as mankind. But many of the wedding customs to celebrate his triumphs have changed considerably because of the car.

Take a typical wedding procession today — a caravan of cars following the bridal couple with blasting horns. This is the modern version of the old French custom called a "charivaree" during which the newlyweds were "serenaded" under the nuptial chambers with a hooting and howling boisterous enough to be heard in the next prefecture.

The business of tying old shoes to the back of the car has an amusing origin. In merrie olde England, the father of the bride presented his new son-in-law with one of her shoes to symbolize the transfer of his authority. The groom promptly conked his beloved over the head with the heel — to make her cognizant to this change immediately!

Many people today load the couple's car with cakes and sweets as they depart on their honeymoon. The ancient Greeks really started this when they poured flour and sweetmeats over the bride and groom to wish them an abundance of life's goodies.

And talking about honeymoons— they started way back when a man had to capture a bride. He took her to a hide-out while the parental wrath subsided.

The honeymoon today is still a withdrawal. But because of the car, it is often a mobile meandering with Cupid planning the itinerary.

Teatime Topics

Written Specially for The Lachute Watchman

By Oli Daum, Canadian Press Staff Writer

We don't think dinner guests measure the success of a hostess by the number of expensive dishes on the menu or by the stack of pots and pans in the kitchen sink — no indeed.

To prove her party a super, extra-special production all a hostess has to do is give her company something good to eat. It's as simple as that. And if the dinner seems to be no more effort than turning on the stove and rinsing a dish or two so much the better. Then everyone — including the hostess — can relax and enjoy the evening.

Sounds too good to believe? Then try a casserole dish next time you entertain. It's easy to prepare, to serve and to clean up afterward.

A combination of protein (the meat family), vegetables, a starch (potatoes, macaroni or rice) and a tasty sauce will bring requests for second helpings and more invitations to your table. And you, madame, will earn a reputation as a short-order cook and a tall-order hostess.

Pinwheel Casserole

Remember that anything that goes into a casserole comes out tasting better.

Here is the recipe for a delicious pinwheel casserole: 4 tablespoons flour; 4 tablespoons butter, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, 2 cups milk, a 14-ounce tin chicken haddie, ½ cup diced celery, ½ cup chopped green pepper.

Biscuit topping: 2 cups all-purpose flour, 3 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ cup fat, ¾ cup milk, 1 cup grated Cheddar cheese.

Make a white sauce of the first five ingredients. Add chicken haddie, celery and green pepper. Heat thoroughly.

Make the biscuit toppings as you would tea biscuits or use a biscuit mix. Roll out from ¼ to ½ inch thickness and sprinkle with cheese. Roll up jelly roll fashion and cut into pieces 1 inch thick.

Pour the chicken haddie mixture into a greased 1½ quart casserole and arrange biscuits on top. Bake in an oven at 425°F. for 20 minutes or until biscuits are golden brown. Serves six.

New Ballet

While Canada's National Ballet Company was taking bows in New York recently the curtain went up on a new ballet company in Montreal.

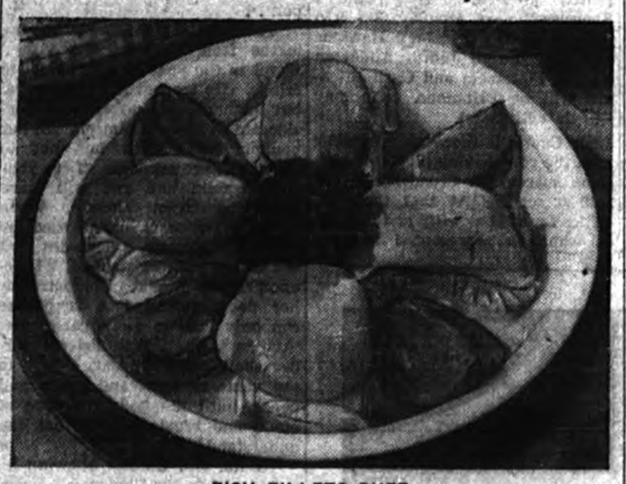

Brian MacDonald, 27-year-old spark-plug of the Montreal Theatre Ballet said his group will not compete for audiences with the National Ballet in Toronto or the Royal Winnipeg Ballet.

"We won't attempt the classical works that the National Ballet does so well," he said.

In New York, the National Ballet's third stop in an extended United States tour, they received six curtain calls for "Dark Elegies" and seven for "Offenbach in the Underworld."

Celia Franca, the company's artistic director, said Buffalo critics "gave us the best reviews we've had in our lives." People told her privately, she said, that they staged the best ballet ever seen in Buffalo.

Fish Fillets Go Fancy

FISH FILLETS PUFF

For an economical and speedy main dish, sophisticated in flavor and appearance, try baking fish fillets with a simple and savory topping. They come to the table handsome and haughty, for the "self-sauce" is actually a puffy egg white cap. The piquant seasonings are the perfect flavor foil for mild fish. Fresh or frozen fillets take only ten to fifteen minutes of cooking time, yet they come from the oven tender, moist and flaky. In fact, if you cook them longer than necessary or with too slow a temperature, you'll be doing an injustice to the fish. Overcooking causes fillets to toughen and dry out, as well as to lose flavor.

Fish Fillet Puffs

Package of frozen fish fillets (cod, haddock, ocean perch, sole, pickerel or other white-meated fish), salt and pepper, 1 egg white (at room temperature), ½ cup mayonnaise, 1 teaspoon minced onion, ½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, dash of tabasco.

Preheat oven to 450°F. (hot). Separate fillets or cut block of frozen fillets into 4 pieces. Arrange skin side down in greased baking dish. Season with salt and pepper. Beat egg white until stiff but not dry. Fold in mayonnaise, onion, Worcestershire and tabasco. Spread topping on fish fillets. Bake in pre-heated oven ten to fifteen minutes or until fish flakes easily with a fork and topping is golden brown. Makes four servings.

Canned Peaches Blend Well

by the Consumer Section, Canada Dept. of Agriculture Marketing Service

Canned peaches blend well in flavor and texture with many other fruits. Here are a few suggestions:

— This one is good for a start both here and at mealtime: sliced or diced canned peaches combined with canned cherries and cut up pears.

— Or how about a chilled fruit cocktail of canned peach slices and red cherries for color and flavor contrast.

— Raspberries and peaches complement one another, too, as everyone who tastes this company dessert will agree. Top-drained peach halves with meringue, brown in the oven or broiler and serve on thawed frozen raspberries. Beautiful to look at and delightful to eat!

And here is another Peach-Raspberry Duet! Whip up some cream cheese with thawed frozen raspberries and use as topping for canned peach halves.

Canned sour cherries and sliced peaches are good together in a spiced compote. Just drain the syrup from one can of each, add a stick of cinnamon and six whole cloves and cook for five minutes. Pour this spicy syrup over the mixed fruit and serve either warm or cold.

Serving Hot Canned Peaches With Meat

Have you tried —

Fried peach halves? Simply dip the drained fruit in beaten egg, then in crumbs, and panfry.

Peach halves with cheese? Fill the peach hollows with a mixture of mayonnaise and grated Cheddar cheese. Broil until golden on top.

Broiled ham steak with peach halves? Cover the peach halves with a little of the peach syrup mixed with brown sugar and cook them beside ham steaks in the broiler.

Apples A-plenty

The home economists of the Consumer Section report that the estimate of the Canadian apple crop production for 1955 is almost 20,000,000 bushels. Not only are there plenty of apples but they are good-tasting, crisp and juicy as well. They can be eaten raw out of hand or used in salads and desserts and they are also delicious when cooked and combined with many other foods. The flavors of apples and pork blend particularly well with each other so here are three suggestions for dressing up apples to serve with pork.

For a change with roast pork how about making some jellied applesauce and serving individual moulds of it on lettuce. Or if unjellied applesauce is preferred, give it a little zip by adding a small amount of vinegar and horseradish. Baked apples are good with pork, too, especially if they have been stuffed with chopped onion, cranberry sauce or sausage and baked in the same pan as the meat. These baked stuffed apples also make a suitable garnish for the platter.

Apples Are Graded

When apples are shipped for sale from one province to another their quality is checked by the inspectors of the Fruit and Vegetable Division of the Canada Department of Agriculture to be sure that the quality of the apple is in keeping with the grade noted on the container. The grades of apples are: Canada Extra Fancy, Fancy and Commercial or C and they are governed by the following factors: first, the condition of the apples; second, the maturity and color and third, the manner in which they are packed. Graded apples are also sized — they must be no smaller than 2½ inches in diameter.

The packaging of apples varies in the different regions where apples are grown but where grading is compulsory, the container must bear a label stating the grade, variety, name of packer and size of the apples or in the case of transparent bags the weight of the apples.

Wife Preservers

For an extra flavor for your next apple pie, sprinkle the sliced apples with a few drops of lemon juice, then dot with but-

Processed Apples

The home economists of the Consumer Section, Ottawa, advise that between one-fifth and one-quarter of Canada's apple crop has been canned, dried, frozen or made into juice. One of the main advantages of these processed apples is that they are ready to use and in many cases are an economical buy. Here is a brief outline of the apple products available today.

Apple Sauce is canned in large quantities in 15, 20 and 105 fluid ounce cans. It is ready to use. The same is true of Apples in Syrup which are apple slices canned in a sugar syrup and sold in the same size cans as Apple Sauce. Canned Applies, on the other hand, have no added sugar or water. They are apples that have been peeled, cored and cut into segments, then packed solidly in 20, 28 and 105 fluid ounce cans. They are used mostly in pies and puddings in place of fresh apples. Canned Apple Pie Filler is made according to a government standard and contains definite amounts of apples and sweetener. It is sold in 20, 28 and 105 fluid ounce cans.

In addition to these processed apples and apple juice there are some Dried Apples available. They are apples from which the greater portion of moisture has been removed so this has to be replaced during the cooking. Frozen apples are frozen slices of peeled, cored apples. They are sold in packages of 15 ounces net weight and 2 pounds and over.

All of these products except Apple Pie Filler are graded. The grades in order of quality of Apple Juice and Frozen Apples are Canada Fancy and Canada Choice and of Canned Apple Sauce, Apples in Syrup, Canned Apples and Dried Apples they are Canada Fancy, Canada Choice and Canada Standard.

Let's Eat

BY IDA BAILEY ALLEN

"This is indeed a treat!" exclaimed the chef, smacking his lips. "Regardez this golden-brown syrup, clear as crystal in the bottle. It's pure maple syrup!

"I understand this exquisite sweet is made from the sap of the sugar maple tree, obtained in the last winter or early spring, when it begins to flow, by tapping the trees. Then the excess water is evaporated, leaving the concentrated syrup. Does it have special nutritive values, madame?"

Organic Minerals

"It contains organic minerals needed by the body, chef," I replied, "such as calcium, phosphorus and a little iron.

"I was brought up to consider pure maple syrup a great treat. My mother served it not only on plain griddle cakes, but on apple griddle cakes, which she made by adding thin slices of pared apple to the pancake batter.

"Sometimes we had French toast with maple syrup for breakfast or a supper dessert.

"As for candied maple syrup as a sweet, it has a great affinity for apples, madame. For example, apple fritters with maple syrup as a sauce, or baked apples with maple syrup.

Maple-baked Apples: Wash and core six tart baking apples. Place in pan. Add ½c water and ½c pure maple syrup.

Bake as usual in a moderate oven, 350 deg. F. Baste twice with the mixture in the pan.

Remove to serving dishes. Fill the centres, if desired, with a mixture of chopped raisins and nutmeats.

Pour the syrup from the pan over it. Serve warm or cold.

"I also brush smoked ham steak with maple syrup before broiling to form a glaze," said the chef. "I also use it as a glaze for sliced canned pineapple."

"With a little butter added, chef," I told him, "maple syrup makes delectable candied sweet potatoes. For youngsters, a little added to a glass of milk is often the difference between drinking it eagerly or refusing it altogether. And a real gourmet way to eat milk is in baked maple custards."

Baked Maple Custards: Beat three eggs slightly with ¼ tsp salt. Stir in 2-3 c pure maple syrup and 2 1-3 c milk.

Ladle into six custard cups. Stand these in a baking pan. Pour in hot water to half the height of the custard cups.

Bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees F., about 35 min., or until the custards are firm in the centre and lightly browned. Chill before serving.

Information Received on Tweedsmuir Competition

The Handicraft Section of the current Tweedsmuir Competition consists of 10 articles for a hope chest. Members of the Quebec Women's Institutes have now received a detailed outline to be followed when working on this entry. This is to be added to the general directive received earlier for the entire competition, and has been drawn up by the National Committee (Mrs. J. Freeborn, Saskatoon, chairman). It emphasizes the need for an overall plan to ensure harmony of color and a selection of today's colors and textures. To quote, "The collection should give the feeling that each article reflects the taste of one person, since a Hope Chest would belong to one person and be used in one home." The choice of articles affords an opportunity to demonstrate the crafts and skills of the members in each individual Institute.

There are always three sections in the Tweedsmuir Competition. Handicrafts, the third one, changes each biennial term of the Federated Women's Institutes of Canada. The first section, Village History, is a permanent feature; and this term there has ben no change in the second section, a cultural project, with the exception the painting may be in any media.

The provincial elimination contest closes February 1, 1957; all entries must be in the Q.W.I. office by that date. The two top entries in each section will be shown in the National Competition, the closing date there April 1, 1957.

Fashions

Lounging or sleeping pajamas with more than a fair share of Oriental charm are done in such good color combinations as pale beige piped with black for the coolie coat and black for the coolie pants. They also come in beige with turquoise or orange for those who like a strong dose of color. Pretty, indeed, is the notion of the little bamboo clasps used for the jacket fastening and for the pants.

THEY'LL GET THE POINT

(London Free Press)

Those girls who carry hatpins have the right idea and those who want to learn judo to ward off molesters have the wrong idea of how to protect themselves. Hatpins, like guns, are great equalizers.

Any girl who gets into a wrestling match with a male attacker will be asking for more trouble than she bargains for. But it takes no skill and no strength to jab a hatpin, and a poke anywhere in the anatomy of the molester should bring quick and satisfactory results. Carry them and use them, girls, if you have to!

Women may think they can run the world better than men, but they still have to pay some one else to wash their hair.

A Weekly Feature of Helpful Hints on Child Training

Amateur Sculptors

(Copyright) — By NANCY CLEAVER —

Have you ever watched the sheer delight on a small child's face who is making a mud pie? It is such fun to mix in the water, stir the mud around, add a little more earth, and then mould it into pies of all sorts and sizes! Shaping and squeezing this material has a great fascination. Mother may be annoyed by the dirty hands and bits of mud smeared on play clothes, but both will wash, and in the meantime Junior glows with creative joy!

Plasticene is a favorite child's gift and a new box of it is splendid for the convalescing child who is well enough to sit up in bed and do handcraft. Mother's baking board serves as a good work tray. Unless wrapped in tinfoil or a damp rag, plasticene does get too dry for small fingers to shape. If there are two or three children eager to play with plasticene, it is less expensive to order several large bars of plasticene, of different shades, than buy a number of small boxes at a toy counter.

On baking day, when mother is making pies or tarts, a child loves to be given a small piece (after hands are washed) to make a little pie. Tiny dough animals and figures can be shaped and baked on a cookie tin too. If Junior has listened to the story of "The Gingerbread Man" what fun is it to use a Gingerbread Cookie Man Cutter or have mother outline one with a paring knife! Raisins make splendid eyes and buttons down his coat. Icing sugar tinted red can give him a mouth and bright cheeks when he is baked.

On holidays and long days when a child must find something to do indoors, home-made clay is excellent play material. The necessary ingredients can be found right in the kitchen. Mix four tablespoons of corn starch with eight of salt, add hot water sufficient to make a stiff dough, then cook this mixture a few minutes. Remove from the stove, let it cool and divide into equal portions. If you have a set of little bottles with different vegetable colors for cookies or icing, each portion can be tinted a different shade.

This home-made clay can be shaped into round marbles, beads pierced with a metal knitting needle, tiny little figures or doll dishes. The resulting articles should be thoroughly dried on a sheet of tinfoil, because they will crumble if handled before they are firm. But if the recipe is followed exactly and time is allowed for hardening in a warm place, the "works of art" will not fall into tiny pieces.

The older child who loves working with his fingers moulding things should be given a package of clay or a tin of clay powder from an art supply store. Often a school teacher who is enthusiastic about handcraft is glad to give a little guidance and encouragement. If the youngster is quite skillful, make inquiries about the possibility of his making not only brooches and small ornaments, but bowls and vases which could be "fired" in a potter's oven.

At a recent hobby demonstration at a home and school, out in the hall several expert handcraft men and women demonstrated how to make various things — drift wood ornaments, hammered pewter and vases from clay.

By far the largest crowd of youngsters stood gazing at a potter moulding pitchers on a small wheel with deft fingers. One poorly-dressed little girl with shining eyes said to her chum, as she gave her place to another observer, "Is that ever fun!"

If there is a pottery centre in your area, which welcomes strangers, visit it with your child! It will be a rewarding experience for both of you! If you should return home with a package of clay, you will be prepared for your youngster next time he is shut indoors and asks "Let me make something new! I want to be an amateur sculptor!"

Connie White, head of a school for children of the Sons of Freedom Doukhobor sect at Denver, B.C., says the pupils are unruly. They broke 400 windows during the term. Denver is 70 miles northwest of Nelson.

BLOOD TRANSFUSION

Definition: Transferring blood from the veins or arteries of one person to another. As in intravenous feeding, it is a feeding upon blood—an UNSCRIPTURAL PRACTICE.

2369 B.C., Prohibition Upon All Nations

Gen. 9:3-5. "Every moving thing that liveth shall be food for you; as the green herb have I given you all. But flesh with the life thereof, which is the blood thereof, shall ye not eat. And surely your blood, the blood of your lives, will I require; at the hand of every beast will I require it; and at the hand of man even at the hand of every man's brother, will I require the life of man."

1513 B.C., Prohibition Enjoined Upon Jews

Lev. 17:14. "For as to the life of all flesh, the blood thereof is all one with the life thereof: therefore I said unto the children of Israel, Ye shall eat the blood of no manner of flesh; for the life of all flesh is the blood thereof: whosoever eateth it shall be cut off."

A.D. 49, Prohibition Enjoined Upon Christians

Acts 15: 28, 29. "For the holy spirit and we ourselves have favored no further burden to you, except these necessary things, to keep yourselves free from things sacrificed to idols and from blood and from things killed without draining their blood and from fornication. If you carefully keep yourselves from these things, you will prosper."

Also: Acts 21:25.

Principle of Life

Lev. 17:11, 12. "The life of the flesh is in the blood; . . . No soul of you shall eat blood, neither shall any stranger that sojourneth among you eat blood."

Blood Not To Be Stored

Deut. 12:16. "Ye shall not eat the blood; thou shalt pour it out upon the earth as water."

Lev. 17:13. "Whatsoever man there be of the children of Israel, or of the strangers that sojourn among them, who taketh in hunting any beast or bird that may be eaten; he shall pour out the blood thereof, and cover it with dust."

Also: Deut. 12:24.

Blood Sacred, Only for Altar Use

Lev. 17:11. "The life of the flesh is in the blood; and I have given it to you upon the altar to make atonement for your souls: for it is the blood that maketh atonement by reason of the life."

Deut. 12:27. "Thou shalt offer thy burnt offerings, the flesh and the blood, upon the altar of Jehovah thy God; and the blood of thy sacrifices shall be poured out upon the altar of Jehovah thy God; and thou shalt eat the flesh."

Pictured Christ's Atoning Blood

Heb. 9:22, 14. "Yes, nearly all things are cleansed with blood according to the Law, and unless blood is poured out no forgiveness takes place. How much more will the blood of the Christ, who through an everlasting spirit offered himself without blemish to God, cleanse our consciences from dead works that we may render sacred service to the living God?"

Eph. 1:7. "By means of him we have the release by ransom through the blood of that one, yes the forgiveness of our trespasses, according to the riches of his undeserved kindness."

John 6: 53, 54. "Accordingly Jesus said to them: 'Most truly I say to you, Unless you eat the flesh of the Son of man and drink his blood, you have no life in you. He that feeds on my flesh and drinks my blood has everlasting life, and I shall resurrect him at the last day'."

Esteeming Christ's Blood Lightly

Heb. 10:29. "Of how much more severe a punishment, do you think, will the man be counted worthy who has trampled upon the Son of God and who has esteemed as of ordinary value the blood of the covenant by which he was sanctified, and who has outraged the spirit of undeserved kindness with contempt?"

1 John 1:7. "However, if we are walking in the light as he himself is in the light, we do have partnership with one another and the blood of Jesus his Son cleanses us from all sin."

Attempt at Lifesaving With Blood Wrong

1 Chron. 11:17-19. "David would not drink (the water) thereof, but poured it out unto Jehovah, and said, My God forbid it me, that I should do this: shall I drink the blood of these men that have put their lives in jeopardy? for with the jeopardy of their lives they brought it. Therefore he would not drink it."

Involves Any Form of Blood

Lev. 7:26, 27. "Ye shall eat no manner of blood, whether it be of birds or of beast. . . Whosoever it be that eateth any blood, that soul shall be cut off from his people."

Lev. 17:10. "Whatsoever man there be of the house of Israel, or of the strangers that sojourn among them, that eateth any manner of blood, I will set my face against that soul that eateth blood, and will cut him off from among his people."

Ps. 16:4. "Their drink-offerings of blood will I not offer."

"GUINEA PIGS" LEARN HOW TO SURVIVE AND FIGHT IN ARCTIC

—Central Press Canadian

For over a year these men have been fighting a constant battle against snow, wind and cold as they cheerfully undergo severe exhaustion tests to find answers to problems that exist in training men to survive and fight in the sub-Arctic. As a result of a series of year-round experiments the men, including three civilians and 12 volunteers from the 1st Regiment Royal Canadian Horse Artillery, Winnipeg, have earned themselves the nickname of "Guinea Pigs of the North." Here they are on a cold weather mobility test in which they spent several days and nights on a trek across the snowy wasteland near Fort Churchill.

Civil Defence — Its Organization

Third of a series of 24 articles

The federal government's part in civil defence is mainly to co-ordinate provincial plans with the overall plan of the country in event of an enemy attack. It must provide direction, assistance, training. But, as Health Minister Paul Martin has said, "civil defence cannot be imposed from the top."

"No government — not even the federal government — can do this job alone," he said in a recent speech. Under Canada's constitutional setup, the job of organizing the civilian population so that it can protect itself in event of a disaster such as nuclear war falls to each level of government — federal, provincial, municipal.

The federal government recognized the need of civil defence in Canada as far back as 1948 when it appointed F. F. Worthington as federal civil defence co-ordinator. At that time civil defence came under jurisdiction of the Department of National Defence. It was switched to the Department of Health and Welfare, with Mr. Martin as the responsible cabinet minister in 1951. A federal - provincial conference of civil defence officials agreed on which government would share what responsibilities.

It was agreed that the Federal government would operate a central training school for civil defence specialists. The Canadian Civil Defence College was established at Arnprior, Ont., 40 miles northwest of Ottawa. More than 7,000 persons have been trained by the federal civil defence organization so far and Canada now has some 72,000 fulltime C.D. workers, including firemen, policemen, etc., where normal jobs fulfill a C.D. function and 107,000 volunteers.

Courses are held at the college continuously except for the month of August when it closes for vacation. Its staff of about 20, has given courses to police chiefs, fire chiefs, doctors, industrial personnel and many other groups from across Canada.

Through the Health Department's information services the federal C.D. organization also has carried on an intensive educational campaign to acquaint Canadians with the importance and function of civil defence.

The federal government is responsible for co-operation with United States C.D. planners and establishment of a warning system to tip the country of any possible enemy attack. It is stockpiling medical supplies at strategic points across Canada. It has provided essential C.D. equipment, training manuals and publications.

It agreed to carry out research on civil defence through government research establishments and to help the provinces by paying one third the cost of standardize fire hose couplings. Ontario, Alberta and British Columbia are the only provinces so far to take advantage of this arrangement which makes it possible for fire equipment from one town to be used in any other town in the province.

These are the chief functions of the federal C.D. organization in peacetime. Should war come, it would also:

1. Warn of an oncoming attach through electronic devices being built around the rim of the continent, by ground observer corps and other information sources.

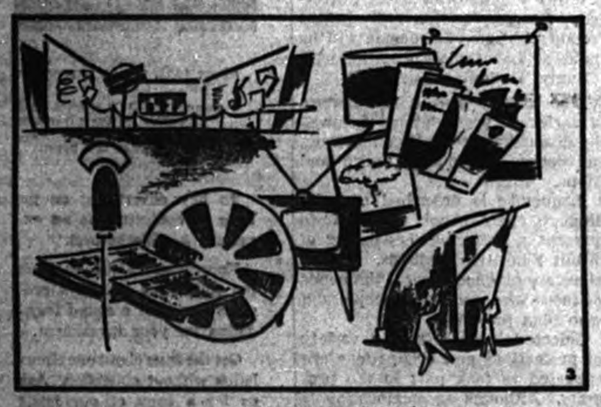

2. Co-ordinate interprovincial movement of aid to provinces and municipalities under attack and distribute the federal stockpile of attack supplies.

3. Co-ordinate the nation-wide jobs of other federal agencies and keep the prime minister and the people informed of the attack's effects.

4. Participate in decisions concerning emergency restoration of communications, transportation and other essential functions.

But in the words of Mr. Martin again:

"Senior governments can offer guidance, planning and financial assistance, but the successful prosecution of a civil defence program depends, in the last analysis, on the participation of individual citizens and on community leadership."

Cobalt Plans Mining Museum

A mining museum is being planned for Cobalt, Ont., the town that calls itself the birthplace of modern mining. A model of the proposed building, designed by a Haileybury architect, is on display in the town and is admired here by high school students Joyce Stewart, Pat Buffman, Sheila Keenan and Marjory Doan. —Central Press Canadian Photos

Carved figures of miners and their equipment will be part of the museum's displays. Already citizens have collected old mining equipment, paintings and relics that were in use when Cobalt had its first boom. Students Wilf Kanga, Maureen McAndrew and June Humphrey find the whole subject interesting, and next year may find them acting as museum guides to tourists. The building will be erected close to an abandoned mine whose shaft and drifts will be open to visitors.

PREJUDICE DIES HARD

Two English schoolboys took a dislike to each other, and the hatred grew more intense as the years passed. One entered the Royal Navy and finally became an admiral; the other went into the church and eventually was made a bishop. Years later they met on a London railroad-station platform. They had changed, of course, and the bishop had grown very plump, but they recognized each other. The bishop swept up to the admiral, who was standing there resplendent in his uniform with medals and gold braid glittering all over him, and said: "Stationmaster, from which platform does the 10:05 train leave for Oxford?"

The admiral promptly retaliated: "Platform 5, madam, but in your condition, should you be travelling?"

Have You A Question on UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE OR EMPLOYMENT?

In this column we publish questions about unemployment insurance and employment, together with answers received from the Unemployment Insurance Commission.

If you are uncertain about any point do not hesitate to send your question to your district Unemployment Insurance office. We will obtain an answer and publish it in this column.

Q. I am a single man without a dependant. Why do I have to pay as much as a married man when I cannot draw as much benefit?

A. Because this is a social insurance and the cost is spread over all. Moreover, usually persons who are single when they first start to pay contributions get married eventually and they reap the advantage at that time.

Q. There is a ceiling of $4,800 for contribution purposes for salaried employees, but if a person is paid by the hour, he can go far beyond this and still be insurable. Why?

A. For the reason that persons on an hourly rate of wages are still subject to considerable unemployment.

Friendly Moose May Have Died Of Heart-Break

Vancouver (CP) — Audrey Smedley's pet moose "Pinto" may have died of a broken heart.

Found abandoned when only five days old, Pinto was presented to Mrs. Smedley by her husband and grew to be as gentle, friendly and companionable as any pony.

"We'll keep her on the outside of the fence," she told her husband. But Pinto ignored fences and demanded her canned milk warmed up for at least three months.

"She got a bottle of warm milk during the night simply by setting a course around and around our small house with a monotonous na-a-a, na-a-a that would rouse one of us to light the smokey old camp stove in order to get peace again."

Joyous Welcome

One incident, said Mrs. Smedley, "showed clearly Pinto's affection for me. For reasons beyond control, I left her for 10 days. Our house had been vacant and when I returned there was no Pinto."

The snow was a foot and a half deep on the level and Pinto was finally sighted in the meadow "She had spotted us and hurtled towards us. She dashed on past, pivoted and ran back again. This was repeated several times. If she could have enveloped me with her bony front hooves her emotion could not have been clearer. She was overjoyed to see me."

Children would swarm all over Pinto, and, although she continued gentle and playful, there was always the fear that something might happen.

"Surrendering to the inevitable, we made arrangements to send Pinto to the zoo. I was satisfied we were doing the proper thing.

"Two nights later we were shocked and saddened when the nightly news bulletin informed us that a moose had died for reasons unknown en route to Calgary zoo.

"Those who had known Pinto believed she died of a broken heart. I'll never know."

"Grandma, What Big Feet You've Got!"

Sees Reason to Fear the "Big Bad Wolf" — Experience And Observations in Upper Lachute Farm Country

— By Norman Thorburn —

Who's afraid of the big bad wolf, big bad wolf! . . I must say, the farmers east of Lachute are, and for good reasons.

Probably the peaceful burghers of Lachute are also uneasy now that wolves have been reliably reported less than a mile from Lachute, on land belonging to Mr. Alex Pollock.

The other day I noticed a queer trail on the farm of Wm. Davis. I had seen wolf tracks at Louisa, 30 years ago, when they returned to that district after an absence of 50 years or so. The grandparents of some of the residents of Upper Lachute remembered when wolves were in this district over a 100 years ago.

I told my brother, who has hunted foxes a great deal, and recently wolves, that I thought these tracks resembled a wolf's footprint. He came with me and looked at them. We followed them to the Vide Sac montée on Alex Pollock's land, where a wolf had been sighted the night before by a neighbor.

A wolf's track is about twice as big as that of a fox. The distance between the footprint is about twice as great. If you look closely you can see the claw marks. We saw the mark of the tail of the wolf as it jumped up on the stump of a tree.

The wolf, one of man's most relentless enemies, destroy man's sheep and cattle. Heifers weighing a thousand pounds have been destroyed. From the jackal, a species of wolf, man tamed the dog in the caveman era.

From White Horse in the Yukon Territory, a few years ago my uncle told me in a letter that the great Northern wolves, that sometimes weigh more than 200 pounds, often came into the Main Street and ate the garbage of the town at night. I am sure Lachute's garbage department would resent any aid from these four-legged scavengers! (Of course, in the event of a strike, their assistance might be handy.)

These wolves are hungry, very hungry. Their calls are not the notes of a lovesick swain directed at some pretty female, but the real thing, the blood-curdling howl of the wolf pack in full chase.

We used to think of Little Red Riding Hood as living somewhere far away, but someday a little Red Riding Hood may meet a wolf on the way to her Grandma's home in Lachute! Drastic action against these marauders is imperative.

The first time we were aware that wolves might be around here, was last year, when our biggest heifer, a two-year-old, weighing over 800 pounds, appeared with a bleeding ear; a chunk as big as a silver dollar had been taken out of it, the exact shape of a dog's or wolf's mouth. But in 70 years of cattle raising here, a dog had never been known to do this, so we are now certain it was a wolf's work. The big heifer had turned on her tormentors, to defend her smaller companions. We were seriously thinking of dehorning our cattle, but now we don't care if their horns grow as long as a Texas longhorn. We are about the only farmers left keeping sheep in Upper Lachute. There probably will soon be no more sheep in this community.

The territory east of Lachute is a 'no-dogs-land', except on business. There are several traps set, including a bear trap on the Clark Bros. ranch. The other day a wolf broke a trap to pieces there, leaving a bloody trail, so they bought a bear trap.

During the depression it is said that some people did not try to "keep the wolf away from their door"; they invited him in, killed him and then ate him!

A few days ago, it was my privilege to play a minor role in a wolf hunt. It was my duty to see that the wolves did not escape southwards from the bush where they were being hunted.

So I took up my old carbine and took a position east of our house to watch.

My brother had the foxhound — Toby, veteran of a thousand hunts, Blondie, and the four-months-old pup Streaky, out with his pa and ma on a wolf-hunt, and bravely keeping up to the older veterans, his tiny nose sniffing the tracks.

His ancestors probably hunted the fox in old England with all the pageantry of an English fox-hunt, riders with scarlet tunics and horns, on saddle horses. But poor little Streaky was hunting the big bad wolf in the Canadian bush, although a wolf could easily have torn him to pieces. Even Laddie, the mongrel dog, who had learned to hunt from his fox hound friends, was pressed into service. Laddie once had a broken leg after an encounter with a car; only the skilful attention of our local veterinarian saved his life.

At last my brother passed from view with the dogs. I heard a shot fired a few minutes later. Mr. Hodge had seen a wolf and fired. The wolf was a little too far away for his shotgun to be effective.

Shortly after, Streaky and his master followed a wolf's bloody trail to the pine plantation behind Bourbonniere's Camps, by way of the C.P.R., where the wise wolf knew there was little snow to hinder him. When darkness began to descend upon them pup and master wended their way homewards. Fox hounds shiver with fear when they encounter a wolf.

I remember well the Russian wolf hounds that fashionable ladies used to take out on a leash many years ago. Oh, for a couple of these giant white hounds for a few days, to follow the trail!

There is one other way to tackle the problem — poison, strychnine or cyanide. The German professor who discovered cyanic acid gas was demonstrating its manufacture to his students. A puff of wind blew a little gas in his face; the professor dropped dead before his startled students, such is the toxicity of this potent poison. This is a dangerous way of getting rid of the wolves, but something must be done to curb the forays and depredations of the lupine tribe.

The she-wolf has litters of 7 to 14 whelps. So we can see the possibility of astronomical increase in the wolf population within a very short time.

Upper Lachute has always been ideal territory for foxes, but now it seems the wolves are driving the foxes away.

We are thankful that Mr. Scarborough has already bagged the first wolf shot here. A trapper like Joe Laflamme from the Northern Ontario bush would be a boon here. Joe Laflamme lost six of his sled dogs in a rabies epidemic several years ago. He promptly trapped six wolves, muzzled them and hitched them behind his two dogs. He had to take off the muzzles to induce the wolves to pull. He became a legendary figure in the North with his bizarre team. Finally a wolf's teeth are as strong as steel. They can crush a deer's leg with one bite.

So, probably you will agree with me, around Lachute the farmers have reason to fear the big bad wolf. It is thought that hares provide the only legitimate game hereabouts for these predators as there are not many deer here below the foothills.

Two Public-Spirited Citizens Honored by Rotary Club

Innovation Gives Fitting Recognition To Energetic Community Workers

Last week's regular meeting of the Brownsburg-Lachute Rotary Club saw this organization usher in a new type of function, which it proposes to repeat from time to time. The idea, as developed by the program committee under the chairmanship of Keith Hickson, is to pay tribute to outstanding citizens of both communities who merit recognition for long records of public service and achievement. A form of merit certificate would be presented to each, together with a small plaque embodying the now famous Rotary "Four-Way Test", which reads as follows:

1. Is it the truth?
2. Is it fair to all concerned?
3. Will it build goodwill and better friendships?
4. Will it be beneficial to all concerned?

The two citizens invited to last week's meeting were George Y. Deacon and Ross Muir.

Rotarian Fred Royal introduced Mr. Deacon. In his biographical sketch Mr. Royal mentioned some of the highlights of his guest's career — his 15 years' service as a member of the Lachute Protestant Board of School Commissioners, his 10 years' service as a Member of the Committee of the Provincial Council of Education, in which field he devoted much time and energy to problems of rural education. He told how Mr. Deacon had organized the Lachute Fire Department 37 years ago, and as Fire Chief has developed it into one of the most efficient volunteer fire brigades in the country. He is also a very active member of the Lachute United Church, a member of the Lions Club, the Oddfellows, the Masons, and an associate member of the Lachute Golf Club. He has been a Commisisoner of the Commissioner's Court for many years, and an active member of the Group Committee of the local Boy Scouts Association. In terminating his remarks, Mr. Royal stated that Mr. Deacon has had a very active life, and that much of it had been devoted to helping his fellow men in a variety of ways.

Rotarian Sonny Ogilvie introduced Ross Muir. He related how the guest of honor had been a member of the Lachute Protestant Board of School Commissoiners for six years and three times elected to the Municipal Council. He is at present chairman of the Board of the Margaret Rodger Memorial Presbyterian Church. He has been an active member of the Curling Club for many years, where he has served as a member of the board and in other official capacities.

The Club proposes to repeat such programs from time to time in the future.

Tax Hoist 10 cents In Proposed Brownsb'g Budget

(Our District Correspondent)

Brownsburg — The first session of Council for March was held Monday evening and much business was discussed, although little was executed. The regular opening took just a few minutes, with the usual police report delivered by Deputy Constable Roland Lepine.

Fire Chief Arthur Robbins had four fires to report. The first one was a chimney fire at the home of R. Belanger on the evening of February 25 (the windy Saturday) Chief Robbins reported that the chimney was in good shape and that no damage resulted. Minutes after returning there was a second call, this time for a stove-pipe fire, which was due to a bad set-up. Again there was no damage. The following Saturday there were two fires, one in the early morning, the other in the evening. Both were chimney fires, and both were unsatisfactory chimney structures.

Chief Robbins made his annual report for 1955. There are 12 members in the Brownsburg Volunteer Fire Brigade besides the Chief. There were 27 fires in town during 1955 — two less than 1954 — and there were two outside fires. The fire loss in town totalled $3,485 — $360 more than the previous year. The loss at the outside fires was $40,000 — the big one of which was the fire at the Lamarche farm at St. Philippe. While on the subject, Mr. Robbins pointed out that, as yet, the town had still to receive $80 for the two hours the brigade worked on that fire.

First of the major civic items was the opening of tenders for the Police Chief vacancy. Seven applications were received. Three 'Burgers have applied, one application is from a Montreal policeman, and another from an ex-cop in Seven Islands. The other two are from Lachute, namely, ex-Police Chief Ducharme and Assistant-Chief Lepine. The bids indicate that the salary will be in the region of $3,000 - $3,600.

The next item was the Secretary-Treasurer's job to be vacated by Emile Hebert at the end of the month. There were only two applications for this job — Mr. Vincent Charbonneau, of Brownsburg

Tax Accord "Does Not Constitute Renunciation of Our Rights" - Duplessis

THIS WEEK IN QUEBEC
By Brian Selwood

Quebec (CP) — The Quebec Government's decision to accept Federal payments under the new Federal-Provincial tax-sharing plan, "does not constitute a renunciation of our rights.', Premier Duplessis said at his weekly press conference.

Mr. Duplessis re-iterated that his government's stand on Federal-Provincial fiscal relations has not changed in the slighest.

"The money Ottawa wants to pay us belongs, in fact, to the province, and is only a restitution from the Federal authorities," he declared.

The premier also said he had sent Prime Minister St. Laurent a telegram saying he will attend the Federal-Provincial conference on March 9.

The telegram read: "The Quebec government will be pleased to cooperate in the essential matter of the rights, prerogatives and liberties of both the provinces and of the Dominion in general, and of the province of Quebec in particular."

During his press conference Mr. Duplessis mentioned that the climate of Federal-Provincial relations has changed for the better. But, he added, an improvement in the understanding of Provincial rights would be advisable.

Accompanying Mr. Duplessis to the conference will be Quebec Finance Minister Onesime Gagnon, Hydraulic Resources Minister John Bourque, Solicitor-General and Transport Minister Antoine Rivard, and Georges Shink, comptroller of Provincial revenue.

Dealing with hydraulic developments in the province, Mr. Duplessis announced that the Shawinigan Water and Power Company will begin building a new plant this spring on the St. Maurice river 20 miles north of La Tuque. It will be the seventh plant on the St. Maurice river to be established by the company and it will have a capacity of 330,000 horse power.

Three Provincial cabinet ministers will represent the Quebec Government at the celebrations in Rome March 11, to mark the 80th birthday of the Pope and his 17th anniversary at Pontiff.

Routine Matters At March Session Of Ayersv'l Council

The temporary loan of $44,160 contracted by the Ayersville Council was extended pending the sale of debentures — at the regular session of the Council held under the chairmanship of Mayor Gaetan Paquette Monday evening.

Councillor Pharand gave notice of motion that at the next regular meeting he would present an amendment to the loan by-law in question.

Allan Hay was in attendance at the session and presented plans for a sub-division of part of the Hay property on the Brownsburg Road. The documents were prepared by Jacques Poulin, surveyor, of Ste. Agathe.

Eight building permits for houses were granted at this session, while the ninth, requested by Hector Lefebvre, was tabled for further study.

A letter from Cannon Paul Manseau, director of Social Service for the St. Jerome diocese, was received and read, thanking the Council for their interest in his project. He added that a satisfactory agreement had been made with the Lachute Council and that he was sure a similar meeting could be held with the Ayersville Council. It was decided to meet Cannon Manseau on Monday, March 12.

Two letters were received from Alderic Tessier, one requesting information concerning the by-law governing commercial construction on Hamford Street, between Ayers and Hammond Streets; the other regarding the Roads Department depositing snow on his property.

Tenders were called for fire insurance on the municipal garage as well as municipal vehicles, after which the session was adjourned.

Honorable Mention To Morin Fire Brigade

(Our District Correspondent)

Morin Heights — Information has been received that Morin Heights Fire Brigade has been awarded an Honorable Mention in Class "F" Municipalities (2500 population and under). This distinction is to the credit of the Fire Chief H. Gillingham and his brigade who have, since the inception of this group, given excellent service to the municipality. A purely voluntary organization, the brigade of citizens have rendered valuable service and kept down fire losses in a manner that has justified this present award.

Easter Seals Campaign for Crippled Children

The annual Easter Seals campaign on behalf of crippled children and adults, is drawn to the attention of Argenteuil residents by the Lions Club, sponsors and administrators of the fund in this community. The major portion of this collection, which remains here for local application, has been put to good use for needy sufferers in the past — having so far provided funds for medical treatment, artificial limbs, orthopedic aids, and a wheelchair now on loan to a crippled resident. Mayor Dr. F. W. FitzGerald is the Lions Club committeeman in charge of this activity.

Seals and return envelopes will be in the mails during the coming week. It is expected between 2,000 and 3,000 households will be approached through this means. It is also anticipated the local industries will contribute and that the effort will meet with a generous response all round.

Thru-Way Plans Given New Impetus At Laurentides Ch. Commerce Meeting

The most pressing question before the Laurentides Chamber of Commerce during the past few years — that of the construction of a fast, direct route from Montreal to the Laurentian playground — was given new emphasis at the annual general meeting of the organization held in Ste. Agathe recently. Representatives from the 21 member municipalities were in attendance, and the meeting was presided over by President Jean O'Donnell.

Colonel Maurice Forget, a member of the committee studying road problems in the province, declared that plans for the proposed new route were completed and that they were only awaiting the approval of the Minister of Roads.

These plans, he added, included the construction of two bridges for a projected six-lane highway, for which the first cut-off will be at Ste. Therese. It is most probable that other cut-offs will be constructed for St. Eustache and Lachute. He stated that two plans have been submitted to Quebec, the Laurentide plan having been given priority. The cost is known, although the date for commencement of work has not been announced, but before the work is authorized it will be necessary to decide if the thru-way will be a toll road or not.

Colonel Forget made these remarks at the banquet, where His Excellency Mgr. Emilien Frenette was the guest of honor.

Lachute Chamber of Commerce was represented at the assembly by the local president, Paul Lalliberté and Mrs. Lalliberté.

Boyd's Express City Driver Finds Honesty Pays (Small) Dividends

Montreal —

John Stevenson was in the market for a frame last Thursday — something about six inches long and three inches deep.

Three years ago Stevenson, Montreal employee of Boyd's Lachute Express, found $25,000 in certified cheques at Monkland and West Hill Avenues. He returned the cheques. His reward: $2.

"I sent the money back. I felt the owner needed it more than I did," Stevenson recalls.

Last week he found an envelope containing $2,500 in certified cheques at McCord and Wellington Streets. After making two or three phone calls, at a dime each, he located the owners — a large bakery. They rushed to retrieve the cheques and Stevenson was again rewarded — with $1.

"I'm not looking for a big reward, but it's the principile of the thing that bothers me. If I hadn't returned the cheques I could have cashed them without any trouble. But instead I go to the trouble and expense of finding the owner, and what do I get? A dollar."

Stevenson's father also seems to have money-finding luck. A year ago he found a wallet with $110 in it. He received a $10 reward for its return.

"That was real gratitude on the part of the owner," said Stevenson. "But even though I don't think too much of people who give you one dollar for $2,500, honesty is still the best policy."

And what is he going to do with the dollar bill?

"I'm going to frame it," Stevenson said.

Lone Resident, Aged Lady, Suffocated In Dwelling-House Fire at St. Andrews

Heroic Rescue Attempts Are Foiled By Intense Heat and Dense Smoke

A life-long resident of the St. Andrews East area, Mrs. Mary E. McCullough, 92, was asphyxiated late Sunday evening in a fire that destroyed her St. Andrews East home. She lived alone in the eight-room house located a short distance from the St. Andrews East Presbyterian Church.

The victim telephoned the Bryson residence shortly after 11 p.m. Sunday, informing Danny Bryson, a neighbor that the house was on fire. He rushed to the scene accompanied by his brother Murray, after instructing other members of the family to notify the fire department.

Several heroic attempts to save the elderly woman were made by the two brothers, who were forced back by flames and intense smoke. Members of the St. Andrews volunteer fire brigade arrived on the scene and doused the blaze in the front room where the victim had been seen through the smoke and flames, using the booster hose on the fire truck.

Residents and eye-witnesses were high in their praise of Danny and Murray Bryson (the former a married man with a family) who repeatedly risked their lives in an effort to save the elderly lady from the burning home. At one point before the arrival of the volunteer fire brigade, the brothers all but reached the victim, whom they could see surrounded by flames.

Again Danny Bryson, and volunteer fireman Gaetan Lavigne, entered the building and managed to find Mrs. McCullough, who was lying on a couch in the living room of the house, some 20 feet from the door and front window. As Bryson raised the stricken victim, she called out, but when carried out to safety she had expired. The lady was pronounced dead a short time later.

Fire Chief Edgar Monette stated that when he arrived around 11.30, every room in the house was in flames and filled with smoke. He added that, in his opinion, the fire was caused by electric wires, which could be seen burning on the front of the building when he arrived.

Firemen at the front of the building escaped serious injury while fighting the flames when the verandah roof fell, narrowly missing several men.

Chief Monette added that as soon as the victim had been extricated from the burning building, 2,500 feet of hose was laid from the river to the fire, where firemen battled the flames until 7.30 a.m. Monday.

Coroner Dr. Jules Lafleur gave the cause of death as accidental due to asphyxiation and stated that no inquest will be held.

An investigation was carried out by Det. Ralph Allen.

The late Mrs. McCullough was born at Riviere Rouge on September 8, 1863, one of 10 children of the late John MacGregor and Jane McArthur, the latter of Dalesville.

She was a graduate of the McGill Normal School and was married to the Rev. Robert McCullough, of Uxbridge, who predeceased her some years ago.

She was a loyal member of the St. Andrews East Presbyterian Church, the Ladies' Aid, and a life-member of the Women's Missionary Society.

She is survived by two brothers, Dr. Herbert MacGregor, of New York City, and Norman MacGregor, of St. Andews East. She was widely related throughout this district.

Funeral service was held Tuesday at the St. Andrews East Presbyterian Church, the Rev. Dr. Harold Reid officiating. Interment will be made in the St. Andrews East Protestant Cemetery.

Pall-bearers were Messrs. Ewan Albright, William Blair, Clifford Blair, Robert Bradley, Howard McOuat and Richard Parker.

Parents' Night H.S. Feature for Education Week

A large gathering of parents attended the annual Parents' Night at Lachute High School last evening, at which the teaching staff were present in the various classrooms and samples of the pupils' work were on display.

At nine o'clock, a Special Features program offered two French plays, directed by Miss Frances MacLachlan; a demonstration of Gym Equipment by Mr. A. Petersen and several students; a demonstration of Student Athletic Activities by Mr. R. Balley; a demonstration in Chemical Laboratory work by Mr. R. Wyse; and films on Educational subjects, presided over by Mr. L. Robinson.

A good attendance was in evidence at all these attractions, which, due to a short time available, were run concurrently.

Coffee and sandwiches were served in the cafeteria at the close of the evening's activities.

The program was staged in observance of Education Week, which is being held throughout Canada, emphasizing the theme "Education is Your Business" — in an effort to provide an opportunity for parents and friends to become better acquainted with their community school system.

WORTHY EFFORT

Hit-and-Run Victim Gave Chase in Car, Stalled Culprit Driver

George Golding, 52, of Hawkesbury, pleaded guilty to charges of hit-and-run and impaired driving, in St. Jerome Court Tuesday, and was sentenced to a fine of $50 plus costs on each charge, his license also being suspended for three months.

Golding was arrested last Saturday following an accident in Grenville which caused an estimated $250 damage. According to Traffic Officer Howard Jones, Germain Robert, 45, of Montreal, was headed north through the village of Grenville when he met a car on a curve that failed to turn, crashing into the side of his 1953-model car. The driver of the other auto failed to stop, and Robert turned his damaged car around and gave chase, pulling in front of Golding half a mile from the scene of the accident.

Golding's car, owned by his nephew Earl Golding, of Hawkesbury, was held in a garage until arrival of Police Chief Davidson of Grenville and Traffic Officer Howard Jones; the latter brought Golding to Lachute and lodged him in the local cells.

Golding was released upon payment of $103 bail.

This Little Goose Went Sliding

A news picture from the Denver City Zoo appearing in The Watchman recently, inspired a local reader, Mrs. H. Kennedy, St. Philippe, R.R. 1, to send this interesting snapshot. The following description is quoted from Mrs. Kennedy's letter: "I thought I'd send you a picture of our goose. She went sliding every time the children did. She always drew a sleigh back up the hill, as the picture shows. If no one took her on the sleigh for the ride down, she followed on foot; when the sleighs got too far ahead she took wing and soon caught up. . . When she decided to follow the school bus every morning, we had to sell her, although we missed her very much."

Workmen's Compensation On the Farm

Farm Forums' topic for discussion next Monday is "Workmen's Compensation." Following is a commentary from the current "Farm Forum Guide" — an issue which offers many viewpoints for intelligent study of this question at the rural group gatherings:

Compensation Most Used In Ontario

Farmers across Canada have shown relatively little interest in workman's compensation, even in the seven provinces where coverage is available to them.

The greatest use has been made of it in Ontario where slightly more than two thousand farmers were included under the Act by the end of 1955. British Columbia has one hundred and thirty-one farmers carrying protection for themselves or their workers. Approximately twenty farmers each in Prince Edward Island, Manitoba and Newfoundland have coverage for their employees with an additional four or five farmers in Prince Edward Island carrying personal coverage.

These numbers are small; and this influences the rates which must be charged to cover the costs of farm accident claims. The more farmers included under workmen's compensation, the greater chance that rates can be reduced or kept at a low level. Broader coverage would likely bring more stability in the rates charged.

There are difficulties, however, in bringing more farmers under the Acts. There are many farmers with small opeations which require paid workers for only a short time during the year, and at the most not more than one or two workers are needed. The payroll is thus quite small. Many farmers also do not keep accurate records.

Paid farm workers are relatively few in Canada — only 95,000 at the end of last October — and they are not organized. This probably accounts for the fact that they have not been given the protection which most other workers have. However, farmers, unlike other employers, can also provide themselves with the same benefits as they gain for their workers through workman's compensation.

MANY VISITORS

Saint John, N.B. (CP) — A record 30,564 visitors called at the New Brunswick museum here last year, the annual meeting was told.

Capital Necessary To Start Farming

Ithaca, N.Y. (UP) — A man has to have $15,000 to $20,000 to begin farming these days, according to Dr. C. A. Bratton, Cornell University economist.

Bratton, who makes a specialty of helping budding farmers, said most of them get a start by borrowing capital from parents, relatives and neighbors. But some start in a partnership with an older, more experienced farmer.

A Noble Beast

London (By Gerald Clark, staff correspondent to the Montreal Star) — A farmer was gored by a bull the other day, and the outcry was heard as far away as the House of Commons. It was not, however, the anguished call of a bruised man that brought about a statement in the House. It was the bull, shining and noble animal that he was, that inspired a parliamentarian to stand up and say: "Many accidents with bulls are caused because the people handling them do not treat them with the respect they deserve."

Such a commentary won loud applause from fellow MPs who felt it their chosen lot to champion the cause of all the animal kingdom. Only next door, in the House of Lords, another fervent orator was demanding a ban on circus animal acts on the grounds that "they involve cruelty and the degradation of noble beasts."

Electric Pumping Builds New Farms in B.C.

Ashcroft, B.C. (CP) — Transforming vast stretches of British Columbia's interior dry belt may result from experiments being conducted by the B.C. Electric Company near here.

The company has acquired 500 acres on the arid Wallachin bench and a 650-acre tract near Lillooet, 180 miles west of here, to demonstrate how the dry belt can be reclaimed.

At Lillooet water will be pumped electrically to levels up to 300 feet from the Fraser river to irrigate present "badlands". The Wallachin project will raise water from the Thompson river.

In both areas a beginning will be made with grass and beef operations to be followed by introduction of tomatoes and other canning crops later.

New Garden Area

It is estimated that up to 25,000 acres of new land with a growing season comparable to the South Okanagan fruit-growing sector can be made into a new garden along the benches which stretch outward from Ashcroft along the Fraser and Thompson rivers to Lillooet, Kamloops and Spence's Bridge.

New power lines, both B.C. Electric and B.C. Power Commission, now penetrate the area and hydro is the force which makes reclamation economic.

A generation ago an 80-foot lift was considered the maximum with combustion power and the pumps then available. Today, with improved pumps driven by cheap electric power, the ceiling is much higher.

The Budd ranch near here pumps 265 feet with 150-horsepower electric motor. Levels at Wallachin vary from 50 to 500 feet. The more valuable the crop grown per acre, the higher the water can be pumped.

Barn Meeting Held by Laurentian Ayrshire Club

A successful barn meeting was held by the Laurentian Ayrshire Breeders' Club on Saturday at the farm of Erskine Rodger, Lachute.

The members of the Calf Club were present and took part in the cattle judging classes. Guest speakers for the event were Dr. René Trepanier, Deputy Minister of Agriculture for Quebec, and Douglas McKechnie, secretary-manager of the Canadian Ayrshire Breeders' Association.

In Dr. Trepanier's talk he explained to those present the good points to look for in judging cattle. With these points in mind the club members then proceeded to judge two classes of cattle. The winners for the seniors were Albert Leishman, Howard McOuat and James Dorion — the juniors being Donald Parker, Donald McOuat and Stuart Robertson. Mr. Trepanier then placed the classes according to his own choice and gave reasons for his preferences.

Mr. McKechnie gave a very interesting talk. He touched on the new requirements for R.O.P. and also new requirements needed to have bulls registered and classified. . . He also stated that John D. MacCaig had recently been appointed as the first official Federal Inspector for type classification of males and females. He also stated that it would be a great asset to the breed if each breeder would purchase a road sign.

Jack McConnell then thanked the speakers for their very interesting talks, and also Mr. Rodger, who had so kindly donated the use of his barn for this meeting.

This club is sponsoring a performance by the Brownsburg Male Choir in the Lachute High School on March 14. (See advertisement in this issue.) It is hoped that there will be a large turnout for this concert.

WEEK IN OTTAWA

By Roy LaBerge,
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, March 5 (CP) — Canada gained a new market for wheat with the signing of a three-year trade agreement with Russia.

The first trade agreement ever signed between the two countries gives imports from Russia the same tariff treatment given goods from the United States and other countries having similar pacts with Canada.

There is no specific commitment to buy any Russian goods, and Canada reserves the right to levy special dumping duties if any influx of low-priced goods from Russia's state factories threatens to harm Canadian producers.

Under the pact, Russia agrees to buy 44,000,000 bushels of wheat during the next three years. At present prices that represents about $60,000,000 worth. Canada has had no commercial wheat sales to Russia since before the Second World War. Some wartime shipments were made as mutual aid.

Trade Minister Howe reported that sales of wheat to Russia are expected to be completed within "a very few days" under the new agreement. He said the grain will move as soon as the Soviet can arrange its own ship transportation. The wheat will probably be shipped from the West Coast for use in Siberia.

Meantime the government's emergency grain legislation received final passage after a stormy five-week debate. The bills on bank loans against farm-stored grain, and for treasury payment of abnormal wheat storage charges, received final reading in the Senate last Thursday.

ATOMIC MILESTONE

Canada may soon reach a new milestone in its atomic development by producing its own uranium metal, used as fuel in atomic reactors and power plants.

Canada now produces no uranium metal. The nation's sole refiner of uranium ores, Eldorado Mining and Refining Limited, sells a product to the United States Atomic Energy Commission. Atomic Energy of Canada, Eldorado's parent company, then buys uranium metal from the U.S. Commission.

But Trade Minister Howe told the Commons he thinks Canada will be making its own metal in about a year's time. A division of Eldorado has been studying metal production for some time.

By 1956, Canada's production is estimated to reach a dollar value of about $250,000,000 annually — far more than even the most optimistic forecasts of future needs by nuclear power in Canada.

MUNICIPALITIES' VIEW

The Gordon economic commission, charged by the government with forecasting Canada's economic future in the next quarter-century began its sittings in the Capital last week.

Labor unions, co-operatives, industry representatives, municipal governments and student representatives were among the groups who presented briefs for the commissioners' study.

One that stood out for its impact on the imagination was presented by the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities. It presented a picture of Canada in 1980 as seen by civic authorities.

The mayors foresaw more homes built, streets of cities and towns double their present length, and a rising population which, combined with heavy traffic would create "staggering" transportation problems.

They estimated population at 28,000,000, with 75 per cent living in urban comunities compared with 57 per cent in 1951 and 20 per cent in 1871.

Streets would be jammed with 15,000,000 automobiles owned among 21,000,000 urban dwellers.

They predicted great increased need for schools, hospitals and water and sewage. Municipalities, they said, would not be able to pay for these out of present tax means.

ANTI-INFLATION MEASURE

Canadians learned they had a new weapon to fight any threatening inflation when the Bank of Canada's annual report was tabled.

Canada's chartered banks have agreed to maintain a 15-per-cent floor in the ratio of liquid assets to deposits. The floor, which means less money available for loans, becomes effective next June 1.

The ratio was about 11 per cent last November when the move was decided on, and now is about 14 per cent as banks have increased their holdings in liquid assets — cash, treasury bills and day-to-day loans — to meet the floor.

The banks also agreed to halt term lending. Term loans, running between one and 10 years, usually are made to big corporations. They find it cheaper to borrow directly than to float bond issues in the securities market.

Bank of Canada governor James E. Coyne told a press conference the floor will promote a financial system that will respond "more quickly, smoothly and predictably to measures of monetary restraint when these are required in the future and which will thus be better able to serve the national and Mr. Ronald Hebert of Lachute (who spent all his life till last year in Brownsburg). Mr. Hebert is son of the resigning secretary.

Routine matters were then handled, before discussion on the budget. Permission to operate taxis was granted to Ronald Proulx and to Norbert Charron. They will pay $10 business tax. Donations of $10 each were made to the Red Cross and to the Boy Scouts' drive. A letter from the Health Department showed that the waterworks samples for February were all O.K. For the first time the councillors were pleased to see a letter from the Welfare Service. Usually this means more expense, but this time it was a refund which will net the town $300.

A motion was made forbidding anyone to sell lots without first obtaining the town's permission. The main purpose in enforcing this already-existing law is to keep a check on proper evaluation of these lots.

Secretary-treasurer Emile Hebert presented his budget for 1956. The evaluation is now set at $2,602,750, and Mr. Hebert proposes a tax hike of 10 cents to $1.25. He pointed out that we are still the lowest in the district and we get free garbage collection and chimney sweeping — a privilege enjoyed by few municipalities of this size. The total income is expected to be $46,700, which would just clear expenditure.

Mr. Hebert proposes to cut $1,000 off the expense of the Police Department and cut the extra help to $1,000. There are several expenses which will terminate this year. The last payments will be made — $3,800 for the snow-blower and $500 for Bank Street. The truck maintenance ($2,300 last year) should be cut to $1,000 if a new truck is purchased. The estimated cost of a new truck with the old one in trade should be about $2,200.

An adjournment till next Monday was called by pro-Mayor Ernest Lavoie, who will return the chair to Mayor Lepine. The budget will probably be adopted "as is", but the two vacancies may give rise to some interesting debating.

Alleged Bank Bandits Held After Nomingue Attempt

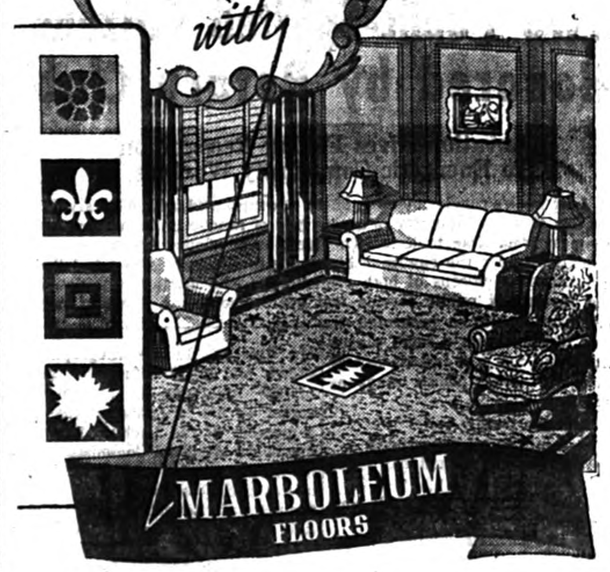

Held on an attempted bank robbery charge after their car bogged down in a snowdrift near Mont Laurier last Friday, two city youths were lodged in Provincial Police cells in Montreal.

Det. Sgt. Jules Legault of the Laurentians Detachment and his men took the two into custody near their car. The police found a .38 revolver in the vehicle. The gun apparently was stolen from the Police Training School which is adjacent to a public bath near Maisonneuve Market, last week.

Claire Vallee, manager of the Banque Canadienne at Nominingue, Que., told detectives a youth entered the bank on Friday and pointed a gun at her. She screamed and the intruder ran out to a waiting car, which sped out of town on a slippery road.

Det. Lt. Albert Bisaillon of the Provincial Police said the two would be charged with attempted bank robbery, with auto theft, and on other counts.

Red Cross Is "More Than An Institution"

LAST YEAR, deep in the African jungle, a quiet man of purpose celebrated his 80th birthday. Although he was distant from the millions who love and respect him, his birthday was noted with reverence throughout the world.

The distance he had strayed from our world has in no way diminished the esteem of Dr. Albert Schweitzer, noted physician, philosopher and Nobel Prize winner of 1955.

Forty-three years ago, Dr. Schweitzer left Alsace and so-called civilization to begin a project of selfless devotion to mankind. He was to establish a hospital for the inhabitants of a remote jungle community. This man was devoting his life to his fellow man.

Last year, in an interview, Dr. Schweitzer was asked about his principle which he calls Reverence for Life. "It is not enough," he said, "to do one's daily job, support one's family, abide by the laws. That's all very well, but you must do something more."

"You must give some time to your fellow man. Even if it's a little thing, do something for those who have need of help, something for which you get no pay but the privilege of doing it."

Most of us share that philosophy, but circumstances often prevent us from doing what we would like to do to help our fellow man. Perhaps, through our Red Cross we can become people of purpose.

Dr. Schweitzer summed up the work of that great international organization. "For us the Red Cross is more than an institution," he said. "It stands for an ideal — one in which humanity must think, feel and act with compassion toward the world's suffering people. Thanks to it, moral law continues to hold a high place, even in the moral confusion of today."

Through our support of the Canadian Red Cross we can act with compassion toward our less fortunate neighbor. Most of us cannot do all of the things we would like to do by direct volunteer effort but during this month of March we have the chance to give the financial support to those who volunteer their services for the Canadian Red Cross.

For almost 50 years the Canadian Red Cross has been carrying on the work of mercy — giving help in time of peace or war — whether that help was needed across the street, across the nation or across the world.

Canvassers for the annual appeal are now busy through this area. Remember — it is OUR Red Cross. When you give you may be helping others, and you may be helping yourself.

The Right Approach

LACHUTE'S new police chief, Fernand Trepanier, was consulted by a citizen last weekend in what threatened to be a teen-age bust-up between boys of the French and English schools. The immediate hostilities did not unduly alarm this citizen, on the premise that "boys will be boys"; but he had seen less pleasant results, in a season when stones replace snowballs as missiles. Besides which, there was some minor property damage involved.

Anyway, the new police chief threw an encouraging light on the situation. His attitude was not "Let me catch them!" or "I'll fix 'em" . . He remarked, like a man of very practical experience with youngsters, "I'll get the two sides together and talk it over." . . . If trouble develops, we are sure he will do just that.

Labor Shortage?

A TIGHT labor situation is in prospect for a good many months to come. It is still doubtful whether Canada will have enough people to do all the things it will want to do in 1956 — writes Michael Barkway in The Financial Post.

This forecast appears, at first sight, to make a sharp contrast with the increase in unemployment which took place in January. The seasonal jump in jobless from early December to late January was fully up to average this year — perhaps a little greater than average. But behind the total figures lies an underlying strength in the job picture which supports the prediction of very full utilization of the available labor force this year.

The annual survey of investment intentions of business and governments, which is now almost complete, will add further evidence of a continuing high demand for labor and materials. New construction and new capital equipment are expected to exceed last year's.

A REAL EFFORT must be made to demonstrate the value of good manners to the teenagers. This puts quite a load on their seniors, but it is still the only satisfactory way to do the job — says the Red Deer (Alta.) Advocate.

Tribute to Devotion

THE WEEK brought an incident which should not pass unnoticed; and we believe its telling is no intrusion upon professional privacy.

Last Friday there passed away, in old St. Andrews Village, the familiar figure of a family doctor. Suffering from that "dread disease" which medical science has failed to conquer, the doctor knew too well the imminence of death. But determination kept him active when he might well have withdrawn in peace, away from other people's ailments and anxieties. . . Friday was grim; patients needed him, and with undramatic tenacity he was "on duty" that afternoon, ministering to the sick. . . At 5 p.m. the good man passed to his reward.

To the late Dr. Armand L'Allier we pay our humble tribute.

Effective Publicity

THE ARREST of another "Most Wanted Man" through the reproduction of his picture in the Calgary Albertan, adds to the score of two criminal fugitives chalked up recently by "Week-End", through the same means.

Newspapers may justifiably claim these examples as proof of their effectiveness. Such results could not have been achieved by radio; nor by television either, without a lot of undesirable repetition. Yet there are some who assert that these audio and visual media are, generally speaking, more effective in publicity than the newspapers. In cases, obviously; but "generally speaking", NO.

One has only to think how frequently a householder refers back to last Monday's daily — how often a neighbor borrows the home-town weekly to find some theatre program, date, or price-tag — to realize that these familiar news-sheets are always at hand, on the end-table or in the magazine rack, and that their value as an advertising medium is inestimable.

Splashing Is Not Funny

COURTESY while driving is often mentioned but too often ignored. One of the fundamentals of decent driving is to avoid splashing pedestrians.

At this time of the year, a fast-moving vehicle is a menace to everyone using our streets and sidewalks. Neglecting to conform to this basic principle of good-driving manners can cause much embarrassment to the driver and can be a costly oversight if he has to pay for the damage caused. There have been cases of pedestrians smart enough to take the license number and bring the culprit to court, and many drivers have been forced to pay damages. . . This, however, should be unnecessary if you drive carefully and think of the welfare of your fellow-citizens.

Families and Housing

ONE OF THE unhappy features of any housing shortage is that families who don't particularly want to live together are often forced to do so.

The case of a newly-married couple who want a home of their own but have to live with in-laws is probably all too familiar to many Canadians.

There now are some indications that this situation is improving.

Though the number of households in Canada is still increasing — a household is a group of persons living in the same dwelling irrespective of whether they are related to one another — the average size of the household is slowly getting smaller.

In the years 1951 to 1953, the average size of the Canadian household was four persons. This figure is now down to 3.9 persons, says the bureau of statistics.

This appears a good indication that persons who don't want to live in the same house now don't have to to the same extent as a few years ago.

The total number of households in Canada is estimated at 3,891,000 at June 1 last year, an increase in a year of 106,000.

The number of families is also going up. For survey purposes by the bureau of statistics, a family is defined as a group of two or more persons living in the same dwelling and related to one another either as husband or wife, with or without children, or as parent and child.

The number of families in Canada last year was estimated at 3,685,000, an increase of 90,000 in a year.

And the Canadian family is growing bigger. In 1954, the average size of the Canadian family was 3.7 persons. Now it is 3.8 persons.

Newfoundlanders have the biggest families — an average of 4.5 persons — and British Columbians the smallest, 3.4 persons. The largest households are also in Newfoundland — an average of 5.1 persons — and the smallest in British Columbia where the average is 3.4 persons.

On this record, it could be said that housing in Canada is worst in Newfoundland, best in British Columbia.

Education Week —

School Trustees Have Their Worries

Dr. M. E. LaZerte, Research Director
Canadian School Trustees' Association

School boards that in 1951 were providing schooling for about 2¼ million children find the school population increasing at the rate of 150,000 a year. Municipalities might without difficulty pay additional school costs were it not for the fact that other expenditures are increasing. Between June, 1951, and December, 1955, Canada's population increased about 1¾ millions. The demand for houses, roads, pavements, utilities, hospitals and other services creates serious problems. The Canadian School Trustees, after a 2½-year study of these problems, published their finding in a 229-page report, SCHOOL FINANCE IN CANADA. There are two "musts" in school business — there must be schools and there must be teachers. What does the report say about building and staff problems?

To provide classrooms for increasing enrolments, renovate and keep present buildings in repair and provide the additional space that would be required if high school programs were modernized and enriched with suitable options in shop, home economics and commercial subjects, would require an annual outlay of about one billion dollars — its reduction to $500 millions, could result only from partial completion of needed programs. These figures seem astronomical until one recalls that building costs vary from $15,000 per rural classroom to $1,000 or $1,200 per pupil in urban centres.

The continuing teacher shortage forced school boards in 1952-53 to engage as teachers 5,142 substitutes without any professional training and 3,744 others with only partial training. Nine thousand certified teachers had standing less than the equivalent of high school graduation followed by one year of professional training. About 22 per cent of the total teaching staff were university graduates. The academic and professional qualifications of the lower half of the staff are too low. The teacher shortage results in a lowering of standards; lowered standards, in turn, aggravate the shortage. Too many children are being short-changed. The terms "teaching" should be re-defined.

School trustees cannot find enough money to build the new schools required and pay salaries that will get and retain good teachers. In 1952-53 one-half of Canada's teachers received a salary less than $2,375; in one province 75 per cent of all teachers received a salary above $4,000. The solution to the teacher shortage is not merely to pay more money under a "wait and see" policy in the hope that higher salaries will draw more recruits; school boards should press for teachers with top-ranking qualifications and pay whatever salaries will retain their services.

Canada is rapidly becoming industrialized. Her world trade is expanding; natural resources are being developed. The type of schooling that sufficed 25 years ago is not good enough today. Industrialization, urbanization and advances in science and technology are making new demands upon the school. A high school education is becoming a necessity for the great majority of workers. Standards of both academic and technical efficiency are rising. Besides solving problems of accommodation and instruction, Canadian school trustees would like to wipe out the great inequalities in school offered in different districts and the equally great differences in mill rates levied against school supporters, so that desired standards may be attained.

VALUABLE VOTERS

ANSWER TO PROBLEM

Our tariff policy has always been unfair to the western farmer who sells his wheat on a world market but must purchase his needs on one which is protected to the advantage of the non-prairie Canadian. The answer to the farmers' plight is production of less wheat and production of more of the other agricultural products for which the nation itself has a greater demand.

The new street lighting system on Main Street is certainly an improvement over the old set-up. However, the new lights have been spaced so far apart as to be partially ineffective. There are still many dark spots.

CHICKS! CHICKS! CHICKS!

If the past years are any criteron of what this year will be, then everybody will buy chicks — and then down the prices of poultry products will go!

We are not advocating staying out or loading up, for if you are keeping poultry you never will make any money by jumping. The wise move will be to GET YOUR REGULAR SUPPLY OF CHICKS BUT GET THEM EARLY, AND FEED THEM BETTER.

If the bottom should fall out of the egg and meat market, it will be in the fall when the early Chicks are ready for market and laying. So again I say, get your chicks as early as possible; and won't you give us your chick order well ahead of the time you want the chicks! We have been agent for NEWHAUSER'S CHICKS for the last five years, and have found them second to none. They have 20 breeds of Chicks, many kinds of Hybrids, and Hy-Lines.

By the way, why not try a flock of Hy-Lines this year. I have 13 No. 934 Hy-Lines (that's all the fox left me) and I have picked up 13 eggs a day for 5 days out of the last three weeks. And boy! They don't eat anything like the heavies!

Of course, I feed them PURINA LAYENA. It's cheap; I just go into the store and help myself, but it will pay YOU even if you do have to pay for it and helps pay the dealer's hens feed also!

Another thing that requires watching with both eyes, is the kind of Chick you buy. You may save a cent or two on each Chick and lose quarters later.

Some hatcheries are offering pullets for about the same price as Mixed Chicks. They can do this because they are getting as much or more for the cockerels for broilers. These pullets are meat birds and will lay well for awhile only, but are dear at any price. Better play safe and order Newhauser's Chicks from us, along with your SUPER-CHICK STARTENA CHECK-R-TABS and brooder needs. We deliver.

ALL ABOARD
With G. E. Mortimore

Letters of recommendation are not much use, because nobody believes them. Often as not they are written with tongue in cheek. People have learned to doubt such letters, just as they doubt the mileage on a used car.

A friend and I were discussing the kindly reluctance of letter-writers to tell the truth.

And I remembered how I had once carried a letter of introduction written entirely in Greek, and presented it to a number of Greek cafemen, without having any idea of the contents.

I was trying to sell subscriptions to a small and moribund newspaper which I was helping to publish. A Greek of my acquaintance wrote the letter for me. The cafemen's brows began to wrinkle when they read it. What was in that letter? I grew inquisitive.

For all I knew, the letter might have contained some such remark as "Throw this jerk out before he robs you of your last dime."

So I had it translated. I'm sorry to spoil what might have been a good story, but the letter contained quite generous praise. (Don't ask me why the cafemen wrinkled their brows. Maybe they didn't understand Greek).

When a man writes a letter of reference, the bearer should always be ignorant of its contents. If the letter is open for the subject to read, the writer hates to hurt his feelings; so he pens a stream of pleasant gobbledygook.

Even in the case of letters written behind the subject's back, a man hesitates to blast a character or a career.

My friend recalled some actual embezzlers of whom he had knowledge, and pointed out that their departure had been hushed up. Very likely, he said, they got favorable letters of recommendation, giving them a license to cheat the next employer who was unlucky enough to hire them.

Here are letters of recommendation for various world figures, as they might have been written. . .

To whom it may concern:

This is to certify that our former employee Jack the Ripper is a modest, unassuming and vigorous workman. We have no hesitation in pronouncing him to be an operator of more than average skill and imagination.

Yours sincerely . . .

To all governors and heads of state:

We have employed Farouk as a king for several years, and we are able to report that during his term in our service, he set an example which has never been equalled before or since. In his job and also in private life, his conduct has been unique. Should you see fit to hire him, we can guarantee that his work will cause widespread comment.

— Gamel Nasser

To all chiefs of police:

This is to certify that the bearer of this letter, Alphonse Capone, is well known to us as a keen and able executive. He has shown special aptitude in managing the sale of entertainment and refreshment. He is also experienced in handling Chicago pianos. We went to much trouble to obtain his services, and we shall be sorry to lose him.

— J. Edgar Hoover.

To the commander-in-chief, British army in America:

This is to certify that Benedict Arnold was employed by us from 1775 to 1780 in a position of great trust. We can assure you that his sudden departure from our service caused us the deepest regret.

OBITUARY

Late A. L'Allier, M.D., Family Doctor Since 1926 To St. Andrews Community

The community of St. Andrews was saddened by the passing of Dr. Armand L'Allier, who was known and esteemed as a true "family physician" and proved himself devoted, till the last, to the best ideals of his profession.

Dr. L'Allier, who died on Friday, at 5 p.m. after seeing patients up till 20 minutes before his death, was born November 8, 1900, at St. Augustin, Que., being 55 years of age.

He studied at the Seminary of Ste. Thérèse where he decided to be a doctor because his mother had died without medical attention. He attended Laval University from 1920-1926, graduating with high honors, and came to practice in St. Andrews East in June 1926.

In 1929 he was married at St. Hermas, Que., to Gilberte Guilbeault. His son, André, who will graduate in Medicine from the University of Ottawa next year, was born in 1931.

He is survived by his wife and son; one brother, Paul; two sisters, Irène and Eliane. To these bereaved relatives the community extends its sympathy.

Impressive funeral rites were held Tuesday morning at the Roman Catholic church, conducted by Canon A. Dulude, curé of the parish, in the presence of numerous members of the clergy and a large assembly of sympathizing residents.

East Ward Resident Died Wednesday

Late Mrs. Richard MacAdam

As the result from a heart ailment, Mrs. Richard MacAdam passed away at her home, 678 Main Street, Lachute, on Wednesday morning. She was in her 72nd year, and with her husband had been living in town for the past six years.

Born in Upper Lachute, a daughter of the late Richard Muir and his wife Annie McFarlane, Miss Elizabeth Muir was married to Mr. Richard MacAdam in 1906. From this union were born five children — Eleanor (Mrs. Geo. Brown), Edna (Mrs. Frank Maldens), Margaret (Mrs. Earl Rogers), Doris (Mrs. Fred Pring), and Ross, now on the old homestead farm.

Three sisters and two brothers are also left with her husband, to mourn her passing — Bertha (Mrs. Thos. Nicoll), of Port Arthur, Nellie (Mrs. Geo. MacDonald), of Flint, Mich., Marion (Mrs. Allan MacLean), Ross and George Muir. Another sister, Maggie (Mrs. Kenneth McKay) of Chateauguay, died three years ago.

Funeral service is being held in the Margaret Rodger Memorial Presbyterian Church on Friday at 2.30 p.m.

— Jehovah's Witnesses —

You may survive Armageddon into God's New World

It is high time to awake (Romans 13: 11)

We are living in the last days. What does that mean? See Matt. 24. The Bible says, "The Earth abideth for Ever." (Ecclesiastes 1-4.) . . It means the last days of Satan's rule. (Rev. 12: 12.) This generation will see God's great battle against Satan and his organization, on this our beautiful Earth. (Matt. 24-34). The wicked will be destroyed (Psalms 145: 20). The meek shall inherit the Earth. (Psalms 37, verse 11).

Search the Scriptures

The answer to all your questions is found there. Noah (Jehovah's Witness) warned the people in his day, about a flood. (Gen. 6-7). Only eight persons then living took any notice. They entered the ark, and came through the flood to start life in a new world.

There are many today getting information from God's Word about the New World wherein dwelleth righteousness. (2 Peter, 3: 13).

Get the beautiful new book "You May Survive Armageddon into God's New World." — Price 50 cents. Write 40 Irwin Avenue, Toronto 5, or ask any of Jehovah's Witnesses you may happen to meet.

Paragraphs Taken From Book

ARMAGEDDON will be the worst thing ever to hit the earth within the history of man. God's new world will be the best thing ever to come to distressed mankind and will never pass away. For us to know that the best immediately follows the worst gives us courage to consider the subject of our discussion. We cannot have the new world without first Armageddon. So if we have yet to endure Armageddon, it will be better for us to face it with understanding, in the hope of surviving and entering into a new world of God's making, a world altogether different from the one mankind has known now for thousands of years, to its sorrow. Armageddon will prove a great blessing in disguise. Our proper concern is how we may prepare that we may not be irreparably hurt by it but may endure it and live to enjoy the grand new things of God's world of righteousness.

Those dwelling in the New World society live not on material bread alone, but on the utterances out of Jehovah's mouth. Regularly they study His Word, the Bible, and faithfully endeavor to live by it. You are welcomed to study it with them. Learn of Jehovah's provisions for your everlasting life in His new world through Jesus Christ. In humility and loving appreciation, in imitation of Jesus Christ himself, dedicate your life to the One who is the Source of all life and goodness, Jehovah God, and symbolize your dedication as Jesus did, by immersion in water. Then prove your dedication by undertaking His service as prescribed in His Word, preaching "this good news of the Kingdom" and declaring the "day of vengeance of our God". Do this in unbreakable unity with the New World society, keeping your personal integrity toward the Universal Sovereign under all tests that may come and enduring them to the finish. Joyfully following this Scripturally outlined course, then "YOU MAY SURVIVE ARMAGEDDON IN GOD'S NEW WORLD."

AMONG THE CHURCHES

"God of Love" Theme Interpreted by Speaker at Ministerial Association

The Argenteuil Protestant Ministerial Association met last Monday at the Maple Avenue Baptist Church, Brownsburg. The Rev. J. R. Watson, president, took the chair.

After considerable business had been transacted, the Rev. G. W. Bruce gave a helpful address on the subject "The God of Love" . . . The Christian answer to the problem of sin is to be found in the nature of God as revealed in Jesus Christ. Our Lord taught that God is Love, and that sin in all its expressions is traceable to that selfishness in the heart of man which is inconsistent with God's love. This is what it means to disobey the Will of God. The judgment and the wrath of God are the punishment that men bring upon themselves by their proud and selfish assertion of their own wills against God's Will. This is the way God enforces His laws throughout His Dominions, but God is never anything other than Love, at any time under any circumstances. His righteousness is the righteousness of Love. His wrath is the wrath of Love. This truth shines in all that Jesus teaches, even in the demands He makes upon conduct. His condemnation of the religious leaders of His day, and in His teaching about the last judgment. . . No man, however, is free from that selfishness which is sin. And man's hope is in the love of God, which by the Cross of Calvary assures each man that God in His forgiveness has cancelled his sin. This mercy of God's love is only real for those whose true repentance is so aroused by it that they really want to turn toward God and live more according to His Love.

Montreal Music Group To Return Here

This rally will be held in the Hugh Street Hall, at the corner of College Street, at 8 p.m. Everyone is welcome.

Special Music Attraction, Special Sermon Themes, At Lachute United

In the presence of a large congregation at Lachute United Church, members of the Junior Choir led the singing and rendered special items at the morning service last Sunday.

The service began with a processional hymn, "At the Name of Jesus", and closed with "Only-Begotten, Word of God Eternal" as the recessional, following the benediction. Wayne K. Riddell, founder and director of the choir, played the organ. The anthems "Eternal Ruler of the Ceaseless Round" and "With a Voice of Singing" were sung with much feeling, the enunciation and diction of the choir being outstanding.

The Rev. Wilson Bridge, minister of the church, in an address on "The Evangelism for our Time" pleaded for the members and adherents to do their best to win others for Christ and the church. He went on to explain that, whilst mass meetings addressed by well-known evangelists had their place, they were not the answer to the need of the church in this 20th century. The truth was that, when the evangelists had gone on to their next field, the workers of the church had to carry on. Steady personal witness in each church was much more effective than any amount of mass meetings.

On Sunday evening of this week, Mr. Bridge will reply to an invitation from a member of the Jehovah's Witnesses sect who has written him asking for his opinion of the Witnesses.

Who Was This?

By A.A.M.

What was the name of the man of whom Saul, King of Israel, said:

"You are more righteous than I; for you have repaid me good, whereas I have repaid you evil. This day you have declared how you have dealt with me. You did not kill me when the Lord put me into your hands."

Then in wonder at this magnanimous action, the King added:

"For if a man find his enemy, will he let him go away safe? So may the Lord reward you with good for what you have done to me this day."

This man was pursued by Saul, with three thousand men in the wilderness of Engedi. Saul went into the cave to rest, not knowing that this man and his little band of friends were hiding there. The friends urged this man to attack the King, but this man refused saying: "The Lord forbid that I should put forth my hand against him, the Lord's annointed."

Find this man's name and read this story in I Samuel, Chapter 24.

75 YEARS AGO

March 11, 1881 —

Since the first of March we have had all sorts of weather — snow, rain, sleet, frost and sunshine. The last few days, the sugar weather has made its appearance, to the delight of the community at large.

Mr. Mackrith, night watchman for Messrs. Fish & Ireland, had a narrow escape of his life on Wednesday while loading his pistol, one barrel of which was loaded and forgotten. He went to re-load it again, when it discharged, the ball cutting off one of his fingers and grazing his face.

A movement is being made locally to have eggs sold by the pound. This is a step in the right direction, as it is scarcely fair to have to pay as much for eggs that weigh only 14 ounces to the dozen as for those that will weigh 20 or 24 ounces.

Carillon — There was a large assemblage of the members and friends of the Curling Club at the Rink on Saturday, to watch friendly games.

St. Andrews — The municipal council accepted the plans and specifications of the new Town Hall, all councillors expressing the opinion that, when completed, it would be an ornament to the village.

We understand that quite a number of persons are now agitating the old question of building a new Methodist Church here.

50 YEARS AGO

March 9, 1906 —

The regular meeting of the Town Council was held on Wednesday evening, at which it was decided that an agreement be drafted with the CPR to effect a final settlement for the Berry drain.

After a strenuous hour's hard work on Tuesday night, the married men succeeded in carrying off the palms of victory in their final for hockey honors this year, by a score of 7-6.

Mount Maple — Maple syrup has already been made in small quantities, and 'ere long the work of the sugar bush will be on for another season.

25 YEARS AGO

March 13, 1931 —

It would appear from a meeting held in the Town Hall Saturday that all is not well with the Farmers' Club of St. Jerusalem. Complaints have been made of over-purchasing supplies of feed, and it was estimated that about $6,000 of the stock was now in storage.

At the last Red Cross meeting, it was voted to buy a car for the use of the local V.O. Nurse, Miss Nickel, who last month made 253 calls, administering to 52 patients.

Cushing West — The storm of Sunday night which appears to have spread disaster in various parts of the district, passed harmlessly over this section, the only inconveniences suffered being caused by the CNR trains being somewhat behind schedule.

St. Andrews East — Our greatest storm of the winter came on Saturday, and at night the wind almost reached the proportions of a gale. The snow was left in drifts looking like seething billows of an ocean.

St. Hermas — The tragedy in the "House of the Light that Failed" remains a mystery today, the inquest having been put off indefinitely pending the completion of further research by detectives.

Meanwhile, three theories compete to explain the deaths of Ferrier Laurin, 72, and his sister Malvina, 73, whose bodies were found shot in the smoking ruins of their home. Opinion is sharply divided between those that support the view that the Laurins were murdered by a third party, who later set fire to the house and escaped, and those that insist that there was a murder and suicide combined, arising out of family trouble. There remains the bare possibility that, despite gunshot wounds, the Laurins died through accident.

The mystery has gripped the imagination of the entire province because of the picturesque and sinister circumstances that the sick-room lamp of the invalid, Malvina, which had for years served as a night-long beacon to the country-side, mysteriously failed on the eve of the tragedy.

Catholic Women's League

The monthly meeting of the Lachute sub-division of the Catholic Women's League was held Monday evening at the Health Clinic. The president, Miss Lydia Lowe, was in the chair, and there was a good attendance.

After the reading of the minutes and reports, the meeting was devoted to a discussion of plans for the St. Patrick's Day card party.

At the close of the business meeting the newly appointed diocesan director, the Rev. Father R. Raymond, spoke briefly to the ladies.

HEADING FOR ALL-TIME RECORD

—Central Press Canadian

Although Montreal Canadiens have clinched the NHL championship, at least one Habitant has a lot at stake in the remaining games of the NHL season. He is Jean Beliveau, goal-happy centre for the league-leading Hab. With 44 tallies, Big Jean is only seven goals away from breaking the all-time NHL goal-scoring record of 50 set by teammate Maurice Richard in the 1944-45 season.

Ski Jumping Held Here

On Sunday last the Laurentian Zone ski jumping championships were held. There were a large number of entries, and competition was keen. The mild, clear, sunny day was also a drawing card and a large number of spectators enjoyed the event. Jumpers took off at 2.30 p.m. Punch Bott and Kare Olsen were the chief judges, while Pierre Genault was chief starter, Bjone Kevenbo chief of the hill, and Ragnar Hvoslif chief marker.

The Viking Ski Club members wish to thank Capt. Smith of the RCAF Station, Lac St. Denis, for the loudspeaker system; this system was installed on the hill and made it possible for all present to know which competitor was making the jump, and how many feet he had jumped. Thanks also go to Director of Police Claude Lepine, who sent his Juvenile Brigadiers to direct traffic. The boys did an excellent job.

Also the improvements which have been made on the jump hill since last season assured the competitors of a fine runway and landing slope.

Following the jumping, prizes were given out at the "Commons". The first four places were taken by — Rudolf Beyer, first (Viking Ski Club); Johnnie Draper, second (Westmount Club); Real Seguin, third, and Ray Durocher, fourth (both of Ottawa). The official hill record was 135 feet.

Brownsburg Enters League Finals Vs. Hawkesbury

(Our District Correspondent)

Brownsburg, losing to Rigaud last Thursday and winning in an exciting encounter Sunday, took the playoff series 4 games to 3.

In the other semi-final circuit Hawkesbury eliminated Vankleek-Hill to the same tune, 4-3 — thus leaving Brownsburg and Hawkesbury, the old-time rivals, as contenders for the final honors.

First engagement in the finals was played Tuesday at Brownsburg, with discouraging results for the home team. Hawkesbury took this game 10 goals to 4.

Following is a resumé of the two concluding play-off tilts between Brownsburg and Rigaud. . .

Brownsburg — Well, it wasn't without a lot of pushing and squeezing and protests and counter-protests, but eventually the Brownsburg - Rigaud series came to an end, and fortunately the bad feeling was lifted before the final game. Brownsburg felt that justice had been done when the league nullified the Rigaud victory in which they played a third goaler. Rigaud got revenge when the league ruled that Maurice Giroux's release from another league was invalid. Both teams seemed to decide, "Enough alibis, let's play hockey."

Between them they served up a real crowd-pleaser which was all hockey. The pushing-punching-tripping was left behind and although seven penalties were called, they were all of the variety that usually manages to get by. Just on the history of the series though, you can hardly blame the referees for being over-strict, and they ruled with honesty and assurance.

The first period was a tense battle for the all-important opening goal, for it was obvious from the opening minutes that both defences were determined to keep the score low. It seemed that Rigaud had a slight edge in play, but on the few times they did get past the McAdam-Tremblay-Painchaud heavy-duty combination, they found Buddy Racine alert and unbeatable. In the dying minutes of the period Bob Painchaud took off on one of his spectacular solo flights, this time with the big difference that he slid the puck under the Rigaud goaler to open the score. One minute later, Norbonne and Paul-Emile Hbert set up Claude Bouvrette and he, too, slid the puck under the goaler's stick, to give Brownsburg a 2-0 lead. . . If Brownsburg were worth their lead, it was only on account of the tenacity of their rearguard and the brilliance of their goaler.

In the second period Rigaud seemed to lose their cohesion and could rarely get the puck out of their own half. It was their defence's turn to show off though, and as Brownsburg demonstrated an overwhelming superiority, and Thompson, Hogue, Chevrier and Villeneuve proved that playing clean, hard hockey they're more potent than in a free-slugging affair. Brownsburg did manage one goal, as Tomalty scored on an assist from Tremblay.

In the third period Rigaud came out determined to get those all-important goals. Their superiority wasn't as marked as Brownsburg's had been in the second period, but they kept pressing and halfway through the period it was inevitable that they would eventually get one past Buddy Racine. Chiara and Thompson eventually set the stage for Burnettt to go in on his own and open Rigaud's account. With 3½ minutes remaining, Burnett and Chiara combined to set up Gauthler, who unfortunately hurt his leg in scoring, such was the force of his collision with McAdam and Hebert. It was now a battle against time with every Rigaud man up and every 'Burger back. Rigaud only gave up hope 32 seconds from the end, when Brownsburg scored on the untended goal. André Ouellette broke away, had one defender between him and the goals, so decided to trust Jacques Racine. Jacques nearly missed, but scored on a second attempt off Hogue's skate.

The Rigaud team proved that all the ill-feeling was gone by enthusiastically acclaiming the victors, despite their tremendous disappointment.

There were no passengers on the 'Burg team, but Buddy Racine, McAdam, Tremblay and Painchaud must take a lot of the credit for their handling of the defensive assignment. (Willis played 42 minutes and 52 seconds.) Mel Tomalty, Claude Bouvrette and André Ouellette were possibly a shade better on offence, but all the forwards back-checked incessantly, and it was, after all, a defensive victory.

Probably the least said about Thursday's game the better. Feeling ran high, and the game was marred by dirty play, interfering spectators and (for 'Burgers) the fact that besides being beaten 3-1 the local team was hopelessly outclassed for the first time in four weeks. The game was played under protest, a device Rigaud didn't need, for their three goals were easily enough to beat a hard-working but ineffective Brownsburg machine. Only Buddy Racine limited the score in a starless Brownsburg team. The only worthwhile point was the fact that, in such an atmosphere, the referees were always in complete control.

Early Training Commenced for District Pacers

Locally the St. Jacques family is busy with their three horses trying under adverse conditions to have them ready for the opening of Blue Bonnets next month. Mr. King was the top hobby horse locally last year, for he made a good reduction in his record, lowering it to 2.11 3/5 at Richelieu last spring; he won 3 heats and $1,160. Joe Forbes B becomes a 26 class trotter this year after winning one heat and $247, before an injury laid him up for the summer. Danny Forbes will still be in the 30 class but shouldn't stay there long if his few performances of last fall are any indication of the things to come.

Callie G Lee 4 - 2.08 2/5, a 17 class pacer, though not winning any heats last year did earn $1,042. Callie was not up to form and Jas. MacKimmie hopes he'll be okay this spring. Callie is being driven by Albert Stewart this spring. Many horses were struck with a virus last year and it is hoped it will not occur again this season.

Jean Proximity, who was sold last fall by Punch Joly, won 8 heats and $355. She'll be a 25 class horse this year for her new owner in St. Jerome.

Princess Glow the MacTavish mare who raced at Blue Bonnets has been sold to Mr. Lavigne of St. Jerome. This mare has a mark of 2.10 1/5 and won 6 heats and $2,296 in 1955, she'll be a 16 class horse.

Senator Bars owned by Ernie Kennedy stays in the 21 class, he won 3 heats and $543, Lady Van B moves up a class to 22, she earned 5 wins and $1,257. Ernie is looking forward to retirement this spring and lots of time for his horses, including his fine yearling.

Monte Cristo, owned by Wilfrid Arcand, is training well and his first race will be in May. He is still a 30 class pacer and Bill Hewitt, Jr., drives him. Bill also has Elizabeth Peters and Effective Peters 3 and 2 on the trot and they just might see a starting gate before the summer is over, as will Gilbert Forbes for Punch Joly. This colt is also rising three and on the trot.

Gordie Forbes is coming along nicely after his fall ordeal, a rare throat operation, Ethel Bars is on her toes again after her setback last year from the virus, so Paul and 'Piche' are looking forward to some rivalry this spring with both horses in the 30 class, Ethel will be the more advanced of the two.

H. Renaud is busy with his Malcolm Forbes mare and she'll more than likely see a starting gate also for the first time this year.

"After six years of constant searching, the Hewitt family have proved the breeding of Shirley Peters; she comes from trotting families many of whom were show horses. Her sire Zombro Mograzia Peters was never raced, his owner not wishing to hurt him in any way, but fate took a hand and the horse died in his prime of a worm infestation.

Delbert MacTavish has six horses in training, the locally bred Lucille Royal is in Lachute training with S. Lewis, while the rest are in Florida. Bertha's Fingo who was here two years ago is in training again after illness. Biggest hopes are held for Black Ash a two year old by The Widower, he is now training in 2.27. Dallas Hanover is a promising 10 class trotter with a mark of 2.05, who won 4 heats and $9,815 last year. Bold Knight is a 15 class pacer with a mark of 2.05 3/5, this horse was ill last year but is in training again. Sword's Point, a trotter has a mark of 2.03 4/5 is in the 17 class and earned $7,800 last year, winning one heat he is rising 4.

Down St. Eustache way, the horses are having their workouts in a friendly little race meet twice a week. Jogging has been hard locally for lack of snow, but everyone manages to keep on the move. It would have been great to have had use of the track all winter with so little snow and hardly any drifting. Possibly local horses could then compete with those trained in Florida. Perhaps the local horses will still be in there when the others are beginning to feel the wane.

East Settlement Team Heads League in United Church Bowling

League championship in the Lachute United Church bowling was conceded on Monday evening, when East Settlement team (Les Gordon) earned the award. In defeating the Lachute Road team of Mrs. E. Barker 15 to 7, the East Settlement foursome were beyond reach, having 23 points in 15 games.

Several changes occurred in the league standing, due to the close competition during the year. St. George's (Wm. Wilson) with a narrow margin over the S.S. Teachers, has climbed into the higher bracket of the league, and should be strong contenders when the play-offs start. The Red Cross, headed by Mrs. F. McGill, is again in second place, defeating W.M.S. Blues 11-3, while the other scores were: St. Andrews 14, W.M.S. Reds 8, Women's Association 9, All Stars 7, Thistles 9, St. David's 8.

The last game of the regular schedule will be played next Monday evening, and the play-offs will commence Monday, March 19.

High-plus score went to Miss D. Carrière, Mr. Ouellette, Miss F. Carrière and B. Rigg (skip). Mrs. A. Bothwell and Mrs. R. Fraser were winners at cards.

The Senior and Junior Mackie games have ended, finals being played off last Wednesday evening. This competition has been most interesting, and is particularly enjoyed by the Juniors, who thus become initiated into the art of skipping and playing in third position. Teams competing for honors were:

S. Wilson, S. Jones, R. Cairns, C. E. Richardson (skip) against R. Hadley, R. Ogilvie, H. Morrison, R. P. Fraser (skip). In a hard-fought battle the former team won in a score of 11-12.

Railroad Town Visited By TV's "Perspective"

Perspective on March 11 on CBC-TV will tell the story of a typical Canadian railroad town. Melville, Saskatchewan, with a population of 4,500, was chosen as the locale, since most of its citizens depend on railroading for their livelihood. Reporter Fred Davis visited the town with writer Ronald Weyman and photographer Eugene Boyko, and they uncovered many interesting facts about present-day railroad operations. The assignment gave Davis a chance to fulfill a life-long wish — to ride in the cab of a locomotive and blow the whistle! He was also on hand for the celebration and civic welcome tendered a veteran railroader as he completed his last run before retiring.

"Big-Lie" Day in Rebellion of 1885

Events of the second North-west Rebellion in 1885, particularly those involving the Alberta Field Force under Major-General Thos. Bland Strange, form the basis for The Big-Lie Day, Joseph Schull's historical drama for Dateline on CBMT, March 16.

At the start, Schull gives a brief reconstruction of the massacre at Frog Lake, one of the precipitating incidents of the outbreak. On April 1, 1885, some Indians arrived at the Frog Lake Hudson's Bay Company post, explaining that the paint they wore on their faces was in celebration of "Big-Lie Day". The next morning they attacked and murdered the trader and within a few hours had killed most of the white residents.

The massacre led to widespread alarm among the settlers who were in constant fear of a general Indian up-rising. To counter this threat, General Strange, a former Imperial Army officer, came from retirement on his ranch near Calgary and organized the Alberta Field Force of ranchers, regular troops and mounted police. The force moved from Calgary to Edmonton and then east with a wagon train and supply boat, to join up with two other columns under General Middleton and Colonel Otter.

The plan was to stamp out the last remnants of resistance among the Crees following the resistance of the government forces at Batoche. Strange's troops met with little oposition until they got to Frenchman's Butte, where a short but decisive battle was fought against a superior force of Indians.

Dateline's play will give glimpses of Calgary during the hectic days that followed the Frog Lake massacre and will outline events up to the first meetings between government officers and Indian leaders, after the capture of Louis Riel and the scattering of the rebel forces.

'Trans-Canada Matinee' Looks to Spring

Trans-Canada Matinee anticipates the arrival of spring on Monday with the first of six talks on fashions and color for 1956 by Thelma LeCoq of Toronto. The same day, Marine Leland starts a series of eight reports on Changing Patterns in the status of women through the years. And on Tuesday a new attraction will be violinist Steve Staryk of Toronto, to be heard Tuesdays and Thursdays for the next few weeks.

Daniel Defoe, the author of Robinson Crusoe, believed that women should be permitted greater freedom than they had in his day and Marine Leland will start off with some observations on his contribution to a movement which, a couple of centuries later, led to parades, the odd riot and, eventually, the recognition of women as people. The speaker was born in Canada of American parents. Since 1924 she has been a professor at Smith College in Massachusetts where she has been responsible for establishing a course of French-Canadian civilization and a French-Canadian library collection.

Steve Staryk is 23 and has been studying the violin since he was eight. He won his first award when he was nine and he has been collecting them ever since. He joined the Toronto Symphony Orchestra at 17 and is now a member of the CBC Symphony Orchestra. He also makes solo appearances from time to time on the CBC.

TV IN HOSPITAL

Whitby, Ont. (CP) — Doctors at a mental hospital here said that television programs are beneficial to mentally ill persons.

Dramatic Study of Amos "The Reluctant Prophet"

A dramatic study by Charles E. Israel of the Old Testament prophet Amos is planned for CBC Wednesday Night, March 14, from 9.00-10.00 p.m. In writing "Amos", Israel has tried to bring out his personality: in spite of his rugged individualism, Amos was a "reluctant prophet" — his message of doom was not easily preached in a time of great prosperity.

Around 750 B.C. Amos, a shepherd of the village of Tekoa in the barren land by the Dead Sea, was called to go and prophesy to Israel, the kingdom to the north comprised of the 10 tribes which had broken away from Judah. Samaria was in great contrast to his own country — prosperous, corrupt, of oriental splendor — and the people paid little heed to his warnings. They were looking for a "day of the Lord" which would mean peace and prosperity; Amos preached a day of the Lord which would bring darkness, not light, when God would have none of their sacrifices and feast-days, but would be looking rather for the sacrifice of a humble and contrite heart.

Amos was the first prophet of stature in Jewish history to write his utterances in a book; and his message of social justice, against the corruption of the time and the persecution of the poor and the unfortunate, was written plainly and simply and with great power.

Montrealer Directs Cantata on TV

Montreal composer Pierre Mercure's 'Cantate pour une joie' which received its premiere on February 1, in Plateau Hall, Montreal, and was carried at the same time by the CBC Trans-Canada network, will be heard again this week on the TV Concert Hour next Thursday at 10 p.m., with Marguerite Lavergne again singing the solo soprano part.

The cantata is based on poems by Mercure's colleague, Gabriel Charpentier. It is an expression of the soul's search for happiness, in both realistic and abstract terms. The composer himself will conduct the orchestra and the 25-voice mixed chorus will be directed by Marcel Laurencelle.

A distinguished guest of the same program will be the American soprano Elaine Malbin who will sing the part of Cio-Cio-San in a performance of the second act of Madame Butterfly. It was in this role that she recently won considerable acclaim, in the NBC Opera Theatre production of the Puccini work. Baritone Louis Quilicot will be Sharpless and mezzo-soprano Joan Maxwell will be Suzuki. The orchestra for the Puccini excerpt will be directed by Otto Werner - Mueller of Montreal. Irving Guttman will be overall director of the performance for which sets and costumes are being designed by Jacques Pelletier and Gilles-Andre Vaillancourt.

"Holiday" Host

Cliff McKay heads that happy CBC television show "Holiday Ranch", seen on all Canadian TV stations. He and his gang sing and play western ballads, novelty and popular ditties for thirty minutes every week.

To Eliminate Interference In Radio and Television

Much of the radio and television interference in the community is unnecessary and can easily be eliminated. The Telecommunications Division, Federal Department of Transport, appeals to all public-spirited citizens to:

1. Have suppressors installed in all fluorescent light fixtures, preferably at time of purchase. Fluorescent desk and bed lamps are particularly noisy.

2. Turn on your warming pad occasionally for a half hour or so when your radio is on. If it makes long buzzing noises in the radio, the thermostat inside the pad is defective and should be repaired at once. A defective thermostat can cause a fire.

3. Search your premises for old style Tungsten lamps. They have a clear glass bulb, usually with a tip on the bottom and a long up-and-down filament. They cause severe TV interference (black bars) and should be destroyed.

4. Have your dealer or radio serviceman install a suppressor on any electrical appliance which causes interference in your own radio or television set. It probably interferes with your neighbors' too.

Intereference to normal radio reception is not only a public nuisance, it is contrary to the law.

'Song-Gags-Drama' Guest On Denny Vaughan Show

"I'm a song-writer when my songs are sung, a gag-writer when people use my jokes, a comedian when people laugh — otherwise it's straight drama." This is a self-description of Morey Amsterdam, the American entertainer who will be Denny Vaughan's guest on CBC-TV March 12. The flexible approach to show business has meant a varied career for him. Long familiar to radio and TV audiences in the U.S., he has starred in his own Broadway show, owned and operated a night club and played 'cello in a symphony orchestra. His frenzied career reached a peak recently when he was seen or heard on 78 shows in one week.

RESULTS OF TV

Television programs sometimes take the place of light fiction, but they do not often take the place of non-fiction reading, the Barrie Public Library has discovered.

THE SEIGNIORY CLUB AS IT IS TODAY

— By Ethel Kettyle —

PART I : The Club Near the Mountains

In this wonderful land of ours, with its cities, towns, rivers, lakes and mountains, perhaps there are few more beautiful spots than the Seigniory Club and its surroundings.

As one rides along in the train on a crisp, sunny morning, and draws near to the town of Montebello, the usual line of taxis and the Seigniory buses may be seen waiting for the incoming passengers; and as one disembarks, most noticeable is the railway station itself, which is built of red cedar logs and so different from the usual station building seen along the Canadian Pacific Railway between Ottawa and Montreal.

Now we are driving away from the station and through ornate gates where a constable in uniform keeps guard, then up a winding driveway, flanked on either side with tall pine trees, and soon the great Log Chateau comes into view — the building of which, twenty-six years ago, provided a story for newspapers all over North America. Here we see antiquity and modernism to the last degree, combined in the large star-shaped building with its exterior of Western red cedar logs, which reminds one of old Canadian pioneer dwellings; and it seems hard to believe that, in this tranquil spot between the Ottawa River and Laurentian Mountains, man has erected this huge Club to which people from Hollywood, all over the United States and from across the seas, come to find rest and relaxation, to enjoy life in the open, and to admire the beauty of surrounding nature in its rugged state.

The town nearby is just an ordinary little town, like many more in the Province of Quebec, with clean, quiet streets and many wooden houses, a number of stores, schools and seminaries for the boys and girls of the parish, and a large Roman Catholic church. But the past lends a remarkable presence to this place which is so closely associated with Canadian History, which dates back at least 300 years to early times in French Canada; for in the 17th century, only a distance of 25 miles from the site of this Club, the district of Carillon was the starting point for French traders and early missionaries, and the haunt of the Indians, who at that time roamed the woods and along the shores of the Ottawa River.

But now, the interior of the Club brings to view the luxuries of the modern day. Thick carpets, making footsteps fall softly; richly cushioned chairs and divans; spaciously constructed hearths, with glowing fires; electric lights with glittering prisms; beautifully colored oil-paintings from the brush of A. Sherriff Scott, R.C.A., Montreal artist. One of these pictures is particularly outstanding; entitled "The First Raft on the Ottawa", it depicts the rivermen with the foam billowing around them.

We proceed to a modernly-furnished guest room, equipped with all conveniences for comfort. . . . Thence to the office of the Director of Public Relations; and to the luncheon room where silver, china and sparkling glass grace the snowy whiteness of the table linen. Tables are scattered about the room, and we see women of all ages dressed in sports clothes or curling outfits, for at the Club, curling is apparently the most popular of winter sports. An air of friendliness and expectation is apparent in the room, for teams from such places as Hamilton, Toronto, Morrisburg, Ottawa, Buckingham, Lachute, St. Andrews, Hawkesbury, Montreal and many other places, meet here to match their skills in the old Scottish game.

After an appetizing luncheon we inspect the interior of the Club, and later we tour the exterior. "Can it all be done in a single day?" But first we must glean more details of this interesting place.

(To be continued next week.)

Women's Interests -- The Homemaker's Section

Teatime Topics

By Oli Daum, Canadian Press Staff Writer

There's a saying that fools step in where angels fear to tread but you'd think three men in Toronto had never heard of it. The men divulged their views on women's fashions before an "I-dare-you" feminine audience at a department store's spring fashion festival.

With one eye on the nearest exit and the other on the audience newspaper columnist Stan Helleur said Canadian women wear too much frou-frou.

"You should be more like the French women," he said. "Their tastes run instinctively to beautifully tailored clothes depending for dash on a few good accessories."

Actor Sammy Sales, currently starring in "The Fifth Season" in Toronto, said women should emphasize their femininity with pretty hats and flattering colors.

"There appear every season so there's no excuse for women to dress drably," he said. He doesn't help his wife shop because she gets enough ideas from his stage appearances, he said.

"When I got the role in 'The Fifth Season' she went out and bought five outfits. I was glad I wasn't acting in 'The Seven Year Itch' or '20,000 League Under the Sea'."

Percy Saltzman said that after his first year of marriage he learned never to criticize his wife's clothes and always to remark on the ones he liked. Must be sunny weather in that household.

Women in the Church

Women's place in the work and ministry of the church is subject of increasing interest. In Regina recently a panel discussing the matter at the 42nd annual meeting of the city's Presbyterian missionary societies, came to no decisions, leaving it for individual groups to consider until next year.

It was said that because women make considerable money for the church they should have a voice on the church board. On the other hand, when Christ chose no women disciples he set an example for the church.

One member said Presbyterian women had enough to do without going into the ministry. To date, the United Church is the only one of the better-known religious denominations in Canada which ordains women to the active ministry.

Elected chairman of the legislation committee of the Victoria District Trades and Labor Council, Mrs. Betty Graham said wives don't realize how important a part they play in society today.

"By taking an interest in the provisions and laws of the union to which their husbands belong, wives could give "advice and assistance as well as a definite boost to their husband's working attitude," she said.

Mrs. Graham, who defeated two male candidates, is the council's first woman legislation chairman in many years.

New Way To Serve Ham, Eggs and Toast

Ham, eggs, toast and coffee make such a delectable combination that they shouldn't be confined to breakfast only. Here's a brand-new way to serve the ham, eggs and toast, for lunch or supper.

The coffee? Amber-dark, fragrant and plentiful, of course! Whether you serve it hot, or iced in tall frosty glasses, it is always the perfect accompaniment for perfect food.

Ham and Egg Loaf

12 Slices whole-wheat bread, 1 cup ground, cooked ham, 1 teaspoon grated onion, 1 can condensed mushroom soup, 4 hard-cooked eggs, ½ teaspon celery salt, ½ cup milk, 2 tablespoons melted butter.

Chop 2 cooked eggs; mix with ham, seasonings, ½ cup milk and half the soup, undiluted. Trim crusts from bread; place 3 slices close together on baking sheet; spread with ham mixture; top with 3 bread slices. Repeat until there are 3 layers of ham mixture, 4 layers of bread. Brush top slices with half the butter; bake at 375°F., until lightly browned. Make sauce of remaining milk, butter and soup; heat. Add remaining 2 eggs sliced. Serve loaf sliced, with sauce. Yield: 6 servings.

Says Girls Here Don't Appreciate Advantages

Toronto (CP) — A teen-ager born in Poland who recently arrived here says she finds Canadian girls selfish and stuck-up.

"All they seem to be interested in is how beautiful they are and how many dates they have in a week," blue-eyed Kempa Kaziemera, 18, said in an interview. "They are much too struck on themselves."

The slender blonde, employed as a stenographer, said they would do better to apreciate more how lucky they are to have been born in a free country.

At an age when Canadian youngsters have no worse problems than a broken toy or a lost piece of candy, Kempa was, she said, struggling to keep alive.

In Slave Camp

Taken from her home in Poland as a baby, she spent her first few years in a Siberian slave camp dieting on bread, potatoes and water, she said.

"My earliest memories are of dark, cold barracks and mean, ugly men who thought it was funny to beat little children."

When in 1942 the Western powers persuaded the Soviet government to release imprisoned polish women and children, she was shipped to Iran and then from one children's camp to another.

"I went to India, Egypt and then to England where I found my first home," Kempa said. "There I learned my parents had been killed by the Communists and an English family adopted me."

She came to Canada upon learning her two brothers had escaped here from Poland.

Eggs For Lunch

by the Consumer Section, Canada Dept. of Agriculture Marketing Service

This is the season of the year when fresh eggs are plentiful, especially good and reasonably priced. So it is an ideal time to use them often for breakfast and for lunch and supper as part of the main course as well as in desserts. For lunch, eggs are quick to prepare and can be attractively served in sandwiches, casserole dishes, soufflés and omelets. This last one — the omelet — is particularly good for it lends itself perfectly to many variations.

Though the best omelet recipes are basically French in origin it might be said that the omelet is international. In Italy it is called frittata and is often served with spinach, small squash, Parmesan cheese or whitebait which are tiny fish fried crisp and so tender that both bones and skin are eaten with the flesh. Spanish people use various combinations of onions, tomatoes, mushrooms and green peppers to serve with their omelets and the Chinese are likely to add bean sprouts, scrimp and mushrooms in their own delicate and distinctive way.

Some of the most delicious omelets enjoyed by Canadians are ham, mushroom, cheese and onion. Those seasoned with fresh herbs such as parsley, chives and sweet basil are also very good. Sometimes omelets are served with a sauce such as cheese and mushroom, or they may have a savory filling placed in a slit made on top after the omelet has been folded. The filling or sauce should always be prepared first and the omelet itself turned out just before serving.

Tomato-Egg Bake

28 ounce can tomatoes, ½ cup minced green pepper, ½ cup diced celery, 1 bay leaf, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, 1 cup soft bread crumbs, ½ cup cooked green beans, 1½ cups grated Cheddar cheese (medium or old), ¼ cup minced onion, 6 eggs.

Combine tomatoes, onion, green pepper, celery, bay leaf, salt and pepper and simmer until celery is tender, about 20 minutes. Remove bay leaf. Add bread crumbs and green beans. Arrange tomato mixture and cheese in alternate layers in six greased individual casseroles ending with cheese. Make a depression in centre of mixture and break an egg in it. Sprinkle eggs with salt and pepper and bake in a moderate oven, 350°F., until eggs are set, about 20 minutes. Yield: 6 servings.

Egg and Potato Casserole

In a greased baking dish arrange alternate layers of cubed, cooked potatoes, sliced hard cooked eggs and medium cream sauce or one with cheese. Sprinkle top with cracker crumbs or grated cheese and paprika. Bake in a hot oven, 400°F., until thoroughly heated and crumbs are browned.

Finesse With Fillets

Tender fillets dipped in seasoned milk, coated with toast crumbs, dotted with butter and baked in a hot oven are thoroughly delicious.

During the Lenten season, you may wish to feature fish fillets more often on luncheon and dinner menus. Frozen fillets especially, are in good supply this time of year and if prepared with finesse, are a treat.

The home economists of Canada's Department of Fisheries tell us that one of the best and easiest ways to cook fillets is to bread them and bake in a hot oven. For best results they suggest baking frozen fillets while they are still frozen. The breading and quick cooking help retain flavorful juices in the flesh which ordinarily have a tendency to leak out in the thawing process.

It may interest you to know that fish contain a protein similar to that of egg white. Overcooking toughens this protein and dries it out. A sign that fillets are cooked is when the flesh looses its glassy look and takes on a whitish cast throughout. At this stage the flesh will separate into flakes if tested with a fork. Do you like your fillets crisp and brown on the outside and moist and tender within? If so, you will find the following tested recipe for Crispy Fish Fillets amazingly good.

Crispy Fish Fillets

2 Pounds fish fillets, ½ cup milk, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon Worcestershire (optional), ½ cup dry bread crumbs, 2 tablespons butter.

Preheat oven to 500°F. Cut fillets or frozen blocks of fillets into serving-size portions. Stir salt and Worcestershire sauce into milk. Dip fillet portions in seasoned milk and roll in dry bread crumbs (prepared by drying slices of bread to a golden crisp in the oven and crushing). Place breaded fillets in a shallow greased baking dish, dot generously with butter and bake. To determine approximate cooking time required, measure thickness of fillets with a ruler before placing in oven. Allow about 10 minutes cooking time per inch of thickness for fresh fillets and about 20 minutes per inch thickness of block for frozen fillets. Makes 6 servings.

Top Projects in Q.W.I. Interests

March, and annual meetings! This month sees the end of the fiscal year for Quebec Women's Institutes and already reports are beginning to trickle in from branches all over the province.

It is too early yet to assess what has been accomplished in the past twelve months, but one thing can be definitely stated — interest in two of the major projects, pasteurization and help for retarded children, has been sustained.

Broadcasts, talks, programs and active canvassing have featured the unremitting campaign for the former measure, and the successful formation of the Sherbrooke County Branch of the Association for the Help of Retarded Children (Quebec) Inc. has stimulated fresh interest in this undertaking.

Another effort, Civil Defence, has also received attention. Mrs. J. Ossington, Granby, C.W.I. Citizenship convener, has had several speaking engagements since her course at the Civil Defence College, Arnprior, and has accepted many more for county annual meetings in May.

Next June a chemical company will launch a 90-day contest offering $25,000 for the first bug that does not die after being sprayed with a new insecticide. The money will be paid to any charity named by the sender of the unconquerable bug. It is not anticipated that such a bug will be found but in any case the money will be turned over to a national charity. An advertising campaign in 30 leading daily newspapers will promote the contest.

"Missie of the Jungle"

You can prove anything from statistics!

But Red Cross statistics are different! Facts and figures are cold and dry — but human beings helped out of trouble, human suffering relieved or mitigated, human problems met and solved — these are what the figures in a Red Cross budget stand for.

Through personal experience I've found that people faced with a tough proposition, have a way of turning to Red Cross. That's what happened out in Malaya, a few months ago. The story was briefly reported in our newspapers and the full account came out in the British Red Cross magazine.

The story is about Miss Morfydd Young, a registered nurse from Scotland who went to Malaya with Red Cross. About then, the Department for Protection of the Aborigines was wondering what to do about a jungle tribe called the Che Wong. For several hundred years this aboriginal tribe had lived in their jungle fastness, a strong, healthy, self-supporting group. The aftermath of war and terrorist activities had caught them up in the whirlwind of life "outside". Moved from their original safe habitat, they were drastically reduced by malaria, chest complaints, anaemia and malnutrition.

We often hear people complaining "But what can one person do to change anything?" Red Cross has good reason to answer "Plenty". On the red battle-field of Solferino, one man named Henri Dunant, revolted at the suffering and waste he witnessed, decided to do something about it. The Red Cross came into being through his vision, and the help of one woman: Florence Nightingale. So, out there in Malaya, Red Cross told the Aborigines Department "We'll call for a volunteer to go and live with these people and carry out a health program." Morfydd Young said she'd go.

It meant a trip up river in an outboard motor-boat and then (unarmed and with a token escort to lead the way and carry supplies) a walking 'advance' deep into the jungle to her destination — a collection of mud huts which had only been built a week, and reeked with damp. They sheltered 37 frightened aborigines some of whom were so ill that the Red Cross nurse was afraid they'd die before she could treat them. She bribed them to swallow the pills she'd brought, by giving them chocolates and sweetmeats. She made milk drinks for the children and provided a daily ration of protein. She lived in the largest hut, belonging to the tribal chief. It housed eleven people. The nurse was never allowed to go anywhere alone and unprotected. After several days without a wash she tried to evade her protectors and reach a small trickle of water a short distance from the settlement. Here is her description of it. "Several young men followed me to keep guard with blow-pipes while I, sarong-clad, emptied a coconut shell of water over myself."

The chief's second wife (he had three) insisted on taking complete charge of the nurse's food. She found it uncomfortably filling, but unsatisfying, so that one was perpetually hungry. A tin of sardines which she contributed, constituted a banquet! At first the nurse used sign language. She says "they were much amused whenever I acted my fear and revulsion of snakes, scorpions and leeches. They usually just lifted these horrors out of the way and killed them only when I had a snake at my heels or one among my possessions."

Nurse Young tells of the thrill of seeing the children getting well enough to leave the dark, damp huts where they were lying when she arrived, and go outside to play. apparently, during her two months stay she managed to pick up enough of the aborigines' dialect to take part in community gathering, after dark, to talk of many things.

When the rains came, there were more exciting and hazardous experience for Nurse Young. It's a typical Red Cross story. It ends with the Sultan of Pahang awarding her the Gold Medal for meritorious service. But to Morfydd Young it was reward enough to see her patients' improvement and to know that no deaths occurred during or after her stay with them. She told a reporter she would always be so "grateful for the opportunity to do the job, as it was a such a pleasure." They called her "Missie of the Jungle."

Pat (in restaurant on Friday): "Have you got any shark meat?"

Waitress: "No, sir."

Pat: "Well, have you any whale?"

Waitress: "Of course not, sir."

Pat: "Well, the Lord knows I asked for fish. Give me a good big steak."

FOR PARENTS ONLY...

Your Child's Education

(Copyright) — By NANCY CLEAVER —

Education Week —

Children are learning all the time — at home, in the playground, at school. Their parents, their brothers and sisters, their playmates, their teachers are all imparting knowledge, coaching them in skills. From time to time parents should take a quiet look at their child's intellectual, physical, social and emotional development.

The training of the intellect is much more than the memorization of facts. This is necessary of course, but a scholar must also learn how facts are related to life. A little child does not first learn arithmetic from abstract tables, but from counting concrete objects. He knows that there are two wheels on big brother's bicycle and four wheels on his little wagon. Mother has helped him count the wheels himself, not once but many times . . . "one . . . two; one two, three, four . . . "

The older scholar learns where to look for information and to observe carefully and record accurately what he sees. The teacher opens for him the wonders of the changing seasons, and turns the pages of the Book of Nature. Boys and girls find at school the answers to many of their questions. They are encouraged to think, to arrive at their own conclusions.

Children are not all poured into the same mould. They are not expected to learn at the same rate or reach the same stage of proficiency at one time. The old plan of scholars competing strenuously against each other for the highest standing based on marks is gradually being discarded. The report card, especially in the lower grades shows the scholar's progress as "excellent", "good", "fair" or "poor" in each subject. A child is encouraged each term to do the best work of which he is capable, and to improve in the subjects where he is "weak".

The physical training at schools includes time set aside for organized games and exercises in school yard outside or the gym. Under a competent teacher, boys and girls benefit greatly from this instruction. They also grow in their own ideas of the sensible rules which contribute to good health.

The importance of being able to get along with other people is widely recognized in today's world. Not long ago a prize picture in an American-wide competition was that of a boy with a bandaged head and a black eye sitting on a step disconsolated reading Dale Carnegie's "How To Win Friends and Influence People". Scholars develop as social beings not so much by reading text books, but by working and playing with others. In the projects in the classroom under the teacher's direction, pupils add to their store of knowledge and they also practice co-operating with others towards a definite goal.

A grown-up who is emotionally ill-adjusted cannot be considered a truly educated person. Many of the fears and worries from which men and women suffer can be traced back to unfortunate experiences in childhood. Parents need to give a child the feeling of security which accompanies the knowledge that he is loved and has his own place in the family.

At school he must "take turns" and conform with the rules of good sportsmanship. Gradually a scholar leaves behind temper tantrums, sulking, crying — the explosions he used as a little child when life was too difficult for him. One of the most valuable ways in which a teacher helps a pupil is by giving him the encouragement he needs in order to achieve emotional control.

When using a cloth for waxing, first dampen it and wring dry. This will save a lot of wax which otherwise would be absorbed by the cloth.

Mrs. Roberts was born in Hightown Ringwood, Hampshire, England, and came to Canada with her husband in 1907.

The funeral was held from her late residence at Morin Heights, service being conducted by the Rev. H. G. Baugh in Trinity Anglican Church. The pall-bearers were her two sons, two grandsons and two sons-in-law — Sidney and William Roberts, George and Richard Roberts, Mr. A. Jackson and Mr. H. Mather. Many beautiful flowers gave testimony of high esteem for the deceased.

Historic Model

Vancouver (CP) — One of the most unusual ship models in Canada is on display at the Vancouver City Museum.

A model of the British frigate Amazon, it was made by French prisoners of war about the year 1803, from scraps of bone salvaged from their meat ration at Dartmoor Prison in Devon, England.

The Amazon, an 850-ton, 44-gun frigate that saw service in the Napoleonic wars, took some French prisoners aboard after an engagement with a French ship on July 13, 1797.

Curator Thomas Ainsworth says it is "something of a mystery" how the ship model got to Vancouver. It was probably given to the museum about a half-century ago by an anonymous donor.

On the Dislocation of Agriculture

Argenteuil Agriculturist Answers Academicians

— By Norman Thorburn —

Once before, I took issue with the thinking of the professors. Again, I cannot say I entirely agree with Dr. Dion in his views on farming, expressed recently to the Farm Forums of this district.

Dr. Dion said, "The greatest improvement in the farmer's position will come with the development of somewhat larger, more efficient units, using more machines and fewer man-hours per unit of production."

The capital invested in these farms would be at least $40,000, sometimes much more. The farmer will no longer be a peasant, but a member of the bourgeoisie; indeed, many farmers are that already.

Now let us examine the other side of the picture. What of the poor displaced farmer forced by fierce competition off his land? In most cases he will join, as those already displaced have joined, the ranks of the industrial workers or proletariat, and this in the age of automation, when whole factories are being run by electronic devices.

In the depression, industrial workers were thrown out of work wholesale. Many were glad to work for the farmer for a pittance. If a depression should take place a few years hence, on the highly mechanized farms there would be no need for these men.

Bruce Hutchison, one of Canada's best writers, who examines all sides of a question, has this to say; "In recent years many thousands of Quebec farmers have left their farms to join the ranks of the proletariat. We can expect in Quebec a strong leftist trend in the future." In other words he believes the displacement of Quebec farmers is enhancing the danger of communism.

Displaced farmers in industry are just as keen as their fellow-workers for a 30-hour week, more take-home pay, fringe benefits, a guaranteed annual wage, closed shop, etc.

The farmer today does not need so much hired help on the farm, but he is now called upon to pay $2.00 or $3.00 an hour for thousands of unseen helpers in machine shops. He is the real bourgeois, the real employer of these people, for the farmer pays their wages; when they strike he pays them more.

I heard a most lacrimose discussion on the radio, a few days ago, by a disgruntled worker in industry. A fire had destroyed his home, his eldest son had taken sick, consuming all his wages for hospitalization; finally, totally discouraged, his wife had left him with four children, whom he had placed in the hands of the Children's Welfare Society.

I remember, in the depression, French-Canadian farmers lived on very poor farms, but they were happy and contented with their large families.

I am firmly convinced that the present trend to large-scale farming will end in a system of state-controlled collective farms.

Last year Pope Pius XII and the Catholic hierarchy of this province deplored the exodus of so many farmers from the land. A great moral and social wrong was being committed. I agree with this view 100 per cent. They know that displacing farmers is like adding fodder to the mills of the Marxists.

A New Zealand labor leader said some time ago. "We owe much to the Russian Revolution, whether we like it or not." Governments have been granting social security to the people ever since, in order to appease the leftists.

Two Jews have influenced our times more than any other men — Albert Einstein, the author of the Atomic Age, and Karl Marx, the author of Communism. These two unhappy, ailing Israelites paved the way for the present conditions of our society. But about these two great men, the average Canadian knows practically nothing. The mathematics of Einstein is too difficult. The reading of Marx is certainly not encouraged here. Strangely, Karl Marx disliked the Russians.

Marx chose to live in England, there he wrote his great works, Das Kapital and the Communist Manifesto, with a flock of children crawling over him, pulling his shaggy beard. All his children died in early life. Then his wife died. An English nurse looked after him in his last years, propped his pillows, mopped his sweating brow in his dying moments . . . and lies buried near his grave.

Thus Karl Marx lived in England, worked in England, died in England and lies in an English grave. On the day of his birth, and on the day of his death, English admirers place a blanket of roses — the red, red roses of Old England — on his tomb.

Sleep well, Karl Marx, in your English bed, in that land you could not have hated; they have cradle-to-grave social security. And in Canada across the sea, many thousands of eliminated farmers will bring nearer the day of world-wide dictatorship of the proletariat.

I believe in social security for the masses, myself; but true to my breed which came from the misty islands in the North Sea, I hate dictatorship, whether of the left or of the right.

Have You A Question on UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE OR EMPLOYMENT?

In this column we publish questions about unemployment insurance and employment, together with answers received from the Unemployment Insurance Commission.

If you are uncertain about any point do not hesitate to send your question to your district Unemployment Insurance office. We will obtain an answer and publish it in this column.

Q. Can an employer decrease the salary of his employee without notifying the Unemployment Insurance Commission, and purchase stamps on the new salary basis?

A. Yes. The Unemployment Insurance Commission has no jurisdiction over salaries, their whole concern being to ensure that proper contributions are made for the salary paid.

Q. I work in the bush. My employer laid me off because I was not satisfied with the scaling of the wood and asked that it be checked. When I left my employer wrote as a reason for my leaving that I was unsatisfactory. This is a handicap to my getting any work elsewhere and also to drawing unemployment insurance benefit. Has an employer the right to do that with an employee? Can the Commission conduct an inquiry on the matter?

A. If the employer meant your work was unsatisfactory and there was no question of misconduct, you would not be disqualified from the receipt of benefit. The employer in so far as the Unemployment Insurance Commission is concerned must report truthfully the reason for your leaving. The Unemployment Insurance Commission does not conduct inquiries in this connection but does satisfy itself that the reasons for separation do or do not warrant disqualification.

"This I Believe"

If every one who drives a car
Could lie a month in bed
With broken bones and ugly wounds
Or fractures in the head.
And then endure the agonies
That many people do,
They'd never need preach safety
Any more to me, or you.

If every one could stand beside
The bed of some dear friend,
And hear the doctor say "No hope"
Before the fatal end,
And see him there unconscious,
Never knowing what took place.
The laws and rules of traffic
I'm sure we'd soon embrace.

If every one could meet the wife
And children with dad gone,
And step into the darkened home
Where happy faces shone,
And look upon the vacant chair
Where dad was wont to sit —
I'm sure each reckless driver
Would be forced to think a bit.

If everyone who takes the wheel
Would say a little prayer,
And keep in mind those in the car
Entrusted in his care,
And make a vow and pledge himself
Never to take a chance;
The great crusade for safety
Would suddenly advance.

Civil Defence—Provincial Responsibility

Fourth of a series of 24 articles

The 10 provincial governments in Canada would be responsible for a sort of family-like co-operation among their communities should a nuclear war ever hit this continent. Meanwhile, during this time of peace the provinces' job is to make such co-operation possible should emergency conditions arise.

The latest civil defence thinking has underlined this duty of the provinces heavier than others. For evacuation of cities likely to be hit by the enemy with the unbelievable destruction of the H-bomb now is considered the only really safe defence against annihilation. But where are these people from the cities to go? How are they to get there? Those are questions the provinces must answer. They are seeking the solutions now. They appear in several steps.

First the provincial governments had to create their own civil defence organizations. This was done following conferences among federal and provincial authorities in 1950-51 and regularly since. Each province now has a functioning C.D. organization within the framework of its government. Each has a cabinet minister responsible for C.D. and a provincial co-ordinator. Their staffs vary according to how actively the province participates.

Canada's constitution is such that communication between various governmental levels runs from the federal through the provincial to the municipal or local. This places responsibility on the province for co-ordinating the efforts of its communities into the plan for the whole country.

The province must help its communities organize their own C.D. setups; it must keep municipalities informed of the latest developments and provide training of civil defence volunteers within the province. It also must provide the legislation necessary for local authorities to operate; that is, it must delegate the necessary authority to carry out a civil defence operation.

Advance warning of an impending attack would come through the provincial facilities from the federal organization and should communications on a national scale be interrupted, the provincial organization would have to supply direction for local plans.

What about the money necessary for equipment, training and organization centres? The province is responsible for assisting in this way, too. It can get financial help from the federal government which will match provincial contributions on a dollar-for-dollar basis up to an amount based on the population of each province. If the province agrees (the federal government, under the constitution, cannot work directly with the municipality unless the province allows it) the federal C.D. organization can contribute 25 per cent of a local project's costs. Then if the province puts in 25 per cent, the federal contribution will be increased by another 25 per cent, leaving the municipality with the other 25 per cent of the cost to pay. Beyond this federal assistance the province must go itself.

The big job of each province, however, is to organize reception areas to take in people evacuated from cities likely to be bombed. These will be towns and villages ringing the target cities. Because of the destructive power of the new weapons these reception areas must be not less than 50 and may be up to 100 miles from the city.

The province must organize routes to be taken to these reception areas, seeing that the first arrivals go to the farthest area. These areas would have to provide food and shelter from weather as well as radioactive fallout that might be carried by winds from the target area. These facilities must be capable of caring for the evacuees for at least 48 hours, probable time for any fall-out's radiation dangers to disappear. If the radiation danger, determined by C.D. radiation detection teams, were stronger, the reception areas would have to be equipped to decontaminate personnel.

Should whole cities be made uninhabitable, their residents after the bombing would have to be re-established in new communities, posing new problems that would fall again under provincial jurisdiction.

Two Grim Mishaps Retold At Delayed Inquests Into Three Local Traffic Deaths

Two mishaps in the St. Philippe area last August, in which three persons lost their lives, were recalled last Wednesday evening when the district coroner, Dr. Jules Lafleur, presided over the inquests into the deaths. "Accident" verdicts were rendered in both instances.

Elderly Man Fatality Victim

The first inquiry was into an accident which claimed the life of Joseph Alderic Brisebois, 77, of Magog, on Saturday evening, August 13.

According to the testimony presented, the automobile in which the victim was driving was driven by André Laporte, 20, of Rosemount, who stated that he lost control of his car while taking a curve and crashed into a one-ton truck loaded with apples and tomatoes, driven by Marcel Laviolette, of St. Eustache. Laviolette declared that he saw the auto headed towards him and he pulled off to the side of the road. The truck was hit near the left front wheel. The Laviolette truck was further damaged when struck from behind by a car driven by George Crowe, of Mimico, Ont., who was following the vehicle.

The pavement was wet and slippery at the time of the accident.

Witnesses testifying at the inquest were Mr. and Mrs. Albert Laporte (not related to the driver of the death car), daughter and son-in-law of the victim; their daughter Rita, girl-friend of the driver; André Laporte; Mr. and Mrs. George Crowe; Traffic Officer Howard Jones, who reported on conditions and details at the accident scene; and Syd Drew, photographer.

The jury returned a verdict of accidental death, but recommended that the authorities re-make the stretch of road in question, or at least re-pave the highway with a less slippery surface.

Couple Killed and Two Gravely Injured

The second inquest concerned the deaths of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Beaudoin, of Ste. Rose de Lima, which occurred the day after the Brisebois fatality. Five different vehicles were involved in this crash, and besides the two fatalities, several passengers were sent to hospital, some with serious injuries.

According to the evidence, it appeared that Beaudoin was attempting to pass an unidentified car when he crashed head-on into an automobile driven by Alderic Leblanc, 60, accompanied by his wife. Leblanc suffered two broken legs, a fractured arm and ribs, and lost his right eye. Mrs. Leblanc is still a patient in hospital.

Leblanc was the main witness and stated that the accident had occurred before he realized what was happening. He saw the Beaudoin car headed towards him, but could do nothing to avoid the impact.

The other cars involved in the accident were driven by Jean-Guy Pepin and Raymond Vogin, both of Montreal, and Raymond Larocque of Hawkesbury. This latter car, owned by Max Rubenstein, struck a post and catapulted into a field in order to avoid hitting the other cars.

The above-mentioned involved in the accident, as well as passengers in the various cars, and Syd Drew, local photographer, all gave evidence.

Coroner Dr. Jules Lafleur pointed out to the jury that they could not hold a dead man responsible for the accident, and that therefore the only verdict remaining was that of accidental death. This was the verdict rendered, and the jury made no further recommendations.

Parish Priest At St. Andrews Died Suddenly

Canon J. A. Dulude

Canon Joseph Alderic Dulude, curé of St. Andrews Parish for the past 30 years, died suddenly last Thursday in his presbytery. He was in his 75th year.

The death of the well-known parish priest was indirectly attributed to last Thursday's storm. He walked to the post-office around noon, returning to his residence, where his sister found him dead a short time later. It is believed that the deep snow fatigued him and over-exertion caused his sudden passing.

Born at Chambly Basin in 1881, Canon Dulude attended the Champlain School in Montreal, later continuing studies at the Sulpician Seminary, Montreal. He was ordained December 23, 1905.

Canon Dulude last December celebrated his golden anniversary in the priesthood, as well as his 30th anniversary at St. Andrews East. Prior to his arrival at St. Andrews, he had held several positions in the Montreal area.

He was elevated to the canonship by his Excellency Mgr. Emilien Frenette, Bishop of the St. Jerome diocese, last autumn.

Two religious services were held Monday morning at St. Andrews, with fitting tributes and funeral rites.

Wolf or Dog? Opinions Differ On Identity

Experts, would-be experts and curious citizens have been exchanging opinions on a "wolf" killed recently in Upper Lachute. Last Saturday afternoon several Upper Lachute residents, accompanied by hounds, commenced a hunt that resulted in Kenneth Clark downing what appears to be a Russian or black wolf. The animal, which was running at large, weighs 57 pounds, has hair 7½ inches long on the back of its neck, and has some white marking on its breast — the latter giving some people the impression that it was not a wolf but a dog.

The hunt on Saturday commenced at the rear of the Clark farm in the early afternoon. Kenneth Clark, who happened to be home at the time, noticed the black animal streaking across a nearby field towards the highway, the hounds hot in pursuit.

The hounds were called off the chase after following the animal about a mile, when the wolf made a temporary get-away by crossing the river. The hunters would not allow the hounds to cross the river due to deer yarding in that area.

The Clark brothers, Kenneth and Irvin, followed the animal and the former felled it with a shotgun, and Irvin made sure of the kill a few minutes later. Residents in the vicinity state they had seen this animal on previous occasions.

Local Game Warden Fernando Lamarche examined the specimen yesterday and stated it was definitely a black wolf. Game Warden Gordon Cooke, of Arundel, is expected to view the animal today.

Duplessis Appears "Most Satisfied" with Conference

Quebec (CP) — Premier Duplessis and a four-man delegation of cabinet ministers attended the Federal-Provincial fiscal conference in Ottawa. Their departure was slightly delayed by cancellation of air flights last Thursday, but the party left by train a few hours later.

Following the one-day get-together of provincial premiers and Federal authorities, Mr. Duplessis appeared to be the most satisfied of all the premiers with the "take it or leave it" stand which Ottawa adopted on fiscal proposals.

The other premiers, for the most part, registered varying degrees of annoyance at Ottawa's rejection of their respective proposals for changes in the proposed tax-sharing plan. Mr. Duplessis, however, termed the Federal plan "an important step in the right direction."

A table released by federal authorities at the conference showed that under the proposed new arrangements, revenues available to the province of Quebec in 1957-58 would total $182,375,000 compared with $139,535,000 available in tax-rental payments in 1956-57.

Particulars of Lachute's $21,700 Bond Issue

The Provincial Department of Municipal Affairs gave authorization to the Town of Lachute to sell $21,700 of five-year 4 per cent serial bonds over the counter, at par. The sale was made en bloc to the Caisse Populaire, Lachute.

The bonds, which are dated May 1, 1955, may be called prior to maturity, and have half-yearly interest coupons. The loan was effected for the consolidation of capital expenditures made previously and authorized by By-law 199, which was approved by a majority vote of the property-owners last December.

The municipality's last bond issue was marketed in February of last year, when the Corporation sold $38,500 of 4 per cent ten-year serials, also at par.

Brownsburg Village Secretary Replaced After 21 Years of Efficient Service

Brownsburg — The second part of the Council meeting for March was held Monday night, and the first item of business was insurance. Two years ago the Corporation changed from one insurance company to another because of a wider coverage offered by the second company. A representative of the former company was present Monday night to point out that his company could have given the added coverage had they been asked. The councillors felt that, in view of the fact that the former company had given good coverage and service for 11 years, the business should be given back to them at the time of the next renewal so long as the local man, Mr. S. Thompson, handled the business.

On the two vacancies, the Police Chief's job was discussed first. Councillor Maurice Pariseau proposed that Roland Harding be appointed, since he is a local man, young and agile and anxious to learn. Mayor Lepine pointed out that, much as he'd like to see the young local man in the position, he felt that experience was the very first requisite. Councillor Golphin moved that Willie Lepine, assistant chief at Lachute, be appointed. Councillor Lavoie seconded, and the Council accepted without opposition. The new Chief will assume duties April 1 at a salary of $3,300, on condition of one month's notice of termination either way.

The position of Secretary-Treasurer was discussed next. The point that Roland Hebert had fully learned the job was discussed at length, but the councillors felt that Vincent Charbonneau would soon learn the job, and Councillor Lavoie moved that Mr. Charbonneau be appointed. Councillor Ouellette seconded, and Mr. Charbonneau was appointed to the vacancy.

Small items were cleared up. A license for pool and billiards at the Social Club was approved by the Council, and application will be made to Quebec. The secretary was asked to notify Mr. Primeau, of Café Marquise, that when clearing his parking lot he must not sweep snow onto Bank Street, a public thoroughfare.

Councillor Harris proposed that, in view of the fact that the budget had to be raised to $1.25 — a measure that was unanimously approved — we should study the possibility of resurrecting the head-tax, which is already a by-law. A change in the provincial law allows for the imposition of this tax without granting a voting franchise to those taxed. The matter will be discussed at the next meeting in more detail, but the feeling was that outsiders earn good wages in Brownsburg, come and go without ever spending a dime in town, yet take full advantage of snow-plowing, street lighting, sidewalks, etc. A figure of $5 per annum was mentioned.

The police convener, Councillor Lavoie, discussed the near-riot which took place at the Arena on Saturday night. A penalized player in the Alfred - Calumet game became involved with a spectator and the brawl spread till 30 or 40 people, players and spectators, became entangled in the mêlée. Acting-Police Chief Lepine jumped on the ice and with one revolver shot (a blank) stopped the rhubarb. He then ordered everyone out of the Arena, causing the game to be stopped in the second period. The councillors commended him for his action, at the same time mentioning that in such a position the policeman can use any loyal citizen as a deputy and the persons called upon to assist must do so, under penalty of $25 fine.

The Mayor closed the meeting by saying that if the new secretary would be "three-quarters as efficient as the resigning Mr. Hebert, we would be very well satisfied." The councillors recorded a unanimous vote of thanks to Mr. Herbert for his 21 years as secretary-treasurer of Brownsburg.

IMPROVING METHOD OF HANDLING FOOD

Prince Albert, Sask. (CP) — The Prince Albert region has taken a hand in educating food caterers in proper and safe handling of food.

A special school for those interested in catering was conducted by the health region under a senior sanitary health region employee.

"The public is becoming more aware of the need for better food handling methods," said A. A. Ball, senior sanitarian. Particular stress was placed on members of groups who occasionally cater to service club and church groups.

Police Chief for Brownsburg

Brownsburg Police Chief W. Lepine — appointed to that position Monday evening by the municipality. Chief Lepine ceases his duties on the Lachute force this evening, and will commence in Brownsburg on or before Sunday, April 1.

Spring Activities Outlined by Concerts Executive

An executive meeting of Community Concerts on Tuesday evening set dates for their spring activities and drew up a slate of key appointments, prior to the formal election of officers.

The meeting was held at the clinic of Dr. Marc Papineau, with Mrs. W. M. Cottingham (president) and Richard Valois (joint secretary) and a small group of directors in attendance to meet the Columbia Artists representative, Mr. Maltais.

It was decided the annual meeting and campaign opening would be held Tuesday, April 10, when canvassers will receive instructions and material. Election of officers will also be held at this general meeting. The campaign supper and social rally of workers will be held Monday, April 16. Mr. Maltais will be on hand and will remain in Lachute to promote and assist in the official campaign week.

During that week the final concert of the current season (April 18) will feature attractive Beverly Bower, soprano, at Lachute High School; and it is anticipated there will be keen enthusiasm among the workers and members to assure the progress of this movement and another successful season in 1956-57. A number of available bookings, including some interesting musical groups, were discussed with the representative here Tuesday evening.

Observer Corps Instructions On Weather Balloons

F/O. D. J. Veasey, Detachment Commander over the local unit of the RCAF Ground Observer Corps, has forwarded the following message relative to the sighting or finding of any large meteorological balloons, which all corps members and citizens are requested to be on the look-out for:

"The USAF plans to continue 'Moby Dick' type meteorological surveys. The purpose of this program is to obtain meteorological observations of jet stream activity, frontal systems, and electromagnetic radiations. The equipment to record and photograph the above is contained in a box-shaped gondola approximately three feet square. The gondola is transported by a large gas-filled plastic balloon about eighty feet long. Printed on the side is a placard in English, French and dialects, stating:

"This box came from the sky. It is harmless. It has weather information in it. Notify the authorities. You will receive a valuable reward when you turn it in as it is.

"The balloon and gondola normally operate above thirty thousand feet and when it descends below twenty-eight thousand feet the gondola automatically releases and parachutes down, with blinking red lights.

"It is estimated that several of these high altitude research balloons may be blown on Canadian territory. If so, you are requested to report the sighting of them and should any of them come down in Canada, all information on locating them should be passed to the local Ground Observer Corps of the RCAF."

Build Extension To CPR Express Lachute Depot

A CPR work-crew commenced work Tuesday on an extension to the station on Berry Street, to be used exclusively for the Canadian Pacific Express Company — according to Keith Hickson, local Express agent. The 30-foot extension will adjoin the westerly end of the station building. The architecture will follow the design of the present structure and it is expected that the construction will be completed within three months.

Approximately half of the present Express Office and warehouse will be used for office space, while the remainder, in addition to the new building, will provide warehouse space. There will also be three basement rooms for additional storage, etc.

The new premises will afford safer protection for express consignments, while also providing better facilities for the public and more working space for the employees.

W. Inst. Branches Review Work at Annual Meetings

All Women's Institute branches reported holding annual meetings, with election of officers for 1956-1957. The various conveners' reports tell of a very active and successful year.

Arundel: Twenty-six members paid their annual fees. The 1955 W.I. Scholarship certificate was presented to Margaret Graham by the 1st vice-president, Mrs. E. Bulley, on Education Night, and the annual prizes of books, donated by the Women's Institute, were presented to the pupils this week by the president, Mrs. G. Cooke.

Brownsburg: This branch held its annual "pot-luck supper". Greetings were given by the county president, Mrs. M. Crosby; Mrs. B. Enlow, president of Legion 71 Auxiliary; and Mrs. J. A. Donaldson, 1st vice-president of the Red Cross.

Several members of this branch attended the Agriculture Salon at the Show Mart, Montreal. Sums of $5 were donated to both the Girl Guides and the Boy Scouts.

A committee was elected to plan catering for the Scout Rally, to be held in May.

Jerusalem - Bethany: Seventeen members answered the roll-call by naming the most enjoyable W.I. event during the past year. The sum of $10 was donated to the Red Cross.

Morin Heights: Several tea towels were brought in by members, to be donated to the school cafeteria.

Pioneer: The meeting date of this branch has been changed to the first Tuesday of every month. Fifteen members paid their fees. A pantry shower and presentation of kitchen utensils was given for a member who suffered loss in a fire. The new program was drawn up for 1956-1957.

Council Back-tracks on Main St. Frontage Line

Discussions on Police Radio Equipment, Auditor's Report and Bookkeeping Changes

A building permit giving M. G. Assaly & Son authorization to erect a commercial building 13 feet from the sidewalk, was rescinded at the regular March meeting of Lachute Town Council held last Wednesday — at which time a new permit authorizing the construction at three feet from the sidewalk was granted, construction to commence immediately.

The motion, made by Ald. Mozart Carrière, was seconded by Ald. Romain Desjardins and passed on a 6-1 vote — Ald. Dr. Roger Lavigne voicing his disapproval to the motion. (Aldermen Ross R. Muir and Edgar O. Pollock were absent from the meeting.)

Mr. Assaly stated that following his application for a permit, he would have accepted a decision of six feet from the sidewalk, in order to speed up construction but he pointed out that he had been held up more than five weeks with the decision on 13 feet. He added that, several days after the original decision, he received a letter signed by Mayor Dr. FitzGerald and all the aldermen, changing the line to six feet.

Ald. Dr. Lavigne pointed out that, after considerable time and effort had been spent in studying the situation, the Council saw fit to grant a permit at 13 feet, which they later changed to six feet. "Now we talk of changing this decision to three feet; and if Mr. Assaly comes back next week and wants to build next to the sidewalk, we will have to grant him that request," he added, in opposing the motion.

The Roads Committee report relative to widening of the west section of Main Street West in centretown, was tabled for further study.

Assistant Chief Appointed

Ald. Stanley Church, Polic Committee chairman, proposed that Cst. Oscar Sabourin be appointed Assistant Chief of Police, his salary to remain the same for the present time. The motion was seconded by Ald. Romain Desjardins and passed unanimously.

Representatives from the Pye Radio Company and the Bell Telephone Company were in attendance at the meeting, in connection with the radio system installed in the police and fire vehicles. The Pye system has been used for the past five months on a trial basis, at no cost to the town.

The Pye representative informed the Council on some of the advantages of the set, and pointed out the small amount of trouble the Corporation had had since its installation. Police Chief Fernand Trepanier was asked his opinion of the set, and stated he was more than satisfied with the system in question, adding that he had been supplied with a similar outfit from the same company while in the service of the RCMP.

Buy or Rent Service

The service representative, who stated the price for the Pye set was $2,100, added that the company had no objection to a local firm servicing the equipment if he has the proper equipment.

The Bell Telephone representative gave a rental price of $147.25 per month for the necessary equipment, adding that this included installation and maintenance. One of the main features of the Bell set, it was pointed out, is that efficient, authorized Bell maintenance men are resident here in Lachute. The equipment remains Bell Telephone Company property and, as such, there is no depreciation cost to the corporation.

Conclusion of this matter was tabled until next meeting, when a positive decision will be taken.

Temporary Secretary Appointed

In an effort to stabilize the corporation office staff, Jacques Poitras was appointed temporary secretary-treasurer, with no increase in salary; it was decided to continue to employ Germain Filion as financial advisor and office clerk, at reduced hours and a salary of $30 per week.

Authorization was given Secretary Poitras to employ an office assistant, with the approval of the Finance Committee chairman, Ald. Romain Desjardins.

Ald. Judes E. Charlebois renewed his notice of motion that, at the next regular session, he would present for adoption a by-law zoning the McGibbon sub-division.

The Lachute Curling Club was granted permission for parking of cars on both sides of Harriett Street, from March 31 to April 14, during the period of the Spring Bonspiel — with provisions left to the Police Committee. It was suggested that the time limit for parking on both sides of the street be from 4 p.m. until midnight, and that

Busy Lines As Result of Snow Storm

The local Bell Telephone manager, Roland Dupuy, reports that last Thursday's snowstorm caused but minor damage; but the storm had telephone operators working at full-speed with a total of 25,604 calls to attend to during that period.

The figure is slightly higher than calls placed through the local exchange at Christmas of last year, when a local record was set. The average number of calls per day is approximately 17,000.

The busy period continued several days after the storm. On Friday, a total of 22,942 calls were registered, while there were 21,172 calls made on Saturday. (These figures include all local and long-distant calls handled by local operators, both incoming and outgoing.)

In the first nine months of last year there were 1,789 business failures in Canada, compared to 1,706 in the same period of 1954.

OTTAWA BAND AND LOCAL UNITS FOR ST. PATRICK'S DAY PARADE

An added attraction to the various March 17 activities of this town will be a St. Patrick's Day Parade — an innovation for Lachute.

Featured in the procession will be a bugle band from St. Patrick's College, Ottawa. The same band is appearing in the parade in Montreal on Sunday, and consequently the young bandsmen will remain here in town as guests of the Catholic Women's League members, energetic sponsors of this parade. The band comprises 40 boys from the ages of 11 to 17. If weather permits they will wear their colorful uniforms of green and gold (their school colors).

Various local units will also take part in the parade, including: the 131st Battery of the 37th Field Regiment, under direction of Captain Lawrence Robinson and Sgt.-Major Dick MacLean; the Lachute Highland Cadets, under direction of Captain Gordon Tabrett; the Lachute Boy Scouts, under Scoutmaster Tom Smith; and possibly other groups, not yet ascertained.

The parade will commence at 3.30 p.m. at Muir Bros. Service Station, proceeding west on Main Street past the Auditorium, over the railroad tracks and up Mary Street to Bedard Boulevard. They will turn left along the boulevard to Bethany Street, and north down Bethany to disband at the starting point, Muir's Service Station.

It is hoped that the townspeople (Irish or not) will turn out to witness this parade and encourage the spirit of the celebration.

Local Girl in Airforce

Although the medical inspection room at the RCAF's No. 1 Supply Depot at Downsview, near Toronto, is not very large it does have all the facilities to take care of the medical needs of the personnel stationed there. A medical officer, nursing sister and four assistants comprise the staff. Assisting in the medical section prior to attending a technical training course at Aylmer, Ont., is AW2 Joan Quinn, 18, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. Quinn, Mary Street, Lachute. A medical assistant, AW2 Quinn joined the Air Force a little over three months ago.

Safety in the Home

The Mayor and Counil of the City of Hull have ordered an inspection of every building within that Municipality, in an effort to locate and eliminate conditions that might put lives and property in danger from fire.

The horrible fatalities of this winter season have made us all uneasily conscious of the perils that may lie in a familiar domestic setting.

While defective heating apparatus carries with it grave risk of fire, over-loaded wiring circuits are extremely dangerous.

When a fuse blows it is a dramatic signal of an overloaded circuit. It may be that inadequate wiring in your premises is unable to stand the pace of today's electrical living.

This Company urges its customers to afford the inspecting officers every opportunity to make thorough examinations, and, as the Mayor of Hull has stated, to show eagerness to correct such things as defective wiring, faulty heating apparatus and worn-out pipes, and any other conditions which might cause fires.

Holstein Breeders' Annual Meeting, Quebec Branch

A campaign to eliminate Bang's Disease among Holstein cattle will have to be intensified if Canadian and Quebec farmers want to keep their export market in the United States.

This was the unanimous conclusion of cattle breeders at the 21st annual meeting of the Quebec Branch of the Holstein-Friesian Association of Canada in the Queen's Hotel, Montreal, on Monday last.

Harold Wilson, Retiring President

Retiring President Harold Wilson, of Lachute, strongly recommended that breeders have their herds tested for Bang's Disease and their calves vaccinated as soon as possible.

Holstein cattle breeders exported 17,924 head last year, but if they neglect to comply with the increasing health requirements of the American cattle market, Mr. Wilson predicted this figure would drop in a year or two.

In numbers, Holstein cattle predominate over other breeds in Quebec, where they were introduced from Holland about 1880 and bred by the late Neil Sangster on his Ormstown farm.

Quebec now boasts 42,665 head of pure-bred Holsteins, exceeded only in Canada by Ontario.

Hermas Lajoie, secretary-treasurer of the Quebec branch, urged members to bring their butter and cheese wrappings up-to-date and advertise more if they wanted to meet the conditions of the present-day market. He said 35 per cent of Canada's population live off revenue from dairy production and that if income for the cattle farmer dropped it would eventually affect city workers. He suggested a campaign to boost milk and dairy product consumption.

Master breeder certificates were awarded to Lucien Blanchette, of St. Hyacinthe, and Ernest Croteau, of St. Paul de Chester.

The Association branch membership numbers 1,540 persons in Quebec.

Father-Son Agreements In Farm Families

Father-son agreements are becoming a popular method of farm transfers, judging by the replies of 800 Farm Forums which recently discussed this topic. One-half the Forums across Canada reported that one or more of their members had agreements. The average number of agreements per Forum was two.

The Forums stressed four basic requirements for the success of a father-son partnership. There should be a written agreement drawn up before a notary or lawyer. A decision must be reached as to whether the farm will provide an adequate income for two families. There must be mutual trust and co-operation, and separte living accommodation should be provided for the married son.

In addition, 17 per cent of the Forums agreed with the West Lateral Forum in British Columbia, that there should be a complete understanding of financial and administrative arrangements. A smaller number, like the Wyman Forum in Quebec, mentioned the importance of taking inventory of all farm property and keeping accurate business records.

The most satisfactory method of transferring the farm business to the son, according to 30 per cent of the Forums, is to state in the partnership a definite date for the transfer. However, the interest of both partners must be protected.

Both partners should make wills. The Longburn Forum in Manitoba said, "The farm should be deeded to the son with the father receiving an income in accordance with the same." Others favored rental arrangements and agreed with the Aplomb Forum in Alberta, "They should contain an automatic renewal clause whereby in case of the father's death the son would not lose his lease, also have the option to buy."

Don't forget other members in the family — the Forums cautioned.

4-H Contests

Hundreds of 4-H members of the Province of Quebec have registered in the 16 contests open to them this year. These contests have been organized in view of giving the 4-H members an opportunity to improve their knowledge in every branch of the natural sciences and of making them conscious of the importance of the natural resources of the land.

These contests, dealing with the use of electricity, forest protection, handicraft, reforestation, sylviculture, embellishment, embroidery, sewing, cooking, etc., bring the provincial winners certain scholarships of $200 and gold medals. Awards given by various sponsors and presented on the occasion of the 4-H Annual Provincial Convention, which wil-itake place in August 1956.

during that time the street be made a one-way thoroughfare.

It was decided that 20-minute parking would be permitted in front of George Y. Deacon's store except during rush hours (11.30 to 1.30 and 5.30 to 6.30), when "no parking" would be in force.

The Police Committee was authorized to employ a constable to replace Assistant Chief W. Lepine, working in co-operation with Mayor Dr. FitzGerald and Police Chief Trepanier.

Authorization was granted Ald. Ross Muir to send the master meter from the chlorination plant to the manufacturers for checking.

Social Service Problems

Ald. Dr. Lavigne was requested to look into the possibility of moving the Social Service office to the basement of the civic building, and several other minor matters were discussed.

Roland Dupuy, local manager of the Bell Telephone Company, enlightened the Council on possible changes to the phone system presently in use in the civic building — the question having been brought up in an effort to cut expenses. He stated that, at the time of installation, the system presently in use was what was then required, and added that the requirements had not changed in that period. "As it is a question of finance more than efficiency, I have two other different systems to offer, both less costly, but also less efficient and flexible. Both will give you service — just the same as a bicycle will give you transportation."

Mr. Dupuy went on to explain the various systems and it was finally decided to keep the present set-up, cutting one of the three lines and one extension phone, which will realize a saving of approximately $15 a month.

Daylight Saving Time Adopted

It was decided that Daylight Saving Time would be put into effect April 29 at 12.01 a.m., and would continue until September 30.

A building permit was granted Jean-Claude Filion, for the construction of a house on Hamelin Street, Lachute Mills.

Accounts totalling $11,504.68 were approved for payment.

A vote of sympathy was moved to Ald. Ross R. Muir and family, in the loss of Mr. Muir's sister, Mrs. Richard MacAdam.

A financial statement was presented for the first two months of the year, all committees having operated within their budget for that period.

Auditor's Report Accepted

The auditor's report for the year ending December 31, 1956, was approved and adopted on a motion by Ald. Romain Desjardins, seconded by Ald. Mozart Carrière, after which the firm of Thos. C. Corry were re-appointed auditors for the current year. Service fees are the same as last year, $600, and a one-half year statement in both languages is included in this fee.

Accountant Gordon Tabrett, local representative of this firm, stated that he had been discussing the corporation books with Messrs. Poitras and Filion, and that several changes in the system had already been made, commencing at the start of the present year. He pointed out that the method of recording receipts and disbursements had been changed, a wholesale reorganization of the General Ledger had been made — both in an effort to give more details at a glance.

Changes in Progress

"I hope that at the end of the year we will have sufficient information to make a major change; and if we don't have what we want by that time, we at least will know exactly what we do need." He added that he had a plan in mind for next year and suggested that, in the future, the Catholic School tax be kept separate from the corporation account.

A letter was received from the CNIB requesting permission to use the auditorium for the week commencing March 19, when an eye clinic would be held for local citizens. This request was granted, as was a donation of $25 to the Red Cross campaign.

The meeting was adjourned to the call of the chair.

In Blood and Tears

IN LACHUTE last week, the evidence heard at two coroner's inquests unfolded a pitiful story — events as grim as the bloodiest dramas recited in the cause of highway safety.

The two tragedies, dating back to last August, involved a number of cars and vehicles, and claimed three lives, all in the same stretch of highway near St. Philippe.

In one case there is the example of a bereaved and disrupted family. In the other (a gruesome mix-up involving five vehicles) there is the picture of a couple killed; another couple suffering multiple fractures and grave injuries — the husband, who gave evidence, having also lost his right eye, and the wife being still a patient in hospital; and several other victims injured. Apart from the actual loss of life, one can vaguely visualize the torment, suffering, permanent impairment, and devastating expense sustained by the surviving victims . . . and it is a sorry story to re-tell, so long after the immediate crash of glass and metal, and the horror of spilled blood.

The fact that the inquiry in these two cases was so long delayed, is explained by the extent of the injuries, having incapacitated the available witnesses.

This narrative might have a more telling effect at the outset of the motoring season — say a month or two from now. True-life drama carries an impact more effective than films and storybooks, and it might be well for some of our readers to dwell upon last summer's highway toll, and keep such instances as these in memory through the coming season.

Not For Us !

THE RESTAURANT on St. Helen's Island is the scene, right now, of an exhibition of non-objective art. The abstract painters of Montreal include all sorts of incomprehensible types — "the automatists, plasticians, surrealists, abstract impressionists and abstract expressionists" — all the isms most alarming to us simple art-for-pleasure addicts. We are well satisfied to imagine the result.

Such fanciful creations have a place in Canada's culture (no doubt). St. Helen's Island isn't the easiest place to get to; and may we add, while risking the ire of these enthusiasts, it's a mighty good place for their exhibiton!

Textiles Considered Stabilizing Factor

THE PROBLEM of seasonal unemployment is one of the many matters being considered by the Royal Commission on Canada's Economic Prospects, and in this connection a brief submitted on behalf of the textile industry of Canada has some interesting paragraphs.

Textile employment, it is pointed out, tends to exert a leveling influence on seasonal variations in manufacturing and other industrial employment. The annual peak in textile employment comes during the winter months when construction and other industries normally experience a decline.

This does not mean that any large exchange of workers takes place between the textile industry and other industries of a heavier nature. There is a high proportion of female workers in the textile industry, and in any case the skills of textile craftsmen are not readily acquired by other workers and are not easily transferred to other occupations.

It does mean, however, that the presence of a textile plant in any community, such as Lachute, has the effect of spreading the distribution of earnings in the community more evenly throughout the year.

THE INCREASE of population during the coming quarter of a century will take place almost entirely in urban areas and will make this predominantly a land of city-dwellers, predicts a brief of Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation to the Gordon Commission and reported in The Financial Post. Between now and 1980, the extent of our cities will more than double.

It is estimated that the number of new dwellings to be built in the next quarter of a cenutry will be about 3.4 million. The annual rate of house-building will not rise greatly during the next ten years, but after 1965 there will be an acceleration of building in response to the higher rate of family formation that will take place.

The expansion of Canada's housing stock over the next 25 years will, at current costs, require the investment of some $35 billions, or more than the total value of residential real estate at the present time.

Easter Seals —

Modest Appeal to Achieve Big Ends

THERE'S NOTHING quite so heart-warming as the sight of a child who has regained some lost faculty, and is privileged again to share the pursuits and pleasures of his playmates. That is why the Easter Seal, depicting a child on crutches but actively enjoying life, evokes human sympathy and understanding.

The purpose of the Easter Seal is not confined to aiding only juvenile cripples. It extends its function — and has indeed, in this community — to adult citizens handicapped by bone defects or crippling disease. Sponsored here by the Lachute Lions Club, who retain the larger portion of the proceeds locally, the fund has been instrumental in providing an artificial limb and a wheelchair, in two specific cases within the knowledge of this column. There will be other channels of rehabilitation, other demands upon this humanitarian resource, as needs arise from time to time.

It is consistent with the service work of the Lions Club, and a credit to their enterprise, that Easter Seals should be sponsored and administered here by this group. Seals and return envelopes have been mailed to prospective subscribers, and letters are being addressed to business houses and industries — to all of which we heartily commend this appeal. From these modest requests may develop some really momentous achievement in the life of a crippled child, or of a neighbor unfitted to meet the costs of his affliction.

Dreams of Spring

PITY the poor city man — he doesn't know anything of the real pleasure of spring fever. That's reserved for the man and the boy who live on the farm.

The way to enjoy that delicious sense of lethargy to the full is by lolling on the sunny side of the strawstack while the warming air of spring bites into the winter's snow and brings the first quivering of new life into the trees.

That's the time and the place for dreams.

The boy's mind dwells on the happy prospects that lie ahead and drinks to the full of the year's fun: fishing, once spring's conquest of winter is complete; picking wild flowers, if he's lucky enough to live on a farm with a woodlot; swimming in the carefree, barefoot summer days.

And if the boy is in his teens he may dream of the man he hopes to be. He may see himself as a captain of industry or as a statesman. Or the dreams may simply be of one day when he will own his own farm and raise his own family. The grown man, even the most practical type, will dream too if he'll just settle back and close his eyes, chewing at a fragrant piece of oat straw.

His dreams may be more down-to-earth than the boy's. He may combine his flights of fancy with his farming plans for the year — the crop rotation he'll follow in the corner field, raising more hogs if the price looks good. And underlying it all, the high hopes that this new season will bring a good crop and a fair reward for the arduous labor that will begin as soon as the warming sun clears the ground of its last trace of winter's frost.

But the man's best dreams may be to dream again the dreams he knew when he was a boy.

Matter-of-fact folks may scoff at the day-dreamer by the strawstack in the spring. That's the short-sighted view.

Who knows what boy will realize some day his dreams by the strawstack? If he dreams high enough, the world will be the better for it.

And if the man in his dreams takes time to remember his own boyhood days, he may find hope and determination to achieve the better of his former ambitions — and to cleanse himself of the blinding vanities of age.

"THE MARBLE"

Times certainly change!

There was a day, and not so very long ago, either, when it was considered a mortal sin to even think of secular pleasures on the Sabbath Day. The reading of preferred literature, with the Holy Bible taking first place, was allowed. As for anything else, well it was strictly taboo.

I'm quite sure some straight-laced grandmothers did a lot of spinning in their graves last Sunday morning. In fact, they may still be turning over, for their dear little descendents — those that act as choristers for our little church, at least — whiled away the time before service by playing a lively game of cards.

The incident didn't upset the clergy unduly — (the Anglican cleric is too broadminded, isn't he?) — but it caused no end of pain to one of our modern-day grandmothers. So, in order to placate her, I removed the cards from the choir room during the lunch hour. And that, I supposed, would be the end of the matter.

Luckily "Granny" didn't show up for the evening service. Had she done so, she might be, even now, in a complete state of shock. Deprived of their cards, the choristers went one better and engaged themselves in a lively game of chance. And with loaded dice, too!

Yes indeed, times do change. But choristers never do. They are completely impervious to change and engage today in much the same antics as their predecessors of yesteryear.

In the far-off days when my revered father was a chorister, he played backgammon in the choir stalls during the sermons. In my salad days, I acquired a miniature checker set and always carried it with me to while away the often dreary doctrinal portions of the Anglican liturgy. And I know, too, that not so very long ago, the lads of one of Canada's most famous choirs always took along comic books to read while the Dean was preaching.

It was the Cathedral at Quebec that took the cake for letting its choristers have free rein in the choir stalls, if my informant is right. Apparently, anything went provided the boys did not disturb the preacher or the congregation. And it was this drastic policy that was the undoing of the luckless sexton on one of the nights when the church was jammed with people for a very special service.

The business of taking up the offertory in the historic Cathedral is quite something to behold. Six to eight sidesmen parade up the aisle to the chancel steps. There they are met by the sexton and two servers. The servers relieve the sidesmen of the small alms dishes after they have deposited the collection in the massive alms basin held by the sexton. The sexton then proceeds to the top of the chancel, picks up the choir offering from two choristers, presents the basin to the curate, who passes it to the Dean who, in turn, gives it to the Archbishop — when he is there — for presentation at the altar.

On the night in question, all went well for the first few minutes at the base of the chancel steps. Then the sexton turned and slowly started up the chancel aisle. About midway, he skidded violently and descended with a thump to the floor. Alms basin and contents cascaded everywhere, while the choristers exploded in gales of uncontrolled laughter.

The curate, the Dean and the Archbishop wheeled themselves about and faced the front of the church. The congregation shifted uneasily and some tried to stifle their feelings with pocket handkerchiefs. But nobody went to the aid of the sexton lying flat on his back in the chancel aisle surrounded by coins and bills.

In due course, when the service was over and the organist was able to call the choristers together, the cause of the outrage came to light. The information was offered by the one small chorister who had not laughed.

"Please, sir," he said tearfully, "it was all my fault. My marble bag broke during the anthem and one of the marbles rolled out into the chancel aisle and . . . "

Yep! Times do change. But choristers? Never!

ALL ABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore

The so-called nations of the Middle East are snarling at each other. Once more we hear about a flurry of threats, charges, counter-charges and conferences.

The whole affair has a drearily familiar sound. The spokesmen of those small, moth-eaten countries are like a number of ham actors reciting lines from an old, dull play.

And yet we are forced to pay attention to that creaking melodrama. Whether we like it or not, we are involved in the course of events.

Exactly the same kind of quarrel between pygmies in the past has embroiled the giants, and caused a general war.

No doubt there are a number of good people in both the Arab and Israeli camps. No doubt there is some right on both sides.

But the time has come for common people everywhere to demand that these disputes be squelched or isolated.

There is no reason on earth why the messy little squabbles of a group of ragamuffin desert states should be allowed to imperil the lives of millions and perhaps civilization itself.

The United Nations now has the chance to show its worth. Is it a true instrument of peaceful co-operation, or just a gabby propaganda forum?

Justice should be done to both sides in these quarrels, if possible. But we would far rather see a small number of Arabs, or Israelis, or both, suffer pain or wounded pride, than expose the world to the risk of atomic war.

Wars sneak up on us. Have you ever heard of the declaration of war being decided by plebiscite? And yet if the people both sides of the Iron Curtain could make it clear to their representatives that they wanted peace, they would get their wish.

We never know what the Communists will do. But we can play our part by making sure that not so much as one rifle or one grenade goes to the danger zone from Canada.

I feel sure that 95 per cent of the people in every country would like to see the parties to the Middle Eastern argument lifted by the scruffs of their necks and thrown in a heap, with instructions to behave or be stamped on.

THE MAIL

Sometimes no mail comes and then one may feel lonely. More mail than one can handle is the other extreme; it too can be a burden to the spirit. The Old Chieftain, Donald Creighton tells how Sir John A. Macdonald, dying — ten days before his death — got out of bed and went down to his study to work at his mail. "The thought of the vast, accumulating and accusing pile of correspondence downstairs was too much for him." — The Printed Word

OF MANY THINGS

By Ambrose Hills

COMPETITION

I've tried once in a while to give my ideas about the merits of competition; but now I've found some words that seem to me to get the idea across far better than I've been able to do.

They were spoken the other day by Hart Buck, a statistician. Here's how he put it:

"People sometimes talk as though the purpose of competition is that we may try to do one another down, as though we were all in kindergarten playing musical chairs. On the contrary, the effect of competition is to bring about extra chairs, by bringing extra resources into use in conjunction with our knowledge and time. In a properly run economy impelled by competition, nobody will be left standing around, nothing will be made that isn't wanted, and no resource will be left unused if anybody finds it sufficiently worth using. This and nothing else is what a properly-run economy means. Anything else is a waste of resources and time and knowledge. Any attempt to limit competition is a scheme to keep resources out of use. It is, in fact, a scheme to encourage waste."

Now Mr. Buck wasn't talking about TV or radio, but I think those last few sentences apply. By limiting competition in TV we are keeping many physical and human resources out of use. Hundreds of men and women who want to engage in TV work are left idle; millions of dollars ready for investment are kept idle.

I hope that Mr. Buck (no relation to Tim) will be one of those citizens who appear before the Fowler Commission on Broadcasting. Much of what he said above would apply there.

NURSING CHOW and CALF STARTENA

The start you give your calf has an immense part in what kind of a cow she will develop into when mature.

The urge in a young calf to grow is strong at this stage, and by giving her the right mixture of growing feeds you make full use of this urge. Milk is nature's way of feeding the calf in the natural state. The old lady carried the milk with her and grew her calf which, when it reached maturity, probably gave enough to raise another calf. Today that may satisfy the beef man; but dairymen are after milk, and the more milk we get the more profitable the cow. So of necessity the calf must be grown with more than milk, if the future cow is to be profitable.

NURSING CHOW replaces ALL milk from the 3rd to the 4th week; after that the calf needs more concentrated feed, and CALF STARTENA is fed commencing at the 3rd day till the end of the fourth month to supply this need. No hay until the calf is two months old, and no silage till six months of age.

This plan will grow you a BIGGER, BETTER, CHEAPER, calf and EASIER than any other way or feed. How much more do you want?

This year Calf Startena has been improved so much over last year's STARTENA that you can have a calf 30 pounds heavier at four months of age.

Won't you give them a fair trial and feed them according to the Purina Plan? They know best. We stock these feeds, and deliver.

Hawkesbury Petitions Old Age Pensions Boost

Hawkesbury — Council here will petition Health and Welfare Minister Martin for a $15 increase in Canada's old age pension, following the lead of New Toronto.

A resolution calling for monthly pension cheques of $55 to meet increased living costs was adopted unanimously. Copies are to be forwarded to Mr. Martin, Prime Minister St. Laurent, and Alexis Caron, Liberal M.P., Hull.

(Rockcliffe Town Council rejected support of the move to "pressure" the Federal Government into increasing the pension, on grounds that it was outside the municipality's field.)

Other business of council included drafting of a note to householders urging that door-to-door salesmen be reported. Vendors have been operating in Hawkesbury without a municipal permit under a sliding levy up to $200.

— Jehovah's Witnesses —

You may survive Armageddon into God's New World

It is high time to awake (Romans 13: 11)

We are living in the last days. What does that mean? See Matt. 24. The Bible says, "The Earth abideth for Ever." (Ecclesiastes 1-4.) . It means the last days of Satan's rule. (Rev. 12: 12.) This generation will see God's great battle against Satan and his organization, on this our beautiful Earth. (Matt. 24-34). The wicked will be destroyed (Psalms 145: 20). The meek shall inherit the Earth. (Psalms 37, verse 11).

Search the Scriptures

The answer to all your questions is found there. Noah (Jehovah's Witness) warned the people in his day, about a flood. (Gen. 6-7). Only eight persons then living took any notice. They entered the ark, and came through the flood to start life in a new world.

There are many today getting information from God's Word about the New World wherein dwelleth righteousness. (2 Peter, 3: 13).

Get the beautiful new book "You May Survive Armageddon into God's New World." — Price 50 cents. Write 40 Irwin Avenue, Toronto 5, or ask any of Jehovah's Witnesses you may happen to meet.

Paragraphs Taken From Book

ARMAGEDDON will be the worst thing ever to hit the earth within the history of men. God's new world will be the best thing ever to come to distressed mankind and will never pass awey. For us to know that the best immediately follows the worst gives us courage to consider the subject of our discussion. We cannot have the new world without first Armageddon. So if we have yet to endure Armageddon, it will be better for us to face it with understanding, in the hope of surviving and entering into a new world of God's making, a world altogether different from the one mankind has known now for thousands of years, to its sorrow. Armageddon will prove a great blessing in disguise. Our proper concern is how we may prepare that we may not be irreperably hurt by it but may endure it and live to enjoy the grand new things of God's world of righteousness.

Those dwelling in the New World society live not on material bread alone, but on the utterances out of Jehovah's mouth. Regularly they study His Word, the Bible, and faithfully endeavor to live by it. You are welcomed to study it with them. Learn of Jehovah's provisions for your everlasting life in His new world, through Jesus Christ. In humility and loving appreciation, in imitation of Jesus Christ himself, dedicate your life to the One who is the Source of all life and goodness, Jehovah God, and symbolize your dedication as Jesus did, by immersion in water. Then prove your dedication by undertaking His service as prescribed in His Word, preaching "this good news of the Kingdom" and declaring the "day of vengeance of our God". Do this in unbreakable unity with the New World society, keeping your personal integrity toward the Universal Sovereign under all tests that may come and enduring them to the finish. Joyfully following this Scripturally outlined course, then "YOU MAY SURVIVE ARMAGEDDON IN GOD'S NEW WORLD."

Bible Briefs

By A.A.M.

The Bible is rich in stories, and the purpose of this series is to encourage readers to look up for themselves the Bible versions of these incidents. If there are children in the family it is suggested that the story, and the Bible verses on which it is based, be read aloud.

What was the name of the young Hebrew youth who was unjustly thrown into prison, but the Lord was with him and gave him favor in the keeper's eyes? Some time later he was joined in his cell by the Chief Butler and the Chief Baker who had also offended the King.

One morning this Hebrew noticed that his two companions in jail were downcast. When he inquired about their depression, they explained, "We have dreamed and there is no one to intrepret our dreams." The youth replied: "Tell them to me, I pray you — for the interpretation belongs to God."

The Chief Butler then related his dream in which he had seen a vine with three branches. It budded, blossomed, and the clusters of grapes ripened. He took Pharaoh's cup and pressed the juice into it and then placed the cup in Pharaoh's hand.

The Chief Baker's dream was that he carried three cake baskets on his head. In the uppermost were a variety of baked foods for the King, but the birds were feasting from this basket.

The true interpretations of these dreams was given. The young Hebrew's request to the Chief Butler was: "Remember me when it is well with you. Do me this kindness. Mention my name to Pharaoh. I have done nothing to deserve prison."

Find this young Hebrew's name and read this story in Chapter 40 of Genesis.

Change Approved In Church Name

Ottawa (CP) —The Commons Private Bills Committee last week approved a bill designed to avoid possible future legal complications arising from a change in the name of the Anglican Church of Canada.

The bill is designed to make legal the change from "Church of England in Canada" by incorporating the new name in four parliamentary acts involving the church.

The bill, approved by the Senate earlier and given second reading in the Commons, now will be sent back to the Commons.

75 YEARS AGO

March 18, 1881 —

The sale of building lots is booming in the West End.

The Lachute Mills are to be enlarged and the capacity for making flour increased to double their present power.

The survey for the railroad from Lachute to St. Andrews and Carillon has commenced.

Fish & Ireland have just received a carload of the celebrated Georgian May Spring Fyfe wheat for seed, and are selling it at $1.75 per bushel.

The weather this week has been very fine; a slight sprinkling of snow fell on Wednesday, but if the present spring weather continues, we shall soon lose the sleighing — the roads are now fast failing, and in the village, slush prevails.

St. Andrews — We regret to learn that, on Tuesday night, Mr. John MacGregor's sugar-house with all its contents was destroyed by fire. It was fitted with all the latest improvements and contained 200 sap cans and a quantity of syrup.

50 YEARS AGO

March 16, 1906 —

The first mass was celebrated in the Chapel of the Sisters of the Holy Cross on Saturday.

While returning from a professional call last evening, Dr. G. H. Christie and his boy were upset in a drift on the Lachute Road. Their horse managed to cut loose and made tracks for parts unknown. Another horse was secured and the doctor was able to return home; but as yet, his unfaithful steed has failed to report for duty.

Messrs. Thos. Ayers, J. D. Campbell, John McFaul and R. Carpenter spent Monday in Montreal, representing the Lachute Board of Trade, interviewing the CPR authorities with a view in securing a local train for Lachute during the summer months.

25 YEARS AGO

March 20, 1931 —

Ezra Brown, a well-known farmer residing about four miles north of Calumet, was found dead Saturday afternoon under his sleigh, a short distance from the village. Coroner Dr. B. N. Wales, of St. Andrews, declared the death due to natural causes.

The County Council, at its quarterly meeting held last week, unanimously elected Mayor Jos. Seale, of Morin Heights, as County Warden.

Spring must be close, for Mr. Parkes, of Dunany, has a real beautiful butterfly gracing his lawn.

Judging by the soft weather, curling is about finished locally for the season.

The monthly meeting of the Lachute Red Cross was held last Wednesday, with the president, Mrs. Linton Armstrong, in the chair.

Mrs. Mae Tillotson, on behalf of the Women's Work Committee, made a special appeal for workers for Wednesday afternoons; the work may also be taken out and done at home.

Through the efforts of the Sewing Committee and covering a period for the last two months, the following articles were completed and forwarded to the Montreal headquarters:

20 Children's sweaters, 20 baby sweaters, 2 pairs of bootees, 2 bonnets, 2 pairs of mitts, 12 pairs men's heavy socks, 5 baby nightgowns, 10 baby vests, 10 pairs of combinations (2 years), 2 crib quilts, 3 large cotton quilts, 2 heavy woollen quilts, donation of 3 bed spreads, 3,687 swabs, 10 baby blankets.

Visiting Curlers Entertained by Ladies' Club

Lachute Ladies' Curling Club entertained out-of-town curlers for luncheon and tea on Tuesday. The following clubs were represented: Montreal West, Royal Montreal, Town of Mount Royal, Outremont, Heather, Lachine, St. George's and St. Lambert. Heather Club were top scorers, with Royal Montreal runners-up. The prizes were presented by the president, Mrs. R. P. Fraser. Miss Margaret Scott and Mrs. Don Hay were conveners of the luncheon, while Mrs. Mac Walker and Miss R. M. Cairns convened the tea — Miss K. M. Giles and Mrs. S. L. Elliott presiding at the prettily decorated tea-table.

Play is continuing this week in the President's Prize bonspiel.

On Wednesday the holders of the Wilson Challenge Cup, Mrs. L. W. York (skip), Mrs. I. W. Jamison, Mrs. G. A. Muir and Mrs. J. Barbour, were challenged by Mrs. G. G. Mitchell (skip), Mrs. C. E. Richardson, Mrs. Simon Wilson and Mrs. W. W. Freeland. The challenging team took the honors.

Next Wednesday, March 21, is Gala Day, with curling going on all day. Lunch and tea will be served; all members are welcome.

LONGIES NOT NEEDED

Lethbridge, Alta. (CP) — A Lethbridge man who visited sunny Honolulu recounts that he took a set of cosy long underwear, and later sent the unnecessary apparel out to a laundry.

Billed $1.75 for the service, he learned the laundry had never seen such a garment before, and had sent it to their "special services" department which decided to dry-clean them.

Hawkesb'y Has 2-1 Lead in Finals Against Brownsb'g

(Our District Correspondent)

Brownsburg — The final play-offs started last Tuesday, and after three games Brownsburg Bombers find themselves on the short end of a 2-1 count. The first two games were made after the same pattern. Brownsburg had most of the play and Hawkesbury had a 10-minute spree which k.o.'d the locals. The truth of the matter though, is that although the 'Burgers dominated the play, they did everything the hard way, while Hawkesbury worked less but were much slicker.

The series is far from over, however, and it's almost sure that Brownsburg will regain the stride which enabled them to beat Rigaud. Several times in the first two games they managed to hit that stride and they scored several nice goals. The over-worked defence is probably one reason for Hawkesbury's slickness. Three men are working defence for Brownsburg and trying to match Hawkesbury's five. To make matters worse, McAdam had his first off-night for months on Tuesday, and on Sunday with Mac back at top form, Gerry Tremblay could no nothing right. It's hard to blame Buddy Racine for any of the 17 goals, for they were all either break-aways or screened shots. He certainly made 47 stops, many of them very difficult to handle.

In the first game Hawkesbury held a slim 3-2 lead with seconds remaining in the second period, and Brownsburg pounding on the door. McAdam served two penalties in succession, and it was 6-2 before he returned to duty. The final score was 10-4, but it may well have ended at 6-2 — the game was over then.

In the second game the score was tied 2-2 half-way through the second period, and again Hawkesbury staged a 10-minute rout, scoring four goals, three of them while Brownsburgers were serving penalties.

In the first two games, Hawkesbury racked up 16 penalties, and Brownsburg only seven, yet it can be said that Brownsburg lost both of these games in the penalty-box. They lost all the important goals while penalized.

It's easy to give stars on the Brownsburg team for hard work — they all had to work hard to catch rolling pucks and countless rebounds — but only for brief spells did we see much finesse. Mel Tomalty, the two Heberts and André Ouellette were the most dangerous 'Burgers, but they too had to work hard to catch up with the breaks.

Tuesday evening Brownsburg jumped back into contention with a 6-4 win. The main feature of the victory was the stalwart performance of Buddy Racine in the 'Burg goal, but the team, working no harder than in the previous games, made their breaks and took them. All the defencemen took part in the scoring, McAdam and Hebert scoring the 'Burg's first two, and Painchaud (2) and Raymond assisting on the others.

The fourth game takes place at the Arena tonight, Thursday, to start at 8.30.

Tournament In Early Stages At Bolodrome

Jacques Brasseur took the lead Sunday evening in the opening of the Bowling Tournament, commemorating the 10th year of operation of the local Bolodrome. Brasseur rolled a total of 1040 for six consecutive strings — none of which was exceptional but all within the 155 and 194 margin, giving him an average of 173.

With this total, Jacques has a headstart and this good showing will no doubt assure him of one of the numerous prizes offered. Several others promise a hard drive at the total, and general opinion is that it will be beaten by someone rolling at least an 1,100 to claim the Lachute championship.

In his section, Royal Levesque rolled the highest single for the opening of the tournament, with a 213, and it is expected this will be soon beaten by the numerous contenders. Joe Page rolled a close second, being but two pins behind Levesque.

Numerous applications have been made in the ladies' section, although none were entered on the opening of the tournament. Further news will be published in this and other sections later.

All bowlers are eligible in the tournament, which will continue for 50 consecutive days, ending April 29 at midnight.

Mrs. Dart enrolled Guides of the 1st Ste. Agathe Guide Company, also Evelyn Goodfellow of the 1st Morin Heights Company. The Color Party was formed by Flora MacMillan, Heather Campbell and Helen Seale of 1st Morin Heights Company.

All groups joined together for a campfire and singsong, after which Mrs. Dart told a story and Mrs. Stavert gave an interesting talk on "Guiding". The meeting closed with Taps and the National Anthem.

Basketball

The High School girls did it again! When Hudson finally reached here Saturday, they had a 3 point lead as a result of the game in Hudson the week before. Lachute came from behind in the first half, taking the lead with 18 points to Hudson's 10. The final score was 41-22 for Lachute. Referees were Miss J. Johnstone and Miss D. Johnson, both of Macdonald.

Lachute's sharpshooters were: C. Touchette 7 points, A. Copeland 17, J. Davis 1, B. Underhill 16.

For Hudson — N. Johnson 6, J. Hodgson 7, S. Walsh 2, J. Melkman 4, J. Rattray 3.

On Monday, Ste. Agathe boys visited Lachute. The visitors lost the game with a score of 51-42. Good work, Lachute!

Scorers for Lachute were — D. MacTavish 13, J. Duncan 1, A. Gauley 10, B. McDonald 5, W. Berry 8, W. Bradford 14.

For Ste. Agathe, T. Cole 16, Kaare Haughland 4, G. MacKenzie 2, Kjell Haughland 10, B. Wong 2, D. Beattie 8.

Hockey

The first game in a two-game total-goals series between Macdonald High School and Lachute High senior hockey teams was played Saturday morning at Brownsburg Arena. The score was 5-4 in favor of Lachute. As both teams had not played for two weeks due to the mild weather, play began very sloppily, but the players demonstrated more skill as the game advanced. The play was very close and at doubt until the final few minutes. Lachute had a 3-0 lead at one point, but lost their lead and were trailing 4-3 going into the third period.

In the first period, Duncan MacTavish scored two quick goals to give Lachute a 2-0 headway. Then Mervin O'Brien made it 3-0. However, in the second period Macdonald came right back to take the lead 4-3. In the third period Mervin O'Brien stole the puck from a Macdonald player at their blue line and skated in alone, to score and tie up the game. Then Bobby Campbell came through once more with an important goal as he fired the winning tally near the three-quarter mark of the period. Final score — Lachute 5, Macdonald 4.

Jacques Labreche and David Bates were strong on defence and Carl Rodger played very well after a long lay-off.

The second game in this series is scheduled for the Lachine Arena, sometime this week. The winning team receives the O.U.S.A.A. Senior Hockey Trophy, plus crests for each member.

Junior Hockey

Macdonald High School's Junior hockey team played an exhibition game against Lachute High also on Saturday, as the second half of a double-bill at Brownsburg. They gave Lachute its second win, to the tune of 6-0 over Mac. This game gave Bruce Cairns his first shut-out of the season. The game was never in doubt, as Lachute scored early and kept adding as they went along. The line of Noble, Bazinet and Lavis was very effective, with Bazinet scoring twice and Noble and Lavis once each. However, the neatest passing was displayed by the small forward line composed of Del MacTavish at centre, with Wayne Laurin and Ronny Cairns on the wings. Del MacTavish scored on a break-away play while Wayne Laurin also scored on a neat play. Doug MacKenzie alternated with Ronny Cairns throughout the game. Macdonald failed to score, but did come very close to doing so right near the end of the game. However, lack of conditioning began to tell on both teams, who had not been on skates for over two weeks and they were a very tired crew at the sounding of the final buzzer.

Score — Lachute 6, Macdonald 0.

Local Manufacturers Have Boats Exhibited At Sportsmen's Show

All those interested in conservation of wildlife in Quebec, whether or not they be themselves anglers or hunters, will be promoting the good cause by attending the Montreal Sportsmen's Show, Friday, March 16 (9 p.m.) to Sunday, March 25. It is well known that the organizers of this show turn over the gate receipts to a fund for the specific purpose of conserving and restoring wildlife.

It should not be forgotten that if our wild animals and fish were to disappear, sportsmen would not be the only ones to suffer, since the fishing and hunting industry represents in the neighborhood of 100 million dollars in business, distributed among sporting goods manufacturers, restaurants, hotel keepers and numerous smaller enterprises.

At the Montreal Sportsmen's Show there will be exhibits of exotic fish, reproductions of their prehistoric equivalents, exhibits of wild animals and many other attractions. Visitors will also be able to see the latest in fishing and hunting equipment, motors and craft, and all sportsmen's needs. There are 150 show-booths and a program of many top-interest performances.

Two local business enterprises, Tru-Craft Limited, of St. Andrews East, and Nu Craft Registered, of St. Hermas, will have various boats on exhibit at the Annual Show.

Dawstrel Champions of Angl. Bowling League

The final regular league games were played last Monday to decide the Anglican bowling champions.

With Detroit having the advantage of a one-point lead over the second-place team, Dawstrel, from the previous week, the final result was in doubt up to the very last end.

Each team had two games to play, Dawstrel had won both their games and Detroit had won their first game. Detroit's second game, with the Stars, however, was very keenly contested, each team in turn having the edge for awhile and then losing it — the final result being a draw.

Although Dawstrel and Detroit finished up with a tie, Dawstrel were declared league champions on the basis of points scored for and against.

A round-robin novelty tournament is being arranged for next week, to be followed by a social evening and refreshments.

by ARMAND DESROSIERS

Maybe you remember that several years before the war one of the Canadian auto manufacturers made a special car for the Duke of Windsor, who was the Prince of Wales. It had a small bar in the back, and a library and little reading lamps with shades on them. All in all, it was some car.

But it wasn't a patch on some of the fancy boats I've run across. Just last year a French body builder restyled an American car for King Ibn Saud of Arabia and it was delivered shortly before he died.

The King's coat-of-arms, two simitars and a palm tree, were fashioned from silver, plated with gold, and made quite a hood ornament.

The King's bodyguards rode outside on disappearing running boards and held on to chrome grips fastened on to the 10-inch thick doors. There was green leather upholstery, sheeps' wool rugs, an altimeter, barometer and cocktail bar with gold-plated silver glasses that cost $50.00 each. The car set the King of the oil-rich desert country back a cool $22,000.

Hitler demanded even more with a $35,000 Mercedes Benz which had a 51½ gallon gas tank, five speeds and a 230 horsepower engine. The car is owned now by an American.

At our place, you'll have to be satisfied with chrome trim, as much or as little as you want, and the matter of a bar in the back seat is a matter for you and the police to settle. But the most expensive car we have is no more than 10 per cent of the price of these fabulous cars for the Kings. And we think there's nothing like owning your own car to give you that independence and freedom that makes a man "feel like a King."

Curling Makes Progress In Schoolboy Sports

SPORTS CAMERA

By Bob Smylie,
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Broomsticks seem to be replacing hockey sticks as the schoolboys' outdoor sports equipment in Canada.

Ken Watson, curling editor for the Toronto Telegram says curling is fast becoming the No. 1 winter sport with Canadians.

Watson points to the fact that for the first time since the Canadian high school championships were inaugurated in Quebec City in 1950, the leadership of rinks from Saskatchewan has been hotly challenged. True, Saskatchewan won the championship, held this year in Fort William, Ont. However, no less than seven of the 10 teams were real contenders.

Great Advances

Schoolboy curling has come a long way since the first championship was held in Regina in 1947, Watson notes. That year only three provinces were involved in what was purely a western championship. Even in a fanatical curling centre like Regina, where 54,000 curling fans witnessed the (senior) playoffs last year, only a few hundred were interested enough to wander into the rink and watch the kids.

"Fort William, which cannot in any sense be classed as a curling-conscious city, with scarcely more than 500 active curlers, drew almost 8,000.

"Today more than 50,000 schoolboys are curling in Canada. In the west, hockey sticks are being discarded for curling brooms and in the east, school curling is making great progress, particularly in the small cities and towns, where almost 200 new clubs have been built and artificial ice provided in the past 10 years."

Watson has watched curling grow in Canada. Could it be that many of us have watched the decline of hockey at the same time?

Chronicle of A Great Canadian Campaigner Dramatized on CBC

The CBC's chronicle of the life of Joseph Howe, to be presented in two two-hour productions on CBC Wednesday Nights March 21 and 28, is the result of the most ambitious historical research project the Corporation has ever sponsored. Two years in preparation, it had to be compiled from original sources since there is no definite account of the man (such as would correspond, for example, to D. G. Creighton's books on Sir John A. Macdonald).

Writer Joseph Schull had the assistance of Dr. D. C. Harvey, archivist, of Nova Scotia, and Sam Kula of the Public Archives in Ottawa, and the work entailed a study of nearly everything written by or about Howe, including 74 files of personal papers, and many books — notably Dr. James A. Roy's "Joseph Howe: a Study in Achievement and Frustration", and Sir Joseph A. Chisholm's monumental "Speeches and Public Letters of Joseph Howe."

"A wise nation preserves its records, gathers up its muniments, decorates the tombs of its illustrious dead, repairs its great public structures, and fosters national pride and love of country by perpetual reference to the sacrifices and glories of the past." So spoke Joseph Howe in one of the happiest sentences he ever composed. And it is with some such purpose that the CBC attempts to disinter and dust off Howe and other great figures of Canada's history. "To the Maritimes", says Joseph Schull, "we need apologize only for the failings of the work. To the rest of Canada, seemingly untroubled by the old man's restless ghost, we say this: his shadow is with you and over you whether you know it or not. You are a little the better for his virtues; and for some of his faults, though he paid dearest of all, you are still contributing your fraction of the penalty." . . . The Joseph Howe monument stands in the heart of downtown Halifax and a corner of the Old Province House of the Nova Scotia assembly chamber and of the Parliamentary Library (formerly the court room which was the scene of the famous Howe freedom-of-the-press trial). Across the street is the old building in which he edited his newspaper, the Nova Scotian.

Plan Large Film In Newfoundland

St. John's, Nfld. (CP) — A United States film based on whale-killing and a Geman war refugee may be produced in Newfoundland this summer.

David Druken of Portugal Cove said the film is centred around killing operations at South Dildo and the life of Captain Iver Iverson who escaped from the Nazis during the Second World War.

Iverson made his home in South Dildo where he became interested in whaling operations and invented a white whaling net which has become widely adopted.

Sterling Hayden has been mentioned as the leading actor. A script writer for the film company spent some time in South Dildo last year and said filming might take place this July when the potheads strike.

"We feel the Dildo pictures will make a big hit with fans who like outdoor movies," he said.

Heavy Tipper: "Where's the waiter I usually have?"

New Waiter: "He won't be serving you any more. I won you in a dice game last night."

It's A Great Day

When St. Patrick's Day rolls around March 17, it's a sure bet that Canadian television will be up to its ears with Irish songs — whether they be sung by Irishmen or not. Here are four such gentlemen from CBC-TV: (left to right) Don Garrard of "Showtime", George Murray of "Hit Parade", Jack Duffy who works and sings with "The Billy O'Connor Show", and O'Connor himself. O'Connor, the only real Irishman of the bunch, doesn't mind their intrusion in the Irish tenor business. Says he, "After all, everybody in the world is either Irish or wishes he were."

The second annual Motion Picture Academy Awards ceremony will be televised and carried on the CBC-TV network on Wednesday, March 21. The transmission, brought from Hollywood by NBC, will start at 11.15 p.m. and continue for about an hour.

"CBC Newsmagazine" on March 18 will present a review in film of the Royal Tour of Nigeria and a close-up study of the South-east Asia Treaty Organization.

Tips on Touring

By Carol Lane
Women's Travel Authority

Suppose you come across an automobile accident involving others. You want to play the "good Samaritan".

But do you know how?

Misguided aid can twist a minor calamity into a major catastrophe. Here are the "do's" and "don'ts" to remember:

(1) Don't be in such a hurry to help that you set the scene for another accident. Pull off to the side of the road and close your car doors before rushing to the victims.

(2) Do call the police immediately and ask them to send an ambulance — or ask another motorist to do so.

(3) Don't move injured people. Cover them up and prop their heads to make them more comfortable, if you can. This rule should be disregarded only in case of fire in the car.

(4) Do set up signal flares at night about 300 feet away from the accident to warn oncoming traffic. All trucks carry these and will gladly co-operate if necessary. In fact, every motorist should carry them for his own protection.

(5) Do administer first-aid — IF you are qualified. Otherwise wait for the doctor.

(6) Don't smoke near the scene of an accident. Spilled gas can ignite.

When you offer assistance to an accident victim be sure your helping hand is no handicap.

THE SEIGNIORY CLUB
AS IT IS TODAY

PART II. Conveniences for Comfort and Enjoyment

By Ethel Kettyle

The Log Chateau of the Seigniory Club, where members and their guests may live during the holiday season, or even through the quieter weeks of spring and autumn, is really like a great country house — restful, friendly and cheerful, with all the conveniences of a city within its boundaries. In this small kingdom winter brings a change of atmosphere so complete that the Club's self-contained world might be a thousand miles from anywhere, and in the summer months it is a veritable fairyland.

Located on Highway No. 8, near the Canadian Pacific Railway, between the Ottawa River and the Laurentian Mountains, the area upon which it stands embraces one hundred and four square miles of land and forest, heavily dotted with lakes and streams.

The Chateau is the residential building, and has 200 guest rooms, each with private bath. It also has a library, gift shops (including Morgan's), bookshop and newsstand, beauty salon, barbershop and shoe shine, main dining room, badminton court, sound motion-picture theatre, ball room, TV room, card rooms, lounge, etc. — and as other attractions for both winter and summer there are: the boat house, riding stables, bus service, cabins, tennis court, children's playground, equipped with swings, sandpiles and other attractions. There is also an Anglican Chapel on the grounds, and a larger Roman Catholic Church in the village. A huge curling rink is situated adjacent to the garage, with artificial ice from December to May. There is also dancing during both summer and winter months. In the Chateau self-operating elevators are on all floors, available at all times.

As regards outdoor sports, hunting, fishing and camping are very popular with both men and women. There is a 15-mile motor road leading inland from the Chateau, with a game sanctuary for half a mile on either side; this road gives a wonderful opportunity to visit the Club's private fish hatchery, where an average of 200,000 speckled trout (brown and rainbow) are raised annually, as well as other fish. Here conditions in each of the Club's lakes and streams are studied in relation to the planting and stocking of fish, and the conservation of wildlife is carefully watched.

According to the records, in the year 1955 the catches of fish were — 1,159 speckled trout, the largest weighing 2 pounds; 1,093 rainbow trout, the largest 3½ pounds; and 1,612 bass, the largest 5 pounds. These are specimens to gladden the heart of any man or woman who is interested in fishing — and when cooked, large enough and delicious enough to whet the appetite.

Two miles from the hatchery is Pine Cabin, where a corps of guides are stationed, all expert in assisting the outdoor sports enthusiasts; but one must bear in mind that only Club members and their guests are allowed to hunt and fish on the grounds.

Art classes are becoming more popular, and more and more people, regardless of age, are becoming greatly interested in painting. In the summer artists and would-be artists may be seen about the premises, happily engaged in sketching.

Near the Chateau are the garages, and there are parking spaces near the swimming pool. There is also a taxi service available at all hours.

For those who enthuse in golf, there is an 18-hole golf course; while for readers at the Chateau, the library is situated on the mezzanine close to the entrance. The collection includes many interesting books by well-known authors, embracing adventure, fiction, biography and references, etc.

For those who like bird-watching there is a wonderful opportunity around and about the grounds. There is also equipment for skeet and trap shooting, and while many are interested in photography, a photo-finishing service is available.

For the convenience of guests, there are valet and laundry services. Meals are served at various hours, and a medical doctor is available at all times.

Written Specially for The Lachute Watchman

By Oli Daum, Canadian Press Staff Writer

Were it possible to introduce a pioneer woman to a modern Canadian supermarket, department store or specialty shop, chances are she would be confused, delighted and amazed at the variety of goods.

And probably, she would be puzzled about the little tags that hang from buttons or belts on men's, women's and children's garments. She'd want to know what purpose they serve.

Well there's more to this tag business than you might imagine. They're packed with information about the manufacturer, the store's buyer and consumer.

For example, they explain the characteristics of the fabric, what care it should be given, who made it and also indicate that the garment has passed certain standards of performance and design.

For the manufacturer, tags are a means of identifying his brand name and impressing upon his customers the quality of his merchandise.

Sure Cure

Are you seeking a cure for the blues? Try a freighter — any old tramp steamer will do.

Mrs. William Collins, a great-grandmother from Scotland, and Hon. Mrs. M. Bowman-Vaughan, a retired surgeon from London, said they find solace travelling on a freighter.

Docked in Vancouver recently on the Scottish boat "Loch Avon", the women said they have caught more than a dozen freighters to Canada's west coast since the war's end.

"The age of youth and restlessness is over for us and travelling on a passenger ship is like living in a London nightclub," they said.

Though they were getting old and didn't see many years of travel ahead of them the women were considering spending next winter "finding solace" on a freighter destined for the Far East.

Senate and Divorce

Peppery Liberal Senator Nancy Hodges of British Columbia wants divorce cases before Parliament transferred to the Exchequer Court at Ottawa.

The former newspaper woman said in the Senate its handling of cases from Quebec and Newfoundland, the only provinces without divorce courts of their own, throws the whole parliamentary process into disrepute.

The Senate divorce committee gave more time — better spent elsewhere — to divorce hearings than any court of law yet the House of Commons frequently criticized the committee's decisions, Senator Hodges said.

Aside from freeing Parliament of divorces, their transfer would cut costs for petitioners. At present, there was an initial parliamentary fee of $210 plus a counsel's fee which could be as high as $1,500.

Both the Senate and the Commons are at present considering bills concerning the removal of divorce cases from the upper house.

Quebec and Newfoundland send between 400 and 500 divorce petitions to Parliament each year.

Facts About Canned Fish

SALMON POTATO PUFFS — Savoury canned salmon and baked potatoes team up to make a tasty and satisfying luncheon or supper dish.

Canned fish and shellfish receive more than usual attention from Canadian consumers during the Lenten season. Here are answers to some of the more general questions people ask about these products and also a few words of advice.

Canned fish and shellfish have about the same nutritional value as fresh and frozen fish. The liquid in which the fish was processed, in some cases is of value as a cooking ingredient. Whenever possible make use of canned salmon liquid in soups, sauces and cooked dishes, as it is not liquid which has been added to the fish but the flavorful juice of the salmon itself. Oil in which canned tuna and sardines are processed may be used to give added richness to fish dishes.

Now for the ladies who are interested in a delicious and easy, canned fish recipe, here is one which the home economists of Canada's Department of Fisheries tell us "fills the bill".

Salmon Potato Puffs

6 Medium-sized potatoes (baked), ½ cup of liquid from salmon plus milk to make up volume (heated), ¼ cup melted butted, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, 1 (7¾ oz.) can salmon, 1 tablespoon grated onion, grated cheese.

Cut baked potatoes in halves lengthwise and carefully scoop out centres. Mash pulp and add heated salmon liquid and milk, melted butter and seasonings. Whip until fluffy. Flake salmon. Add flaked salmon together with grated onion to whipped potatoes and refill potato shells. Sprinkle the top of each with grated cheese. Bake in a moderately hot oven (400°F.) for about 15 minutes or until delicately browned. Makes 6 servings.

Variation:

Substitute one (3¼ oz.) can Canadian sardines, flaked, for canned salmon, replace the ¼ cup of melted butter with 2 tablespoons of melted butter plus the oil from the can of sardines, and use ¼ cup of milk.

Potato Parade

by the Consumer Section, Canada Dept. of Agriculture Marketing Service

"Please pass the potatoes" — is a request heard hundreds of times a year in most homes throughout the nation. And so it should be — for potatoes are one of our most plentiful foods and they are easy on the budget, too. Instead of serving them always plain boiled, fried or baked why not dress them up a little now and then in one of the following ways? Most of the fancy names have been donated by the French who seem to have a particular talent for changing plain foods into something delectable with little or no effort.

Anna — very thinly sliced potatoes baked with butter in a mould or casserole.

Annette — cooked the same as "Anna", with chopped onions and grated cheese added.

Au Four — baked potatoes with a flavoring of bacon fat and cheese.

Au Gratin — creamed diced potatoes sprinkled with grated nippy cheese and buttered bread crumbs, then baked until brown on top.

Chantilly — seasoned mashed potatoes topped with whipped cream, sprinkled with cheese and browned in the oven.

Duchess — dry mashed potatoes mixed with yolk of egg, a little butter and seasoning, formed into fancy shapes, brushed with beaten egg white and baked.

Franconia — whole potatoes parboiled, then baked with a roast and basted frequently with the fat in the pan.

Julienne — potatoes cut into match-like strips and cooked as French fried potatoes.

Lyonnaise — sliced or diced boiled potatoes sautéed with sliced onions and garnished with chopped parsley.

Maitre d'Hôtel — boiled potato balls served with a sauce of butter, minced onion, chopped parsley, salt, pepper and a little lemon juice.

Mousseline — mashed potatoes mixed with whipped cream and butter.

Parmentier — diced potatoes cooked in a casserole with butter and parsley.

Potage Parmentier — soup made from potatoes and leeks seasoned with salt, butter and parsley and served with croutons.

Rissolé — boiled potatoes fried in deep fat until golden brown, then salted.

Soufflé — hot mashed potatoes mixed with beaten egg yolks, seasonings and fluffy egg white, then baked in a hot oven.

Smoked Fish in Tomatoes

"Finnan Haddie in Tomatoes"

Counterfeit Mint

Herbs and similar special seasonings add a great deal to the appealing flavor of foods. Canadians are becoming more aware of their extensive use and it is a common sight today to come upon small pots of herbs growing in homes of friends. Basil is one of the herbs in common use which adds that extra fillip to lift a dish from the ordinary to the special. It belongs to the mint family, adds to foods a light, delicate taste not unlike clove, but less pungent. Basil is a particularly good complement to tomato, fish and egg dishes. To fire your enthusiasm for using this mild-flavored herb, the Fisheries Council of Canada suggests you try adding it to a quick, economical Lenten main dish of smoked fish baked in tomatoes. This main dish is extra good to eat and extra kind on the budget.

Smoked Fish in Tomatoes

2 Pounds Finnan Haddie (or other smoked fish such as cod fillets), 1 28-oz. can tomatoes, ½ teaspoon basil*, ¼ teaspoon white pepper, 1 medium onion, sliced and separated into rings.

Place fish in shallow ungreased baking dish. Pour tomatoes over and around fish. Add basil, pepper and onion rings. Bake in oven preheated to 450°F. (hot), allowing ten minutes per inch thickness of fish. Fish will be cooked when it flakes easily when tested with a fork. If smoked fish contains the backbone, bake (poach) an additional 10 to 15 minutes. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

*If preferred, you may use a pinch of powdered clove or one or two whole cloves instead of the basil.

SAW THE WORLD ALL IN A DAY

—Central Press Canadian

Eight-year-old Ellen Sylvain wanted to travel and see things, so she set about it methodically. She "borrowed" a dress of her mother's, a foot too long but nevertheless very adult looking, took $1.11 out of piggy bank, filled a suitcase with extra clothes then set out from her New Toronto home. She spent the day window shopping in Toronto, rode the subway, then went to a hotel to do as any other traveller does—find a room for the night. The hotel staff kept her occupied until police were notified. Now Ellen is back with her parents but happy that she has seen the world.

FOR DIABETICS

New pills are being developed which could eventually eliminate the diabetics' need for insulin injections, reports The Financial Post. Made from a new sulfa derivative, the tablets lower the blood-sugar level. The pills will not be sold until clinicians are certain they have no harmful side-effects.

Victoria Women Want Cheaper Milk

Victoria (CP) — Housewives here want milk prices lowered. Mrs. J. E. Tait, in an address to the Victoria branch of the Canadian Association of Consumers reviewed the Clyne Royal Commission report on British Columbia's dairying industry.

"The report shows," Mrs. Tait said, "that we in Victoria pay the highest milk prices in Canada.

"Prices are even higher here when you consider other cities benefit from a price differential — that is, they pay less for milk purchased in a store than they do for delivered milk."

For example, Mrs. Tait said, Vancouver residents pay 20 cents for a quart of milk in shops and 22 cents when the bottle is delivered.

In Victoria the price is 26 cents in the store or delivered.

Wife Preservers

When you are doing the washing, use enough soap or detergent to make a suds that will stand up throughout the washing period. A two-to-three-inch standing suds is best for the average wash.

A little boy, sent to the butcher shop, delivered himself of his message in these words: "Ma says to send her another oxtail, please, and ma says the last one was very nice, and says she wants another one off the same ox."

A Weekly Feature of Helpful Hints on Child Training

Learning A Lesson

(Copyright) — By NANCY CLEAVER —

"How I wish I knew more about the way a child learns! I am so eager for Mary to learn to play the piano that I am tempted to nag her. But that just makes her more stubborn and unwilling than ever to put her mind on her music!" Mrs. Brown confided in her friend. What mother has not, at times, felt this way, if not about music lessons, about the learning process in some subject?

How does a child learn? To begin with he must want to learn? His mother or dad wanting him to learn is no substitute for his own desire. It is doubtful whether music lessons forced on an unwilling pupil ever turned out to be a success. Music should be a joy and a privilege — something which adds to the happiness of life.

Perhaps Johnny wants to play the coronet or some other instrument. He can be convinced by a musical authority that a knowledge of piano gives him an excellent foundation for playing almost any other type of instrument. His piano lessons must be linked with something he wants to do. Perhaps he would like to be able to play when his "gang" have a sing song. If he has the opportunity to play in a recital, when other boys and girls are performing for their parents and friends, he may get a thrill out of a "public appearance".

One mother in a family where they could ill afford to waste any money, explained to her boy, Tom, in his early teens, that he was old enough to take responsibility for his own daily piano practice. He was to keep track himself on a chart on the wall, and just before his lesson if he practiced the number of hours his teacher considered necessary, his mother paid for the lesson. If he fell short of the required practice time, he paid for his music out of his own allowance.

Tom had the chance to look at the family budget, and this seemed to him a fair agreement. The mother reported that this bargain with her boy proved to be an excellent idea. It was the very rare week when the total of his practice hours fell short and he had to pay for his own lessons. In Tom's case he was learning to take responsibility and discipline his own use of time.

The process of learning depends on the desire to learn, the personality of the individual, and the repetition of the lesson. A child's capacity for musical training, or for other types of education, is fixed. This is something inherent in him. He is born with or without real musical ability. But these two other factors — the desire to learn and repetition of the lesson can vary greatly.

A child with medium capacity, who is really eager to learn, and willing go over and over a lesson until he has mastered it, will equal, if he does not surpass, the performance of a more gifted child with no such thirst for knowledge, or habits of perseverence. In childhood, boys and girls should learn those things which not only fit them to earn a living, but other things like music, reading, or sports which enrich leisure hours.

It is of the greatest importance that parents go about helping a child to learn in the right way, by stimulating the desire to know and encouraging habits of persistence. A child tends to want to learn what is pleasant or satisfying to him. Try to make his learning meet a real need and bring him satisfaction. Then you won't have to worry about him putting forth the necessary effort to learn his lessons!

She may hold a vital secret of your future health

Here you are eye-witnessing a method of research that has recently made medical history.

Known as "tissue culture", it is the method by which the famous Salk polio vaccine is produced. But this same technique now holds exciting promise of bringing immunity from a host of other diseases!

Meningitis, pneumonia, influenza, measles, chickenpox, mumps — these are but a few of the diseases which medical science is fighting on a world-wide front with this shining new weapon.

Like polio, all of these ills can be caused by some kind of virus. Some viruses can now be isolated and grown in tissue cultures. After being "killed", they may then be made into safe vaccines. So the laboratory technician shown here may have in her hands the key to a vaccine that will someday control a disease which now is a potential threat to you and your loved ones.

This project, conducted by the Research Institute of the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto, is supported by funds contributed by the nation's life insurance companies. It is one of many similar projects supported wholly or in part in this way.

The life insurance companies in Canada are proud to be playing some part in furthering the great progress of medical science. It is our hope that these projects will result in a healthier life for all.

Temperance Study Entries

The treasurer of the local W.C.T.U. has received the names of the provincial prize-winners in the Temperance Study contest held during the fall months. They are, in alphabetical order: Violet Bennett, Grenville Bay; Eileen Bryson, St. Andrews East; Grace Donaldson, Chatboro; and Joan Owens, Stonefield Heights. All of these had previously received local prizes, as well as the other five contestants. We think that four provincial prize-winners out of nine contestants, is a very good average. All competitors writing the papers receive certificates from the Dominion organization, and on completion of five years writing, they receive a small silver pin from the Dominion headquarters.

The Weather

The old Scottish version of Candlemas Day is certainly working out this season:

"If Candlemas day be clear and fair,
Half the winter is by and mair,
But if Candlemas Day be dark and drear,
There'll be twa winters in the year."

The recent heavy March storms have certainly been "two winters" of themselves — and if we have seen the end of them, we are fortunate.

Civil Defence — Local Responsibility

Fifth in a series of 24 articles

Most of the operational details — the transfer of plans into hard work and sweat — fall on the shoulders of the municipalities. The federal and provincial levels of governments must provide the plan; only the people can carry it out. And the local government — the mayor or reeve and his councillors — are the officials in closest contact with the people.

The threat of disaster, whether from any enemy attacking with H-bombs or from flood, hurricane or fire, makes the need of an organization in every community capable of minimizing the effects of disaster obviously important. This can be set up only by each community, for only a community's inhabitants can assess how its facilities, its lay of the land and so on may best be used to protect itself from the dangers an enemy attack would bring.

The first thing any organization needs is direction. So the initial step a community must take toward a civil defence organization is to set up a control committee, with possibly the mayor or reeve as chairman. It must provide the guidance for citizens willing to help make the C.D. plan work.

To direct the plans developed by the committee, a civil defence director must be appointed. He would be a full-time or part-time official or volunteer depending on the size of the community. His duties, of course, would be as varied as the needs of a city compared to a town, a town compared to a village.

Most Canadian towns and villages fall into two categories for civil defence purposes: Mutual Aid Areas or Mobile Support and Reception Areas. The Mutual Aid Area is the region around a Target Area — usually the large cities — whose communities are organized to provide help where needed when disaster strikes. The Mobile Support and Reception Area is outside the Mutual Aid Area and is organized to receive long-term evacuees and casualties and to send help to a Target Area.

A community's C.D. plan would be determined, therefore, by the area-classification under which it falls. To develop its plan, a community should form a Civil Defence Planning Committee. Its members would include heads of each civic government department concerned with civil defence, persons representing transportation, industry, labor, the police and fire chiefs, the town engineer, the medical officer of health. The C.D. director would be chairman.

Officials of churches, service clubs, welfare agencies and so on also may be included on the committee. In short, anyone who can help organize the community's facilities for whatever purpose disaster will require of them, whether for emergency feeding, shelter, first-aid — even to baby-sit for children separated from their parents.

The community civil defence director and his staff must make surveys of the resources available; they must know the condition of roads, the amount of sleeping space available for evacuees from bombed cities, the food supplies available. Could their community provide emergency water supplies for another town? Could they provide fire fighting equipment? How much hospital space has the community? How many doctors? Nurses? Where can they be reached?

The C.D. director and his organization must keep in touch with civil defence officials in neighboring communities so that their efforts can be co-ordinated in time of disaster.

Just as the federal and provincial C.D. organizations aim at using all existing agencies to meet disaster, supplementing them with volunteers, so should the community organization. Most civil defence organizations are broken down into these services: headquarters, fire, police, health, welfare, warden, engineering and public utility restoration, rescue and ambulance.

Every community has the nucleus of these services already in existence. The purpose, therefore of the community civil defence organization is to provide direction for existing services and to expand them through recruiting and training of volunteers.

The importance of the volunteers — the storekeeper, service station operator, farmer, housewife — can hardly be exaggerated. For the call on each C.D. service will increase in direct proportion to the scale of whatever disaster may come.

Something Different

By Lewis Milligan

When I was passing down the aisle of a large department store recently a young woman, turning away from one of the counters, said, "I want something different." I glanced at the sales-lady behind the counter and her face was a study in hopeless frustration as she threw up her hands. The remark was one of those scraps of conversation that are caught in passing and tell the whole story of what went on before.

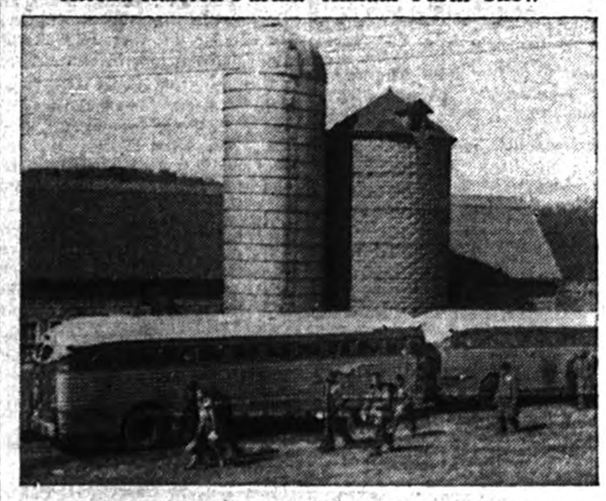

Looking around that same store for presents during the Christmas season I was surrounded with so many different things that my brain was dizzy trying to choose among them. There surely was never before such a variety of merchandise as is advertised and displayed for sale in these days. Manufacturers vie with each other to produce something new in style or utility, from ladies' wear to automobiles, and the more popular it is, the sooner it becomes old-fashioned and customers are demanding something different.

This prevailing desire for something different is not confined to department stores; it prevails in every department of modern life and thought, and it is neither new nor modern, except that it is more widespread. Long ago Solomon complained that "there is nothing new under the sun." Having exhausted all the then modern means of social enjoyment, the old king was so satiated with luxury that he had lost all desire for anything new or old. But that was not the case with the young woman who turned from the counter. She might be said to represent the spirit of unbridled youth which scorns the things of the past and grasps at the bubbles of a wild desire for something different.

That spirit may be very useful if it is prompted and guided by an appreciation of the value of old things and a desire to improve on them by creating something new. There would be no progress if everybody were satisfied with the things and ideas of the past. In that case we would have nothing but antique shops, and progress would go into reverse. It is only the demand for something different that keeps the wheels of modern industry turning and saves us from getting into physical and mental ruts. Such demands are a stimulant to free enterprise to devise and produce something different and thus provide employment for designers, mechanics, salesmen, distributors and a host of others engaged in trade and commerce. Moreover, it keeps money in general circulation, which is essential to prosperity. Stagnation of capital is the chief evil to be avoided in maintaining a healthy economy and social freedom. But that does not mean that we should throw our money around indiscriminately and, like spoilt children in a tantrum, break our toys in order to get something different.

In the realm of ideas — political, artistic and literary — there is too much of this destructive tantrum on the part of our young and some older people who should know better. There are principles of government and economics that cannot be discarded with impunity. There are standards and ideals of art and literature, which, if flouted, can lead only to freakishness and sterility. All true progress is a process of cultivation of living organisms and organization. Like our democratic institutions, art and literature are rooted in the past, and we can no more sever them from their roots than we can cut down a tee and keep it alive and reproductive. Nothing that is radically different can live and prosper. All living things are the product of evolution. Revolution is destructive and begets monstrosities.

Attend Ralston Purina Annual Farm Show

Last Thursday four men from the local farm community — Messrs. Edgar Larose and Gerald Beauchamp, both of Grenville, Donald Rodger from the Rodgers Poultry Farm, Lachute, and Ronald Harwick, employed at Farmers' Supply Company, returned from St. Louis, Mo., where they spent two days visiting the Purina Research Farm and Laboratories. . . Photo above shows a group of visitors arriving at the Dairy Unit, a spot familiar to thousands visiting the farm annually.

Family Herald Has Long-Distance Readers, Unorthodox Delivery

Investigating the courses of ocean currents is not a usual pursuit for a rural magazine. The Family Herald and Weekly Star was surprised to learn, last year, that it had been unwittingly doing that very thing. It had done it by travelling about, at least in part, in a bottle.

In the course of reaching its 390,000 subscribers, the Family Herald travels by every means from dog team to airliner, but a new type of transportation was added when a letter came to the editorial office last December, enclosing three yellowed pages of the Family Herald. They had turned up in a bottle on the seashore at Upper West Hogland in the Shetland Islands, about 100 miles north of Scotland. The bottle contained no indication where it had been set afloat.

The pages carried the Family Herald's "Maple Leaf" correspondence club, and, on the reverse side, the "Quiet Hour" page, which features religious writings for Sunday reading. The purpose of sending this material off in a bottle was obviously one of the two. Whoever either to cheer someone with the prospect of wide correspondence, or to comfort someone with the solace of Christian thought.

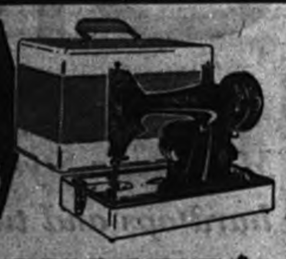

To add to the interest, the News Editor, Frank Woodley Page, in seeking items to include in his "News of the Week" columns, came across a recent Canadian Press report noting that Dr. John Keyston, of the naval research establishment at Dartmouth, N.S., was embarked on research in the direction and extent of the ocean's currents. The research was being carried out by launching message-carrying bottles off the coast of Nova Scotia. A total of 800 bottles had been thrown into the sea. Of these, 61 had turned up in various places — two in the Azores, one at the Isle of Islay, off the west coast of Scotland, and one at the Shetland Islands.

Since it turned up in the Shetlands, therefore, the Family Herald believes that the bottle containing the pages from its 1954 issue may well have travelled the same route; they would thus have started their journey from somewhere along the coast of the Maritime Provinces — and incidentally set a new high in reaching distant readership by unorthodox means.

Lachute Girls Win Prov'l School Basketball Crown

Boys' Team Eliminated in Semi-Finals

The Lachute High School senior girls' basketball team returned home victorious from Lennoxville last week-end, having once again been crowned provincial champions of the Protestant High Schools. The honor was won and the MacLeod trophy presented to the local team, who have taken the laurels twice in the four years since its inception. The L.H.S. boys were beaten out the championship race in the semi-finals.

The MacLeod competition for the girls' championship began at 2.00 p.m. with Lachute vs. Sherbrooke, and Granby against Shawinigan High School. The Shawinigan team won over last year's champions by a considerable score and were to play either Lachute or Sherbrooke in the finals. The local girls started their game with Sherbrooke by setting a fast pace and by half time were leading by a score of 41-15. The second half saw the L.H.S. girls take things easy and save their energy for the final night game. Final score of the first game was Lachute 68, Sherbrooke 30.

At 7.30 the all-important game took place and about 500 spectators had gathered to witness what was expected to be a hard-fought contest, as both teams had won their semi-finals by wide margins.

The game was close for the first four minutes and then the Lachute girls pulled into a commanding lead which they never relinquished. Displaying some of the finest basketball ever seen at the Provincial Competitions, the local girls turned on the power and won the game by a score of 55-24. The Shawinigan girls played well but were completely outclassed by the Lachute girls whose passing and shooting displays drew standing ovations from the large crowd.

The star of stars in the final was Betty Underhill, who with tremendous set shooting paced the well-coached sextet, leaving little doubt as to their superiority. She, Audrey Copeland and Joyce Davis (called the Confusion Line during the game) brought the crowd to their feet while, with a weaving figure 8, passing the ball until the Shawinigan team was dizzy. This feat which takes considerable skill as well as team play, pulled the opponents out of position several times, enabling the locals to add to their ever-increasing score.

Views Market, Present and Potential, For Local Wool and Worsted Output

Ernest Snadden, Textile Designer, Introduces Film on Ayers Industry, at Lions Club Meeting

What makes the Lachute textile industry hum — more specifically the market and demand for woollen and worsted fabrics — provided material for a "refresher course" to listeners at the Lions Club Tuesday evening. Familiarity with the local Ayers enterprise tends to obscure the fact that styles, trends, fashions and market forecasts spur initiative to meet competition and to create business. These aspects of the industry were stressed by Lion Ernest Snadden, designer at the Ayers Mills, in introducing an excellent film on the Ayers textile operations.

"Although there are many forms of primary textiles in Canada, such as cottons, furnishing fabrics, synthetic yarns and materials, silks, etc., let us consider here the forms that we produce in Lachute," said the speaker. "First let us look at the present Canadian market, and then look to the potential for the future. . . .

"The present Canadian market can be simply described. In 1955 some 36 million yards of woollen and worsted apparel fabrics were supplied to the Canadian market. Of this total woollens accounted for about 26 million yards, or about three-quarters of this market, and worsteds the remainder. Canadian mills supplied some 63% of this total, and imports made up the other 37%.

"Following are some interesting statistics about Canada: During the past 25 years there has been an increase of 53% in the Canadian population, and it is forecast that this trend will continue — perhaps by a further 50% by 1975. Taking these factors into account, including the forecast of 1975 demands for clothing, just presented by the Primary Textiles Institute, we can reasonably expect a total market for about 82 million yards of fabric in that year. This figure, if attained, will mean over a 100% increase in yardage over 1955. And I am sure our local industry will keep its percentage and expand proportionately.

"Owing to our high wage costs, the Canadian manufacturer has only the home market. I can say that no Canadian woollens find their way into other markets, except possibly purchases in Canada by tourists from our big neighbor down south.

"If we were an exporting industry, then individual companies could gear themselves to volume production of two or three specific fabrics; but the situation as we have it at the moment, means that the individual mills must style a very large range of fabrics. . . ." The speaker illustrated this point by enumerating some of the many weights and textures of fabric produced at Ayers Limited.

"At present we are styling for the spring of 1957," he continued, "and to get a guide for the spring of next year, we must study the markets of Europe and America. . . In the woollen textile trade — I think more than any other — each process calls for individual skill; the resultant material is the combination of the skill of the wool buyer, dyer, blender, carder, spinner, weaver, and then the finisher.

"We are naturally concerned about imports — not only about the quantity, but also about that powerful word 'Imported'. For many generations this word has meant a lot when it came to choosing a fabric, and we here in Canada can only get over this obstacle by making better fabrics, and by so doing make the words 'Made in Canada' synonymous with good-grade material.

"Of course, this word 'Imported' is misused on many occasions. . . I once saw a sleeve label on one of our sports jackets marked 'West of England'. Technically they were correct — but we are in Lachute, about 3,000 miles to the west of England! . . . But with advertising, television, and good service to the trade, we hope that we are doing a little to break down that prejudice."

The film "Canadian Woollens for Warmth and Beauty" adequately described the process of manufacture, in familiar settings at the Ayers Mills, and fittingly concluded this interesting subject.

County W. Inst. Semi-Annual Held in Lachute

The semi-annual convention of the Argenteuil County Women's Institute was held on March 15 in the Legion Hall, Lachute. Mrs. M. Crosby, the County president, presided.

All 10 branches were represented, and the total County membership now stands at 335.

The County Educational Loan Fund has reached the sum of $345.62, and the balance in the County treasury is $191.07.

The Leadership Training course at Macdonald College, will be held from May 28 to June 1.

Morin Heights will be the seat of the annual County Convention this year, the date being May 12. Mrs. G. E. LeBaron, of North Hatley, the Provincial president, will be principal speaker.

The meeting was adjourned at 4.40 p.m. on conclusion of the business.

Local Lions Club Plans and Projects Occupy Meeting

A large attendance and full agenda at the Lions Club session in the Legion Hall, gave evidence Tuesday evening that this group is maintaining its role as an instrument of community service and fellowship.

President Ian Gordon occupied the chair when the appointed chairman, Vice-President Jos. Dumais, made a succesful bid for two NHL hockey admissions and withdrew to attend the playoff at the Forum that evening. (The tickets were by courtesy of Ayers Limited, and netted proceeds of $19 to club funds in a raffle and subsequent auction.)

Gabriel Valois was again commended on his fine work as bulletin editor.

A report of progress on the Easter Seals campaign was given by the committeeman in charge, Dr. F. W. FitzGerald; while the co-chairman of bingo, Bert Rigg, gave a boost to this public event billed for tomorrow (Friday), and discussion was also heard on the season's big fund-raising project — a drawing for a Nash Metropolitan auto, for which tickets will soon be issued. Other future plans were discussed at some length.

Approval was given to renewal of the annual subscription to Community Concerts, for 20 season tickets for the use of local school students. Lion Don Titman, member of the Association executive, gave assurance these admissions were used to advantage and were highly appreciated.

Highlight of this enthusiastic meeting was a talk and film presented by Lion Ernest Snadden, of the firm of Ayers Limited — a resumé of which is given elsewhere in this issue.

Mr. Snadden was amiably introduced by Roger Regimbal and thanked by his colleague George Tattersfield, both key personnel of the same company. His talk was preliminary to the showing of a color film and commentary on Ayers fabrics, from the importation and treatment of raw wool through complex processes to the manufactured product. The subject was followed attentively and enjoyed by fellow members of the Lions Club.

Year's Statistics on Cases Treated at Providence Hosp'l

Dr. Marc Papineau, chairman of the Providence Hospital medical board, reports that the hospital had a most active year during 1955 — a total of 857 adults having been admitted for a total of 3,690 hospital days.

The maternity section of the hospital recorded a busy year with a total of 464 births within the institution.

Figures released for other departments are as follows:

Maternity cases	462
Surgery (minor and major)	89
Gynecology	81
Tonsilectomy	123
Medical treatment (non-operative)	102

Aside from the 857 total of inmate patients, the records show also the following treatments:

The institution contains 16 beds for adults and 10 children's beds, and at no time were there less than six adult and four children beds unoccupied. Average time spent in hospital by adults was 4.3 days, while children spent an average of 5.1 days.

The Providence Hospital is operated here by the religious order of that name. The Mother Superior in charge is the Rev. Sister Laura de Jésus, who has nine religious sisters on the staff, four of whom are registered nurses, and 12 other employees.

The medical board of the hospital includes Dr. Marc Papineau, chairman; Dr. Roger Lavigne, vice-chairman; Dr. Jacques Castagner, Brownsburg, secretary; and other practicing physicians of Lachute, Brownsburg, St. Hermas, St. Andrews East, Ste. Scholastique and St. Benoit.

CONTROL SKEETERS

Ottawa (CP) — The City of Ottawa will organize its own mosquito control plan after getting no results from appeals to surrounding municipalities. Spraying costs about $8,000 to $11,000 yearly.

Saskatoon (CP) — About 372,000 cubic yards of snow was removed from city streets here during January.

Residents Alarmed by Supersonic Uproar

Eyes were pointed skywards twice on Monday when thundering explosions from the firmament rattled buildings and scared occupants—but it was just an RCAF jet fighter breaking the sound barrier.

The most vivid report comes from the Dalesville area, where a local citizen was driving a team of horses in the bush. The explosion shook the area and scared the team so badly that they stood in their tracks. Looking directly above him, the driver saw a rolling ball of vapor, and some miles ahead, the fast-moving aircraft, its exhaust stream trailing behind.

The speed of sound, which an aircraft must reach prior to breaking the sound barrier, is 760 m.p.h. at sea level.

New Building For Phone Exchange At Brownsburg

Probability Dial Phones In Lachute by 1958

Tenders have been called for the construction of a new dial exchange building in Brownsburg — according to information from Roland Dupuy, Bell Telephone manager for this region. Work on the new structure, to be located near the corner of Northcliff and Maplecrest Streets, is expected to get underway sometime in April.

The one-storey building will house the complex switching equipment now located in leased premises on Main Street, Brownsburg. These premises are now becoming too small to permit installation of additional equipment, and in order to allow for future growth of the local telephone system, it was decided a new building was needed. At present, there are approximately 150 customers awaiting telephone service.

Of modern design inside and out, the new building will be of fireproof construction with foundations and ground floor of reinforced concrete, a framework of rolled steel columns and beams, and brick walls. It will be 72 feet wide and 33 feet deep. Total floor space will be 1,500 square feet. Provision will be made for future extension to the rear. The site is near the Wartime Housing district, west of Maple Avenue (Highway 31).

When questioned on the possibilities of dial in Lachute, Mr. Dupuy said that, although it is yet too early to announce the exact date of a changeover, plans are now being made for the introduction of dial service in Lachute some time in 1958.

Two Wolves in Two Week-Ends – Upper Lachute

Victors of the chase, Kenneth Clark (left), brother Irwin, and three-year-old Toby, are pictured here with the 57-pound Russian black wolf shot in Upper Lachute recently. The long neck-hair is much in evidence, as are the business-like fangs of this ferocious-looking marauder.

A third member of the family, Ronald, 15-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Clark, got into the act Sunday morning by killing a 37-pound wolf, while it is reported two others managed to evade the hunters out in force that day.

Boy Marksman Scores in Sortie Against Wolves

Wolf No. 3 in the Upper Lachute area was downed early on Sunday when Ronnie Clark, 15-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Clark, made the day's hunt effective by bagging a 37-pound specimen with his shotgun.

Ronnie was the third member of the family to contribute to the district extermination, as last week-end his father, Kenneth, and his uncle, Irwin, killed the first Russian black wolf known in these parts. (A vivid story of this adventure is told by a neighbor-contributor, Norman Thorburn, on page 10 of this issue.)

The hunt on Sunday included a number of local farmers and riflemen, accompanied by Toby, the Clark hound. A grey wolf was soon flushed out of the bush with Toby a close 50 feet behind. The wolf was headed for young Ronnie Clark, who downed it with one shot. Further investigation showed that the dog had started three of the animals, the other two having taken a different route and made their escape.

Examination of the animal led the Clarks to believe that it was the wolf that had been caught in a fox trap earlier this winter. It had a trap mark across one of its front legs, and its teeth appeared broken off and worn down, although it was judged to be no more than three years old. At the time of this incident, the fox-trap was broken and the animal had escaped.

Evidence is that there are still wolves in the district, but at the present rate of progress, it is hoped that the pack will be soon eliminated and the countryside freed of these unwelcome inhabitants.

'Clinic' Next Thursday For Driver's Tests

Next Thursday, March 29, will see the return of the mobile unit for driver's tests which was to have been held at the time of a recent snowstorm.

The unit will be located at the Municipal Garage as during past visits, and Mrs. Chas. Bedard, local license registrar, advises all residents who have to pass their driver's test to be on hand for the examination. The mobile unit is making a special trip to this area and will not return again for some months.

All-Mail Canvass In Easter Seals, No Personal Calls

The Better Business Bureau in Montreal has been concerned with bogus collectors posing on behalf of charitable campaigns — latterly the Easter Seals drive, in which "callous swindlers" have appeared with tins bearing campaign labels, collecting in taverns and public places.

At the request of the Rotary Club sponsors of Easter Seals in Montreal, the Bureau has issued a press statement asserting that this campaign is being conducted entirely by mail; there are no personal canvassers whatever.

The same applies in Lachute district, where the Lions Club (sponsors) wish it to be known that their appeal is promoted entirely by mail with no door-to-door canvassing. Some 3,000 envelopes and seals strips are in the mails, and the committee reports a good response to date. It is urged that donors leave their address slip attached, in sending their remittance, so that due acknowledgment and receipts may be sent to them.

Cottingham Affirms Governm't Alert to Wildlife Conservation

Speaker at Opening of Mont'l Sportsmen's Show

Hunters, anglers and several thousand interested spectators witnessed the official opening of the 5th Annual Sportsmen's Show last Friday. The show, which closes its week-long program in the Montreal Show Mart this Sunday, is sponsored jointly by the Quebec Wildlife Federation and the Montreal Anglers and Hunters, and had as its opening speaker the Hon. W. M. Cottingham, Minister of Mines, who spoke on behalf of the Hon. Camille Pouliot, M.D., Minister of Game and Fisheries. Mr. Cottingham extended a hearty welcome to the crowd of visitors who filled to capacity the spacious hall of the Show Mart.

This record crowd was viewed by the Hon. Mr. Cottingham as an indication of the interest which our population shows to the various activities connected with wildlife and more particularly with hunting and fishing. Mr. Cottingham gave the assurance that the legislators in Quebec, together with the authorities of the Department of Fish and Game, have always felt it a duty to promote and encourage any activity whose purpose it was to aim at a fair and rational consumption of our natural resources such as wildlife.

In support of this assertion, the Hon. Mr. Cottingham revealed that the budget of the Fish and Game Department was four times higher today than it was in 1944. "Thanks to those increased budgets", said the Minister, "we have been able to rebuild and double the capacity of our Fish Hatcheries at St. Faustin, at Baldwin's Mill and Tadoussac, and we also have set up a muskelunge hatchery at Lachine to which we propose giving a big expansion."

While on the subject of fish hatcheries, the Minister referred to the successful restocking of various public waters of the Province with pike from Missisquoi Bay, according to a survey made by the Biologists of the Department. Speaking of the vast fishing territories, Parks and Reserves, which the Provincial Government has dedicated to the people of Quebec, Honorable Cottingham mentioned the creation of new fishing reserves, the Chibougamau and the Mistassini reserves in the Lake St. John region, and

Eyesight Clinic Held for Benefit Of School Children

Through co-operative effort on the part of Tony Zaplaski, CNIB district secretary, and the Quebec Ministry of Youth and Welfare, it was possible to organize a free eye examination clinic for school children in the Lachute region. The ophthalmologist in charge was Dr. Roger Pager, of Montreal.

The examinations were given this week (from Monday until today) in Lachute Auditorium, and Mr. Zaplaski is presently working with provincial department officials to organize other such clinics in sections of the county where school children could not benefit from the local clinic.

These examinations are designed to determine what can be done to save or aid the eyesight, by corrective exercise, operative treatments or the wearing of glasses. Also, the Institute can supply prescribed glasses at a reduced price and can also supply the necessary glasses free of charge when parents are indigent or cannot reasonably afford the expense. A portion of the donations from the last CNIB financial campaign has been set aside for this use.

Electric Service

Electric service is now taken as much for granted as is the water we expect to get when we turn a faucet in our homes.

Within the lifetime of many people now living, the application of electric power to ever increasing use has revolutionized our whole way of life.

The reliability of electric service has been a major factor in bringing about this acceptance of electrical living.

Yet, because of such convenient service, the problems involved in providing electric service are little realized. These include adequate generating capacity; exceptionally well-protected and numerous transmission circuits; well engineered strategically located sub-stations; distribution lines kept in the peak of serviceable condition, and an amount of electrical equipment that makes a staggering list of scientific achievements.

In the final analysis, the lions' share of the credit for reliable service goes to the men who run this complicated system and who keep constant guard over its efficient operation.

Mechanical Logger

Mechanization in the bush has been carried a step further with a giant new mechanical logger, reports The Financial Post.

The specially designed machine expected to play a big part in speeding up the shipment of pulp wood from the bush to the mills. It is 18 feet long and 9 feet high. It rumbles over any terrain, through streams and over stumps, carrying about 3½ tons of pulpwood, on giant six-foot diameter tires. It also picks up loads and dumps automatically.

Its development — cost $350,000 — was financed by a group of pulp and paper companies.

Combined with its cross-country ability, it has a nippy 30-mph turn of speed on bush roads or highways. Early reactions have been so favorable, both in Canada and overseas, production is to begin at a plant of Clark Equipment Company now under construction at St. Thomas, Ont.

Horse on the Comeback

New Glasgow, N.S. (CP) — The horse has come to New Glasgow to stay and the harness business is picking up.

Harry Miller reports he has sold more harness in the past year than in any of the preceding six. The run on equipment can be attrabuted to lumbermen who are using an increasing number of horses in this area. Woods operators, who claim "there are places where a horse still does a better job than a tractor," are forced to send their equipment to Truro, 35 miles away, for repairs: fix it themselves or buy expensive factory-made replacements.

Mr. Miller's business appeared doomed a few years ago but lumber operations have expanded. Many lumbermen are reverting from tractor to horse, Mr. Miller said. "And since harness wears out, business will pick up."

FRIENDLY HORSE

Rosemary, Alta. (CP) — Satan, black saddle horse, died on the ranch owned by John Bleakley. Since an accident when it was a colt 25 years ago, Satan has always been accompanied by another horse in the barn and the field.

Breeders Strengthen Herd by Insemination

Truro, N.S. (CP) — The Nova Scotia Artificial Breeders' Association will make frozen semen for cattle available to farmers in a renewed drive to improve the province's already famous herds.

Co-op manager Robert Wilder says the semen has an advantage over natural breeding because any farmer may follow a blood line and be sure of having semen from the desired sire the day it is needed.

The blood line the breeder wants may come from central Canada or a sire in the herd kept at the central unit at nearby Lower Truro.

In this manner farmers can select sires from the best in the country, semen from a $10,000 Ontario costing no more than from a cal sire.

At present semen from the lower Truro herd is being air-mailed to Guelph for processing and freezing at the Ontario Veterinary college.

The freezing process is gradual. The semen is returned by air, packed in dry ice. It is then stored until needed in special refrigerators at Lower Truro. It can ge kept for an indefinite period while liquid semen is perishable after 36 hours.

Plans for the local unit, which supplies 13 sub units, call for a supply from local herds and semen from some of the best strains in the country.

Breeding tests with frozen semen have been conducted at Lower Truro for the past three years. Last year a record number of 10,000 cattle were bred artificially.

Late Brownsb'g Resident Is Widely Mourned

Late Mrs. Robert Tomalty

One of Brownsburg's well known residents, Mary Jane Tomalty, widow of the late Robert Tomalty, passed away on Saturday, March 3, after a long illness at her home in Brownsburg.

Mrs. Tomalty was born in "The Glen", Louisa, Que., on January 4, 1866, the daughter of the late James Morrison and Jane Parker.

After her marriage, June 16, 1886, she resided in Louisa until moving to Brownsburg 35 years ago.

Mrs. Tomalty was a member of the Maple Avenue Baptist Church, also a life-member of the Women's Mission Circle.

Her passing is regretted, because of her many years of kindness and service to her family and to all who came within her reach. The constant word of praise heard on every hand is a tribute to that kindness which was hers.

Sorrow at her passing is only tempered by the memory of her life of faith and service, and by the certainty with which she looked beyond the vale of death.

She leaves to mourn her loss four daughters, Mabel (Mrs. N. B. Jones), West Medway, Mass.; Gladys (Mrs. N. W. Blair), Saskatoon, Sask.; Alma (Mrs. G. W. Creswell) and Gertrude (Mrs. W. H. Tomalty), Brownsburg; also a foster daughter, Edith Brown, who cared for her during all the years of illness. Her husband and only son, Gordon, predeceased her. She leaves also eight grandchildren and ten great-grandchildren.

The funeral service was held Tuesday, March 6, in Brownsburg United Church with the Rev. N. H. Brock conducting the service, assisted by Pastor Richard Unger, the Rev. Garfield Bruce, and the Rev. C. W. P. Baugh.

Hymns sung were, "Forever with the Lord" and "The sands of time are sinking." The choir sang as a special number "There's a land that is fairer than day," a favorite of the late Mrs. Tomalty.

Pall-bearers were — Arthur Morrison, Wilfrid Morrison, Ernest Morrison, Stanley Boyd, John Tomalty and Carson Tomalty.

Many beautiful floral tributes were received.

The body was laid to rest at Louisa Cemetery, beside that of her husband.

Friends and relatives attending from a distance were — Mrs. Norval W. Blair, Saskatoon, Sask.; Mrs. R. M. Edwards, Springfield, Mass.; Mrs. Robert Gibson, Mr. Edward Morrison, Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Boyd, Ottawa; Mrs. George Bale, Mrs. W. F. Simpson, Mrs. I. Cook, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Paquette and Miss Margaret Paquette, Verdun, Que.; Mrs. Sidney Cloake, Miss Eva Morrison, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Tomalty, Beverley and Ronald, Mrs. Ray Davidson, Mrs. Edward MacLeod, Montreal; and Mr. Ernest Morrison, of Baie d'Urfée.

"Beyond the sunset a hand will guide me
To God the Father, whom I adore.
His glorious presence, His words of welcome,
Will be my portion on that fair shore.
Beyond the sunset, O glad reunion,
With our dear loved ones who've gone before;
In that fair homeland we'll know no parting,
Beyond the sunset forever more!"

Easter Seals Response

The Lions Club committee on Easter Seals received the following note this week, enclosed with a donation from an Argenteuil resident:

"Dear Sirs: I received your stamps the other day in behalf of the crippled children, and I am enclosing $2. I would like very much to send more, but I am a cripple myself now for several years, and I cannot afford any more.

(Signed) Mrs. —"

Easter Seals are a modest means of giving your support to rehabilitation work, and treatments and orthopedic aids supplied to cripples. Lachute Lions Club has applied this fund to many deserving cases in the past, and hopes, with public cooperation, to continue its good work in the future.

"TWO BELOW ZERO" is nothing to write an editorial about, in terms of Canadian climate. But the two below zero experienced in some parts of Europe this winter, has been no joke. It has meant coping with frozen water pipes, cars that won't start, and undreamed-of inconveniences all round.

Buildings "over there" are designed for the moderate temperatures which characterize the normal European winter. Homes are comparatively comfortable during "usual" weather, but English and French dwelling constructions are just not designed to withstand this winter's cold snap — the worst in 75 years.

When, overnight, the temperature first dipped to zero last month it is reported from Canada's NATO Air Division headquarters in England and on the Continent, the servicemen went scrambling into greatcoats scorned only the day before.

And while most Canadian car owners had put anti-freeze in their automobiles, few garages were available and cars had to be left outside. And on the road, icy surfaces made travelling difficult; a slight hill often meant an impasse.

Dormer windows, used almost exclusively in Europe, are attractive and fine for warm weather, but with freezing temperatures they proved a headache to the occupants unfamiliar with such devices as weather-stripping. There's little chance of finding a dwelling with double windows in Western Europe, either.

There's no doubt about it. When it's two degrees below zero in Western Europe, it's COLD!

Good Ideas Are Not So Simple

SPORTS CENTRE financing is a problem confronted in most fair-sized communities. In some it is an item of past and painful experience, written off in the red. In Lachute it is a venture vigorously aired at times by those least capable of serious thinking. Yet a sports centre is an adjunct to be desired, to be considered, not with vague hysteria but with reasoning logic.

The uproar in Toronto is of interest here, as in other centres which share this same problem in a smaller way. . . Plans have recently been presented to Toronto city officials for converting the 20,600-seat grandstand in the city-owned Canadian National Exhibition grounds into a stadium capable of holding 60,000 persons for baseball, football, soccer and track and field events.

First reactions were favorable. But the proposal is likely to be pigeon-holed. It's extremely doubtful the city will hand over the $4,000,000 needed to do the job.

Parks commissioner George Bell put the idea to the board of control and said it would fill a long-felt need in the Ontario capital. Sports columnists hailed the plans as the first step in Toronto obtaining a major league baseball franchise.

The exhibition grandstand and its 20,600 seats along Toronto's waterfront is used for stage presentation during the two weeks of the exhibition and for another few weeks for stock-car racing. The rest of the time it gathers cobwebs. Commissioner Bell's argument is, why not spend $4,000,000 to fill the needs for larger quarters and at the time have more extensive use of the grandstand?

The Toronto sports pages praised the idea and there were visions of major league ball within a few years, once a suitable park were available.

But the editorial pages took a different tack.

"It should be understood right now that enlargement of the grandstand will be a money-losing failure unless it results in a major league baseball team coming to Toronto," said one editorial. "It is strictly a gamble. No major league franchise is available now and it may be many more years before one becomes available. We see no good reason why taxpayers' money should be put into such a gamble. . . . "

Other editorials noted rising tax rates in Toronto and suggestions for reduced expenditures on public works. "It is nothing short of fantastic to propose that the city spend several millions on a stadium for the promoters of professional sports," said one column.

The editorials agreed that the people who would benefit most from a new stadium should figure out how to pay for it by—private financing.

Even with property and buildings thrown in, it seems the idea is not so simple.

SOME SAY that cold baths keep you young. But it is recommended that you do not take these rejuvenating baths by crossing lakes or rivers at this time of the year, when the ice is slowly disintegrating but still appears to offer sound footing.

Caution should be exercised by everyone who has occasion to cross lakes or rivers on foot, by car or in a horse-drawn vehicle. Many have not heeded these warnings, with the result that lives have been uselessly lost.

Remember to take your cold bath at home, and not by misadventure in the outdoors.

Pioneer in Conservation

THE LATE Jack Miner, Canadian naturalist, at the beginning of the century said: "As long as we have outlaws we have to have law enforcement officers", but he said for a game warden to prosecute a person after he had shot a bird out of season did not save the bird's life. With this philosophy in his mind in 1904 he started and created his world famous bird sanctuary.

It is termed world famous because during the last fifty years every country in the civilized world has patterned game reserves after the Jack Miner Sanctuary at Kingsville, Ontario. Before Jack Miner died he had helped start and create many, both Federal, State and private sanctuaries, such as the Kellogg Sanctuary in Michigan, the Horicon Marsh in Wisconsin, and he played a big part in the creation of the Everglades National Park in Florida.

Most certainly there were sanctuaries before the Jack Miner Sanctuary, both in America and Europe, but none where artificial feeding was carried on. Jack Miner said, "Hunters feed birds in their marshes to attract them to shoot; isn't it just as sane to feed birds to attract them to a place of safety and give them refuge and save them from extermination."

Penal Reform

THE FEDERAL Government and the provinces are facing increasing pressure from supporters of modern-day trends in penology for major changes in Canadian penitentiaries and jails.

Representations for penal reform have been received by the two levels of government from most welfare organizations across Canada. Chief among them is the John Howard Society which tries to help convicts on their release from prison.

These organizations take the position that Canada's penal system is antiquated because it lays too much stress on punishment and not enough on rehabilitation. They argue that as a result many men sent to prison on first offences become hardened criminals while in custody.

The penal reformists want living conditions in penitentiaries and jails improved. They say they now are intolerable, particularly from the standpoint of crowding.

In addition, they want penal institutions provided with facilities to reform prisoners. At present, they say, only a few convicts receive an opportunity to learn a trade to enable them to earn a living when they return to society.

The views of these organizations have received sympathetic consideration by federal penitentiary authorities. And plans now are in the making for the construction of one new penitentiary in Western Canada and one in the east. The government already has decided to build a modern women's prison in Ontario.

However, federal officials point out that the type of system proposed by modern penologists will cost a lot of money. They say financial limitations will prevent any overnight reform of existing penal institutions.

Senator David Croll, outspoken Liberal senator from Ontario, urges that the existing system be investigated by a royal commission or a Senate committee. He couples his plea for reform with a demand for a new official attitude toward criminals.

Senator Croll says too many Canadians still think that a person who has committed a crime has forfeited all his rights to be considered and treated as a human being. He said it's time for Canadians to be shocked into recognizing that Canadian thinking on penology is at least 50 years behind the times.

Expansion Ahead

PLANNED investment in Canada in 1956 involves an increase of 21 per cent over expenditures made in 1955 — according to a report tabled in the House of Commons by the Rt. Hon. C. D. Howe, Minister of Trade and Commerce.

The estimates are based on a survey of some 16,000 business establishments across Canada and upon surveys of proposed expenditures by governments, institutions and private house builders.

It is questionable whether the scale of expansion indicated by the survey will be physically attainable within the current year, in the opinion of the Minister. By almost any measure, the announced plans for 1956 constitute the most ambitious program of capital spending undertaken in the post-war period. Not only would this be the highest level ever recorded, but the increase from last year, in volume terms, realized is substantially greater than that realized in any year since 1947.

The largest planned increases in capital spending in 1956 are in the mining, manufacturing and utilities industries, it is noted.

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK By R. J. SCOTT

• Geoff's Journal •

HI-FIDELITY RUN AROUND

Last Christmas, I devoted some of my ill-gotten gains toward purchasing a hi-fi record player. The model I selected was a so-called "portable" which, according to the experts, devests it of all claim to the title "hi-fi". Luckily, the machine was furnished with a three-months' guarantee because, from the day I got it until this, it has spent more time in the repair shop than it has in my home.

"What seems to be the trouble with it?" the salesman asked when I first took it in.

"It bumps."

"Bumps?"

"Bumps. About the middle of each record it starts to bump and the thump gets progressively louder as the record spins to its finish."

"Well, sir, I'm sure we can adjust that quite easily. Just leave it with me a few days and we'll have it put right for you."

So I did as the salesman suggested and left it with him. When he called me three days later to tell me it was ready and that the bump no longer existed. I thought I had spelled finis to my worries. Within a week, however, I was on the salesman's doorstep again, record player in hand.

"What seems to be the trouble this time?" he asked.

"It bumps."

"Bumps? But it can't. We fixed it so it wouldn't."

"But it does bump, and twice as loudly as before."

"Well, I can't understand that at all. We've sold any number of these machines and we've never had a complaint."

"So? You've got one now. And I don't want the machine if it insists on bumping."

"All right then," the salesman sighed, "leave it with us again and we'll find out what the trouble is."

So, once again I parted company with the player and received assurance from the firm that the sales manager would look into it and that the machine would be given a thorough factory overhaul before it was returned to me.

One week later, the sales manager called me to say that the player was back from the factory and would I pick it up.

Thus assured that my troubles were over, I went to the store and took possession of the thing once more. But within three days I was back again. The sales staff were waiting for me and before I could open my mouth the sales manager opened fire.

"Now don't tell me it still bumps. I personally looked over the machine and made sure it was in good working order."

"Well maybe that's what's wrong then. Perhaps you shouldn't have taken a hand in repairing it. Instead of bumping once per revolution, it now bumps twice."

The salesman shook his head.

"I can't understand it. I just can't understand it. We've sold any number . . .

". . . of these machines," I cut in, "and I'm the first person that's had any trouble."

"That's right," he said, "how did you know?"

"You told me that several times before. O.K. So I'm a crackpot and don't know the first thing about hi-fi or record players and I shouldn't be allowed out without my keeper. But I do know that I'm not taking that machine back again under any conditions."

The salesman must have sensed I meant business and agreed to get me a replacement as soon as possible. That was three weeks ago. The replacement arrived this morning.

I've given the new machine a series of rigid tests and — touch wood — it's come through with flying colors. I'm hopeful that my hi-fi troubles are now at an end. But if I know anything about this machine, it's going to play it cagey. It will work like a charm for ninety days, at which time the guarantee will run out.

On the ninety-first day, I fully expect it to explode. If it does, it will not begin to compare with the explosion I shall stage for the benefit of the sales staff who foisted it onto me!

ALL ABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore

Some people believe that there should be no meddling with nature Their theme song is that old favorite of the 1940's "Doing Wha Comes Naturally."

They oppose the chlorination and fluoridation of water. The more zealous of them also take a sour view of inoculation, vaccination and chemical sprays and fertilizers.

They may be right about some things. Public health officials here and there are nervous about the long-range effect of certain chemical sprays on the people who eat the produce.

But I don't think we would be wise to give Mother Nature all her own way. The old lady has some odd notions. You can never tell when she may get violent. Her idea of a joke is to smile sweetly while she draws a knife to stab you in the liver.

Let's be frank. Mother Nature is a dear old creature, but there are times when she must be restrained.

Suppose that we decide to live a more natural life. We quit chlorinating the water. We quit pasteurising the milk and inoculating children against disease.

Now a cute little germ called Salmonella Typhosa appears on the scene. This nature child launches himself into our natural water and our natural milk. Pretty soon a number of us are dead of typhoid.

However, we have the consolation of knowing that we died natural deaths. You might call that a return to nature on a large scale.

Our vanity leads us to assume that Nature's plans are made for the benefit of the human race in general and for ourselves in particular. This is a mistaken point of view.

It is quite possible that Nature wants to eliminate the whole race. The world could manage comfortably without us. At least the old lady is itching to cross about 90 per cent of us off the books. Left to her own devices, she could do so with speed and efficiency.

Many of us would have been dead long ago if only the fit had been allowed to survive. No doubt our departure would strengthen the race, and lessen the pressure on food supplies.

We are so prejudiced that we refuse to let Nature's plan run its course.

Other forms of life are equally selfish. The typhoid bacilli probably think that they have just as good a right to live as people have.

If the typhoid germs had a public relations department, they would be warning us about the peril of chlorinating the water, and the creeping menace of inoculation.

HISTORIC ROUTE

Cranbrook, B.C. (CP) — A 90-year-old rockshelf canyon trail is being blasted into a full-width road. The old trail let pack trains into the Wild Horse Creek area during a gold boom in the 1880s.

OF MANY THINGS

By Ambrose Hills

Just For Today

I had noticed the man, how fine and pleasant he appeared. So, when he went to the cashier to pay for his lunch, I was the person who noticed when he dropped a little folder from his wallet. He was gone before I could retrieve it and give it to him. Now I carry it in my wallet. In part it reads:

"Just for today I will try to live through this day only, and not tackle my whole life problem at once. I can do something for twelve hours that would appal me if I felt that I had to keep it up for a lifetime.

"Just for today I will adjust myself to what is, and not try to adjust everything to my own desires. I will take my luck as it comes, and fit myself to it.

"Just for today I will try to strengthen my mind. I will study. I will learn something useful, I will not be a mental loafer. I will read something that requires effort, thought and concentration.

"Just for today I will exercise my soul in three ways: I will do somebody a good turn, and not get found out; if anyone knows about it, it will not count. I will do at least two things I do not want to do — just for exercise. I will not show anyone that my feelings are hurt; they may be hurt but today I will not show it."

There was more, equally interesting. Every time I read it I am struck by the fact that we could build a mighty happy nation if each man followed this philosophy. We would not need public charity, if each man were charitable in secret. We'd need precious few laws, if each man followed standards of his own like these.

SPRING PIGS

Spring is just around the corner — but I am not sure which corner it is around. Anyway it will come, and the spring crop of pigs will be coming also. The question is, what are you doing about them?

Right now you are growing a litter of pigs. They aren't in sight but they are there, we hope; maybe 5, 10 or 15 — that depends a lot on what you are feeding the sow. Shorts, middlings, oat moullie, barley, etc., are all useful feeds; but to grow big, healthy pigs you need a lot of other ingredients that aren't in these feeds.

If the sow doesn't get them in her feed, she will draw on her own body, and when that supply is drained, the little pigs die and are either re-absorbed or born dead. YOU LOSE.

A sow has to farrow at least 5 pigs to pay you for her keep, and even then, these 5 pigs have a big debt on their heads that they may never pay. Ten pigs divide this debt in half, and give them a chance to make you some money if handled right. Again, the size and weight of the newborn pig has a tremendous influence on how soon it goes to market. ANOTHER BIG PROFIT FACTOR.

Feed your brood sow PURINA SOW & PIG CHOW until 5 days before farrowing. It has everything in it to grow good pigs. It may cost a little more, but an extra pig farrowed will more than pay the difference. Even if you don't get the extra pig, the extra size of the pigs in the litter will pay the difference.

Feed D & F from 5 days before until 5 days after farrowing. Then switch the sow back to SOW & PIG CHOW. BABY PIG CHOW for the babies from the 4th day on, in a creep, and after PIG STARTENA.

Sanitation all through the farrowing period is most essential. PURINA DISINFECTANT to disinfect the farrowing pen and sow, and at castrating time, is a must. There is none better, and cheap insurance too. Worm the young pigs at 12 weeks with PURINA PIGTAB GRANULES. Won't you try this plan with one litter. We carry all these chows, and we deliver.

Brownsburg — Unstinting credit is given to the fine work done by the Women's Work Committee of the Red Cross, headed by Mrs. Fred Barker. Mrs. Barker has accomplished much in handing out work and getting it accomplished, packaged and shipped in a short time. As proof of their achievement, 1,047 articles were completed and shipped within two months' time. The Red Cross also has on hand sick beds, crutches, canes, wheelchairs and hospital supplies which are loaned free of charge upon request, for a period of three months; or if needed for a longer time, the party concerned must renew the request to the Home Nursing Committee (Mrs. G. Abercrombie or Mrs. Roger Raymond).

Two Brownsburg Boys for Queen's Scout Investiture

Brownsburg — At a meeting of the Boy Scouts Association, Brownsburg Group, held in the Social Club last Monday evening, plans were made for a father-and-son banquet to be held in the Legion Hall, on April 14. The film on the World Jamboree held at Niagara-on-the-Lake last summer, will be shown at this event (providing it is received in time).

The annual Queen's Scout Recognition ceremony will be held in Quebec City, April 7, when 100 or more Queen's Scouts will attend. The ceremony will take place in the Red Chamber, the only remaining provincial Upper Chamber in Canada. There will be a short address by the Queen's representative, the Lieutenant-Governor, followed by a tour of the city. A special train will carry the Queen's Scouts and parents from Montreal to Quebec and return the same day. . .

Scouts Roddie Potter and Allan Johnston, and Scoutmaster Ken Ball, of Brownsburg, will attend this event, when both boys will be invested as Queen's Scouts.

The spring collection of waste paper is scheduled for April 21. It is hoped therefore that all who have paper, magazines, etc., will hold same until the collection is made.

Government and Conservation

the latest, the Mingan Reserve, in the Saguenay county. "Today", continued Mr. Cottingham, "our big game is far better protected, thanks to the air patrol which the Fish and Game Department inaugurated a few years ago. Predators such as the fox and the timber wolf are now under focus and the Department has taken practical steps to encourage the hunting of such predators, in addition to the bounty which the Colonization Department pays on the timber wolf."

Thanks to the co-operation of the Fish and Game Department, he added, the Quebec Wildlife Federation was able to effectively coordinate the conservation efforts of the various Fish and Game Associations; that is why the Fish and Game Department has always co-operated closely every time that the resolutions brought forward were truly in the interest of the majority of the people. And every year at this time, the Fish and Game Department manifests its co-operation with the Federation by setting up the splendid booth which will again this year attract thousands upon thousands of sportsmen.

In closing, Mr. Cottingham had words of congratulation to promoters of the 5th Sportsmen's Show, and expressed the wish that the spirit which prevailed at the Show Mart be a guide to all, if our natural resources such as our wildlife are to remain throughout the province the great recreational and tourist assets they have always been in the past.

Saturday Crowds Witness Parade For St. Patrick's

Main Street was crowded with interested spectators last Saturday afternoon, March 17, when the local Catholic Women's League sponsored Lachute's first St. Patrick's Day Parade.

Featured in the procession was the St. Patrick's College bugle band from Ottawa, who also appeared in the Montreal parade on Sunday. The band comprises 40 boys from the ages of 11 to 17.

Local units taking part included the 131st Battery of the 37th Field Regiment, under direction of Captain Lawrence Robinson and Sgt.-Major Dick MacLean; the Lachute Highland Cadets, under Captain Gordon Tabrett, and the 1st Lachute Troop of Boy Scouts, under Scoutmaster Tom Smith. An army vehicle and gun carrier accompanied the local militia unit.

The procession marched down Main Street, south on Mary Street, then east on Bedard Boulevard, turning north on Bethany Street until they reached Muir Bros. Service Station, where the bugle band continued their playing for the entertainment of the gathering crowd. The bugle band then paraded to the Auditorium, where they dismissed. The boys were entertained at the homes of C.W.L. members until their engagement in Montreal next day.

FOOD PLAN SALES
Canada's oldest FOOD PLAN needs additional (bilingual) salesmen . . . We have a good, sound story to tell, and the products to back it up.
We alone in this field OWN our plant, operate only freezer truck delivery, carry nothing but Red and Blue Western Steer Beef, Fancy Quality Pictsweet Fruits and Vegetables (guaranteed by Good Housekeeping) a full line of Admiral, Frigidaire and Quickfrez freezers with financing by GMAC. Recently our revolutionary E-Z-PART packaging was acclaimed an outstanding advance by the "Frozen Food Centre" — North America's leading frozen food magazine.
To help this new method of food purchasing through its growing stages, we alone have taken on the hapless food customers of the "Phoney Food Plans", who have already gone bankrupt or have failed to live up to their promises.
Remuneration and details will be discussed during an interview. Write giving full details of what you have to offer in the way of sales experience and background to:

Probably Extend Term Rt. Hon. Vincent Massey As Governor-General

Ottawa (CP) — Rt. Hon. Vincent Massey, whose normal five-year term is due to expire in February, 1957, likely will serve an extra year or more as Canada's Governor-General.

No Governor-General has remained in office for two full five-year terms, but four have received extensions — three for one year and one for two years.

The likelihood of a general election in mid-1957 virtually assures extension of Mr. Massey's term. Prime Minister St. Laurent is unlikely to nominate a Governor-Geperal before it is held.

Mr. Massey's willingness to serve and his general success as Canada's first native-born Governor-General are other reasons why extension seems likely.

The Governor-General, who is 69, was scheduled to leave the capital this Tuesday on a 17-day, 10,000-mile tour of the far north. The tour will make him the first Governor-General to travel through the high Arctic and circle the north pole.

The flight over the north pole is scheduled March 25, and he returns to Ottawa April 5 by way of the Yukon, and The Pas, Man.

Predecessors who were given extensions were the Earl of Dufferin, who served six years until 1878, the Earl of Minto, six years until 1904, Earl Grey, seven years up to 1911 and Earl Alexander, six years up to 1952.

St. Jerome Diocese Council of C.W.L.

The second executive meeting of St. Jerome Diocesan Council of the Catholic Women's League, was held in Rosemere on March 13, at the home of its president, Mrs. F. M. MacFarlane and under the new directorship of Father Romeo Raymond of Lachute.

Plans were made concerning the forthcoming Diocesan Convention to be held in Rosemere in June. Miss L. Harrison, of Lachute, and Mrs. L. LaMothe, of Rosemere, were named co-conveners on the program committee for this event.

— Jehovah's Witnesses —

This week is WATCH TOWER WEEK in Lachute!

Get the special issue, April 1, 1956, of The Watch Tower. Read the interesting articles, "Making All Mankind One Under the Creator", also "Communist Leaders Fear Bible Truth".

"All mankind should be one!" That is the opening sentence of the thrilling April 1 Watchtower. Simple, straightforward, down to earth, it shows that never has mankind been more seriously divided than now. All worldly schemes for unity, whether political or religious, have failed. Yet brotherhood is possible.

Where did disunity originate? Why does it exist? Why was Christ's death necessary? How is God involved in the unity that even religions do not provide? How can you gain it? These are important questions.

A second article deals with the Communists' fear of Bible truth, their vicious persecution of Jehovah's witnesses, and with the activity of Jehovah's witnesses in Russia even now.

What is it like to be in a slave labor camp? What happens to Jehovah's witnesses there? How was the great April, 1951, purge against the witnesses carried out? What happens when camp guards and office workers heed the preaching and themselves become witnesses? How have the Communists defeated their own purpose in imprisoning Bible believers? These are interesting questions.

Read the answers for yourself in the April 1 "Watchtower", Price $1 per year. — Write The Watch Tower, 150 Bridgeland Avenue, Toronto 10, or ask any of Jehovah's Witnesses you may happen to meet.

AMONG THE CHURCHES

Local Pastor Ends Ministry

This Sunday brings to a close the three years of ministry to People's Church, Lachute and St. Eustache-sur-le-Lac, of the Rev. L. E. Tuck. Mr. Tuck began his work here on May 28, 1953. Since then he has been able to establish a new congregation in the growing settlement of St. Eustache-sur-le-Lac, and has seen the local following enlarged to some degree.

The Rev. L. E. Tuck has been invited to go to Toronto with the Association which he represents, with a view to other fields of activity within the denomination. "It is with regret that I leave this community and I wish to thank all my friends for making my sojourn here as enjoyable as it has been," he states in a farewell message.

Mrs. E. J. Rogers gave an interesting review of the final chapters of the study book, "No Vanishing Race", dealing with the Canadian Indians.

Pre-Easter Film for United Ch. Presentation

The long-awaited pre-Easter film, "Journey Into Faith", is to be shown at the Lachute United Church on Sunday evening. A warm invitation is given to old and new friends, also to friends from churches which do not have an evening service.

This film is based on events recorded in Gospel according to St. Luke, Chapter 24, verses 13-33, in which is recorded the story of the walk to Emmaus on the first Easter Day, and has a strong appeal for young people and adults.

For the past two Sunday evenings the Rev. Wilson Bridge, minister of the church, has been dealing with modern religious cults and movements. This series will be continued on the Sunday evening following Easter Day.

Choir Offers Token Of Appreciation

After the regular rehearsal last Thursday, the Lachute United Church choir held a social evening in honor of its past director, Jack F. Gorman, who resigned in January after a little over two and a half years as leader of the choir.

Tasty refreshments were served, after which Mr. Owen Todd, a friend and musical associate of long standing, made the presentation speech on behalf of the choir. A beautiful fountain pen was given to the recipient, who responded briefly in appreciation. He recalled the many happy times spent during his long association with the choir, and of the quartet days with Owen and Doug Todd, Chas. Duncan and Miss Ruth Todd, 20-odd years ago. He reviewed recent choral presentations, and expressed his pleasure in passing the duties of choir director over to Mr. E. Callicott.

A spontaneous vote of thanks was also given Mrs. Gordon Dobbie, who had helped in the preparation of the refreshments. With the organist, Wayne Riddell, at the piano, some of the young fry and a few of the courageous oldsters, gave a brief demonstration of modern (1956) and old-time (1936) dancing, respectively.

Bible Briefs

By A.A.M.

The Bible is rich in stories, and the purpose of this series is to encourage readers to look up for themselves the Bible versions of these incidents. If there are children in the family it is suggested that the story, and the Bible verses on which it is based, be read aloud.

What was the name of the King of Massa whose mother directed him in the ways of temperance? After warning him against lack of chastity, she spoke these words of counsel:

"It is not for kings to drink wine or for rulers to desire strong drink; lest they drink and forget what has been decreed, and pervert rights of the afflicted. Give strong drink to him who is perishing, and wine to those in bitter distress. It is true that drink blots out the memory of poverty and misery. But a ruler must speak for the dumb; he must look after the desolate. One in authority must judge righteously and maintain the rights of the poor and the needy."

You will find this King's name whose mother advised him with these words of wisdom in Proverbs Chapter 31, Verses 1 to 9.

A man would know nothing if he waited until he could do it so well that no one would find fault with what he has done.

Hot Debate on Govt. Participation In 'Longest Pipeline in the World'

THE WEEK IN OTTAWA
By Roy LaBerge, Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, March 19 (CP) — Indications of a hot and heavy battle ahead appeared as the Commons opened discussion on a resolution preliminary to a bill setting up a crown corporation to build part of a trans-Canada natural gas pipeline.

Battle lines were drawn as Progressive Conservative and CCF leaders attacked the plan which calls for the federal and Ontario governments to join in building part of the proposed $375,000,000 line from Alberta to the east.

Rev. E. G. Hansell, acting Social Credit leader, said government aid to the pipeline project was necessary because of policies which did not encourage Canadian sharing in the development of resources.

Nevertheless he indicated support of the plan.

The proposal, which Trade Minister Howe called the best of any known, calls for Ontario to pay one-third of the cost of the $118,000,000 section of the line from the Manitoba border to Kapuskasing, Ont., up to a maximum of $35,000,000.

The link would be leased, with option to purchase, to Trans-Canada Pipe Lines Ltd., builders and owners of the remainder of what Mr. Howe termed the longest pipeline in the world.

CCF Force Vote

The CCF served notice on the government that it has a hard battle on its hands by taking a rare step. The CCF forced a formal vote on the routine procedural motion to refer the preliminary resolution for consideration by committe of the whole House. The motion was adopted 199 to 20, only the CCF voting against it.

CCF informants said they forced the division as a demonstration of all-out opposition to the cabinet's proposal.

Opposition leader Drew said there was no evidence the pipeline could not be wholly financed by private investment under Canadian control.

He said the government should insist that Trans-Canada be reorganized to build an all-Canadian line imemdiately under Canadian control. If Trans-Canada — incorporated five years ago to do the job — could not proceed now, then the whole matter should be reopened and new interests permitted to make proposals.

CCF leader Coldwell joined Mr. Drew in attacking what was described as American domination of Trans-Canada.

Mr. Howe said control of the company, now sponsored largely by United States money in the preconstruction stages, is open to Canadians when its voting stock goes on the market.

Over the Years with THE LACHUTE WATCHMAN

75 YEARS AGO

March 25, 1881 —

The Lachute Paper Mill has commenced operations, and Mr. Wilson expects to have the first paper made on Monday.

The Lachute Mills have such a run of work that they are quite unable to supply their customers' needs, and are importing flour to keep up the demands.

The hard frosts of the week have done some damage to the fruit trees.

Maple syrup and sugar are low in price this year, compared with other seasons.

St. Andrews — Our people seem earnest in their endeavor to obtain a branch railway from Lachute, to some point between St. Andrews and Carillon, which will afford reasonable accommodation to both villages and give ready means of transit to Montreal for the products of the surrounding country.

50 YEARS AGO

March 23, 1906 —

Mr. Geoffroy Bedard is now comfortably settled in his large and commodious shop on the Main Street, which he has opened as a fine tailoring establishment. The building is of brick and two storeys high, the upper part being arranged as a dwelling.

Carillon — Mr. Wm. Robinson has recently opened and put into operation his grist mill, which he established in this vicinity some time ago.

Monalea — Dr. Shaw, of St. Andrews, had a narrow escape on the river opposite Mrs. J. Lennon's recently. He was driving down the ice quite leisurely and failed to notice the distance he had travelled, when animal instinct urged the horse to stop and immediately the doctor realized he had reached the open channel — in fact so near that backing out was necessary, the space being too limited to turn.

25 YEARS AGO

March 27, 1931 —

Mr. Jas. Hay was unfortunate in having one of his sugar camps completely destroyed by fire early Sunday morning. How the fire started is not known, as everything was in order when Mr. Hay left the premises the previous night.

While the play of the Literary and Dramatic Society was in progress last Friday, Fire Chief Deacon and several of his men who were in attendance, were called out to a fire at Morrissette's in the West End. The blaze was soon brought under control, though the interior was damaged to the extent of about $1,500, which was fully covered by insurance.

Brownsburg — On Monday of this week, our village was greatly shocked by the sound of a terrific explosion at the C-I-L plant, when at 2.15 p.m. one of the buildings of the ammunition division was razed to the ground while its sole occupant, Alex Masson, was engaged in his usual duties of preparing the explosives used in the manufacture of shells and detonators.

Grenville — The enlargement of the canal is in progress and is giving quite a number work.

Brownsb'g Takes Hockey Finals 4-3, Wins Quebec-Ontario Championship

Brownsburg — Echoes of the tumult and the shouting will probably be still ringing around Brownsburg by the time this gets into print, for on Tuesday night Brownsburg won the cup. The final hooter was the signal and pandemonium broke loose as crowds (most of the 1,100 fans) mobbed the ice and almost tramped the weary players into the ice in their enthusiasm.

It was really only a three-game series as the first four were marred by scrappy, body-breaking hockey. Hawkesbury won the first two more on account of Brownsburg's lethargy, than their own good play. Brownsburg came back to tie the series in the next two games, but in those Hawkesbury was badly undermanned.

The last three games, which attracted 3,000 fans, were real play-off gems — fast goal-to-goal play, and a minimum of penalties. The fifth game was Brownsburg's best of the series as they mauled Hawkesbury 9-1. True, Hawkesbury were one man short — Giroux, their best defenceman, but the way Brownsburg played that night, nobody in this class of hockey could stop them.

Sunday's tilt, the sixth, was a great game but a bitter blow to Brownsburg. They were almost as good as the previous evening, but lady luck was not with them. Fortin goaled miraculously and he was ably assisted by goal-posts, legs, arms and anything or anyone who could keep Brownsburg from scoring.

By the end of the second period they could with luck have been four or five goals ahead instead of tied 2-2. Hawkesbury started to move in the last period, and gathering steam all the time they started the big push halfway through the period to roll over Brownsburg with four goals.

The final was a straight reversal of Sunday's game. The Bombers, disconsolate without the service of star winger Jacques Racine, just didn't seem to have much up front.

The first pressure by Hawkesbury put them in front, as Willis McAdam, who has deflected several dozen scoring shots all season, had the heartbreak of diverting one into the nets away from the covering goaler. From then till the end of the second period Hawkesbury besieged Buddy Racine's goal . . . but they found the defence solid and Buddy in unbeatable form. Time after time the puck seemed to scream past him, but each time he'd bring up the big mitt and there it was where it does least damage.

In the course of this siege Routhier was penalized for holding, and for an onslaught on Fortin. Paul-Emile Hebert poked the puck into the net in a goalmouth mêlée. It was such a small goal to be a big equalizer! Twenty seconds later Paul broke through all alone to shell one past Fortin for a big, big leading goal.

The second period was a continuation of the barrage on the Brownsburg goal, and eventually Hawkesbury did manage to squeeze one past Racine.

In the third stanza Brownsburg team came out with a new lease on life. Hawkesbury couldn't get out of their own end long enough to restart their onslaught. In a series of rebounds, André Ouellette found the puck at his feet and a heap of players in front of the goal! He coolly picked his spot, and the crowd went wild. The pressure kept up and five minutes later Jacques Leveillé followed André's example — and the cup became Brownsburg property.

Brownsburg now plays in the Ottawa Citizen Shield and it's fairly well conceded they'll be eliminated by the higher-class competition. The big thing to bear in mind, though, is that Brownsburg has been defying the odds again and again in its march to the cup.

A review and appraisal of the Brownsburg team personnel, will be carried in next issue, due to pressure of space this week.

It is notable in this final series that a total of 6,255 admissions was recorded at the rink box-office for the seven exciting games.

Climate in Sport

From winter to summer in one jump and we find Toronto's Don Fontana, young Canadian Davis Cup ace, gave up the tour because he couldn't play for very long in the 100-degree temperature of India. It took too much out of him.

All of which points up the fact that climate plays a big part in athletics.

United States athletes who come to Canada to play football have often complained of the bitter cold of our late fall. The passers say it slows up their arm, and the ends and backs say their hands get so numb they can't hang onto the ball.

Atmosphere, too, plays a part. During the Pan American games in the mountains of Mexico last year, many of the United States and Canadian athletes collapsed from lack of oxygen because of the rare atmosphere.

The men who select the sites for Olympic and Pan American games might take this into consideration. Perhaps they could invent a handicap system so that athletes competing in a climate foreign to them could compete on an even basis with native athletes.

Jim Duncan To Get Trophy For Bowling Feats

Jim Duncan will be the recipient of a bowling trophy, in a presentation at the Bolodrome this Sunday when the Brunette Bros., proprietors, will honor his numerous bowling feats during the past season.

Jim finished the season in fine style, having the best individual average in the two leagues he competes in — leading the Men's Commercial with an average of 151 and racking up a 156 average in the Mixed Commercial.

In addition, Jim was one of the stars of "The Happy Gang" league, the local team copping the seasonal honors, and a member of the Lachute Stars team which battles for local honors with a similar Brownsburg squad.

The honored bowler bears the distinction of having rolled the highest number of triples between the 400 and 500 mark. A perpetual trophy will also be presented to him in recognition of the time and effort he has given as active president of the Mixed League.

The presentations will take place during the final series between the Lachute - St. Jerome teams, now playing-off for the championship, at 2 p.m. Sunday.

Novelty Tournament By Anglican Bowlers

The Anglicans held a novelty bowling contest, in which each team played four games of four ends each, with the order of play reversed — the teams being skipped by the first or lead player.

The Stars accumulated the most points and were declared the winners, with the lowest score going to the Arrows.

The ladies provided refreshments and the prizes awarded to the winning teams of Gordon Silverson, highest, and Mrs. C. R. Lang, the lowest.

The playoffs are scheduled to commence on April 2 at 7.30 p.m. sharp, between Stars and Swallows. The winners will meet Detroit to decide the second place.

Playoffs Underway, Un. Church Bowling

All 12 teams of the United Church Bowling League entered into the playoff games on Monday evening, several of the contests were close; and many of the lower-placed teams gave a good account of themselves.

In the A Series, the league-leading East Settlement team (Les Gordon) went into an early lead of 7-1, but in the 6th end, their opponents, Lachute Road (Mrs. E. Barker) got a six-ender, thus tying up the game. From there on, the latter team won every end, finally winning 13-7. The other A Series game, Red Cross (Mrs. F. McGill) vs. St. George's (Wm. Wilson), was closer. It was a battle all the way, and a gong-ringing default of St. George's team gave the Red Cross 2 counters, which helped them to win 8-6.

The B Series, composed of the eight lower-placed teams, resulted as follows: W.M.S. Blues (Mrs. H. Riddell) defeated All Stars (Mrs. M. McFaul) 11-3; W.M.S. Reds (Miss Grace Rosser) skipped by Mrs. A. Blute, tied with the Sunday School Teachers (Miss M. Gordon) 9-9, with another gong default giving the W.M.S. team a two count; St. Andrews, (Foster Campbell) won against Women's Assn. (Mrs. L. Dion) 8-5; and the Thistles (J. F. Gorman) defeated St. David's (Merlyn Evans) 14-3.

All these opponents will play again, at the same time. The total scores of the two games will result in six teams being eliminated. The winners of Section A will meet, and the four survivors of Section B will also play-off, on the following Monday.

Lachute Girls Win Basketball Crown

Pat Stansfield, Marjorie Hay, Elsie Touchette and Eleanor MacAdam all played masterfully and contributed to the scoring. Guards Heather Jones, Jean Taylor, Rose Anne Welden, Joanne Steele and Heather MacTavish played as if their lives depended on the game, and although none of these defence stalwarts managed to score, they set up numerous plays and, more important, kept the ball out of the L.H.S. basket. Shirley Pollock unfortunately sprained her ankle in the opening minutes of the final, and was unable to continue her fine showing exhibited in the previous game.

According to on-the-spot reporters, some of the shooting displayed by the winning lassies made the members of the men's teams in attendance flinch. Coach Bob Bailey, who for the past several years has been tirelessly coaching the team, demonstrated that girls' basketball can be jut as exciting as men's when played well.

Local spectators swelled with pride as they saw the brilliant display which completely bewildered their opponents and ended up with picture baskets, with evidence of team-play throughout the series.

The boys' team qualified for the playoffs by eliminating Hull and Ste. Agathe, while the girls were successful in defeating Brownsburg, Hull and Hudson High Schools. Competition for the L.H.S. boys began at 10.30 at Sherbrooke High, where they were victorious over a team from Richmond, 51-43. This qualified them for the semi-finals against Quebec City, who were also victors in their first-round game.

At 4 p.m. in Bishop's University gym, these two teams began the second round of competition. The local boys held the powerful Quebec team until half time, but superior bench-strength and accurate shooting gave the victory to Quebec. This eliminated the Lachute boys from further competition and sent Quebec into the finals against Lennoxville High, who previously had eliminated Hudson. The Quebec High team were victorious.

Joe Louis in Mat Game Working for Uncle Sam

By Ken Romain,
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Joe Louis, whose stunning ability to knock out opponents earned him perhaps a couple of million dollars in his heyday, is back looking for more. This time in the wrestling game.

After six years as a wrestling referee the old Brown Bomber, now 41, has taken the plunge and become a participant.

However, the former world heavyweight champion still hasn't decided to make the grappling business a full-time career despite the offer of a $150,000 contract. And Joe can use the money.

Before making the big decision he said that he wanted to see what the reception of his first efforts in the mat game would be. And how he would fare himself.

But it was money that prompted the return. The United States internal revenue department has been plauguing his recent years with past due bills totalling $1,210,789 in tax claims.

That he also has the obligation of keeping the family larder filled was another inducement. The former world champion married again last December.

Really Tangled

In fact, that couple of million that he picked up while dropping opponents has proved to be the nemesis of Joe's peaceful retirement.

He still has to study the ins and outs of any proposition involving big money. Louis has been wrestling with the government for so long that any wrestling he does now will be for the benefit of Uncle Sam more than anybody else. Joe's tax matters, covering the years 1946 to 1951 are still in tax court.

Louis says the government boys "have been very nice to me." But it was their insistent demands that forced him out of retirement before.

His comeback to regain his world crown didn't get far. The fatal swing was still in his hands but the spring had gone from his legs. Joe called it quits for good.

Then came the refereeing chores, although he wasn't the first former world champ to take up the practice. Jack Sharkey had preceded him before that and was making a comfortable living.

He also wouldn't be the first to enter the ring as a grappler. Primo Sarnera, the Italian giant, probably ended up with more money in this activity than he ever did while he towered over the others in the fistic game.

Promoters have been raising the ante to get Joe to come around their way of capitalizing big names in big money. One promoter offered Louis $100,000 a year if he would go into the business for real. When Joe didn't fall he raised the offer to $150,000.

Louis took preparatory instructions for his first bout to go with some of the tricks that he had picked up during six years of refereeing. He also started a slimming diet to trim down some of his 240 pounds.

Joe's wrestling mentor was Nature Boy Buddy Rogers and he recently refereed a bout between Rogers and veteran Cowboy Rocky Lee. As usually happens, where everything often happens, Lee threw a punch at Rogers, who ducked, and the blow nailed Joe.

Louis disqualified Lee, who flew into a chest-beating rage and challenged Louis. Who did Louis meet in his first match? Why Cowboy Rocky Lee, natch!

Cars ARE MY Line

by ARMAND DESROSIERS

A few weeks ago in a large eastern city a young woman was driving home along a narrow, busy street. Her wheels stuck in the street car tracks and plowed the car head-first into the front of a heavy tow truck. It was a bad smash-up but the girl stepped out with only a few scrapes and bumps.

The police officer who investigated the accident wrote in his report: "In my opinion, she escaped more serious injury because of the safety belt in the car."

This was probably the first spontaneous and unrehearsed accident in which a car safety belt proved its worth. Their advantage, of course, is that they hold the driver, and his passengers, tight in their seats when the car stops suddenly, keeping them away from the windshield, dash-board and steering wheel.

Many safety organizations have sung the praises of safety belts and some police departments have had them installed in their cruisers.

It's a gloomy subject, but one which should be considered sanely and frankly. My feeling has been that the safety belt in itself doesn't prevent accidents and may, in fact, cause more accidents. Any device which makes a cocksure driver more cocksure, which virtually assures a smart aleck that he can do anything he wants without fear of being hurt, is liable to put a new breed of menace on to the road.

For my money the best safety devices are those which actually prevent accidents — a responsive engine, reliable steering and good brakes. These are the factors that get our closest attention when a car comes on to our lot for resale. It is part of our responsibility, we feel, to send cars onto the road that are as safe as the best mechanics can make them.

Three Plays for Easter, Television and Radio

"The Hill" by Paul Armand

In the everyday lives of ordinary Christian folk, the crucifixion is not simply past history. In the events of Holy Week and Easter they see the revelation of God's eternal purpose for mankind. Now, what is eternal is just as much present and future as past, and so it can be entered into today.

That is why in "The Hill" the Paul Almond play, has been selected for CBC-TV production on Good Friday (10 p.m. March 30) — writes the Rev. Brian Freeland in CBC Times. . . Consciously or otherwise we are all actors in this drama. We are not looking at some past event in an academic way. What is happening in Jerusalem cannot comfortably be blamed on certain individuals who were monstrously wicked. Christ is dying on the Cross because we are no better than we are. You will not see Him on your screen. It might tempt you to sit back and take this as a play about Him, whereas this is a play which involves you. At the most, a television camera could present the figure of Jesus of Nazareth, and that is not enough. In a world which has known the horrors of Buchenwald, the physical horrors of the crucifixion might not make much of a mark, though they might lead us to wonder why the sufferings of one man should be considered worthy of remembrance in 1956. You will not see Him because the thing which makes Good Friday eternally valid is that it is the Christ who bears this burden. And the Christ is perceived by faith.

The Rev. Hugh Bishop, C.R., speaking in Holy Week last year, put the matter this way: "The God whom I worship was born in a stable at Bethlehem, and 33 years later was arrested one night, and after a trial which was a mockery of justice he was beaten up and savagely scourged and eventually nailed to a cross and crucified, because he 'so loved the world' and every human being in it. And the God whom all others wroship, whatever else they may believe about him, was not born at Bethlehem; he was not arrested or beaten up or scourged, he did not stand defenceless before Pilate and he did not give his life for us."

This is the Christian faith; no electronic device can possibly portray it; you apprehend it by faith, or not at all.

"The Everlasting Mercy" by John Masefield

(3 p.m., March 30, on Trans-Canada)

John Lucarotti has adapted the Poet Laureate's long poem, written at the turn of the century. The story centres on Saul Kane, poacher and ne'er-do-well, and "it shows how the victory over sin and death achieved by Christ on the Cross is present and effective today," says Mr. Freeland. The production is in the hands of Rupert Caplan of CBC Montreal and special music is being prepared by Neil Chotem. The play is in verse throughout. Lucarotti also adapted a religious play called "The Vigil", by Ladislas Fodor, for CBC radio; the production later won an Ohio Award.

"Everyman" — A Morality Play

(10 p.m., March 30 on Dominion)

This is a new BBC production produced by Basil Taylor, who considers the intimacy of radio a good substitute for the circumstances in which the morality play was originally put on in 15th-century England.

In modern times, "Everyman" was re-discovered" in the mid-18th century but was only read, and not acted, until 1901 when William Poel, a pioneer student of the Elizabethan stage, tried it out in London, as an experiment. Since then it has become a firm favorite, especially in England, in the theatre, in the churches and one the air.

Telling "how the High Father of Heaven sendeth Death to summon every creature to come and give account of their lives in this world," it is the story of Everyman's journey to the grave. Deserted by his friends and, when they hear of his destination, by Knowledge, Beauty, Strength, Five Wits and Discretion, he is left wth Good Deeds as his only companion.

Omerod Greenwood, who edited the play for broadcasting, says: "The coming of death was a favorite subject in late medieval literature, but it was usually treated grotesquely, with wildly exciting diabolic temptations, fantastic assaults, and a gloating over the many forms of the final agony. There is nothing of this in 'Everyman'. We have tried to keep it as simple as it is; and if we succeed we know it will still give its message."

THE SEIGNIORY CLUB
AS IT IS TODAY

PART III. Around the Premises

By Ethel Kettyle

Now that we have investigated the main attractions of the Seigniory Club, we take a walk around the premises. First we do the interior and it is interesting to see the photographs, names and scores of many of the curlers, which have been posted up. As we proceed, we notice the cosy alcoves fitted with desks, where one may pause and write a letter or telegram to friends. We peek into the card and TV rooms, and later into the moving picture room, then stop for a longer time to study the photographs on the walls of many famous persons who have visited and stayed for a time at the Club, and we find included in the portraits — ex-president Harry Truman, Earl and Countess Mountbatten, Viscount and Lady Alexander, Princess Juliana and her two daughters, the Crown Prince of Japan, movie actor Bing Crosby, and the movie actresses Bette Davis and Madeline Carroll and many others. The RCAF fighter ace Squadron-Leader A. R. MacKenzie and his wife spent some time at the Club; and it will be remembered that "Andy" MacKenzie, as he has been familiarly called, was released in December 1954 after two years' imprisonment in a Chinese Communist prisoner-of-war camp, after having been shot down in North Korea.

We peer from large windows out across the Ottawa River at a famous old residence, which was formerly owned by Ottawa's millionaire lumber king, J. R. Booth; this residence has now apparently been passed on to some of his descendants. The open-air skating rink can also be seen, and we pass on to a large glassed-in porch, which affords a view at the ice-walled solarium, set in a shelted angle of the Chateau; this is a favorite spot in which to bask in the sunshine on fine days.

Back to the guest room, which is warm and cosy. There we notice the Gideon Bibles, also interesting copies of "The Seigneur" magazine, of which Miss Hilda Turner is the editor, besides serving as Director of Public Relations for the Club. Now we dress more warmly and proceed to the curling rink, where many of the ladies are happily intent on the "roarin' game". We watch the keen competition for some time . . . and we cannot help but wonder what there is about the old Scottish sport that entices curlers (both men and women) to come by plane, rail and car to compete, but it seemingly has a Highland flavor with heather and bagpipes, and we are told that at the opening of the Club game, the Branch Chaplain offered words of prayer and that the Curé of Montebello blessed the ice. Then the first iron went down.

The bright, sunny day seems to call us outdoors; and there the exterior walls of the huge building, gleaming in the sunshine, and the evergreen trees nearby, remind us of an enchanted castle. As we walk slowly along the driveway, occasionally a horse to which an old-fashioned cutter is harnessed, prances gaily along. Antiquity will ever remain, regardless of the new modes of living; French Canada is a land of many memories, and sleigh drives, hayrides and square dances will ever be loved in this old province of ancient traditions. We see, not far away, the riding stables where the horses are kept, and an old brick building where an artist stored his accoutrements and sometimes went to paint. A short distance away stands the Anglican Chapel. . . . At one time, long ago, the Papineaus who owned the estate had a small brick building which they fitted up as a museum. It was attractive not only to their guests but to the people of the surrounding countryside; and there it stood for many years, housing antiques and curiosities. However, the building has now been remodelled into a little chapel, which is used by the Protestant members of the Seigniory Club, while the Roman Catholics attend the church in the village.

As we enter the chapel in the late afternoon, quietness reigns, and we realize that wherever man is, there is a call to worship. Here, in the quitness of the little church, we think of the beauty which surrounds it at all seasons. In the winter it stands as a beautiful picture among the pines with the towering mountain as a background. . . In the summer we may visualize a moonlit night, with stars in the heavens. Or a summer morning, with glorious sunshine, and the songs of birds in the waving pines. The sunshine on the nearby river, making it sparkle as though covered wfth thousands of diamonds. The beauty of an evening sunset and the strength of the towering Laurentian Mountains, which are all greater than the strength of man. . And now we are on our way to the old Manor House.

OLD SPEEDSTER

The man who drove a Stanley Steamer at 127 m.p.h. 50 years ago at Daytona Beach is still active at Newton, Mass., at age 83. When Fred Marriott made his speed run, an average of 30 miles an hour was considered a daring speed for an auto.

In an interview on the recent anniversary of his run, Marriott told how it felt to travel at such a speed: "The front end was too light and at one stage became airborne. I must have run at least 60 feet on the rear wheels only. We had to put more weight up front to keep from taking off."

POLLOCK & GRAVES MOTORS

This ambitious 18-year-old Scot came to Canada in 1845. Versatile, adaptable, he conquered problem after problem.

In 1851, Fleming designed the first Canadian "Adhesive postage labels." His three penny was the original "Beaver" stamp.

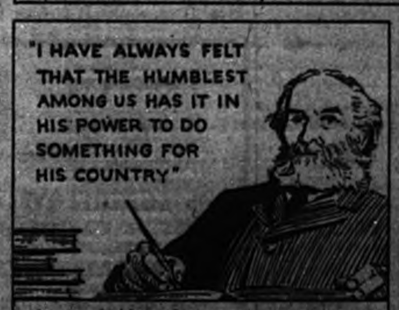

As Chief Engineer, he directed laying of the Intercolonial Railway and the trans-continental C.P.R., completed in 1885.

In 1876, Fleming pioneered a world time system—Standard Time as we know it today. At first he got no support, but finally in 1884, at a 25 nation conference in Washington, his proposals were accepted.

Fleming who was knighted in 1897, then turned to another bold spanning of distances—a cable under the Pacific Ocean completed in 1902. The Prime Minister of New Zealand cables him!

A remarkable and energetic man—a true nation-builder—Fleming was Chancellor of Queen's University for 35 years.

Great though his genius, Fleming was but one of a parade of pioneers whose vision built Canada, backed by men and institutions who provided the financial means to bring their exploits to realization.

Strange things are being done in the name of efficiency.

Now the experts are clamping a pedometer on a housewife's thigh to measure the distance she travels in a day. They want to estimate how hard she works in comparison to her husband or her career-girl sister.

For their week-long study the experts are using a 30-year-old mother of three. Her itinerary is to include entertaining, a daily trip to the supermarket, three meals a day dressing and undressing youngsters, laundry, housecleaning and dozens of other chores she would normally do — all under the eyes of an expert.

At the end of the experiment, the experts think, they will have not only a fair idea of how hard the average housewife works but also some suggestions on how she could save more steps.

To many housewives — even the inefficient — the pedometer experiment is unnecessary. It's a safe bet that thousands of them don't need gadgets to prove they walk farther daily than their husbands.

But any information the experts can come up with regarding the daily output of energy required for housework would prove interesting.

And if the experts want to go into the matter further, maybe they'd better clamp a speedometer on her leg too.

Soup-er Burger

In Winnipeg, Joan Fielden, a home economist, has come up with a super "soup-er" hamburger which she says will satisfy even the most critical gourmet.

"Just cook some ground beef, sliced onion and condensed soup seasoned to taste," she says. "Then heap it between hot hamburger buns and top with the same soup diluted to sauce consistency."

Sounds mighty good!

The Edmonton Calorie Counters, an organization for women who want to lose weight, has decided to hold a banquet. But it's all right — there's to be no cheating. The meal will be limited to 500 calories.

Mrs. Elzear Morin of Kamouraska, Que., will celebrate her 105th birthday, July 12, and she says, she's been looking forward to it.

The centenarian says she's never had a doctor, eats like a bear, sleeps like a child, walks straight as an oak and hears as clear as a bell. She also has a memory like an elephant, she says.

Mrs. Robert Carey, of Sydney Mines, N.S., has become a grandmother for the 100th time. The 72-year-old woman has nine sons and nine daughters — all married; eighty-seven of the grandchildren are living.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Simons, of Swift Current, Sask., recently had reason for a double celebration. They were marking their golden wedding anniversary and for the first time in 19 years they had a family reunion.

Their guests included their seven children — from Abbotsford, Kamloops and Revelstoke in British Columbia; Edmonton, Priestnall and Boak in Alberta and Neidpath Sask., and 15 grandchildren.

A DOZEN SOUPS ARE MEATLESS

— By Anne Marshall —

Even Lenten meals can be tangy, tasty and tempting. Soups, "buy" the dozen, can be served . . . as a solo:

In the above picture a piping hot bowl of vegetable soup is topped with sour cream and served with generous portions of tuna fish salad, tomato juice (garnished with lemon slices centered with a clove) and a hot bread. A juicy winter pear and a favorite cheese completes this tasty meatless meal.

. . . as Soup-Mates:

Cream of Potato Soup with Oyster Stew . . . grate a little crisp carrot over top.

Cream of Celery and Tomato Soup . . . topped with a dash of celery seed.

Cream of Asparagus and Cream of Mushroom . . . shave a little green pepper on top.

Green Pea Soup and New England Clam Chowder . . . "sprigged" with water cress.

. . . as a basic cooking ingredient:

SHRIMP CHIP

1 can (10-ounces) frozen condensed cream of shrimp soup
½ cup milk
1 cup diced cooked shrimp (7-ounce can, drained)
1 cup unsalted cooked peas
1¼ cups crushed potato chips

Combine soup and milk; heat slowly, stirring frequently. Blend with shrimp, peas and 1 cup potato chips in a 1-quart casserole; sprinkle remaining chips on top. Bake in a moderate oven (375°F.) about 25 minutes. 4 servings.

Cheese for Supper

As far as cheese enthusiasts are concerned there is no substitute for cheese with bread and fruit for dessert or snack — but it should be kept in mind that cheese is also a good alternate for meat. In addition to its good flavor and fine nutritional properties cheese has a happy gift of enhancing the flavor of other foods. It is in this capacity that it most often appears in the main course at supper.

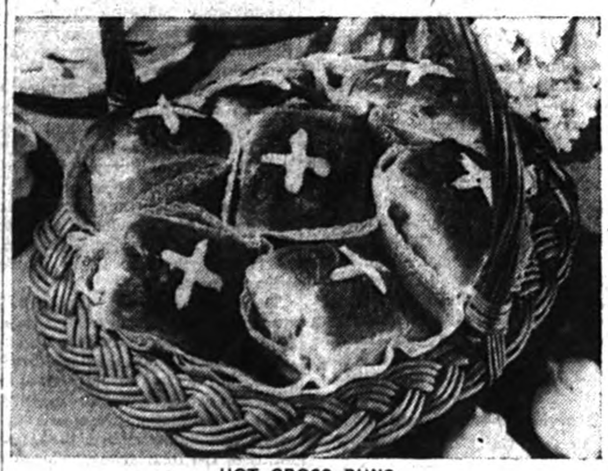

As a seasoning cheese is ideal when sprinkled on top of soup or used in potato pancakes, waffles and fish cakes. It gives a rich texture to biscuits and pie crust and in cheese sticks provides an excellent accompaniment to serve with soup or salad.

The sharp tang of Canadian Cheddar finds a perfect foil in the blandness of eggs, fish, macaroni products and vegetables. For example, a few tablespoons of grated cheese might be folded into an omelet or added to eggs which are to be scrambled. Scalloped vegetables sprinkled with a mixture of bread crumbs, cheese and melted butter have a richer, brighter flavor than when served plain. The same is true of cooked spinach or cabbage seasoned with a grating of nutmeg then sprinkled with the butter-cheese-crumb mixture and briefly browned.

A simple cream sauce flavored with cheese can be used to dress up vegetables or fish, or to make this supper dish with eggs: pour the sauce over poached, baked or sliced, hard cooked eggs, sprinkle with additional grated cheese and brown quickly under the broiler heat. Serve with a salad and Lyonnaise potatoes if yours is a hungry family, and there you have a hearty main course for supper.

"I'm worried about this dress," said party-going Jane to her girl friend. "My parents didn't object at all!"

"One A Penny, Two A Penny"

HOT CROSS BUNS

Hot Cross Buns have a long and honorable history. Ancient Greeks, Egyptians and Romans all made buns marked with crosses which they thought had powers not only to insure good baking but also to prevent illness. Hot Cross Buns of the Christian era first appeared around 1250 A.D. when they were sold to Easter Sunday communicants as they left the church. In the 16th century people began to eat these small cross-marked buns on Good Friday. Seventeenth century Englishmen used to hear Hot Cross Buns hawked through the streets of London to the old jingle "One a penny buns, two a penny buns, one a penny two a penny Hot Cross Buns".

In Canada the Hot Cross Bun season starts on Ash Wednesday and continues all through Lent. The buns are much the same as they were in 1250 — yeast-raised, touched with spices and raisins or currants and iced with a pure white cross in a sweet frosting.

Hot Cross Buns are especially good when served piping hot. To do this they should be placed in the top of a tightly-covered double boiler over rapidly boiling water for about five minutes or the required quantity of buns can be placed in a moistened heavy brown paper bag and heated about 5 minutes in a 350°F. (moderate) oven.

Hot Cross Buns

2 Medium potatoes, 1 cup milk (scalded), ½ cup shortening or margarine, 1 teaspoon granulated sugar, ½ cup lukewarm water, 1 envelope active dry yeast, 5½ cups sifted all-purpose flour, 2 eggs (well-beaten), ½ cup granulated sugar, 2 teaspoons salt, 1 tablespoon cinnamon, 1½ cups seedless raisins.

Peel potatoes. Boil (in enough water to cover) until soft. Drain and mash and let cool to lukewarm. There should be 1 cup mashed potatoes. To scalded milk, add shortening or margarine and stir until dissolved. Let mixture cool to lukewarm. Meanwhile thoroughly dissolve 1 teaspoon sugar in ½ yeast on top of water. Let stand 10 yeast o tnop of water. Let stand 10 minutes. Then stir well. To lukewarm milk — shortening or margarine mixture add lukewarm mashed potatoes and stir in 2 cups sifted flour, beaten eggs, ½ cup granulated sugar, salt, cinnamon and well-stirred yeast mixture. Beat with a wooden spoon until well mixed. Let sponge rise in warm place, free from draft, for 2 hours or until doubled in bulk.

Boil raisins (in enough water to cover) until soft. Drain and let cool to lukewarm. Add to sponge remaining 3½ cups sifted all-purpose flour and lukewarm drained raisins. Stir until well blended. When dough is stiff enough to be easily handled turn onto floured board and knead until smooth and elastic (about 5 minutes). An additional ½ cup sifted all-purpose flour may be used for kneading if required. Place dough in a greased bowl and cover lightly with a clean towel. Let rise in a warm place free from draft for about 1 hour or until doubled in bulk. Meanwhile grease two 17 x 11-inch cookie sheets.

Punch down dough and pull sides into centre. Turn onto floured board and knead into a ball. Cover dough and let stand for 10 minutes. Meanwhile preheat oven to 450°F. (hot). Roll dough to about ½ inch thickness. Cut with cookie cutter approximately 2½ inches in diameter. Place buns on greased cookie sheets. Brush tops of buns with milk. Using kitchen scissors, snip tops of buns at right angles to form a cross. Cover and let stand in a warm place free from draft for 15 minutes. Bake in preheated over for 15 minutes. When just out of the oven brush tops of buns lightly with frosting. When buns are thoroughly cool trace cross on buns with more frosting.

Frosting

2 Tablespoons milk, 1 cup icing sugar, ½ teaspoon vanilla. — Blend ingredients thoroughly.

Tasty Glazes For Easter Ham

by the Consumer Section, Canada Dept. of Agriculture Marketing Service

What could be better for Easter dinner than a glistening, beautiful ham with rosy-hued slices that are tender and juicy. The ham should be baked in a slow (325°F.) oven, the roasting temperature recommended by the Consumer Section for most meats. If the ham is to be glazed the temperature is raised to 425°F. during the last few minutes of baking and the fat surface of the ham is scored in diamonds or squares and studded with whole cloves. The glaze is then smoothed on and the ham is returned to the oven for about 15 minutes, or until it is golden brown.

The most common glaze for ham is made from a mixture of 1 cup brown sugar, two teaspoons dry mustard, three tablespoons flour and three tablespoons vinegar. This recipe makes enough glaze to cover the fat surface of a half ham, or one weighing about six to eight pounds. Another attractive glaze is made by simply covering the ham with a red currant or tart apple jelly. A little dry mustard or horseradish may be mixed with the jelly for added flavor. Cranberry sauce or jelly is colorful and tasty as a glaze, also. It is best to mix some corn syrup or honey with cranberry sauce when it is used. Maple syrup alone or mixed with fruit juice and either apple juice or apricot nectar mixed with brown sugar are easy-to-make glazes that also add flavor to the ham.

One last hint — do not baste the ham with glaze that has run down into the drippings as this may dull the lustre of the glaze.

REFRIGERATOR HAS ESCAPE DOOR

Children need no longer be trapped in refrigerators. A Canadian company has developed a special door mechanism for a new line now in production. Inside door release glows in the dark. Should a child be trapped in the refrigerator, all he has to do is touch the circular button to get out. The most dangerous age group is from three to six, reports the company, and the critical months for accidents are May through September.

Tips on Touring

By Carol Lane
Women's Travel Authority

Even seasoned travellers like myself sometimes lose their sense of direction in unfamiliar territory and don't know whether to turn right or left.

I find my car compass, attached to the dashboard, has saved me mileage and time. However, there is a boy-scout trick for determining North and South without a compass and I think is worth repeating. All you need is a watch and a matchstick.

Hold the watch flat, face upward. Hold the match upright at the edge of the watch, at the spot the hour hand points to. Now turn the watch until the shadow from the match falls along the hour hand.

If it is morning, South will lie half-way between the hour hand and twelve o'clock reading clockwise. If it is afternoon, South will lie half-way between the hour hand and twelve o'clock, reading counter-clockwise. And at noon, South will be right where the hour hand points.

Says He!

If the little woman wants to learn to drive, don't stand in her way.

Fashions

In keeping with the emphasis on spring prints, silk shantung goes in for pretty colors and designs. Black and blue or black with brown is the color scheme used for a neat geometric print on silk shantung. It is used for an attractive dress and bolero twosome. The dress has high open square neckline and short sleeves. The brief bolero has a notched front and is collared and lined in blackpeau de soie.

SCIENCE IN YOUR LIFE

Medical Martyrs

All too few persons recognize the hazards encountered by members of the medical profession. The physician—carrying the answer to almost every disease problem in his black bag—often is considered impervious to the ailments he so successfully treats.

That is far from being the case. Medical history records innumerable incidents in which the physician has become a martyr. The influenza virus, for instance, recognizes no professional bounds and can infect the physician as well as the carpenter.

More striking than these incidental exposures are instances in which physicians have deliberately infected themselves in do-or-die attempts to learn more about deadly ailments and their cures.

One of the most famous of these medical martyrs was Jesse William Lazear, who was convinced that mosquitoes transmitted yellow fever. He proved his point by allowing himself to be bitten by a mosquito known to have fed on a yellow fever victim. Seven days later, Lazear was dead.

Lazear's colleague, James Carroll, buttressed his dead friend's theory when he also allowed himself to be bitten by an infected mosquito. Carroll contracted yellow fever, but survived.

Medical heroism continues today with "volunteers" testing new drugs and vaccines. Dr. Jonas Salk injected himself and, later, his children with his killed virus polio vaccine before he attempted any widespread injections.

Thus, the spirit of Jesse Lazear is still very much alive in the medical world of the 20th century.

Hockey -- A Canadian Gift

(Copyright) — By NANCY CLEAVER —

Here's to hockey, a truly Canadian sport and a game which has become popular all over North America and Europe! In the 1870's a game with the players on skates hitting a ball with a stick was played on the ice on many Canadian rivers and lakes.

A group of players at McGill University, Montreal, thought that the round ball went too far when struck and thus slowed up the game. A bright student took a knife, cut off two pieces from either side of the ball, and produced the first rough puck!

The early hockey games were played with an indefinite and usual-side. Later the number on each side. Later the numbe ron each team was gradually reduced to the standard six-man team of today.

From Canada the popularity of hockey spread to our neighbor to the South late in the last cenutry. Early in this century British and then European countries were attracted by the speed of the skaters, and the brilliant team-work necessary for success. Each winter the eyes of sport fans are on the hockey battles in the Olympic games and national competitions. Radio added greatly to the number of hockey enthusiastics and now TV has gained a lot more hockey supporters.

Hockey is played in every place large and small from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from the 49th parallel to the North Pole. Many thoughtful citizens regret the great outcry from some quarters when our Canadian team was defeated by the Russians in the Olympic games.

Most parents prefer that the moulders of public opinion place emphasis on good sportsmanship rather than on the necessity of winning! Fortunately the majority of youngsters pick up from the volunteer coaches in hockey and in other sports a code of being a good loser and a generous winner. This is surely just as important equipment for life as skill, physical stamina and team-play in a game.

In the center in which we live a large number of boys, belonging to Sunday School classes are members of a Church hockey league. Their practice hours, and the time of their league games, are frequently at odd times, (often early Saturday morning) when other teams don't care to play.

Not too many parents turn out to see their sons battling valiantly on the ice. How many mothers and fathers have expressed their appreciation of the men who work out these hockey schedules, arrange for the use of the arena and coach the teams? How many have ever thanked the women's organizations who have donated hockey sweaters for the teams? The smallness of the number of grateful parents might surprise you!

Active participation in athletics under the supervision of men who want to see boys develop into good citizens is excellent insurance against the growth of juvenile delinquency. The old saying about 'Satan finds work for idle hands to do' is still true. A boy occupied with sports is likely to be a happy boy who keeps out of trouble with the law.

There are not many girls' hockey teams but skating is a great source of pleasure to many girls and boys. This healthy exercise on a lake, pond or river, out in the sunshine, is particularly enjoyable. This is a truly Canadian sport of which we we all be proud.

NHL Attendance Increased Everywhere

Attendance has increased in every one of the six National Hockey League cities this year over a corresponding period a year ago. Even cities such as Montreal and Toronto where they have been playing to capacity houses every game for years show an increase.

The biggest increase is shown in New York where the Rangers have played to 38 per cent more people this year than last. The Boston Bruins show the second biggest increase in attendance. The Bruins have played to 18 per cent more people this year than last.

Although not having a particularly successful season in the team standings, the Chicago Hawks are healthier at the gate this season than they were last. The Black Hawks attendance figures are 14 per cent higher this year than for the same period a year ago.

Detroit Red Wings, like Montreal and Toronto a team that has played to full houses for years, has an increase of 7½ per cent this year. The improved attendance at Detroit home games is all the more remarkable in view of the fact that this is the first season in a long time that the Red Wings haven't topped the League team standings. For seven straight years the Wings won the National Hockey League championship by finishing in first place at the end of the regular schedule, and throughout these years the team attracted large crowds. But this year is the Red Wings' all-time high for attendance.

Toronto Maple Leafs show an increase of close to 3½ per cent over a year ago while the first-place Montreal Canadiens, icing one of the greatest offensive teams in the history of the N.H.L., have an increase of one half of one per cent over a year ago. The Canadiens have been the Box Office Champions of the National Hockey League for several seasons and it is almost impossible to improve on the S.R.O. crowds that are on hand for every home game.

ONE-TIME DOCTOR IMPROVED DAIRIES IN CALGARY AREA

Calgary (CP) — A doctor who became a dairyman can claim a large share of the credit for pioneering modern dairies in this area.

Dr. T. E. Hays, now retired, first started selling dairy products in the local market in 1909.

He and his brother, Dan, had fought with the British forces in the South African war. He was on the Canadian West Coast when his brother persuaded him to come here.

They started a land office in nearby Carstairs and two years later their father brought the rest of the family to the area.

The dairy business started when a Calgary dealer asked for a supply of sweet cream and fresh eggs. There wasn't much fresh cream available but the Hays brothers built a cooler and started supplying it from a herd of 40 cows.

When supply became greater than demand, they started selling milk to the first pasteurizing unit in Calgary.

Most of the milk distributed in the city at the time was produced and sold by one or two companies or farmers themselves. The price was eight cents a quart.

The Hays brothers sold theirs at 11 cents a quart, because they handled it under rigid sanitary conditions and all their cows were tested for tuberculosis.

MARAUDER SLAIN EAST OF TOWN IDENTIFIED AS RUSSIAN WOLF

Colorful Story of Recent Foray — Phone and Automobile Play Part in Community Hunt

(Norman Thorburn reporting from Upper Lachute)

As my last article on Lachute's wolf marauders seems to have stirred some interest, I emboldened myself to write once more on this subject.

Following are recent incidents: Cres Hadley chased one with his truck on the Vide Sac Montée. Stanley Smith, returning from his bush lot, saw a grey wolf at the southern end of the Vide Sac Montée, near his abandoned quarry.

Doctor McMahon, on his rounds, saw one another day, on the opposite side of the Vide Sac road. He gazed with professional admiration at the beautiful specimen for several seconds. What a beautiful creature! What a wonderful pet if only it could be tamed; but alas, a wolf cannot be tamed. By the time the hunter, alerted by the doctor, had arrived at the scene, the wolf had disappeared.

On Saturday, March 10, Stanley Smith and my brother George saw a big black animal on the Vide Sac Montée. Laddie, the old mongrel, gave chase but my brother, not wanting to spoil the animal's tracks, called him back. He rushed home with his team of horses and told Syd, my younger brother. A hurried telephone call to the Clark ranch brought Irwin Clark to my brother's barn with Toby, the reliable old fox hound.

The telephone and automobile play a big part in wolf-hunting hereabouts. Hunters are contacted by telephone and assigned to strategic posts along the possible course of the wolf. Organization and concerted action are needed to bring results.

Soon my brother, on skis, with a shotgun in one hand and holding on to the fiercely tugging Toby's leash with the other, was rushing along the CPR tracks on the trail of Shaggy, the black wolf.

Baying tremendously, the aroused Toby almost pulled my ski-shod, gun-laden brother down in his efforts to close with his quarry. But it was not a wise thing to do, to release the fox hound too soon, because this might have unduly excited the wolf and also might have spelled "finis" for a brave fox hound before help could arrive.

Now the trail turned northward through the Clark brothers' ranch. The wolf, knowing he was pressed, was heading homewards to the hills across the North river.

Bert Dodd, the Clark brothers' faithful helper, spied the wolf, and shouted to Irwin Clark that it was heading towards the river.

The hunters raced for positions to shoot the wolf on the river. . .

Who is this tall huntsman racing on snowshoes, through the deep snow with grace and skill? It is our old friend Paul Doig, the fox hunter from River Rouge, who had come to help after receiving an urgent appeal by phone.

The wolf was now racing along the ice of the North River. The guns of the ploughmen blasted in unison, and the cacophony reverberated through the valley of the North River.

The husbandmen reloaded their guns and the staccato notes of sporadic firing rang out again and again.

Although the shotgun slugs could be seen spattering the snow around the wolf, the animal remained unscathed.

With a tremendous bound, old Shaggy, the wolf, leaped up the northern bank of the river and headed for the hills. . . The hills of home, the hills of home; if only he could reach them before the firestick of man struck him down. A mile more and he would be beyond the mountain looming ahead — and safety.

The old black wolf redoubled his efforts through the deep snow. But man, his remorseless enemy, was bent on his destruction. The sands of time were running out . . . old Shaggy was running his last mile.

Racing around to the other side of the river by car via White's Bridge, the Clark brothers and their companions saw the wolf heading for the mountain. Ken Clark took careful aim, and his brother's 12-gauge shotgun spoke once and once only. The wolf rolled over in a limp and lifeless heap on the snow.

The Savage shotgun had been purchased the night before, and this was the first shell fired from it. . . . The wolf tally goes up but there are many more.

This wolf weighed 57 pounds. The hair on his shaggy hide was seven and a half inches long, a fearsome and savage beast, he will do no more harm. I am sure I echo the sentiments of all the people hereabouts in wishing many more successful hunts to the nimrods of Upper Lachute.

I purposely delayed writing this article until I was certain this animal belonged to the genus "canis lupus ater" — being highly respectful of the truth.

I thought on first seeing this animal it resembled to a certain extent a dog, although it was obviously a creature of the wild. His yellow eyes and long yellow fangs, and the silvery tips to some of the long black hairs, told me that it was a wolf.

A neighbor asserted that a wolf's ear has two lobes, and the specimen hanging by the snout from Clark's granary had two lobes.

My younger son, George, brought home a book from the High School library containing several pictures of a black wolf harassing cowboys' cattle in the western states. The features of the black wolf illustrated in this book corresponded to the last detail with the specimen at the Clark ranch.

I asked Game Warden Fernand Lamarche by telephone and he said it was a wolf, but of a species he had never seen before.

Irwin Clark has just phoned me and told me that a uniformed official from the Department of Game and Fisheries has pronounced it a Russian black wolf.

Visions of Hitler's and Napoleon's armies which were harassed by these vicious creatures come to mind! . . . They probably crossed over the Bering Straits centuries ago.

So, to the disciples of John Peel and Daniel Boone hereabouts, congratulations and thank you.

Civil Defence in War

Sixth in a series of 24 articles

Have you ever wondered why you keep hearing and reading about civil defence all the time these days? Why don't they drop the subject for a while? Let's talk about something cheerful for a change. How much do they expect a person to take? How long is this going to go on?

If you have wondered about these questions, you're certainly not the only one. But what about these questions — what are the answers? Let's drop the present for a moment then and look back at some recent history.

The airplane has probably done more than any other device contrived by man to bring war from the battlefield into the backyard. So let F. F. Worthington, federal civil defence co-ordinator, take the history from here. And don't think he has a personal axe to grind in this civil defence business. He confessed to some 70 newspaper and radio reporters recently that he'd far rather be home in Vancouver enjoying his retirement. "But there was a job to do," he said. "They asked me to do it." He left it at that.

"Following the Second World War," he told a group of women in Toronto not long ago, "it was fully realized that, in any future conflict, the civil population would inevitably become a target in the strategical aim of an aggressor for two reasons:"

"First, because in a democratic country the government responds to the will of the people and if the morale and the will of the people is broken, it will reflect immediately upon the centre of government and may well bring about capitulation.

"Second, the complexity of weapons and equipment required in modern warfare renders the armed forces dependent upon production, and production depends upon the men and women who work in the fields and factories.

"Therefore, if the will to work or the people themselves are destroyed, production will cease and the armed forces cannot continue the struggle."

How to meet this new menace to every man, woman and child — for the H-bomb makes no exception to age or sex — was the problem out of which grew modern civil defence. But how should civil defence be created? There were two possible solutions.

The federal government could set up a central body, semi-military in nature, to make civil defence compulsory across the country. But how would this be accepted by each province? How would your community like to be told how to protect itself by some official in a distant Capital?

The other solution, the one Canada chose, was an organization based on the ancient concept of self-help, from which so many services already existing in Canada have arisen. Now, F. F. Worthington again:

"To maintain peace in the world, as it is today, demands a heavy price — the price of preparedness because no aggressor nation will dare attack unless it is reasonably sure to win — and to win, our home front must be knocked out.

"This preparation we call civil defence must be carefully carried out. It requires time, but above everything else — it requires the acceptance of responsibility at every level of government and of as many of its citizens as possible."

He added: "There is hardly a community in our country that will not be affected in the event of enemy attack. There is a feeling that the smaller communities in the "safe" areas have little responsibility for preparedness because they are out of harm's way."

"I wish to emphasize in the strongest possible terms that such a belief is entirely erroneous. No one city, however big, can withstand the terrible effects of a nuclear weapon without the combined efforts of each and every community within reasonable distance, and when I say reasonable distance I am talking in terms of hours of travel — not miles."

Does that answer the question? All but one — how long does this go on? Here's that answer from G. S. Hation, deputy federal civil defence co-ordinator:

"The need for civil defence will continue until either we have achieved a permanent secure peace or our military advisers are able to guarantee that no enemy can make a successful attack on this country. Neither is a foreseeable contingency and as long as we need a military defence we shall need a civil defence."

Anxieties of Anticipation

By G. E. Mortimore,
"All Aboard" Columnist

It was a bad day for me when I read that news item about the Tasmanian state lottery.

First prize is the chief hotel in Hobart, worth $320,000; plus $22,500 in cash.

Since the story appeared I have chewed my nails down to the knuckles worrying about running that 97-room hotel.

To begin with, the place is full of my friends, staying there free of charge. Of course I don't mean the friends I had before I won the hotel. There would be plenty of room for them, and still 90 or 95 rooms to spare.

No, I mean my new friends, the ones who have learned overnight what a polished and fascinating person I am. Already the hotel is full of those bums, and there is no room for the paying guests.

I'm also having trouble with the help. Everyone from the manager down to the page boy had tickets on the joint themselves, and they think I cheated them out of it. I tried raising their pay, but that only made them more suspicious.

So you think it's an easy life for us hotel-owners, just sitting back and raking in $1,000 a week. That shows how little you know.

Apart from the help and their wages, we have to worry about the high cost of supplies, fire insurance, insect exterminator and guests who slip down the fire escape and leave us a tin suitcase full of rocks.

The income tax is keeping me poor. Every hour or so I have to fend off a salesman who wants me to contribute to his favorite charity — himself.

Also, I'm having trouble with my partner. A friend and I went into this thing 50-50. Everything went smoothly for a couple of days, and then we disagreed over who was going to be president of the company.

I said I was willing to assume that heavy job and let him loaf along with the title of vice-president. He said no, he wouldn't think of piling all that work on me. He insisted on being president himself.

Things went from bad to worse, until today we're not speaking. We just stare morosely at one another as we count the day's receipts, and now and then one of us makes a grab for an extra five-pound note which he thinks the other is trying to hold out.

I'm worrying myself ragged. . .

Luckily for my partner and me, however, we haven't been able to buy a ticket so far.

New Police Chief Takes Note 2 By-laws Commonly Ignored, To Give Stricter Supervision

Police Chief Fernand Trépanier gave emphasis, in a news interview this week, to certain clauses of By-laws 178 and 182 governing, respectively, public peace and good order, and traffic and parking, within the limits of the town. The Police Chief wishes it to be known that the provisions here stressed are for information and guidance of the citizens and will be most rigidly enforced, along with other regulations.

Traffic Regulations Contravened

In dealing with the traffic and parking by-law, Chief Trépanier cited an extract from Article 25, stating that "all parking of vehicles on streets within the limits of the Town of Lachute, should be made as close to the sidewalk curb as possible, and to the RIGHT, insofar as the direction of the vehicle is concerned. . . Parking will be prohibited in front of public places such as the Post Office, City Hall, Fire Station and Theatres. In front of churches and schools, parking will be permitted for 90 minutes. Parking, when and where permitted, will be at least 6 feet from any intersection and at least 15 feet from any fire hydrant."

Article 33 states that "U-turns will be strictly forbidden except at an interesection of streets, on the condition that they can be executed in all security and without backing up the vehicle or without being a nuisance to the circulating traffic."

Obstructing Operations Of Fire Department

Articles 39 and 40 relative to the Fire Department, are as follows: "It is prohibited to the conductor of any vehicle, unless he is on official service, to follow at a distance of less than 300 feet, a vehicle of the Fire Department answering an alarm; or to drive or stop his vehicle in such a way as to obstruct or to incommodate in any way the vehicles of the Fire Department, or the work of the men of this Department; and unless authorized by the Chief of the Fire Department or by his representative, it is forbidden for the driver of any vehicle to run such a vehicle over a fire hose that is not protected."

Penalty for contravention of the by-law is provided as follows: "Any person infringing any of the dispositions of the present by-law or refusing to obey an order legally given by an officer of the Police Department, acting in conformity, is liable to a fine not exceeding $40 and costs, and on default of payment to an emprisonment not exceeding 30 days."

Offences Against Public Peace and Good Order

By-law 178, Article 16, Subsection H, makes it prohibitive to "throw stones or any other similar objects across or in any street, road, public place, etc., or on any bridge, house, building, fence, yard, garden, public park ground . . . or in any other way having a noisy and bad conduct in a manner to trouble and incommodate any citizen or passer-by."

Sub-section N specifies "all persons making trouble or noise on any street, road, public place, on any bridge, or in any public building, by fighting, swearing, singing or incommodating a peaceful passerby", while the next sub-section (O), reads, "all persons who will obstruct in any manner the doors of any house or building, or who will lay lines or any obstacle across the street, road, lane, porch, or on any passage, sidewalk, bridge, etc., in a manner to embarrass or incommodate in any way the public . . ."

Sub-section P makes it illegal to appear on the street wearing a mask or disguise or having faces painted or blackened, or ringing any bell, bugle, or any other thing on the street, ordinarily made for uproar.

In dealing with the public peace and good order by-law, Chief Trépanier identified Sub-section R as one of the clauses being overlooked and contravened, namely that it is illegal "to throw powder, fuses, fire crackers or other inflammable or explosive substance, or make them explode in any public street or place."

The penalty for all sections of this by-law, unless specially stated is a fine not exceeding $40, or emprisonment not exceeding 30 days, plus costs, or both, at the discretion of the Court.

As previously noted, the sections of By-laws 178 and 182 quoted above are those for which numerous complaints have been received and noted. Any future infractions reported and observed will be dealt with according to law.

If additional information is required by anyone concerning these or any other by-laws of the Town of Lachute, this information will be given at any time by the Police Department or competent town authorities.

Legion 70 Foursome Brings Home A Provincial Curling Championship

Syd Drew skipped his Legion Branch 70 team to a provincial curling title last Saturday — defeating Forbes McGill of the Lacolle branch 13-4 to win the Legion Rock Trophy in the provincial command championships at Huntingdon Curling Club.

In the semi-finals the local foursome defeated Cliff MacDonald, of Drummondville, 10-5, while McGill defeated Art Hincks, Churchill branch, Ste. Anne de Bellevue, 14-7.

Five branches, winners of Legion district championships, competed in the bonspiel.

Roger Gravel, lead, Stewart Jones, Howard Morrison and Syd Drew (skip) were members of the Lachute rink.

The trophy presentation was made at a dinner held in the Legion Branch 81 hall, Huntingdon, with Comrade O. H. Thompson, sports chairman of Provincial Command, in charge of the ceremonies. It is hoped that the provincial finals will be held at the Lachute Curling Club next year.

This is the first time Lachute Curling Club has had a representation in the Legion bonspiel. The event will be extended next year to include Legion entries in all provinces across the Dominion, the provincial finalists playing-off in Winnipeg, Manitoba.

Two Killed in Highway Crash Near Papineauville

Quebec Provincial Police said the death of two Thurso men in a highway crash near Papineauville last Wednesday was accidental, and no inquest would be held.

Gerald Gagnon, 42, died instantly and his companion in the car, driver Aurel Desrochers, 52, died a half-hour later just after admittance to hospital in Buckingham.

The two were driving west to Thurso from Montebello when, about a mile and a half this side of Papineauville their new car slammed into the rear of a loaded pulpwood truck which had stopped on the side of the road.

So heavy was the impact that the car was wedged tightly under the platform of the truck and another car had to be used to separate the vehicles so the two men could be taken from the wreckage.

Gagnon was dead when removed, but Desrochers, a Thurso car dealer (known in these parts), although badly injured, was still living.

A passenger in the parked truck went through the windshield of the truck and suffered head cuts, but did not require hospital care.

The general public are cordially invited to attend this meeting and hear at first hand the achievements of the Federation in its first year of operation.

Response Lagging In Easter Seals Annual Appeal

Easter Seals were introduced into Canada as a fund-raising medium to support work for crippled children by the Children's Hospital Aid Society of Calgary in 1945. In 1946 the Lions Club of East Vancouver produced and sold a seal, and in 1947 the Ontario Society for Crippled Children adopted this method of supporting their work. During the next three years, three separate seals were offered to the public. Also during this period, Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Alberta secured permission from the Ontario Society to use their materials.

In 1949, because of the widespread interest in Easter Seals, the Provincial organizations requested the Canadian Council to accept responsibility for the production of the Seal, and to arrange for quantity buying of necessary supplies Hence, the 1949 Seal became the first Canadian Easter Seal. This year the Seal, with the registered stylized lily, is being sold in all ten Canadian provinces.

The returns from the sale of Easter Seals have risen steadily each year. In 1947 the gross return amounted to approximately $175,000 for the three independent Seals In 1955, the gross return for the Canadian Seal amounted to one and a quarter million dollars.

This increasing support has enabled the Provincial Societies to extend their services to the individual, to hospitals, clinics schools, etc. The basic framework for providing adequate services has been established, but even greater support is needed in 1956 if these services are to be properly maintained, and if they are to become available to all children who are handicapped.

The Lions Club is sponsor of this campaign in Lachute district, Dr F. W. FitzGerald being the committeeman in charge from year to year. . . The local response is beginning to lag — according to his report this week — and more generous support is requested, especially from business establishments, only a few of which have replied to date.

Figures given by Dr. FitzGerald up to Wednesday show a total of $823 gross returns to date, compared with a gross total of $1,297 at close of campaign in 1955.

New Directories In Circulation For Phone Users

Telephone users in Lachute had their first look at the 1956 edition of the telephone directory this week, and note with pleasure that the new book has been given a definite regional flavor.

A sketch of the "Curé Labelle Monument", erected in St. Jerome, appears on the front cover of the new directory. The illustration is the work of the well-known Canadian artist, Lorne Bouchard, A.R.C.A., and it replaces the figure of the "Spirit of Communication", which appeared on the cover of telephone directories here for many years.

The illustration is not the only change to be found in this year's telephone book, nor is it the most important. The 1956 directory also contains 14,787 new and changed listings. For this reason, R. Dupuy, Bell Telephone manager here, recommended that all customers discard last year's issue and start using the new book on April 1. He also urged telephone users to bring their "Blue Book of Telephone Numbers" or other personal lists up to date by comparing them with the new directory.

"Telephone users will find the Blue Books handy for listing both the local and the out-of-town numbers they call frequently," Mr. Dupuy said. He added that booklets, in both regular and pocket sizes, are available on request at the Bell Telephone business office.

Most of the new listings contained in this year's directory are those of customers in Ste. Adele and St. Sauveur, where the new two-letter and five-number telephone numbers will be introduced on April 1. Also listed in this book are the new numbers of Mont Rolland customers, for whom individual and two-party telephone service will be available at the beginning of April.

The continuing expansion of the Laurentians is reflected in the increase in the number of telephone directories distributed this year. There were 22,925 copies required this year as compared to 20,720 in 1955. The number of copies for Lachute alone amounted to 3,200, an increase of nearly 200 over last year.

Since 1945 Canadian builders have erected 875,000 dwellings.

Curling Club Premises Damaged By Morning Blaze

Extensive damage resulted from a fire Tuesday morning at the Lachute Curling Club on Harriett Street; estimates of the loss range from around the $3,000 figure, set by the insurance adjustor, to more than $5,000, the appraisal of some of the club members.

The fire, which was quickly extinguished by the local volunteer fire brigade headed by Chief Geo. Y. Deacon, is believed to have started in refuse containers located behind the building. Fire damage was limited to the rear and side wall, on the north side, and the interior of the building in that immediate area.

Firemen arrived at the scene and doused the flames on the exterior of the structure within a few minutes of the summons at 10.23 a.m. On their arriving at the scene, the flaming walls gave the appearance that the fire had a headstart in the walls and roof, as smoke was in evidence billowing from the eaves.

Flames gained a foothold in the rear and side walls by penetrating under the imitation brick siding. This, being fabricated with coats of tar, aided the flames in their climb to the roof. A line of hose was laid from the hydrant immediately in front of the Club, and another line from Main Street, the smaller hose being applied in the building in an effort to keep water damage to a minimum.

It was found necessary to make openings into the attic, both from inside and outside, to douse the flames that had reached that point. Insulation and structural steel beams supporting the roof aided firemen in checking the spread of fire in this area.

Interior damage due to fire was kept to a minimum, although considerable smoke damage resulted and water affected the hardwood floor and ceiling insulation.

The three fire vehicles, two pumpers and ladder truck were taken to the scene. Several cars parked close to the club buildings were marked with carbon and tar, although none suffered damage by fire.

It was a peculiar circumstance that this fire started on the exterior of the building, and was first noticed by lady curlers on the ice who, looking out of the window, saw the blaze in the adjoining wall outside.

Minor Injuries In Plant Mishap At Brownsburg

Brownsburg — At aproximately 4.10 p.m. on Tuesday afternoon, several delay caps detonated in one of the testing rooms in the Electric Blasting Cap department at the C-I-L plant here. Testing operator Mrs. Jeannine Thibault, Lachute, and serviceman Mr. Romeo Fortin, Brownsburg, were performing their regular duties in the building at the time of the incident. Mrs. J. Thibault was sent home after treatment in the plant hospital for minor injuries and shock, returning to work on Wednesday morning. R. Fortin suffered injuries to the palm of his left hand, and is in the Royal Victoria Hospital for treatment.

Investigation is underway at the plant to determine the cause of the accident.

Business and industry have already promised sufficient support to create an initial budget of more than $700,000 to launch the service which will be available to any individual or group wishing to utilize it. The plan, known as the Canadian Amateur Sports and Physical Fitness Development Service, will be operated by Sports college.

Talks by Prov. Police Officers On Traffic, Law Observance Given in 39 County Schools

Traffic Officer Howard Jones and Lieut. Antonio Tassé, officer in charge of the Quebec Provincial Police at St. Jerome, recently completed a tour of 39 schools in Argenteuil County where they addressed 5,020 schoolchildren on various aspects of the law, and of highway safeguards pertaining particularly to their young audiences. The two provincial law officials were accompanied in their tour of the Lachute schools by Police Chief Fernand Trepanier, who was introduced to the pupils and teachers.

The provincial officers made it clear to their listeners in the various schools that they were not in policemen's uniforms to scare the children, but to aid them when help was wanted, as well as to protect them; their main aim is to keep the peace.

The officers got down to an understandable level by asking the young folk to help them by taking note of what could be everyday observations. On this subject, instances were recalled in which schoolchildren had noticed cars in front of summer camps known to be unoccupied, had made a note of the license number, and the latter had aided the police in investigations of robberies, etc. A more recent and exciting case was that of a youth who saw a man run from a bank and jump into a car which sped away. The jotting down of the license number had trapped the thieves in this case, much more speedily than if the youth had become excited and failed to notice the important markers.

Safety on the thoroughfares was the main theme of the talks, however — the officers pointing out the general traffic rules governing the crossing of streets, etc. The children were also warned, when walking on the highway, to walk always facing the traffic, on the left of the road, and not to walk more than two abreast.

The officers pointed out that bicycles were licensed and therefore considered as vehicles, and as such, they are subject to the same rules as a motor vehicle. The driving of bicycles in single file with only one person per "bike" was the prime rule stressed for bicyclists; also, at night, the necessity of a light on the front of the bicycle and a red reflector on the rear, the latter to indicate the position of the cyclist on the road-width.

The pupils were advised against hitch-hiking, as it was not only dangerous, but also impolite. In the event of their being eyewitnesses to an accident, the listeners were requested to notify the police or else someone who would do so, such as a teacher or their parents, and if there is evidence of serious injury, to call a doctor. In this case also, everything possible should be done to make the injured persons as comfortable as possible, but they should not be moved unless there is danger of the car catching fire.

Traffic Officer Jones pointed out that, during the past year, the four local traffic officers investigated a total of 214 accidents in which 107 persons were injured and eight killed, the summer months being the worst for serious mishaps.

In closing, the officers gave valuable advice as to boarding and disembarking from school buses and similar vehicles, suggesting that the children wait on the side of the road where the bus has to stop, and then wait until the bus has moved before crossing the road.

The officers welcomed any questions and stated they were here to be of assistance when assistance was needed; all that had to be done was to call on them.

Radio Inter-Com. For Power Co'y Trouble-Shooters

The Gatineau Power is presently installing in its service trucks in the Lachute division a system of radio communications. For the present, two service-trucks, one automobile and the office on Main Street will be tied in.

This radio system is being installed to speed up service, by permitting the control station to despatch repair-crews to any point where trouble is reported. In case of storms this speed of action is of enormous value.

The advantages of this new mode of communication are manifold. It will permit converging crews on any particular point where a major break-down occurs even though telephone communications may be down as the result of storms. It will save time now wasted by crews travelling back and forth to the office for orders. Possibly of the utmost importance is the fact that in the case of severe storms, whole substation networks can be transferred from one source of supply to another with a minimum loss of time.

In addition to two-way communication between the Lachute office and vehicles, there will be radio communication between Lachute and St. Jerome. The St. Jerome operators have direct communications with the System Load Despatchers at Val-Tetreau, near Hull.

In this way, the Load Despatchers at Val-Tetreau will at all times be fully informed of operations and, therefore, in a position to help coordinate efforts of several divisions if the need should arise.

It is understood this radio-communication system will gradually be extended to cover all crews serving this division.

G. Tabrett Speaker On Income Tax, At Rotary Club

Rotarian Gordon Tabrett was guest speaker at last week's regular meeting of the Rotary Club, dealing with the timely topic of Income Tax.

As is generally known, residents of the Province of Quebec are required to complete two Income tax returns, one provincial and one federal. A ten per-cent reduction is allowed on the federal tax for those reporting in Quebec. So far as the salaried man is concerned, the matter is relatively simple. There are the usual deductions which are allowed, such as church and charitable contributions, doctors' and hospital bills in excess of three per cent of taxable income, and the amounts allowed for dependents.

Insofar as the small business man is concerned, there is more leeway. Generally speaking, he is allowed any expenses necessary for the operation of the business, although such expenses must be substantiated. Although the Income Tax Act is very definite in certain respects, it is one of the most autocratic pieces of legislation ever to be devised in a democratic country. The Minister has very wide powers, and much is left to his discretion.

While it is generally believed there is no tax on capital gain, there are certain instances where this does apply. For example, if it can be proved that a resident turned over a certain piece of property with the intention of making a profit, such profit is taxable. In a word, all income is taxable, subject to the discretion of the Minister.

The speaker was introduced by Jean Belanger and thanked by Don Wilson.

Good Home Lighting Is Vital to Health

Two kinds of lighting are needed in any room — specific light on any object and general room lighting. Adequate light on specific tasks relieves eye strain and fatigue brought on by continued reading and studying. Proper general room lighting avoids the discomfort and strain caused by strong contrasts between light and dark areas.

Everyone is concerned with the problem of good lighting. Yet, if your home wiring is not planned for today's abundant electric living it will limit the benefits of good lighting.

Electrical outlets should not be overloaded. Make sure that you have a sufficient number on each wall, so that not more than two lamps are connected to one outlet.

Your local electrical contractor or dealer can show you how to get the most in efficiency, economy and safety from your electrical circuits.

CANADIAN TRUCKING GROWS FAST

TORONTO—Growth of the trucking business in Canada—part of the great economic development taking place in the Dominion—is indicated by the construction here of the newest and most modern branch of Reo Motors Inc. Scientifically designed for the quick servicing of the expanding fleets of trucks in Ontario, the building is complete with every modern device for service plus the largest parts department of any truck branch in Canada. The shop facilities include repair bays, paint booths, a modern machine shop, dynamometer equipment and more than an acre of parking space. The factory owned branch was formally dedicated Feb. 23 when officials of Reo Motors Inc., headed by John C. Tooker, president, came from Lansing, Mich., to join with members of the Canadian trucking industry in marking the day with an open house celebration.

QUICKSAND BECOMES ROCK

A development company specializes in changing fluid soil into solid rock on which industrial plants may be built with safety. Chemicals injected into sub-surface water-bearing soils, including quicksands, convert them instantly and permanently into a solid mass having the load-bearing qualities of sandstone. It is applicable even after damage has set in from initially inadequate foundations. — Marketing

Exhibition Baseball

By Milt MacPhail,
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The exhibition baseball season is under way and it will be interesting to see who winds up as the pre-season "pennant winners."

But this information can't always be used as a geiger counter to success. A team can be a world-beater in exhibition games and a flop when the real firing starts.

The Pittsburg Pirates for example were the exhibition champions of the National League two of the last three years. . . . Unhappily, the Pirates finished last in each of the last four regular campaigns. Brooklyn Dodgers had a miserable record in last year's exhibition season yet the Dodgers under rookie manager Walt Alston won the National League pennant by a country mile and went on to capture their first world series.

As of last week the Dodgers had the best exhibition record among National League clubs.

New York Yankees, American League champions, had a so-so exhibition record in 1955, but the Yankees have a habit of winning pennants when the chips are down. Apparently the chips are down early for the Yankees this season. Last week they had won more exhibition games than their American League rivals.

Incidentally, Ray Blades, St. Louis Cardinal scout, has an interesting angle on some of the rookie outfielders. Ray says a few of the boys have looked uncertain under fly balls . . . because they are not accustomed to playing in sunlight. He points out that most minor league games are played at night.

OBITUARY

Late Clarence W. Hardie Was Well-Known Brownsburg Resident

One of Brownsburg's well-known residents, Clarence Wilbert Hardie, husband of Eva Irene Giles, passed away suddenly on Monday, March 19, at the Royal Victoria Hospital in Montreal.

Mr. Hardie was born in Montreal on July 18, 1881, son of the late Richard and Ann Letitia Hardie.

He had his schooling in Lachute and Brownsburg, and was married in Lachute to Eva Irene Giles in September 1907.

Mr. Hardie was a member of the Brownsburg United Church. He worked in the C-I-L Ammunition Division at Brownsburg for 37 years.

He is survived by his wife, one son, Wilbert Giles, in Montreal, two daughters, Jane Letitia (Mrs. L. Ball), of Brownsburg, Que., Ella Mary (Mrs. W. E. Stewart), of Buckingham, Que., and five grandchildren, Susan Hardie, Brent, George and Johnny Ball, and Jimmy Stewart; also a sister, Mrs. Frank Hazel.

The funeral was held from the Brownsburg United Church to the Lachute Protestant Cemetery on March 21.

Pembroke Lady Was Member of Pioneer Lachute Road Family

Late Mrs. Wm. Clauson

Funeral services were held last Friday for Mrs. William Clauson, who during a residence in Pembroke of nearly 50 years played an active part in church and local organizations. Mrs. Clauson died March 21 in hospital, where she had been a patient for ten days. Interment was in Calvin United Cemetery at Pembroke, the Rev. W. G. Prosser officiating.

Mrs. Clauson, the former Isabella Armstrong, was born here at Lachute Road in 1874, a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Armstrong and sister of the late George Armstrong of Lachute Road. She was educated in Lachute and Montreal and taught school for some years before her marriage in 1907 to William Clauson of Pembroke.

A member of Calvin United Church in Pembroke, Mrs. Clauson was for many years primary superintendent of the Sunday School; she had been president of various women's organizations in the church, and was a life member of the Women's Missionary Society.

She was also an active horticulturist and the floral displays at her home attracted much attention. She had been a frequent exhibitor at flower shows. During the First World War she was a valued worker for the Red Cross and over the years she contributed much to many worthy causes.

Her husband died in 1952, and she is survived by one son, Harold J. Clauson, Pembroke; one sister, Mrs. George MacMillan, St. Lambert, and two grandchildren.

STRESSES QUALITY NEED IN POTATOES

Charlottetown (CP) — Prince Edward Island is putting too much stress on seed potatoes, says Joseph Campbell, Liberal member of the legislature.

He feels the Island's potato stock has suffered. "If we were to concentrate more on the quality and less on the production, we would find a ready market for our potatoes in any part of the world," he said.

BUTTER SUPPORT

The federal government will continue its price supports on butter for another two years, Agriculture Minister Gardiner told the Commons last week. The present government purchase price of 58 cents a pound will continue on the extended program which had been due for retirement April 30.

H. H. Hannam, president of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, said the announcement is "good news".

Manufacturing now employs one out of four working Canadians, the same proportion as in the United States.

Much damage has resulted from the excessive rain of Tuesday. Wm. Berry and H. A. Blair suffered to a considerable extent, the water flooding their property nearly two feet. The Chinamen in the laundry, and Mr. Higgins, had to make a hurried flight to the upper regions of their domicile, while those living in Berryville had to content themselves and wait until the waters abated.

One of the worst accidents that has happened in the J.C. Wilson mill occurred Wednesday morning when a young lad named Lefebvre, while passing the paper through the calendors, got his hands caught. Time of Rebirth

THE ENGLISH name Easter comes to us from the Anglo-Saxon Oestre, a goddess of light or spring, whose festival is in April, and we celebrate this greatest of the Christian festivals in a season of hope and new beginnings the first Sunday after the full moon which happens on or next after March 21.

This means that some years we have fine spring weather and others find winter lingering in the valleys and on the hillsides, but never without that hope that summer is on its way.

So, as it is a time of re-birth through all nature, as the seeds begin to grow down in the earth and plants show faint green sprouts above its surface, it is a time for planning by the Christian nations as they re-dedicate themselves to the service of their God. Hope has been given them as their birthright by the greatest sacrifice ever made, and never is this hope so fully expressed and so definitely realized as in the services which precede Easter and those which commemorate the death and resurrection of our Saviour.

In the haste of our modern world many of the customs and habits of Lent are forgotten or fallen into disuse. Yet that quiet interval before Easter was a good thing. There was time for quiet meditation, a season of services in the churches and a spirit of self-denial which made for thoughtful consideration of things both spiritual and temporal. We have too little time today to think and to meditate. But we still have the will and the strength to make this season a time of new beginnings, to resolve once more to work for the cause of peace and good will of which we sang so lustily at that earlier feast of Christmas and to make sure, so far as lies in our power, that the Christmas promise and joy will be consummated in the Easter sacrifice and victory.

Thoughts on Gardening

THE EASTER holiday is the time for gardeners to formulate their plans. It's no accident that the joyous festival coincides with the warmer spring sunshine. The commemoration of the resurrection of Christ has been linked with the vernal equinox since the fourth century.

Regardless of the weather at the moment, the time has come when the gardener can start coordinating those plans he has been making at odd moments during a dreary winter. And if he, or she, has made no plans at all, that doesn't detract from the satisfaction of planting a garden.

Whether it's a window-box for the apartment dweller in a crowded city or a spacious garden for the home-owner in the country, all gardeners are following one of the oldest instincts of mankind.

The first gardens were made as soon as the first humans had built primitive shelters, starting with hedges as a protection against wild beasts, followed by fruit orchards and vegetable patches to provide food. Long before Christ was born, there were skilled gardeners in the service of the Egyptian, Persian and Babylonian monarchs.

And as long as fruits and vegetables have been grown, flowers have been cultivated for pleasure. It's nearly 2,600 years since the hanging gardens of Babylon were planted by Nebuchadnezzar to excite admiration in early times — one of the wonders of the ancient world.

Each spring the cycle starts anew. One gardener may begin fresh with packets of seeds. Another will be pruning plants and freshening the earth around the products of the roots and bulbs that were lovingly put down before winter came.

Expert and amateur alike, in gardens big or small, are anticipating the thrill of one of man's oldest delights, watching the garden grow. Bugs and worms and other hazards, fertilizers and insecticides, don't need to enter the picture just yet. Right now everything looks hopeful. A new season is in the offing.

IT'S AMAZING what happens to the human voice when persons are called on to give a brief report of the year's activities at their organization's annual meeting. The voice fades into a muttered mumble and the contents remain a secret. Because of this, the value of press reports is apparent — says the Guysborough (N.S.) County Advocate.

Story of the Easter Seal

THE EASTER SEAL, itself, has no commercial value. It is a symbol of the people's concern for the child disabled through disease, birth or accident. Its association with the Easter season symbolizes hope and new life for the crippled child, interpreted in the tangible terms of medical, social, educational, vocational and community services. Those who contribute to the Campaign, and use the Seals, not only endorse the efforts of their Provincial Crippled Children's Society, but express their belief in the worth of every child, and his right to a full life.

The Easter Seal Campaign is a small-donors' campaign. Eighty-five per cent of all contributions are in denominations of five dollars or under. This, translated into number of donors, represents a large group of people. Over three million letters are mailed annually to Canadian homes (over 3,000 in the Lachute district under sponsorship of the Lions Club) and nearly half of those mailings will be returned.

In return for the growing confidence which the public has demonstrated in the "Easter Seal Service", over 10,000 crippled children in Canada will receive some direct service. This service is provided directly by, or in co-operation with, service clubs, clinics, schools, prosthetic appliances, camping and a variety of other ways, by the Provincial Societies for Crippled Children.

There are many problems in connection with separate fund-raising campaigns, but we do not believe in denying the individual an expression of his own particular interest, through giving support to the charity or charities of his choice. The Quebec Crippled Children's Society therefore offers no apology for this separate campaign, at a time when so much is being said about "multiplicity of appeals."

Perennial and Timely

THE FIRST long week-end of spring — the Easter holiday — will be marked by one traffic accident each hour, according to indications from past years. Mechanical failures, bad roads and poor driving conditions will cause accidents — but the majority of fatalities and injuries could be avoided.

The following precautions are recommended, particularly for long week-ends like the Easter holiday:

1—On long trips, keep speed down and take your trip in laps.
2—Keep the car's stopping distance in mind; it will be greater in poor weather.
3—Stop frequently for coffee or soft drinks, particularly at night.
4—Always keep a window open to prevent drowsiness.
5—Never "hog" the right-of-way.
6—When traffic is heavy, watch the car ahead; never follow too closely.
7—Drive more slowly on roads you are unfamiliar with.
8—Never drive with fogged or frosted windows.
9—Keep headlights low when passing oncoming vehicles at night.

The glorious lamp of heaven, the sun,

— Robert Herrick.

Taxation and the Seven Ages

Man is victim of taxation, from the cradle to the grave;
All through life's seven ages, he is its abject slave;
There's a tax upon the little chap when he arrives on earth,
In the form of a certificate to register his birth.

There's a tax upon his schooling, on his clothes and on his books,
And a sales tax on his fishing rod, the sinkers, lines and hooks;
And when he goes a-fishing, if he has to take the train,
There's a tax upon the ticket, going there and back again.

When his schoolboy days are over, he is sure to fall in love,
Then his salary is taxed for to please his lady-love —
A tax on movie tickets, and a tax on taxi-rides
Are the only two I'll mention — there are many more besides.

He wants to serve his country, so he joins the flying corps;
He learns to spiral upwards and to taxi down once more;
To nose-dive, bank, and flying blind, are very risky feats —
But his danger is the taxi-cab, when crossing city streets!

Next scene — behold the Magistrate sedately on the bench,
He weighs up all the evidence, in English or in French,
Then he consults his confreres, and they seldom ever fail
To tax the prisoner ten bucks, or give a week in jail.

The sixth age — frail and tottering, his voice is very meek
And turns to childish treble whene'er he tries to speak,
He is fond of reminiscences and telling old wise-cracks
But though he's now infirm and old, he must pay the Income Tax!

The sixth age — frail and tottering, his voice is very weak
Sans teeth, sans taste, sans everything; but taxes still remain.
And when Death overtakes him and his testament is read,
The Government will claim a tax on the leavings of the dead!

— Mrs. Walter Gauley, R.R. 1, St. Philippe, Que.

Frederick Edward Neuflize Ponsonby, who succeeds his father as the 10th Earl of Bessborough, has built up a reputation as a diplomat, businessman, actor and poetic playwright. Yet he does not reach his 43rd birthday until late this month.

He is proud of his connection with Canada as the son of the ninth Earl Bessborough, governor-general from 1931 to 1935, who died recently at age 75. The new Lord Bessborough was at Eton during his father's term in Ottawa, but spent his holidays in Canada. During the Second World War he served for a time in 1940 as aide-de-camp to Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, then commander of the 1st Canadian Corps, and was known to his friends in the Canadian army as "Eric".

It requires ten voters to nominate a candidate for the House of Commons.

Have You A Question on UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE OR EMPLOYMENT?

In this column we publish questions about unemployment insurance and employment, together with answers received from the Unemployment Insurance Commission.

If you are uncertain about any point do not hesitate to send your question to your district Unemployment Insurance office. We will obtain an answer and publish it in this column.

Q. My husband writes very badly. Can I write on his behalf and complete the forms which are sent to him by the unemployment insurance office?

A. Yes, provided HE signs the various forms.

Q. What should one do when he is a claimant and then gets a job and starts to work?

A. (a) If you are a claimant who reports in person at the local office you will find a form (UIC 489) attached to the inside cover of your Information for Claimants and Direction to Report (form UIC 501D). You should complete that form for the last week in which you were unemployed and send it to your local office. Make sure, if you started to work during that last week in which you were employed, that you declare all of your earnings for that week.

(b) If you are reporting by mail complete form UIC 497 (sent to you every two weeks) for the last week in which you were unemployed as in (a).

Q. If my husband moved to another town to get work, and I quit my job to move with him, would I draw my unemployment allowances?

A. The Unemployment Insurance Act provides for a married woman following their husband in the case that the latter changes his place of residence.

The new place of residence must nevertheless offer opportunity of employment to the claimant, and she must fulfill all the other conditions.

Road Safety Campaign

Quebec (CP) — Transport Minister Rivard, announcing that a third annual road safety campaign for the province would start in a few weeks, said past results had been so good provincial authorities are planning an even more active campaign this time.

He asked municipalities to introduce uniform speed laws, and also warned them against invoking provincial traffic legislation just to supplement municipal income.

BEST WISHES TO ALL FOR A TRULY BLESSED EASTER.

Fish Story

"Many years ago, I had arranged to meet my old friend Wes Taylor, a Philadelphia illustrator, at Jasper Park for a brief vacation," wrote Napier Moore in a recent issue of The Financial Post. "En route to Alberta, he was to detour for a few days' fishing on Ontario's Lake Temagami. He arrived at Jasper in a state of some distress. He had lost his glasses. Out fishing with a guide, while getting a catch alongside the boat, he had leaned over the side and the glasses, of the pince-nez type, had slithered off his nez and dropped into the drink. Lost without them, he had promptly telegraphed his optician in Philadelphia asking him to rush a new pair to Jasper.

"Two days later, a package arrived. 'My glasses' my friend exulted, tearing open the wrapping without looking at it. 'That's fast work!'. There was no air mail in those days and by train the package couldn't possibly have got there from Philadelphia. Then Wes gasped. 'These are my OLD glasses,' he said.

"I picked up the wrapper, It bore Canadian stamps. Inside was a note from the manager of the lodge at Temagami. It said that the evening Wes departed, the guide had gone out fishing again and had caught a whopper. And wedged in its gullet were — you are quite right — Taylor's glasses. It was the guide's opinion that the fish attracted by the glint of the lens as they slowly sank, had mistakenly regarded them as being edible."

Man Is A Spirit

By Lewis Milligan

Addressing a group of diplomats in Vatican City, Pope Pius XII warned them to be on their guard against "militant materialism". The real hope for peace, he said, is a recognition that "man is in the first place a spirit." When I read that in the news, this present article had already been written, including the above title, and I was happy to find myself in such distinguished company.

In another article replying to a reader's question, "Can a Christian be a Socialist?" I cited historical facts to show that Socialism was based on the assumption that mankind was so much animated material that could be planned and moulded into a cast iron system of society and stay there. I pointed out that all the originators of Socialism were materialists. I am now asked, "What is materialism?" That is a large order.

The materialist reverses the Christian idea of creation and claims that the world and all forms of life, including man, are entirely the products of matter. Frederick Engels, the friend and financial sponsor of Karl Marx, declared that "Matter is not the product of mind, but mind is merely the highest product of matter." Stalin explained it thus: "Thought is a product of matter which in its development has reached a high degree of perfection, namely, in the brain, and the brain is the organ of thought."

That is pure, or rather, crass materialism. It puts the "cart before the horse" and renders both mind and matter static and ridiculous. If mind is merely the product of matter, what then is matter the product of? Sir James Jeans, the great British astronomer, said: "The universe has not always existed, it had a beginning and is still expanding." If that be true, matter itself did not exist at one time and there must have been a mind to create it. Matter itself is a mystery, and modern science has revealed that it is not what it appears to be.

The Bible says: "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth. And the earth was without form and void." Scientific materialists would agree with the latter part of that statement, for it aptly describes the nebula from which they claim the earth was evolved. They reject the first part because God is a spirit, and there can be nothing spiritual in a materialist's universe. That was the stumbling block of the materialistic evolutionists of the nineteenth century. They tried to explain away the Creator by physical laws in matter and by such terms as "natural selection" as the origin of all forms of organic life. Evolution to them was an automatic process void of any preconceived design or innate intelligence. The whole process was a sort of hit-and-miss affair.

Charles Darwin, who demonstrated the process in his books, "The Origin of Species" and "The Descent of Man," was not a professed materialist, but he would never commit himself one way or the other. He rejoiced, however, in Professor Huxley's materialistic explanations of the Darwinian theory. Yet Darwin kept an open mind, and the nearest he came to believing in a divinity operating in nature was in his study of flowers, particularly orchids. He gloated over them and was amazed at not only the marvelous coloring and design of the orchid, but especially at the apparent intelligence of that strange flower.

Wordsworth had previously said that "the meanest flower that grows" gave him thoughts that "lie too deep for tears." Darwin had no love for poetry, he was an anlyst, and he virtually admitted that orchids evoked a mystery too profound for materialistic analysis.

Reading recently Duff Cooper's autobiography, "Old Men Forget," I made a note of the following statement: "Man can make a machine, he cannot make an organism, because an organism is life, and the creation of life remains a mystery which baffles science."

ALL ABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore

The little girl bounced impatiently on the seat of the bus, waved her arm and looked at the signal cord fard above her head.

"Two stops farther on, you can pull it," said the lady in the gray squirrel coat, who seemed to be the child's mother.

The bus rumbled along. "Is it time now?" the little girl asked.

"Not yet," said mother. Another woman sat down nearby. Her face crinkled with that special smile that women reserve for small frisky children.

"Is it time now?" the girl asked.

"Nearly," said mother. "Oh-oh. Someone else has pulled the cord. Never mind. You pull it too."

The tiny girl stood on the bus seat and reached as high as she could. The bus was slowing, and it seemed that she would be too late. One or two passengers moved as though they were going to lift her.

Just then, however, the moppet attained the cord with her finger tips, and the signal near the driver sounded: "Ting!"

"There!" said mother. "You hear the noise?"

The small girl nodded, and jumped down, grinning with triumph. Answering grins broke out on adult faces all around.

"It's a great thrill for her," mother explained to the rest of the bus, as she moved to the door. "The first time." Mother's tone was half-apologetic. But her fellow-passengers were pleased.

For each of them, the incident brought back that half-forgotten time when simple things lighted up the world.

Long ago, a small boy was cheered beyond measure when Daddy let him carry in a few sticks of wood for the stove.

A little girl felt important because Mummy let her stir the cake bowl and scrape out the delicious leavings.

Now they were grown-ups riding the bus and worrying about loan payments, new refrigerators, new fur coats or a raise in pay.

And when they saw the little girl's face shine because she was allowed to pull the signal cord, they felt touched, amused and ashamed of themselves.

HOW MANY COWS NEEDED TO MAKE $10,000 A YEAR OVER FEED COSTS?

Dairy Herd Improvement Association records from New Jersey emphasize that dairy profits depend on COWS, NOT THE SIZE OF THE HERD. The records show cows giving as follows:

Butter fat	Milk	Worth	Feed Cost	Profit	No. of Cows & Profit Over Feed
450	11,996	$623.00	$224.00	$399.00	x 25 — $10,000
250	6,162	$366.00	$176.00	$190.00	x 52 — $10,000
150	3,947	$215.00	$113.00	$102.00	x 98 — $10,000

While this is a New Jersey record, it won't be much different from our own conditions; they got more for their milk but would pay more for their feed. The comparisons are there. One 450 lb. B.F. cow was as profitable as three 150 lb. B.F. cows, and unless you have lots of feed to use up, why work for three cows and stable-room them, when one cow will do the trick!

The 450 lb. cow ate only twice as much feed as the 150 lb. cow, and gave three times as much profit.

Now the next question is to get the 12,000 lb. cows? With your present herd, by weighing milk and feeding by the Purina Plan, you may raise part of your herd up into that class. By raising calves off these best cows on Nursing Chow, Calf Startena and Dry and Freshening Chow, you can have BIGGER and BETTER replacements for the cows in the lower bracket SOONER than any other way. And remember, other things being equal, the bigger the cow the more milk she will give; and the younger she commences milking, the more profit-years you will get out of her.

Follow the Purina Feeding Plan for $10,000 a year. You can't lose. See us for your supply of chows; we deliver.

NHL Trophy Winners

By Milt McPhail

Four more individual trophies are still to be awarded in the National Hockey League.

They are the Hart Trophy for the player adjudged the most valuable to his team; the Calder Memorial for the outstanding rookie; the James Norris Memorial, to the outstanding defenceman; and the Lady Byng Trophy for the player combining sportsmanship, gentlemanly conduct and a high standard of playing ability.

Consensus is that the Hart Trophy is a battle between centre Jean Beliveau of Montreal Canadiens, goalie Worsley of New York Rangers and centre Tod Sloan of Toronto Maple Leafs. Goalie Glenn Hall of Detroit Red Wings and forward Henri Richard of Montreal seem to have the inside track on the Calder Trophy. It won't be surprising if Doug Harvey of Canadiens wins the Norris Trophy as the best defenceman, while the Lady Byng Trophy has several candidates including Earl Reibel of Detroit, Johnny Wilson of Chicago Black Hawks and Floyd Currie of Montreal.

Beliveau has already won the Art Ross Trophy as the NHL scoring champion, finishing with 88 points on 47 goals and 41 assists. The achievement is somewhat remarkable in that Beliveau spent 143 minutes in the penalty box, a league record for centres.

Montreal's Jacques Plante won thet Vezina Trophy as the league's best goalie. He played in 64 games and had a goals-against mark of 131, an average of 1.87 a game.

ALL-STAR SELECTION

Even though a Canadian Olympic all-star hockey selection might disrupt schedules and teams, a loyalty to the name of the nation should compel co-operation by all concerned. We have the players across Canada in many teams; what we have to do is wash out the last vestige of conceit and get to work on the project.

WEEK IN OTTAWA

By Roy LaBerge,
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, March 26 (CP) — While it debates this year's budget the Commons is keeping one eye cocked at next year's federal budget — expected to be a pre-election one.

Spokesmen for the Progressive Conservative and CCF parties agreed during debate in forecasting that big tax reductions, not provided in the latest budget, will be made next spring on the eve of an election. CCF Leader Coldwell even predicted election date: June 17, 1957.

Conservative financial critic J. M. Macdonnell said the budget shows government members are ignoring present economic problems and "are primarily concerned with so arranging matters that they can win the next election."

Main budget criticisms by the two parties are summarized in motions of non-confidence in the government.

The Conservative motion says the budget is "empty, negative and partisan," and shows no concern about distressed areas in Canada or growing United States domination of Canadian industry.

The CCF motion says the budget "failed" to reduce sales and income taxes for those in the lower income groups while continuing to favor "privileged interests and those with unearned income." It called for a tax on capital gains and elimination of the 20-per-cent tax credit on income from Canadian company dividends.

Main Taxes Unchanged

The second budget presented by Finance Minister Harris since he assumed the post July 1, 1954, pared a mere $12,000,000 from government income sources by removing the 10-per-cent sales tax from a scattering of special-use goods. It offered no change in existing personal and corporation income taxes.

The finance minister estimated gross national production of $28,000,000,000 will yield the government unprecedented revenues of $4,765,000,000 with a surplus of $113,000,000 in the fiscal year starting April 1.

The budget speech also announced that a stiff new excise tax will be imposed on Canadian editions of certain foreign publications. Purpose of the move was to protect Canadian magazines whose long-term future "appears to be in jeopardy" from imported publications.

Of this proposed 20-per-cent tax on advertising profits of foreign magazines' Canadian editions, Carl Nickle (PC—Calgary South) said during debate: "If Canadian publishers cannot effectively sell the merits of their periodicals to Canadian readers and advertisers, then they do not deserve permanent existence."

Mr. Nickle himself is publisher of two oil periodicals. He said: "If I could not successfully compete by fair means, I would sooner go out of business than resort to demands that my competitors have their wings clipped by extraordinary taxes."

CCF leader Coldwell said he is in complete sympathy with the objective of the tax. But he doubted that it would stop special Canadian editions of United States magazines.

Mr. Nickle suggested a creative writing fund of $50,000 to $100,000 provided by the federal government and publishers. Monthly awards would be made from this for fact and fiction articles which would be allocated to Canadian magazines on the basis of their contribution to the fund. This would be of major help to sales of Canadian magazines.

Manning Radar Line

The DEW (Distant Early Warning) radar line will be manned by a United States civilian firm but 80 per cent of its personnel on the line in the Canadian Arctic will be Canadians.

The Commons learned last week that an American civilian contractor would man the line, being built and paid for by the U.S.

But Defence Production Minister Howe later added the news that about 950 Canadian civilians, including 200 Eskimos, likely will be employed in the line's operation and maintenance.

Mr. Howe said at least two Canadian companies had put in bids for the job but "unfortunately" their tenders were higher than that of the American Federal Electric Company.

He also said that when the complete DEW line situation can be put before the Commons "members will not be disappointed at Canadian participation in that operation."

Police Juvenile Club Jamboree at Morin Hts.

(Our District Correspondent)

Morin Heights — The local youth movement received another boost here in Morin Heights Friday night, when the Police Juvenile Club staged a jamboree in the Protestant School auditorium.

The committee in charge of the arrangements had prepared a varied program which was enjoyed by all attending. Balloon games, door prizes, drawings and the good old-fashioned square dances, together with modern dances, were enthusiastically enjoyed by the young ones present.

Over 300 people attended, to make this first public affair a success. Prizes were generously donated by storekeepers and individuals, also purchased from the funds of the club.

The club at its last meeting had enrolled 66 members.

The committee of this organization wish to express their thanks to the many helpers, and particularly to the Board of the Protestant School, for their co-operation in allowing the event to be held in the auditorium.

DOOMED MOTHER GETS HER WISH

Mrs. Antonia Manders, 27-year-old cancer-doomed resident of Sudbury, Ont., who expressed the wish to go home to Uden, Holland, for a reunion with her parents, five sisters and two brothers, before she dies, is shown in her stateroom aboard the Dutch liner Maasdam. With her are her young son, Willy, 18 months old, and her husband, Corneles, who are going with her due to generosity of people of Sudbury who collected funds for the family. Mrs. Manders was brought to New York by ambulance from Sudbury General hospital in a race against time to board the ocean liner at Hoboken, N.Y., before it sailed for Holland. Doctors have given her only six months to live.

Quebec Province Warming Up — In Political Sense

By Brian Selwood

Quebec (CP) — Some 2,000 miles south of here Premier Duplessis was enjoying balmy climate of the Bahamas and a brief respite from government chores, when Quebec too began warming up . . . but mainly in a political sense.

However, it was the Liberals — not Mr. Duplessis' Union Nationale party — whose burst of political activities reminded everyone that Provincial elections may only be three months away.

As meetings were being arranged in various parts of the province to select Liberal candidates for the summer contest, provincial liberal leader Georges Lapalme called the press together in the provincial capital.

Principal aim of his chat was to announce that his party's election campaign will be opened in April. As a curtain-raiser, the 49-year-old party chief, will address a meeting in Quebec county April 15. Then, April 28, there will be a 1,500-cover banquet in Quebec City.

Mr. Lapalme also sketched in some of the main points of the campaign. Summing up, he said: "All our electoral campaigning will be based on what is needed to give back to Quebec the standing she has lost . . we shall put the accent on the development of our natural resources, especially of Ungava iron . . . "

He said his party also wants to see Provincial income tax limited to the 10 per cent deductable from Federal income tax; municipalities "freed from the burden" of public assistance payments; and his party favors higher allowances for needy mothers, free tuition and school books.

After talking to newspaper men, Mr. Lapalme went home to prepare for a round of speech-making to herald the campaign.

It seems clear the Liberals are determined to try for a spectacular political come-back in the province's legislature, and oust the powerful Union Nationale party from the government seats.

Meanwhile, the governing party, which is expected to seek a fresh mandate from the electors in June or July, had not yet revealed details of its campaign.

"Our plans are complete in every detail and I can say it won't be too long before our plans are made public," said colonization minister J. D. Begin. Union Nationale campaigning has started to function, but only quietly, he added.

Mr. Duplessis' itinerary during the campaign will probably be restricted to the areas he did not visit last year, said Mr. Begin. However, this arrangement may be modified by last-minute changes.

Both parties, incidentally, plan to use television during the campaign.

Large Attendance at District Masonic Meeting

Argenteuil Masonic Lodge No. 67 was the scene of a large gathering on Saturday afternoon, when officers and brethren of the Ottawa District attended a special meeting.

Wor. Bro. H. Graves presided for the opening, later handing over the proceedings to Rt. Wor. Bro. H. Cooke, District Grand Master, who conducted the business part of the session.

Highlight of the meeting was the presence of the Most Worshipful Grand Master, Bro. D. L. Witten, who briefly addressed the assembly.

Lodges represented in the district were — Shawville, Aylmer, Hull, Grenville, Buckingham, Noranda, Arundel, Temiskaming, Bourlemac and Lachute.

A banquet was served at the close to over 100 members of the fraternity.

After other business was discussed a "500" card game was played. Winners were Miss Bessie Black for the ladies and D. J. Rodger for the men. The booby prizes were won by Mrs. Leonard Boa and Clifford Oswald.

COME TO CHURCH ON Easter Sunday

Lachute United Church Welcomes New Members At Service of Dedication

A capacity congregation, and the reception of 34 new members into the fellowship of the church (29 being on profession of faith, and five by transfer from other churches) were outstanding features of last Sunday's morning service at Lachute United.

In the course of his sermon, the Rev. Wilson Bridge, minister of the church, stated that 1956 was a year of dedication for the members of the United Church of Canada. The call to dedication had been issued by the Moderator, the Very Rev. Dr. George Dorey, and by the Committee of the National Evangelistic Mission. As a people, they were called to dedicate themselves to the service of God and humanity, as was Her Majesty the Queen, on the day of her Coronation, June 2, 1953.

At the close of the sermon, the Rev. Wilson Bridge welcomed the new members. Those joining on Profession of Faith came forward and received the right hand of fellowship, firstly from the minister, and then from Mr. Willard M. Steeves, Clerk of the Session, and Mr. Merlin Evans, Superintendent of the Church School. This was followed by a prayer of dedication for the whole church, and the celebration of Communion.

The singing of Frances Ridley Havergal's hymn "Take my life, and let it be consecrated, Lord, to Thee" followed by the benediction, brought the service to a close.

During the service, the choir, under direction of Mr. E. Callicott, rendered the anthem "Ride On! Ride On!" (by Graham George) and Mrs. L. Armstrong sang with feeling "The Palms" (by Faure). Mr. W. K. Riddell was at the organ.

March Activities in B'burg United Church

During the month of March, a successful supper was held by Brownsburg United Church, despite the inclemency of the weather at that particular time.

A joint meeting of the Women's Associations and the Board of Stewards also took place, after which working groups were organized voluntarily, and with the Senior Women's organization financing the project, the church hall was redecorated, thus greatly improving the interior appearance.

The usual meetings are being held by the various organizations, and the Young People's group held three gatherings in March, one being in the form of a debate; and plans are being made for a basketball game, to raise funds.

The installation of two new elders took place at the Communion service last Sunday morning, the elders being Mr. Sidney Stewart and Mr. Harold Smith. Two new members also joined the church on profession of faith.

Bible Briefs

By A.A.M.

The Bible is rich in stories, and the purpose of this series is to encourage readers to look up for themselves the Bible versions of these incidents. If there are children in the family it is suggested that the story, and the Bible verses on which it is based, be read aloud.

Who were the people who watched Jesus and His followers plucking ears of grain to eat as they walked through a wheat field on the Sabbath, and they objected to this?

These critics said to the Master, "Look, Your disciples are doing what is not allowed on the Sabbath!" Jesus answered them with this question, "Have you not read what David did long years ago when he was hungry? Do you not know that he and his companions entered the House of God and ate the sacred bread of the Presence which only the priests were supposed to use? Do you not recall that the priests in the temple profane the Sabbath because there is certain work they must do, and thus they are guiltless. Do you not believe that God desires mercy and not sacrifice. I tell you the Son of man is Lord of the Sabbath. You will find the name of Jesus' critics and you can read this incident in Matthew 12: 1-8.

Rev. W. Hartley Britton, Former Baptist Pastor Goes to Saint John, N.B.

The Evening Times-Globe of Saint John, N.B., gives news of the appointment of the Rev. W. Hartley Britton to the pastorate of Tabernacle United Baptist Church in that city.

Friends of the Rev. Mr. Britton, who is favorably remembered for his ministry in the Baptist Church here, are gratified to hear of his move to an important pastorate in the New Brunswick port city.

A native of Toronto, Mr. Britton has held pastorates at Queensville Baptist Church, Ont.; Lachute Baptist Church; and the Valley Baptist Church, Albert County, N.B. He studied at Toronto Baptist Seminary and was ordained in 1946 here in Lachute.

Senate Approves Baptist "Fellowship" Ch. Group

The Senate last week approved the principle of an amalgamation by two religious bodies that splintered from the Baptist convention of Ontario and Quebec in 1927.

Second reading was given a bill bringing together the union of regular Baptist churches of Ontario and Quebec and fellowship of independent Baptist churches of Canada under the name: "The Fellowship of Evangelical Churches in Canada."

Senator John A. McDonald, Liberal, Nova Scotia, said the amalgamating groups grew out of a controversy that arose in 1927 over the professorship of theology at McMaster University, Hamilton. It resulted in more than 200 churches with a membership of 20,000 leaving the Baptist convention and forming the two groups.

The Spirit of Easter

THERE IS A spirit of Easter, just as there is a spirit of Thanksgiving and Christmas. It is a spirit of exhilaration, of glorious rejoicing. On Easter Sunday, churches will be crowded. Glorious music will peal from a thousand organs and eager choirs will proclaim "Christ is risen".

What makes this outburst of joy and confidence is the faith that Christ lives and moves along the streets and highways of personal and organized life, giving assurance of happiness, security and the ultimate conquest of man's baser self.

A few days ago in a crowded train I shared the seat with a new Canadian. She had been through the horrors of bombardment, destruction, and death in Germany during the war. The only thing that kept her from mental collapse or spiritual suicide through it all, was the Easter affirmation that Christ lives, and that in the final wind-up of history, good will triumph over evil.

We live in an exciting period of the world's history. Old things are being swept away. Much is being made new. The forces of evil and good are joined in battle; not that all the good is one side of the iron curtain and all the evil on the other. The conflict in which we are engaged is a clash of deep spiritual forces that cut across all boundaries and barriers. The maddening roar of the world's turmoil is the accompaniment of this deep, ceaseless and age-old struggle. It is brought to focus in the surging nationalism so characteristic of our day, the uprising of submerged peoples, the restless movement of the world's depressed, hungry and untutored millions.

The Easter experience re-establishes hope that the end of history is good and not evil; that selfishness, greed, and lust for power, will ultimately be sublimated into brotherhood, unselfishness and humble and enthusiastic service to each other, irrespective of race, color or cultural background.

It might be well when we go to church on Easter Sunday to watch for this note of triumph running through the music, and with the eye of faith see the future of mankind as one family, as Christ proclaimed and demonstrated in His own experience.

League Hockey Championship Line-Up, Appraisal by B'burg Sports Reporter

(Our District Correspondent)

Brownsburg's triumph in the best-of-seven finals with their old rivals, Hawkesbury, to win the title and the Portelance Trophy — was strictly a team victory, and when you realize that, you must take off your hat to coach Jimmy Murdoch for bringing the cup to Brownsburg to pair with the baseball trophy he brought in the fall.

It takes more than a few stars to go into a final series without one of their big men, Giroux — to lose the first two games — and come back and win the cup when one of their best, a league all-star, Jacques Racine, was side-lined. It takes a TEAM. Buddy Racine's superb goaling throughout, and masterly performance in the last game, was just his share. André Ouellete's eight goals and five assists, were just part of the team's victory, as was Mel Tomalty's hat-trick in the fifth game.

Buddy Racine had his off-spell in the late stages of the league when he was repeatedly hampered by injuries, but came back to his best form for all of the play-off games. Considering the number of sure goals Buddy stopped in the play-offs and the near-impossibility of those he didn't stop, Buddy must be considered as one of the top contributors to Brownsburg's success.

Yves Raymond's main trouble all season was probably that he's too clean. "Wes" was one of our weak links all season, because in this league a defenceman has to be rough or fall by the wayside. When the chips were down though, in the finals Wes showed how successful a clean defenceman can be, and with several fine displays proved himself a more than worthy member of the squad. Strict refereeing cut the dirty play's effectiveness, and Wes was allowed to play his kind of hockey.

Willis McAdam is a man who can play anybody's kind of hockey, and although he made several "goofs" during the season, it's safe to say he never had a bad game. Willis is always rough, a dynamo of energy, and when the events get out of hand Willis always becomes the policeman. He seldom resorts to dirty play of any kind but when the

Bombers In Finals With Kemptville For Citizen Shield

(Our District Correspondent)

Brownsburg — In a series which was anti-climactic after the thrilling play-offs, Brownsburg managed to squeeze past a vastly inferior Cornwall factory team. Brownsburg's classiest hockey comes strictly from "hunger", and against the Howard Smith Beavers they just weren't hungry. They were fat from their cup victory, and this team was a pushover!

All season the Bombers have been a "chips-down" team. In the Rigaud series the chips were down when they had to play the seventh game without Giroux. In the finals, besides managing without Giroux, they had to face Hawkesbury in the seventh game without Jacques Racine. Again the boys were "hungry" — and they won the cup.

The night after they won the cup they were asked to play the lower-rated Cornwall mill team. There was no challenge, and the Cornwallers won. Thursday night (three nights in a row) it went to overtime — and that was a challenge, so they won. And on Sunday after a three-day lay-off they qualified for the final of The Citizen Shield.

The expected opponents were to be Ottawa Lasalles. The Lasalles have a powerhouse including Rip Riopel, Emile Dagenais and several other ex-bigtimers who are still in the "potent" class. They would probably present too big a challenge for our Bombers, and the latest word from C.A.H.A. is that our opponents will be more our own class. The final for the Shield will be a best-of-three series between Brownsburg and Kemptville, starting at Kemptville on Thursday and returning to Brownsburg on Sunday. Brownsburg has requested that it be a home-and-home total-points series, but there's no answer yet on that.

With the cup behind them, and enough time to cool off, the locals should be hungry again, and they have almost an even chance of taking that Shield. . . Let's hope they can make this a hockey season for us to remember a long time!

155 Teams Entered For Lachute Annual Invitation Curling

A big entry from Eastern Canada is reported for the Annual Invitation Bonspiel, which starts here this Saturday. To date there is a record of 155 clubs, in which over 600 players will participate. There will be contestants from Ottawa, Prescott, Valleyfield, Sherbrooke, Montreal and numerous other centres, to try their skill and enjoy the hospitality for which the Lachute Curling Club has become so well-known.

Games start this Saturday at 2, 4, 6 and 8 o'clock. During the week, the playing hours will be at 4, 6 and 8 o'clock, continuing until the play-downs on April 14.

Meals will be served by the Ladies' Club, with entertainment during the evenings.

Beautiful prizes are to be competed for, and from the present outlook it would appear that this will be perhaps the best Invitation Bonspiel yet.

Saturday's curling games were well attended, with the usual social gathering during the evening.

High-plus score winners were Mrs. Haldimand, D. Graham, Mrs. A. Vessie and R. P. Fraser (skip).

Miss M. Preece and Mrs. J. Wilson were highest at cards.

Refreshments were under supervision of Mrs. A. Scott, Mrs. W. Muir and Mrs. W. K. McArthur.

Miss M. Scott provided music at the piano.

Calvert Competition

In the finals for the Lord Calvert Trophy, C. Robinson, D. McFaul, H. Rigg and Syd Drew continued their good play, winning by a good margin.

Veterans' Trophy

Six teams played elimination games here for representation in the Quebec Veterans' Bonspiel, finals of which were held at Huntingdon on Saturday last.

Contestants for this section were R. Gravel, S. Jones, H. Morrison and S. Drew (skip). These boys were brilliant in their several games, bringing honor to Lachute and winning the coveted trophy — an ashtray stand, the top forming a curling stone and supported by imitation brooms. Individual prizes were also given to the provincial champions.

Vets' Night

Tuesday evening was given over to the local vets of Legion Branch 70, who turned out in large numbers to enjoy the "roarin' game". While the ex-servicemen, several of whom were new at curling, did not win the majority of the games, they did excell at cards, and altogether spent a very enjoyable evening.

Winning teams, to whom individual prizes were given, comprised — D. McFaul, L. Rendell, E. Prophet, J. Campbell (skip); D. Wilson, K. Rutherford, R. Wyse, L. Armstrong (skip); W. Gordon, K. Warwick, P. Tremblay, R. Hadley (skip); A. E. Comba, M. Hinde, H. Rigg, L. Duncan (skip).

V. Elliott and W. Blakely took the honors for high score at cards.

President D. McGibbon extended a most cordial welcome to the Legion boys and was heartily thanked for his co-operation.

Leonard in Miami Beach Open Golf Tournament

Miami Beach, Fla., March 26. — Gardner Dickinson, Jr., won the $15,000 Miami Beach Open golf tournament Sunday with a three-under-par 69 as Billy Maxwell and Dow Finsterwald finished in a second place tie.

Stan Leonard, of Lachute, had 75-66-70-71—282 and earned $175. Al. Balding of Toronto earned $76.66 with 71-69-71-74—285.

Top money was $2,400. Maxwell and Finsterwald collected $1,600 each.

ROUGH HOCKEY

Something sad is happening to hockey as it's played these days — something sad from the spectators' standpoint. That's why hockey crowds are dwindling. The finesse, the stick-handling, the passing game has gone. In its place has come a wrestling battle-royal. Who's going to save hockey from going the way of lacrosse?

Coach of the crack Swedish gymnastics team which toured North America last year saw the petite acrobat in action and prophesied she would be a real threat to the Europeans in Olympic action in Melbourne, Australia.

Cars ARE MY Line

by ARMAND DESROSIERS

Everyone who's watched a madman at the wheel cut in front of other cars, or make a left turn from the far right-hand lane, or zoom around a corner on two wheels, has, I imagine, thought to himself "the crazy fool, I wish I could do something about it."

They found a way to do something about it in Dallas, Texas, and the system was copied with amazing results in Sudbury, Ontario.

In Sudbury, 75 men were secretly recruited as T-Men (T for Traffic, of course) and issued with a number of post-cards. When a T-Man spots a driver breaking one of the rules of safe driving, he notes the license number, the offense and the time and drops it in the mail to the Chief of Police.

The chief writes a friendly letter to the offending driver pointing out his mistake. When four letters have gone out to the same driver, police consider laying a charge.

The results in Sudbury were dramatic. In one nine-month period, the city had eight traffic deaths. In the same nine months after the system was introduced, only one person was killed. Injuries were reduced from 84 to 34 and accidents from 913 to 528. And, says Police Chief Burger, of all the thousands of drivers who've been sent letters, only two have complained about the T-Men.

It's certainly true that responsibility goes with owning a car. This responsibility is all the greater these days because it's so easy to own a car. Our used car lot is a perfect example of this, for set out among our cars are models that can fit anyone's budget. Our responsibility is to bring you safe, dependable, economical cars.

Change of Locale, Otter Lake 1956 Music Centre

Round Lake Inn, Weir, Scene of Gathering This Summer, July 1-15

Otter Lake Music Centre, the Canadian music holiday centre in the Quebec Laurentians, announces its fourth season will be held this summer from July 1 to 15. In order to meet the growing demand of music lovers from all over Canada and the United States who wish to spend a creative holiday of music-making in the beautiful setting of the Canadian Laurentians, the Centre has been obliged to change its locale to provide additional accommodation, and will be held this summer at Round Lake Inn, at Weir, Que., in the County of Argenteuil.

As in the past, the Centre offers a variety of music activities to professional and amateur musicians. Last year, many of the members had not made music previously, but, with the skills acquired during their holiday, were able to participate in choral and recorder groups in their own communities on returning home. The Centre is bi-lingual, and organizes French conversation groups for English speaking members and English conversation groups for French-speaking members.

Afternoon are usually devoted to sports. Courses are given in the mornings, and include choral singing, recorder (straight flute) playing, music reading, madrigals, lieder, chamber music, theory, and composition. In the evenings, the whole Centre meets for group performances of fine music studied during the morning, including Bach Cantatas, Beethoven quartets, etc.

Director of the session this summer will be George Little, founder-director of the Bach Choir in Montreal and director of the CBC's George Little Singers programs. Speaking of the Centre, Mr. Little says: "It has been a moving experience in the past to see people of all ages and from many different professions, and whole family groups, and music-lovers of different cultural and religious backgrounds all come together to share in the satisfying experience of making music."

Information regarding the Centre may be obtained from the Secretariat, P.O. Box 195, Montreal 8.

Easter Vigil in Quebec Monastery On TV and Radio

Highlights of the Easter Vigil, a ceremony performed annually in the Benedictine monastery of St. Benoit-du-Lac, near Magog, Que., have been filmed and recorded for presentation on the CBC during the Easter week-end. On the CBC-TV network the Vigil will be presented from 9-9.30 p.m. on Good Friday. On CBC Trans-Canada, "Canadian Scene" will present a sound-picture of it on Easter Sunday, 5.30-6.00 p.m.

The monks of St. Benoit, who are noted for their hospitality, their excellent singing and the fine cheese they manufacture and sell, usually conduct this ceremony on the Saturday before Easter Sunday but they agreed to perform it in advance this year for the benefit of CBC listeners and viewers.

The Vigil begins with the assembly of the 70 monks and visiting laymen in the Chapter outside the monastery. The procession moves to the gallery in front of the building and after the ceremonial striking of the fire and the lighting of the Pascal Candle, it moves through the cloister to the chapel where the Pascal Candle is passed along the line; each person lights a small candle from it. With this ritual the Vigil comes to an end and the High Mass begins.

Located on the shores of Lake Memphremagog, the St. Benoit-du-Lac Monastery was founded in 1912 by Dom Vanier, a French monk who lived for many years with four companions in a humble dwelling on the site of the present four-storey stone building. The scenic and peaceful surroundings make it a popular place of retreat and each year it attracts a large number of Catholic laymen.

To connoisseurs of fine food, the monks are well-known for their blue cheese. They have also recorded four albums of Gregorian chant.

The service will also be carried on Saturday, March 31, at 8 p.m., on the CBC's French television network.

Tips on Touring

By Carol Lane
Women's Travel Authority

Cars are like people. When their innards are in good shape, they hum along. But when something ails them they may whine, wheeze, snarl or just quietly give up the ghost.

Your car engine, when percolating properly, has a smooth rhythm of its own and any unfamiliar sound may mean trouble is brewing.

A "missing" cylinder may mean a bad spark plug or ignition trouble; a heavy click-clicking usually indicates valve or tappet trouble; and grinding or growling usually means serious trouble in the transmission or rear axle.

I hope this advice doesn't lead to car-hypochondria. Most older cars have small rattles and squeaks that have nothing to do with the efficiency of the car's motor. But if you have any doubts as to the source of a new noise, remember that an early trip to a service station can prevent costly repair bills later on.

THE SEIGNIORY CLUB AS IT IS TODAY

PART IV. The Manor House and Its Former Owners

By Ethel Kettyle

Naturally, many people who have visited the Seigniory Club have been curious about the Manor House, which is situated on the Club grounds not far from the Log Chateau. It is a stately old house, which has been standing for more than 100 years near the banks of the Ottawa River. The historical association and biography of its former owners is most interesting, for previous to the taking over by the Seigniory Club, it was last owned by the Honorable Louis-Joseph Papineau.

Born on St. James Street in Montreal in the year 1786, Papineau was the son of a notary, who had become possessed of the old Seigneurie de la Petite Nation de la Paroisse de Bonsecours on the Ottawa River. This grant of land had been made by Bishop Laval in the early days of settlement in Canada and he named it "Seigniory of the Little Nation" after the Little Nation Indians of the Algonquin tribe, who roamed that particular vicinity. The Bishop finally gave it to one of the Brotherhoods of the Church, and many years later it passed into the hands of the elder Papineau.

Joseph-Louis Papineau's son (who was called Louis-Joseph) was a highly gifted and intelligent young man, and even at the time of being a student at the Seminary at Quebec, was conspicuous for outstanding eloquence. When only 26 years of age he took his seat in the House of Assembly for Lower Canada and seemed to be destined to play a large part in the history of Quebec. At that period he loomed large on the troubled horizon of politics. Three years after he entered the House he was elected speaker, and for the following twenty-two years (with the exception of one brief interval) he continued in that position. According to public belief he figured in the uprising of the Rebellion of 1837. After the skirmish at St. Denis where several lives were lost, Papineau apparently departed to the United States, where he remained till 1845; he then returned to Canada and to the Seigniory at Montebello, where he lived the life of a country gentleman. Then within a year or so he returned to the Canadian Parliament, where he was a member for some years. However, he was no longer in the forefront with reforms; these having been accomplished, Responsible Government was in force. The Manor House was built in 1850.

So, in our tour, we have reached the old Manor House with its historical background, and as we enter the foyer we are greeted by the keeper, who lives in the topmost storey with his wife. They apparently keep the place immaculate, and he now takes our wraps and escorts us through the wonderful old house, explaining things as he goes. On the wall are hanging the spurs worn years and years ago by Papineau whenever he went horseback riding.

The kitchen, although now made more modern, still brings memories of olden days. The walls are thick and the windows deep; and the beams, which were roughly hewn over a century ago, are still in excellent condition. In the billiard room the same heavy chains are used to hang the electric lights, which in former years held the lanterns used for lighting at that time. And although the walls have been remodeled, they still have a look of antiquity.

We then ascend the spiral staircase covered with red carpet, and on the second floor the rooms are still more interesting. Here one can almost feel the presence of the long-ago owners of the place, and it seems possible a ghost might be lurking in some shadowy corner. It gives one a pleasant, but eerie feeling to wander from room to room. The dining room, where food was formerly brought up from the kitchen by dumb-waiter, is a large, cheery place and one of these rooms still bears the original wall-paper. In the sitting room is a huge "what-not" reaching from floor to near the ceiling; it is also wide and heavy, and a great mirror forms the centre portion. But the most wonderful room of all is the lounge (or sun room), which is gloriously flooded with sunlight, for all along two sides are windows giving a marvellous view down the Ottawa River, also a view of the surrounding countryside and the Seigniory toboggan slide.

As we look out of the windows, a group of happy travellers may be seen sitting in a low sleigh drawn by a team of horses. They are muffled in warm buffalo robes and all seem to be happy and laughing. Around the winding hills ski trails are also seen, and one feels reluctant to leave this warm, cheery room in the old Manor House. The entire house has been beautifully and artistically furnished in Empire style, and what furniture has been purchased in more recent years, is almost a replica of the furnishings used in Papineau's time. Old oil-paintings grace the walls. The windows are hung with rich velours, and chairs and divans are scattered about.

From there we pass down the hall to the huge ball-room with its polished floor, and one feels that, any moment, the music of an old-fashioned waltz may start to play, and ladies in hoops and crinolines will appear in the arms of their partners. . . Surely there should be at least one ghost about the wonderful old Manor House!

As we leave the warm rooms and again go out into the open, we marvel at the beauty of this place, surrounded by stately pines which are dotted with great mounds of snow. We look back at the exterior of the old home. It is large and square, and the top storey has dormer windows. The squareness is somewhat masked by turrets, chateau style, on the corner facing the river. A stone tower, which Papineau built to safeguard his library, is near the main entrance. One feels that he must have been a gallant and charming gentleman, and although he has long been dead and gone, his name lives on and on; and for those who visit the Seigniory, his history is ever new and interesting.

Written Specially for The Lachute Watchman

By Oli Daum, Canadian Press Staff Writer

One woman's hobby has, in the last seven years, clothed nearly 2,000 children throughout the world.

While listening to her favorite radio programs, Mrs. C. E. Goodburn of Souris, Man., sews for the Canadian Red Cross Society. Red Cross workers in Winnipeg say that scarcely a shipment has left their workroom since 1948 without some contribution from the prolific seamstress.

Last year she packed 11 parcels, contents of which read like an inventory of a children's clothing store: 15 skirts, 85 blouses, 65 tunics, 40 tunic dresses, 15 nightgowns, 80 pantie dresses, 30 pairs of short pants, 85 pair of overalls, 130 baby vests, 13 baby dresses and five pairs of pyjamas.

Altogether Mrs. Goodburn has made more than 6,000 garments, enough to clothe almost completely 1,000 girls, 540 boys and 400 babies.

Although she works only when the spirit moves her, Mrs. Goodburn says she turns out such large quantities because she sews on an assembly-line basis.

Taking up pieces of 10 of the same garments she completes one stage of work on each, then moves on to the next step and ends up with 10 articles finished at the same time.

Mrs. Godburn says her reward is satisfaction of knowing that children throughout the world are sheltered from the sun or icy cold by clothing she has made.

Northern Pioneer

Mrs. Annie Card of Edmonton, whose late husband was the first Indian agent at Fort Simpson, N.W.T., sums up her 89 years like this:

"My life has been one of color and excitement, a little comic, a little tragic, but mostly filled with the drama of history."

With her husband, Rev. Gerald Card, an Anglican clergyman, she lived in Alberta's Vermilion valley when it was opened to settlers in 1904. From her shack window, she recalls, she watched history being made as the first railway was laid in 1905.

A year later her husband accepted his appointment to Fort Simpson. On barges loaded with supplies for a new home — including a stove — the Cards travelled the 1,200 miles by river to the fort in Canada's far northwest.

Until their arrival there, Mrs. Card says, the Indians hadn't seen a mirror or chickens. Looking back, she said, it was a good life.

"We had wood to burn, food to eat, and we found peace within ourselves," she said. Mrs. Card now likes to spend her time painting and musing over the years she spent in the north country.

Let's Eat

BY

IDA BAILEY ALLEN

"Regardez the interesting selection of hors d'oeuvres in this French restaurant, madam," said the chef. "The cuisine is real home style. French home makers are past masters in preparing tasty appetizers from inexpensive ingredients. These look very invitingg arranged in oblong glass dishes on the serving tray.

"Par example, here is potato salad made with small cubes of potato mixed with a little grated onion, chopped parsley, French dressing and mayonnaise.

"Here are pickled herring, and eggs stuffed with liver pate, always homemade. This dish contains tiny cubes of boiled beef and diced celery in vinaigrette dressing.

"These are strips of green pepper, always scalded first to take out some of the raw taste. There is cole slaw with cream dressing and, of course, olives and pickles.

Favorite Dish

"This dish contains my favorite, madam, stewed dried lima beans with vinaigrette sauce.

"I believe that most of us do not use enough lima beans."

"That's right, chef," I replied. "They not only can be used in many tasty dishes, but lima beans supply a good amount of vegetable protein, phosphorous, calcium, thiamine and riboflavin as well."

Tomorrow's Dinner

Lima Bean Saladettes
Beef-Green Pepper Ragout
Whipped Potatoes
Spinach Lyonnaise
Canned Pears in Orange Gel
Coffee Tea Milk

All Measurements Are Level
Recipes Proportioned to Serve Four to Six

Lima Bean Saladettes: Combine 2 c well-drained cooked or canned dried lima beans with ¼ c. each thin-sliced celery, radishes and scallions. Add not-sweet French dressing to blend. Serve in lettuce nests. Garnish with black olives.

Beef-Green Pepper Ragout:

Melt 2 tbsp. fat in a heavy skillet. Add 1½ lbs. round, chuck, or flank steak cut in narrow 1 in. strips. Brown in the fat.

Add 1½ tsp. salt, 1 tsp. monosodium glutamate and ⅛ tsp. pepper.

Stir in 1 crushed peeled section garlic, ¼ c. shredded onion, 4 large seeded and shredded green peppers and ¾ c. celery cut in 1 in. lengths. Pour in 1½ c. hot water.

Cover and simmer-boil 45 min. or until the meat is fork-tender. Then, blend ¾ tbsp. cornstarch with 1 tsp. kitchen bouquet and ½ c. cold water.

Stir into the meat; continue to cook-stir until the mixture boils. Cook 2 min.

Serve with whipped potatoes, boiled rice or noodles.

The Chef on Lyonnaise

When you see the word "Lyonnaise" in a recipe, it means the use of sauteed onion as a special combination-seasoning. A familiar example is potatoes Lyonnaise.

Try sliced cooked carrots or beets cooked in this manner; or add sauteed onion to cooked, cut green beans, limas, or to chopped cooked spinach or kale.

Garnishes for Ham

by the Consumer Section, Canada Dept. of Agriculture Marketing Service

Easter is a little early this year so in many parts of Canada the fresh spring vegetables and fruits sometimes served at Eastertime may not be available. However, frozen or canned fruits can be used instead of the fresh, and garnishes for the ham can be designed to bring a touch of spring to the Easter dinner table. Garnishes are to food what accessories are to clothes — they add a finishing touch which makes the final effect appealing to the eye. Neither garnishes nor accessories should be overdone for when improperly used they are worse than none at all.

When we think of springtime it is quite natural to picture green leaves and pastel colored flowers like little mauve crocuses and sprightly yellow daffodils. These colors, mauve, yellow and green blend beautifully with the delicately pink color of ham so they are good ones to use for our spring garnishes. Canned pear halves are easily tinted pale pink, mauve (made by mixing blue and red) and green by coloring the syrup and letting the halves stand in the colored syrup for a few hours. When these pretty pears are placed in beds of parsley or watercress on the ham platter, they give the effect of flower blossoms surrounded by leaves. For another garnish shelled hard cooked eggs may be tinted then placed on cooked spinach around the ham.

Broiled peach halves with a dab of green or red jelly in the centre look most attractive surrounding the ham, and broiled tomatoes, onion rings or apple slices also add colorful eye appeal to the Easter "pièce de résistance". Raw vegetable slices shaped into daisies, lilies and so on are interesting to make and will add a touch of spring if arranged in flower-pot design on top of the ham.

Canned peas and hard-cooked eggs go well together, especially when they are added to cheese sauce and served on toast. Good amounts to use for 5 to 6 servings are 2 cups peas, 3 chopped eggs and 2 cups sauce.

To remove iron rust, rub spot with lemon, then sprinkle with salt, and place in the sun. If spots are obstinate, repeat the process.

Business at Q.W.Inst. Prov'l Executive Meeting

Preliminary plans for the Provincial Convention were discussed at a recent meeting of the executive of the Quebec Women's Institutes. The program will be built around an international theme, in honor of the expected visit of Mrs. A. M. Berry, Australia, president Associated Country Women of the World. Mrs. Berry will be journeying across Canada on her way to an ACWW Executive meeting in London, England, and all provinces are trying to arrange conventions to fit in with her schedule. In Quebec this will be held at the usual time, the end of June, at Macdonald College.

Final approval was given to the agenda for "Facts! Fingers! Fun!" This is the leadership course held each year at Macdonald College. The dates are May 27th to June 1st and already applications are beginning to come in to the Q.W.I. office. The enrolment is again limited to 40.

Other items discussed at this meeting were the current project, the brief to the Royal Commission on Broadcasting, and matters connected with the forthcoming ACWW Conference in Ceylon.

Ninth trophy she has won as a hair stylist is shown by June Tarrant of Toronto. It's a gold Venus, given to her in New York where she was competing against 80 leading hairdressers from the U.S. Last year she won the grand prize at the same competition.

A quick supper or luncheon dish is "Peas à la King". To a can of condensed mushroom soup add 1 cup drained canned peas. Heat and serve on split tea biscuits or toast. Save the vegetable liquid and use in gravy, soup or stew.

SCIENCE IN YOUR LIFE

Victim of Progress

The world-famous Trudeau tuberculosis sanatorium in Saranac, N.Y., has closed its doors as a treatment center, the victim of medical progress. When the hospital found itself operating with only 60 patients, a third of capacity, the directors decided to abandon the treatment program in favor of research.

It was the U.S.'s oldest TB sanatorium and a model for many others throughout the world. Founded in 1885 by Edward Trudeau, himself a tubercular patient, the sanatorium had cared for thousands since two consumptive factory girls entered the institution as its first patients.

When Trudeau was established, a diagnosis of TB was equivalent to a death warrant. The malady was well known as long ago as 460 B.C., when Hippocrates wrote the first medical code. In the 17th century John Bunyan wrote, "the captain of all men of death . . . was the consumption." It has affected our music and our literature, taking the lives of Chopin and Paganini, Chekhov, Keats and Balzac.

Most TB experts credit the closing of Trudeau and the empty beds at other sanatoriums to the new anti-tuberculosis drugs developed since World War II. Although TB began its retreat sometime after 1850, it is only within the past 15 years that new drugs like the combination chemical, streptohydrazid, have put the killer to rout. This tandem drug links two powerful weapons, streptomycin and isoniazid, so that they can be given in a single injection.

Tuberculosis is not entirely beaten yet, but Dr. J. Burns Amberson of Columbia University, dean of U. S. tuberculosis experts, recently declared, "Altogether, prospects seem good for what may be described as the conquest of tuberculosis in the foreseeable future. We certainly have the necessary means. It is only [illegible]"

Easter Festival

(Copyright) — By NANCY CLEAVER —

"The Easter morn is sacred
For with each verdant spring
Our faith and hope return to us
Whenever robins sing."

Easter is a time of year which appeals to everyone, young and old. This year Easter Sunday is the first of April. This festival always falls on the Sunday after the full moon next after March 21. The idea behind this is that Easter should be celebrated at the Spring full moon. At this time of the Jewish "Pascal" moon, Christ was crucified and rose again from the dead.

There are two theories about the origin of the word Easter. One idea is that it is likely derived from the Saxon word "Oster" to rise and mark Christ's resurrection. But the historian Bede traced the word to "Eostre", a Saxon goddess whose festival was observed each Springtime. The celebration of Easter is centuries old. Saint Ambrose is known to have written an Easter hymn away back in the fourth century.

Easter eggs are no modern innovation. From earliest time the egg was considered by many people — the Egyptians, Greeks, Persians and Romans — as the emblem of new life. The Christians borrowed both the name Easter and the egg symbol. Coloring eggs is also an old practice. The Jews boiled the eggs hard and decorated the shells. Possibily in the first place the Christians colored the eggs to represent the colors of the spring flowers. Later the eggs were mostly colored red, signifying the blood of Christ.

The Easter bunny, like the Christmas tree, is of Teutonic origin. The hare from ancient times has been a symbol of the moon, possibly because it is a nocturnal animal, coming out to search for food at night. The German children were told that on Easter Eve a white hare would visit each home and leave colored eggs for good children. On our continent the European hare has been changed into a rabbit.

Boys and girls are interested in the origin of customs. Little folk love to color eggs and paint or crayon their own pictures of Easter bunnies and springtime flowers. The school holidays are a welcome break for scholars after the winter's work.

But this great festival of the Church should be more than a secular holiday with fun and fellowship for everyone. To the Christian, Easter means Christ's Resurrection and the glad assurance that the soul lives on after death. A child's questions about the end of life, whether asked now or on any other occasion should be answered. Easter is a good time for a mother and father to discuss their own belief about immortality. They should know their Church's teaching and be sure of their own conviction about the spiritual significance of this Holy Day.

Our Easter hymns, like our Christmas songs belong to every nation. century — some of them a very cenutry — some of them a very long time ago. A translation by J. M. Neale of an old Latin hymn gives us these words:

"Joy dawned again on Easter Day,
The sun shone out with fair array,
When to their longing eyes restored
The apostles saw their risen Lord.
Jesus, who art the Lord of all,
In this our Easter festival,
From every weapon death can wield
Thine own redeemed,
Thy people, shield."

Fashions

Checks have checked in smartly this season and are appearing as the main theme or as trim on almost every type of attire. This one is a sheath and is checked with its own little cape-collared short jacket. The slender dress is on gray checked tissue woolen, its stark line barely broken by deep slit pockets at the sides. The jacket is also of gray checked woollen but in a heavier texture and a bolder check, and has another collar standing away from the neck above the cape collar. It is buttoned snugly from throat to its waist-length edge.

Whether a fellow winds up with a nest egg or a goose egg depends a heap on the kind of chick he married.

Wants New Deal For Women Prisoners

Ottawa (CP) — A woman senator wants a new deal for women prisoners.

Senator Muriel Fergusson (L—New Brunswick) said that prisoners should be removed from the cell blocks of the stone-walled federal prison for women at Kingston, Ont.

Speaking on a motion for penal reform, sponsored by Senator David Croll (L—Ontario), Senator Fergusson said the women should be kept, instead, in a cottage-type institution. Or, she suggested, they might be placed in provincial institutions closer to their families and friends.

The Kingston prison never held more than 100 women. They were from all over Canada and seldom saw relatives while serving their sentences. "It seems cruel to take women prisoners so far from family and friends for so long," she added.

Attractive Louise Dumoulin, 22, recently became Quebec province's first woman notary. Until 1954, the Order of Notaries had opposed admission of women into the notary branch of the legal profession.

LIST MAIN CAUSES FOR DELINQUENCY

St. Stephen, N.B. (CP) — A panel discussion here decided that "idleness and lack of proper discipline" are the main causes of juvenile delinquency.

Harry Mallory, vice-principal of the high school here, cited three points which make a child a delinquent: a broken home; too much leisure time; lack of proper guidance.

Other members of the panel were Donald Middlemiss, county superintendent of schools; county magistrate Harry M. Groom; Rev. H. F. Gille, rector of Holy Rosary Church; Dr. L. W. Brownrigg and W. D. March.

Dad: "Why, er-uh, a girl who works in a sweater factory." And after a moment's pause, "Say, where did you get that question?"

Junior: "Where did you get that answer?"

You can't go ALL-OUT If you feel "ALL-IN"

These days most people work under pressure, worry more, sleep less. This strain on body and brain makes physical fitness easier to lose—harder to regain. Today's tense living, lowered resistance, overwork, worry—any of these may affect normal kidney action. When kidneys get out of order, excess acids and wastes remain in the system. Then backache, disturbed rest, that "tired-out" heavy-headed feeling often follow. That's the time to take Dodd's Kidney Pills. Dodd's stimulate the kidneys to normal action. Then you feel better—sleep better—work better. Ask for Dodd's Kidney Pills at any drug counter. 53

Appraisal of B'burg Line-up

chopping starts he throws some bone-crushing boarding checks and matches fists with anyone's sticks. All things considered, however, Willis' power-drive makes him one of two candidates for the "most valuable player" tag.

The other candidate is a combination — Jacques Racine and André Ouellette — the goal-dust twins. This pair, like McAdam, operate at all times in high gear and although neither of them are giants, they seem to be indestructible, defying crashing impacts by opposing defencemen. There's little to choose between them, as the records show. Each had 47 points before the final game, in which André picked up a goal and an assist. This put him ahead of the ailing Jacques and wound up the pair's productivity at 96 points.

Their left-winger, "Toto" Hebert, is probably our most underrated player. He has less dash than his more colorful linemates and consequently is often looked on as a weaker contributor. But the truth of the matter is that the Racine-Ouellette liaison is inter-dependent and it's hard for anyone to play with them. Toto is probably suitable for a higher class of hockey than this league. His play-making is fine, his anticipation perfect, and his work around goals menacing. His insistence on making the puck do the work has paid off with over 30 points.

Brother Paul-Emile had one of his very best seasons this year. In recent years Paul spoiled his fine work by too frequently blowing his top. This year penalties have been few and far between, and Paul's wide-open style and masterful sweepcheck have been a heartbreak to opposing forwards and a worry to opposing defenders.

The Vary-Tomalty-Leveillé line was a big disappointment most of the league schedule, but came back with a bang in the play-offs. Mel Tomalty's play-off form would have made him a candidate for the m.v.p., but his several weeks' slump (due, for the most part, to a sprained wrist) kept him out of contention.

Stuart Vary has been up and down a lot, and in several games couldn't seem to do anything right. His 24 points though show that his ups made him a very potent force.

Jacques Leveillé missed several games and has been plagued with one injury after another. Nevertheless, Jacques came up with several fine performances, and his 19 points prove he pulled his weight.

This column has always been opposed to imports mainly because they normally act like a detached group of prima donnas and rarely get that team spirit that the local boys depend on so much. Brownsburg were very fortunate this year, for in Tremblay, Painchaud, Norbonne, Bouvrette and Giroux, when he was here, we had a bunch of boys who were always just part of the team. Not the most spectacular imports in the league, these boys were probably the most valuable, for with all their hard work they never detracted from our own boys' feeling that they too were worthwhile.

There's no doubt that the experience imparted by these boys to our local players will be as invaluable a help in future campaigns as it was in this one. It's also a safe assertion that without these imports we would not have gone as far as we did. Let's hope that, if we need help next year, the hockey club will call on these same boys.

civil defence notebook

Civil Defence and New Weapons

Seventh in a series of 24 articles

The evolution of weapons with greater and greater powers of devastation has made civil defence as vital to the small community as it is to the large city. Basically, the danger threatened by war is the same as ever: destruction, death and injury. But, says F. F. Worthington, federal civil defence co-ordinator:

"While the over-all effects of a mass saturation raid such as took place in the summer of 1943 on Hamburg was tremendous, the atomic bomb is capable of creating the same degree of destruction from one bomber and one bomb in a matter of a few minutes. In consequence, our danger is very much greater."

So civil defence today is different in many ways from that which was used during the Second World War. It has had a change as the threats of new weapons changed.

The single atomic bomb that fell on Hiroshima in August, 1945, destroyed 62,000 of 90,000 buildings and damaged 6,000 more beyond repair. As a result of the bomb, 80,000 of the city's 250,000 population died. The first H-bomb tested destroyed everything within three miles, severely damaged everything within seven miles and lightly damaged as far as 10 miles. More powerful bombs have since been tested.

It became apparent, says the federal co-ordinator that civil defence planning had to be revised. Emphasis was shifted from a policy of "duck and cover" to one of "evacuation" where time permits. That's where the smaller communities come in. They must be prepared to offer assistance to stricken cities.

But what really brought the small community into the changing civil defence picture was the aftermath of atomic bombs — nuclear radiation. When the fireball of an atomic blast touches the ground, it pulverizes everything—brick, steel, stone, earth — in its path.

These highly radioactive particles are sucked into the air as high as 80,000 feet. Air currents catch them up and carry them until they slowly drift to the ground as "fall-out". This fall-out may cover an area 150 or more miles long and 40 miles wide, depending on air currents. The danger it presents also varies, depending on the length of time it has drifted in the sky. Animal life touched by fall-out radiation may die or become severely ill.

But this threat is far from hopeless. The radioactivity of fallout decays rapidly and danger has largely disappeared, usually, within 48 hours. A community could escape the danger if it were prepared. First it must have means of learning when and where the fall-out may appear. Then it must be prepared to take adequate shelter, quickly, for at least 48 hours. A community would then need to know when it was safe to come out.

It is because of these new dangers to even the small, out-of-the-way community that civil defence planning has been extended to include the towns and the villages and the farms as well.

Is the situation hopeless? Civil defence says "no".

Self-protection measures become even more important since many more people are likely to be affected. Community organization is more essential than ever, to take care of larger number of casualties and evacuees and cope with a greater amount of destruction than heretofore had been anticipated.

HOUSE IN THREE DAYS

There is a type of prefabricated wall section which enables a crew of three or four laymen to erect a house — complete with doors, windows, etc. — in three days, reports The Financial Post. Invented by a Canadian and approved by Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, the wall sections leave factories with completely finished outside facings ready for paint and with outer casing for windows and doors already installed. Plywood is factory-installed on the outside and notched outside studs permit lapping the plywood to give the currently popular outside effect.

EASTER EPIC CRYSTALLIZED IN SPRING'S AWAKENING

"Exile from Sunnyacres"

By Margaret Cook

Remember the dogwood we spoke of last time? It is now covered with leaves, and tiny buds are clustered at nearly every joint. The Christmas cactus is not yet producing, but the poinsettia has five blooms, while outside, the crocuses and tulips are each up about two inches. There should be flowers on the former soon. In the back yard, the two trees are beginning to change color, but that is the only sign of life. Peter, the cat, still walks across the yard on the crust; when he reaches the clothes-line pole, he manicures his claws. This is a morning ritual. A cat, says he, must have good, sharp claws these days. On April Fool's day, the dogs will all be confined to their property. Oh, happy day, says Peter!

We write in unaccustomed quiet, the other members of the household having gone to a local movie. There are a British thriller and a Hollywood extravaganza — and Margaret Cook is not in the mood, for last night we went to hear Marian Anderson sing. After that treat, a movie would fall flat. This was our second Anderson concert, and seconds are generally better, because one has some ideas to begin with. Seeing Marian Anderson in Boston seven years ago, we were irresistibly reminded of Queen Victoria. Not that we ever saw Victoria, but, like everybody else, we have read much of the lady's imperiousness and determination, and we felt the singer had more of the same.

Last night confirmed us in that opinion, and we thought the years had added a dash of tiger to Miss Anderson's already formidable equipment. Once the unfortunate accompanist missed the performer's signal, and once he played a tiddly bit on the piano before the vocalist had quite recovered her breath and changed her mood to suit the song. That was when the tiger showed through. Both times, we felt sorry for the fellow. We got the impression that la Anderson does not relish such abberations.

To write knowingly of the voice would require more knowledge and more temerity than the writer possesses. Someone who should know, has expressed the opinion that it is a "voice that is with us only once in a hundred years." Certainly it is a remarkable contralto. The writer has a good, Irish dislike of a moo-cow contralto. The word moo-cow is an adjective I coined years ago especially to describe contraltos. But Miss Anderson's voice has none of this bovine quality. Even when singing "Poor Me", which is written in an exceptionally low key, the notes come out true and deep and rounded. We were especially thrilled with a spiritual, "He Holds the Whole World in His Hands." There were nineteen songs on the program and the singer generously sang four encores. The theatre was full, and the audience responsive. Everybody, I think, went home happy, and after all, that is the purpose of music — happiness, I mean.

Another treat we had recently was a trip to Sunnyacres—or rather, almost to Sunnyacres. Actually, we used Amos' house as our headquarters, as the side-road around Long Lake has not been kept open this winter. After lunch, the two girls walked in to Sunnyacres and took some pictures to prove that all was well. The snow lies three or four feet deep on the level, around Lakefield, but it is possible to walk without too much difficulty if you do not weigh too much, as there is a hard crust two or three inches below the surface. We climbed the hill opposite Amos' and were rewarded by a beautiful panorama, fold upon fold of snow with decorations of fir trees. The sun shone brightly, making diamonds of each crystal. Becoming really bold, we essayed the road to Sunnyacres, but gave up at the foot of the first hill. It was a lovely experience to sit on the rock, the sun beating on us, the snowy fields virgin white except for our floundering efforts. We sat some minutes till the cold began to make itself felt, and we returned reluctantly to the warm house and kind friends. We lingered too long, so were caught in the Sunday night traffic, and arrived home tired, but happy. Now, we are discussing a trip to Toronto, where we have not been for eight years. From all reports we shall find Toronto the Good changed into Toronto the Terrible. I could never work up much enthusiasm for Toronto the Good, so perhaps the mid-century version will be an agreeable surprise.

Come to think of it, March has been full of nice surprises. A week ago, a fruity voice on the phone queried, "That you, Mrs. Cook? How are you?" I had just time to think, "Now who's this old smoothie?" when the voice identified itself as belonging to a friend whom we mentioned in this column three years ago, as having sold all his possessions and gone to Florida. We had the three of them here at dinner that night and heard all about Florida. According to them, it is just one step this side of Heaven, and they were most insistent that we join them in this paradise. (I am not sure that I have my heavenly geography correct, but anyway, you will understand what I mean.) Our friends are currently living in a house of Spanish design, furnished with Spanish or near-Spanish things bought at auctions; thus, the wing chair near the fireplace belonged to Mrs. Glitter Flingers, and the dining-room suite used to belong to Mr. Chesapeake Railway, a bed came from Miss Movie Queen's home, and so on. . .

Life, we take it, is informal, in spite of the aristocratic furniture. Mr. Florida boasts that he never wears a coat, but is corrected by his wife, who remains stubbornly British and refuses to go out with a coatless man. Poor man, he did have to borrow a fedora from a friend here, and Mrs. Florida was shivering in a short fur coat, which she had luckily refused to discard. It was fun to hear about the grapefruit trees in the back yard, and the enormous profits to be made in real estate, but neither of the pair looked better physically than we poor northerners; so perhaps it is not where one is that counts, but one's spirit.

By the time you read this, it will be Holy Thursday or Good Friday. All the Anglicans and the Roman Catholics will be worn out with much church-going, and the rest of you fresh as daisies. It hardly seems fair . . . but then we think of His last week on earth, and we reproach ourselves for being a sissy and haste away to the warm, dim church and sink upon our sore knees once more and think upon the fantastic story of the Redemption and Resurrection. No one but an Infinite Mind could have conceived such a drama, nor such a glorious outcome. So, at Easter let us forget the sombreness of Lent and sing rejoicing,

"Christ is risen, Christ is risen!
He hath burst his bonds in twain;
Christ is risen, Christ is risen!
Alleluia! Swell the strain!"

She may hold a vital secret of your future health

Here you are eye-witnessing a method of research that has recently made medical history.

Known as "tissue culture", it is the method by which the famous Salk polio vaccine is produced. But this same technique now holds exciting promise of bringing immunity from a host of other diseases!

Meningitis, pneumonia, influenza, measles, chickenpox, mumps — these are but a few of the diseases which medical science is fighting on a world-wide front with this shining new weapon.

Like polio, all of these ills can be caused by some kind of virus. Some viruses can now be isolated and grown in tissue cultures. After being "killed", they may then be made into safe vaccines. So the laboratory technician shown here may have in her hands the key to a vaccine that will someday control a disease which now is a potential threat to you and your loved ones.

This project, conducted by the Research Institute of the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto, is supported by funds contributed by the nation's life insurance companies. It is one of many similar projects supported wholly or in part in this way.

The life insurance companies in Canada are proud to be playing some part in furthering the great progress of medical science. It is our hope that these projects will result in a healthier life for all.

I have every confidence that the new proprietor of this business will give you the same consideration and service as I have endeavored to give in the past.
