Keen Aquatic Events, Thrills And Spills at Louisa Regatta

Enthusiastic participants and spectators gathered on the Lake Louisa Country Club grounds Saturday and Sunday for the annual Lake Louisa Regatta. A fair crowd was in evidence both days, despite the cool, windy weather.

The contest for the fastest boat on the lake was easily won by Don Anderson, who completed the three-lap course with his craft at between half and three-quarter speed. His Class B racing hydroplane is powered by a converted Champion hot-rod motor, and the driver reports hitting 55-56 m.p.h. on calm water early Sunday morning. Second position was taken by Don Barbour racing with his Mercury engine.

A new race this year was the "over 25 h.p. motor." Don Barbour led this class and Ian Nelson placed second with a 25 h.p. Evenrude propelling a fiberglass boat. It was in this race that another competitor, Jim Donnan, flipped over and caused considerable excitement. The 25 h.p. race saw Roy Nelson in first place, with the family boat driven by his brother in the next-higher class. Jim Donnan placed second, with his 22 h.p. Johnson motor on a Tru-Craft boat, a local product manufactured in St. Andrews East.

Aggregate winners in both the Junior and Senior girls' aquatic events were decided by one point while there was a more decisive win in the boys' events. Karen Wiebusch was awarded the Junior Aggregate with 14 points, Isabel Sawyer running a close second with 13. Heidi Wiebusch had a total of 18 points to take the Senior girls' Aggregate, just one more than Sheila Donnan, last year's winner.

The Junior boys' Aggregate was won by Peter Cook, Edmond Wight being awarded the trophy for the Senior Aggregate.

The Ayers blanket raffled by the ladies' organization of the Lake Louisa Country Club, was won by W. H. Jones, of Montreal, a lake resident.

Lake Louisa resident Don Anderson, of Montreal, skims over the water in his Class B Hydroplane powered by an alcohol converted Champion Hot-Rod engine. The fastest boat on the lake entered in the regatta, the craft was clocked at between 55-56 m.p.h. on calm water Sunday morning.

Owner and driver Anderson presently holds third place among Canadian drivers in Class A meets held under supervision of the Canadian Boating Federation.

Held Criminally Responsible In Fatality Near St. Philippe

Gerald Pilon, 32-year-old father of six children, was held criminally responsible at an inquest July 20 in the death of Paul Alain, 25-year-old director of the Victoriaville Lumber & Furniture Company. Inquest on the automobile accident, which occurred July 4, on Route 8, two miles west of St. Philippe, was held by District Coroner Dr. Jules Lafleur.

Pilon was released in the custody of his mother, Mrs. Rose Pilon, on a property bail. He appeared in St. Jerome later when he was charged with manslaughter.

Traffic Officer Albert Legault, called to the scene with Traffic Officer Howard Jones, presented evidence as to the cars involved in the head-on crash, and their location when he arrived at the scene of the accident. (The investigation was carried out by Traffic Officer Jones but due to his being on sick leave at the time of the inquest, the other officer in attendance presented the report.)

He stated that brake marks on the gravel indicated the victim's car had been off the pavement for some 80 feet. "There were no brake marks from Pilon's car, however," the officer stated. He identified photographs of the three vehicles involved in the accident — the other vehicle being a ½-ton truck.

James Chambers, 31-year-old driver of the truck which was struck by Pilon prior to the fatal crash, stated that he "heard a slight noise when his truck was hit and seconds later, a loud crash." He added that he was travelling approximately 30-35 m.p.h. at the time, that he heard no horn before his truck was clipped, and that Pilon's car did not pass him. He stated that, in his opinion, the victim was going at a "fast enough" rate of speed and that he could see him coming, although he was not sure for what distance.

Jean Paul Campeau, 27, of St. Philippe, owner of the car which Pilon was driving, stated that to the best of his knowledge the car was in good driving condition except for a slight "shimmy" when travelling around 40 m.p.h. Also, to the best of his knowledge, Pilon, who had accompanied him to Montreal the afternoon of the accident, had had nothing to drink.

Philippe Lefebvre, 45-year-old St. Philippe taxi-driver, testified that he had seen Pilon in a hotel in St. Philippe around 6.15 p.m., a short time prior to the accident, but, in his opinion, he "was not drunk." Lefebvre stated he left the hotel accompanied by Pilon's brother, who had agreed to do some work for him, and a few minutes later Pilon arrived at the house, asked for his brother, then left. It was a few minutes after this the witness heard the sirens of the ambulances.

Sgt.-Det. Ralph Allen testified that he had gone to the scene several days after the accident to make a few tests; he found that, at a spot 232 feet 3 inches east of the crash, a car in the slight gulley west of the accident scene was not visible, although cars were in view on both sides of the dip in the road.

In repeating testimony from Mrs. Provencal, a nearby resident, he stated she had informed him she was in the doorway of the house at the time of the impact and did not see the actual accident, however, she saw the victim's car pull off the pavement in front of her house; this was indicated by stones and dust, the detective added.

Gerald Pilon took the stand and was informed by Crown Prosecutor Lucien Thinel that anything he said could be used against him. Pilon stated that he was going "about 40" when he went to pass Chambers' truck, and at that time there was a considerable shimmy in the car he was driving. He added that he had only had one bottle of beer, that there were two other unopened bottles in the car, which he had driven on previous occasions, and he did not notice the sun in his eyes at the time. . .

According to his testimony, he lost control of the car when he hit the Chambers truck, and was not past this vehicle when the head-on crash occurred.

Pilon testified he had appeared in court on previous occasions but that he had never paid a fine or had his driver's permit suspended.

Three Car Mishaps Investigated by Traffic Police

Three week-end accidents caused around $2,700 damage but no critical injuries — according to Traffic Officer Albert Legault, who investigated the mishaps.

On Friday evening, around 7.30 o'clock, cars driven by Maurice Hodgson, 44, of Dorval, and James A. Densmore, 74, of Grenville, R.R. 1, collided at the intersection of Routes 8A and 29.

The Densmore car was proceeding from Stonefield towards Grenville on Route 29, when it collided with the car driven by Hodgson coming off the Inter-Provincial Bridge.

Mrs. Stanley Dewar, of Grenville, who was riding in the Densmore car, suffered a fractured collarbone, several fractured ribs and cuts about the face. Damage to the automobiles was estimated around $600.

At 9.50 p.m. Sunday, a 1955 sedan owned and driven by Robert Simonds, 37, of Plattsville, Ont., was hit from the rear by a 1949-model car owned and driven by Maynard MacKiddie, Lachute, R.R. 1. Simmonds was leaving Lachute on the St. Jerome Highway and was struck as he turned left off the highway onto the Dunany Road. Ten-year-old Donna Simonds was treated for minor injuries to the head. Damage to the Simonds car was set at $700, while the MacKiddie vehicle is reported to have been demolished.

• • •

Romeo Lemay, well-known Brownburg businessman, was treated in the Providence Hospital for injuries received when the car he was driving struck the left front door of a car driven by Gaetan Charbonneau, 22, of Kilmar. This accident occurred around 9 p.m. Sunday on Route 8 between Grenville and St. Philippe, when both cars were headed in an easterly direction. Charbonneau, who was proceeding in front of the Lemay car, turned left across the highway and was struck by the latter car as its driver went to pass the turning vehicle.

Lemay was treated for fractured ribs and severe shock. No one was injured in the Charbonneau car. Total damage was estimated at over $1,000.

Wood Suppliers' Field Day Event at C.I.P. Forest Farm

Two Lachute tree farmers shared a $250 award for the best managed tree farm, in Quebec within a 50-mile radius of Hawkesbury, at the annual Wood Suppliers' Field Day held Saturday at the Harrington Forest Farm of the Canadian International Paper Company.

The joint winners of the award, given by the Company for the first time this year, were Célestin Lauzon and John R. Graham, both of R.R. 5, Lachute.

Fred A. Harrison, Vice-President, Woodlands Manager of the Company, told the visiting woodlot owners that C.I.P. is establishing a new tree nursery at the Farm, which will produce 1,000,000 trees a year for reforestation purposes.

Most of the trees produced in the 10-acre nursery will be distributed, at cost, to the Company's wood suppliers, Harrison said. Seedling beds will be established this fall and the first trees will be ready to go out in four years, he said.

The nursery will produce both white spruce, from selected parent trees of high quality, and red pine produced from certain sandy areas unsuitable for spruce, Harrison explained. It will be the first large-scale nursery to be operated by a private company in Canada for the specific purpose of restocking privately owned wodlots, he added.

The announcement of the new tree farm award was a highlight of the Field Day, attended by over 1,000 visitors. Winners Graham and Lauzon were chosen from 65 certified tree farmers entering the contest by a three-man committee, composed of Quebec agronomist Jean Pintal; Mr. A. R. C. Jones, lecturer in woodlot management at Macdonald College; and G. Douglas Morrison, extension forester, at the Company's Grenville Woods Division.

The woodlot owners entering the contest were judged on the basis of improvement work in their woodlots, cutting practices, forest protection measures, and maximum wood utilization, Morrison said.

A $50 special award went to G. Alan Johnson, of Dalesville and Montreal, for the results he has obtained on his property, once an abandoned farm, through planting and partial cutting.

The woodlot owners and families who roamed through the Harrington Forest Farm Saturday saw a host of new equipment, and learned how it could be best put to use to make their own work easier.

They enjoyed two traditional features of the day — the annual bean feed, which was consumed heartily, and the power saw contest, which found Dieudonné Charlebois of 8 Sinclair Street, Hawkesbury, repeating his last year's victory.

Charlebois led the six finalists with a time of 29.5 seconds for his five cuts to win the $30 first prize. His brother Gérard Charlebois, of the same Hawkesbury address, took second place, followed by Russell Young, of Brownsburg, in third place. Young was the champion two years ago.

An unusual touch was given to the tense finals as teen-agers gathered around winner D. Charlebois, after the results were announced, for his autograph. He signed his name happily, on block after block of the winning cut, as the teen-agers brought the blocks to him and proudly carried them home.

Do Not Use Improper Fuses!

Faulty wiring is given as the cause of a surprisingly large number of fires. In many cases it might better be "improper fuses."

In case of excess current or short circuit the wires will overheat and might cause a fire.

Fuses are safety devices. If fuses blow frequently, you are either overloading the system or something is wrong with the wiring or devices on that circuit.

Call a competent electrician in case of trouble.

The Economy of Using the Best

The economy of using the best possible materials is made apparent in the upkeep problem. A house or business building may be "thrown together" with cheap material, and it may "look all right", but after it has stood the shock of weather, the real test comes.

It is false economy to use poor materials — and we so advise everyone who buys from us. Our success is due to honesty in materials and prices.

Canada's Women Athletes

THE FORTHCOMING attempt by Marilyn Bell to swim the Strait of Juan de Fuca once again spotlights the fact that in recent years Canada's women athletes have distinguished themselves somewhat more than the men in individual international sports.

It's true that the men still dominate the team sports, with particular emphasis on hockey. And they have begun to pull into a contending position in international golf, as indicated by the major tournament victory for Al Balding of Toronto in Florida last winter.

But the sports writers seem to be saving their most colorful adjectives for the young ladies Canada sends abroad to compete against the world's best.

The most notable example was Ottawa's Barbara Ann Scott who dominated world and Olympic figure skating for years. Of course, the fact that she was photogenic didn't hurt her chances of monopolizing sport pages. But the main point is that she was by far the best in her sport during her active career.

Another Miss who did Canada proud abroad was little Marlene Stewart, the icy-nerved golfer from Fonthill, Ont. She caused a major stir when she won the British Amateur women's golf championship, the first Canadian ever to perform the feat. And she has since dominated Canadian women's golf, while picking up her share of victories in the United States.

Marilyn Bell probably made the biggest, most unexpected splash on the sports pages when she became the first person ever to swim Lake Ontario.

The Winter Olympics in Italy earlier this year also provided an example of how well the Canadian girls are doing.

The best showing of any Canadian in the games was by 22-year-old Lucille Wheeler of St. Jovite, who finished third in the downhill ski race to win a bronze medal.

Textiles Coming Back

CANADA'S primary textile industry is taking on a new and brighter look in 1956, according to Allan Fenton in The Financial Post. Sales, production and employment have been edging higher.

And after taking stock of its longer-term future, the industry sees greater opportunities ahead in the form of a doubling of textile consumption in the next 25 years, according to this writer. The long overdue uptrend began to emerge in 1955 and has extended into the first half of this year. As a result, there is more optimism than there has been for several years.

There are still tremendous problems like foreign competition, high costs, low or non-existent profits, typical of those which the industry has faced for years. And, the current pick-up is by no means general throughout the industry.

Canadian textile executives are the first to realize these continuing difficulties because they have faced them for so long. There have been indications of upturns before, only to be followed by a faster drop.

Still, many are hopeful that sales and profits will improve this year. There is good reason to believe they will.

Facts A-plenty

FAMILIES in Canada are largest in Newfoundland, where the average is 4.4 persons per family; the national average is 3.8 persons per family. All told, there are 3,685,000 families in Canada, and better than two-thirds own the homes they live in. Of those who pay rent, the average payment is about $45 per month. One out of three families live in rural districts, two out of three in urban localities. Of every ten families nine have electricity and radios in their households, eight have running water and powered washing machines, seven have telephones and mechanical refrigerators, six have cars and three have television sets.

Such are some of the items of information contained in the 12th annual edition of Quick Canadian Facts, the pocket annual of facts about Canada released this week by the publishers.

Among thousands of other facts about Canada and Canadians noted in the new book, you will be interested to know that:

The money spent on doctors' bills averages out to $35 per family per year; the amount spent in retail food stores averages out to $900 per family per year; the amount spent on taxes averages out to $2,000 per family per year — etc., etc.

Deep Thinker

SUCH TERMS as "inferiority complex" and "super ego" are part of everyday language. But they are comparatively new. They stem from the man recognized as the father of modern psychiatry — Sigmond Freud, whose birth centenary is being marked this year.

Freud, born a Jew in an area of Europe now enclosed in Czechoslovakia, was taken as an infant to Vienna and lived there for 78 years until the Nazi surge into Austria forced him to leave for Britain. He died there a few weeks after the outbreak of the Second World War, at age 83.

Psycho-analysis has become part of the modern scheme of things since Freud first developed the theory that all human motivation is unconscious, stemming from the complicated mental apparatus lying deeper than the conscious brain.

Dr. Edward Glover, a British psychologist who was a pupil of Freud, is one of the experts in many lands paying tribute this year to Freud, whose birth date was May 6, 1856. In a BBC broadcast Dr. Glover said "there is hardly a mental hospital or out-patient centre, or a child-guidance clinic or indeed any organization that deals with the problems of individual or social adaptation, the staff of which does not employ principles that were laid down by him."

Mind and consciousness were supposed to be one and the same until Freud's discovery of the unconscious. Freud developed the history of the unconscious mental apparatus from infancy onwards, studied the infantile forms of the instincts that set the apparatus in motion, described the emotions and effects such as anxiety and guilt that can disturb its function, and the various mechanisms whereby the mind can effect control — the best known of which is called repression.

The discoveries Freud made opened new worlds of thought to the experts. The fate of the grown-up was seen to be determined not by immediate circumstances but by the unconscious pattern laid down in childhood.

Freud's influence has been powerful in many directions, and not least in the implications of his views on the development of children. He taught that if man is to succeed in controlling his primitive instincts, the necessary measures to offset these changes must be set in motion during infancy and childhood.

And this was a discovery that applies to every family today.

For Building Safety

FOR 30 CENTS any one of Canada's smaller communities can greatly reduce the hazards of substandard construction.

This is the price of a pocket edition of the National Research Council's recently revised national building code. Copies may be obtained from the council's headquarters in Ottawa.

The pocket building code is so worded that it can be adopted easily by small municipalities as a building by-law. It covers only the type of homes and buildings normally found in small towns and villages.

The code — entitled "A Shorter Form of the National Building Code of Canada" — is advisory only and has no legal standing until it is adopted by a municipality.

Essentially, it is a set of minimum regulations for the safety of buildings with reference to public health, fire protection and structural sufficiency. Its purpose is to promote public safety through the use of desirable building standards in towns and villages.

The pocket code has four main selling points:

1. It can be adopted easily by a town or village filling in a few blank spaces.

2. It can be adapted easily because the section dealing with administration can be removed without disturbing the technical text. This makes it possible for a municipality to attach its own administrative section.

3. It can be enforced easily since it is written and illustrated so that building inspectors, contractors, and amateur builders can understand it.

4. At 30 cents the code is the cheapest insurance a municipality can buy against substandard construction.

The pocket code is divided into 14 sections, each dealing with a particular phase of construction and setting out minimum standards to be followed by builders.

While the code deals only with smaller-type buildings found in towns and village, one section adopts the national building code of Canada.

This section was inserted because occasions arise when even the smallest municipalities sometimes build large and complicated structures. To obtain minimum requirements for such buildings, municipalities are referred to the main building code which has been adopted by many of Canada's larger municipalities.

"Love Me, Love My Dog"

I believe it was Alexander Woollcott who once said that he had never owned a dog in his life, but had been owned by many. Lucky man! Unfortunately, I never attained such dizzying heights. I was always shared by the dogs in my life with the other members of my family. There was never a Skipper, Rags or Timmy that called me his very own. However, if luck be with me, I shall be adopted early this fall by an engaging Dashshund whom I shall call Schnapps, regardless of what he calls me.

For my part, I have great plans for Schnapps. I shall take great care to see that he enjoys the sort of life for which he was designed. Being short of leg and long of body, he is naturally adapted for a life of burrowing and rustling badgers out of their lairs. He was never devised for purposes of ridicule nor for spending an all-too-brief life as a pampered lap-dog. So Schnapps will be given free rein to burrow and race as much as he likes, or until such time as either one of us is all pooped out.

On looking back over the numerous dogs that have partly owned me since I first arrived on the scene, I believe old Barney must take the position of favorite. True, Derry, the faithful Irish terrier, did rescue me from drowning one summer and I owe his happy shade a hearty vote of thanks. But Derry owned my parents and merely tolerated me because he sensed that I somehow belonged to their scheme of things.

Barney's first love in life was children and he was particularly fond of boys. Early in his life, Barney learned that he was responsible for our every waking hour, and he took his duties seriously. Each morning, he was on deck early to escort us to the railway station and get us safely away to school. When we returned in the afternoon, he was on the platform to greet us. He was always at the garden gate to race the Model T up the hill to the house when my father came in after making his calls. And he would never allow my mother or my aunts to do their shopping in the village unless he was on hand to protect them and assist with the toting of bundles.

There wasn't a mean streak in any part of Barney's hide. Half Collie and half St. Bernard, he displayed only the best qualities of each. And it was the helpfulness of the latter strain that gave Barney a chance to prove he possessed all the intelligence of the former.

When Barney owned us, my mother was having a rough time with her teeth. All, her dentist decreed, must be taken out and store fixtures substituted. This was the time when dentists were just beginning the practice of yanking them all out and fitting the new plates in before you could cancel your appointment.

"They may be uncomfortable for a bit," the doctor had warned her, "but stick them as long as you can. They'll soon adjust."

By the end of the third sleepless night, however, mother had had enough.

"Adjust, be hanged," she moaned; and deposited her hardware on the bedside table. Then she rolled over to enjoy the first real sleep in more than a week.

When morning came around, she decided to give the teeth another try. But they were nowhere to be found.

"I know I put them on the table," she told us, "but now they've disappeared. Now who could have taken them?"

Her question was answered in a matter of minutes when my father shuffled downstairs to get the kitchen fire going.

"I've got bad news for you," he called up. "The uppers are all chewed to pieces on Barney's rug."

"And the lowers are under a wash cloth in here," my sister called from the bathroom. "They're in smithereens, too!"

"That's the best turn Barney ever did me," mother beamed when the new set were in. "These are as comfortable as my own teeth. I guess I would have smashed the old set myself. Barney just saved me the trouble."

Looking back now, I wonder if Barney didn't know more about the matter than we did. You see, even as a puppy, he never chewed up anything, not even a slipper. And from the day the teeth went west, he never chewed anything bar good beef bones.

There was more to Barney than met the eye, if you ask me!

TO THE EDITOR

57 Charlwood Road,

England.

Editor-Proprietor,
Watchman, Lachute.

Dear Sir:

I was born in Brownsburg near Lachute on 12th of April, 1912. My father was employed by the Dominion Cartridge Company, now I believe C-I-L. I wonder Sir whether you would, through the medium of your newspaper ask for pen friends for Heather Constance, aged 14 and John Charles Constance, aged 12, both have been successful in passing Examination for Grammar (High) Schools. I have one other son David, who is now 9 years of age. All are readers of the funnies and collect stamps and are prepared to exchange with Canadian children.

I was seriously wounded in 1940 and have to spend a great deal of time in bed. I was a Regimental Sgt. Major, Royal Engineers and would like to hear from any Canadians from the Brownsburg District. In particular a map showing the location of Brownsburg would be very much appreciated.

I have long wished to return to Canada, by birthplace, Dr. McFall was our doctor and Mr. Lackey the minister who christened me.

I look forward to hearing from Canucks who can spare the time to drop a line to an exile.

Every letter will be replied to.

I am Sir,

Yours Sincerely,

— Horace Wylie, Jr.

Advertising Pays -- But Sometimes Costs Plenty

TO THE EDITOR

Dear Editor:

I had a little experience lately and it has to do with The Watchman, so I thought I would tell you about it. We are old subscribers and have used your paper many times for advertising in different ways. Latterly we advertised a property for sale. When we received our bill for same, it was exactly $4.50.

A friend of ours was here from New York, and suggested we try an ad in a New York daily with a wide and pretentious circulation. So we clipped the ad from The Watchman and addressed it to the suggested newspaper, asking a quotation for the ad in that paper. In a short while we received an answer; the price would be exactly $166.55. They kindly suggested how some of the ad could be cut, thus bringing down the price to $124 and some cents.

I am sending this so that you and your readers can enjoy the comparison.

Ardent to Promote County Art Exhibitions and Cultural Interest

TO THE EDITOR

St. Andrews East, Que., July 29

Editor, The Lachute Watchman,
Lachute, Que.

Dear Sir:

The purpose of this letter is to express to you the interested and grateful acknowledgment of a resident of this community for the help and encouragement The Lachute Watchman gave to the first amateur art exhibition in Argenteuil County. To the acknowledgment of the constant fine support of your columns must be added an expression of thanks to the generous public spirit of the Guild of the United Church of St. Andrews East, and the Misses Wales, for providing the idea, the impetus, and the exhibition space which resulted in a most encouraging response and a most delightful occasion. Your faith in the progress of the Arts in this county was abundantly supported. Dr. Wilder Penfield, in his remark at the opening of the recent (and current) Loan Exhibition at the Bruck Mills Community Centre, to the effect that art should not remain in the cities but should come to the smaller centres also — challenges our own County. What lies ahead? The bystanders, who also hunger for this cultural food, look to further leadership, and it is hoped, stand ready to offer support. One can never stand still. We advance or we fall behind. The vistas beckon. Can WE have loan exhibitions? Can WE have travelling shows from the National Gallery come here? Can WE have an annual amateur exhibition? Where can these be shown? Have we a County cultural centre which could foster this thought?

It is to be hoped that our fine support of this wonderful beginning will bring forth further opportunity to develop this boundless field of public service.

NEW! NEW! NEW!

Yes, we have a NEW milk ration, called "PROTENA DAIRY FEED". It comes in a little larger bag than Milk Chow, and carries a 16% protein analysis.

For those whose market is the creamery and cheese factory, it will be a great help to keep flesh on the cows and keep them up in milk at a reasonable cost.

The price will be attractive to all "price buyers" and to those who are "guessing." It is $8 a ton lower than Milk Chow.

But because it is $8 a ton lower, don't expect it to make you as much money, or milk — that is impossible. With any reputable concern you just get as much as you pay for, and no more.

If you are interested only in the price-per-bag, buy Protena Dairy Feed; it will beat any other feed in the same price range. But if you are interested in PROFITS, stay with Milk Chow, Bulky Las, etc.

What interests me is, what the "price chiselers" will do now. They'll have to learn a new song, as their song has been that their feed was "just as good as Purina but cheaper."

Won't you give us your order today, for either kind. We deliver — promptly, too.

Centerville Settlement Resident Died Recently

Late Mrs. Howard Hooker

Mrs. Howard Hooker, a former resident of Centerville, Que., passed away here on Saturday, June 9. She was in her 63rd year.

Mrs. Hooker, the former Helen Watson, was born December 6, 1893, the youngest daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Watson of London, England. In the year 1918 she was married to Howard Hooker, whom she leaves to mourn her loss. Also remaining are eight grandchildren and three sisters.

Well known in Centerville and Lachute, Mrs. Hooker was a kind neighbor and a good friend.

The funeral took place on June 12 from St. Simeon's Anglican Church, conducted by the rector, the Rev. C. B. Lang. Interment took place in the Carillon Cemetery.

Held Responsible In Highway Fatality

It was then that Sgt.-Det. Allen obtained a file on Pilon indicating that he had been convicted on a charge of driving while his ability was impaired, in St. Jerome court on June 11, 1954, before Judge Lafontaine.

Guy Kirouac, 27, of Warwick, Que., testified that he identified the body of the victim. Coroner Dr. Jules Lafleur then read several sections regarding actions in similar cases, and summed up the testimony adding his recommendation that a verdict of "criminal responsibility" be returned.

The six-man jury, with Jean Louis Blais as chairman, returned the "criminally responsible" verdict after 18 minutes' deliberations. Also among their recommendations was that a double line be placed on the highway in this vicinity, as well as on the section near Grenville, and that the traffic police spend more time policing the area.

Pilon was released in the custody of his mother, and Friday, the following day, appeared in St. Jerome where he was charged with manslaughter. His preliminary hearing has been set for Tuesday, September 18, at which time a trial date will be set.

P.O. for M.P.'s

If you have written your local Member lately, your letter found its way to the new aluminum mail box recently installed in the Parliament Buildings, Ottawa. With their attractively bevelled and sanded doors, these lock boxes look handsomely at home in the vaulted corridors of the Centre Block.

Imagination boggles at the tonnage of praise and blame that will flow through these boxes in years to come, to M.P.'s and Senators yet unborn. Meanwhile we find it fitting that a metal that has become such a vital part of the nation's economy should grace the nation's legislative halls.

ALUMINUM COMPANY OF CANADA, LTD. (ALCAN)

MOULDED CHEMICALS FOR FUTURE HOUSES

Vancouver (CP) — Tomorrow's homes will be built by pouring chemicals into moulds, Stewart Bates, head of Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, said in an address here.

Criticizing lack of research in the building field in Canada, Mr. Bates told of experiments in the United States. On a visit to the DuPont plant in Wilmington, Del., he had seen experiments with "a new material that may be used on housing in the near future."

"You pour it into moulds; it fluffs up and solidifies. You just take a couple of cans down to the building site."

Fixtures and appliances, including stoves and refrigerators, could be turned out in the same manner.

He said the new material is fire-resistant and insulative, and scientists now are working on the last point — the tensile strength — "and are not far away from a solution."

The DuPont firm has a $65,000 research program, while the Canadian home-building industry has spent little or nothing on research although it handles $1,250,000,000 yearly.

Rev. W.S. Whitcombe Guest Preacher

For the next two Sundays, the East Settlement United Church will have as guest preacher Rev. W. S. Whitcombe, M.A., of Wishing Well Acres Baptist Church, Toronto, Ont. The services will commence at 9.15 a.m., and a cordial invitation is extended for all old and new friends to attend.

For this Sunday morning, the subject will be "What's the Good News from God?", and the following week, a provocative topic of extreme interest, "What's the Difference?", a discourse on the contrasting religions. The Rev. Whitcombe in years past served with the late Dr. T. T. Shields of Toronto, and has done much work in missionary enterprises in northern Ontario and Quebec.

Who Was This?

By A.A.M.

What was the name of the follower of Jesus who wrote of the vision he saw when he was a prisoner on the Island of Patmos? He had lost his freedom "on account of the word of God and the Testimony of the Jews."

On this small island in the Mediterranean he was "in the spirit on the Lord's Day", when he heard a loud noise like a trumpet. The message he received was clear. "Write what you see in a book and send it to the seven churches — Ephesus, Smyrna, Pergomum, Thyatira, Sardis, Philadelphia and Laodicea."

Then he turned and saw a man clothed in a long robe with a golden girdle, his head and his hair were white as snow, his eyes like a flame of fire, his feet like burnished bronze and his voice like the sound of many waters, and his face like the sun shining brightly.

This disciple fell down, but the man said, "Fear not, I am the first and the last — the living one." Find the name of this prisoner and the Island of Patmos and read this account in Revelations, Chapter 1, verses 9 and 17.

ALL ABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore

A friend of mine called Charlie, who used to be a school principal in Canora, Saskatchewan, found that many of his students of Ukranian descent were speaking broken English.

They were Canadian-born boys and girls. Every day after school hours they attended a special school to learn the language and customs of their old land. They were learning Ukranian very well, but (Charlie says) they were failing to learn English. Charlie didn't think this was good enough.

"We're Canadians," he said, and we should be learning English and French. He persuaded the parents to drop the evening classes. As a clincher, he said to the students: "Put in more time with your English, and I'll spend 15 minutes a day learning Ukranian." So they concluded the bargain. Soon all the boys and girls could speak English fluently, and Charlie could speak Ukranian.

Japanese-Canadians, that much maligned and harshly treated group of citizens, also used to attend their own schools after hours to learn Japanese language and customs. Since they were usually clever and diligent students, their English lessons didn't seem to suffer.

Charlie was surely right in demanding that his young Ukranian-Canadians learn to speak the language of the country in which they lived.

However, conformity can be carried too far. I know of parents who are able to speak Dutch, and others, who can speak Russian, but in both cases refuse to transmit the language to their children. "We will not teach them Dutch," they say, or "We will not teach them Russian, because we want the children to be Canadians."

This is a mistake. Knowledge of another language would not make them any less Canadians, but would add to the richness of their experience. In these nervous days, the world needs minds than can cross frontiers. Parents who could teach their children another language, but decline to do so, are robbing the children of a valuable gift.

The same applies in other lands; English is a world language. It is a rich, powerful and expressive tongue, and yet, factions in countries like Ceylon and India are trying to abolish its use, and thereby move out of the world stream of communication, into a backwater of their own.

Modern Furniture Made In Tru-Craft Factory

Tru-Craft Ltd., the St. Andrews East boat manufacturers, have added a line of furniture manufacturing under the direction of Jacques Shaffer, cabinet-maker, who holds a diploma from the School of Furniture. Charles A. Shaffer recently purchased the controlling interest of this business from James S. Donnan, of Montreal, who with Yvon Lapointe, of St. Andrews, started manufacturing boats on a production basis early last winter.

The most modern techniques are being employed in the furniture manufacture, utilizing chrome, iron, arborite, and plastic materials in upholstering. Jacques Shaffer is a former furniture designer for two Montreal firms.

Mr. Lapointe, who retained his interest in the business, remains in charge of the boat manufacturing section.

Ambition Fires Ontario Halfbacks

By Jack Koffman
in The Ottawa Citizen

It's possible to accomplish almost anything — if you have enough desire.

Take the case of Mac Hall and Don Mahon, two young men who make their home in Vankleek Hill and are employed in Hawkesbury. Bent on playing junior football this season, the boys simply laugh at the 120 motor miles (return trip) they record three times weekly in order to practice with West End Cobras at Laroche Park.

Both halfbacks, they stand more than an even chance of making the club. As you'd expect, Coach Doug Good is elated over the enthusiasm and ambition shown, by the 20-year-old graduates of Vankleek Hill Collegiate.

"Why, I know a couple of chaps good enough for junior football living within three blocks of the park," cracks Good, "who haven't the ambition to turn out for a practice. Sort of makes you feel good to think of Mahon and Hall coming this far for a chance to toss a football around."

Moose and Bear Footloose Around Dalesville, Louisa

A large bull-moose, leaving a trail of 10-inch tracks, was spotted on the Lazy-River Ranch, residence of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. McGibbon, last week by Howard Dixon. The McGibbon and Dixon properties are about two miles north of Dalesville on Route 31.

Mr. Dixon reports he first spotted the animal around 7 a.m., a short distance from the McGibbon house. It jumped the fence with ease into an oat field on the Dixon property, and after trailing through the field, headed south.

Reports are also heard that a bull-moose has been seen in the Mount Maple area.

Mr. McGibbon, along with several Lake Louisa residents, have reported seeing a large black bear in the immediate vicinity of camps around the lake. A black bear was first seen early in June by George Kirby, who this year is operating the Louisa Beach store and post-office, and the animal has been reported to have appeared several times since.

Football Fever Strikes Early

SPORTS CAMERA
By Ken Romain,
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The annual autumn "fever" has now hit in mid-summer as professional clubs across the country prepare for what observers say could be one of the biggest seasons in Canadian football.

The 1956 training campaign is in full swing for all nine clubs in the Big Four and Western Interprovincial Football Unions. And the lure of money has attracted many new faces to the grid scene.

With all clubs reporting a large numbr of hopeful candidates the weeding out process has already begun. Every day come reports of players being cut loose, those who can't meet the increasingly stiff competition for playing berths.

The burden of selection falls heavily on the coaches. This year they have more material to choose from than ever before.

It is estimated that almost 200 U.S. imports are seeking places on Canadian fotball clubs this year. These include a large group of U.S. college stars who will be tackling the 12-man Canadian game for the first time.

All Serene

Thus far there have been no charges or countercharges of raiding betwen Canadian teams and the National Football League in the U.S., which has been a regular feature of relations in the past, although many of the U.S. college youngsters showing up in Canada were part of the 1956 NFL draft.

Two main reasons are cited for the influx of U.S. playing talent that will join holdovers from last year. One is money. Most players who nail down a spot on a Canadian team will be paid more than they would receive in the NFL where more players are competing for jobs.

Another reason is that this year a rule change will permit more eligible imports.

The Big Four — Ottawa, Toronto Montreal and Hamilton—increased its team import quota to 12 from 10. This places them on the same footing as the WIFU and makes a total of 108 players eligible for the nine major clubs. This does not include the U.S. players signed by teams in the Ontario Rugby Football Union.

Canadian college stars are also vying for their share of the playing spotlight. Many who competed in the intercollegiate ranks last season, were top draft choices of Canadian teams this year.

Windsor Pavillon Wins League Title

Tuesday night, the Pavillon of Windsor Hotel won against Dow 9-7 to take the championship of their softball league. The winning pitcher was Paul-Emile Audet; the losing pitcher, Claude Thibeault. The Pavillon played a defensive game, as did Fernand Laroeque of Dow.

BALL CLUB: $5,500,000

It was a bid of $5,500,000 that purchased the Detroit Tigers of the American League. New owners are a group headed by Michigan radio executives Fred Knorr and John Fetzer. Their 11-man syndicate includes singer Bing Crosby, who also has a share of the Pittsburgh Pirates in the National League.

The successful group beat out seven other combines. One of the bids was an offer by Jack Kent Cooke, owner of the Toronto Maple Leafs in the International League, for $5,180,000, cash.

The Knorr-Fetzer bid was a cash offer of $4,600,000 with the remaining $900,000 to be paid over a five-year period.

Quebec athlete Jacques Amyot, who recently swam the English channel, was appointed honorary president of the Quebec Aid to Swimmers' Association. This is a new organization formed here to help stimulate interest in both amateur and professional swimming.

Charged with stealing three white-wall tires, a man in Cincinnati, Ohio, explained that he'd found one, "needed three more to match it."

Annual Old-Time Fiddling Contest

For one week every summer, the little Ontario town of Shelburne becomes somewhat of a shrine, as devotees from all parts of Canada and the U.S. gather to pay homage to a unique type of music — music which played as important a role in the development of our two countries as the canoes of the voyageurs or the covered wagons of the plainsmen.

On Friday, August 3, and Saturday, August 4, the Shelburne Arena will resound to the stamping of feet and the sound of many well-played fiddles. In fact, on the latter date the sound of bow on catgut will be heard all across the continent as the finals of the 6th Annual Old-Time Fiddle Contest go on the air over the stations of the CBC Dominion Network.

Some five years ago, at a time when fiddling (old-time variety) seemed close to drawing its last breath in this country, the Shelburne Rotary Club began sponsoring the Old-Time Fiddling Contest to aid local charities. CBC's Neighborly News, commentator, Don Fairbairn, heard about it while passing through the town, and it wasn't long before the CBC had agreed to put the contest on a national radio hook-up.

The first contest, a strictly Canadian affair, proved popular and the following year the Rotarians turned it into an international event with even greater success than they had hoped for. The Shelburne competition is affiliated with the United States Fiddle Contest at Louisville, Kentucky, and more entries are expected this year than ever before.

Quebec baritone Gilles Lamontagne is to travel to Europe early next year to make some 30 singing appearances, including engagements at opera houses in Toulouse, Lyons and Monte Carlo. He will also visit Tunis and Oran in North Africa. He returned here a few weeks ago following 16 months of study in Europe.

Recommend Women On CBC Governors

The Quebec Women's Institutes is recommending that women be included on the Board of Governors of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. This statement is made in the brief to the Royal Commission on broadcasting, with the suggestion that the board be increased by three women, one from each of the official language groups and one with outstanding ability in the Arts.

Changing children's programs to more appropriate hours was another recommendation, as many now interfere with the household routine. The abolition of violence and gun play on these programs was stressed.

Future development of private stations, as they affect outlying and outpost areas, was advocated and the use of Canadian talent. The function of the CBC should be to provide a hearing for all the voices of Canada, the brief declares, and only a national, government-sponsored agency, spanning the continent, can do this effectively. The brief urged that continued adequate financial assistance be given the CBC to enable it to carry out this responsibility and to aid it in "providing the finest in Canadian information, education and entertainment."

Thomas Hardy's "Tess" In New Radio Serial

"Tess of the D'Urbervilles," Thomas Hardy's compelling tragedy of a virtuous girl who falls victim to circumstances, will be presented in serial form beginning on Sunday, August 5, at 7.30 p.m., on Trans-Canada network. Montreal actress Marion Dennis will play the title role in a radio adaptation by Mac Shoub. The production will be in the CBC's Montreal studios by Rupert Caplan.

The story of Tess is one of the Hardy novels classified by critics as "first-phase Hardy" — a novel of character and environment, wherein individuals are, in the words of William Rose Benet, "defeated in their struggle against their physical and social environment and the caprices of chance."

"Tess of the D'Urbervilles," or the "Biography of a Pure Woman" chronicles the life story of Tess Durbeyfield, the daughter of a poor Blackmoor farmer, whose head is turned when he learns that he is a descendant of the ancient family of the d'Urbervilles. His fumbling attempts to capitalize on his ancestry lead to tragedy and suffering for all concerned and particularly for his generous-hearted but innocent daughter whom he selects as the instrument in a scheme to elevate himself and his family to a more dignified position in society.

Though Thomas Hardy is considered the last of the great Victorian men of letters, the story of Tess is far from a lingering vestige of another age. He offers all the ingredients needed to whet a modern reader's appetite — sex, raw passions in the grip of life's all-powerful forces, pin-pointed suffering, an almost uncanny insight into the behaviorism and a full quota of the ironies and disappointments of life and love. Says adapter Mac Shoub: "When you read Hardy, you discover that he writes in a relentless, realistic style, with a harsh, almost pitiless detachment that would have made him the darling of the literary societies had he been alive today."

In all his work, Hardy is concerned basically with one thing: not civilization, or manners, but the principle of life itself as evidenced in human behavior and in nature. He is a master-craftsman of character and atmosphere whose novels reflect a fatalistic view of reality and have as their prime focus, women, whom Hardy considered the chief vivifying and disturbing influence in life.

With Tess as with his other works, Hardy aimed at expressing the realities of the world as he saw them. In his introduction to the first edition, he wrote: "The story is sent out in all sincerity of purpose, as an attempt to give artistic form to a true sequence of things; and in respect of the book's opinions and sentiments, I would ask any too genteel reader, who cannot endure to have said what everybody nowadays thinks and feels, to remember a well-worn sentence of St. Jerome's: 'If an offence come out of the truth, better is it that the offence come than the truth be concealed'."

The stenographer was making a collection for a companion who was about to enter matrimony. She approached one of the male clerks and said, "We're going to give the bride a shower."

"Count me in," exclaimed the clerk, "I'll bring the soap."

O'Leary Smiles

Millions of Canadians have seen CBC-TV announcer John O'Leary on the CBC News. But rarely — because this work is of a more serious nature — have they ever seen him smile. However, this is how he looks off-camera.

Controversial Artist

A conversation with Marcel Duchamp, 68-year-old French-born painter whose "Nude Descending the Staircase" outraged the conventionally-minded when first displayed in New York in 1913, will be presented in the "Profile" series on CBC-TV this Sunday night at 10. The film was made by NBC-TV at the Arensberg Collection of the Philadelphia Museum of Art where 35 Duchamp paintings have been assembled; the colleague with whom Duchamp converses is J. J. Sweeney, director of the Solomon R. Guggenheim Museum in New York. Though Duchamp has not painted for 20 years, his ideas and his position have influenced the course of contemporary art. His controversial "Nude" once described by an angry critic as an explosion in a shingle mill, is a figure done in planes of color and in several consecutive positions. It was displayed recently in New York in an exhibition of work by the cubist artists who flourished in 1910-12.

OF MANY THINGS

By Ambrose Hills

How To Write

I can split infinitives and knock grammar over the head as well as the next fellow, and there's no doubt that those who know their Fowler's Good Usage sometimes shudder at my syntax. Yet I pound out a lot of wordage every day and practically all of it gets printed.

Credit for this good fortune goes to an aunt of mine, from whom I learned about writing.

Aunt Maude's letters were prized by me and all our family, because when you finished reading one of them you had actually been with Maude. She had the faculty of not being a "writer" absorbed with fancy construction or mere wordage.

Aunt Maude's letter might begin with: "Hot here today — 85 degrees. But planted 100 Beefsteak Tomato plants . . laid them on their sides so should root well even if withered. Jeremy came to help, carried water and ate up my oatmeal cookies . . . likes the brown sugar bubbles in them, a good boy, freckled, loves fun like poor Fred. . . "

Maude didn't spell very well, and she'd never heard of an infinitive, but she said what she had to say without straining. Told you facts, too, like the kind of tomato plants, how hot it really was, and how she set the tomatoes on their sides. Lots of meat in her letters.

So when I write, I try to keep away from fancy words and stick with facts about real places, people and things. That's why so many editors print the stuff.

It seems to me Canadian politics would be healthier if politicians would write and speak like Aunt Maude about real things. When they say they are sponsoring culture, for example, what do they mean? What show? Who is on it? What is it really like when it comes out of the radio loudspeaker, or onto the TV screen? How much money does it cost? We spend $40 millions a year now, through CBC, for culture — but CBC officials clam up when asked to say which programs are cultured. They know it would show how ridiculous the whole broadcasting system is if they tried to answer in plain English.

Another offender, in my opinion, is the Department of Health and Welfare. They spend a fortune of the taxpayers' money, but what do they really do for us? I've never been able to find out, in plain English, what I owe them.

We need more Aunt Maudes around to nail things down with honest facts and words.

Written Specially for The Lachute Watchman

By Oli Daum, Canadian Press Staff Writer

If the Canadian Horticultural Council had its way a mouth-watering salad would grace every table in the country every day this week. It wouldn't object to a serving of salad every day in the year but too many look on the crisp greens as "rabbit food" to make it probable.

The council, therefore, counts on Salad Week — July 26 to August 4 — to make the consumer aware of the real value of fresh fruits and vegetables.

For years doctors and insurance companies have maintained that obesity is one of the western world's greatest killers. As a result consumers have demanded that manufacturers produce no — or low-calorie foods such as no-calorie carbonated drinks, non-fat dry skim milk, and dieters' cakes and cookies when naturally low-calorie but nutritious foods have been available all along in fruits and vegetables, the council says.

Beneficial Vitamins

Eating the vitamin-packed foods, a salad's main ingredients, could also prevent borderline cases of malnutrition, the council says. Some people, not only the poor or the aged but also the young and wealthy, almost starve themselves to prevent overweight.

The horticultural council says its growers and distributors are purveyors of good health. They try to keep prices of their produce reasonable so that every Canadian may learn by experience that proper diet and health go hand in hand and that a proper diet must include fruits and vegetables.

For each serving place a slice of pineapple on the lettuce leaf. Cut peach in half and place one section, cut side up, on pineapple ring. Slice the other peach half into five and arrange slices petal fashion around the pineapple. Garnish the pineapple with cherries placed between peach slices. Fill the peach half with mayonnaise — or cottage cheese.

Pay-Off

Canadian women's organizations' many years' hard work has paid off handsomely during the last two weeks. With the election of three Canadians to the presidency of international federations it may be said that as far as clubs are concerned, we've finally been put on the map.

Margaret Hyndman, a 55-year-old Toronto lawyer, was the first of the trio to make the grade. She was elected to head the International Federation of Business and Professional Women at its triennial in Montreal.

Then another Toronto woman, Marjorie Lamb, an anti-Communist writer whose articles appear in Alert Service, became president of the Altrusia International when it met in Chicago. She will direct activities of the 39-year-old club's 13,500 members in eight countries.

Mrs. Jean Conacher of Hamilton took leadership of Pilot International at Miami Beach, Fla. The first woman outside of the United States to hold the office, she heads 11,000 women from eight countries.

Turkey Mousse – Summer Dish

For 4 to 6 servings of a perfect hot weather item, try the following recipe suggested by the Poultry Products Institute for a basic Mousse mixture for use with turkey, chopped hard cooked egg or chicken.

Turkey Mousse

1 Package unflavored gelatine, ¼ cup water, ½ cup whipping cream, ½ cup mayonnaise, 1 tablespoon minced chives (or ½ teaspoon grated onion), 3 tablespoons diced celery, 3 tablespoons diced sweet green pickle, 1½ cups coarsely chopped turkey, salt and pepper to taste.

Soak gelatine in water 5 minutes. Dissolve over hot water. Whip cream until stiff. Mix gelatine and mayonnaise thoroughly, add whipped cream, chives, celery, pickle and turkey. Adjust seasonings to taste.

Spoon into six individual moulds which have been oiled or rinsed in cold water. Chill until firm. Unmould and serve on salad greens with additional mayonnaise if desired.

Note: Sliced olives or green or red pepper may be added in place of part of the celery and pickle.

Tips on Touring

By Carol Lane — Women's Travel Authority

Each summer motorists harm thousands of animals and birds along the highways — and sometimes it's vice-versa.

There are many reported incidents of startled deer charging in front of cars or of birds crashing into windshields.

We have many selfish as well as humane reasons for wanting to protect our wild-life. Skunks, for instance, are vital to our food supply since they feed off mice and beetles which destroy crops. And if it weren't for the birds, we'd be at the mercy of insect hordes.

Here are the simple rules for avoiding wild-life destruction and possible harm to ourselves:

1. Blink your lights at night to warn animals on the road. A steady beam will hypnotize them into immodility. Warn them of your approach in the daytime by honking the horn, as they often literally become scared stiff if startled.

2. Birds along a fence must be warned ahead by horn-honking too. When you are too near they become startled and are liable to head into the car.

3. Slow down when you see a "herd-type" of animal such as deer. An individual animal crossing the road will usually be followed by others.

4. Be on the lookout when driving through recently harvested farm land. Animals are then most likely to be on the move in search of new food sources.

Garden Glamor On Your Table

by the Consumer Section, Canada Dept. of Agriculture Marketing Service

There is no greater bargain in beauty than the summer vegetables now on the Canadian markets. These tender, delicious foods are at their best and this is the time to pick your favorites from the vivid greens and sunny yellows, the fiery reds and full, deep purples. For garden glamour on your table try serving fresh vegetables in two's or three's or more, mixing and matching their colors, designs and accessories to create just the right effect. To get you started, here are some ideas from the Consumer Section:

To give green beans a very good flavor, dice two or three strips of bacon, fry until the pieces are crisp, then pour the bacon and drippings over the cooked beans. Add a little finely sliced green onion, tips and all, and turn over several times to coat the beans evenly with the fat.

New potatoes and cucumbers make a delightful combination when prepared this way. For six people, boil 12 to 18 small potatoes in their jackets then peel and add them to two cups of medium cream sauce along with 2 cups of diced raw cucumber. Heat and serve.

Cooked new beets are full of flavor when served with nothing more than salt, pepper and butter, but for special interest add a sprinkle of nutmeg, mace or celery seed, or a little horseradish.

Perhaps the most popular way to serve eggplant is to cut it in fairly thin slices, remove the skin, then dip first into slightly beaten egg seasoned with salt and pepper, then in fine dry bread crumbs and panfry in hot fat about 10 minutes, or until tender and lightly browned.

Vine-ripened tomatoes are delicious when cut in half, sprinkled generously with greated cheese, seasoned with basil, then broiled until the cheese melts.

Catholic Women's League To Convene Sept. 14-15 At Drummondville

Lady Resident Is Winner In National Contest

Mrs. Cecil Leishman, Meikle Street, Lachute, has submitted a winning entry in the Sealy $500,000 Posturepedic Contest — according to announcement by Sealy, Inc., Chicago, manufacturers of mattresses and convertible sleep furniture.

The winner, who will receive a Posturepedic mattress from the J. Roger Lamarche Furniture Store, where the contest was offered locally, now is being considered for a grand prize of $20,000 in cash or common stocks or an expense-paid vacation for two in Jamaica via Delta Air Lines.

In entering the contest, Mrs. Leishman had to select a name for the Sealy Posturepedic Girl widely used in advertising this mattress. She derived her name from "pose", French spelling of posture, and the last two letters of the Sealy tradename. The contest, one of the largest ever held, drew hundreds of thousands of entries from every section of the United States and Canada.

Some 5,000 qualifying winners were selected to receive Posturepedic mattresses from their local dealers. Grand prize winners will be announced in mid-August.

L.O.B.A. Grand Session Held in Winnipeg

An interesting convention of the Ladies' Orange Benevolent Association took place recently when the 1956 Grand Sessions for British America were held in the Royal Alexandra Hotel, Winnipeg.

Reports showed that a total of $100,000 had been spent on welfare work across the Dominon. Each province has its children's home, and lodges also donate to local welfare needs, Red Feather drives, Cancer Society, Red Cross, Blind Institutes, etc.

Many new lodges had been instituted during the past year, and help given to Juvenile Orange Lodges. Members were pleased to learn that the Loyal Orange Association had bought and is renovating a hall in Westmount, Que., part of which is now ready for occupancy.

Mrs. Ruth Day, of London, Ont., was re-elected Grand Mistress; Mrs. Ethel Williams, of N.B., Deputy Grand Mistress; Mrs. Anne Newell, Saskatoon, Jr. Deputy Grand Mistress; Miss Anna Grier, Burritt's Rapids, Ont., Grand Secretary; Mrs. Staples, N.S., Deputy Grand Secretary; Miss Mary Stewart, Hamilton, Grand Treasurer; Mrs. Mary Walker, Montreal, Grand Deputy Secretary; Mrs. Ethel Smith, Winnipeg, Director of Ceremonies. Mrs. Winters, of Saskatchewan, and Mrs. Beaton, of B.C., were elected Lecturers.

A Weekly Feature of Helpful Hints on Child Training

Under Open Skies

(Copyright) — By NANCY CLEAVER —

Canadians are a race of outdoor people. The exodus of tens of thousands of families to summer cottages and thousands of youngsters to camp each summer shows how strong is their love of life in the open. The steadily growing caravan of travellers, with or without trailers and tents, is another indication of our enjoyment of new adventures in strange places.

We have a wonderful country in which to vacation, blessed with many lakes and streams, wooded hills and quiet valleys. The federal and the provincial governments have done a superb job in setting aside National and Provincial parks. These are our heritage, and we are foolish indeed if we do not make our own inquiries and plan to visit at least one park each summer.

The camping movement is one of the finest influences contributing to the growth of our boys and girls in every way. We have a wide variety of camps, private, church, organizational, (such as C.G.I.T. and Scouts) and Fresh Air. No child can stay at a good camp for even a few days without his or her life being richer for this experience.

The nearest private camp to our family's summer cottage is Glen Bernard. On a hot August evening we walked out on the long dock at Sundridge and looked across the blue water at the circle of Glen Bernard buildings showing here and there through the trees. Later we visited this lovely camp, and met the director, Miss Mary G. Edgar. Because we have long loved her poetry, this was indeed a privilege. Our youngest daughter later called her the "God Who Touchest Earth" lady.

This is the title of her world-famous camp hymn which is beloved by a whole generation of youth of America, both north and south of the 49th parallel. It has been translated into French, Spanish, Portugese, Japanese and the Cree Indian languages.

The ideas for the hymn were based on a prayer written in 1922 for the Glen Bernard Council Ring Ceremony of Initiation. Three years later Miss Edgar wrote the five verses and mailed them to Magistrate James Edmund Jones of the Anglican Hymnal Committee, asking him if he would suggest a suitable tune.

He chose two and also composed one of his own for the Camp Hymn. Later, when Miss Edgar visited his home and listened as he played the three tunes on his pipe organ, at once she knew which one she liked best. Magistrate Jones replied "That is the one I composed specially for the hymn, but I wanted to be certain that you liked it best. The tune will be called "Glen Bernard."

Further details about this famous hymn for vacation days and also its fascinating tune are given in the chapter on "The Camp Hymn" in a recent book "Under Open Skies" by Mary G. Edgar (Clarke Irwin). This book is full of delightful stories and fine poems and brief talks which Miss Edgar gave in the Glen Bernard Chapel.

There is no better addition which parents could make to the summer reading at home, or the cottage bookshelf, or tuck into their vacation luggage than "Under Open Skies" — and there is no hymn, especially written to be sung out of doors, which is more beloved than Miss Edgar's "Camp Hymn".

"God, who touchest Earth with beauty,
Make me lovely too.
With Thy Spirit re-create me,
Make my heart anew. . .

"God, Who touchest Earth with beauty,
Make me lovely too.
Keep me ever, by Thy Spirit,
Pure, and strong and true."

It DOES matter which Oil Burner you buy!

If you're in the market for an oil burner, there are dozens for you to choose from. They all look very much alike. They all burn oil. Some are pretty efficient, others less so. But, unless you're an engineer, there's no way for you to decide which burner is best for your needs, except by insisting on one made by a reputable, long-established manufacturer. Like Smart's, for example. We recommend Smart's series "A" oil burners because when we sell one we know that the customer is going to be satisfied with the deal, for a long time if that seems to you to be a good reason for buying a Smart's oil burner, let us show you the complete range, and tell you all about them.

Annual Picnic Held at Children's Home, Rosemere

There was a good attendance at the annual picnic held recently under sponsorship of the Orange Social Club, at the Orange and Protestant Home for Children at Rosemere. Many brought picnic lunches, but a number of families patronized the refreshment booth for lunch, snacks and supper. Proceeds of all activities went to the Home.

There were races and fun for all ages, and the men enjoyed playing darts. Ned Burke, president of the Orange Social Club, introduced the Rev. Mr. Norman, minister of Rosemere United Church, who spoke of his association with the children of the Home and gave an interesting history of the Home property.

Royal E. C. Werry, Q.C., president of the Home, was unable to attend and R. H. Butler, treasurer, welcomed those attending. Mrs. Winnifred Roberts presented a cheque for $50 from Montreal Crystal Chapter L.O.A. Miss Gertrude Hoyle, newly elected L.O.B.A. Grand Mistress of Quebec, also spoke briefly.

There were special races for the children of the Home, and they also won a number of prizes in other races. The married men were victorious in the tug-of-war. There was also a "bean guess" and a drawing, with four lucky winners.

Two changes Harry Shoubridge is glad to see

"The modern food store is a shopper's paradise," says food store owner Harry Shoubridge. "Self-service has made buying quicker and easier. New departments, such as frozen foods, have brought a wider choice of products. Package designs, store arrangements and lighting have all been modernized and vastly improved."

Another change benefits Mr. Shoubridge and his family in a personal way. Nowadays it's easier to provide financial security for families because life insurance policies are much more flexible. Never before has the range of policies and plans been so wide.

Life insurance representatives, too, are trained to give more competent service in the selection of plans to meet individual family needs. Today, through life insurance, ready funds are provided for emergencies, for education, for safeguarding your home, for your business and for your retirement.

In these and other ways, the life insurance companies in Canada are in step with progress . . . bringing benefits to people in all walks of life!

THE LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES IN CANADA

Life insurance payments to Canadians totalled more than $300 million last year and $202 million of these payments were made to living policyholders.

Civil Defence and the Armed Forces

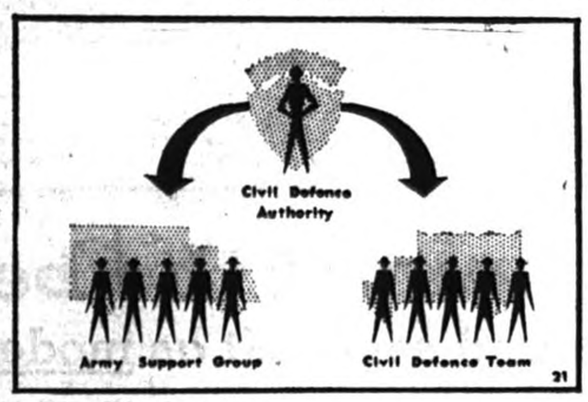

Twenty-first in series of 24 articles

Canada's armed forces exist primarily to fight the enemy if he attacks, but in recognition of the importance of civil defence, they are now prepared to lend their aid on the civilian front if necessary.

G. S. Hatton, Deputy Federal Civil Defence Co-ordinator, has said:

"The successful military defence of a country is the best type of defence, but since we are assured that no defence can be perfect and that enough bombers may be expected to penetrate our military defences to cause mass destruction, we must spare no effort to build a strong civil defence. . .

"The whole country — the services no less than the civil population — is involved in civil defence."

The army in particular has been prepared to augment civil defence. By the spring of 1956 its five commands across the country were scheduled to have set up each a mobile support group designed to meet the peculiar needs of the area it would serve in war or natural disaster.

In outlining the army's plans for supplementing civil defence organizations, Brigadier R. R. Rothschild, of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Committee in Ottawa, said army commanders would appoint a liaison officer to work in co-operation with local civil defence authorities.

The mobile support groups are designed to help the civil defence effort primarily in time of war, he said. But the armed forces, as has always been the case, would provide all the emergency assistance required of them in event of any natural disaster such as floods, fire and so on.

In many cases this assistance likely would include the mobile support groups.

The military would come to the aid of the civilians at the request of the civil authority, as it always has. In communities with a civil defence organization, military assistance would be provided at the invitation of the civil defence authorities and over-all direction of joint army-civil defence projects would be supplied by civil defence leaders.

Everything possible is being done to provide Canada with adequate air defence, but as civil defence officials know, no such defence can be perfect.

At present, three chains of electronic warning devices are being built across the continent by Canada and the United States. One is along the U.S.-Canada boundary, another is across the middle of Canada and the third — the DEW line — along Canada's northernmost fringe.

But these lines, even when completed, will not stop enemy bombers. They will warn of their approach and the task of stopping them would fall to the air forces of both Canada and the U.S. Even then, it is considered impossible to guarantee that every bomber, each of which likely would be carrying nuclear bombs, could be stopped short of the populated areas.

There are about 40 cities in North America where population and industry is concentrated. If only 10 per cent of a 400-plane attacking force — a very small average compared to Second World War experiences — got through, the heart of the continent's productive capacity could be seriously impaired.

Any potential attacker of North America is faced, of course, with retaliation that could bring him the same destruction or worse.

But it is obvious why officials of all western countries feel it is more vital than ever to frustrate an attack by a system of passive defence. In this continuing need, to use the Deputy Co-ordinator's words again:

"Civil defence is now a permanent partner of military defence."

Miss Catherine Mary Anne Calagoure, daughter of Mr. Wilfrid Calagoure and the late Mrs. Calagoure, of Ottawa, became the bride of Mr. Howard Ian Mahon, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Mahon of Calumet, in a ceremony solemnized on July 14 in St. Anthony's Church.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and attended by Miss Frances Blair as maid of honor. Miss Doris Rose and Miss Theresa Lafleur were bridesmaids and the bride's cousin, Miss Patricia Tufano, was flower girl.

Mr. Jack Scott acted as best man and Mr. Richard Calagoure, brother of the bride, and Mr. Ellis Carkner, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, were ushers.

The bride wore a full-length gown of white corded taffeta designed with a scoop neckline and a long torso trimmed with sequins and a bouffant skirt. A matching hat held her fingertip veil and she carried a red and white bridal bouquet. The bridesmaids were all gowned alike, in white brocaded nylon street-length dresses and small white hats and carried bouquets similar to that of the bride. The flower girl was gowned in a full-length white satin dress and a head bandeau of orange blossoms and carried a bouquet like the rest.

Mrs. Mahon, mother of the groom, wore a street-length dress of dusty rose with navy accessories and wore a corsage of white carnations. Mrs. Anderson, aunt of the bride, wore a deep pink street-length dress with white accessories and also wore a corsage of white carnations.

The reception was held at the Ritz Caterers' Hall, Hull, where the guests were served a hot turkey dinner. The latter part of the evening was spent in dancing.

The bride wore a powder blue linen sheath dress with a matching duster coat, white accessories and a corsage bouquet of pink carnations, when the happy couple left on a wedding trip to Niagara Falls and the Eastern United States. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Mahon will reside at 185 Faraday Street, Ottawa.

Out-of-town guests included the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Mahon of Calumet, Que., and Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Carkner and Donald, of Vankleek Hill, Ont.; Mr. Donavan Mahon and Miss Geraldine Conway, also of Vankleek Hill; Mr. Stephen Brigden, Miss Mildred Brigden, Mrs. Melvin Matthew, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Craig, Mr. and Mrs. Norman McRae, Mrs. Archie Graham, Miss Elsie Graham, Mrs. Albert Scott, Miss Anna Pollock, Mrs. John Black, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Dixon, of the Ottawa Valley district; and Mrs. Vera Farrara, of Belleville.

Police to Curb Horn-Blowing Celebrants

On Orders from City Fathers

In presenting his monthly Police Department report, Chief Fernand Trepanier outlined suggestions for parking revisions (detailed in the Council proceedings on this page) and reported that, during the past month, numerous complaints had been received relative to horn-blowing during wedding and bachelor party parades. The Chief was instructed to enforce Article 27 of By-law 182 regarding such horn-blowing "in cases when a serious disregard of the law is in evidence."

The Police Department was also instructed to put into effect By-law 117 regarding the licensing of dogs, two sections of which read as follows:

4—Any member of the Police Department of the Town of Lachute shall, after the first day of June in each year, cause to be killed or destroyed all unlicensed dogs found at large within the limits of the municipality, and shall at any time destroy, by poison or otherwise, vicious dogs unless these are muzzled or tied up in such a manner as to render them harmless.

5—The owner or keeper of any dog within the limits of the Town of Lachute, if found guilty of any violation or infraction of the present By-laws, shall be liable upon conviction to a fine not exceeding $20, or to an imprisonment not exceeding 30 days.

Regarding monthly activities of the Police Department, Chief Trépanier reported that a total of 201 general calls had been answered, five automobile accidents investigated, one accidental drowning, one arrested, four detained for the Provincial Police, seven detained for protection, and at present there are 12 cases before the court.

Five animals had been destroyed, 35 traffic tickets issued, three inquiries undertaken for Social Service, and some 1,550 miles logged on the police vehicle.

A British firm specializing in marine equipment will offer in Canada this summer an echo-sounder to replace lead and line for indicating depth of water under yachts, pleasure boats, coasting vessels, and other craft, at all times in all weathers. The apparatus is operated automatically from one control. It is claimed to be accurate at shallow depths and at much greater depths than can be sounded by hand lead. It will also indicate obstructions such as wrecks. —Marketing.

CNIB Appeal This Month in Wentworth Twp.

Mayor Clarence Neill of Wentworth, wishes to bring to the attention of citizens that a financial campaign will be held from August 15 to 31 on behalf of the C.N.I.B., to carry on their work for blind and sight-impaired residents in Argenteuil.

The Institute is fully established in Lachute now, and the work is increasing every day. The officials are hopeful that the County of Argenteuil will be able to raise $6,000 between now and March 31, 1957. This will enable the Institute to pay its way in this County and to increase its services to the sightless.

It is a known fact that no one appreciates eyesight until he is deprived of it. In order to insure eye safety, residents are requested to give generously to the forthcoming campaign in Wentworth. The money received will fill two full purposes: (a) to assist the blind; (b) to prevent blindness.

Sectional captains are: Mr. B. R. Hunter, in charge of Dunany; Mr. R. Bell, for St. Michel; and Mr. U. Charland for Montfort, Laurel. When the canvasser calls on you, meet him with a smile and feel happy to know that he is able to see you — he is the worker, the disciple of the C.N.I.B. — he is most anxious to see that you and your loved ones will always have perfect vision.

If perchance, you are missed in this canvass, please telephone your captain, or send your contribution direct to the C.N.I.B., Box 807, Lachute.

4-H Calf Club Judging Team In Eliminations

The Lachute 4-H Calf Club judging team of Eileen Elder, Donald Parker and Donald McOuat came second at the Montreal District Judging Elimination Field Day, held at Macdonald College on Tuesday, July 31. The winning team of Rollie Ness and Wayne McKell, of Howick 4-H Calf Club, will take part in the Provincial Judging Contest to be held during the Sherbrooke Fair.

Six clubs took part in the competition, namely, Lachute, Arundel, Howick, Ormstown, Huntingdon and Cowansville. A visiting team from Brome also came second, but only took part in the competition for practice purposes.

Forty-one Lachute club members left for Macdonald College by bus Tuesday morning, and all judged three classes of dairy cattle in the morning. After lunch on the college campus the official teams gave reasons for placing the cattle classes, while other members took part in an inter-club softball game. At 4.15 p.m. the winners were announced, and the visitors left for home.

The local judging team wishes to express appreciation to those who did such a fine job in coaching them, and to the breeders who extended the use of their barns and cattle for judging practices.

It is not so hard to earn money as to spend it wisely.

Discussion on $85,000 Loan By-law, Public Backs Council Without Dissent

Local Physician in Outboard Mishap

Dr. Roger Lavigne, a member of the Lachute Town Council, received severe injuries when he was thrown from a motorboat near his summer residence on Lac Masson, near Ste. Marguerite. Dr. Lavigne was in the boat accompanied by Pierre, his eight-year-old son, when the craft hit a partially submerged log. Both occupants of the boat were thrown into the water.

The mishap occurred about 300 feet from the lakeshore and young Pierre, who cannot swim, was pulled to shore by his father. In the process of rescuing his son, Dr. Lavigne was struck by the propellor of his motor several times, suffering severe slashes on his right thigh, a piece of flash being torn completely from the calf of his leg.

The accident occurred some time ago and the physician has since returned to his practice.

DRIVING TEST

Prince Albert, Sask. (CP) — City police, firemen and works department personnel may have to undergo a special driving test because of a police recommendation.

Community TV Promoters Bring Request; Also Telephone to Submerge Main St. Lines

Traffic regulation amendments, including six restricted Main Street stops for the local bus-line, were recommended by Police Chief Fernand Trepanier at the regular Council meeting of last Wednesday evening. The assembly was preceded by a short caucus of the members. Ald. Dr. Roger Lavigne was absent from the session.

By-law 202 instituting a loan of $85,000 to complete the McGibbon subdivision, water and sewer installations, and other public works, was passed in three readings at this meeting.

BY-LAW FORMALLY APPROVED

By-law 202, effecting a loan of $85,000, was approved at a public meeting held in the Town Hall last evening. The public meeting was called to order by Mayor Dr. F. Walter FitzGerald at 7.05 p.m. and the by-law was read in both French and English. An hour passed, and in the lack of objection by six ratepayers during that period (as prescribed by law) the proposed measure was duly passed.

At an adjourned Council meeting held following the public meeting, it was decided to request the Quebec Municipal Commission for permission to borrow sufficient funds to commence work on the McGibbon project, pending the sale of debentures on approval of the loan by-law by the Commission.

By-law 202

1,050 feet of 8-inch water pipe on Brownsburg Road	$8,000
3,000 feet of water pipe on subdivision roads	18,000
Collector type sewer on Brownsburg Road	18,000
Pipes, hydrants, valves, repairs, etc.	2,500
Sewer-cleaning machine	5,000
Snow-clearing equipment	4,000
Surface drains	2,000
Sanitary landfill machine for municipal dump; piece of land to enlarge same, fence, gate, shed, etc.	18,000
Lachute's share re cost of sewer and waterworks with St. Jerusalem on Henry Street, located on the municipality boundary line, according with an ordinance issued by the Board of Health and dated October 27, 1953. (Sewers—$5,000; Waterworks—$4,500)	9,500
Total —	$85,000

Among principal recommendations made by the Chief of Police in amendment to Section 25 of By-law 182 were:

1—That the 30-minute parking limit on Main Street immediately in front of the A & P Store, owned by E. W. Albright, be rescinded and that, within this 50-odd foot section, five-minute parking be strictly enforced.

2—That the town bus be limited to three stops on each side of Main Street, and that the vehicle pull over to the sidewalk before stopping. The bus stops recommended were: opposite the Municipal Garage, the Bank of Nova Scotia, and Laurentien Hotel, on the south side of the street; and J. W. Lefebvre Ltée, Bank of Montreal and the Anglican Church on the north side of the street.

3—That the traffic island at the westerly end of the centre street-parking be replaced with heavier posts, and that it be properly marked.

4—That there be no parking in the following areas: (a) Main Street from the southeast corner at Muir's Service Station to Hugh Street on the south side; (b) Bethany Street, from Main Street to the town limits at Henry Street, on the east side of Bethany Street; and from Main Street to the limits of the old post-office on the west side of the street; (c) from the corner of Berry Street to Foundry Street on Barron Avenue; (d) on both sides of Millway Street from the corner of Main Street (Harbour Pharmacy) to the east side of Fish's Bridge. (At the present time parking is prohibited here only during rush hours); (e) on Princess Stret, on the river side of the street, from the corner of Millway to the J. C. Wilson Co. property.

The Police Committee were authorized to purchase signs for these areas up to a total of $300. This figure includes signs in "scotch-light" to be placed in vicinity of the traffic lights. The Chief was requested to strictly enforce Article 21, By-law 182, regarding the blowing of horns in wedding processions, etc.

A letter from K. W. Clarke, secretary of Lachute Lions Club, was read informing the Council that the flashing traffic signal installed near the Golf Club had been returned to them by the Parish of St. Jerusalem, and offering the flasher to the local body provided no expense to the Parish Council is incurred. . . It was suggested in the letter that the flasher be re-located at the Lachute Town limits and that the Lions Club insignia be left on the post.

By-law 203, relative to the regulation of the municipal dump, was read for the first time and accepted in principle; it was later decided that the second reading would be given to the bill at the regular September meeting.

A request that the Bell Telephone Company be permitted to bury a cable from Barron's Bridge to Lowe Bros. Dairy was referred to the Roads Committee for study. The subject was discussed at a special meeting held last evening, when permission was granted with four conditions.

Jean Larocque was refused a building permit for a house on Cruise Boulevard, due to lack of water and sewerage facilities, while a permit was granted to Aristide St. Jacques for an addition to his house on the corner of Edwin and Wilson Streets.

Jas. W. McGibbon, representing the firm of A. D. McGibbon & Sons, presented the Council with a signed statement turning over all streets immediately concerned in the Riverview Subdivision to the Corporation for the sum of one dollar — the streets to be properly graveled.

It was decided that a registered letter be sent to the Parish of St. Jerusalem informing the municipal Council that no more garbage will necessarily be accepted unless an agreement is reached between the two bodies, until such time as By-law 203 governing the municipal dump is accepted.

The auditors' report was accepted on a motion by Ald. Romain Desjardin's, seconded by Ald. Mozart Carrière.

Representatives of a community TV system were in attendance and requested permission to run wires across various streets. The system works along the principle of the telephone and eliminates individual TV antennae. The representatives were requested to bring definite plans to the next meeting, and they pointed out that they were presently working on a similar system in Hawkesbury.

A letter from the Parish of St. Jerusalem requesting Lachute Town Council to establish a boundary line between the two municipalities was answered to the effect that such a line is presently established to the satisfaction of the Lachute Council.

Accounts totalling $11,677.51 were approved for payment, after which the meeting was adjourned until last evening.

Change Adopted In Banking Hours

Commencing August 18, all banks in Lachute and Lachute Mills, including the Caisse Populaire de Lachute, will be closed each Saturday to give the members of their respective staffs the benefits of the five-day week.

This policy has been established in practically all banking points in Canada for quite some time, and it is hoped the customers will adjust themselves to this change. For the convenience of customers, the local branches will give extended service each Friday from 7 p.m. until 8 p.m. The Lachute Caisse Populaire will be open from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. each Friday, as at present.

Local Dentist Retires After Long Practice

Dr. Albert Lavigne, member of an old Lachute family, who has practiced as a dentist on Main Street East for the past 38 years, has now retired from his profession, and takes occasion to thank all the friends and clients whom he has been privileged to serve during this long practice.

Monthly Session Of Ayersville Mun. Council

Ayersville Council studied a subdivision of lots 647, 648 and 724 in the Township of Chatham, at its regular meeting held Monday evening under the chairmanship of Mayor Gaetan Paquette. Councillors Alfred Campeau and Douglas Simon were absent.

Engineer Paul Laliberté pointed out that the usual procedure for Council to take over the subdivision would require the signature of all proprietors concerned, but it was moved, seconded and unanimously adopted that — due to the many requests for Ayersville to take over this section — Mayor Paquette, Pro-Mayor Maurice Champagne and Secretary Conrad Legault be authorized to sign the necessary papers for both the proprietors and the municipality.

Mr. Laliberté informed the Council that the cost of sidewalk construction varied from $1.09 to $1.29 a foot and presented a plan relative to the relocation of 52 Bell Telephone and Gatineau Power utility poles.

A letter was read from E. E. Chauvin, district manager of the McColl Frontenac Oil Co., requesting permission to construct an inclining sidewalk facing their garages on Hamford and Chatham Streets — permission being refused although the Council did agree to construct a two-inch-high sidewalk in this area, rather than the regular six-inch sidewalk. Mr. Laliberté was requested to draw up and send a plan to this effect to the Company.

It was decided that tenders called for the cleaning of chimneys be studied at the September meeting. Councillor Pharand reported that citizens of the Sandy Hill area had requested that the three streets in that section be named. Names are to be submitted for approval at the next meeting.

Three building permits were granted and two refused, all five being for residences within the municipality.

The evaluation roll was homologated following the rejection of five complaints. The increase of $97,950 brings the taxable valuation roll to $3,507,905.

Secretary-treasurer Conrad Legault presented his financial report for the period January 1 to August 1 — the report indicating total receipts for this period $30,833.46; expenses $25,631.83; and taxes outstanding, $37,333.12.

A tender for the position of Police Chief was presented by Adrien Cyr, and as other verbal tenders had been submitted to various councillors it was decided to adjourn to Wednesday, August 15, to study all tenders before a decision was made.

Accounts totalling $483.48 were approved for payment, and following other minor business, the meeting was adjourned.

THE WEEK AT OTTAWA

By Roy LaBerge, Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Aug. 8 (CP) — Chartered banks — with the exception of the Canadian Bank of Commerce — were sharply criticized by some members of Parliament last week as favoring the rich and ignoring the poor on loans.

Walter Tucker (L—Rostern) told the Commons' Banking Committee that the "little man" has great difficulty getting a small personal loan from banks. He said he cannot understand why chartered banks are leaving most of the small loan business to loan companies, some of which charge two per cent interest a month — an annual rate of 24 to 26 per cent. Banks are limited by law to six per cent interest charges on small loans.

F. W. Nicks, head of the Canadian Bankers Association, said small loans handled by banks at the end of the last fiscal year totalled $440,000,000 — $130,000,000 more than in the previous year.

Pipeline Deadline

Trade Minister Howe ran into a barrage of opposition questions about whether or not Trans-Canada Pipe Lines Ltd. will be able to complete the western leg of its Alberta-to-Quebec pipeline by its December 31 deadline. He replied that, in spite of pipe shortages caused by the recently-settled United States steel strike, company officials are still hopeful the line will be laid to Winnipeg.

Charles S. Coates, executive vice-president and general manager of the company, said later in Toronto: "Trans-Canada will lay pipe as fast as it comes from the steel mills and will continue to push completion of the Alberta-Winnipeg section just as long as weather conditions permit."

Break-In Foiled at Health Unit Office

Police Chief Trepanier and Cst. Marcel Therrien were called to the local Health Unit last evening to investigate two prowlers reported to be around the Court House building.

Prior to the arrival of the officers, the two intruders left the scene by automobile at such a high speed as to make identity of the men or car impossible.

The Court House building had been entered and an attempt made to break into the Sanitary Unit premises. Police investigation produced no immediate results.

Arraignments on Various Charges

Lucien Sauvé, 26, of Hawkesbury, was arrested Saturday by Traffic Officer Albert Legault and charged with impaired driving, following three accidents in the Grenville area late Saturday afternoon.

According to Det. Ralph Allen, Sauvé backed his car out of a Grenville hotel yard, where he hit another car, causing slight damage. He drove along Main Street, collided with another auto, causing approximately $300 damage, and finally hit the Interprovincial Bridge. His own car suffered considerable damage.

Léon A. Larabie, 21, of Ottawa, was arrested by the Hull Provincial Police and charged with hit-an-run in connection with a Sunday afternoon accident at Pte.-au-Chene. Larabie is accused of having struck a Montreal car, causing an estimated $200 damage and then failing to stop.

Roger Simard, 26, of Grace Street, Lachute, was arrested by Det. Ralph Allen and taken to St. Jerome jail, where he is being held pending trial. He has been charged with attempted suicide. Simard was recently prevented from committing suicide by the local police force, headed by Chief Fernand Trepanier.

Trial has been set for Tuesday, August 14, for all cases.

Magistrate's Court, Ontario

Léon Tessier, of Grece's Point, pleaded guilty to charges of obtaining money under false pretences and forgery, and was sentenced to 30 days in jail by Magistrate Percy Bergeron, in Vankleek Hill Court, July 30.

Lachute Police Court

Paul Jerome, of Montreal, appeared before Georges Brunelle, J.P., Tuesday evening and pleaded guilty to a charge of driving while his ability was impaired with alcohol. He was sentenced to a fine of $40 plus costs.

Death of Former Theatre Promoter And Orchestra Leader, Angelo Fassio

Member of Colorful Family Troupe Which Toured With Circus in Earlier Days

Born in Saint Etienne, France, Angelo Fassio came with his parents to the U.S.A. in 1907, and to Canada in 1914. The Fassios toured America with the famed Barnum & Bailey Circus; the children were literally cradled in the lid of a trunk. They were a family inseparable from showbusiness, Mr. Fassio père having been associated with Pathé in the embryo stages of motion pictures. While Angelo, with his brothers and sister, followed the same line of business, the former developed his musical abilities to become a maestro of the strings, and in Montreal he played in various theatre orchestras, including the Saint Denis, Princess and Orpheum. In 1919 he moved to the United States, where he directed the Academy of Music Orchestra in New York, and toured with the German opera in 1922.

In 1932, on the death of his mother here, Mr. Fassio returned to Canada and took over the operation of the Rex Theatre in Lachute, which had met disaster through a costly fire and was subsequently rebuilt. He and his brother Adi also acquired the Capitol in Brownsburg, developed motion picture circuits in this area, and film distribution projects — Angelo meanwhile lending his talent and organizing ability to church, musical and club enterprises. He was a valuable member of the Lions Club, giving the hospitality of his theatres — including the Rio, which he built some years ago — to children's Christmas shows and other charities. As a sideline he published music, accumulating a lengthy catalogue of new selections and re-arrangements.

Having disposed of his theatre enterprises here, Angelo Fassio moved to Montreal, continuing, however in the same lines of avocation. He had latterly suffered from a heart ailment.

The late Mr. Fassio is survived by his wife, the former Mathilde L. Reutener, and brother, Adi, in Montreal, and by his daughter, Mrs. Berthe Cyr, and two grandchildren, in Brownsburg, also a nephew in Montreal. A brother and sister predeceased him. . . Sympathy of many friends is extended to the bereaved relatives.

The funeral was held Saturday noon from Wm. Wray's in Montreal, with interment at Memorial Park Cemetery. Rites were conducted by the Rev. E. Orsborne, former minister of the Lachute Presbyterian charge. A profusion of flowers, and a large attendance of friends, and colleagues in music and theatre circles, bore testimony of wide esteem.

Gatineau Power Lines

What Is "Demand"?

Demand is the word used to describe the amount of electricity used by each customer when his requirements are at a peak. For instance, if you had ten 100 watt bulbs all on at once, your "demand" would be 1000 watts or 1 kilowatt — meaning that the greatest amount of power you needed at one time was 1 kilowatt.

If, however, you also use a 3,000-watt water-heater at the same time, your "demand" would be 4 kilowatts — 1 kw. for the bulbs and 3 kw. for the water-heater.

The "demand" for electricity is the factor which governs the size of the generating, substation, transmission and transforming equipment required to provide the service.

Power companies everywhere are installing "demand" meters so that they can have a more accurate measure of the amount of power actually required by each customer.

With so many appliances used in the home, the "demand" of each customer is many times what it was when lighting was the only use made of electricity.

Surplus Farm Produce

The problem of farm surpluses, acute in parts of Canada, will receive attention on the Trans-Canada radio Monday, August 13. An excerpt from the Couchiching Conference will be broadcast in the period normally allotted to "Summer Fallow", illuminating problems and possible solutions to the grain glut. Knowlton Nash, of the International Federation of Agriculture Producers will introduce the subject and then the audience will examine the problems and come up with their own suggestions for a panel to discuss. Members of the panel, representing agriculture, labor and business, will be Dave Kirk of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, Reid Forsee of the CBC and J. B. McGeachy of the Financial Post. Panel chairman is to be Gordon Hawkins of the Canadian Association of Adult Education.

Efficient Feeding Pays Dividends

At the annual meeting of the Ontario Beef Cattle Producers held recently in Toronto, R. K. Bennett of Livestock Marketing, Canada Department of Agriculture, emphasized the importance of feeding efficiency. The more cheaply a farmer can put a pound of gain on a beef animal, the more he can afford to pay for feeder stock, and the greater the possibility of profit. Mr. Bennett said there are many factors involved in the beef business over which the producer has no control, but good feeding and management is something that is entirely under his control.

Canadian beef producers are in a strong position at present. Although cattle numbers appear to be at the peak of a cycle there are enough people in the country to eat practically all beef produced. Population is increasing steadily by about one-half million a year and the per capita consumption of beef is approximately 72 pounds a year. In a normal lifetime each person will eat about 33 hogs, eight beef cattle, ten lambs and four calves. In view of our rising population, the fear of a surplus of livestock in Canada seems unwarranted. Last year only about two per cent of total marketings of beef cattle were exported to the United States and at the same time, some beef cattle and some beef was imported.

Canadian consumers are buying more of the top grades of beef and this demand for Red and Blue carcasses has created a year-round market for these grades, both for feedlot and pasture fattened animals. This is of great importance to producers for it means that more efficient use can be made of pasture, Mr. Bennett pointed out. Grass fatened cattle supply most of the market requirements during mid-summer and fall and with an assured outlet right through the pasture season there is not the necessity there once was of trying to reach the early market before the seasonal break in prices.

Looking at the picture from a long term view there is reason to believe that the future for the beef producer is bright. Efficiency in feeding and improved marketing methods are points to which producers could well give further consideration.

Journal Criticizes Farm Price Supports

The Canadian Government has spent $100,000,000 on supporting farm prices in the last ten years — a policy which The Financial Post terms "fatuous and futile."

For dealing with an emergency situation, like the outbreak of foot and mouth disease that suddenly closed the American market for our beef and beef cattle, this price-support business is justified. "No reasonable person would have wished to see our important cattle industry wrecked. But as a permanent policy, price-supporting is of dubious value indeed, even for those whose products are supported," says The Post.

Butter is an example cited in this criticism. Under support prices Canadians are eating less butter per person than before price support. The people who have really gained from Canadian policy are the consumers in Czechoslovakia and Poland, who got our butter at a bargain. Certainly neither our dairy producers nor our consumers have benefitted — it is argued.

Agriculture Sidelights In Parliament

Ottawa (CP) — E. G. McCullough (CCF — Moose Mountain) charged that a $100,050 payment to P. J. Rock, prominent Alberta sheep breeder, for compulsory slaughter of his infected flock, amounted to a political payment. But Agriculture Minister Gardiner denied the accusation, declaring he doesn't even know the political faith of the Albertan.

The flock had to be exterminated because of outbreak of a disease known as scrapie. Mr. Gardiner said U.S. evaluators had estimated the value of the 674-animal flock at $160,000.

Cheese Payment

In another section of the same debate, the agriculture minister advised eastern cheese makers to look to the west for new markets. He said all of Canada's production could be sold in this country if the western market were exploited.

Quebec (CP) — The Provincial Bureau of Statistics reported that frequent rain and below-normal temperatures have hindered haying and decreased grain crop prospects. Hay yields per acre are excellent, but quality of the crop has been reduced because of difficult drying.

Tomatoes, potatoes and other vegetables appear promising, the bureau said, but fodder corn is growing slowly. Picking of a light raspberry crop is starting in the central part of the province and pastures are generally excellent on all areas.

"Bleeding" Tires Harmful Hot-Weather Practice

Kitchener, Ont. — The engine may be the heart of your car but bleeding tires can cause plenty of trouble.

G. R. Donaldson, of B. F. Goodrich Canada Limited, warns summertime drivers that letting air out of tires to bring heat-expanded air pressure back to normal may cause serious harm to tires.

The process of taking air out of hot tires is known as "bleeding".

Most present-day passenger tubeless tires carry a normal pressure of 24 pounds. On hot days afte rsustained driving, this pres- after sustained driving, this pres- pounds. Many motorists, fearing a blow-out because of the "high" pressure, let some of the air out.

Heat is what damages tires. "Letting air out does not lower the tire temperature. In fact, when a tire is bled and then driven again, it will heat up much faster and will get much hotter than will a tire carrying normal pressure."

Mr. Donaldson warned that an under-inflated tire will flex more as it passes over the road. This flexing will result in an increase in tire heat. Both over and under-inflated tires are more subject to crown bruises and other damage caused by stones and sharp objects strewn over highways.

To get maximum efficiency and wear from tires, keep tires at normal pressure and don't bleed them on hot days. Measure the air pressure only when the tires are cool, he added.

UNUSUAL FISH

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont. (CP) — Local fishermen scratched their heads in wonder at a weird-looking fish young Jimmy Davey pulled out of a nearby river. A foot long, it had four legs and a long, flat tail. It was identified as a mud puppy, rarely seen around here.

Provincial G.M. Visits Argenteuil Orange Order

On Thursday of last week, one of the largest meetings of Orangemen on local record was held at Louisa L.O.L. 717.

It was the occasion of the annual official visit of the Grand Master of the Province of Quebec, the Rev. Bro. L. Emard, to the County of Argenteuil.

The chair was taken by Past-Grand Master A. S. Holt, who welcomed the outstanding visitor. With him on the platform were Past-Grand Master Nelson Morrison, County Master D. Swail, and the Rev. Bro. G. T. Spriggs, Past-Grand Master of Prince Edward Island.

The Provincial Grand Master gave an interesting address, mentioning the divine service at Bristol, in which the Rev. Bro. Jacques Smith, a former monk, himself a former priest of the Roman Church; and the Rev. R. S. Smith, of the United Church of Canada, participated.

The Rev. Mr. Emard also reported on the Dominion Grand Lodge meeting at Winnipeg, when the Rev. Canon W. C. V. Martin, Most Worshipful Grand Master and Sovereign, presided.

Others on the platform spoke briefly on matters of importance to the Orange Order.

Two Descendants of Pierre Gendron, Noted Inventor, Live in St. Andrews East

Last Sunday was the occasion of an immense gathering in honor of all the Gendron families in North America — cognizant of the fact that it was a member of this family, born in Coaticook, in the Eastern Townships, who some 80 years ago found glory and fortune in the United States — Pierre Gendron, who died in Toledo, Ohio, in 1910.

Pierre Gendron was the inventor of the spoked wheel, and the first to manufacture this device in America. As the inventor was later termed "King of the Wheel" in the United States. He also founded the Gendron Society, which in later years became world-renowned.

Pierre Gendron was 21 years of age when, in 1865, he went to Toledo, Ohio. It was there that he conceived, some ten years later, the idea of manufacturing metal wheels for vehicles of all sorts; metal wheels at that time were not known. He made the first wheel in the loft of his residence on Walnut Street. After having obtained his patent, he opened a modest factory in a shed behind his home. He added to his assets little by little, and at the time of his death in 1910, his plant was the most important producer of metal wheels in the United States, operating under the name of the "Gendron Wheel Company."

The factory manufactured baby carriages, bicycles, tricycles, etc. and later on, became the leader in the manufacturing of automobile wheels. At one time, Mr. Gendron held 72 patents. In 1909, a branch was established in Toronto, where one of Mr. Gendron's sons was situated for some time.

Mr. Gendron died at the age of 68, and a Toledo paper referred to him as "one of the builders of the Toledo of today." The tribute also observed that the deceased "did not let his newfound wealth and success go to his head," and that he did not forget his religion or his friends of early days.

Among the descendents of Pierre Gendron are found three grandchildren, Pierre L. Gendron, of California, and Mrs. J. P. Lanctot and Mrs. Frantz Robin, both of St. Andrews East. A great-grandchild is presently serving with the American Air Force in Japan, while another lives in the United States.

Traffic Notes

IN TERMS of local traffic news, this might look like a week of coincidences . . .

Our cartoonist on this page spontaneously portrays the scene on Bethany Street (continuation of the Bethany Road approach to town). Meanwhile, the council news reports a letter from Lachute Lions Club, ceding the maintenance of a traffic blinker near the Golf Club which has long been neglected by St. Jerusalem Parish (to whom it was donated). The letter recommends removal of the light to Bethany Street at the town limits, where it will be under town surveillance — and might also allay the Milroy misgivings, and help reassure all other users of this thoroughfare.

Council news this week is sprinkled with police revisions to the Main Street traffic rules. And it is here that we doff our hat to Police Chief F. Trepanier. This comparative newcomer to the city personnel is not just "holding down a job." It's pretty obvious that he is studying our parking problems, and suggesting remedies. If those remedies are not immediately effective, at least he is aiming at the desired ideal, and with perseverance Lachute's traffic code will become adapted to the local needs. Business movements may necessitate further changes, but with officers like Chief Trepanier on the job, it is reasonable to hope the regulations will be kept in tune.

The Police Chief, we are sure, will react kindly to this week's hint from our cartoonist, and assign a more frequent patrol to this spot where it appears needed.

A Pretty Good System

IT ISN'T exactly news, but it bears repeating, if only because we're apt to forget it: Canadians ARE a fortunate people.

Not least, because so many of life's little luxuries are within our reach; luxuries which are beyond the means of ordinary people in most countries of the world — points out the current issue of "Industry."

The fact is well illustrated by the results of a recent survey of 1,000 typical families in Halifax, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg and Vancouver, whose incomes ranged from $1,800 to $6,500.

Of every $100 spent by these families, an average of only $52.40 was required for the essentials of life — food, clothing and shelter. In other words, basic necessities claimed only a little over half of the total income.

True, much of the remaining expenditure was hardly of a "luxury" nature. Taxes, for example, accounted for $5.80 of each $100, and medical care and insurance for $4.30. And most of us would certainly not consider $7.80 and $6.20 in every $100 for automobile and furniture, respectively, anything but absolutely "essential."

Yet even so, there are still the radios, the telephones, and television sets, the record-players, the labor-saving devices of all kinds.

These are only some of the more obvious "extras," which for most Canadians add up to the difference between living and existing. For millions of non-Canadians they are an impossible dream.

Outside of the United States, in what country would you find a survey of typical families revealing that 96 per cent have radio, 72 per cent have a telephone, 93 per cent have electricity, more than 50 per cent have at least one car, while almost as many have television sets? What's more, the proportion of Canadian families who have these symbols of material well-being, is climbing rapidly all the time. Their absence is as likely to be a matter of choice as inability to afford them.

Praise the economic system which has made all this possible — and never forget, it could not have been done except under this system. It's worth remembering.

TIT FOR TAT? — For years food chains have been offering hardware items as premiums. Now it is noticed in a local hardware store, the manufacturer of a new coffee-maker is offering purchasers free instant coffee! Other hardware manufacturers also are thinking of free food give-aways to help their sales, according to a trade commentary.

Wildwood Worship

WHILE CHURCHES suffer a slump in attendance during the summer season, and clergymen are understandably distressed at the lack of interest and support . . . strange things are apparent "back beyond," where folks have let down their hair in relaxation and are supposedly unconcerned with formal religion.

In one summer community at least — a spot in which we share a personal interest — there appears a spontaneous desire to join in praise and worship on Sabbath mornings. Nor is this a new departure; it happens every summer season.

They call it "Sunday School," but there are actually more adults than children. The gatherings are held on the residents' lakefronts (or indoors, if weather is unfavorable). There is no ordained clergyman to officiate. The host and hostess plan the program; they and willing neighbors give the leadership, in readings, scriptures and talks for the children. And to the accompaniment of a portable organ, enthusiastic voices harmonize in the old familiar hymns.

The attendance at this occasion last Sunday numbered over 100 persons. Catholics of the community assemble elsewhere for their regular devotions, and they too spend a happy, reverent hour. . . Altogether, in these summertime surroundings one may gather that religion is far from being submerged in indolence and unconcern. The spirit of co-operative worship is in joyful evidence.

Embryo Admirals To Sail Under Permit

THE FEDERAL government plans to put into effect a licensing system for operators of small boats.

Because of the tremendous increase in pleasure boating since the war, Ottawa has been under pressure from many organizations to provide control on boating similar to that which has controlled the motoring public for many years.

Now action is going to be taken so that every Canadian power boat operator will have to carry a "driver's license" and almost certainly pass a test to get it.

This decision to control boat operators was not unexpected. At the 1955 annual conference of the Canadian Power Squadrons — an educational body which has as its aim the teaching of rules for safety on the water — amendment of the Canada Shipping Act along this line was forecast by Capt. G. L. C. Johnson, assistant chief of nautical services.

The main target of the new regulations, he made clear, is the host of outboard boats that have crowded onto the waterways in recent years.

Now there is nothing wrong with outboards, properly used. There likely is nothing else that has added as much to the pleasure Canadians get from the outdoors.

But an outboard motor in the wrong hands becomes a lethal weapon.

Anyone who has been to a bathing beach knows the danger they can create for swimmers, particularly children, when operated at high speed in restricted waters.

Hundreds of complaints reach the transport department annually about careless boatmen. The majority of skippers, who run their boats with regard for the comfort and safety of others, are brought into disrepute.

Toronto Harbor Commission has had a licensing system, complete with written and practical tests, for 10 years. Now something of the same system of control over boatmen is going to be applied across Canada.

The thoughtful boatman has nothing to worry about. But the person who has no regard for the safety of himself or others will be brought under control of the RCMP. The result is bound to be greater security for the public generally.

"A Thief and A Robber"

There stepped from the scene of active duty not long ago, a venerable archdeacon of the Anglican Church. And the cluttered stage of life which he enjoyed so much will seem a trifle bare without him. Still, I have no doubt that we shall still hear much of him from the wings and that, from time to time, we shall also have the great pleasure of seeing him on stage for numerous encores.

Archdeacon Channel Hepburn, formerly rector of All Saints, Ottawa, is a man that cannot easily be forgotten. An outstanding shepherd to civilian flocks, he was also an army padre without peer, and was beloved of all with whom he came in contact. His chief claim to fame, however, was that he heard humorous stories without number and never forgot one of them.

In this respect, I well remember one night in wartime Britain when the Archdeacon came to visit some friends of mine. We were invited to dinner which was scheduled to begin at 8 p.m., in keeping with British tradition. The padre arrived about 7.15 and began telling stories within a minute of his appearance. When he left the house at 11.15, he was still going strong, but we were positively limp from laughing.

There were few people who escaped his ready wit. And he took particular delight in confounding the upholders of what is called "the Catholic tradition" in the Anglican fold. In particular, he jousted with Father Brown, the rector of St. Barnabas, Ottawa, one of the "highest of the high". Father Brown never learned to deal gently with the archdeacon and he suffered untold agonies as a result.

On one happy occasion, Father Brown informed his old friend that he had a wonderful plan up his sleeve for the Easter services.

"I've asked all the children in the parish to bring their Easter eggs with them to the church. Then, I'm going to put them into a great big basket and bless them. Don't you think that's a wonderful idea, Archdeacon?"

"Oh no, Brown, never!" the padre returned. "Too time consuming. I wouldn't do that on a bet."

Father Brown was slightly abashed.

"No? Then what would you do?"

"Why, what I've done for years, man . . . Bless the hen and hope for the best!"

It took Father Brown quite some time to recover from that one. But I doubt if he will ever recover from the unkindest cut of all. This was administered by the Archdeacon at the time when Father Brown ran afoul of a printer's error in a parochial advertisement.

Just before Christmas each year, St. Barnabas Church held its annual bazaar in the parish hall. Not satisfied with giving it a modicum of publicity by means of the usual posters in store windows, the ladies of the parish always burst into print and inserted large advertisements in one of the city's daily papers. In large type these read:

BAZAAR

Mammoth Bazaar and Christmas Sale
Country Store, Handiwork, Book Stall,
Home Cooking, White Elephant,
Fish Pond.
Come one . . . Come All.
Don't forget time, date, and place.
7.00 pm. to 10.00 p.m.
Thursday, November 30th.

It was the setting of the church name that upset the applecart. Instead of putting "St. Barnabas", the pressman inadvertently set:

"THE CHURCH OF ST. BARRABAS"

This was all the Archdeacon needed. Carefully cutting out one of the advertisements he pasted it onto a sheet of stout paper and edged the whole clipping in black. Then, just before he posted it off to Father Brown, he added at the bottom of the page:

". . . now Barrabas was a thief and a robber!"

OF MANY THINGS

By Ambrose Hills

Self-Improvement

I picked up an old, old book the other day and found some fascinating information about self-improvement.

The book was written almost a century ago, but I checked up with some important present-day authities and find that the facts are all in order.

If you want to improve yourself, you can take courage from these findings.

If, for example, you exercise your right arm in order to make it stronger, you will discover, much to your surprise, that you have strengthened more than your right arm. Your left arm will also appear to be stronger, even though you did not use it in the exercise. According to the old book I've been reading, there is a reason for this. In your exercising you strengthened your will. A good deal of your strength lies in the will, rather than in the muscles. Many a husky man has found this out when floored by a skinny, weak-looking opponent — with a strong will.

Self-improvement is all-embracing. Practice charity, for example, and your faith will be strengthened too. Practice thrift and your earning power will increase. One virtue contributes to another; there is a progression which works in your favor once you take the first step forward towards virtue.

This progression explains why some specialists have also a remarkable variety of additional skills. In becoming truly great in their specialty, they have strengthened the will. A good doctor, for example, could become a fine mechanic quickly.

So, do not be too concerned about the position you now hold in life. Do it really well, and you strengthen yourself in countless ways, ready for fresh opportunities. A really fine store clerk increases his ability each day to become the owner and operator of the business.

It must be admitted, however, that the same rules apply in reverse. Do a poor job in one line, and you deplete your ability to do any other kind of work. The lazy, sloppy carpenter who dreams of becoming a great contractor dreams in vain, because he has climbed on the skids which are greased with his own shortcomings.

Whatever this day brings you to do, do it as well as you can. Then you'll be ready to do a better, more important job tomorrow. It can't be otherwise. These are laws of nature. Work with them and you succeed. Disobey them and you fail.

It is that simple, and that difficult!

ALL ABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore

Loggers of the western forest are tough men, but they are human. For instance, they do not hide their sentimental feelings toward the whisky jack, or Canada jay.

Whenever men stop for lunch in the woods, the little grey birds fly down to share the food. They perch on a nearby twig, a hard hat, or the toe of someone's boot, and cheerfully snatch pieces of sandwich.

According to folk-lore, Canada jays are "the souls of dead loggers." Most loggers assume a protective attitude toward the feathered clowns.

"We were having lunch," a friend tells me, "when a Canada jay flew down and hopped right into a lunch pail. The owner of the lunch pail was a big fellow with a black mean streak in him. He grabbed the whisky jack in one of his ham fists and squeezed it to a rag."

Nobody attacked the man (as they might have done in a Saturday Evening Post short story). But silence fell on the group. Those who had been sitting near the killer moved away. From that time until he quit his job a few days later, nobody addressed a word to him or answered anything he said.

Another man tells me about a friendly black bear who used to hang around a construction camp. The bear would have raided the food if he had been given a chance, but the only damage he did was to lick the grease from the pile-driver.

One day a member of the work gang returned from the bush, and announced with a grin that he had shot the bear. He expected congratulations. Instead, they gave him the silent treatment, which bothered him so much that he quit his job the following week.

The needless slaughter of animals for "fun" rather than food is too common. Most of it is done by men from the cities. The average man who works in the bush looks upon such bloodshed with disgust.

CANCER RESEARCH

While the total amount spent in all Canada on cancer research is less than the expenditure of one of the big research institutes in the United States, the work of Canadians looms large in the world-wide research picture.

FEED THE PULLETS AND GIVE THEM ELBOW ROOM

Most people are busy at this time of the year and are apt to forget or neglect the pullets. You worked for them till now, and now you think they are big enough to work for themselves. Well, they will, but if you want lots of eggs next fall and winter it will pay you well to attend to them now. Small details, but they can mean a lot to you later.

They may have lots of good (Purina) feed before them but in too small a feeder, so that many cannot get feed when they want it; also there may be too few feeders, and a couple of bossy birds at each feeder can keep a dozen timid ones from eating. So have plenty of feeders and feeder space.

The same holds true on water space. It is the cheapest feed you give them, so don't skimp on it.

Then feeders may let the pullets waste feed by billing it out on the floor, or they may be able to roost on top of the feeder, or they may be able to tramp over it with their feet. They don't know enough to keep their feed clean, but they don't like dirty food any better than you do. Dirty feed costs you money, both by loss and by birds not eating enough.

A feeder that is high enough for baby chicks is much too low for pullets, so get the feeders up off the ground. (The edge of the feeder should be the same height as the bird's back.)

Better get a few PURINA feeders and waterers. They are made right, of best-quality material, and are reasonably priced. With care they will last for many years. . . When you are getting them, take home a supply of PURINA CHOWS so you can make money with them next winter. . . Phone, write or call us; we Deliver.

Game Wardens Seize Illegal Fishing Nets

Quebec — An important seizure of more than 10,000 feet of fishing nets in the Lake St. John region was made by Fish and Game Department wardens under the direction of Inspector Georges Bonin of Quebec. One of the culprits was caught with a 600-foot net containing many Ouananiche and walleyes. During the investigation, 17 nets of the same length were found in illegal operation. These seizures are important, as fishing with nets in Lake St. John is completely prohibited, in order to protect Ouananiche, which provide fresh water salmon fishing for a great number of Quebec sportsmen and visitors.

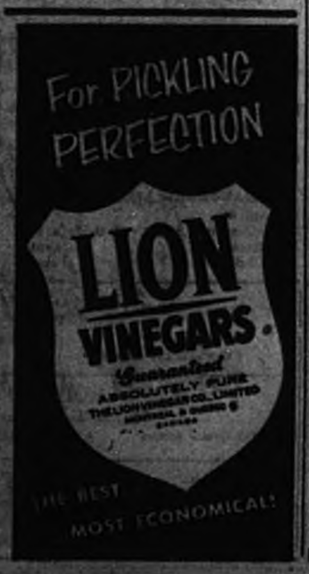

Inspector Bonin was accompanied by District Inspector Raoul Landy, of Chicoutimi, and Wardens Francois Potvin of Roberval and Jos. Tremblay, of Grande Baie. When he learned of the seizures, Omer Bernier, president of the Chicoutimi - Lake St. John Fish and Game Association, telegraphed a message of appreciation to Hon. Dr. Camille E. Pouliot, Minister of Game and Fisheries.

Unusual photo of a lightning flash is this one taken in Edmonton by H. G. Van Der Werf. As the lightning takes but 1-500th of a second to flash, he had his camera record the phenomenon at just the right moment. Though it appears that the flash is striking a building, it actually struck some distance behind.

Rods installed in furnace exhaust stacks, incinerators and other air polluters promise to end the smog problem. Largely composed of alumina, the oxide of aluminum, the rods not only ignite waste gases but release heat that goes back to work in the plant.

In everyday items like aircraft, furniture and frying pans, and in many an unseen job as well, aluminum makes living more pleasant for all of us. In fact, Canadians have become the world's fourth largest per capita users of this modern metal. Our aluminum industry not only supplies this home market, but is the largest exporter of aluminum for the Free World, too.

ELLIOT LAKE TO BE MODEL MINING TOWN

—Central Press Canadian

Elliot Lake is in the heart of Northern Ontario's three biggest uranium mines but it has none of the drawbacks of most mining boom towns. The townsite, laid out by the Ontario department of planning and development, is a model of modern-day boom towns. Tents and trailers are being replaced by 300 solid permanent dwellings and house lot sizes must be a minimum of 5,000 square feet. Next year 900 houses are to be built and the population is expected to reach 8,000 in a few years. Mell and Joan Bowman, above, operate a thriving laundry business in the community.

Recent Wedding In Saskatchewan

Steeves - Planidin

The marriage of Marion Evangeline, daughter of Mrs. Nicholas Planidin and the late Mr. Planidin of Blaine Lake, Sask., to Mr. John B. Steeves, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Steeves, of Lachute, Que., took place at one thirty o'clock, July 19, in the Wesley United Church, Prince Albert, Sask., the Rev. A. Vickers officiating. The organist was Miss M. Tallihan. Delphiniums and gladioli were used to decorate the church.

The bride, who was given away by her brother, Mr. Michael Planidin, of Windsor Mills, Que., wore a gown of white embroidered satin, with pearl trimming. Her fingertip veil of tulle illusion was held by a Juliet cap and she carried a white Bible to which was attached a bouquet of peach and apricot-colored roses. Her sister, Mrs. James P. Turnbull, was matron of honor and wore a gown of pale blue printed nylon over blue taffeta, with blue accessories and a corsage of Sweetheart roses.

Mr. Wm. Planidin acted as best man for Mr. Steeves, and the usher was Mr. James P. Turnbull.

Mrs. Planidin, the bride's mother, was gowned in a two-piece navy crepe dress, with a corsage of pink carnations.

Following the reception, which was held at the bride's home in Blaine Lake, where delphiniums and gladioli were used to decorate, Mr. and Mrs. Steeves left on their wedding trip to Waskesin, in Prince Albert National Park, Sask. The bride's travelling costume was of mauve linen with white accessories, and she wore a corsage of roses. On their return they will reside in Nitro, Que.

Revolving Credit and Industrial Strikes

By Lewis Milligan

"Let us all be happy, and live within our means, even if we have to borrow the money to do it with."

That was written nearly a hundred years ago by Artemus Ward, the American humorist, and it is perhaps even more necessary today to add his famous footnote, "This is rote sarcastical." For much of our domestic and political economy is based upon the paradox that we can live within our present means and at the same time happily borrow those of the future. This is actually being done on the assumption that we can borrow ourselves into permanent prosperity.

All the old economic maxims have gone into reverse. Thrift has become a sin, and debt a virtue. Hatred of debt has gone with Longfellow's village blacksmith who "looked the whole world in the face, for he owed not any man." Where we used to be urged to "save the pence and the pounds will take care of themselves," we are now urged to spend both and borrow more pounds, and the creditor will take care that we pay them back with compound interest. Indeed, we are told that there is now what is known as "revolving credit" in which you never get out of debt. This system is called "budgetism" and the beauty of it is that you don't have to keep a budget at all. Young couples merely commit themselves to regular, unvarying monthly payments on all major items of living expenses, and we are told that they are "so bemused by the rhythm of equal monthly payments that they hardly think about the 'cost' of the money."

In the old days criminals used to be committed to a period of penal servitude on the treadmill, a revolving staircase, which they kept in motion by perpetual climbing, but they could never reach the top. In these days law-abiding people are committing themselves voluntarily to a similar form of punishment and they seem to like it. They are paying betwen 12 and 18 per cent annually on a perpetually unpaid balance, but they don't worry about that. The department stores and the banks like it. "It's fantastic," one store executive said. "Interest charges come to 18 per cent a year! If you want to know whether we like the plan, just ask us if we like money."

Whether we like this budgetism or not, it is useless to protest that it is illogical. The revolving credit plan has proved a success and become a way of life. It reminds one of the old negro song about "Climbing up de golden stairs." The stairs in this case are golden, but the budgeteers can hardly be said to be climbing and they can regard themselves as lucky if they keep going where they started. The danger is in the stairs going into reverse, but the fear of that should be an incentive to hard work. It should have prevented the steel strike in the United States, which is a disastrous example of deliberatelly reversing the revolving credit and landing the workers in devolving debt.

If we have to borrow in order to live within our means, then we must keep the wheels of industry revolving, for it is upon them that our credit, our prosperity and happiness depend.

Picnic Planned For Sightless People Of This District

A. C. (Tony) Zaplaski, local representative, announces that the Women's Auxiliary to the C.N.I.B. are sponsoring a picnic, to be held at the Rotary comunity park on August 22.

Though picnics and outings have been going on for a number of years in other parts of Canada, it is the first time that an outing of this type has been organized for the sightless people of Lachute, Brownsburg, Dunany, St. Philippe, St. Andrews East, Carillon, Grenville and Kilmar. Every blind person is cordially invited to attend and to bring his wife, children or friend to the outing. (Conversely, blind ladies of married status will be expected to bring their husbands.)

Transportation will be made available to all blind people; please contact Miss Brisebois, the secretary, at Lachute 476, or write direct to the Institute, Box 807, Lachute.

Games and sports will be organized by Mr. Zaplaski and Miss Rita Goineau, home-teacher for the district. It is hoped that the weatherman will turn on the sunshine for August 22 — in hopes of which, all those attending are encouraged to bring along their bathing suits and trunks. The activities will begin at 10 a.m. and will conclude at 4.30 p.m. At that time, all the blind people and their families will be taken home. Food will be prepared and served by the Women's Auxiliary. There will be plenty of ice cream and soft drinks. . . In order to make this a successful event, please come out and join the fun.

Who Was This?

By A.A.M.

The Bible is rich in stories, and the purpose of this series is to encourage readers to look up for themselves the Bible versions of these incidents. If there are children in the family it is suggested that the story, and the Bible verses on which it is based, be read aloud.

What was the name of the young man who told the King of Israel that he had killed both a lion and a bear?

The Philistines threatened the soldiers of Israel and no one dared accept the challenge to fight thrown out by the chief warrior of the enemy. This youth, who had been sent to the camp with food for his older brothers, was ordered to appear before the King. When he did so, he said:

"Let no man's heart fail him because of this warrior of the Philistines. I will go and fight him."

But the King was doubtful of the youth's ability; he pointed out that the challenger had been a man of war since his boyhood. Then the young Israelite answered:

"When I was keeping my father's sheep on the hillside far from home once there came out a lion, and another time a bear to steal away a lamb from the flock. I slew both animals. Jehovah, who saved me from these savage beasts, will deliver me from the hand of this Philistine."

The King agreed, saying:

"Go and the Lord God be with you."

Find this young man's name and this story in I Samuel, Chapter 17, verses 31-37.

Colford Lodge Edges Prudential Transport

Last Sunday Colford's won their 10th game of the season, defeating Prudential Transport 2-1.

Colford went ahead in the third inning when Trevor Holmes, coaching on third base, asked the pitcher to let him see the ball. Time was not called, and when the Montreal pitcher threw the ball Holmes stepped aside and Arthur Denault scored for the first run. Prudential Transport struck right back in the fourth with a triple and a sacrifice fly, to score their only run. In the sixth inning the Prudential pitcher again threw the ball to third base to try and pick Holmes off base. The throw was wild and Trevor crossed the plate with the winning run. Wilson Black and Marcel Chartrand played a fine defensive game for the winners. Jean-Guy Larocque struck out seven to win his 10th game, with three defeats. Yves Valois was the losing pitcher.

Next Sunday Colford's Lodge will play host to the formidable Val Martin team.

Wrestling Monday At Brownsburg Arena

Claude Desharnais, who graduated from the wrestling game some years ago with an arificial leg as a memento of his hazardous career, is staging a wrestling program at Brownsburg Arena next Monday with three selected bouts. One of the main attractions, according to this promoter, is a midget team match — an event of never-failing appeal, which will feature four TV performers: Little Eagle and Sonny Boy Cassidy versus Vincent Garibaldi and Tiny Bill Lee. . . The principal bout on this card is a two-out-of-three tussle between Antonio Baillargeon and "Mike" Killer Morelli.

SHIRLEY JINXED?

Lake Ontario seems to be holding a jinx over Shirley Campbell, 20, Fergus, Ont., swimmer. She was pulled from the lake less than a mile from Toronto, July 31, after her second attempt to swim the 32 miles from Niagara-on-the-lake to Toronto.

Last year she was unable to continue after covering between 29 and 30 miles of the grind. A doctor accompanying Shirley this year said a mental vision of pain and failure of her previous experience got the better of her and she began "swimming herself to sleep."

When it was all over, Shirley repeated the words she said last year: "I'll never try that swim again, I'm through with Lake Ontario."

Only time will tell whether or not she means it.

Brownsburg Even With Montebello 1-1 In Semi-Finals

Brownsburg - Thurso

Brownsburg — In the last league game of the season, Brownsburg Tigers journeyed to Thurso, and by beating the home team 8-4 clinched the pennant, emblematic of league supremacy. Karl Gagné and Ronald Cousineau combined for this important victory, Karl leaving in the fifth with a 7-2 lead. Officially, Ronald was the victor.

Jacques Racine was the fielding star with one put-out and six assists, and his bat with a homer and single which produced three runs, was the potent force. Coach Jimmy Murdoch was also a big gun at bat. His two singles brought in three runs. Yves Raymond and Karl Gagné had two hits apiece. Gilles Diotte and Buddy Racine had singles. Keith Hazel doubled and scored twice. Mel Tomalty singled and scored twice.

Final Standings

	W	L	Pct.	GBL
Brownsburg	9	1	.900	—
Buckingham	8	2	.800	1
Montebello	6	4	.600	3
Hawkesbury	4	6	.400	5

Brownsburg - Montebello

Brownsburg — Although badly outhit, Brownsburg Tigers managed to make every opportunity count and all the big fielding plays when a rally was going. They eased out of many tight spots and emerged winners 5-2. Ronald Cousineau had to pitch himself out of trouble in six innings.

Jacques Racine was sensational in the field making four put-outs and five assists. With a line-up so loaded with left-handed hitters, the second baseman gets plenty of work. Mel Tomalty, with three put-outs and three assists, did very well with the plays that came his way.

Keith Hazel, Mel Tomalty and Buddy Racine had two singles each, and the eight-hit attack was rounded out by Jacques Racine and Fern Lepine, each with singles.

The largest crowd of the season was out to see the new-look Tigers, in their new uniforms, notch this, their tenth victory in eleven starts and eighth in a row. Meanwhile, at Buckingham, Hawkesbury outlasted the home team 13-12, to take a lead in the other series.

* * *

Brownsburg - Montebello

Brownsburg — Well, it was bound to happen, and at last, after eight consecutive victories, it did — Brownsburg Tigers had an off-day. Starting pitcher Karl Gagné walked the first batter, then got behind to the second. Ronald Cousineau came on in relief and with a costly error saw five runs cross the plate before ending the inning. The error which was charged to Keith Hazel, was a combination error. Keith's throw just wasn't as accurate as usual, and Gilles Diotte didn't make as good a save as he often does.

The game was badly marred by several rhubarbs which made Brownsburg look like poor losers. This was not the case. Brownsburg realized that on this showing Montebello was the better team. There was no grudge between the teams. The rhubarbs were all apparently caused by very poor umpiring.

Chalifoux pitched a fine eight-hitter to gain his first win against Brownsburg, after losing to them three times. He helped his own cause by doubling in one run. Thomas was the big blow to Brownsburg. He batted in four runs, and scored one with a single, a double and a homer. G. Hebert, who tripled in four trips, scored three times.

For the losing Tigers, Buddy Racine was the best performer, making four put-outs and hitting a single and a triple. Buddy was hitless in the first three games, but by hitting consistenly ever since he has climbed steadily until he is only two hits behind Yves Raymond, the club leader. Raymond has 17 hits.

This Sunday at Brownsburg we have the showdown game. Hawkesbury defeated Buckingham in the other semi-final—two straight. The Hawkesbury team will probably be among the large crowd that is expected to turn out to see this sudden-death game between last year's finalists.

Backstage With A Big Leaguer

SPORTS CAMERA

By Ron Andrews,
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ted Williams' 400th home run of his major league baseball career served two purposes. It established him as baseball's fifth greatest home run hitter and it reopened the controversy about the temperamental left fielder.

When the Red Sox' slugger crossed the plate July 17 after slamming the ball out of Boston's Fenway Park, he lifted his head towards the sportswriters and appeared to spit at them. He denied later that he did spit, but said he refrained only because a team-mate was in the way.

That's the way it has been between the 37-year-old player and Boston writers for years. The writers have their flashy adjectives to describe his baseball ability only — not his personal conduct.

When Williams broke into the majors as a 21-year-old rookie in 1939 the writers called him anti-social. He just wouldn't co-operate with them, they said. Not many of his critics have changed their minds today. But Williams doesn't think too highly of most Boston writers.

No Personal Life

He once said that the reason he "hated most Boston writers" was because they wouldn't leave him alone when he wasn't playing. He apparently regards his activities away from the parks as something that should be kept beyond the eyes and ears of the public.

The battle of Williams versus writers will probably go on as long as he is a participant in the game or is in the public eye. But no matter what is said about his conduct, most writers — in Boston or anywhere else — agree that "The Splinter" is one of baseball's all-time greats.

His 400 home runs rank him fifth behind Babe Ruth (714), Jimmy Fox (534), Mel Ott (511) and Lou Gehrig (493). It is interesting to note that his total of 394 home runs hit during his career before this season was almost evenly divided — 196 on the road and 198 in Boston.

While most sluggers rely on their hometown parks to fatten batting averages and home-run records, Williams depends just as much on out-of-town stadiums. The right field wall at Fenway Park is deceptive. Although it measures only 30 feet from home plate to the fence along the right field foul line, the wall cuts back sharply to Ted's main target area of 380 feet for a long span along the bull pens, 42 to the centre-field corner and 39 to Centrefield.

Cars ARE MY Line

by ARMAND DESROSIERS

When a couple of bright boys put together the world's first horseless carriage (you'd be surprised how long ago) they foresaw there was going to be an inevitable conflict with pedestrians.

The first vehicle in history to move without help from an animal was assembled in 1649 in Nuremburg, Germany. I heard the story some time ago and looked it up the other day in order to pass it on.

The "car" rattled along the streets at about two miles an hour, and it seemed to run by magic. It wasn't until weeks after its first demonstration that the baffled and frightened people discovered the two men who were hidden in the vehicle's back section. They turned a winch and this moved the rear axle.

The vehicle had a mechanism for clearing the way if anyone strayed too close (few did). A great dragon's head stuck far out in front. It moved from side to side and sprayed a stream of water out its mouth for more than 15 feet. . .

(Maybe they weren't so crazy after all, it might be an idea to adapt those automatic windshield washers for the same purpose.)

That dragon's head, I suppose, was "optional equipment at extra cost," as they say nowadays. It's the optional equipment on a large number of our used cars, the little extras that so many people like, that make them such outstanding buys. In purchasing a good used car you usually save tremendously on the extras that the original owner has installed.

CBC-TV Spotlight on Trouble-Spot, Indochina

By Robert Shields, of National Film Board

Vietnam, Cambodia, Laos—Since 1946 these names have been continually in the public eye as the centre of a war that began after the Second Great War and lasted until an uneasy truce was effected in 1954. Because of this truce Canadians from Newfoundland to British Columbia are now living in Indo-China helping to supervise the truce as members of delegations to the International Supervisory Commission in Cambodia, Laos and Vietnam — along with their Polish and Indian colleagues. Though the names of this Asiatic country are by now familiar to Canadians, it is probable that the country itself is an unknown quantity. What is Indochina?

The people of Indochina are the descendants of a proud and ancient civilization which flourished over a thousand years ago. Relics of this civilization can still be seen in the City of Angkor which stretches over an area of 50 square miles. The temples, the architecture employed, the bas-reliefs seen on the many buildings and places of worship, all bear testimony to the skill, energy, and ability of these people.

Today, the people of Indochina are confronted with the task of raising what is so often a marginal level of existence. The fishermen on the Baie d'Along, the rice farmer in the Tonkin delta, the workers in the Campha coal mines in Tonkin, the brick workers in Vientiane, capital of Laos — all these are faced with the task of providing for themselves and their families in a nation that is today divided. When the rice crop failed in 1945 hundreds of thousands of Indo-Chinese died.

Thousands of the people still live in their sampans along the Mekong, and Red and Saigon rivers and along the coasts to the China Sea and the Gulf of Siam. The river is their home where they eat, sleep and drink and gain their sustenance. In the villages, the life is much the same as that enjoyed by those living in the sampans. Here too, they worship their ancestors, participate in their festivals and meditate on the Wheel of the Doctrine of the Compassionate Buddha.

Canadians serving in Indochina are faced with what is essentially an investigation problem. Are refugees being allowed free and unhindered passage across the 17th parallel where Viet Vam was divided? Are former combatants free from persecution? All the truce — the U.S., the U.K., Russia, France and China.

For the Canadian in this Asiatic country it means living in temperatures that often reach well over 100 degrees. It means travelling over hundreds of miles of back roads, dried rice fields and thick jungles to investigate a complaint, no matter how trivial it may sound.

As members of the three truce commissions in Laos, Cambodia and Vietnam, the Canadians, in co-operation with their colleagues, are responsible for checking on the illegal smuggling of arms and on the proper functioning of public services in areas evacuated by the armed forces of both sides, and for seeing what can be done for those refugees who, in spite of the Geneva agreement, are being held back, intimidated or forcibly prevented from leaving.

Working in this Asiatic country which possesses a proud and ancient memory and one so different from their own, the Canadians in Indochina are demonstrating this country's willingness to undertake international obligations and can also help to develop our knowledge of this hitherto romanticized but little-understood part of the world.

Canadian Song History

Next Wednesday the CBC "Song History of Canada" reaches the 1860's and the stirring events that led up to Confederation. When the Irish revolutionaries formed the secret Fenian Brotherhood to fight for their nation's freedom, they organized thousands of Irish immigrants in America and started in to annoy Britain by attacking Canada. Canadian volunteers flocked into the army to repel the invaders, and expressed their defiance in a vigorous "Anti-Fenian Song," declaring:

"Beneath the Union Jack we will drive the Fenians back,
And we'll fight for our beloved Canadian home."

Soon after the Fenians were driven back, the Fathers of Confederation laid their ambitious plan for a Dominion stretching from sea to sea, but they found the Newfoundlanders unco-operative. In the election campaign of 1869 they expressed their opposition by singing the "Anti-Confederation Song" which warned:

"Come near at your peril, Canadian wolf!"

But Confederation was achieved, and the new nation soon found songs to express its new-found nationalism. Alan Mills will tell how the Toronto school-teacher, Alexander Muir, wrote "The Maple Leaf Forever," and how the French composer, Calixa Lavalée wrote "O Canada."

Bread and Circuses

By Lewis Milligan

J. B. Priestly, the British novelist and playwright, during a recent visit to Canada suggested that the government should spend $100-million on the promotion of Canadian arts and letters. He did not go into details as to how that money should be distributed or applied to the development of the various arts and forms of literature. As a writer of plays he was particularly interested in the theatre, and he highly commended the Stratford Shakespearean Festival as an example of what might be promoted by government financial assistance.

At the fourth annual opening of that festival, Rabbi Reuben Slonim took up the same theme. "There is a strange logic in our makeup," he said, "which compels us to subsidize the development of precious material resources and to refuse subsidy to priceless human resources. For want of investment in Canadian talent we are losing it just as we should be poor in grain if we were to neglect the soil."

Another call for government aid has come from the president of the National Ballet Guild. He declared that the financial position of the Guild was "grave in the extreme," showing a deficit of $83,878. The Opera Festival Association is also putting in a claim for government support, and there are doubtless other groups in the same category who feel they have as much right to government subsidies. They all deplore the failure of Ottawa to implement the Massey Commission's recommendation for the creation of a Canada Council in support of the arts.

It is not true to say that Canadians have neglected their human resources or that our governments have refused to subsidize the development of the arts and literature. There are all kinds of cultural organizations, private and public, including the churches, and all forms of government contribute hundreds of millions of dollars in subsidies to educational institutes, which exist for the cultural development of our human resources.

All the above mentioned claimants for government support are engaged in the field of dramatic and ballet production, and if the government were to undertake to ensure the financial success of such ventures, it would be entering into that business in competition with unsubsidized forms of entertainment. Already the federal government is operating radio and television in costly and futile competition with private broadcasting companies, and if it once became financially involved in general entertainment it might, in a period of depression, be obliged to take over the whole business, as the Romans did, to placate the people with "bread and circuses." "Free Shows" would be a fine vote-getting slogan in general elections!

The Shakespearean Festival at Stratford is a worthy institution, but its success must depend upon the ability of its producers and players to attract and entertain the public, as did the Globe Theatre in Shakespeare's day. That was a private enterprise and it succeeded on the merits of the plays and the players. Shakespeare was a great genius, but he was also a hard worker, and in spite of his humble birth and lack of higher education he raised himself to the top of his profession. I will be reminded that he had patrons, but so had many other writers of that period who were ruined by patronage. Marlowe was an outstanding example.

J. B. Priestley is a brilliant example of how an obscure Yorkshire lad could raise himself by determined effort to his present status as a novelist and playwright. Had his efforts been subsidized by the government he would probably have made a good politician or have been rewarded for his writings with a nice government job. In that case he would have become a sterile civil servant, instead of, as now, being footloose and tongue-loose to say what he thinks on all occasions. He is a good fellow and a typical free and unsubsidized product of British literary tradition.

Charged with passing bum cheques, a man in El Paso, Texas, suggested to the court it might be a good idea to hold off his trial until all the checks had a chance to bounce back in.

Guest Guessers

Meet the panel on "Who's the Guest", that new weekly variety-quiz show on CBC Television. It is the job of newspaper columnist Frank Tumpane (left), singer-showgirl Colleen Delaney, and actor-comedian Sammy Sales to guess the identity of the guests. The guests are people well known in the entertainment field and after Their identity has been disclosed they brighten up the show by doing a couple of numbers.

By Oll Daum, Canadian Press Staff Writer

Dior has done it again.

The French revolutionist of "new look" fame has taken a slap at other designers' edicts that black is not for daytime wear and spectators at his Paris previews showed their approval by a standing ovation.

In his collection Dior relegated the brilliant reds, blues, greens and pinks to evening wear, clearing the afternoon for black, sometimes combined with white, grey and brown tones.

His styles, too, were daring and much more successful at first glance than were his stringbean figures and flat chests of last year.

Dior has re-emphasized the bust, dropped the necklines and stuffed the hips. "Magnet line," the name he gave his newest look, could be interpreted in two ways.

First it resembles a magnet with the rounded end upward. If hips are not actually padded they are puffed out by skirts set in with soft folds at the natural waistline and narrowed at the hem.

But, the designer explained, the low-dipping neckline part of the magnet line was shamelessly calculated to draw male eyes. He incorporated a "come-hither" look in the hemline too.

Except for a small group of nearly ankle-length skirts, Dior draws the hemline just below the knee. Clearly, he didn't dare outmode everyone's wardrobe at one stroke but he has dropped a strong hint of the shape of things to come.

Mutual Admiration

Several months ago an English woman who operates a marriage bureau in London said so many Canadians were seeking her advice that she thought it would be beneficial to all concerned if she opened a branch office here.

On a tour here for information in May Mrs. Abigail Lewis said Canadian males urged her to find them English wives. The Canadians thought the English girls were less demanding.

On her return to England she received the same request in reverse. A number of Englishmen told her they wanted Canadian wives. It appears that Mrs. Lewis' hunch was right.

She plans to open her Canadian office in Toronto soon. By doing so she will likely become something of a transatlantic cupid.

This and That

If the children get chewing gum imbedded in their clothing or in a carpet, rub with a piece of ice and scrape it off. If stain remains, sponge with carbon tetrachloride.

Rust from a clothes-line can leave bothersome stains on garments. These can be removed by sprinkling salt over the stain, moistening it with lemon juice occasionally.

The blades of paring knives have uncanny ways of working loose from the handles. Push a little plastic wood well into the crevice of the handle, replace the blade, then let it dry for a few hours.

ROOSTERS UNDER AXE

Kitchener, Ont. (CP) — When residents on West Avenue here complained that four roosters were keeping them awake, police went to the owner. He told constable Jacob deVries he would "find the axe and fix them up as soon as possible."

Picnic Tricks

CHEESE WEINER BUNS

Summer is a time for picnics — and picnics turn our thoughts to cool breezes and picnic hampers. Most people agree that the picnic menu is the key to success of these pleasant events. Here's one way to add new zest to an old favorite, the hot dog. So now's the time to begin polishing up your picnic tricks by adding these Cheese Weiner Buns to the menu.

Cheese Weiner Buns

1 Cup milk (scalded) ¼ cup granulated sugar, 1 tablespoon salt, ¼ cup lukewarm water, 2 teaspoons granulated sugar, 2 envelopes active dry yeast, 4 cups sifted all-purpose flour, 1½ cups grated snappy processed Canadian Cheddar cheese.

To scalded milk add ¼ cup sugar, salt and blend well. Let cool to lukewarm. Meanwhile in ¼ cup lukewarm water thoroughly dissolve 2 teaspoons sugar. Sprinkle yeast on top of water. Let stand 10 minutes. Then stir well. Add well-stirred yeast to lukewarm milk-mixture. Add 2 cups sifted flour and beat until smooth. Stir in cheese. Add remaining flour to make a stiff dough. Turn dough onto lightly floured board and knead 8 to 10 minutes or until dough is smooth and elastic. Place in greased bowl and brush with melted shortening. Cover and let rise in a warm place, free from draft, for 2 hours or until doubled in bulk. Grease two 17 x 11-inch baking sheets. Punch down dough and turn onto a lightly floured board. Divide dough in two and knead each portion into a smooth round ball. Form each ball into a roll about 12-inches long. Cut into 9-equal pieces. Form each piece into a ball with a smooth top and let stand for about 5 minutes. Roll each piece with palms of hand into tapered cylinder about 5-inches long. Place on greased baking sheet 1-inch apart. Cover and let stand in a warm place, free from draft, for about ½ of an hour or until doubled in bulk. Preheat oven to 425°F. (hot). Bake in preheated oven for 12 minutes. Makes 18 buns.

Let's Eat

BY IDA BAILEY ALLEN

"Make the best use of every timesaver in the kitchen, and you'll never feel like a kitchen slave," said the chef.

"For example," he continued, "make the oven work for you. Fill it to capacity when in use. Some of the oven-cooked foods may be refrigerated or frozen for later use, such as casserole dishes, baked beans, cakes, puddings and sweet breads."

"And here's another tip," I added. "Use a double-boiler two ways: instead of water, simmer a thin soup in the lower part and simultaneously steam a pudding or cereal in the top, to save time, fuel, utensil-washing and heat in the kitchen.

Backyard Garden

"Remember, a cool piazza, terrace, or backyard garden, is a good place to shell a mess of peas, husk corn or pick over berries.

"Grandma sat on the back steps to do these jobs. But she didn't do them alone. The children helped. And the reward? Those crunchy ginger cookies, that cool, creamy milk!

"A reward to youngsters for good work does not demoralize them. It's not the same as pay or a bribe.

"As to quick-and-easy serving —serve dinner with the aid of a three-shelf rolling tray. Roll in the tray full of dinner, roll it back full of empty dishes!"

Onion Caraway Bread: Slow-sautee 1 cup chopped raw mild onion in 1 tablespoon butter or shortening. Cook until the onion turns color but do not brown. Add 1¼ tablespoons caraway seed. Cool.

Make up 1 package enriched home-baked bread mix according to directions on the package.

Follow exactly with this exception — add the onions to the water-yeast-mixture, then complete and bake as directed.

The last 10 to 15 minutes cover loosely with aluminum foil to prevent over-browning.

Do not slice it for a few hours. Serve with vegetable juices, any savory main dish or use in making meat or cheese sandwiches.

Raspberry Custard Moulds: Make up 1 package no-cook vanilla dessert, stirring in 1 tablespoon fine-grated orange rind and ¾ cup fine cake or soft enriched bread crumbs. Transfer to custard cups. Unmould.

Trick of the Chef

Summer Desserts

(By the Consumer Section)

Raspberry Mallow

3 Cups raspberries, 18 (¼ lb.) marshmallows, ½ cup icing sugar, 2 teaspoons lemon juice, ½ cup coconut, ½ cup whipping cream.

Wash raspberries and place in refrigerator to chill. Cut each marshmallow into eight pieces and dust with icing sugar to keep pieces separate. Just before serving, whip the cream. Combine raspberries and lemon juice, then add coconut and sugared marshmallows. Fold in whipped cream and serve in sherbet glasses. Yields: six servings.

Glazed Sour Cherry Tarts

4 Cups sour cherries (pitted), 1½ cups sugar, 1/16 teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon cornstarch, ½ cup water, red food coloring, baked tart shells.

Combine cherries, sugar and salt in a saucepan and allow to stand a few minutes. Bring to the boil and drain cherries, reserving juice. Arrange cherries in baked tart shells. Combine cornstarch with water and add to juice. Return to the heat, stirring constantly until the glaze thickens and becomes clear. Add food coloring until glaze is a bright cherry red. Spoon glaze over cherries arranged in baked tart shells. Chill. Yield: 12 large tarts, 20 to 24 medium tarts.

Raspberry Delight

1½ Cups fresh raspberries, 2 tablespoons hot water, 2½ tablespoons granulated sugar, 2 egg whites, ½ cup granulated sugar, ¼ teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, 3 tablespoons juice drained from fruit.

Dissolve the first quantity of sugar in hot water. Chill. Pour over the fruit and allow to stand a few minutes. Drain the fruit and reserve the juice. Combine unbeaten egg whites, sugar, salt, lemon juice and fruit juice in the top of a double boiler. Place over boiling water and beat with a rotary beater until the mixture holds its shape — about 7 minutes. Gently fold in the thoroughly drained raspberries. Chill before serving in sherbet glasses. Yield: 6 servings.

Mothers

By Ambrose Hills ("Of Many Things")

It is a long time since anyone has written a good song about Mothers, or a decent play or a poem. Perhaps this sour world can't stand sweetness any more. A writer told me that if he wrote a play that glorified Mother, it would be rejected as having too saccharine an approach. "It's fashionable," he said, "for Canadian television plays to deal with sordid psychiatric problems, and Mother fits better as a villain, according to the experts who decide these things. Motherhood is purely schmaltz these days!"

I've no quarrel with psychiatry or psychology, but this trend to belittle motherhood makes me somewhat nauseated.

If I had to choose someone to raise a boy or girl of mine, I'd choose a mother in preference to any of the eminent "egg-heads" who prate of "Momism" and related complexes. Many of these amateur Freudian "experts" could do with a long walk in the sunshine down any Canadian street. They'd see a few mothers in action.

The other day, walking down a suburban street, I saw a typical mother. She was standing in her front yard, her face a study in anxiety. Across the road her freckle-faced boy was threatening to heave a rock through a neighbor's window. At her skirts another youngster howled for permission to go to the wading pool.

As if that weren't enough to plague one human being, a third youngster, tears streaming down his face, came hobbling to her with a scraped knee.

A mother with three active children (she probaly had more) faces a thousand crises daily. Just to retain her sanity is an act of courage; but to go on, day after day, from early morning until late evening, solving problems with patience and love, deserve eloquent praise.

Added to all this, most city women now have a husband around the house a great deal of the time. His hours of work grow shorter, his holidays increase, and he takes quite a bit of caring for at home. Increased leisure and lighter work for higher pay usually make him moodier and less easy to please.

Mothers haven't yet heard of the eight hour day. They're on shift whenever any member of the family needs them.

So, let's have some songs of praise for Mother, and let the egg-heads go their Freudian way!

At an eight-year-old's birthday party, the adults rushed around frantically keeping the party going — organizing games, treasure hunts and races. In the midst of the confusion, one little boy asked: "When this is all over, can we play?"

— The Reader's Digest

Spinster — "So the waiter says to me, 'How would you like your rice?'"

Friend — "Yes, dearie, go on."

Fashions

With us this summer is the real afternoon dress, softly elegant, and quite distinct from the pretty all-day dresses that we like so much. Still, once in a while, for a special luncheon or tea, one has to have such a dress and this would be a good choice. It is of fine silk shantung in Mediterranean blue with white dots. The narrow banded neck ties in a bow above a narrow slit that extends to the yoke line. The draped bodice is very flattering and the skirt is gathered to the waist and is cut on the bias for gracefully flared fullness.

Travel accessories are catering to the easy washability of today's wardrobes. This year stores are offering lightweight plastic clothes pegs, little envelopes of detergents for the nightly wash, and even travelling clotheslines for hotel room use!

Tips on Touring

By Carol Lane

When there's a baby in the family, the simplest answer to summer fun is — picnics.

Pleasant outdoor dining areas can be found within short driving distance from any Hometown, Canada. And picnics give the busy mother a chance to relax from housework while eliminating the chore of packing and carting all the equipment essential to baby's comfort during a long trip.

Here's how to keep the infant well-fed, gurgling and dry while the adults relax under the trees:

1—An insulated bag will hold an ample supply of bottles and formula, sterilized water and canned baby food. Always take along an extra feeding just in case you stay longer than you anticipated. Handy for heating baby's food is the food warmer that plugs into the dashboard cigarette lighter. Add baby's own spoon which can be sterilized if necessary.

2—Keep baby off the bare ground — it might be damp. The car crib most convenient. But a blanket which has rollers and screens is with two pillows will make a suitable ground-bed. Since it may become chilly towards evening, add an extra sweater and cap.

3—A thermos of warm water is needed for the inevitable clean-up process. Don't forget absorbent cotton, powder or lotion and a few extra diapers.

Games -- Old and New

(Copyright) — By NANCY CLEAVER —

"Let's play a new game!" Janey pleaded with ther mother.

"No — I like the ones I know — they're fun!" John protested.

"Perhaps we have time for an old game and a new one too," Mother suggested.

Parents of small children are sometimes at a loss for new ideas for their play time. On a rainy day, why not draw a rough donkey on a large sheet of wrapping paper? Using narrow strips of cloth and plain pins, play "Pin a Tail on the Donkey." Each child in turn is blind-folded before he attempts to put the tail on the right place. This is such good fun it need not be kept just for a party! A potato relay race, a peanut hunt, a paper pie-plate running race, where each child is given two pie-plates and must place each foot on one of these instead of on the ground, are all very exciting.

Children love games but a small child's interest span is short. Ten or fifteen minutes is a long enough game period for most youngsters. Certain games lying down help them flatten their backs and pull in their abdomens. If there are two or three children in the family who can all have exercises and games at the same time, this helps to keep up their interest.

Let them pretend they are "Elastic Men" stretching arms and legs in difficult directions! Another plan is to be Paper Dolls pasted on the floor. A mother may be quite surprised to discover how expertly a child can pedal a bicycle, lying flat on the floor, hands above the head, chin drawn in and feet pedalling in the air!

There are many old favorites like "Run Sheep Run," or "I Spy!" or "Hop Scotch" which children quickly teach each other in every community. Many new games are just variations of old ones which have proved their value. For example, "Sardines" is a kind of Hide and Seek.

In "Sardines", only one child hides and after two minutes all the other children scatter and search for the hidden one. When a child finds the one who is hidden, he crouches down beside him. Then when the next child finds the two who are hiding, he also crouches down until finally, all the children except one are hiding. The last one, who has been unsuccessful in the search, becomes the one who is the "Hider" on the next turn.

But variety is the spice of life and it is natural for children to ask their parents for some fresh play ideas. Every family should have at least one good book of games such as the "Handy" booklets of Social Recreation edited by Lynn Rohrbough or one of Edna Geister's books such as "Let's Play" or the "Fun Book" on its shelf.

A scrapbook of games or a folder or a large envelope for games clippings, if added to regularly, is invaluable. Many magazines publish ideas for party games or a quiz and if these are not kept at the time they appear it is often difficult to locate them later. Perhaps one member of the family might take over the job of compiling this play material or it might be a family project. The librarian at the public library and the physical training teacher at school are always glad to show a boy or girl where to look for games information.

It is a good idea to have an index for a Games Scrap Book so that Games for Parties and for special seasonal events such as Hallowe'en can be found quickly. Choose whatever headings seem most useful such as Indoor Games and Outdoor Games, "Mixers" or Games to get Partners; Dramatic Games (such as Charades); Pencil and Paper games (such as a quiz). Games needing special equipment (such as a Paper Chase.)

Long week-ends and vacation time with more leisure provide opportunities to try new games and invent some of your own. Vigorous fun out of doors is a wodnerful aid to good health—for parents as well as children. Start on your own family's Games Book and try out new ideas. Remember "Play is a child's work!"

Yes, since I installed my new fully automatic Panama furnace, I actually like to impress my visitors, because the handsome Panama is one of Canada's smartest and most efficient furnace for smaller homes. Completely enclosed in an ocean green casing, it fits snugly into a corner, does not detract from basement furnishings. Gets the last possible bit of heat out of your fuel and almost never needs attention. Automatically it humidifies the air. The Panama is precision manufactured by Smart's, makers of heating equipment for over a century, so it ought to be good. But examine it yourself at your local Smart's dealer, now.

How YOU Can Help

When electric service is interrupted be SURE to turn off the heavy appliances such as ranges, water heaters, other heating devices and motors.

Otherwise, when service can be restored, an exceptionally heavy load is put on the system which sometimes causes the circuit to open again.

Leave at least one light on so you will know when service is restored. As soon as the light comes on you can turn your appliances on again without further delay. It only requires a few seconds of light load to enable the power houses to get back to normal.

By reducing the load to a minimum you can help to restore service promptly.

Help us and also help yourself by making SURE that all heavy appliances are turned off when service is interrupted.

Local Responsibility for Civil Defence

(Twenty-second of series of 24 articles)

Health Minister Martin, the federal cabinet minister responsible to Parliament for Canada's civil defence, has said that what a community does for itself provides the surest protection for its citizens.

Referring to the responsibility of all public officials, federal, provincial and municipal, he added:

"We can make no mistake in providing reasonable protection for our families, our fellow-citizens and ourselves against the death and destruction of a possible enemy attack.

"In future years — if in our lifetime such a calamity should ever come to our homeland — we will all want to look back with a clear conscience on the way in which, as servants of the Canadian people, we honored our responsibilities to them."

In any community, town, village or hamlet, the responsibility for civil defence falls primarily to the mayor, reeve, or other local government authorities.

The importance of leadership by public officials, says F. F. Worthington, Federal Civil Defence Coordinator, is vital.

"In those provinces that have endorsed civil defence and set up an operating staff, the progress has been phenomenally good.

"Likewise in those communities where the mayor and his council have endorsed civil defence, progress has also been good."

The federal government can provide financial assistance, training and a plan. The provincial government can supplement these and help pass them down to the local level. But from there, the success or failure depends entirely on the community leaders.

If a community has a well-organized civil defence setup, the mayor or reeve and the councillors deserve a good deal of credit. But on the other side of the picture, they also must be prepared to shoulder the responsibility of failure to protect their fellow townsmen should disaster catch the community unprepared.

The federal government cannot step into communities where municipal officials have negotiated this responsibility. Neither can the province. For Canada's constitution carefully protects the rights of each level of government.

It is just this careful delineation of rights that throws the final responsibility for civil defence preparedness on the municipal government. It is only at that level that measures for the protection of every member of community can be properly put into effect.

Every right or privilege bestowed on a government or, for that matter, on an individual automatically requires the responsibility that such a right or privilege be fulfilled and not abused or neglected.

For the right to run its own affairs, the municipal government, therefore, must accept the responsibility of running them in the best interests of its citizens.

Since the state of world politics today has thrust civil defence on every individual in every western country, not only Canada, it cannot be set up effectively to protect every community unless the public officials of every community are prepared to take an active part in it.

FISH MORTALITY

Quebec (CP) — Biologists are trying to discover the reason why so many dead fish have been found along both shores of the St. Lawrence river — between Montreal and Neuville — this year.

Dr. V. D. Vladykov, director of the provincial Game and Fisheries Department biology centre here, suggested the St. Lawrence Seaway may be in part responsible, in view of the great quantity of cement certain currents can transport.

Two changes Harry Shoubridge is glad to see

"The modern food store is a shopper's paradise," says food store owner Harry Shoubridge. "Self-service has made buying quicker and easier. New departments, such as frozen foods, have brought a wider choice of products. Package designs, store arrangements and lighting have all been modernized and vastly improved."

Another change benefits Mr. Shoubridge and his family in a personal way. Nowadays it's easier to provide financial security for families because life insurance policies are much more flexible. Never before has the range of policies and plans been so wide.

Life insurance representatives, too, are trained to give more competent service in the selection of plans to meet individual family needs. Today, through life insurance, ready funds are provided for emergencies, for education, for safeguarding your home, for your business and for your retirement.

In these and other ways, the life insurance companies in Canada are in step with progress . . . bringing benefits to people in all walks of life!

THE LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES IN CANADA

Life insurance payments to Canadians totalled more than $300 million last year and $200 million of these payments were made to living policyholders.

Thanks to your company today I am a home owner. It is with pleasure that I repay my loan."

"HFC helps those who want to help themselves. Each time I meet a friend who needs a loan, I recommend HFC because I was helped. Also I learned to start my budget, and this was very important. Once more, thank you; I remain a satisfied and happy customer."*

How HFC helps keep the Canadian family a going concern

HFC's business—our only business—is providing cash loans to help families over temporary money problems.

Today HFC is serving more than 475,000 Canadian families. Banks and credit unions simply cannot accommodate such a time-consuming volume of small loan customers. If there were no consumer loan companies like Household Finance, the average family with a real need for money would be hard put to find prompt help.

This is the essential service HFC and the consumer loan industry provide to hundreds of thousands of people every year . . . a breathing spell to give the family a chance to get back on its financial feet. Repayment terms are well within the family income because HFC instalments average less than 8% of the family income. Practical advice is freely given. Needless borrowing is discouraged.

It is extremely unlikely that so many thoughtful men and women would put their confidence in us, unless we provided to their satisfaction a service that helps keep the Canadian family a going concern.

Garden-Graph

Textured stone for garden walks is often hard to get and expensive, too. Cut flagstone is the more economical and can be made interesting, as well as practical, by the use of informal patterns.

Two such patterns are shown in the accompanying Garden-Graph. When the crazy pattern is used, small perennial plants can be introduced at intervals to add interest. Plants suitable for this purpose include the saxifrages (red, pink and yellow), thyme, pinks, Sedum acre, arenaria and cotula squalido. This type of walk should be used only with an informal type of house of either colonial or English architecture.

An informal flagstone walk, such as shown in the Garden-Graph, can be laid upon a foundation of cinders, gravel, slag or other porous material, with a layer of sand, aproximately one and one-half inches thick, as a cushion for the flagstone. The turf joints between the stones should be about one to one and a half inches wide, and should not in any case exceed three inches in width.

Apart from material and size, the chief point is to remember that a path should serve some useful purpose. It should lead somewhere. Often paths in gardens appear to lead nowhere. To void the purposeless appearance of such a path, it is only necessary to place a sundial or bird bath at the extreme end, thus giving a finish to the feature.

When planning a straight walk, mark it off with stake and string. If a curved walk is being planned, use a hose instead of stake and string, for the hose is flexible and can be moved about until the desired curve is attained.

OUT ON A LIMB

By Stumpy McCulloch

"Old feller," said the travelling salesman to Ol' Jake, the cab driver, "Why in heck did they put this train depot so far from town?"

"Wal, I dunno," said Ol' Jake, scratchin' his head, "unless it was 'cause they wanted to get the depot jest as close as possible to the railroad."

I was readin' the other day about the biggest fire department in the world, which is run by the Department of Lands and Forests back in Ontario to protect the province's 223,000 square miles of forest land. They don't have no fire pole to slide down, but they have just about everything else: 2,000 full-time rangers, 44 planes, 1,600 boats and canoes, 800 trucks and tractors, 20 railroad tank cars, three million feet of hose, 20,000 axes and shovels, and a 700-unit radio network.

These Canadian firefighters have a big job, I reckon. Last year they put out nearly 2,300 fires! The worst one, in the Admiral Lake area, burned 69,000 acres of timber. It took 2,132 plane flights and 660 men to put it out—but even then it left a black scar 20 miles long and five miles wide! They don't know for sure how it started. But they think it was probably caused by some feller who got careless. That's how most forest fires get started, you know.

• • •

By the way, Ol' Hannibal tells me the only thing he knows of that's fireproof is the boss's son!

• • •

Over in Wisconsin, U.S.A. I hear, there are now about 275 school forests, where schools raise timber and teach the principles of forestry. The school at Merrill, Wis., for instance, has a 732-acre tract, where the youngsters are learnin' to be tomorrow's tree farmers! And someday, profits from the school forest will pay for Merrill's textbooks!

• • •

"I hear you're startin' to raise bees," I told Ol' Ezry.

"Yep," Ezry said. "I don't want to miss nothin' — and I've been stung every other way!"

See you soon!

Here's what Imperial does with its money

Of every dollar Imperial Oil took in last year, more than half went to buy raw materials, such as crude oil.

Operating and administrative costs, depreciation, and the wages of Imperial's 13,500 employees took about a quarter.

Just over a tenth went in taxes, not including the road taxes in the various provinces.

Just under nine cents was Imperial's "profit" of which five cents was re-invested in the business.

So, of every dollar Imperial took in last year, just over four cents went in dividends to the company's 45,000 shareholders.

Have You A Question on UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE OR EMPLOYMENT?

In this column we publish questions about unemployment insurance and employment, together with answers received from the Unemployment Insurance Commission.

If you are uncertain about any point do not hesitate to send your question to your district Unemployment Insurance office. We will obtain an answer and publish it in this column.

Q. Do I have to pay unemployment insurance if I work for a few weeks at an agricultural exhibition?

A. If you do not ordinarily depend for your livelihood on insurable employment — for example, if you are self-employed or a student or housewife — you are entitled to a voluntary exception in respect of your employment at an agricultural exhibition, if it is for a period not exceeding thirty consecutive days. To become non-insurable on this basis, you must lodge with your employer at the exhibition a declaration in writing that your livelihood is not ordinarily derived from insurable employment, on a form supplied by the Commission and called "Declaration of Inconsiderable Employment." However, if your ordinary employment is insurable you must be insured while working at the exhibition also and you are not entitled to obtain exception by lodging the Declaration of Inconsiderable Employment. If your employment at the exhibition is for more than 30 days, you must be insured regardless of your ordinary occupation.

Q. I am paid a low rate of wages but receive a fairly large sum in tips each week. My benefit is based on my wage rate only and is therefore very low. May I not contribute and receive benefits on the combined rate of wages and tips?

A. Yes, if you and your employer agree to regard such tips as part of your wages under your contract of employment and work out a satisfactory way of reckoning your total earnings so as to determine the correct class of contributions payable.

* * *

Q. I am moving to the U.S.A. Can I get a rebate on my insurance book?

A. No. However, under an agreement between the United States and Canada, to which nearly all the states have subscribed, you may have a claim for benefit taken by the U.S. office in your locality should you become unemployed in the United States, and you may be paid any benefit for which you qualify under the Canadian Unemployment Insurance Act.

There were 56,922 cases of measles reported to Canadian health officers in 1955, 20,000 more than in the previous year.

Canadian Sovereignty

The question of maintaining Canada's sovereignty in the north was raised last week during Commons study of estimates of the Northern Affairs Department. Douglas Harkness, Progressive Conservative member for Calgary North, suggested there should be a Canadian officer at every one of the 50-odd DEW (Distant Early Warning) radar line posts to maintain national sovereignty in the Arctic.

He said many Canadians are wondering to what extent Canadian rights in the north have been lost and what steps the Canadian government is taking to ensure that Canadian control is restored.

The government has said it plans to appoint northern service officers at some of the main stations of the line, being built by the Americans, but to be 80-per-cent manned by Canadians.

Power From Tides

The Canadian and United States governments have instructed the International Joint Commission to make a three-year study of the feasibility of harnessing the giant tides that sweep into Passamaquoddy Bay on the New Brunswick-Maine border. It is to start immediately.

Canada agreed to spend up to $300,000 and the U.S. up to $3,000,000 to find out whether the 30-year-old power proposal could produce power and to foresee its possible effects on the area's rich herring fisheries.

Estimated cost of the project was $100,000,000 in 1926 when an American engineer, Dexter P. Cooper, set up companies in both countries to dam the bay and harness the flowing tides. He lost his Canadian charter three years later with nothing accomplished. No official estimate of cost has been made since then but it likely would be many times higher now.

Unemployment Insurance For Fishermen

Canada's 72,000 employed and self-employed fishermen may be eligible for unemployment insurance by the end of 1957. Labor Minister Gregg notified the Commons a government resolution forecasting legislation to bring fishermen and other self-employed persons under the Unemployment Insurance Act.

The resolution also proposes an amendment to the Unemployment Insurance Act to requalify workers who became ineligible for benefits when the Act was revised last year.

The bill forecasts the first move by government to extend the provisions of the Act to self-employed persons. It likely will result in demands for coverage from other self-employed Canadians, including farmers and loggers.

Wary of Russia

The first External Affairs debate of the current Commons session ended with all parties unanimous on one point: Beware of Russian smiles. That was the general reaction to the question uppermost in members' minds — what is the meaning of new Russian tactics?

External Affairs Minister Pearson said the vital question is whether Moscow is still willing and anxious to assist any and every foreign communist party in its revolutionary plans. He said the test of Soviet sincerity is for them to demonstrate "that they are not concerned now with international revolution."

"We have no assurance on this score in this country or in other countries," he added. "Nor have we any reason to believe . . . that they have abandoned or weakened in any respect what has been for some years now the primary objective of the Soviet policy, the weakening and destruction of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization."

John Diefenbaker, Progressive Conservative External Affairs spokesman, said the ideological conclusion by the new Russian leaders indicates a mental change but there is nothing to indicate a change of heart or destination in Soviet policy.

Alistair Stewart (CCF—Winnipeg North) said he believes the Russian changes have meant a certain slackening of tension but he retained a healthy degree of skepticism. Russia was prevailing at the moment in the battle of ideas though the Soviet was the world's greatest colonial power and while talking of peace gave arms to Egypt.

A. B. Patterson (SC—Fraser Valley) said he is not prepared to accept talk that Communism's iron grip has relaxed.

Super Drugstore Opening Today Boosts Main Street Modernization

Main Street is undergoing such a progressive transformation these days, that a home-towner returning after a few years' absence is sometimes at a loss to visualize the old familiar buildings, which have since been renovated or replaced to keep pace with modern times.

In steady succession, stores have been recently made over and facelifted — the present Malaket & Fils establishments, Monica, A & P Supermarket, and the Caisse Populaire, among others; not to mention the fine new post-office building, also the Guy Belanger structure and T. McOuat & Son store, now in progress.

Latest addition to this Main Street evolution is the new Beaton Pharmacy, which officially opens its doors tomorrow on the site of the ancient Campbell block, between Dansereau Stores and the Provincial Bank. This ambitious and modern drugstore, excelled in only a few towns of this size, is directly due to the initiative of Donat Saulnier, a young pharmacist and energetic businessman. Resident only two years in this community, Mr. Saulnier was quick to see the need and possibilities of a complete, up-to-date drugstore. He purchased the old business site next to his present store, prepared plans and raised the necessary capital — personally supervising the construction, which today is a credit to the town and its promoter.

The official opening, with attractions advertised for all customers, will be celebrated this Friday and Saturday. Visitors to the store will find the premises airy and well lighted, and counters offering departures in modern merchandising, from automatic service to personalized attention. The dispensary is equipped with refrigerated storage for vaccines, serums and antibiotics, permitting immediate service on even rare prescriptions. Within handy reach are veterinary, pharmaceutical and beauty products, patent medicines and novelties, while the store is well stocked in its exclusive lines of Laura Secord, Revlon, Rexall and Canadian Kodak. Special departments include baby and nursery requisites; newspapers and magazines; greeting cards; beach and vacation needs; men's toiletries; with a heated dispenser for cashews, etc.; ice cream freezer; and other devices for sales efficiency.

The staff of the new store includes three registered druggists and five clerks, both male and female.

"Argenteuil Art Association" Formed, Inaugural Meeting Held at Carillon

An informal but expeditious meeting last Saturday afternoon resulted in the organizing of a group to be known as the Argenteuil Art Association. This development has been discussed for some time, and is the logical outcome of a growing Art consciousness in this county and surroundings. Its culmination is due directly to the efforts of Miss Letitia Wales, of St. Andrews, and Miss G. Paige Pinneo, of Carillon and Montreal — the latter extending the hospitality of her home, "Pegmaur", on the Ottawa River, to those interested in inaugurating this movement.

There were over 20 present, representing St. Andrews, Carillon, Lachute, Brownsburg and Morin Heights. Miss Pinneo outlined the purpose of the meeting, namely the proposed organization of an Art group; and the idea appearing unanimously favored, officers were elected as follows:

President, A. G. Talbot, Brownsburg; secretary-treasurer, Miss L. Harrison, Lachute; assistant, Fraser Robertson, St. Andrews East.

Regional executive: Lachute, T. D. Titman; Morin Heights, Mrs. W. H. Green; St. Andrews, Major Stuart Forbes; Brownsburg, Mrs. F. S. Kettyle; Carillon, Miss Pinneo.

The charter membership fee was set at $2, and ordinary membership at $1 per annum.

Mr. Talbot, as chairman-elect, outlined tentative aims of the organization, which were discussed and recorded as follows:

To foster amateur arts and crafts, and co-ordinate the interests of groups and enthusiasts in this vicinity.

To arrange for exhibitions of amateur and professional works.

To obtain films and examples of Art for presentation at meetings.

To bring to members the benefits of organized lessons and competent criticism.

To negotiate with the Argenteuil Historical Society for the greater promotion of Art through the Carillon Museum.

In conclusion Mr. Talbot voiced general appreciation of the amateur Art fraternity to the Misses Wales, who, with ladies of St. Andrews United Church, had sponsored the first amateur Art exhibition in this county. It was evident that the success of this recent show had given impetus to the local movement, and had been a deciding factor in efforts towards the organization.

Refreshments were served by Miss Pinneo, as hostess to this fruitful gathering.

Service Station Operator Helps Kiwanis Club

A former resident here, Gerald MacAdam, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ross MacAdam, Lachute, who operates a service station in Greenfield, Mass., recently witnessed the dealer's dream of a steady stream of cars driving into his station.

For three days Gerald turned over his service station to the local Kiwanis Club to benefit their Mental Health Fund drive. Kiwanians of any and every occupation manned the station, including a bank president, undertaker, newspaper manager, and surgeon.

The project netted over $800 for the fund drive, with 11,500 gallons of Shell gasoline sold. Tickets were sold two weeks prior to the take-over of the station for both gasoline ($2 ticket) and wash jobs $1.

Autos lined up for two blocks to await their turn at hose and pump, and even oil trucks from other companies pulled in to use their tickets. To add an extra fillip to the drive, Kiwanians offered various prizes to customers each day of the campaign. More than 1,500 motorists participated in the campaign.

Arundel Next To Aid CNIB, Campaign Aug. 20

Arundel Village Council, at its monthly meeting held August 8 under chairmanship of Hugh Boyd, pro-Mayor, decided on a financial campaign to be organized immediately on behalf of the CNIB, to carry out the program of this organization in the County of Argenteuil. The councillors felt they should support an organization for the blind which is active in their community. Since the Institute has an office in the County of Argenteuil, and a staff to administer the work, the council agreed that the Institute deserved support in trying to eliminate blindness and take care of those needing assistance.

The CNIB representative here, Mr. A. C. Zaplaski, was told that a drive will be held in Arundel commencing this Monday, August 20. The following have agreed to promote the appeal: the pro-mayor, Mr. Hugh Boyd, will be financial chairman for the area, while captains for each district are as follows — R.R. 1, Mr. A. Scott and Mr, H. McMahon; R.R. 2, Mr. Frank Craig; R.R. 3, Mr. Earl Gray; Village of Arundel, Mr. Pecy Staniforth.

It is a great satisfaction to know that the person calling at your door asking for help on behalf of the Institute, is a person known to you. It is satisfying to know how much money your community has raised, where it is going, and how it is going to be spent. You are urged to be as generous as possible, also to give your canvasser any information that may be helpful to combat blindness in your district.

Sentences Follow Traffic Charges

Justice Côté to Stiffen Punishment for Impaired Driving

Lucien Sauvé, 26, of Hawkesbury, was fined $100 plus costs, his driver's permit being suspended for a six-month period, when he pleaded guilty to a charge of impaired driving laid by Det. Ralph Allen. Sauvé was arrested August 4 by Traffic Officer Albert Legault following three accidents in the Grenville area.

According to Det. Ralph Allen, Sauvé backed his car out of a Grenville hotel yard, where he hit another car, causing slight damage. He drove along Main Street, collided with another auto, causing approximately $300 damage, and finally hit the Interprovincial Bridge. His own car suffered considerable damage.

In sentencing Sauvé, Judge Omer Coté pointed out that he had recently "increased sentences from a $50 fine plus costs and three months suspension, to $100 plus costs and six months suspension, and if this still does not prevent these numerous charges of impaired driving, the next step will be prison." Sauvé, who has a part-time residence in Quebec, possesses a driver's permit from this province and it was for this reason that the suspension was put into effect.

Leon A. Larabie, 21, of Ottawa, was sentenced to a term of five days in jail, plus court costs, when convicted of a charge of hit-and-run.

Larabie was arrested by the Hull Provincial Police and charged with hit-and-run in connection with an accident August 5 in Pte-au-Chene. He was convicted of having struck a Montreal car causing an estimated $200 damage, and then failing to stop.

Paul Emile Leblanc and Bruce Racine, both of Brownsburg, were sentenced to a fine of $50 plus costs, the latter having the option of a month in jail, when they pleaded guilty to charges of speeding laid by local Traffic Officers.

Det. Allen reports the week-end was quiet in this district, with no serious accidents reported. However, Traffic Officers Loyer and Perrier handed out a total of 14 tickets for various infractions; the offenders will appear in St. Jerome court shortly.

Mrs. W. Cottingham Officiates at W.I. Handicraft Fair

Successful Event Held at Brownsburg

The Brownsburg Women's Institute were honored last Wednesday by having Mrs. W. M. Cottingham officially open their annual Handicraft Fair, held in the Brownsburg Legion Hall. Mrs. Cottingham commended the members on their efforts and on their fine display of work. "Every woman should make use of her talents," she urged.

The articles going to the Ottawa Fair were on exhibit, as were those which had been shown at the recent Lachute Fair. Many other articles of handwork were on exhibit.

The Home Cooking table was in charge of 2nd vice-president, Mrs. Ward Monerieff. The tea tables were in charge of Mrs. Vary, Health and Welfare convener. Mrs. Jas. Low, Social convener was in charge of the kitchen. The sale of books was looked after by Miss MacPherson — the proceeds of the books to be used to buy new books for the school library.

Mrs. Lem Wilson had a novelty table. The miniature giadioli decorating the hall were donated by Mrs. Lem Wilson, honorary president. These were later sold by auction. Mrs. T. Zimmer, Publicity convener, had a display of antiques, which was much enjoyed by everyone, especially the old pictures.

Mrs. N. E. Smillie, Home Economics convener, had the responsibility and planning of this Fair.

Both Mrs. Smillie and the president, Mrs. M. Crosby, wish to take this opportunity to thank all; both friends and members, who helped make the venture as success.

Historical Society President Heard In CBC Interview

Last Friday during the Farm Broadcast on CBM, Mrs. Geo. McGibbon was heard in an interview with CBC Commentator George Atkins, of Toronto.

As president of the Argenteuil Historical Society, Mrs. McGibbon gave a brief outline of the formation of the Carillon Museum and referred to the exhibits of old farm machinery, ancient and cumbersome as compared with the modern and efficient equipment of today.

The Museum, which is becoming more and more interesting as items are added to its rare collection, draws a large attendance of local residents and visitors each summer season.

Manager Transferred

Roland Dupuy, manager of the local Bell Telephone Business Office for the past two years and an active member of the Lachute Lions Club, who last Thursday was notified of his transfer to Sherbrooke, where he has been promoted to District Office Supervisor. Mr. Dupuy will be replaced by R. R. Pearson, formerly of the Montreal Head Office. The transfer becomes effective September 17.

People's Church Acquires Old Residential Building

Purchase of Mrs. Stewart Campbell's property in the East End was finalized by the Lachute People's Church yesterday, according to representatives of that organization.

Present intentions are to use a portion of the building for services, the pastor's quarters to occupy the remainder of this spacious brick residence. Future plans include the erection of a church on the corner lot.

The local congregation is a member of the Associated Gospel Churches of Canada, and it is expected they will take possession of the building early this autumn.

Council Asks Authorization for Temporary Loan, Details Conditions on Bell Telephone Undertaking

Legal discussion between Fernand Legault, the Town Corporation's legal advisor, and Paul Robitaille, representing the Bell Telephone Company, occupied the best part of an hour at an adjourned meeting of Lachute Council, following the Public Meeting last Wednesday evening. Ald. Judes E. Charlebois was absent from this assembly, held under the chairmanship of Mayor Dr. F. Walter FitzGerald.

A letter from Roland Dupuy, Business Manager of the local office of Bell Telephone, presented the case of the company wishing to lay an underground conduit on Main Street from the vicinity of Barron's Bridge to Lowe Bros. Dairy, the work entailed taking approximately two and one half months.

Reasons for submerging the cable rather than having it strung overhead were given as follows: (a) To provide telephones for customers now awaiting service; (b) The line is less likely to cause trouble; (c) Cable on poles is unsightly. Company engineer Harris and the two other representatives brought out many points in answer to various questions, indicating that the suggested route was the only feasible one, and stating that the cable would be "in preparation of providing dial service."

"According to the company charter, we have the right to install such cables in municipalities, requiring only to obtain the consent of the municipality, concerned. In the event that the municipality does not approve the request or imposes conditions deemed not suitable, the company simply applies to the Federal Board of Transport for a ruling — and although this might take time, we have yet to lose a case," Mr. Robitaille stated in reply to a question asked by Mayor Dr. FitzGerald.

In closing the discussions, it was moved by Ald. Ross Muir, seconded by Ald. Mozart Carrière, "that the Town of Lachute accept the plans and specifications of the Bell Telephone Company of Canada and of the conditions mentioned in the letter of said company, dated August 3, 1956, for the proposed burying of a conduit to run along Main Street from Barron's Bridge to approximately Lowe Bros. Dairy, provided:

"1—That the Town assumes no further responsibility thereof;

"2—That the Company shall not hold the Town responsibile in cases of damages to said conduit, except in case of gross negligence.

"3—That the Company assumes the cost and expenses in protecting its conduit in case the Town should be obliged to repair or rebuild its streets or sidewalks or water or sewerage systems, or for any other municipal wok.

"4—That any damage to the streets or sidewalks done by the Company for further work on the said conduit shall be borne by the Company and remedied immediately. Procedure on this work by the Company shall be considered an acceptance of this resolution; and that a letter be sent to the Company informing them of this effect."

A motion was passed to request the Municipal Commission to authorize a temporary loan from the Bank of Nova Scotia, amounting to $85,000, to be reimbursed by the sale of bonds obtained through the recent passing of By-law 202, and at the same time requesting authorization to sell the said bonds over the counter at par plus interest not exceeding 4½ per cent.

Discussion was aired on the proposed bus stops on Main Street, several alterations being suggested. Mr. Roy, proprietor of the local auto bus line, requested permission to park 45 minutes at one of the bus stops, twice a day. "If this request is granted," stated Police Chief Trépanier, "By-law No. 182, which stipulates that no public passenger bus can park on Main Street for more than a 10-minute period, will have to be amended." It was decided to leave the request on the table until next meeting.

Mayor Jos. Bourbonnière of the Parish of St. Jerusalem, along with the parish secretary-treasurer, H. E. Carson, and Councillor Tom Dwyer, were in attendance at the meeting relative to their garbage disposal problem, as they had been informed by registered letter that the Parish would no longer be allowed to deposit garbage on the Lachute dump until such time as an agreement between the two councils had been made. Mayor Dr. FitzGerald suggested a fee to be worked out on a pro rata basis, which would mean the Parish of St. Jerusalem paying approximately one-fifth of the annual dump budget. This was agreed to in principle by the Parish representatives.

It was suggested that a committee be formed of representatives of Lachute, St. Jerusalem and Ayersville to reach some understanding on the dump facilities, and that until such time as an agreement is reached, the Parish of St. Jerusalem be permitted to dispose of their garbage at the Lachute site, payment to be retroactive to July 1.

Ald. Alcidas Laurin was named pro-mayor for the next three months.

Mr. Elie Cyr was in attendance at the meeting and lodged a complaints as to the noise during the early morning hours in the vicinity around the intersection Main and Grace Streets (west). Chief Trépanier reported he had investigated some 20 complaints within the past month, and he believed that the only solution was to close up the chip-potato wagon at an earlier hour. Following other suggestions on this subject, the matter was turned over to the Police Committee and the meeting adjourned.

Hawkesbury Relieved Of Provincial Tutelage

The Ontario Department of Municipal Affairs has offered to lift its supervision of the Town of Hawkesbury, and of Windsor's suburban areas.

In Toronto, K. G. Crawford, Deputy Minister of Municipal Affairs, said the department's move to lift supervision of suburban areas also would include Hawkesbury, in the Lower Ottawa Valley.

Hawkesbury and the Windsor suburbs are the only ones still under the department's jurisdiction.

On Harbour Bridge Traffic-Flow Scheme

It is understood that Percy Carpenter of Dominion Bridge Company, a former townsman here, will shortly be in active charge of a traffic-way scheme at Jacques Cartier Bridge in connection with the Seaway construction. The scheme is an intricate plan to allow passage of traffic without interruption, made possible by the use of Bailey Spans on the south approach to the bridge.

Monthly Meeting of B'burg Council Has Full Agenda of Civic Affairs

(Our District Correspondent)

Brownsburg — First item of business discussed at Brownsburg Council was the "old reliable" — the sewerage system at Woodbine and Main Streets. Finally, most of the obstacles have been removed. The last two problems will be settled this week. Messrs. MacVicar have asked $2,000 for the right-of-way through their land and the purchase of the existing 8-inch line from the Wartime development. The line, 52 feet long, would provide a net gain of about 400 feet, and the councillors felt that $2,000 was quite a bit more than the 400 feet is worth. They hope to have a better price by next week, and in the meantime negotiations will be made to arrange a loan for the required amount.

Mr. Gaston Legault, who drew the plans for the project, estimated the cost at $12,875, and when told of the deal with Messrs. MacVicar, changed the estimate to $14,875. His fee is 2% of his estimate. Mayor D. Lepine and several of the councillors believe this estimate to be about $3,000 too high, and hinted that, although they liked to favor Brownsburgers they had received a better deal before from Mr. Paul Laliberté, of Lachute.

A motion was passed to install pipes and re-instate Mr. Omer Giroux' lot as it was before work on a sewer marred the property.

Police Chief Willie Lepine reported answering 17 calls, collecting tax returns at the movie houses, and issuing five tickets in six weeks — three for speeding and two for traffic light violations.

The Chief pointed out that when tenders were called for his job it was stated that a car was not necessary. He recently purchased a new car and he asked for $10 a week to use his car on duty. He was granted this request — $520 a year — by unanimous approval of a motion by Coun. Ernest Lavoie, seconded by Coun. René Lafleur.

In contrast to the ease of obtaining this fairly large increase in salary, it is noted that, while not one dissenting voice was heard on this expenditure, it was only after considerable debate that Council decided to give two weeks' holiday to the municipal employees. It was stipulated that this concession would apply only to employees of over five years' service.

Fire Chief Arthur Robbins was pleased to report that there were no fires since the previous meeting. He asked for 200 feet of ¾-inch rope for the chimney-cleaning operation, which he intends to start on Tuesday, September 4. He reported that there were a few chimneys which were very difficult to clean. He said since these chimneys were the new pre-fabricated kind, and had a fine reputation, he intended to leave them uncleaned.

A motion was passed accepting the most recent property roll and recommending that the evaluators be reinstated for the next evaluation.

In the correspondence department, a cheque for $459 for road maintenance last winter was received. A letter from Bell Telephone Company stated that they were willing and ready to move the telephone pole in front of Mr. Dagenais' house. A motion was passed giving a $10 donation to the Salvation Army and a request for reduced water rates for Mr. Claude Nadon was granted. On account of his buying and digging his own line, he will pay a flat rate of $12 a year for five years.

Coun. Stan Harris (Water and Sewerage Committee) said he was worried about the sewer on Maple Avenue North, which was badly blocked with roots. He suggested

Shoplifter Gets Month in Jail

Théodore Menard, 40, of Ayersville, was arrested by Lieut. Oscar Saubourin of the Lachute Police squad last Friday and charged with the theft of clothing from John McFaul & Son, Esquire Shop and the R.A. Beamish Store. The case was transferred to Det. Ralph Allen, of the Provincial Police, and on Tuesday Menard was sentenced to a month in jail, when he appeared before Judge Omer Cote, in St. Jerome.

Menard admitted stealing at least $375 worth of clothing, of which some $200 worth was recovered by Lieut. Sabourin and Cst. Marcel Therrien. Clothing stolen and recovered included pants, shirts, sweaters, stockings and other wearing apparel.

Old Picture, Old Memories Revived, as Veteran Fire Chief Presses Resignation

Seen above is Fire Chief George Y. Deacon, photographed some time ago with an exhibit which now ranks among the antiques of this community. Housed in the fire station with its more modern counterparts, and unknown to many of the present generation, this old hand-pump was the local fire crew's original equipment when Chief Deacon organized the brigade more than 38 years ago. The ornate craft was drawn by a horse or team. The pump was hand-operated by a crew of a dozen men, which in those days composed the brigade.

The fire brigade acquired a Ford 1-ton truck in 1923 largely at their own expense, and built a fire body on the chassis to their own specifications, with the pump mounted on the radiator. Later this conveyance was equipped with a "Ruckstel Axle", predecessor of the present-day reduction gear. This outfit, with an additional hose wagon, served the fire department until the addition of the present Bickel pumper in 1934, at which time the Ford truck was relegated to secondary or auxiliary uses. In 1953, this was replaced by a 1948 Ford truck, re-equipped, which is still in use.

With an enviable record of minimizing local fire losses, Chief Geo. Y. Deacon last Friday tendered his resignation, to become effective October 31, following 38 years of loyal service at the helm of the fire department. Chief Deacon is also seen here beside the intricate controls of the present fire engine. The brigade today includes 22 men, still on a volunteer basis, and among the personnel are Chief Deacon's two sons, Harold and George, Jr., with several veteran employees of his shop and garage.

Chief Deacon first tendered his resignation in March, 1953, but at this time no date was set, and his resignation was not accepted by council.

Farm Service

Electricity has brought new living standards to rural folk, lower production costs and greater physical output.

Farms now have electricity available to them to help milk cows, separate and cool milk, feed and water stock and poultry, grind feed, and power for such farm tools as drills, lathes and grinders.

In the farm homes, too, electricity helps to relieve wash-day drudgery, with the greater convenience of electric ranges, washing machines and ironers, while the problem of proper food storage is solved by the services of refrigerators and home-freezers.

With the ever decreasing supply of good competent farm labor, the electric motor has become more and more the farmer's hired man, and the increased comforts and conveniences now possible by the use of electricity are important factors in keeping younger people on the farm.

This company now serves over 8,600 farms, and its ever growing rural power load reflects the additional use on the farms of mankind's Most Valuable Servant.

Silage Feeding, Effect On Milk Quality

Taint or off-flavor of milk from cows fed grass silage need not be a problem if proper precautions are taken with the feeding procedure.

V. S. Logan of the Animal Husbandry Division at Ottawa, reports that silage should be fed immediately after milking to produce the best flavored milk.

Precautions should be taken to ensure that silage is not left in the barn while the cows are being milked. Milk if exposed to silage will absorb some of the taint flavor.

Results of a survey indicated that cheese made from the milk produced from cows fed grass silage was at least equal in quality to that produced when rations containing no silage were fed.

Grass silage in the ration of dairy cattle increases the carotene and vitamin A content of the milk. Well cured silage has produced winter butter with a yellow color and vitamin A potency approaching that of summer butter.

Contrary to some opinions experimental evidence indicates that grass silage feeding does not cause mastitis in dairy herds.

Hybrid Corn Of the Future

The development of hybrid corn has opened up a new era in corn production. F. Dimmock of the Central Experimental Farm in Ottawa reports that since 1938, when the first few acres of hybrid corn were grown in Canada, there has been almost a complete transition from open-pollinated to hybrid varieties. Hybrids were found to be more productive, more uniform, more resistant to lodging and disease, more tolerant to corn borer infestation and more widely adapted.

The area in which grain corn could be grown successfully has been extended by early maturing hybrids to the extent that grain corn production in Ontario in 1955 was 100,000 acres greater than in any previous year. The average yield of 62.1 bushels per acre obtained from this acreage was the highest in the history of the crop. Hybrid corn has fully justified its great popularity.

The use of present day hybrids has resulted in many improvements and further advances can be expected from the development of future hybrids. They will probably show certain improvements such as still higher yield, greater resistance to such diseases as stalk and root-rot, greater tolerance or resistance to insects such as the European corn borer and earworm, more efficient use of fertilizers and resistance to low temperatures in the spring. In addition we may expect still earlier maturity, higher protein content, better protein quality and increased percentage of oil.

When considering the overall picture of the corn crop these improvements will assume considerable importance, and contribute to the increased value of the crop for many purposes. The development of new hybrids with all these characteristics will not all come at once but plant breeders hope to eventually reach this objective.

Family Safety Break

Dad the Driver introduces the family to the coffee break now as popular on the highway as in the office and factory. Youngsters use the break to stretch their restless limbs and Dad finds that it keeps him alert at the wheel. Cost of Living Index Hits New High, Tighter Money Seen Inflation Check

THE WEEK IN OTTAWA

By Roy LaBerge, Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Aug. 13 (CP) — Inflation warnings rumbled louder in the capital last week with the news that the Bank of Canada has increased its interest rate again. The increase — the fifth in 12 months — boosted to 3½ per cent the interest the bank charges on loans to chartered banks and security dealers on security of treasury bills or short-term bonds.

It had stood at three per cent before the latest increase in the series which began in August, 1955, when the rate was increased to two per cent from 1½.

While the banks do not borrow much from the central bank, the rate is regarded as an indication of stiffening money policies. The bank, as usual, gave no reason for the increase, but the announcement is generally regarded as a warning to industry to moderate investment plans as an anti-inflation measure.

Other Warnings

Bank Governor James E. Coyne said only a fortnight before that Canada's planned record investment program of $8,000,000,000 this year cannot be carried out without a substantial rise in costs.

Trade Minister Howe indicated concern in the Commons August 9 when he told John Blackmore Social Credit member for Lethbridge, that "the Government is doing all it can, through fiscal measures at the moment, to hold inflation in check." Mr. Blackmore had asked for government action to hold steel prices in check.

The Bureau of Statistic's consumer price index, which represents living costs, rose a week before the bank's action to a new post-war high of 118.5, up from 117.8 the previous month. The rise was almost entirely attributed to an increase of 1.7 per cent in food prices.

The government has adopted a non-committal attitude on repeated opposition demands in the Commons to ease its tight-money policy to increase the flow of mortgage funds into Canada's housing program.

Generals' Criticism

Two retired top Canadian army officers unleashed a sharp criticism of Canada's defences last week. Major-General W. H. S. Macklin, Adjutant-General of the Canadian Army from 1949 to 1955, charged at the 25th Couchiching Conference that Canadian defence policy is not, and never has been, based on any dispassionate, scientific study.

It was, he added, decided by internal political factors, and not military considerations. He added that Canada's military strength is below minimum essentials, and said that when Canada formed a brigade to join the Korean War many recruits were drawn from prisons.

Lt.-Gen. Guy Simonds, former chief of the army general staff, delivered the follow-up punch a few hours later, commenting on General Macklin's statements.

He said 7,000 of the 20,000 men recruited for the Korean brigade deserted. Another 3,000 were weeded out as unfit. He said he knew of no recruiting in prisons, but there were cases where magistrates had given persons convicted of minor crimes the choice of joining the army or taking a jail sentence. He added he was not criticizing the Brigade's part in the Korean war, once it got there. He had only praise for its actions.

Prime Minister St. Laurent, answering questions in the Commons, said he thought the general's statements were designed to induce the public to take a more serious view of the dangers all Canadians face in Canada, as elsewhere. There were differences of opinion among top officers as to the best means of defence.

"They would not be worthy of our confidences if they did not recommend what they feel necessary," he said. "But we can't do everything."

More Asian Immigration

Slight increases in Asian immigration to Canada are expected from new federal policies announced in the Commons by Citizenship Minister Pickersgill.

The government plans to allow more East Indians to Canada. The annual quota now is 150. No figure was mentioned as to the possible increase.

Regulations banning entry of Chinese fiancees of Chinese Canadians will be eased. Canadians, under present regulations, now must go to China to get married before their Chinese brides can enter Canada.

Opposition members lauded both steps, but criticized a restriction limiting cases of rejected Chinese immigrants to a single review. Mr. Pickersgill said review of old cases was a burden on his department's Hong Kong staff and holds up processing of new and more deserving applications for entry to Canada.

Harold Winch (CCF — Vancouver East) described the decision as "one of the most disgusting and disgraceful policies ever laid down in Parliament." Davie Fulton (PC — Kamloops) described it as "terrible."

Eyesight Care — Practical Aid Where It's Needed

"Good Vision, Good Health"

Almost every periodical and newspaper that we pick up carries an article or two on the health of human beings. Now and then — but very rarely — an item will discuss how to take care of your eyes, or what type of food one should eat to maintain healthy vision. These articles are to be highly commended, and the public are encouraged to read them and follow the prescribed diet sheets.

It is a known fact that the majority of people who suffer with very poor vision, or those totally blind, have other physical defects, such as anaemia, stomach ulcers, heart trouble, etc. These conditions are brought about by the fact that the patient is facing a formidable crisis in life. Up to that period, blindness was something that happened to others, but not to them, therefore, there was no rhyme or reason to worry or to fret over such a paltry condition; but ovenight, they have been deprived of sight and, with it, their health has been broken by unnecessary worry and fretting.

If the patient had known, his present plight could have been averted by knowledge. If a person has the slightest trouble with his eyes and is not being attended by an ophthalmologist, he should get in touch with the C.N.I.B. in his community for assistance. The patient will not have to pay one cent for this effort, and in turn it may save him his eyesight and his health.

In the County of Argenteuil, the C.N.I.B. has been established for the past five years, and it is gratifying to know that today their field secretary, Mr. A. C. Zaplaski, is happy to confer with anyone who has an "eye problem".

Naturally, the many services of the Institute have to be financed somehow, and one of the best ways to assist the Institute is to contribute to your local C.N.I.B. financial committee. The Institute is proud to announce that Argenteuil has almost completed the organizing of the entire county. Eye clinics are to be held in the following areas — Grenville, Lachute and Morin Heights; for full particulars, write direct to the Institute (Box 807, Lachute).

Dr. Eric Mongeon, chairman to the Advisory Board of the C.N.I.B. for Argenteuil, is very pleased to note that the district of Wentworth is organizing a campaign on behalf of the Institute, commencing August 15, headed by the Mayor, Clarence Neilh. Captains for the various areas are — Mr. B. R. Hunter for Dunany and Louisa; Mr. R. Bell for St. Michel; and Mr. U. Charland for the districts of Montford and Laurel — councillors of Wentworth. The municipal secretary, Mr. G. Sauvé, has been of tremendous help to Mr. Zaplaski in completing arrangements for this campaign.

Though the Institute needs a great deal of money to carry out its humanitarian work, and any specific drive may be considered a success, the real success of any drive on behalf of the Institute is a precise decline of blind cases in each area. . . Readers are therefore urged to keep up their financial help to the Institute and keep down the rate of blindness in their community.

When the canvasser calls in the district of Wentworth, please welcome him as a real friend, even if you cannot give in money; you may give him information that may save the sight of a neighbor or friend.

University Professors Attack Quebec Province Election Practices

By Brian Selwood

Quebec (CP) — A 4,000-word article attacking election practices in Quebec Province has been published by two prominent Laval University professors, both Roman Catholic priests.

The article appeared in Ad Usum Sacerdotum, a mimeographed monthly publication intended exclusively for Roman Catholic clergymen. In it the priests accused Quebec political parties of using Communism as a scarecrow; of buying votes, corrupting election officers, resorting to violence and using modern publicity methods to spread myths and lies systematically.

The authors were reported to be Rev. Gerard Dion, who heads Laval University's industrial relations department and Rev. Louis O'Neill, chaplain of the Catholic Action movement at the university.

The verbal attack was not aimed at any one Quebec political party in particular but mentioned the provincial election last June 20 and charged that clergymen and citizens had condoned the abuses.

The authors recommended formation of a "public morality league independent of all existing or future political parties" to educate the people of Quebec in civic morality.

They wrote that present Quebec election campaign methods were laying the groundwork for a "socialist" mentality in the province which would lead to acceptance of the idea that the state must figure in all social activities.

Reason given by the priests for publishing their study of the election was that the need for a program of moral and civic education among the Roman Catholic population of Quebec had become "urgent".

They wrote: "Work must get underway before demagogues and fascist apprentices bestialize the masses to the point that any improvement will become impossible."

Discussing the clergy's role in the situation, they said: "We are reaping what we have sown. Our sermons about morality, our morality campaigns have been aimed principally at sexual immorality, intemperance and blasphemy."

New Police Car — and Other Needs

RECENT EVENTS around the Town Council table indicate that stronger legs should be placed under that centre of deliberations. . .

At present, "tabled" for future action, are matters such as bus stops (there originally in 1953, and now back once more); $950 worth of fire-fighting equipment requested in February, 1954, and much of which is still lacking; limiting the number of taxi operators in Lachute; the purchase of a fire truck, and three sets of parking meters — not to mention other minor items and a few major needs, such as a trunk sewer on Main Street to the Fire Station (as requested by the Provincial Department of Health), Building and Zoning by-laws (October 1954), and the purchase of a police car.

Many of these items are important, some less important, but they remain unheeded on the table. It seems that many of the items have been "tabled" by the same aldermen, but whether this is just a matter of passing the buck to another Council (as past Councils have done to the present one) is open to surmise. However, some of these matters call loudly for attention — notably, the police car, and the fire-truck and equipment.

Many citizens may be wondering why there are still so many speeders travelling through Lachute. The fact is, that these offenders cannot be overtaken by a police car that will not exceed 50 miles an hour on level highway (and only this inadequate speed after gaining momentum). Driving even at this rate, taxes the driver's ability to keep control of the vehicle.

It is understood that several aldermen have refused to drive in this car to realize exactly the condition it is in. This seems to us, however, a case for immediate action, before an accident occurs during an emergency police call.

A Crucial Test

USE OF the conference table as opposed to the battlefield to settle international disputes will be given one of its sternest tests starting this week, as key representatives gather in London to try to break the deadlocked dispute over the Suez Canal.

Twenty-four countries were invited. All except Egypt, whose Premier Nasser touched off the critical dispute three weeks ago when he announced nationalization of the vital waterway, have accepted.

Britain and France, in calling the meeting, said it was hoped a method of international control could be worked out to ensure that the canal would remain free to all ships. How they hope to do this, will be intently observed as the conference gets under way. . . All peace-loving nations hope for the best from these deliberations.

Preserving Scenic Areas

IN A BIG country like Canada, with wide-open spaces, the need to preserve the countryside may not seem so urgent as it does in countries which have more people and less space.

But even in Canada, particularly adjacent to cities, the question of preserving beach and park areas has been arousing attention for some time. Often, city-dwellers out for a day or the week-end have found the river-side, lake or open country spaces of most attractiveness closed to casual visitors by private occupation or plain inaccessibility.

Public parks, charging a small admittance fee for upkeep of the area, help to preserve these amenities for the town worker.

Few countries are so densely populated, and so intensively cultivated, as Denmark, which has a population of more than 4,400,000 in an area of less than 17,000 square miles.

There they are marking the 50th anniversary of the founding of the Committee for the Preservation of the Countryside, which developed into a national movement. Everybody is in this campaign for protecting natural amenities — landowner and laborer, farmer and town-dweller.

With its long coastline, the sea-shore is a major feature in Denmark and one of the major tasks of the Danish movement has been to campaign for the freeing of as much of the shore as possible for public bathing.

Danish legislation, for instance, forbids building closer than about 300 feet from the normal highwater mark, to prevent the disfigurement of beauty spots by summer cottages.

Inland in Denmark, it is usually forbidden to build closer to the edge of a forest or woods than about 900 feet, although decisions are made in each individual case.

And peculiar to Denmark is a regulation which prohibits all out-door advertisements, except for "advertisements relating to trade or business carried on in the property on which the advertisement is placed."

The abundant prehistoric monuments — burial mounds, small sites, earthworks, small ruins — are completely protected. Farmers in Denmark actually have been prosecuted for plowing up ancient burial mounds.

The act is administered by a county preservation tribunal in each county, the chairman being one of the county judges. Decisions may be appealed to a superior tribunal, but preservation orders may not be referred to a general court of law. With popular support, the law has benefitted the whole nation.

As Previously Stated . . .

THE SUMMER highway toll imposes on newspaper editors an unwelcome duty to warn and rewarn. It offers no alternative but the device of repetition; we tire of the perennial theme, but we feel it is a "must".

This message in blunt phraseology, is handed on without apology; it comes from the bulletin of the Industrial Accident Prevention Association. While directed primarily to industrial operators, it is closely applicable to auto drivers. . .

"The odds are that a young fellow in good health will in time grow to be an old fellow in good health. The odds are that way, but every day people are killed or maimed, either on the job, on the highway or at home.

"A large life insurance company boasted in a newspaper ad recently, "We can't tell you WHO will die today, but we can tell you HOW MANY!" We are no soothsayers ourselves, we can't tell you the name of the next unfortunate victim, but we can tell you that, on the average, one worker is killed on the job every twenty-four hours. . .

"Your great-great-grandfather believed that accidents had to happen and nothing could be done to prevent them. Isn't it about time you smartened up and gave the lie to that old chestnut!

"It takes no brains to get killed. You can do it in a score of ways. In fact, 98% of all fatal injuries, although labelled 'accidental', are pretty much plain suicide. True you didn't intend to have an accident, but asked for it when you took a chance by doing some foolish thing. If someone else did it, you'd call him an idiot! What'll we call YOU?"

Consumer Trend

AN ANALYST speculates on the future trend in sales. . .

For the past ten years, the consumer market has apparently been dominated by the novice — the bride, the first-time parent, the new home-owner. Basically, it's fairly easy to see some of the needs of such a market: wedding rings, baby carriages, garbage cans, lawn-mowers.

But due to changes in population, says The Financial Post, the market is likely to change — not all at once, but gradually. The dominant figure will be the experienced housekeeper, who has time to shop, who's got many of the basic necessities and is looking for extras, whose husband is at his peak earning capacity, whose children's wants are varied (ranging from pianos to .22's) and who is no longer thrilled by the mere process of buying for her own home and family.

The male of the species may be less interested in doing-it-himself than he was ten years ago. He's not in such great need of basic household items, and he's discovering that life's too short to spend running from office desk to basement workbench.

"Brothers Under The Skin"

Running a summer camp for a group of children is no easy matter at the best of times. There are always a half dozen or so that weep buckets from the moment of arrival until they are packed off home on the last day. Then, there are those hapless souls who perpetually run afoul of rusty nails, ragged tin cans, poison ivy and baseball bats who have to undergo major repairs at the hands of the camp doctor. And there are, too, the counsellors who come to camp solely for the purpose of having a wonderful time and don't give two hoots about the campers in their charge.

The problems are even worse, however, when one undertakes duty in a camp that caters to all religions and all nationalities. Quite naturally, Czech teams with Czech and the Germans congregate with others from the Fatherland. Each nationality seeks out its own and one's ears become attuned to a veritable babel of conversation. Thus, getting campers adjusted to living with others of a different tongue and religion becomes a major undertaking for everybody on the staff.

Not long after our camp opened, I chanced to hear a very young lad of Negro origin berating another little fellow and screaming at the top of his lungs:

"You're nothing but a lousy German!"

Before the blood started to fly, I broke up the roughhouse and restored a modicum of order. Then I lectured the two severely and pointed out that in my books, at least, there was no distinction between one race or another. To some extent, my little sermon worked. By the time I got through, the two little battlers were solid friends and have remained so ever since.

When the opportunity presented itself, I mentioned the affair to the Camp Director and suggested that the Sunday service might be a good place to point up the brotherhood of men under the fatherhood of God. The Director agreed but when Sunday rolled around, the service of worship dwelt at length on children looking for flowers on mountain tops but said nothing about brotherhood. The following week was even worse. The service, drawn from a sweetly sentimental program compiled by some dear old mid-Victorian spinster, rambled on about a young Indian boy who set out to find the sunset. There was nary a word about brotherhood, or God.

When plans for this Sunday's service were planned, it was Bill who made the suggestion.

"It's time we came down from the misty hills and did some talking about God. We have all sorts and varities in camp and we ought to design a service to suit everyone. I can't see any of this mushy philosophy we're giving them.

"Are you willing to leave the service to Geoff and me?" Bill asked at length. "I assure you we'll come up with something acceptable to all parties. And, if we don't, we'll gladly leave camp on the first bus out."

With many misgivings, the Director consented. So, Bill and I went to work.

To greet the arriving congregation, a hi-fi set played organ music by E. Power Biggs. Prayers well known to Roman Catholics, Hebrews and Protestants were said. Psalms of David were recited for the benefit of the Jewish boys, while the story of the Good Samaritan was read for the Christians among our number. The sermon was given by Bill, who spoke on the brotherhood of man as demonstrated by the actions of the Good Samaritan. He followed this up by explaining the shock a young doctor experienced when he witnessed his first operation on a negro patient. Expecting to see something weird and wonderful under the dusky skin, the interne was amazed to find that the patient was the same color inside as anyone else.

"We, in this camp, are united for the purpose of doing things together. That includes the worship of God. Whether we call ourselves Lutherans, Hebrews, Anglicans, Baptists, Roman Catholics, Presbyterians or United Church followers, we are all united in one common aim. We are heading for one goal. And that goal is God!"

There wasn't a sound during the service this morning. The kids listened attentively from start to finish. And there's been a happier atmosphere about the place ever since. Why, not five minutes ago, the German boys took three Negro lads they had been fighting with every day and shared a parcel from home with them.

God does make a difference . . . even in a camp, far removed from a church.

Indian Reserves Termed "Concentration Camps"

Ottawa (CP) — Indian reserve lands were described in the Commons as "glorified concentration camps." The expression was used by Ambrose Holowach (SC — Edmonton) who called for a program that would restore some of the Indians' past dignity.

R. R. Knight (CCF — Saskatoon) said Indians have been put on lands "that wouldn't maintain a gopher." The former teacher said the whole system of Indian education has broken down.

Citizenship Minister Pickersgill, who administers the Indian Act, said conditions are not what he would like, and that it is imperative and urgent that new ways be found to enable Indians to make a living.

WHAT ABOUT THE PARASITES?

You are in the livestock business mostly for one reason, to make profits. When you have gathered up enough profits you may retire to use and enjoy them; if you don't manage to get enough of them you simply keep on — and "tire".

There always were and always will be bugs, parasites, viruses and germs to combat, whether they are big enough to be seen or not. This country has been settled for about 150 years and most of us haven't done very much towards reducing their numbers; also in many cases the livestock population has increased heavily, which also multiplies the crop of vermin, ticks, lice and what-have-you.

Purina makes Chows for all livestock and poultry that will make you profits. But they also realize that the germs and insects must be controlled if you are to realize the profits that their Chows will make. . So they have a full line of SANITATION PRODUCTS that will help control these pests.

Now, a good many seem to think that whitewashing a building is going to kill the parasites.

Whitewash does make a place smell and look good, but smell and looks are sometimes misleading, as whitewash is not a disinfectant and does not kill the wrigglers, the crawlers, the germs and winged insects.

Get a supply of Sanitation Products with your next order of Chows. They don't COST you money, they SAVE you money.

With G. E. Mortimore

We stood around while a man applied a light to a pipe and kindled a red wavering fire. Then someone opened a valve. Flame shot 100 feet in the air, and Fort St. John No. 51 blew in with a roar and whistle like a squadron of jet aircraft.

Seeing that plume of fire burst forth like a genie from a bottle, the most bored-looking man stepped back. The experts said it was perfectly safe. But most of us novices kept moving away.

The sound made the earth tremble. The air was hot. There was something awesome and elemental in this tremendous force leaping from the earth after an imprisonment of millions of years, at the bidding of a handful of technicians.

Here was a symbol of the gigantic powers of the universe let loose by men to serve their little needs.

Fort St. John No. 51 is one of the 60 natural gas wells drilled by Pacific Petroleum and capped in readiness to supply the markets of B.C. and the United States when the Westcoast pipeline starts running next year.

More wells are being drilled now. Reserves of the field are conservatively estimated at 3,000,000,000,000 cubic feet, enough to serve the Northwest for 20 years. It costs between $100,000 and $200,000 to drill each well, even in a proven field like this.

As we watched, a few of us cautiously moving forward again, the flame in the sky dwindled and abruptly died when an operator closed the valve. The silence came as a mild shock, and we heard the chug-chug of a tractor working nearby farmland.

The outrush of gas had turned the pipe from the wall into a refrigeration coil. It was crusted with a thick layer of frost, an odd contrast to the searing heat that issued from it.

"I guess this is routine to you," I said to the geologist who was standing nearby.

"No," he said. "No matter how many times we see it, we still get a kick out of it."

A reporter picked up a small object. It was a bird, struck dead in flight by the burning gas.

"This is the end of all his work and striving,
Of long hot days under the summer sun,
Or hard hours spent in fields of autumn ploughing,
Across his meadows sounds the ancient mourning,
The slow, sad tolling of the passing bell,
The old trees seem to bow their heads in silence,
In long sweet fields that he had loved so well."

It was maybe just as well, —
We never could have said Good-bye
To a son and brother we loved so well.

But we will remember, no matter how long,
For no matter where we wander,
Or where our footsteps stray,
The memory of you, dear Bob,
Will forever with us stay."

Councillor Bill Ouellette proposed that Brownsburg make a real attempt to incorporate as a town. He stated that he had investigated all the pros and cons and that, all things considered, it was a very good move. The secretary was instructed to write to the Minister of Municipal Affairs asking for information about such a move. It is to be hoped that, one way or another, something will be done about the matter this time.

A firm of lawyers — Barré & Taillefer — will open an office in Brownsburg for six-day service. They have asked if they could have the Council's business. The Council unanimously decided to make the new attorneys their advisors.

The secretary-treasurer said that he can fulfill his duties without working Saturday mornings. He said that in four months he has had only five visitors on Saturday mornings, and asked permission to close on Saturdays. After a brief discussion, Council decided to suspend Saturday hours until October 1, and if there was no public resentment, to make it permanent.

The Mayor adjourned the meeting till next Monday, August 20.

Sanderson - Dumoulin

Holy Trinity Anglican Church, Calumet, was the scene of a pretty wedding when Miss Doria Patricia Dumoulin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Aldage Dumoulin, became the bride of Mr. Alan James Sanderson, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Sanderson, of Stouffville, Ont., on Saturday, August 4, at 4 o'clock.

The Rev. A. E. Hawes officiated. The organist was Miss Dora Trineer, and Miss Norma Elder was soloist.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and attended by her sisters, Miss Burald Dumoulin, as maid of honor, and Miss Edwina Dumoulin and Miss Ivy Dumoulin as bridesmaids.

Mr. Robert Sanderson was best man for his brother, and the ushers were Mr. N. Fairles, Mr. Douglas O'Neill and Mr. Roderick Dumoulin, brother of the bride.

For her wedding the bride chose a floor-length gown of white Chantilly lace and tulle over taffeta, designed on Princess lines with sweetheart neckline and long sleeves extending to points over the hands. A tiara of pearls and sequins held her fingertip veil of tulle illusion, and she carried a cascade bouquet of American Beauty roses.

Following a reception held in the Canadian Legion Hall, Brownsburg, the couple left on a motoring trip to the United States, returning via Stouffville, Ont. . . Mr. and Mrs. Sanderson will reside in Comox, B.C.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Sanderson, Mr. and Mrs. R. Sanderson Master Peter Sanderson, Mr. and Mrs. N. Fairles, Mr. Douglas O'Neill, Miss Jean Sanderson, of Stouffville, Ont.; Mr. and Mrs. Arne Larson, of Ottawa; Miss Frances Middlemiss, RCAF Station, Goose Bay, Labrador; Miss Norma Elder, RCAF Station, Lachine; the Rev and Mrs. A. Garden Party Mid-Season Affair At Carillon Museum

Saturday afternoon at Carillon Museum will be another of those occasions uniting folks of kindred interests, in a social affair sponsored by the Argenteuil Historical Society. Tea will be served, and there will be card-playing for those who enjoy this diversion. For many, however, it will be an opportunity to meet old friends and to appreciate once more the charm of the historical Museum, its beautiful grounds and its eloquent mementos of a vivid past.

Its collection of antiques grows steadily in number and interest to fulfill the purpose of this Museum — it is interesting to know that its library now contains no fewer than 2,000 volumes. In this connection the Misses Wales, daughters of the late Dr. B. N. Wales, one of the founders of this institution, have undertaken and completed a laborious job in indexing all these books. The collection therefore affords a valuable source of historical reference.

Latest addition to this library, according to Mrs. Geo. McGibbon, president of the Society, is a pamphlet printed by the Canadian Railroads Historical Society telling the story of "The Last Broad Gauge in Canada" — a record of rich local interest, since this was the famed Carillon and Grenville line, still remembered by our older residents. (Mrs. McGibbon is preparing a resumé of this story for future publication in The Watchman.)

It is expected there will be a large turnout of members and friends at the Museum garden party next Saturday. Proceeds of the tea will be devoted to the Dalesville Cemetery Fund.

KILLARNEY SOLD

The famous lakes of Killarney have been sold to an American real estate man. J. Stuart Robertson, 60, of Boca Raton, Fla., paid a reported $100,000 for Killarney's lakes, streams, forests and stately buildings. He has promised to keep it open to the public and to respect the traditions of the famous area. It was sold because of inheritance taxes.

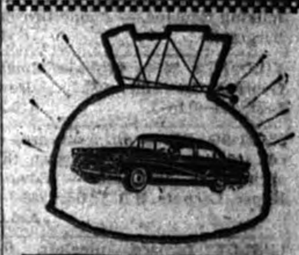

Was It You?

Someone started the whole day wrong —
Was it you?
Someone robbed the day of its song —
Was it you?
Early this morning someone frowned:
And soon harsh words were passed around —
Was it you?
Someone started the day just right —
Was it you?
Someone made it happy and bright —
Was it you?
Early this morning, we are told,
Someone smiled, and through all the day
That smile encouraged young and old —
Was it you?

Lighthouse Keepers, Compatibility Factor

Ottawa (CP) — Transport Minister Marler gave the Commons an insight into the day-to-day routine of a lighthouse keeper last week, when he told Howard Green (PC — Vancouver Quadra) why assistant lightkeepers cannot be classified as civil servants.

Mr. Marler said the assistants are hired by the keeper and compatibility is very important. Sometimes, the Transport Minister said, it gets to the point where the keeper and his helper can't stand the sight of each other another minute and there's nothing for it but for the assistant to return to the mainland in a boat.

Over the Years with THE LACHUTE WATCHMAN

75 YEARS AGO

August 19, 1881 —

Pierre Valois' son, aged about 15, of Ste. Scholastique, had the habit of jumping on the platform of cars of every train leaving the Ste Scholastique station, and used to jump off when the train was at a good speed. Unfortunately, on Wednesday, on attempting the same thing he slipped under the wheels and had his foot badly cut, four of his toes being found in his stocking when taken off.

Potatoes are not to be had in Lachute at present for love nor money. Now is the time for you farmers to come on — you may depend on plenty of purchasers.

A heavy storm passed through the township on Sunday and did considerable damage. On the property of Mr. James Dowler it levelled his barns and stables, carried away the roofing of his kitchen and outbuildings, and did a great amount of damage to his crops.

50 YEARS AGO

August 17, 1906 —

Wm. Doig, after an absence of some 22 years, has returned to Lachute and expects to start in business about the first of September.

Cushing — All of our local sports turned out to the races at Calumet on Saturday, and came home elated over the victory of their fellow-townsman, Louis Bertrand, who, driving Mr. D. LeBlanc's famous gray, took first place in the free-for-all.

Cushing — During the storm of Sunday night, Mr. G. O'Brien had a valuable young cow struck by lightning, which caused its death the following morning.

Calumet — Haying is nearly all done here now, and a very light crop is reported by all farmers; grain does not look well, and prospects are poor for a good harvest.

25 YEARS AGO

August 14, 1931 —

The Lachute Boy Scouts, under leadership of Scoutmaster Chas. Duncan, are spending this week at Boyd's Lake.

The Licop Block, on Main Street, was the scene of considerable excitement around midnight on Monday last. An alarm was turned in for fire which had broken out in the basement, the cause of which led to a strong argument between Geo. Licop, proprietor of the block, and one of his tenants, Mr. Genereux, resulting in the former being slashed across the face.

Vulcan, Alta. (CP) — A freak storm of wind, hail and rain damaged crops and broke windows in houses near here recently. Witnesses said the hail produced was unusual — pearshaped.

Tent Theatre Playing at Ste. Adele

Set amidst the scenic splendor of the Laurentians is Quebec's first Tent Theatre. Situated 12 miles above St. Jerome on No. 11 Highway, on the grounds of the beautiful Mont Gabriel Club, Joy Thomson has introduced to this area one of the finest Summer Theatre operations in Canada. Mr. José Vega, prominent New York director, is in charge of productions and many talented performers from the New York and London stages have been recruited to play leading roles in this season's array of top stage successes. For the remainder of this week (until Sunday) the brilliant Broadway comedy hit, "The Rainmaker," is playing, with two complete performances Saturday, 7 p.m. and 9.30 p.m. (See advt. on page 6.)

Bible Briefs

By A.A.M.

The Bible is rich in stories, and the purpose of this series is to encourage readers to look up for themselves the Bible versions of these incidents. If there are children in the family it is suggested that the story, and the Bible verses on which it is based, be read aloud.

What was the name of the tribe of Israel who had done evil and so the other tribes made war, killing all inhabitants, the beasts, and burning the towns. When the Israelites vowed at Mispah, "No one of us shall give his daughter in marriage to the men of this tribe, the warriors who have survived the battle."

After swearing this, the people came to Bethel and sat there before God. They lifted up their voices and wept bitterly, because they realized that, in time, there would be no descendants of the defeated fighting men. Then Israel would be lacking one tribe.

The following day they built an altar, made an offering and asked among themselves, "Which of the tribes of Israel failed to come up and war against this wicked tribe, when commanded to do so?"

They discovered one had failed them, the inhabitants of Jabesgilead. Therefore twelve thousand warriers went and smote this tribe with the sword, men, women and children. Four hundred young virgins, however, they saved to become wives of the warriors of the tribe which would have been wiped out. This was not enough women, so they planned that this tribe without enough women should go out and seize the maidens at the annual feast to the Lord when they danced in the vineyards.

You will find the name of this tribe and this story in Chapter 21 of Judges, the last chapter of which concludes with these words, "And in those days there was no king in Israel every man did what was right in his own eyes."

Brownsb'g Ousts Montebello, Enters Final Series

(Our District Correspondent)

Brownsburg—Mel Tomalty walked to start the bottom of the ninth inning for Brownsburg Tigers against Montebello with the score tied 4-4. Buddy Racine, with a sacrifice bunt, moved him to second. André Ouellette smashed a long single to right centre, and Mel took off for home plate. Trudeau, the Montebello shortstop, almost tripped him, then as he came to the plate Chalifoux, the pitcher blocked the way and he had to go round him to slide home. By this time Carignan had the ball and made no mistake about his tag on Mel.

Brownsburg's appeal for interference fell on deaf ears, and it was disappointing to see such a well-engineered tie-breaker go for naught. That was when Lady Luck decided to support Brownsburg. On a pick-off play, Chalifoux faked to third then threw to second. This was a balk, of course, and Ouellette advanced to third to set the stage. Coach Jimmy Murdoch decided to bat for Yves Raymond, who, although he's Brownsburg's power man, has been horse-collared by Chalifoux in the play-offs. Jimmy rapped a sharp grounder to Thomas at third base, and as André Ouellette crossed the plate, Thomas coolly and leliberately fired wide of first. Brownsburg won 5-4 and entered the finals.

It must have been heart-breaking for Montebello, who out-hit the Champion Tigers in each game of the series, to lose two out of three. Even more forlorn must be third baseman Thomas, who almost single-handedly beat Brownsburg last week to stay in contention and then single-handedly gave them the winning run. Such is baseball, however, and it highlights the fact that Brownsburg's superiority in the field has been the real key to success.

Ronald Cousineau again relied on impeccable control to pull him out of trouble, and in winning his ninth game against no defeats, he allowed no walks.

The real heroes for Brownsburg were — Keith Hazel, who singled in the tying run in the fifth; Billy Cribb, whose double in the same inning gave them their all-important two-run lead; and of course, André Ouellette. André should have driven in the winning run if things had gone the right way, but at least had the consolation of bringing it in himself. André Ouellette and Billy Cribb each had two hits, and Ronald Cousineau and Gilles Diotte had the other two Brownsburg hits.

A. Quesnel had a bases-empty home-run, which coming at another time, could have knocked Brownsburg out. Georges Chalifoux, besides pitching a fine game, doubled twice and scored two of the runs. The other big hit was St. Denis' triple.

This week Brownsburg's opponent for the best-of-five final will be the re-vitalized Hawkesbury squad. Hawkesbury finished fourth in the league, but in two straight knocked off Buckingham who had lost only two games all season.

Stan Leonard in Tam O'Shanter Tourney, Top-Bracket Canadian

Stan Leonard, Lachute's playing pro, was the top Canadian in the Tam O'Shanter Golf Tournament recently played in Chicago when in the final round he shot a two-under-par 70 for a total of 282, six-under-par.

Leonard was in a six-man tie for 13th position and won $950. Last week, he tied for fifth place in the All-American preliminary to the "world" championship and picked up $1,675.

Ted Kroll, golf's Purple Heart hero who had never won a major championship, went to the summit to snatch his first big victory — the $50,000 of the game's richest tournament.

There was more than poetic justice, as the 37-year-old Kroll, long seeking a major title, hit the jackpot with a sizzling 15-under-par total of 273 at Tam O'Shanter and prepared to pocket another $50,000 in exhibition money.

Kroll, wounded four times during the Second World War, indicated he would sign with promoter Geo. S. May for a minimum of 50 promotional exhibitions at $1,000 per appearance.

No-Hitter by Larocque, Visiting Montebello

Last Thursday Colford's Lodge defeated Montebello All-Stars on their home diamond 3-1. Big Jean-Guy Larocque struck out 17, walked two, and one man reached base on an error. Montebello scored their only run in the fourth inning on a walk, an error and a wild pitch. Colford's did not score a run until the last inning, when Jean-Guy Larocque blasted a ball out of the park for a home-run. Don Cockburn followed up with a single and then Trevor Holmes stretched a single into a home-run on two Montebello errors. . : This was one of the most exciting games of the season.

On Sunday Colford's had another close ball game when they defeated Val Martin 3-2 in 10 innings. This was a thriller all the way. Val Martin scored their two runs in the second inning and then were held scoreless the rest of the game. Colford's scored once in the fifth, then tied the game in the seventh and went ahead to win the game in the 10th inning. Vern Poirier and Arthur Denault were the big hitters for the winners, with Vern crossing the plate twice. The last time proved to be the winning run. This was No. 12 for Jean-Guy Larocque, against three defeats. Lachance was the losing pitcher.

Next Sunday Colford's play host to Hawkesbury Legion, the champion team in their league, so this should be another exciting game.

They Rode to Fame

SPORTS CAMERA
By Gerry Lougheed, Canadian Press Staff Writer

Sir Gordon Richards, who hung up his jockey's silks about 18 months ago after booting home 4,870 winners, is finding the going tough as a trainer of race horses.

But he's still out to disprove the old belief that jockeys don't make first-class trainers.

Richards set a world record for riding winners, earned about $5,600,000 for owners and a knighthood for himself in a great riding career in Britain. Last year, his first season as a trainer, he saddled only 13 winners and won only $9,951.

Now 53, Richards thinks it will take him at least three years to establish himself in his new job, but he's confident there is room for him among the great trainers.

Fame and Wealth

Thirty-four years of riding brought the pint-sized Richards wealth, fame, a country house and the friendship of a queen. He could have retired and lived well on his savings, but instead he chose to stay in the game and carve out a new career.

In the United States, meanwhile, another veteran jockey is riding down the home stretch in his efforts to overtake Richards' record of 4,870 winners.

He is Johnny Longden, who served apprenticeship on Western Canada tracks and early this month after 29 years of campaigning had a total of 4,826 — only 44 short of Richards.

Now 46, Longden began riding at 16 on small tracks near his home in Taber, Alta. Riding gave him the chance to escape labor in the Alberta coal mines, where he had gone to work when he left school.

Born in Yorkshire, England, Longden came to Canada with his parents when he was two. The heavy work with the pick is credited with developing the shoulder and arm muscles partly responsible for his success as a jockey.

Similar Careers

His career in some ways is remarkably similar to that of Richards. Both worked in coal mines in their youth, though Richards' experience was in his native Wales.

They are the same height — just less than five feet — and Richards used to ride his best at 114 pounds as Longden does.

Longden now owns an estate at Arcadia, Calif., flies two private planes and has a racing stable in partnership with Max Bell, of Calgary.

Bad luck tagged Longden early in his career. While riding in Vancouver he broke a leg. He went to Mexico on crutches later with his stable, and again broke the leg. In 1932 in Toronto, he was thrown from his horse and trampled on. He survived a 13-day coma and returned to the track.

While Richards did most of his riding on English courses, Longden during the last 20-odd years has concentrated on the United States. He has won the Kentucky Derby only once, aboard Count Fleet, but has triumphed in many of the famous stakes including the Santa Fe handicap, the Belmont Stakes, the Wood Memorial, the Preakness, the Hollywood Gold Cup and the Santa Anita Derby.

A tramp went into a drugstore and asked for one cent's worth of insect powder.

"Why, that's not enough to wrap up," said the clerk.

"Never mind wrapping it up. Blow it down my back."

Graphic Report on African Gold Coast

"Gold Coast Experiment", written and narrated by Matthew Halton, European correspondent of the CBC, is the last program in the series Africa 1955 and will be heard on CBC Wednesday Night, August 22. It is the story of the Gold Coast's march toward independence within the British Commonwealth. The producer, Maurice Brown, has this to say about the program:

"It is expected that in the near future a Negro nation of West Africa, the Gold Coast — a country about the size of Britain, with nearly five million people—will achieve its full independence and become the first Negro dominion of the Commonwealth. According to Halton, who covered some 1,200 miles gathering material to illustrate the land and its people during September, 1955: 'Independence for the Gold Coast is now just around the corner; and it is coming not in blood and riots, but in co-operation and friendship. I did not meet anyone, from Prime Minister Nkrumah to the King of Ashanti down to the humblest fisherman or farmer who wanted anything else but self-government under the Queen.'

The program brings interviews that Halton had with Britons and Africans, both official and non-official, whom he met as he journeyed through the coastal plains, the deep forests of Ashanti, and the savannah of the northern territories. The feature is illustrated by recordings he made of tribal dances and songs, and sounds of everyday life in the Gold Coast."

Repeat Performance of Television Thriller

"Flight Into Danger", a tense drama of an airplane in distress, by Arthur Hailey, was enthusiastically received by viewers last April 3 when it was produced for General Motors Theatre by David Greene. Scores of congratulatory phone calls were made immediately after the performance and there were hundreds of letters praising the show.

The play will be given a repeat performance on CBC-TV next Monday night, August 20. What will be seen is a film recording of the original performance, with James Doohan, Corrinne Conley and Cecil Linder in the leading roles.

A viewer in Toronto called this drama "the most gripping, tension-packed play I have ever seen on TV." From Montreal came this comment: "It was a good feeling for us as viewers to see a Canadian story unfold and we felt the utmost pride in having shared in the excitement of that flight."

The play is about a former war flier who is forced to take over the controls of a chartered plane en route to a big football game in Vancouver when the plane's pilots are taken ill suddenly.

Footballs will fill the air at Molson Stadium in Montreal on August 25 when Toronto Argonauts meet Montreal Alouettes in the first of 21 televised Big Four games to be seen on the CBC microwave network. Doug Smith will be the commentator for the game with Steve Douglas on hand to be introduced to football fans; Douglas will describe seven future games.

No TV in Schools

Quebec (CP) —

It was announced that the Roman Catholic committee of Quebec's provincial education council has decided to ban the use of television sets in schools until further notice.

The committee thus recorded its opposition to the school programs on television prepared by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

The committee considers the programs an encroachment, since education is in the hands of the provinces and not the federal governments.

OLDTIME RECORD

Grenfell, Sask. (CP) — Bert Meeker, 84-year-old pioneer resident, set a local record when he bought a new car. The dealer who sold him the car said Mr. Meeker is the oldest person ever to purchase a car from him in 27 years of business.

Ballad Singer Coming With Jamboree Troupe

Ballad singing that "tears away the barriers to the hardest heart" will be heard at the Auditorium here when Donna Darlene appears along with Dusty Owens and his Rodeo Boys on August 30.

Miss Darlene reaches to the individual with a style that melts a dismal mood; rekindles the flame of youthful love; casts a spell of romantic wishfulness. Singing romantic ballads is a specialty with Donna, as listeners will agree when she sings with Dusty and the Rodeo Boys.

Donna is a veteran of six years in show biz, with plenty of experience in radio, television, and personal appearances in the United States and Canada. Before joining WWVA World's Original Jamboree, Donna was a big favorite around Johnstown, Pennsylvania. She has captivated the hearts of thousands with the "something special" she puts into a romantic ballad. It is a personal touch that means so much.

Donna, with blond hair and blue eyes, has literally strummed the heart-strings of thousands in her six years of performances.

Tips on Touring

By Carol Lane
Women's Travel Authority

Have you ever thought of making movies of yourself and your family on the move? With a little practice, you can take vacation movies you'll be proud to show relatives and friends when you get home.

There are two sizes of amateur motion picture cameras — the 8 millimeter and the 16 mm. However, the average amateur will find the 8 mm. easier and cheaper to operate. Here are some angles on movie making that should help you make a delightful documentary on your next motor trip:

1—Take time to read carefully the instructions about the operation and care of your camera. If you don't have an exposure meter, study the film manufacturer's recommendations of the proper exposures to be used in varying light conditions.

2—Always try to hold your movie camera steady. If you want to film a panorama, or a moving subject, make sure you move your camera slowly and at an even rate of speed.

3—The average movie camera will take close-ups, medium and long shots. So try to mix your shots instead of concentrating on just one type of shot.

4—Plan your filming to tell the complete story of your trip in sequence, from beginning to end.

5—Guard against random shooting. It wastes film. Don't take a lot of isolated scenes, events and people, unless you particularly want to record them.

6—Try to photograph a scene about as long as you would want to see it on the screen. One scene may call for 20 seconds, another for 10, and still another for five.

7—The last step in movie-making —and, it's one of the most important — is proper editing. To give continuity to your film, cut unnecessary scenes and discard out-of-focus shots. Organize the sequences in the proper order to tell your travel story.

Remember these tips and you'll make movies your friends and relatives will really like to see.

Montreal — Forty British schoolboys arrived August 14 aboard the new 22,000 Cunard liner Carinthia. Their party comprises the eighth annual tour of Canada arranged under an educational trust fund founded in 1938 by Yorkshire industrialist W. H. Rhodes. They will visit the larger centres in eastern Canada and will sail for home from Quebec August 29 on the S.S. Scythia.

Betty Phillips

Here is Betty Phillips who, along with Ernie Prentice, is seen and heard by television viewers every week on the Vancouver CBC-TV program "Lolly Too Dum". Together they bring a pleasant half-hour of light entertainment with particular stress on folk songs and ballads.

"Look here, waiter, is this peach or apple pie?"

"What does it taste like?"

"It tastes like glue."

"Well, then, it's apple because the peach pie tastes like putty."

Corinne Conley

Lovely Corinne Conley takes time out for fun even though she has a busy summer schedule. She appears on CBC radio's "Search for Tomorrow", the new daytime radio serial, and is familiar to television viewers across the country for her regular appearances on "GM Theatre" and other CBC dramas.

BENCHES SPOTTED ON CITY STREETS

St. John's, Nfld. (CP) — It keeps getting easier for footweary strollers in St. John's to find a bench to sit on.

More than 200 concrete-based wooden benches turned out in slack hours by the city parks staff have been placed about the city.

"Wherever we think a bench would look nice, we place one," says parks superintendent Harry Hamlyn. They are made during the winter and on days when the weather isn't fit for working outside. Concrete is poured into moulds and fitted with wooden slats.

VALUABLE QUINTS

Comox, B.C. (CP) — Birth of quintuplet chinchillas may have set a record for British Columbia. Owner Bill Jesse says the pups were doing well.

Written Specially for The Lachute Watchman

By Oli Daum, Canadian Press Staff Writer

Overweight women who comfortably blame their expansive waistlines on gland trouble — and go on nibbling — are in for a shock.

Dr. Barbara McLaren, head of the University of Toronto's household science department, says the percentage of obesity due to gland trouble is very small. Most outsized figures are caused by eating too much food and too much of the wrong kind.

Permanent re-education in eating habits is the only way to keep an attractive shape, says Dr. McLaren. She is heading a long-term reducing program for 24 obese women all of whom blamed their excess weight on glandular trouble.

Cut Snacks

Under her care the women, who weighed between 150 and 320 pounds — or from 50 to 160 pounds more than they should — have lost up to 40 pounds in the last six months just by cutting out snacks.

When they joined the class they were weighed and measured. Five were too heavy for the scales which recorded up to 275 pounds and a 60-inch tape measure couldn't encompass one woman's hips.

Dr. McLaren doesn't believe in get-thin-quick schemes because, she said, dieters don't get a chance to establish good food habits.

She says the secret of success is to let the women work out their own diets over a long period of time. Her clinic is a year long. Each woman plans a diet of 1,200 calories a day including vitamins, proteins, and minerals along with the fats, sugars and starches.

Three square meals daily are stressed to cut out in-between nibbling.

"At the end of a year they should be so accustomed to regulating their own eating that they will keep on doing it," Dr. McLaren said. The women in her clinic are examined each week by doctors. So far none has suffered.

Sample Menu

A sample menu for dieters would include skim milk, and egg, fresh fruit or fruit juice and black coffee for breakfast; lean meat, chicken, fish or cottage cheese with salad for lunch; meat, vegetables and salad for dinner.

One slice of bread is allowed each day and even potatoes are permitted.

"A small potato contains only 50 calories and does have good food elements," says Dr. McLaren. "Many people don't feel a meal is complete without potatoes."

This and That

Plastic ice cube trays are ideal jelly moulds for summer salads. Coat the inside with a drop or two of salad oil before filling and the contents will pop out easily. The oil will also make the salad shiny and appetizing.

The wise sunbather protects herself from over-exposure by applying suntan lotion before every outing at the beach, even in the late summer.

Frozen foods, once thawed, may spoil more rapidly than fresh foods. And re-freezing is a delicate process — refrozen vegetables may toughen, and fruits may become soft and mushy. Better not thaw them until ready to cook.

GO TRAVELLING WITH INTERNATIONAL MENUS!

By Anne Marshall

Like to travel? Try new foods?

Plan your own setting by taking your family to the shore, or serve in the garden, or on the terrace in style and comfort.

Enchanting as a little bit of Sweden, are these little brown meat balls smothered with mushroom soup sauce and bite-size potatoes arranged in a big colorful casserole. Your guests will love them and the spicy Swedish rea twists and onion-ring-cuke salad, too. A fitting finish to this Swedish supper—fresh raspberries in fresh cream.

SWEDISH MEAT BALLS

1 can (1¼ cups) condensed cream of mushroom soup
1 pound ground beef
½ cup fine dry bread crumbs
2 tablespoons minced onion
1 tablespoon minced parsley
1 egg, slightly beaten
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon shortening
¼ cup water

Combine ¼ cup soup with beef, bread crumbs, onion, parsley, egg and salt; shape into balls about 1 inch in diameter. Brown meat balls in shortening. Blend remaining soup with water; pour over meat balls. Cover and cook over low heat about 20 minutes; stir occasionally. Makes about 30 tiny meat balls.

Freezing August Fruits

(Consumer Section)

In the bulletin "Freezing Foods", the Consumer Section, Canada Department of Agriculture has included freezing instructions for many Canadian fruits but not for apricots, sweet cherries and cantaloupe. The reason for this is that to date, some experimental results on the freezing of these fruits have not been entirely satisfactory. However, for those of you who wish to freeze them here are the methods suggested to give the best results. The Consumer Section points out that in freezing these fruits according to their directions it is important that apricots be fully-ripe, sweet cherries just ripe and cantaloupe slightly under-ripe.

Apricots:

Choose fully mature apricots, wash, halve and pit. Pack in thin syrup, one cup sugar dissolved in two cups water. To keep fruit from darkening, use ascorbic acid — 200 milligrams for each cup of syrup.

For use in pies and puddings, apricots may be packed with dry sugar, one pound for each five pounds of prepared apricots. Wash, pit and cut apricots in quarters. For each pint container of apricots, dissolve 200 milligrams of ascorbic acid in one tablespoon water and sprinkle over apricots, then add sugar.

Cantaloupe:

Choose fruit that is quite firm, slightly under-mature rather than very ripe. Wash, peel, remove centre part and cut into attractive sizes of cubes or balls. Pack in dry sugar — one pound of sugar to eight pounds of fruit. The sugar may be sprinkled over the fruit in layers or mixed with it in a bowl.

Cherries:

Choose, sweet, dark, firm cherries that are just mature, not overripe. Wash, remove stems but leave pits in for best flavor, color and appearance. Pack in very thin syrup of one cup of sugar to three cups of water. As with most frozen fruits, cherries taste best if served immediately after defrosting.

Latest Word on Frozen Raspberries

For frozen raspberries that are better in appearance, color and texture than berries packed in the usual way with dry sugar or in syrup, the Consumer Section, Canada Department of Agriculture recommends the following procedure:

Wash and drain raspberries. Spread out in single layer on trays and place on the quick freeze plate of the freezer. When frozen solidly, package berries immediately and return to freezer.

Desserts From Fresh Fruits

(Consumer Section)

Perhaps the best way to make fresh fruit desserts is to serve the fruit plain or with sugar and cream. However, since some years bring an abundance of one or two kinds of fruits and berries, it is well to become acquainted with recipes and different ideas for using these foods. Then the family is not so likely to tire of them.

The old standbys like fresh fruit shortcakes, pies, tarts and meringues are always welcome and there are many fruit puddings that are very delicious, too. These puddings allow for almost unlimited ingenuity and originality on the part of the cook. Take cottage pudding for example — in wintertime this easy-to-make plain cake is often served with a sweet sauce like jam, caramel or chocolate fudge, but in summer it is a favorite with fresh fruit. It may be served warm with spicy peach or other sauce made from fruit, and when served cold it is delicious if topped with berries or sliced fruit and either ice cream or whipped cream. For a quick upside-down cake, cottage pudding or cake mix batter is often baked with sweetened fruit under it in either custard cups or a pudding pan.

Light desserts like meringues, sherbets, bavarians, mallows, whips and jellies are appealing to most everyone and particularly now when there is such a variety of fresh fruits to use in them.

Consumers may write for dessert recipes like those enclosed to the Home Economists, Consumer Section, Marketing Service, Canada Department of Agriculture.

Corn on the Cob

by the Consumer Section, Canada Dept. of Agriculture Marketing Service

Every year when the fresh corn-on-the-cob season rolls around there's one Canadian old-timer who never fails to tell how his family used to eat corn-on-the-cob when he was young. His mother would fill the big old-fashioned washboiler about half-full of water — that would be about 5 gallons or more — then she would put it on the stove to boil. Meanwhile, some of the 10 children in the family would be husking mountains of freshly-picked corn. Eventually, whe the water boiled, the mother added plenty of salt and then filled the washboiler to the top with corn and put the cover back on the boiler. In the few minutes required for the corn to cook, the table was set with knives, forks, plates, glasses or cups, milk, tea, homemade brown bread and a big plateful or two of butter. That's all! At last, when mother gave the signal that the corn was ready everyone scrambled for their place, just in time to see the biggest platter in the house being put in the centre of the table. For a moment it was piled high with corn-on-the-cob that quickly disappeared — but the platter was reloaded again and again until everyone had eaten their fill — six, eight, ten ears or more. What fun it must have been for them, vying with one another to see who could have the biggest stack of corn husks to show as proof of their capacity!

Modern Cooking of Corn-on-the-Cob

Today, Canadians do not perhaps cook corn-on-the-cob in quite as large quantities for one meal as was done in the old days but that is no reason to assume they enjoy it any less. One important point to remember is that corn to be at its best should be picked, bought and used all in one day — so one should buy only what can be used quickly. From the time it is picked until it reaches the pot, corn-on-the-cob needs to be kept in a cool place for the changing of its sugar into starch, and thus its loss of flavour, is much faster at high temperatures than low.

When cooking corn, at home, the pressure saucepan will cook it in a hurry — just three minutes at 15 pounds pressure. To cook it in an ordinary cooking pot, place the husked, clean ears in enough boiling, salted water to cover and boil until the kernels are tender, about 8 to 10 minutes. Serve with plenty of butter.

For outdoor cooking, corn can be boiled in a big pot hung over the fire or it can be roasted on a grill over hot coals. To roast it, simply spread the raw husked corn with butter, sprinkle ear with salt and pepper, then wrap each ear securely in aluminum foil. Place in the grill over hot coals and leave for 15 to 25 minutes. Serve each cob in its own foil wrapper.

Let's Eat

BY IDA BAILEY ALLEN

"This is the tenth barbecue grill I have tested, Madame," observed the Chef. "It is satisfactory because it is of table height, so cooking is not back-breaking."

With cooking tongs, the Chef deftly placed the food on a large paper plate.

"This meal could also be prepared indoors at the range. But cooking on the terrace seems like a little vacation," he chuckled.

"I'm glad you made a large pot of coffee, Chef," I said.

"Recently completed research reveals that coffee is one of the richest sources of niacin. Perhaps that is one of the reasons why a cup of black coffee combats drowsiness and induces clearer thinking."

"That is very interesting, Madame," he replied. "And the way I brewed this coffee also is of interest. It is a method especially good for outdoor preparation."

Outdoor Coffee Brew: For each cup to be made, measure ¼c. water into a coffee pot or kettle. Heat until the water boils fast.

Measure 2 tbsp. regular grind coffee for each cup of water into a sack made from double-thick cheesecloth. The sack must not be more than half full as coffee grains swell when in contact with water.

Tie sack tight with a strong white cord, leaving the ends long enough to fasten to the handle of the kettle for easy handling.

When the water boils, put in the sack of coffee. Press it up and down in the water to become thoroughly wet.

Cover; brew, which means simmer, 12 to 15 min. over a low heat. Do not let it boil. Occasionally, move the sack up and down.

When brewed, remove the sack. Serve as soon as possible

Peach Mallow: Drain 1 can sliced peaches. Save the syrup to use as a sauce.

Place a layer of peaches in a serving dish. Alternate with layers of 1½ c. midget or quartered full-size marshmallows.

To 1 c. thin cream, stir in the juice ½ lemon and ¼ tsp. nutmeg. Pour into and over the dessert. Refrigerate at least 6 hrs.

The Chef on "Au Jus"

"Au jus" is a phrase often seen on restaurant menus when roast meat is listed. It means the natural juices which cook out from roasting meat. Sometimes a very little hot water is added, but no thickening, ever!

Sailor: I can't marry you. We have nothing in common. Why you wouldn't even know port from starboard.

Girl: Well, I could look at the label on the bottle, couldn't I?

A woman told her friend that her husband had gone skeet shooting several times recently, but that he hadn't brought home a single skeet. And then she added: "Say, how do you cook skeets?"

Prov'l Entries Extended For Tweedsmuir Contest

The provincial elimination contest of the 1955-57 National Tweedsmuir Competition closes May 1, 1957. All entries are to be in the office of the Quebec Women's Institutes, Macdonald College, by that date.

This was announced at a recent meeting of the Q.W.I. executive. This extension of time is due to the fact that the Federated Women's Institutes of Canada will not be meeting until the end of October next year, instead of the usual date in June. The Q.W.I. executive hopes this longer period to prepare for the provincial contest may result in more entries in the three sections: Village History, Painting and Handicrafts (10 articles for a hope chest).

First and second prizes are awarded at this level in all sections, the winners going on to compete in the National Competition. The prizes there are silver cups, given by Lady Tweedsmuir, who suggested these Biennial Competitions during her stay in Canada.

A Weekly Feature of Helpful Hints on Child Training

Young Runaway

(Copyright) — By NANCY CLEAVER —

"I wonder how many youngsters in Canada run away from home in a year?" Mr. Johns asked his wife as he glanced up from his newspaper. Then he added:

"Here's an account of a boy who came home with a poor school report one noon. He was punished by his parents and instead of returning to school that afternoon, he bolted on his bicycle!"

"How long was he missing? I'm sorry for his mother!" Mrs. Johns exclaimed.

"He was gone two days. The first night he slept in a field, the second in a garage. I'm sorry for him too. He was famished when he was picked up and returned to his parents."

There are no accurate statistics of the number of young runaways. Only a small percentage of the stories of these missing boys and girls appears in the press or are heard over the radio. The returning truant may boast of his exploits among his pals, but if his "holiday" has been painful and disillusioning, he may refuse to say anything about his absence. But, with very few exceptions, the parents of a runaway are upset, hurt, angry or puzzled. How could their child cause them such anxiety by his sudden disappearance?

The desire to run away sometimes is evident in the pre-school child, who, seeking adventure, disappears down the block and becomes lost. By giving him more opportunities for new experiences and greater freedom, under supervision, this is usually a passing phase.

It is the pre-adolescent and teenage youngster who runs away for several days, or even weeks, who give parents an anxious time. In the period of strain and stress, of rebellion against authority, many a boy or girl longs to leave the familiar scenes of home and school and try his or her luck among strangers. Children, as well as adults, weary of monotony. Distant pastures look green to them, too.

In the fine biography of John Christie Holland, Jessie L. Beattie tells of the magic spell the Barnum and Bailey circus cast over the 15-year-old who was supposed to be working for a farmer. Instead, he ran off, found temporary work with the circus and then struck out on foot westward.

After many weary months, by a strange coincidence, John offered to shine the shoes of one of the Jubilee Singers, appearing in a concert at Fort Wayne, and that singer was his older brother Willie. His brother bought John's ticket home and made him promise that he would never run off again. Years later William exclaimed:

"Home was a good place to all of us and I knew what a wonderful moment it would be when he walked into our house!"

It was Christmas morning when the young prodigal jerked open the door of the humble home in Hamilton. The father led in prayer in reading from the Bible, and then "loving arms reached and claimed the wanderer." John Christie Holland later said:

"When my father began to pray, I wanted to kneel down, but I was too ashamed — and I was still an outsider. This wasn't the kind of welcome I had expected and it made a deeper impression upon me than a sound thrashing would have done."

Sometimes a sensitive child runs away from a home situation which becomes intolerable. There is a word-picture in Ann Bridge's "Portrait of a Mother" of Ann, as a young girl, hating to have to ride a horse on a leading rein when she felt perfectly capable of controlling her mount herself. She ran off through the woods, but was finally recognized by a woman who looked after a pastry shop.

This famous writer, recalling this incident, tells how her mother took a carriage, and went to get her back. When she saw her mother's face, she realized for the first time what she had done. But her mother didn't scold her or reproach her. She kissed her. It was "an exquisite mercifulness" she had never forgotten.

When a young runaway returns home, he or she needs to be welcomed, to be forgiven, and to make a new start. The parents, too, desire to catch a fresh insight into the reason or reasons why the child left home. Perhaps if the boy or girl had made known his unhappiness, this episode of flight might never have taken place.

This is the time to use love and faith — not anger and resentment in treating the child who runs away. Both the youngster and the parents suffer during this time. It is comforting to know that many famous men and women, in adolescence, have also "taken French leave" from home. Running away is not a crime. It is a mistaken way of finding adventure or of refusing to face what is unpleasant!

Fashions

Here is a costume composed of separates that can be paired off for perfect combinations. The two parts shown here are the blouse and skirt, while shorts and a long-sleeved shirt are available to match. The fabric is cotton, the colors are orange and green in a nicely defined geometric print. Square neckline and short puffed sleeves are blouse details. The skirt has one wide, flared, unpressed pleat and there are pockets in the side seams. A separate self belt with a gilt buckle slips through self loops.

Holiday Souvenirs

By Carol Lane

The remembrance of a trip is even more pleasurable when it is tangible.

Now you don't have to go to souvenir shops to obtain loads of tangible reminders of your experiences. One family I know brought back some unusual plants which were growing wild along the way. These were kept in small cardboard boxes in the back of the car with some of the original soil. When the family arrived home, the children not only learned how to transplant and care for their living souvenirs, they also brought them to school and used them to help describe their trip.

When it isn't feasible to bring back plants, a camera with portrait lens attachment will capture forever the beauty of native flowers and plants. Or, if you have a bit of talent, a sketchpad or watercolor set provides still another means for obtaining personal, tangible remembrances.

Some people collect menus, matchbooks, shells or unusual stones. Even bugs can be mounted or montaged to make useful and attractive displays at home. I know one traveller who takes along portable recording equipment to capture bird songs, characteristic sounds and conversations en route.

The enjoyment, in any case, is in being able to carry home memories in your hand!

ROOF RAFT

A helicopter may hover like a bird, but when it comes down to roost on a roof it weighs plenty, and sets up quite a strain. So engineers have devised a gimmick. The whirly-bird lands on an aluminum raft floating in a shallow pool of water. The machine's weight is spread over the area of the raft instead of just that covered by the landing gear.

No doubt they figured out, too, how passengers can get "ashore". Certainly men who work with aluminum are mighty resourceful. In fact, they keep us busy supplying them with this versatile modern metal, at home and in foreign markets.

Angling for a "compleat" car?

Fine view of a finny party. Here's a grand group of fishermen, taking it easy after a busy morning on the lake. And their Pontiac fits right into the scene. You'll go a long, long mile before you find a more pleasant, more exciting way to get from here to there. It's even nicer, of course, with trout in the trunk.

Two pets—both frisky! Perhaps "Dachsy" can amaze you with his tricks, he's really quite a performer. But this Pontiac has some tricks up its fenders, too. Pleasant tricks with your budget, for example . . . and some truly startling road performances. Your dealer can show you with a Demonstration Drive.

Only a minute from pool to Pontiac! We almost wonder how this fisherman can turn his back on that Pontiac. Those clean lines can catch . . . and hold . . . anyone's eye. Colors, in a host of Pontiac matching combinations, are breathtaking. And Pontiac upholsteries are luxury's last word! See it . . . you'll agree!

Best catch of the day! Oh, we're not talking about the fish . . . it's only average. It's that Pontiac that stands so proudly in the picture. And we're sure that the smiles you see are for the car, not the fish. It's the way you'll feel, too, first time you take the wheel of your Pontiac. You'll see!

Seems like everyone's looking for the perfect . . . the "compleat" . . . car! Actually you don't have to go very far to find it. No farther, in fact, than your nearest Pontiac dealer. There you'll find proof indeed that only Pontiac combines grace, beauty, prestige and performance and reasonable price so well . . . a "compleatness" that goes far, far deeper than mere looks or accessories!

You're welcome to a Demonstration Drive in this car of cars, to see for yourself everything that Pontiac offers. Believe us, you'll relish the way it hugs the curves, slides smoothly up or down hills, takes every straightaway with supreme confidence. The ride's the thing . . . and with Pontiac what a wonderful ride it is.

All this is very exciting . . . but the best part of all in this "compleat" Pontiac is its price. With all that Pontiac gives you in pleasure and prestige, it's still easily within anyone's budget, priced right down with the lowest. Yes—just like a trout to a "Royal Coachman" . . . that's how you'll rise to a Pontiac. Be sure you do—soon!

Individual Responsibility for Civil Defence

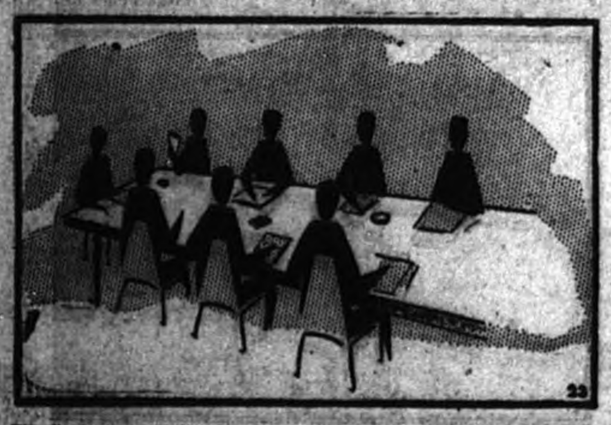

(Twenty-third in series of 24 articles)

The success of any project, however large or small, depends eventually on the attention given to details. That is true of the way an individual lives his life. If he takes care of the moments, the hours and the days will take care of themselves. That is particularly true in a free nation whose individual members, if they are alert to their rights and responsibilities, can wield an influence on their governments.

Governments in Canada, whether municipal, provincial or federal, must bow to the will of the majority of voters on election day. If they forget the wishes of the majority the day after, then they can be sharply reminded when election day comes round again.

The individual, whether he lives in a city, town or village or on a farm, can first learn what he must do to protect himself. He owes himself that.

Then he can volunteer his services for whatever job he can do. In this way he can help to protect not only himself but also the other members of his community should disaster strike. And his training and knowledge can be applied to other forms of disaster than nuclear war. His efforts, effectively channeled through proper training and direction, can help save lives and property from fire, flood, tornado and other forms of natural disaster that may hit a community at any time.

The final responsibility for a government's policies, therefore, falls on the shoulders of the free nation's individual members.

It is not an easy responsibility to fulfill. It never has been, but the tensions that have appeared in the world in recent years have made it doubly important.

The development by the Communist countries as well as the Western nations, of the ability to wage nuclear warfare, with its almost unbelievable potential for death and destruction, has imposed on the individuals of every free nation a new and demanding responsibility: to see that everything possible is done to prevent such a war.

But failing this, there is also the responsibility of being prepared to defend ourselves if war comes. This preparation takes many forms, but the one in which the individual can be most influential today is civil defence.

"In my humble opinion," says G. S. Hatton, Deputy Federal Civil Defence Co-ordinator, "every citizen has a dual responsibility in respect to civil defence."

"First — to be prepared; that is, to know what he and his dependents must do to survive." But he adds a second one, and possibly the more important:

He must be prepared "to persuade, that is, to support at all levels of government responsible administrators who will in turn support civil defence and so ensure the survival of our nation."

It is, therefore, the responsibility of the citizens of any community to ensure that they elect to office officials who are concerned for the safety of the community in disaster, whether from war or the rampaging forces of nature.

And in the view of many officials, including President Eisenhower of the United States, civil defence is not only defence, but also a form of passive offence. He has said:

"The task of civil defence is vital to our national life. It demands a preparedness that can do more than limit the damage of a wartime disaster. It means developing a preparedness, a vigilance, so impressive as to deter aggression itself."

Transport Controller To Head Grain Board

—Ottawa Press Canadian

Roy Milner, present federal transport controller, will become head of the board of grain commissioners next December. His decision to retire as controller followed a heated session in the House of Commons in which his policy as controller was criticized.

Plan to Develop New Salmon Rivers

Quebec — Hon. C. E. Pouliot, M.D., Minister of Game and Fisheries, who recently made an inspection tour of the lower Saguenay area, said that his Department is studying plans to open more North Shore to salmon anglers. The minister's visit was to the district between Natashquan and Sheldrake, opposite Anticosti Island, and it is planned to provide better access and also facilities for sport fishing, as was done on the Romaine River. Fishermen visiting this area now have to fly in from Gaspé.

The Minister also said that this has been a good year for cod fishermen along the north shore and at La Tabatiere and a new filleting plant is providing regular work for 50 persons.

The 1957 Cars

Cars of 1957, says The Financial Post, will be longer, lower and flashier.

The variety of color, chrome treatment and body style will be even greater than in the past. The long, low look is more in vogue than ever.

Prices probably will be a little higher.

The buyer trend to more extras and slightly more expensive cars will continue. So will the boom in four-door hardtops.

Black will continue its comeback as a popular color. More cars will have gold grilles.

Most 1957s will have 14-inch tires instead of 15. The new tires will be slightly wider, take lower air pressure. They'll lower a car's centre of gravity, adding to safety and lending themselves to the low look.

At least one car is expected to offer a fuel injection system involving direct delivery of fuel into the cylinder, eliminating the carburetor.

New Banking Hours Effective This Week

Commencing August 18, all banks in Lachute and Lachute Mills, including the Caisse Populaire de Lachute, will be closed each Saturday to give the members of their respective staffs the benefits of the five-day week.

This policy has been established in practically all banking points in Canada for quite some time, and it is hoped the customers will adjust themselves to this change. For the convenience of customers, the local branches will give extended service each Friday from 7 p.m. until 8 p.m. The Lachute Caisse Populaire will be open from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. each Friday, as at present.

Ol' Hannibal came down from the mountains to enroll his son in school. "My boy's after some l'arnin'," he told the teacher. "What do ye have?"

"We offer English, spelling, trigonometry, history and geography," she said.

"Well give him some of thet trigernometry," Hannibal said. "he's the worst shot in the family!"

More than 3,300 communities in the United States, I hear, now own forests. They range in size from a five-acre wood lot in Arkansas to a 67,000-acre watershed in the Cascade Mountains, which is owned by the City of Seattle. Thirty-one years ago, for instance the town of Pembroke, Mass., took over 100 acres of nearly-worthless land. Today that land, covered with pine and spruce, yields a harvest of timber worth $2,000 a year! And part of that land is used for recreation: for baseball, picnics and hikes.

Same thing is happenin' all over. Waynesville, N..C. has owned 8244 acres of woodland since 1915. In 1948 the town began to harvest its timber, and since that time has realized a net profit of $250,000! In Danville, N.H., a church-owned wood lot has earned $45,000 for the church in the last 100 years. And Groton, Mass., which uses the principles of selective cutting and reforestation on its 420 acres of white pine, has just finished cutting $2,000 worth of timber. The oldest community forest in America, they tell me, is at Newington, N.H. When Paul Revere repaired Newington's cracked church bell just before the American Revolution, he was paid with money the town forest had earned!

• • •

But the idea is even older than that. Zurich, Switzerland, owns a forest 650 years old, which pays the city $115,000 every year.

• • •

Lots of folks think community forests are a good idea. The Massachusetts Association, for instance, plants 5,000 free trees for any town that is willin' to set aside 100 acres of land—and today one out of three towns in the state owns a forest. I think community forests make good sense. Maybe your town could use one!

"Hello, Stumpy. Are you fishin'?" Ol' Sam asked me the other day.

"Nope," I said. "Drownin' worms!" See you soon!

Bottle-Throwers Deserve Harsh Treatment

By G. E. Mortimore,
"All Aboard" Columnist

Two little boys in my neighborhood cut their feet badly on broken bottles which some clod had thrown in a pool.

I found my car with a flat tire, ripped on the jagged edges of a beer bottle, shattered beside the road.

We rowed to an island in a lake, hoping to have a swim and a picnic; but the ground and the lake bottom were so littered with glass and old cans that we left in disgust.

Those are just three examples of the traps and eyesores deposited by selfish litterbugs.

Fouling the country with garbage is filthy bad manners, to say the least. But scattering glass is a serious crime.

Forest fires are often started by a piece of glass that concentrates the rays of the sun. A person may sever an artery on a broken bottle and (lacking knowledge of first aid) bleed to death before he can get help.

The lout who threw the bottle is to blame for the forest fire as certainly as though he had poured oil on a bush and set a match to it. He is guilty of cutting a little boy's foot, just as though he had slashed the boy with a knife.

People who are caught starting fires and attacking others with knives are sent to jail or a mental home. Bottle-throwers deserve the same treatment.

Provinces and cities have laws against scattering dangerous rubbish. Such an offence is often impossible to prove, and the penalties are too light. However, lawyers tell me that the police could bring up a bigger gun against bottle-throwing hoodlums, if they chose. It is Section 165 of the Criminal Code, dealing with those who commit nuisances and endanger the safety of the public. Under the Criminal Code, offenders could be punished with severe fines and jail terms. Such punishment is what they need.

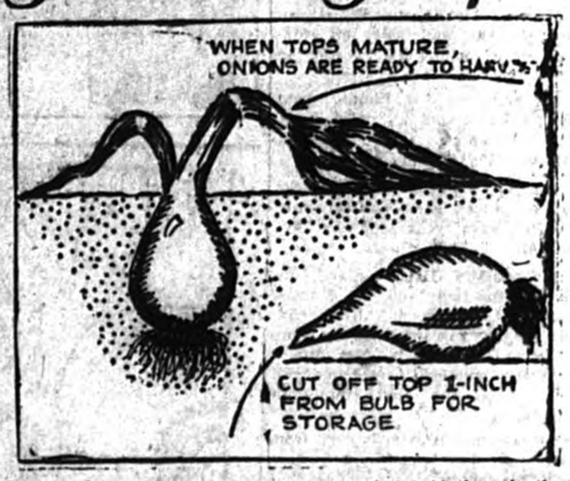

The police can't be everywhere. Bottle-throwers are hard to catch. I suggest that citizens should lay information against anyone they see throwing bottles. And if the police will not take strong action, the people should raise a clamor until they do.

BURN THEM!

Cooksville, Ont. (CP) — Albert Crookes, former reeve, gave the impression he wished councillors to brighten up the rest of the summer, planning-wise, when he suggested they build a monster bonfire of building by-laws and regulations and start anew.

Garden-Graph

If you are growing onions, and they are well worth their space, the proper harvesting and storing of them is important.

When onions are not pulled to be used as green onions, but are left in the ground to mature, the tops of the plants lop over as the bulbs reach their full growth.

To speed this ripening process, when the tops of some of the plants in the row show signs of ripening, run a lawn mower or barrel over the tops. This disturbs the roots and checks growth.

The accompanying Garden-Graph shows how the onion tops should be bent over the ground, if they have not fallen of their own accord, to aid them in the ripening process.

The "thick neck" or "bottle neck" onions do not keep well and therefore should not be stored, but kept handy and used before the other types.

To keep well in storage onions must be mature and thoroughly dry. When the tops are well dried down, pull the onions and let them lie in the sun to cure for a day or two. Then cut off the tops about one inch above the bulb, as shown in the Garden-Graph.

Onions in storage need circulation of air, therefore they should be placed in baskets, slatted crates or mesh bags.

Have You A Question on UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE OR EMPLOYMENT?

In this column we publish questions about unemployment insurance and employment, together with answers received from the Unemployment Insurance Commission.

If you are uncertain about any point do not hesitate to send your question to your district Unemployment Insurance office. We will obtain an answer and publish it in this column.

Q. If I take a job in non-insurable employment can I still be insured and pay my own premiums?

A. No, except where your employment becomes non-insurable because your yearly earnings have risen to more than $4,800 and where you have already been insured for at least 30 weeks in the two-year period immediately preceding this event.

Q. What shall I have to do in order to draw unemployment insurance benefit after I get married? Will I have to work for some time? If my employer dismisses me and hires someone to replace me, and if I'm unable to find other work, will I be able to draw benefit? To what office shall I report to apply for benefit? I work in Montreal and live near Joliette.

A. There are certain restrictions on the payment of benefit to women who are married less than 104 weeks. Generally, if you are working when you get married you will have to work for at least ten weeks in insured employment after leaving that job, in order to qualify for benefit. If you were unemployed when you got married then you will have to work for at least ten weeks after marriage. These conditions may be waived, however, in certain circumstances, and it is suggested you enquire at your local office for full particulars.

Happy Reception for Channel Swimmer

Quebec (CP) — Jacques Amyot, 33-year-old Quebec draughtsman, who recently became the first French-Canadian to swim the English channel, was feted by thousands of his home-town citizens the day he returned here from Europe.

A large crowd awaited his arrival at L'Ancienne-Lorette airport where his family, together with civic, provincial and federal government representatives welcomed him. Then he was paraded to city hall, to the provincial legislature buildings and to the Archbishop's palace for official receptions. Premier Duplessis congratulated the swimmer when he called at the legislature building.

In the evening, a huge parade which included several brass bands, was organized to escort Amyot to the racecourse for more celebrations. A thunderstorm marred the parade when it was about halfway through the city, but the mobile procession was able to continue.

Mines Minister Reports Field Survey Program Exceeds Previous Years

The Hon. W. M. Cottingham, Minister of Mines for Quebec, has announced that his Department's 1956 field program, now in full swing, is the largest ever undertaken during its long history of geological and mineral exploration in the province. A total of 37 projects are under way; 24 of these are geological mapping parties and the other 13 projects are of a varied and more specialized nature.

The Minister of Mines and Deputy for Argenteuil County notes that, judging from past experience, the work of the Department's geologists will, in some instances, point the way to the future opening up by private industry of vast new areas of mineral wealth. Other projects have been initiated in regions of known mineral occurrences in order to help the economic development of such districts.

The geological field-parties are at work in sections of the province extending from its southern limits to far northern parts bordering Ungava Bay, and from the Ontario border eastward to Gaspé and the lower North Shore of the St. Lawrence.

The four northernmost parties are mapping areas in New Quebec west and southwest of Ungava Bay where, in addition to iron-bearing formations, there are important indications of base-metal deposits, including copper, nickel, lead and zinc.

In the electoral district of Saguenay, an area about 65 miles northeast of Sept-Iles is being examined, and another party is studying the rocks in the vicinity of the large-scale hydro-electric project rapidly nearing completion on Bersimis River, about 200 miles northeast of Quebec City.

One party has been given the special assignment of testing geochemical prospecting methods in the Chibougamau district, and another is making geophysical studies in the district of Argenteuil.

Five geological mapping parties have been assigned to the important Chibougamau district, at present undergoing rapid mineral development. One group is doing detailed mapping in Roy township; the other four are each covering areas of 200 square miles or more 50 miles southwest, 20 miles northwest, 40 miles northeast, and 65 miles southeast of the rapidly expanding community of Chibougamau.

In the district of Rouyn-Noranda, detailed mapping is being carried on in Duprat township, 15 miles northwest of Noranda, and a second party is doing regional mapping of an area 35 miles southeast of that center.

Two parties are mapping in the district of Pontiac. One is covering 200 square miles in the vicinity of Delaney and Renzy lakes, about 50 miles northwest of Maniwaki, where last fall prospectors located copper and nickel bearing zones; the other group is mapping an area of similar extent 50 miles northwest of Hull.

An area in the districts of Papineau and Labelle, 55 miles northeast of Hull, is being studied, and another in Terrebonne and Montcalm just east of Ste. Agathe is being covered.

In the Eastern Townships three parties are at work. One group is doing detailed mapping in Bolton and Stukely townships about 20

Harvest Help Recruited from Argenteuil Co.

The grain harvest in the Western Prairies is now in full progress, and machinery and farmers are hard at work reaping the crops. As is usual for this massive operation, a shortage of labor exists in the immediate areas surrounding the harvest. This is particularly true this year, due to other major projects having absorbed much of the labor force. The Trans-Canada Pipe Line, DEW Line and other industrial expansion contracts have drained available manpower to a minimum.

G. A. Downing, manager of the Lachute office of the National Employment Service, states that his office has been called upon again this year to recruit part of the required help from the County of Argenteuil. As of last night, 35 men from the surrounding district have already been directed toward this year's harvesting area. Harvesters are recruited through the National Employment Service for a Federal-Provincial Farm Program. Special reduced fares allow willing applicants to travel to Winnipeg, Man. These men are then referred to the farmers in the western provinces who require help, and transportation from that point on is free of cost for the worker. It is hoped that some 20 more qualified farm workers will be sent from the Lachute office within a week.

The majority of men willing to take part in such excursions in the past have come from the Grenville-Calumet area as well as from Arundel. Harvesting is generally complete by the end of October and the men return from Winnipeg at a still more advantageous fare.

Apart from earning comparatively good salary these workers can experience an interesting trip to the Western Provinces. There are many families in which the father and even the grandfather took part in these excursions in their younger days, and they now see their sons and grandsons proceeding west to do the work and visit that vast stretch of land.

Extend Hospitality of Community Park for CNIB Picnic

The Rev. Jas. Armour of Lachute was guest speaker at the Rotary Club meeting last week. His views of life in Canada as compared to his native Ireland made very interesting listening, and made his audience realize how many things are taken for granted in this country and not fully appreciated.

The Community Park in Brownsburg yesterday was the gathering place for the Association for the Blind annual picnic, and a taxi service was organized among Rotary members.

Garden Party Pleasant Affair at Carillon Museum

The Historical Society of Argenteuil County held a successful garden party on the lawn of the Museum at Carillon last Saturday.

Cards were enjoyed by some of the guests, while others took the opportunity to chat with old friends. All enjoyed the music provided through the generosity of Miss Mildred Douglas, of Cushing, who also donated the door and bridge prizes.

The door prizes were won by Mrs. W. M. Cottingham, of Lachute. Mrs. Ward Moncrieff, of Brownsburg, and Mr. Peter Walker, of Carillon.

Mrs. Wm. Canning, of Cushing, and Mrs. I. N. Draper, of St. Andrews East, were winners of the bridge prizes.

A beautiful yellow Ayers blanket, which had been donated by the company, was won by Mrs. W. Windsor, of St. Andrews.

A group of ladies interested in the Dalesville Cemetery Fund served a delicious tea, the proceeds going to augment that fund.

Mrs. George McGibbon, president of the Historical Society thanked all who had helped to make this event such a success.

New Residence Razed by Fire Near Marelan

Fire of unknown origin last Friday afternoon razed the two-storey dwelling of Luc Roy, on Route 8 between St. Philippe and Marelan. Neighbors and passers-by managed to save some of the contents from the burning building.

Jean-Guy Lafleur, a neighbor across the highway, first spotted the flames between the house and adjoining garage, and with his father attempted to halt the blaze with buckets of water drawn from a neighboring well. But their efforts, as well as those of other would-be helpers, were in vain. An attempt to utilize an electric pump failed when the power supply failed in the burning building. Fire Chief Geo. Y. Deacon of Lachute was summoned, but on investigating the call and ascertaining there were no other structures in danger, decided it was useless to journey to the building already a mass of flames, when there was not sufficient water to quell the fire.

Mr. Roy, owner of the building, was at work at Marelan at the time of the fire, while Mrs. Roy was elsewhere in the vicinity visiting her father. The two-storey home had only recently been erected. The structure was of wood, covered with imitation brick siding. The loss was partially covered by insurance.

The Roy family, which comprises four children, are presently residing with Wilfrid Leveillée, father of Mrs. Roy.

Two Restaurants Broken Into

Around $45 in cash and a large number of cigarette packages and cartons were stolen from Morrow's Snack Bar, near Barron's Bridge, early last Friday morning.

According to Police Chief Fernand Trepanier, the building was entered by means of a back window facing the North River, protected only by a screen. Approximately $20 was taken from the cash register and some $25 from an amusement machine, in addition to an undisclosed number of cigarettes.

Entry was also made to Church's Quick Lunch, Main Street West, although nothing was reported stolen. A similar means of access was used by the would-be thieves who, although they broke open the nickelodeon, were apparently scared away.

The restaurant, which is operated by Omer Church, was entered in the early hours of Sunday morning. Chief Trepanier believes both offences were committed by the same party, and reports that he has clues which he hopes will lead to apprehension of the culprit.

Success Attends Richelieu Club Annual Event

A crowd of several hundred persons gathered at the Exhibition Grounds recently for the third annual Richelieu Club field day and harness races. The enthusiastic crowd assured the local service club of a successful outcome and substantial proceeds to go towards their charitable work.

In addition to the horse races, three bicycle races were held and a total of $75 was divided between the nine winners, three from each event.

The chain saw contest proved as popular as ever with the Senior results as follows: 1, Dieudonné Charlebois; 2, Russel Young; 3, Lyall Young. The Junior event was won by George Pasco, with Marcel Belanger placing second and Clement Lamarche third.

The two bingo games, for which one became eligible by purchasing a program, were won by Mrs. Nazaire Marot ($15), of Rigaud, and Mr. Palma Joly ($10), Lachute.

The drawing for the completely automatic washing and drying machines was won by Alfred Montpetit, of Ayersville. The ticket for the $800 prize, drawn by young Ronald Malette, had been sold by Richelieu Club member Jean-Paul Roy.

At the close of the event, club president, Gustave Joannette, and field day organizer, J. P. Roy, thanked all who assisted on behalf of the Club.

Local High School Athlete Ranks 4th in Dominion For Junior Gymnast Title

By ARNE PETERSEN, Lachute High School Physical Training Instructor

Reg Stansfield of Lachute High School made a splendid showing at the Dominion Gymnastics Championship meet, held August 19-20 in Toronto, attaining fourth place. There were, including young Stansfield, 21 male gymnasts from all over Canada taking part.

Saturday's program consisted of compulsory events, while on Sunday the competition was open. The contest was extremely tough covering a 21-hour grind during the two days. Some competitors from Windsor and Noranda were given oxygen to keep them going, and only 13 finished out of the 21 to start; four had to quit as a result of accidents — one with a broken hand, another with a dislocated elbow.

The parallel-bars contest was won by S. Sandmark of Noranda (30 years of age) with 8,600 points; second was Wolfgang (28 years old) a German from Winnipeg, with 8,450 points; third was P. Rose from Windsor (26 years old) with 8,325 points; R. Stansfield came fourth with 8,300 points.

S. Sandmark won the Senior Provincial Championship but started in the Dominion Juniors as he is a Swede and could not try out for the Olympic Games.

In the rings events, wins followed in the same order, Sandmark taking 9,100 points and Reg Stansfield coming fourth again, with 8,850.

On the long vaulting-horse after Saturday's program Reg was placed third, with a good chance to do better in his open free jump. Fate, however, changed this situation, but he ended up in fifth place.

In free-hand calisthenics Reg slipped in a back somersault and, though not hurting himself too much, it was a big handicap which left him in 11th place.

Among the 21 contestants, all of whom have had considerable experience, Reg Stansfield, who is only 16 years of age, made by far the best showing in form and rhythm, and was complimented by the Hon. Paul Martin, Minister of Health and Welfare, who in his closing speech said, in effect, "It is a pleasure to see a young gymnast like Reggie Stansfield perform as he has done, and if only more young people would do as he does, there would not be any juvenile delinquency to contend with."

Now gymnastics contests are finished for this season but Stansfield is already looking forward to the opening of school so he can start practising on the new high bar, kindly given to the school by an interested citizen, and on the new beat board and tumbling mat, purchased by the school this summer.

Reggie and I, his trainer, wish to thank the School Board for giving the opportunity to train in the gymnasium during the summer holidays, and we are also grateful to the numerous contributors in Lachute whose donations made it possible for us to attend the meet.

Ed. Note: While young Stansfield did not take first place, he has made a highly creditable showing and has brought honor to Lachute and to the local High School. All are proud of his achievements.

B of M Provides Parking Space

Conscious of the need for added parking space in the Main Street shopping centre, the Bank of Montreal local manager, Donald M. Hay, has been instrumental in having the rear of the bank's business lot paved for parking. The space, to accommodate about 20 cars, will be marked with white lines. Entry is by the driveway next to the bank, and the exit opens on Water Street.

While primarily designed to assist bank customers, Mr. Hay hopes this facility will also prove a civic asset and relieve over-crowded parking during the busiest hours on Main Street.

Various Thefts Reported From Parked Autos

Police Chief Trepanier reports numerous complaints of petty thieving from parked cars and other vehicles, and requests all car owners to park their cars where they can be seen by patrolling police in cases where a locked garage is not available.

Cars and trunks should be locked and the windows properly shut at all times when not in use. Spare tires, hub-caps and other items have been reported stolen within the past few days.

Costly Power Break In Buckingham Area Caused by Lightning

Farmers in a 50-mile area from Buckingham, Que., north to Notre Dame des Laus are still counting the loss from a power break which lasted from 7 p.m. last Thursday until 2 a.m. Sunday.

In an unscheduled return to the days of oil lamps and manual labor, supplies were ruined in freezers and modern farm production methods thrown into disruption.

Transformer Explodes

Cause of the break was a lightning bolt during Thursday's's electrical storm. It struck the High Falls power station of the Maclaren-Quebec Power Company. The transformer exploded in a mass of burning oil.

Homes and installations at High Falls also were without power.

Company workers, with the assistance of Ontario Hydro, finished the repair job 12 hours earlier than was expected.

Some farmers transported frozen foods by truck to Buckingham for emergency storage, but the loss in foods alone was extensive.

Farm labor, faced with chores normally handled by electricity, ran down to cold meals or makeshift dinners cooked on wood fires.

Gatineau Lines — TV Antenna

Safety should be a prime consideration in the installation of a TV antenna.

Many of these antennae are of a complicated design and manufactured from a variety of materials, some of suitable weight and strength and others of questionable quality.

When erected close to an electric transmission or distribution line they can be a real source of danger. If an antenna is blown over, which is usually due to improper installation, it may fall onto the line.

In this event, if the line is of high voltage, the risk of fire and almost certainly of heavy damage and costly repairs or total destruction of the set, is very real.

Furthermore, it is more than likely that a whole distribution circuit may be put out of commission for a time, with great inconvenience to a considerable number of householders and possibly to industrial establishments as well.

The recent high winds have emphasized the importance of using right materials and proper installation of a TV antenna.

The bright idea of a New York Fire Commissioner gives us an idea, too. He liked his dress cap; disliked the regulation fire helmet — but he recognized the ever-present danger of falling debris. So he simply had an inner shield of aluminum made and fitted into the cap.

And that's where our idea comes in: A lightweight aluminum shield that would fit under a wayward husband's fedora and save him many a skull abrasion when he sneaked in late at night to a rolling-pin reception by the little woman. Ah! aluminum, the useful metal!

Death Removes Local Business Figure of Past Quarter-Century

The Late M. G. Assaly

Moise Georges Assaly, a well-known Lachute businessman for the past quarter-century, passed away suddenly at his summer residence at Lake MacDonald last Friday evening. He was in his 58th year.

Born in Lebanon in the Middle East in 1899, he married and came to Canada in 1923, operating a business in Hawkesbury and St. Jerome before coming to Lachute in 1930. He recently suspended operations at his clothing store, Main Street, following 26 years in the same location, and at the time of his sudden death had plans for erecting a new building in front of his residence.

He is survived by his wife, two sons, Freddie and Eddy, a daughter, (Norma) Mrs. Motter, all of Montreal; two brothers, Alec, of Ste. Agathe, and John, of Cornwall; and a sister in Lebanon.

Funeral service was held at the Ste. Anastasie Parish Church, of which he was a member, on Tuesday afternoon, followed by interment in the Hawkesbury cemetery.

Hill Foot Community Loses Lifelong Resident

The Late Russell Hume

The Hill Foot community was saddened by the sudden death of Russell Hume, which occurred on Friday last, August 17.

He spent his entire life in this community and leaves to mourn his loss two sisters, Miss Annie Hume and Mrs. J. B. Gunn (Annabel), also three brothers, William D., John M. and Stewart.

The funeral service was conducted by the Rev. Wilson Bridge from the Lachute United Church on Monday afternoon, with interment at Lachute Protestant Cemetery.

Pall-bearers were neighbors of the deceased — Edwin Robertson, William Brass, William D. Pollock, Watson Berry, James Berry and Leonard Scott.

Priest Elaborates on Criticism of Quebec Prov. Election Methods

By Brian Selwood,
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Quebec (CP) — One of the two professor priests who published criticisms of Quebec provincial election methods has said, in a newspaper interview, that some politicians seem to think a political campaign is "something like a hockey game or a wrestling match."

The Rev. Louis O'Neill, a Laval University professor, made the statement in an interview published by the Quebec newspaper, Le Soleil.

Father O'Neill and Rev. Gerard Dion, of Laval University's Industrial Relations department, were authors of a 4,000-word article attacking Quebec election practices. The article appeared in "Ad Usum Sacerdotum", a monthly publication intended exclusively for the use of Roman Catholic clergy.

Father O'Neill teaches Morality at Quebec Seminary and is Laval University's Catholic Action chaplain. In the newspaper interview he said he wonders whether persons engaged in politics think of the consequences of some of their actions.

"Do we, for example, think of the consequences of certain attitudes taken in the operation of the electoral process during which youths witness reprehensible methods or hear bare-faced lies spoken by men who officially constitute our elite?" he said.

"How will these youths conduct themselves in 15 or 20 years? We must not forget that it is very easy to lower the civic conscience level and that it is an extremely long task to raise it. The political history of nations demonstrates this."

The article in "Ad Usum Sacerdotum" called for formation of a "Public Morality League" to educate the people of Quebec in civic morality.

In the newspaper interview Father O'Neill said he sees this morality league as a "Politically independent organization with the mission of recalling moral values to the public and assisting politicians to work in a healthier atmosphere."

He said such an organization should be operated by laymen, because political activity "is the responsibility of laymen." The clergy's role is to provide theological guidance.

FISHING FOR TROUT NOW IS NIGHT JOB

Vancouver (CP) — Fishing for trout after dark is becoming a major sport in British Columbia's lakes.

Nightfishing is the only type for fishermen at Cache Creek, about 115 miles northeast of here, and Ritcher lake, about 80 miles further east.

Many anglers who used to quit at dusk now stay as late as midnight. Casting with both flies and wobblers has paid off, but most anglers prefer trolling.

Night fishing is British Columbia is legal, but pit-lamping and lighted lures are strictly forbidden.

Reports from two major night spots show that chasing trout after dark is usually more productive than during the day. The explanation given is that trout don't usually respond as well on bright sunny days as during gloomy periods.

Tang in the Air

THOUGH reluctant to think of fall, with August still to be torn from the calendar — there is a distinct tang in the air today that presages an early change of the seasons. There are moves afoot and indications abroad, moreover, which give realism to the hastening autumn.

The teachers are drifting back, and parents are equipping their youngsters with new togs for school.

Vacation communities are poised on the foreboding of a chill let-down, a strange quietude, in which the timid creatures of the wild take over with new fortitude.

And here at home, renewed in vigor with our physical diversions, there are pleasures to anticipate — mental pleasures, creative hobbies and pastimes — spiritual pleasures, the renewing of neglected church and social affiliations — and community pleasures, neighborliness, companionship and co-operative work.

Summer's end, as it approaches, does not sound a knell to personal joys. The fun of the beach, the splash of water and the saturating sunshine fade out for another season, but new vistas open the way to rich experiences ahead.

It is a season to realize, and be thankful, that Canada presents such variety of scene and climate the year round, that none need find our way of life monotonous.

Farmers and Horse Sense

WHEN THE farmer stopped having to rest his horses periodically, he also stopped resting himself. The failure to observe rest periods and the accompanying fatigue is blamed for many farm accidents — according to a report from the American Medical Association.

Dr. Franklin H. Top, from Iowa City, points out that deaths from farm accidents in 1954 totalled 14,000, a rate of 61.7 deaths per 100,000 farm residents. Motor vehicle accidents were responsible for the greatest share, followed by "work" accidents with farm machinery. Among major industries farming rates third in the number of accidental deaths.

The high level of work accidents on the farm, he says, is partially due to the shift from horse-drawn to motor-driven machinery.

Horses had to be rested periodically, and with this came rest for the driver. Furthermore, the same horses could not be worked 10 to 15 hours a day for several days. Now, it is not unusual for a farmer to spend more than 10 hours a day in the field with a tractor, especially if he gets a late start because of weather or soil conditions.

Studies show that there is a peak/mid-morning and mid-afternoon period during which the majority of accidents occur. Thus, a mid-morning break like that given in most factories is a good idea for the farmer, too.

Carelessness in the handling of machinery and poor safety design also have contributed to farm accidents. Only in recent years have manufacturers been interested in safety in farm machinery, but the safety devices now provided are often removed by the farmer, thus inviting accidents.

"Advanced Motorists"

BRITISH motorists may soon be taking a new kind of driving test — one that will last two hours and earn successful applicants a certificate and special badge showing that they have attained the highest police standards.

Overseas visitors to Britain will be eligible for the examination and will be able to wear the badge in their home countries.

The "Institute of Advanced Motorists" under chairmanship of Lord Sempill, a Scottish peer who is a veteran aviator and motorist, will include four Members of Parliament and representatives of the auto industry and sport.

The Police Driving School of Hendon, near London, will provide some of the examiners for the test. The school has an impressive record. As a result of its methods it has cut the accident rate in the police force from an average of one accident per 9,000 miles in 1935 to one in every 72,500 miles, despite the vast increase in traffic and the higher speeds of today.

Tests for the ordinary motorist will be voluntary and in addition to the less exacting compulsory test which has for many years been required in Britain.

Those who earn the certificate and silver and red badge of the Institute will have to apply for renewal of their membership annually and will be obliged to disclose their driving records.

British insurance companies will offer reduced insurance rates to members (automobile insurance is compulsory in Britain). Premiums will be cut by 15% the first year and the reduction will rise progressively to 30%.

Using Proper Words

THERE IS a growing insistence in the English-speaking world that people learn to express themselves properly, effectively and simply. Such a campaign of course is nothing new — there is on record an 18th century letter threatening a civil servant with dismissal "as a fool" unless he learned to write "a clear, melodious tongue."

After the First World War there was a great movement for simplified spelling. The idea won the support among others of George Bernard Shaw, and of one American newspaper which tried to convince its readers that "thru" and "filosophy" were acceptable.

This campaign could not crack the centuries of grammatical tradition. But in Canada the problem of language has been brought to the fore in recent years.

It started when Sidney Smith, president of the University of Toronto, said that 40 per cent of the university's first-year students could not pass "basic English". His sharp comments included the statements that if such students had a thought they could not express it; they could not spell; they knew no grammar.

The Royal Bank of Canada joined the assault on poor language. Its monthly letter carried an article entitled "On Writing Briefly" which says: "To use too many words to communicate one's thought is a sign of mediocrity, while to gather much thought into a few words, clearly and accurately, stamps the person of executive genius."

Language is good, the letter says, "if it is effortless, showing no sign of strain in its composition; if it is untheatrical, making its points without needlessly sawing the air; if it is simple in its construction, making intelligible things that might be obscure; if the words fit your thoughts, not hanging like a giant's clothes on the limbs of a dwarf nor squeezing a man's frame into the clothes of a boy; and if all this is attained in the smallest space commensurate with what you have to say."

This is not a call for a return to the 800-word vocabulary of "Basic English." Rather it is a demand for an understanding of the versatility of words and for clearer thinking.

And a lot of people are concerned about the use of language. In London, England, the other day a group of stenographers sent 10 shillings to the People's Dispensary for Sick Animals with the note: "For our dumb friends, who cannot possibly use the English language in the same disgraceful way that we do."

Those Medical Miracles

A REPORT from the American Foundation, New York, corrects the cheerful belief that modern medical science is knocking out diseases one by one like ninepins by discovering new wonder drugs and diagnostic devices. There has been no such chain-reacting series of miracles, comments The Financial Post.

The report stresses the need for more pure basic knowledge. The doctors can now treat cancer with some success, but they don't know how it starts. They don't know why some people are susceptible to rheumatism, whether alcoholism is chiefly mental or physical, and what causes hypertension. They don't know why X-ray surveys still show tuberculosis cropping up though mankind supposedly had licked this plague.

The answer to any of these questions might be an incidental by-product of study of the fundamental nature of living tissue. In physics it was pure research, with no apparent practical aim, that led to nuclear fission. In medicine it may be pure biology, the study of life itself, that will solve the riddle of cancer.

Hint to philanthropists: basic medical research is in need of funds.

TAKE WOOD STATUE FROM LOFTY PERCH

Carved by hand from a cedar log in 1842 by William Holmes, a local carpenter and builder, the figure has been a landmark of the city square. Earlier this year it was discovered the base had deteriorated dangerously, in spite of steel braces installed for support a few years ago.

So for the first time since 1842, the figure, lowered by a huge crane, has been removed from its lofty perch. The sword Sally carried became abbreviated by an electric storm and her garments were somewhat tattered after 114 years' wear.

Officials said a copy will be made and placed atop the court house.

"SCOOP!"

"There's no beating the United States for low prices," George Belmore told me, just before he left for his annual vacation in America. George has always been fascinated by the lower cost of certain commodities south of the border.

"Sure," he admits readily, "food is higher but everything else is dirt cheap. And the bargains are fantastic. You can bet your boots I'm going to load up with as much as I can bring home."

True to his word, George arrived home last night loaded to the hilt. I don't know how much money he had with him but he certainly had a glorious time spending what he took. And upon his return, he called in his mother, father, and one or two close friends — myself included — to display the trophies he had garnered while away.

Of all the treasures, I suppose his new electric shaver tops the bill. He found it on sale in a drug store and snapped it up before the proprietor changed his mind and the price. Originally, the shaver was listed at $19.95, U.S. funds. For the sale, the price was slashed to $9.95 and George jumped to get one.

Following the demonstration of the shaver, George wended his way through the other stuff he had bought. Toys for the kids, bric-a-brac for the home and an assortment of articles to make life easier for his wife in the kitchen.

"Now, here's something worthwhile," he announced, brandishing an ice-cream scoop over his head. "I found this on sale in a little out-of-the-way store for only 88 cents. We're always dishing up ice-cream around this house and I figured it would be just the job for the stuff we buy in bulk."

We examined the scoop in detail and then passed on to other items of interest. When the show was over, we sat around sipping the host's drinks and surveying the unpacking going on around us.

"I only wish I'd known you were going to buy one of these," Myrtle Johnson said, retrieving the scoop for a closer examination. "I've wanted one like that for some time."

George's mother shifted herself forward and looked as if she intended to enter the conversation. However, George got the first word in and she sat back once more.

"What burns me up," our host began, "is that I had to pay 88 cents for the darn thing."

"Well, for the love of Pete," Myrtle cut in, "surely you didn't expect to get it for less, did you?"

"No, certainly not. The point is, however, that I could have got them cheaper. The very day after I bought this one I went into a neighboring store and found the very same thing on sale. And do you know how much they were asking for them?"

We all took wild guesses but none of us came close.

"The very same item, mind you, and only 66 cents. Boy, was I burned up!"

"Are you still interested in getting a scoop like that, Myrtle," George's mother asked, when the opportunity presented itself.

"Why, of course. But I don't want to pay any of the fancy Canadian prices for one."

She leaned forward, picked up the scoop and waved it at us.

"If anyone here is interested I'll get you the very same make of scoop tomorrow for only 59 cents."

"You're kidding, mother," George cut in. "Just where are you planning to get them?"

"They're on sale for the next three days at Simpson's. If you look in your paper tonight you'll see them advertised there."

Strange to relate, George wasn't interested somehow.

It DOES matter which Oil Burner you buy!

If you're in the market for an oil burner, there are dozens for you to choose from. They all look very much alike. They all burn oil. Some are pretty efficient, others less so. But, unless you're an engineer, there's no way for you to decide which burner is best for your needs, except by insisting on one made by a reputable, long-established manufacturer. Like Smart's, for example. We recommend Smart's series "A" oil burners because when we tell one we know that the customer is going to be satisfied with the deal, for a long time. If that seems to you to be a good reason for buying a Smart's oil burner, let us show you the complete range, and tell you all about them.

Main St. Businessman Voices Appreciation

TO THE EDITOR

Lachute, Aug. 20, 1956

Editor, The Watchman.

Dear Sir:

Permit me, through the columns of your newspaper, to express my warmest thanks to the local population, for their evidence of appreciation on the opening of our new pharmacy last week-end.

From the outset of our plans, we have aimed to create an establishment worthy of the Town of Lachute. The numerous tributes we have received are an indication that this ideal has been realized, in some measure — and we are encouraged accordingly, to give still better service to our customers.

With my sincerest thanks.

(Signed)

— Donat Saulnier, B.Pa., L.Ph.

INTERNATIONAL UNDERSTANDING

After years of close observation of the lack of co-operation between our local governments, one begins to understand why it is so difficult for nations to live in an atmosphere of harmony and good relationship.

FEED CONVERSION
What it is, and what it does for you.

Feed Conversion is simply the amount of pounds of feed that you feed to produce a pound of meat, milk or dozen eggs.

You can produce these on most any feed, either good or bad, low or high-priced, but the AMOUNT it takes to make a pound or dozen is very MUCH MORE IMPORTANT to you than the PRICE per bag.

Let's take hens. Some feeds will produce a dozen eggs on 6 lbs. feed; some will not do even that good a job. At 6 lbs. feed to a dozen eggs, you get 17 dozen eggs per bag, and with eggs at 50 cents a dozen, this bag of feed brings you $8.50. Say the feed cost you $4.75, then you have left $3.75 for running expenses and PROFIT. . . I hope it is profits you are after.

PURINA kept records on over a million hens last year and these records show that PURINA LAYING CHOW fed to the hens produced a dozen eggs on 4.4 lbs. feed, or instead of 17 dozen they produced 23 dozen eggs per bag. Twenty-three dozen eggs at 50 cents a dozen will give you $11.50 for your bag of Purina Laying Chow, or a running expense and profit of $6.40 per bag.

Now which is the cheapest? One at $4.75 which is 35 cents cheaper a bag than Purina, or Purina, which is too dear at $5.10 a bag, but which gives you 65 cents more than the cheap bag and 30 cents more profit!

WATCH YOUR FEED CONVERSION, it tells the true story, not the old song, "Just as good as Purina but cheaper." It isn't what you pay, it is what you get that counts!

Switch your poultry to Purina Laying Chows today and start catching extra profits. Try our service, it is second to none. — And we deliver too.

OF MANY THINGS

By Ambrose Hills

Government Culture

As the feller said: "I ain't against culture. Heck, I took my girl to the art show, didn't I?"

I am against the current trend to make government the patron of the arts — because I have seen that it just doesn't work. Attempts to proletariatize culture through public corporations set up by the state actually damage cultural growth.

Millions of us know this, but because we haven't had time to dabble in the arts too much, the dilettanti talk us down. They present fantastic, neurotic scribblings, blobs of paint or explosions of dissonant music and shout "shame" at us when we honestly confess that in our opinion it is all a hoax. Too many of us meekly bow our heads and allow that if the government is sponsoring it, it must be culture.

Why don't we use our heads? Take a look at your local Member of Parliament — look closely! Is he a better judge of culture than you? Not at all. Read the speeches made in the House of Commons! How much culture there? Hardly a shade. Some of the worst oratory in history is being mouthed at Ottawa as these lines are being written. When we allow these men to spend millions of dollars of our money to sponsor culture, we need to have our heads examined.

Maybe I still have too much straw in my hair to be an authority on culture; but Sir Thomas Beecham ought to know what he is talking about — and he agrees with me. Writing in the Sunday Times of London he states quite bluntly that the zeal of public corporations for culture is greater than their insight.

Our situation in Canada today is absolutely fantastic. A man in Nova Scotia writes a novel which succeeds. The government does nothing for him but takes a huge bite of his income in taxes. But a girl in a Toronto night club can sing a sexy song with all sorts of bawdy inflections — and the government pays her big fees to star on TV and radio! What a horrible farce! And what an expense! The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation has now shouldered aside the CNR as the heaviest millstone around the taxpayer's neck.

If you are a member of an organization of any kind, and some hoity-toity executive wants to make representations in favor of continued heavy spending by government on TV and radio, don't be talked into it. Government culture is a proven flop, and an expensive one.

Geological Field Survey

miles southwest of Sherbrooke, not far from the producing property of Quebec Copper Corp., Ltd. The other two teams are carrying on regional mapping, one in the district of Frontenac south of Lake Megantic, the other in the St. Sylvestre area 30 miles south of Quebec City.

About 115 miles northeast of the Provincial capital, an area in the southwest corner of the electoral district of Témiscouata is being examined.

Three parties have been asigned to work in Gaspésia. One is mapping an area bordering the St. Lawrence just east of Matane. A second group is investigating an area in the Shickshock mountains, some 20 miles southwest of Cap Chat. The third party is mapping an area bordering Bonaventure River about 40 miles southwest of the Town of Gaspé.

Additional projects being continued by officers of the Department include investigations of water-supply problems, examinations of metallic and non-metallic mineral deposists and prospects, and studies of marl deposits.

The progress of deep borings by private companies in various parts of the province in the search for accumulations of oil is also being followed closely.

Summing up, Mr. Cottingham stresses the varied nature of the work being done and points out that all sections of the province are receiving attention from the Department. The Department, he says, will continue its policy of assisting all those vitally interested in fostering the development of Quebec's mineral resources — the prospector, the property owner, companies and individuals alike.

Engagement

Mr. and Mrs. Holland Kennedy, of Rawcliffe, Que., wish to announce the engagement of their daughter, Glenna Myrtle, to Kenneth Thomas Wilson, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. G. Wilson, of Lachute, Que. — the marriage to take place at Lachute United Church in September.

Pretty Wedding Seen Recently at United Church

Kennedy - Gauley

Baskets of pink and white gladioli formed the decorations in Lachute United Church on Saturday, August 11, for the marriage of Catherine Hazel Margaret, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Gauley, of Lachute, to Alvin Robert, son of Mr. and Mrs. Allen Kennedy, of Dalesville, the Rev. Wilson Bridge officiating. Mr. Wayne Riddell played the wedding music and Miss June Candlish, of Montreal, sang "Blest Be the Tie that Binds" and "O Perfect Love."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride looked lovely in a floor-length gown of white embroidered nylon tulle over satin, fashioned with a tight-fitting bodice and full skirt, the sleeves ending in points over her hands. Her veil of tulle was held in place by a double crown of pearls and sequins and she carried a cascade bouquet of red Sweetheart roses and baby's breath.

Mrs. Walter Gauley was matron of honor for her sister-in-law, and Mrs. Gordon Nixon, Mrs. Ian Gallant, Miss Marylin King and Miss Marion Curren, bridesmaids, all wore strapless dresses of blue net and lace with boleros and matching headdresses, and carried cascade bouquets of white and yellow mums. May Jackson and Janice Noble, flower girls for their cousin, wore dresses of blue and white nylon over taffeta, and carried baskets of white and yellow mums, with sprays of flowers for headdresses.

Mr. Lloyd Kennedy was best man for his brother, and the ushers were Messrs. Walter Gauley, Gordon Nixon, Joe and Lyall Kennedy.

Mrs. Gauley, mother of the bride, wore a street-length dress of old rose lace and silk, with velvet hat to match and metallic blue accessories, her corsage being of white carnations. Mrs. Kennedy, mother of the groom, wore a street-length dress of grey printed silk, a white velvet hat and white accessories, her corsage being of red carnations.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at Lachute Auditorium. Later the happy couple left for a short motor trip through Quebec City, Murray Bay and the Eastern Townships, the bride travelling in a mid-blue wool suit with navy accessories. On their return the bridal couple took up residence in Montreal.

Mr. Melvin Keefer, accompanied by Mrs. Thelma Townsend, motored to Ottawa to visit the former's mother, who underwent a serious operation in the Ottawa General Hospital.

Over the Years with THE LACHUTE WATCHMAN

75 YEARS AGO

August 26, 1881 —

Brownsburg — Farmers are almost through with their harvesting and grain is much better than was first expected.

There is some talk of getting up a wrestling match between two knights of petticoats. One of them seems bound to have a round out of a respectable young man, but we rather think she won't.

50 YEARS AGO

August 24, 1906 —

Some of our young men came in for considerable prominence at the hands of Mrs. Logan, of Chicago, who has been visiting in Laurel for a few weeks but was brought to Lachute for her removal to the Verdun Insane Asylum. The services of Dr. Mason were required and when he appeared he was confronted with the title of President-Roosevelt, which honor he still retains. Mr. A. Stackhouse then came into view and his attractive manner immediately won for him the title of Admiral Dewey.

Then Mr. J. Raitt sauntered quietly along munching a nice banana, and on the lady informing him of her hunger and weakness for that fruit, did the charitable thing and handed her the delicacy which she quickly started to devour, but thinking better of it returned the same in anything but a delicate manner.

She was removed on Tuesday where it is hoped she will soon regain her good reason.

25 YEARS AGO

August 21, 1931 —

Our sturdy young townsman, Allan Langille, has been accepted on the constabularly of the Royal Mounted Police and leaves for Regina on Friday morning to enter upon his three years service.

The little daughter of Ernest Larocque was struck by an automobile on Foundry Street Monday evening and had a narrow escape. She received a badly scarred face, but luckily no bones were broken.

The friend of a wise matron asked if she had yet made the long trip to California to pay a visit to her son and his new wife.

"No, I've been waiting until they have their first baby."

"Oh, I see, you don't want to spend the money for the trip until then."

"No, it isn't that," the matron replied, "It's just that I have a theory that grandmas are more welcome than mothers-in-law."

AMONG THE CHURCHES

Jehovah's Witnesses Convene in Montreal

The Lachute Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses have made plans to attend a four-day convention in Montreal this week. Mr. Alex J. Stainton, presiding minister of the group, in discussing this convention, pointed to the challenge to Christian thinking and Christian works in the rising tide of Communism in the world today. "The object of the four-day training program is to equip every one of the ministers of Jehovah's Witnesses in the practical use of the Bible as a help in building up the spiritual morale of the people in our community," he said, speaking at the local Kingdom Hall, 572 Main Street, Lachute.

Mr. Stainton said that Jehovah's Witnesses are the most convention-minded people in the world today. "We believe that religion is more than a matter of form; it is a life patterned after Christ and based on the Bible. For that reason, the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society, sponsors of the four-day rally, have planned this advanced ministry training program to enable us to live closer to the Bible and its teachings."

The program is scheduled for August 23-26 in the Verdun Auditorium. The vice-president of the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society, F. W. Franz, will be the main speaker, on the subject, "Why Permanent Peace Will Come in Our Day." More than 12 states of the U.S.A. will be represented, and at least seven provinces of Canada.

Inter-Club Tournament At Arundel Golf Club

(Our District Correspondent)

Arundel—On Sunday the Arundel Golf Club were hosts to the Inter-Club Trophy Tournament. The clubs participating in this event were Ste. Agathe, St. Jovite, St. Sauveur and Arundel.

The St. Jovite Club were winners for the fourth successive year, Arundel Club playing second. Dr. E. Ward, playing for St. Jovite, had the low gross. Those representing Arundel were Messrs. Harold Gordon, Morris Rathwell, Murray O'Shaughnessy, G. Fenton, Gordon Cooke and Douglas Cooke.

An enjoyable time was spent by all attending this event, and the afternoon closed with a buffet supper served by the lady members of the club. Next year's tournament will take place at St. Sauveur.

Deer Hunting Season

The provincial Game and Fisheries Department announced there will be a special deer season for hunters using bow and arrow, from September 10 to September 24, in the Horton Reserve, near Rimouski. The Department also announced regular deer hunting will be open this year in Drummond County, closed to hunters last season. In most sections of the province the deer hunting season is from November 1 to 30.

Colford Lodge Defeats Hawkesbury Legion

Last Sunday Colford's scored four big runs in the fourth inning to defeat Hawkesbury 5-1. Jean-Guy Larocque pitched another outstanding game for the winners, striking out 14 to register his 13th victory. Hawkesbury scored their lone run in the first inning.

The last few games Larocque has had trouble in the first few innings but then settles down and pitches fine ball. Trevor Holmes has developed into a big hitter for Colford's this season, as once again, he hit a home-run with the bases loaded. Allan Muir and Mel Stewart also played a fine game for the winners.

Next Sunday Colford's Lodge will play host to Aviation Electric of Montreal. The last time these two clubs met, Colford's walloped the Montreal boys 24-2; this time, however, the Aviation Electric coach says it's not going to be so easy! . . Game time is 2 p.m.

USE BOW AND ARROW TO KILL TWO BEARS

Dawson Creek, B.C. (CP) — Archery fans in this northwestern British Columbia area have gone out after big game — and they've bagged two bears.

The president of the Robin Hood Bow Hunters Archery Club, Pete Ludwig, bagged a 100-pound black bear during a hunt with Bud Bays of Prince George, B.C., in the area six miles southwest of Dawson Creek.

Hockey Claims Attention On the Sports Pages

SPORTS CAMERA
By Ken Romain,
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Long before the world series climaxes the baseball season, and even as the football campaign is getting up steam, hockey is again taking its place on the sports pages.

The training camps opening soon should give a picture of prospects for the next National Hockey League season, with all the changes that have been made in team strength during the summer.

At the annual summer meeting of the NHL last June professional hockey clubs, including the AHL, the Quebec Hockey League and the Western Hockey League, spent $215,000 in drafting 19 players. The NHL drafted seven from the AHL and eight from the Quebec and Western leagues combined. The AHL took four from the two smaller loops.

Building Campaign

One NHL club — Toronto Maple Leafs — is continuing a big rebuilding program begun before last season. The Leafs, whose last Stanley Cup win was in 1951, this year have a new coach, a new goalie, new players and new determination to improve their fourth-place finish of last spring.

Leafs have adopted the slogan "Rock 'n Roll with Howie Meeker and his crew cuts." The flambuoyant Leaf cry of last season: "Goals, Guts, and Glamour," has gone to the limbo where go all good slogans that don't live up to expectations.

Meekers, who had been coaching the Leaf farm club Pittsburgh Hornets, replaces Frank (King) Clancy, who moves upstairs as assistant to Leaf manager Hap Day.

Veteran goaltender Harry Lumley left the Toronto scene in a trade with Chicago Black Hawks. Replacing him is youthful Ed Chadwick from Winnipeg Warriors, who turned in a fine performance in five games with the Leafs last season.

Day announced that five juniors have been signed to contracts—four from the Memorial Cup-winning Toronto Marlboros and one from Toronto St. Michael's in the Ontario Junior A Hockey Association.

Eager Rookies

Day doesn't expect them all to make the regular lineup but they are getting the opportunity. Last year Leafs had six rookies in uniform. They will all be among the 29 who will report to training camp at Sudbury, September 15.

Meeker, who grabbed an American Hockey League championship in his first season with Hornets, is not committing himself on any changes.

"I'm not washing out a single member of last season's team before training camp," he said, which will be welcome words to the veterans who will be clawing for jobs.

He believes that Leafs lack a take-charge guy and hopes to produce one. He pointed out that Leafs were a winning club at home but had a poor record on the road.

He figures Leafs could finish as high as second place this season "if we get the kind of goaltending you can expect in the National Hockey League."

Brownsb'g Takes First of Series, Best-of-5 Finals

(Our District Correspondent)

Brownsburg — The Tigers took another big stride towards the Dollard Trophy on Sunday by beating Hawkesbury 5-4 in the 11th inning.

Somehow Brownsburg couldn't get started and the first four innings were like the worst sandlotters. Suddenly, though, they snapped out of it and their defensive work was more like championship calibre. Offensively, they whittled away at Hawkesbury's 4-1 lead to tie in the seventh and win in the second overtime inning.

Ronald Cousineau, who pitched eight shut-out innings in a row after the third inning, now possesses the enviable record of 10 victories and no defeats — excellent in any league. Again, control was Zag's big weapon. He walked the first man and then no more in 11 innings. He yielded 10 hits and struck out four.

The tying run came in the seventh inning when, with two out and the bases loaded, Coach Jimmy Murdoch came to bat for the slumping Yves Raymond. Jimmy has a knack of coming through in these situations even if he can't get a hit. Last week the winning run scored when the opposing third baseman made an error on Jimmy's grounder. This time, even striking out was profitable. The catcher dropped the ball and, while Jimmy made first safely, Mel Tomalty scored the tying run and Buddy Racine was nipped at the plate.

The big star for Brownsburg was that long-time bench-warmer, Germain Gagné, who came in in the fifth inning to single and eventually score. He tripled in the next run in the following inning. Mel Tomalty's performance was even more surprising, if less dramatic. He hit five singles in six times at bat, batted in one run and scored the equalizer. Keith Hazel singled twice. André Ouellette doubled and singled, and most important, drove in the winning run. Edgar Joly singled twice and Jacques and Buddy Racine once each.

Jacques Racine, who was responsible for a lot of the sloppy play in the early part, was brilliant in the last eight innings, taking part in 10 killings, several of them spectacular.

The best-of-five series moves to Hawkesbury this week, and the Ontario team feel they have to win this one to have a chance.

"Was I driving too fast?" asked the motorist apologetically.

Ballet Troupe in Community Concerts Schedule for Hawkesb'y

The Hawkesbury Community Concert Association has arranged for its 1956-57 season the following program:

October 8, 1956 — John McCollum, tenor.

April 29, 1957 — Beaux Arts Trio, instrumentalists.

The French singers, "Les Basses Harmonistes," tentatively booked for this coming season, unfortunately had to cancel their American and Canadian tour.

However, Dr. Douglas Hamley, president of the Hawkesbury Association, states that after discussion and help from Dr. L. Barnash, Madam Svetlova's well known ballet troupe should greatly please the many subscribers who have expressed their liking for this type of program.

Recording Artist and Troupe To Entertain

Columbia recording artist Dusty Owens and his Rodeo Boys, direct from WWVA World's Original Jamboree in Wheeling, W.Va., are appearing in person at the Auditorium here on August 30.

"If you want to have a friend, you've got to be one yourself" is the motto of Dusty, and if you attend the performance while Dusty is in town, you will see and hear an artist who lives up to this duel-part motto. Dusty's boundless ability in song writing and recording has not been eclipsed by a straight-face, unfriendly form of informality, so often the plight of a famous artist. He makes you feel as though a friend with talent has come to entertain you, and you alone.

So exclusively regarded is the ability of Dusty Owens that he has recently signed to write songs for Acuff-Ross Publishing Company. Rights are solely reserved by this — one of the largest hillbilly song publishing companies in the country. At the Lachute Auditorium Dusty will prove to the fans that he is a "natural" when it comes to the light fantastic of folk music.

Dusty launched his career at the toe tingling tender age of 16, banding together under the famed title of Rodeo Boys. The title stayed, and a trail to fame was blazed right into the hearts of his fans.

Not only will Dusty thrill "you all" with the best pickin' and singin' this side of Hillbilly Heaven, but his warm and friendly nature will melt your heart!

"Big Four" Games Scheduled for TV

Exhibition football games and the opening of the Big Four schedule have launched the 1956 pigskin parade that reaches its climax in the annual Grey Cup game. This year CBC camera crews will televise 21 games for Ontario and Quebec viewers. Teams competing are Ottawa Rough Riders, Montreal Alouettes, Hamilton Tigercats and Toronto Argonauts. Additionally, telecasts of playoff games will be seen along the microwave network, with recordings sent to other stations on a delayed basis.

Banners will fly over Toronto's Varsity Stadium on November 24 as television cameras focus on the Grey Cup classic between the Big Four champions and the best in the Western conference. By this date it is expected that stations at North Bay, Ontario, and Lakehead and Winnipeg will form part of the connected network and will be able to carry the game live. Non-connected stations will get the Grey Cup game on a 24-hour delay.

Sportscasters Doug Smith and Steve Douglas will handle the commentary for the regular games.

Woman Disk Jockey Has All-Night Show

Montreal (CP) — Disk Jockey Beth Manley, blonde and pretty, stays up into the wee, wee hours to cheer a host of lonely hearts. "This town harbors hundreds of victims of worry, despair and insomnia," says Beth. "Hundreds more are just plain lonely."

And thousands listen to Beth, whose program runs from midnight until 4.30 a.m. five mornings a week from radio station CKVL.

"They'll phone in night after night not necessarily because they want something, but frequently just because they need someone to chat with. They've got to get it off their chests, and I gather some pretty grim tales in consequence. But I've always maintained a strict rule of forgetting everything they tell me."

Many callers are night-shift workers and many are wives sitting up for them to come home. At least once Miss Manley has acted as Cupid. Jo-Anne phoned Beth to say she liked Gordie, who lived up the street. Beth beamed a dedication and Jo-Anne and Gordie met, became engaged and subsequently married.

Miss Manley says she gets much fun from drunks who phone in the dim hours calling for fast music because they "wanna live a little." Something of a record for the ridiculous was posted one night when a woman called to ask for a dedication for her German shepherd dog, who'd just had four pups.

Vacation Time

By G. E. Mortimore, "All Aboard" Columnist

Should I travel, or spend my vacation skulking around the yard? Thousands of men look in their bank books and find the answer: "Stay home, you fool."

Many of them go anyway, because they feel they should. At holiday time, as at Christmas, prudence yields to social pressure. The women and children of the house follow daddy around with large, sad eyes until they break his spirit.

"All right," he growls. "Start packing. We'll enjoy ourselves if it takes my last nickel — and it will."

A graph of the family fortunes would resemble a snake with a broken back, or a cross-section of canyon country — plunging at Christmas and at vacation time to depths that rival the slump of 1929.

In between these two disastrous seasons, the graph climbs slowly toward solvency, which it never quite attains.

People who can scarcely afford to go on living at home feel themselves obliged to take costly trips. They travel on the rent money, or next month's grocery bill. Their unfortunate creditors, who pay the shot, don't even have a chance to go along.

However, stubbornly careful folk spend the vacation at home, and some of them even enjoy it.

A holiday at home need not be looked upon as a prison sentence. The holidaymaker can stroll through his place of work in a flowered shirt and dark glasses, staring haughtily at the natives. He can leave a tip under the plate for his wife, and try to make a date with her.

He can go fishing, toy with the home chores and possibly accept a paid job mowing neighborhood lawns; then go back to work refreshed, with money in his pocket, and look smugly down on his colleagues who return tired and broke from traveling holidays.

LAZY JIM DAY, a celebrated member of Dusty Owens' Rodeo Boys, appearing next week in Lachute. "Without a doubt the best country comedian to appear in these parts for many years" — says the Fredericton (N.B.) Gleaner.

"Laughter from the North", Radio Drama

Wednesday Night Feature

For maybe a thousand years the Finnish epic poem, "Kalevala", was passed down the generations by word of mouth, till in the 19th century it was finally written down. One of the heroes of the poem is a sort of Arctic Don Juan named Lemminkainnen — a blustering peasant with a blustering sense of humor who doesn't so much appeal to women as bludgeon them. The story of Lemminkainnen has only been translated into English once, and that by a 19th century clergyman who put it into Hiawatha metre and added occasional moral exhortations to counter-balance the events of which he tells.

"Laughter From the North", a radio drama by the Vancouver Sun feature writer, Mary McAlpine, is based on the life of Lemminkainnen. It tells how he tires of his local amorous conquests and in the manner of young men ambitious to succeed in their chosen field, goes abroad. After many adventures he arrives in a land called Pojhola, famous partly for its beautiful queen and partly for a material object called the "Sampo", the possession of which ensures happiness. The contempt with which the queen treats him enflames Lemminkainnen's hatred and he urges his own countrymen to war to gain the Sampo. The drama ends as it begins, with the oafish laughter of Lemminkainnen as he realizes that the two countries will constantly suffer the misery of war in a vain attempt to ensure happiness with the Sampo.

"Underneath all the buffoonery," says Miss McAlpine, "there is something serious being said. The play is part comedy, part tragedy, and with a strong element of fantas. This last was difficult to deal with, and we have tried to paint up the magical by the music, which is written by John Avison."

Written Specially for The Lachute Watchman

By Gillian Pritchard, Canadian Press Staff Writer

The work of women of many countries, all with a love of handicrafts, will be on show at the women's building at the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto, August 24 to September 8.

Prize-winning entries are from the United States, Romania, New Zealand, Italy, England and Scotland as well as Canada. Women's activities manager Elsa Jenkins thinks Canadian women should be really proud of their country's craft traditions, judging by the Canadian entries.

Canadians took first prizes in knitting, quilting, ceramics and precious metals. Mrs. Haywood Gibbons of Ottawa submitted the best knitted article, a grey wool dress trimmed with black. An appliqued design in pink and blue on white won first prize in the quilting section for Mrs. Henry Skerratt of Port Perry, Ont. Mrs. Bailey Leslie, of Toronto, took first place with a bronze-colored dish and Douglas Boyd, of Richmond Hill, Ont., gained first prize in the precious metals section with a silver coffee service.

Mrs. Jenkins reports a 25 per cent increase in entries this year. The competition is not confined to women and several of the 7,000 items entered were made by men.

Colorful Garb

Maybe you've had your summer holidays, but next summer you can expect to dazzle all eyes on the beaches in an array of colors bright enough to put a peacock in the shade.

The National Garment Manufacturers' Association says sports clothes generally will be in brilliant Mexican hues, with such names as hacienda mauve, Vera Cruz pink and mission green. And ankle-tight pants are expected to remain popular.

Most women will be glad to know that the association is promoting an extensive drive among its members to popularize wash-and-wear fabrics, washable corduroys and dry-cleanable suedes.

Face Value

Just to show you can't always go on appearances, Canadian medical researcher Dr. Ian Kent of McGill University has recently questioned an age-old theory. According to his researches, a blue-eyed blonde isn't necessarily the feather-brained creature she may appear to be. Blue eyes, says Dr. Kent, indicate a logical thinker and administrator.

The brown-eyed person is sensitive, creative and self-centred. People with "in-between" colored eyes — green, grey or hazel — have equally divided characteristics.

This and That

Gardening experts say lawns should be watered first thing in the morning so that the water can soak in before the heat of the day. Watering at night makes puddles which can cause brown patches.

Nylon, unlike most sheer fabrics, is fire resistant and melts instead of spreading flames.

Let's Eat

BY IDA BAILEY ALLEN

"In France we often melt, or caramelize, granulated sugar to give special flavor to desserts and pastry fillings," observed the Chef, as he opened a package of old-fashioned brown sugar, scooped out a spoonful and tasted it with small-boy relish.

"However, instead of caramelizing, I find it is often more convenient to use brown sugar.

"I keep it in the refrigerator or food freezer so it will not dry out and become lumpy. It is then ready to spoon over cereal; to use in sweetening apple and other fruit pies and Betties or to use in making custards to give a slightly rich caramel taste.

"Does brown sugar have any special nutritive qualities, Madame, over those of granulated sugar?"

"Yes, Chef," I replied. "It contains valuable minerals including calcium, phosphorous and iron. Another good reason for using when possible."

TO KEEP SILVER BRIGHT

You can eliminate a good many of your silver polishing chores this summer with the use of liquid polishing wax, says Johnson's Consumer Service. Silver articles will retain their gleam three times as long if they are treated with an application of liquid furniture wax immediately after cleaning. Merely put a little of the wax on a soft cloth and rub it on the article.

A new white shoe cleaner dispenser sprays directly onto the shoe and saves messy work with pads or sponge applicators.

Jelly Making

by the Consumer Section, Canada Dept. of Agriculture Marketing Service

What Makes Jelly Jell?

Jellies capture the summer sweetness of fruits and berries in the purest possible form. But, you may ask, how do you make a perfect jelly — clear, sparkling, just firm enough to hold its shape, just yielding enough to cut tenderly with a spoon? From the Consumer Section, Canada Department of Agriculture, here are some of the answers. . .

They say that to make a perfect jelly, pectin, fruit acid, sugar and water must be in the right proportions. Fruits vary in the amounts of pectin and acid they contain. Those rich in both pectin and acid are crabapples, sour apples, cranberries, currants, gooseberries, sour plums and grapes; those rich in pectin, but low in acid are quinces and sweet apples; those rich in acid, but low in pectin are strawberries, cherries, rhubarb, pineapple, raspberries and loganberries; and finally, fruits low in both pectin and acid are peaches, pears and blueberries. If a fruit is low in either pectin or acid, it may be combined with one or more fruits rich in the needed pectin or acid.

Pectin and acid change with the maturity of the fruit, both decreasing as the fruit ripens. It is best, therefore, to use a mixture of slightly under-ripe and ripe fruit, and over-ripe fruit should never be used for making jelly.

Commercial pectin, both liquid and powdered, is sold and widely used for making jellies. It is most important to follow exactly the directions which come with this pectin as the proportions of pectin, fruit acid, sugar and water given, have been thoroughly tested by the manufacturer.

Steps in Jelly Making

1. Sterilize jelly glasses or jars.
2. Select sound fruit, using about equal parts of ripe and slightly under-ripe fruit. Wash thoroughly and discard any damaged spots.
3. Add cold water, using proportion of water to prepared fruit in Table For Jellies. Simmer fruit and water in a covered kettle until fruit is soft and mushy, crushing during cooking.

Pour hot cooked fruit into a moistened jelly bag made of several thicknesses of fine cheesecloth or muslin. Hang up over a bowl and allow to drain until dripping ceases. Squeezing the bag increases the quantity of juice, but the jelly will not be so clear.

5. Work with small amounts of "extracted" juice at a time — not more than 8 cups. Measure each lot of juice accurately to determine the amount of sugar to be added after boiling.

6. Boil juice, uncovered, in a broad saucepan for 3 minutes. Remove saucepan from heat and test for pectin. To make test, measure 1 teaspoon fruit juice and 1 teaspoon rubbing alcohol into a cup or small dish. Blend quickly together and let stand 30 seconds. If a jelly-like mass or clot is formed the juice contains sufficient pectin and sugar may be added. If heavy clot does not form, continue boiling, testing frequently, until pectin test is satisfactory. Do not taste this mixture as rubbing alcohol is poisonous.

7. Measure sugar, allowing 1 cup of sugar for each cup of "extracted" juice if a heavy solid clot forms when pectin test is made at end of 3 minute boiling period. If a heavy clot does not form and boiling of juice must be continued, allow ¾ cup sugar for each cup of "extracted" juice.

8. Add measured sugar slowly to hot juice. Boil briskly, uncovered, removing scum as it forms.

9. To test when jelly is done dip up the boiling hot syrup with a metal spoon, holding well above kettle and allow it to run off the side. When the syrup no longer runs off the spoon in a steady stream but separates into two distinct lines of drops which finally flow or "sheet" together, the jelly stag has been reached. Immediately remove from the heat.

10. Let hot juice stand in kettle for about 1 minute and remove last bit of scum with a cold fork or spoon.

11. Carefully pour into hot sterilized jelly glasses leaving at least ½-inch space at top. To ensure a perfect seal and to prevent "weeping" or oozing of liquid after paraffin is added, care must be taken to avoid any dribbling of jelly on inside of glass above jelly level.

12. Let stand until partially set, then pour a thin layer of hot, melted paraffin to completely cover the jelly and leave until hardened. Then add a second layer of melted wax, rotating the jar so that it will adhere to the glass to form a close seal. Cover and store in a cool, dry place.

Ulcer-Season Remedy

One of the mysteries of medicine is why peptic ulcers should be more common in autumn and spring seasons than in others. Whatever the reason, medical statistics make it certain that the number of persons suffering from this painful ailment—and from the painful hyperacidity that often accompanies it—will rise consistently from the first of September to the New Year.

This cyclical pattern, however, is not confined to the seasons alone. A Scottish researcher has found, in a study made in a population of two millions, that ulcer symptoms grow worse at the end of the work week, and are more frequent in the evening than in the morning.

The fluctuation of pain in any twenty-four-hour period is common with most patients. Severe pains usually occur about three hours after a meal, and the most painful attack frequently occurs about 2:30 a.m.

Although researchers have been able to pin down a number of factors as possible causes of peptic ulcers, including a person's attitude toward his job, his boss, his mother-in-law, or mortgage, one factor appears in all cases: that is excessive amounts of hydrochloric acid secreted by the stomach.

All persons secrete hydrochloric acid virtually constantly, but in varying quantities throughout the day and night. The ulcer patient secretes more than others, particularly during resting periods and especially at night, reaching a peak about 2:30 a.m. It is the middle-of-the-night high tide of strong gastric juice that irritates and even "eats away" the stomach lining, causing the pain typical of peptic ulcer.

Relief from this night-time pain has long posed a problem for physicians. During waking hours, the patient can take ant-acid substances that counteract the excessive acidity. But there was no remedy that would protect a patient throughout the night.

Recent research, however, has developed a combination of non-fat milk solids with two effective antacids, aluminum hydroxide and magnesium trisilicate, in a powder which—when mixed with water—makes a milk-like drink that meets the night-time need. The milk proteins buffer the antacids, slow down stomach action and protect the patient throughout the period of rest.

Fashions

The knitted sheath is taking over for early fall and many of the smartest take on costume airs with their own jackets, or, smarter yet, their own "blouson" jacket. This one has a leather belt over which it is slightly bloused. The jacket is elasticized at the bottom to fall at will and like the dress has rib knit detail. You can't go wrong choosing this one for casual town wear, and certainly for plenty of use in the suburbs or country.

Tips on Touring

By Carol Lane
Women's Travel Authority

Eating out-of-doors is a real picnic these days, thanks to modern ingenuity. So many canned and packaged foods are now available that picnic-planning, packing and preparation are easy matters.

When planning your picnic, stop first at your local grocer's and familiarize yourself with the canned and packaged goods on his shelves. After stocking your car, add to your eating gear your favorite frying pan and a can opener, and you have most of the equipment necessary for cooking out-of-doors.

Such familiar fare as baked beans can be prepared easily, if you take along the canned variety. "Dinner-on-a-stick" is picnic food that's fun to make, and fun to eat. Easiest version, of course, consists of frankfurters speared and roasted over the open flame. For a change, spear wedges of canned ham, tomatoes and onion slices alternately on a stick. Sprinkle with Worcestershire sauce and rotate slowly over the fire until the tid-bits sizzle.

If the picnic site you choose has no fireplace, don't get hot and bothered. Plan a bun and salad menu. Take along hot soup or cold drinks in a vacuum bottle or frozen fruit juices in cans. To your potato salad add sliced Vienna sausages, deviled eggs and tomato wedges around the top of the bowl. For something new in picnic menus prepare "bunwiches" to go with the salad. To make Deviled Ham Buns, put a slice of cheese in a hamburger bun, spread with deviled ham and top with pickle relish. For Mock Frankfurters, cut canned luncheon meat into strips an inch thick, place in frankfurter buns, and smother with your favorite trimmings.

Plan your picnic out-of-a-can, and you'll have an easy-to-make, easy-to-take meal outdoors.

Jab a screw into paste wax and it will turn in and out of wood much more easily.

Junior Starts School Soon

(Copyright) — By NANCY CLEAVER —

No imaginative person can watch boys and girls hurrying along the streets and roads, starting back to school in September without wondering what some of these youngsters will do when they are grown.

Theodosia Garrison once corrected a friend who remarked on seeing "Just children on the way to school." The poet answered,

"Nay, it is ours to watch a greater thing
These are the World's Rebuilders!"

It may seem a bit difficult to look on a little pupil beginning his education as a future "World rebuilder!" Mothers turn their attention from future possibilities to practical plans to make junior's start to school a happy one.

A few days before school opens, Mother will walk to school with the child and remind him to stop at the corner, listen and look both ways and wait till the way is clear before crossing. Just in case he should get lost or be in an accident, he should be able to repeat clearly his name, address and telephone number. Mother will also try to make sure that her child knows at least one other youngster who is starting to school in the same class.

This first day of school will be much more satisfying for a child if mother talks about it beforehand as an experience which he will enjoy. A good mother hides the little tug at her heart that her "baby" is a baby no longer but entering into a new phase in his life. Teacher shares a place in the child's heart along with mother and dad from now on, if she is a likeable person.

Mother wants her child to look forward to school, to playing and working with other children, to learning new ideas and discovering how to do different things. By anticipating a happy experience, the mother prepares a son or daughter to enter wholeheartedly into this world of school.

The unknown is always a bit terrifying. Mother will want to take away some of this fear of the strange adventure ahead. She will tell little stories about when she started to school, little friends she knew, teachers she liked.

A physical check-up by the doctor and dentist, and the eye spec too if necessary, are also impo Many a child is handicappe school by some small physica fect. There are many ways o paring a child for school. Be your child is ready!

For a number of days she been busy getting his clothes r Mother wants to be proud o child's appearance on this special day. Likely she will a snapshot of him going dow walk, or with a little playma keep as a record of how he lo But it is more essential that a should feel at home in his cl than that he should don a new outfit.

The last thing a kindergart first grade youngster wants be "different"! If his clothes him feel conspicuous or ill at he is "out of things." He nee feel that he belongs. It is su help for him to look like "the kids!" Boys especially dread taunt of being "Mother's pet!" sissy!"

From the teacher's point of she likes to see the childre clothes which are attractive practical. Mother has only o two or perhaps three small y sters in her home, but the teac "family" comprise twenty or t little folk.

It is a great help to her if Jun clothes are made so that he manage his own zipper or bu when he goes to the toilet. On days the teacher will be than if the majority of children large enough rubbers, marked their names, and if they can them off and put them on t selves.

Clothes in September are us fairly simple. But when it c to winter time, the teacher h her small charges will have suits and goloshes which they remove and dress in themse without any assistance. After she has only one pair of hands

Appeal for CNIB Support In Area of Arundel

The authorities of Arundel have decided to launch a financial campaign of the CNIB — for the first time in that community. This is to assist the Institute in reaching an objective of $6,000 required in a program of expanding their services to the blind people of this county and also in prevention work. At the present time, there are 47 blind people in the County of Argenteuil and it is the hope of the local representatives to diminish the number.

The campaign chairman for Arundel area is the pro-mayor, Mr. Hugh Boyd, and the captains are as follows: R.R. 1, Mr. A. Scott and Mr. H. McMahon; R.R. 2, Mr. Frank Craig; R.R. 3, Mr. Earl Gray; Village of Arundel, Mr. Percy Staniforth.

The CNIB is an organization which enables citizens to know how much money has been raised and how it is being spent on work for the blind in their county.

Please be generous to your canvasser, also give him any information which may lead him to a person whose sight may be saved. If you are overlooked during the campaign, you are asked to forward your contribution to Mr. Hugh Boyd, Arundel, or direct to the Institute's headquarters in Lachute (P.O. Box 807).

Music Study Resumed on Curriculum ; Three Rooms for Grade VII Enrolment

Seven new teachers will be appearing on Lachute High School staff for 1956-57, according to Principal F. H. J. Royal, when school gets underway next Wednesday, September 5, with registration at 9 a.m. Session will be held in the morning only, on the opening day.

There may be possible confusion in names of the teachers, as this year's staff comprises of two Miss McMahons, two Miss MacLachlans, Mr. L. Robinson and Mrs. D. Robinson, Mrs. Douglas Clark and Mrs. Douglas Clarke.

Next Wednesday's opening will mark the second time in the record of the local school that three separate rooms will be required to accommodate one class, namely Grade VII. Last year, three class-rooms were needed for Grade 1, which had an enrolment of 78. Although no definite figures are available on this year's enrolment, it is expected the list will be in the vicinity of last year's 653 pupils.

Teachers in the High School classes are much the same as last year, with Lucien Rossaert, of Montreal and Miss Isabel McOuat, of St. Andrews East, sharing the French Specialists' duties.

Miss McOuat is a graduate of Lachute High School, having obtained her Grade XII education at West Hill High School, Montreal. She holds her Interim Intermediate Certificate and in 1951 attended the Macdonald College Summer School for Teachers. She commenced teaching at Ormstown High School in 1950, later moving to St. Eustache, where she taught for three years, and from there comes to Lachute.

The new Industrial Arts instructor, Charles Lunn, has had a year's training at New Brunswick Technical Institute, a year at Woodstock Vocational School and one year's Summer School. He has had two years' teaching experience in New Brunswick, and holds his Temporary Certificate "Type "C".

Miss Nadia Neznick, of Verdun, takes over the duties of a Music teacher, a subject which was relinquished three years ago on the local curriculum. A Ukanranian of Orthodox faith, Miss Neznick graduated from Montreal High School and spent a year at Marianapolis College, Montreal. She holds an Associate of Music diploma from McGill University, as well as a Handicrafts diploma. She has taught Music at the Thomas More School, and St. Willibrod's School, both in Montreal, as well as acting as a counsellor at various summer camps. She has operated her own music studio in Montreal for the past seven years.

Miss Mary Feher, the Grade VII-C teacher, is a resident of the Town of Mount Royal. She graduated from the Montreal High School for Girls in 1949, obtained her B.A. from McGill University in 1953 and her Interim High School Teacher's Diploma in June of this year.

Miss Barbara Cowan, of St. Philippe, takes over the duties in Grade IV-B. She is a graduate of Grenville Consolidated School, and this year obtained her Teacher's Diploma at Macdonald College.

Mrs. Kenneth Fraser, of Lachute, commences duties with Grade V-A. She is a graduate of Joliette Intermediate School and Macdonald College, holds her elementary certificate and has 13 years' teaching experience. She comes to L.H.S. from St. Eustache, where she has taught for the past few years.

Flames In Truck Destroy Clothing Material

Members of the Lachute Fire Brigade and other volunteers extinguished a fire in the rear of a 1956 model truck around 4.15 Tuesday afternoon. The fire truck was not summoned to the scene.

The truck, owned and driven by Hector Thomas, of St. Remi d'Amherst, was entering Lachute when the flames were spotted by another motorist who managed to inform Thomas, who was then near Muir's Service Station. The latter was headed home from St. Constant, near Laprairie, where he had picked-up 12 dozen bundles of precut clothing, containing several hundred pieces each.

Thomas reported that he was transporting the material to his residence where he has numerous people employed in sewing the articles of clothing which are then shipped back to St. Constant.

Increases Noted in Town Population and Property

Population figures for the Town of Lachute, released early this week by Jacques Poitras, municipal secretary-treasurer, indicate an increase of 135 persons over last year's figures. The census was recently completed by Charles E. Dorris, a teacher at l'Ecole Supérieure.

This census figure for the town sets the population at 6,764, as compared to 6,629 last year. (The Dominion Census figures have not yet been officially released for Lachute. The two are believed to be comparable.)

A marked increase in municipal valuation is also indicated in the figures compiled by the evaluators, Wm. Heatlie, Jos. Constantineau and Jos. D'Aoust. The valuation for 1956 has been set at $7,131,499 — the figure not yet having been approved by Council, however. Last year's valuation was $6,390,525. (These assessments are conceded as approximately one-third the true value.) The municipal roll is open for inspection until September 8.

The first results of the 1956 Canadian Census have been received, and included in these are Brownsburg, Calumet and Grenville — all these having shown an increase in population over the 1951 figures.

Brownsburg Property Assessment Approaching $3 - Million Mark, Resident Population Now 3,364

(Our District Correspondent)

Brownsburg — The adjourned portion of the August council meeting was held at the Social Club last week.

After several years of stalling and pondering by previous councils, this one has at last taken the bull by the horns and done something about the sewerage project on Main Street Woodbine Avenue. Mayor D. Lepine reported that the $2,000 asked by the MacVicar estate for the 525 feet of piping in their field and the right-of-way, was their rock-bottom offer, and he recommended that the councillors accept it.

Councillor Stan Harris moved that the mayor and secretary purchase the pipe and right-of-way for $2,000. Councillor Réal Ouellette seconded the motion and it was unanimously approved.

Mayor Lepine suggested that work should begin immediately on that part of the project which the corporation can afford, and in the meantime negotiate a loan for the completion. A discussion disclosed that without borrowing the town could complete that part from Main Street through to the Wartime Housing scheme. The plan is to lay and fill with municipal labor.

Councillor Ernest Lavoie moved that the secretary call for tenders for the digging of the trench. Councillor Maurice Pariseau seconded the motion, and the council unanimously approved.

There followed a discussion on the capabilities of the village foreman, Henri Rabey. The mayor and councillors all expressed their satisfaction with him as a worker, but they feel that as a foreman, in the supervisory capacity, he is quite inadequate.

It is felt that the village workers are capable men, but that they need a strong influence to get the best out of them. It was suggested that the mayor explore the possibility of hiring an experienced foreman from industry. No mention was made of reduction in salary for the present foreman, but it seems likely that at least his rank is threatened.

The recent assessment for the municipality was $2,854,625 — an increase of a quarter-million dollars over the previous count. The population dwelling within the town limits is 3,364.

Council Revises Conduit Agreement, Defers Purchase of New Police Car

Valuable Citizen And Businessman Mourned by Friends

Late Stuart J. McFaul

Many friends and relatives paid last tribute to a well known townsman and former business figure, Stuart J. McFaul, whose funeral was held Tuesday from the home of his son, Edmund, on Grace Street. Mr. McFaul, who was stricken from active business life five years ago, had since spent his winter seasons in Florida and his summers at Lake Louisa, enjoying comparatively good health within his limitations. His death occurred suddenly Sunday morning at his home in the Lake Louisa community; he was 61 years of age.

The late Stuart McFaul, only child of John McFaul and his wife the late Anne Stuart, was born and educated here. After a brief experience in wholesale hardware, he entered his father's store and proved himself a progressive businessman. Interested in civic advancement, he served on the Town Council and the Protestant School Board. He was also active in the Lake Louisa Country Club, being one of the first organizers and president of the business corporation of that body. He was a member of the Masonic Lodge, and esteemed by a host of friends.

Surviving are his wife, the former Hazel McCoy; a son, Edmund, of Lachute; a daughter, (Lois) Mrs. Kenneth Salisbury, of Florida; also his father, John McFaul, and two grandchildren, of Lachute. (Capt. and Mrs. K. Salisbury were present for the funeral.)

Numerous floral tributes bore evidence of the affection and esteem with which he was regarded. Funeral rites on Tuesday were conducted by the Rev. Wilson Bridge, assisted by the Rev. Wilmer B. Rosborough; interment was in Lachute Cemetery.

Pall-bearers were Messrs. D. G. MacRae, R. P. Fraser, Geo. F. Calder, E. M. Jones, Angus Taylor and T. D. Titman.

Committee Appointed to Re-organize Fire Dept. and Select New Chief

The resignation of Fire Chief Geo. Y. Deacon was accepted with sincere regret, and an expression of appreciation for his services rendered over the many years was voiced at a special meeting of the Lachute Town Council, held last Thursday evening. Aldermen Judes E. Charlebois and Dr. Roger Lavigne were absent at the meeting chaired by Mayor Dr. F. Walter FitzGerald. A special committee was appointed to discuss the appointment of a new Fire Chief and re-organization of the Fire Department.

This committee, nominated by the Mayor, comprises Aldermen S. Church, R. Desjardins, R. Muir, M. Carrière and E. O. Pollock, along with himself — the mayor being automatically a member of all committees.

Authorization was granted to Police Chief Fernand Trepanier to purchase $700 worth of autumn and winter police clothing, including fall and winter coats, boots, hats, gloves and other incidentals.

Ald. H. S. Church, chairman of the Police and Fire Committee, once again raised the subject of a new police car. "The car is a disgrace," stated Mayor Dr. FitzGerald, referring to this badly-needed item. "Even the newspapers are starting to write about it," he added.

Police Chief Trepanier stated he had "given orders to the men not to drive over 45 m.p.h. with the car". He had received an estimate of over $400 to repair the vehicle, he informed the Council.

"It is needed, but I don't see why it cannot be repaired for this year as we will exceed the budget," said Ald. Romain Desjardins, chairman of the Finance Committee.

Mayor Dr. FitzGerald voiced his agreement but added that "a point comes when you have to weigh the breaking of the budget and public safety and I think spending money on this car is nothing but throwing money down the drain."

Tenders for this addition, received some time ago and temporarily tabled, were checked and two were found still useful. It was moved by Ald. Church that a new car be purchased, but lacking a seconder, the matter was once again tabled.

Permission was granted the Bell Telephone Company to lay their underground conduit for 500 feet on Chatham Street, from this point to Barron's Bridge, under the North River and underground from the bridge to Lowe Bros. Dairy. This followed the rescinding of the August 8 motion to authorize laying of the conduit with four conditions. It came about after a letter, signed by P. C. Venne, Assistant General Council for the company, pointed out that the only obligation imposed upon the Company by the Parliament of Canada is "That the surface of the street shall, in all cases, be restored to its former condition by, and at the expense of, the Company."

The letter stated that "in view of this unrestricted power, the Company has always refused to accept conditions which would affect same, and its stand has been sustained by the Board of Transport Commission for Canada in several instances. In the event that your conditions are not withdrawn, we will have no alternative but to apply to the above-mentioned board to procure unrestricted consent, but at the same time, in order to maintain the good relations now existing and to avoid the expense to litigation to both parties, we have drawn up the compromise submitted below.

"1—That the Town of Lachute shall not be responsible for damages to the said conduit if said damages proceed from a cause which cannot be imputed to the Town, or if said damages could not be foreseen;

"2—That the Bell Telephone Company of Canada assumes the costs and expenses of providing one of its employees to indicate to the Town the location and depth of said conduit whenever requested to do so, in cases where the Town repairs or rebuilds its streets, water or sewer system or any other public works;

"3—That any damage done to the streets or sidewalks as a result of further work by the company in relation to said conduit shall be repaired by the Company at its own costs and expenses;

"4—That proceeding of the works by the Company shall be considered an acception of this resolution."

A letter was read from Fernand Legault, Q.C., the Corporation's legal advisor, who stated his opinion that the conditions were satisfactory and suggested one addition — the clause, "within a reasonable delay," at the end of Clause 3. This addition was made, and following the rescinding of the previous motion, it was moved by Ald. E. O. Pollock, seconded by Ald. H. S. Church, that permission be granted under the agreed-on conditions.

The question of repairing the pavement and sidewalk arose and, following considerable discussion it was moved by Ald. Laurin, seconded by Ald. H. S. Church, that the necessary repairs caused by laying of the conduit be effected by the Corporation.

Ald. Romain Desjardins moved, in amendment, seconded by Ald. Ross Muir, that the Bell Telephone Company repair all damage under the supervision of the Roads Department. A vote on the amendment saw Aldermen Desjardins, Muir, Pollock, Mallette and Carrière in favor, with Aldermen Laurin and Church voting in support of the main motion.

A letter was read from Conrad Legault, secretary-treasurer of the Municipality of Ayersville, requesting that Lachute Council set a time and place for a joint meeting to discuss matters concerning both municipalities.

It was decided that a letter be sent to the neighboring municipality informing them that a date would be set later in September, when more information regarding certain projects was available.

There being no further business, the meeting adjourned, after which some discussion took place on the renting of the Auditorium basement to the Federal Government for offices and a store-room for the local unit of the Artillery. Permission will be needed to partition a section of the basement, at the government's cost — the town to provide lights, heat and a caretaker.

Local Car Drivers In St. Jerome Court On Various Charges

Various fines and suspensions were handed down by Judge Omer Coté in St. Jerome court Tuesday according to Det. Ralph Allen, officer in charge of the local Provincial Police detachment. Det. Allen also indicated that numerous tickets for different traffic infractions had been issued on the week-end in accordance with the present drive on traffic offenders.

Jean Lalonde, 31, of Lachute, was sentenced to a fine of $50 plus costs when convicted of driving without a driver's license. Lalonde was recently arrested by the Provincial officers in the vicinity of Lachute.

Hubert Champagne, 22, of Arundel, charged with speeding on the Weir-Arundel highway, pleaded guilty and was sentenced to a fine of $50 plus costs, his driver's permit being suspended for a three month period.

TV and Radio Interference

As the season moves ahead into Fall and Winter, the TV and Radio networks will be providing new and additional programes.

Much of the TV and Radio interference in a community is unnecessary and can be eliminated with reasonable care.

The Telecommunication Division, Department of Transport, appeals to all public-spirited citizens to:

1. Have suppressors installed in all fluorescent light fixtures, preferably at time of purchase. Fluorescent desk and bed lamps are particularly noisy.

2. Turn on your warming pad occasionally for a half hour or so when your radio is on. If it makes long buzzing noises in the radio, the thermostat inside the pad is defective and should be repaired at once. A defective thermostat can cause a fire!

3. Have your dealer or radio serviceman install a suppressor on any electrical appliance which causes interference in your radio or television sets. It probably interferes with your neighbor's reception too!

For your greater enjoyment — and that of your neighbor, this is an opportune time to check your installations for interference!

The big businessman had died and gone to . . . well, not to heaven, but he had hardly settled down for a nice long smoke when a hearty hand slapped him on the back, and into his ear boomed the voice of a persistant salesman who had pestered him on earth.

"Well, Mr. Smith," chortled the salesman, I'm here for the appointment."

"What appointment?"

"Why, don't you remember?" the salesman went on. "Every time I entered your office on earth you told me you'd see me here!

The appointment of Armand Robert, B.A., H.G.B., as assistant executive secretary of the Canadian Cancer Society, was announced today by the directors of the Canadian Cancer Society. Mr. Robert, formerly associated with the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, will make his headquarters in Montreal and will organize the expanding activities of the Canadian Cancer Society in all parts of the province. Special emphasis will be placed on increasing the educational program of the Society while at the same time providing funds for research and welfare.

"Further Talks Senseless Without Change"-Duplessis

By Tom Mitchell
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Quebec (CP) — Premier Maurice Duplessis, commenting on a suggestion for further federal-provincial talks to find some way to give additional financial aid to municipalities, said the move would be "senseless — unless there is a considerable change in the climate at Ottawa."

The suggestion was made at the annual conference of the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities being held at Hamilton.

The Premier said he would be ready to attend such a conference if he received assurance that concrete results would be obtained. He said problems confronting Quebec municipalities will be examined at the next session of the provincial legislature opening November 14.

Mr. Duplessis noted that the provinces already have their own problems of fund-raising and said the Provincial Government had noted "millions and millions of dollars to Quebec municipalities," and had "relieved the municipalities of many of the financial burdens which they were obliged to carry in the past."

"There is a limit to what the province can do under present circumstances," he said, "to do more would require additional sources of revenue."

The Premier said the province has sources of revenue which it could not fully exercise because of "encroachment" on the part of the Federal Government.

"We now are deprived of certain sources of revenue which belong to us, and until we recover these taxation rights it is almost impossible to bring further assistance to the municipalities," he said.

"There are some people in Ottawa who believe everything belongs to them," the Premier said.

He did not enumerate specifically what sources of revenue were encroached upon.

Common Root Rot In Cereal Crops

Common root rot is a disease of cereals that is widespread in Western Canada. Losses have been estimated at various times to average between five and twelve per cent according to P. M. Simmonds of the Plant Pathology Laboratory, Saskatoon, Sask. Individual fields may have much higher losses.

This disease is likely to be first noticed shortly after heading in wheat, barley and rye crops. The injury at this time resembles drought damage with which it is usually associated. Large or small patches of unthrifty plants may be evident. These diseased plants are slightly shorter than healthy ones and frequently show brown and dead lower leaves.

Common root rot will spread and develop rapidly in wet warm weather, although under these conditions the crop may not show much injury. Most damage, however, follows a spell of hot dry weather shortly after heading.

Most common root rot infections come from the soil. Spores are produced on stubble from infected crops and are spread through and over the soil by cultivation, rain and wind. Spores nearer the surface of the soil are most effective in causing infections. Those below seed level are usually unable to infect the plants.

Control of this plant disease centres around cultivation and crop rotation. Spring plowing of stubble which turns down stubble and contaminated surface soil followed immediately with seeding is recommended. Cereal crops should be rotated with non-cereal crops such as flax, rape or legumes.

Seed treatments are generally of little value for control of common root rot. However, if seed containing black point or smudged kernels is used, it should be treated with a good mercury dust or liquid fungicide as recommended for smut control.

Local Winners In Livestock Breeds At Ottawa Ex.

Dr. G. R. McCall's North River Farm was among the top exhibitors and prize-winners in Jersey Cattle at the Central Canada Exhibition Ottawa, judged last Wednesday.

This year saw increased entries in this breed, with three herds from Quebec including Dr. McCall's. Top honor brought home by the local exhibitor was the Junior Female Championship won by "North River Basil's Dream".

Additional placings were — 2nd in the two years and under three-year-old bull, and 3rd in the bull three-years-and-over. In the female classes, the local exhibitor placed 1st, 2nd and 4th in the Senior Yearling; 3rd in the two-years-and-under-four, dry; in addition to the Junior Female championship.

The Progeny of Dam and Graded Herd 2nd place positions were both copped by North River Farm, as was 3rd place for Female Herd.

Clydesdale classes at this year's show were described as the best ever held, and officials were high in their praise of the massive animals as they thundered in front of the critical judges. Entries in this breed compare favorably with last year. John Heatlie & Son and A. T. Cleland were among the exhibitors from this district.

The Senior and Grand Champion Stallion Clydesdale of the show was won by Heatlie's "Ogdensburg Solitaire", who also placed 1st in the Stallion, four-years-and-over; "Ogdensburg Benevolence" placed 3rd in this class.

"Lady Solitaire" placed 2nd and "Joyce Herminius" 3rd for the Heatlies in the Brood Mare nursing a foal. Other Heatlie winners were 1st and 4th in the Foal of 1956; 3rd in the Get-of-Sire; and 3rd in the Progeny-of-Dam.

A. T. Cleland's "Glenburnie Victory Scott" placed 1st in the Progeny-of-Dam class. Other Cleland winners were 2nd in the Get-of-Sire; 2nd in the Filly, two years old; and 4th and 5th in Yeld Mare.

A. T. Cleland's team, driven by W. Brass, also placed third in the "Team, mares or geldings, shown to suitable vehicle, open only to those solely engaged in farming."

Entries of Ernest Ayers in the "Horses Suitable for Saddle" placed 1st in the Stallion three-years-and-over; 2nd in the Foal of 1956; and 3rd in the Gelding or more three years old.

Pilot Troubles Mount at Suez Canal Canadian and Russian Ministers Meet

By Harry Eccles
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A hint on how Egyptian control of the Suez Canal might work out came from Cairo last week.

The Egyptian who heads a new organization operating the canal since Egypt nationalized it, was reported to have threatened that if British and French canal pilots quit their jobs (as some have already done) then British and French ships would have to wait to get through the canal. They would be put on the back end of the line of ships.

Cairo later denied that any such threat had been made. But according to the New York Times the denial was provoked by the furore the threat had created abroad.

In any event, the west has argued that it is to guard against discriminations of that type that a truly international authority to guard the canal is necessary. A plan to that end was adopted at the London conference of 22 nations last week.

Up To Nasser

Cairo diplomatic sources predicted President Gamal Abdel Nasser would offer treaty guarantees of unimpeded shipping as a counter-proposal to the demand of the London conference for the internationalization of the vital shipping artery. They predicted Nasser's reply would flatly reject the proposal for internationalization. But his counter-proposal, they said would leave the door open for negotiation.

Egypt is seeking to hire pilots in West Germany to guide convoys through the canal. A score or more pilots on home leave have not returned to Egypt since Nasser seized the canal July 26. Others may quit if the canal remains in Egyptian hands.

While the Russians have been raising alarms over the danger of resorting to force, and warning that a conflict over Suez could not be limited to that area, there has been less talk in the West of military measures if Nasser rejects the proposals.

Britain and France both continue building up their forces in the Mediterranean, but both insist the measures are precautionary.

Russia's Role

Russia's role is one of the problems State Secretary Dulles brought back from the London conference. Washington officials saw recent events as evidence of a tougher Soviet attitude. Communist party boss Nikita Khrushchev was reported as saying at a party in Moscow last week that if war broke over the Suez issue "the Arabs will not stand alone," that it would be "a just war" and there would be "volunteers."

And at a press conference in London Friday, Russian Foreign Minister Dmitri Shepilov attacked British and French military moves as "a flagrant violation of the United Nations charter." He warned of possible 'serious consequences in the Middle East."

No Truce In Cyprus

British troops in Cyprus last week buried a short-lived symbol of truce with the union-with-Greece terrorists by again stringing barbed wire on the streets of Nicosia, the capital. This and a police raid on the headquarters of the pro-nationalist Cyprus Farmers' Union was the first crackdown since the EOKA terrorist organization called a truce a week earlier.

Goodwill Menu

Three fisheries ministers dining on Newfoundland cod and salmon at St. John's last Friday agreed that goodwill between Canada and Russia improved when they got together to talk about fish.

At the banquet were James Sinclair, federal fisheries minister; John Cheeseman, Newfoundland's fisheries minister, and Russian Fisheries Minister Alexander Ishkov.

"Comrade ministers," said the visiting Russian through an interpreter: "I extend my thanks on behalf of my colleagues and myself for such a warm welcome in Newfoundland. We came here friendly and with open hearts — we have the deepest respect for your great Canadian people.

"We hope sincerely our visit to Canada will allow us to enlarge and greatly extend the friendships started by Mr. Sinclair with his tour in our country."

Mr. Ishkov leads a party of four top Soviet fisheries officials to Canadian waters aboard the big trawler Sverdlovsk, repaying Mr. Sinclair's visit to Russia last year.

Helicopter Escorts

The Canadian Navy this month starts experiments to find whether it is feasible to carry helicopters on escort vessels. If it is, the navy's striking power could be extended by hundreds of miles.

The tests will be conducted by installing a helicopter platform on the frigate Buckingham, training ship for recruits at Cornwallis, N.S. Helicopters would be especially valuable in anti-submarine work.

Police Car Again

THE PURCHASE of a new vehicle for the Lachute Town Police was once again "tabled", at a special meeting of Town Council; this time due to the fact that such purchase would exceed the police budget.

It was pointed out by Mayor Dr. F. Walter FitzGerald that there comes a time when a balanced budget and public safety have to be weighed on merits of urgency — this having been a main point of our editorial on the subject, August 16.

Repairs to the present police car are, in our opinion, a waste of money, and will also eventually surpass the budget. One garage estimated the job would cost over $500, this to be spent on a 1954 model vehicle with almost 60,000 registered mileage.

This police car is a disgrace in its present state; no amount of repairs will put it in an adequate condition. Police officers have been ordered not to drive it over 45 m.p.h. If driven over that speed, in its present condition it will break a neck possibly before breaking the budget.

We commend the Council in endeavoring to keep within their budget, but by reasonable provision a month ago, the necessary sum could have been added to Loan By-Law 202, and by next week money for the vehicle would have been available.

This car is in operation the best part of 24 hours a day, and repairs to keep it in constant use are inevitably going to drain the budget.

From Sea to Sea

THIS WEEK down the St. Lawrence River, "Canada's biggest family party" is being held.

It first got that name when it was staged in Toronto in 1954 and the label has stuck.

Attending the "party" are close to 500 persons — mostly members and their wives of the world's biggest press association — the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association. The Watchman, as usual, will be represented in this constructive gathering.

Canada has close to 800 non-metropolitan weekly, twice-weekly and tri-weekly papers and the large majority of them pay dues ranging up to $75 per year, to support their national newspaper association.

It is true that the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association has a few economic objectives and is concerned to some extent with the over $25 million of advertising and printing its members produce each year. But primarily it lives simply for the promotion of Canadianism.

Although its head offices are in Toronto, the Association's annual convention is held each year in a different part of Canada. This year it is Quebec. In 1957 it will be Banff, Alberta; in 1958, Halifax. And to these conventions come the publishers and editors of not only the bigger journals, but the little ones, too — the Fundy Fisherman of Black's Harbour, the Fort Saskatchewan Record, the Altona Red River Valley Echo, the Fort Qu'Appelle Valley Legend, the Osoyoos Times and the Similkameen Spotlight — names as picturesque and as Canadian as Canada itself.

At their conference tables and their after-hour discussions, editors of French, English and foreign-language papers, men and women from rugged Newfoundland fishing villages, from Prairie grain lands and from industrial centres in Ontario, each year re-discover the common ties that bind them and their communities into a Canada that is truly one Dominion from sea to sea.

Unsubsidized by government, little heralded in the Massey reports, and seldom probed by sociologists, we wonder if there is any single factor which looms larger in the development of a Canadian culture than the annual get-together of the weekly newspapers of this land. This year's convention at Murray Bay will be their 37th.

Fall Exhibitions

With the end of August comes the back-to-school signal, the end of the season at most holiday resorts, the feeling that, however nice the weather may keep, it's about time to be thinking of winter.

Not that winter is just around the corner, of course. There should be weeks of good weather yet before the first frost and snow.

The Canadian National Exhibition opened again at Toronto on August 24, and the Pacific National Exhibition at Vancouver began two days before that. Some big annual exhibitions have already come and gone. Others are still to come in September.

Big or small, all have their attractions for the rural dweller and the city resident, young and old. Many of the cattle and horses, sheep and swine, that attracted admiration at smaller fairs now are being judged at the CNE in Toronto. And the exhibits of machinery and house furnishings, of cars and television sets, are equally attracting town and country residents.

The big show — the CNE is the world's largest annual exhibition—may have $50,000,000 worth of exhibits in $50,000,000 worth of permanent buildings, but it still takes tips from the country fair. Some of the latter in recent years for instance have put on precision competitions with tractors. The CNE has one grandstand act in which tractors are used in a square-dance, which may appear odd to the visitor from the farm.

The CNE's costly midway may also dazzle the visitor from the small hamlets, but it probably can't excite them any more than the small fair's carnival does the rural young fry. Given a ferris wheel and a bag of popcorn the juvenile fair-goer can have himself quite a time at the smallest show — and so can many of his elders.

In its exhibits and amusements the annual fair has the same appeal in city or country. It's a showplace of what Canadians can accomplish in their respective fields. And for that reason it will be with us for a long time to come.

Canada's Economic Future

THE GORDON COMMISSION inquiring into Canada's economic future has proved a sounding board for a sensationally archaic advocacy of putting many Canadian industries down the drain.

The proposal is that Canada can get richer and more prosperous through supplying the rest of the world with basic products such as newsprint, nickel and other raw materials. A statesman of a former era got Canada started along a more pleasant path by declaring that the country no longer should be a hewer of wood and drawer of water for the United States. Now comes the proposal that we would be better off to be merely hewers of wood and drawers of water for other people.

The proposal completely ignores the commercial history of Canada, especially with reference to its contacts with the United States. The United States buys what it buys from Canada because it wants what we have to sell. If southern pine ever reaches the stage where it can provide sufficient pulp for newsprint in the United States, Canadian newsprint will be cut off by that country without a qualm. The same goes for everything else that Canada produces. That is the record; that is the intent of our friends and neighbors. Their friendship doesn't now go, nor has it ever gone, to the extent of helping us if there is the least chance of their own immediate interest being harmed.

The folly of follies would be to become truly dependent on what can be sold abroad. And it is becoming increasingly evident that Canada's manufacturing is essential to Canadian welfare in that it prevents Canadian consumers from being exploited by importers. In other words, imports need competition from domestic production.

ALL ABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore

Book clubs for teen-agers are thriving in the United States. Thousands of young television and crime comic addicts, who formerly read nothing outside the classroom, are now buying pocket books every month. They are reading the books too.

Some people think this is a good sign. But I'm not sure. Is reading now, such quaint, archaic pastime that people must gather in clubs to keep it alive?

I would hate to see reading fall in the same category as croquet, philately, snail-watching and collecting cigar bands. Not that I have anything against these hobbies. I collected stamps for years until my father took the collection over.

Every man to his hobby. At one stage in my boyhood I collected various brands of chewing-gum wrappers, which I mounted on the wall of my bedroom, each wrapper glued to the wall by a small wad of gum. When I left the country for several years, they took advantage of my absence to sweep the entire collection into the trash can. Earlier, I would have condemned this as the greatest act of vandalism since the Muslims burned the library at Alexandria; but the years have changed my outlook.

I gave a shrug of resignation, glanced sadly at the specks of gum that still adorned my bedroom wall, and went on my way. I had married since leaving home. My wife would probably not have allowed the wrappers in the house. A man gains a wife but loses a collection of gum wrappers. That's the way it goes, I said.

So much for my gum wrappers. The point I make is that collecting gum wrappers is not a hobby for the masses. There is nothing difficult about the pastime; it just wouldn't catch the public fancy, that's all. The same goes for building model windmills from toothpicks. Both are minority pursuits.

I can imagine people forming toothpick architecture clubs, and gum wrapper clubs. (Don't try to enroll me in a gum wrapper club. I'm no longer interested).

But I can't accept reading clubs any more than I can accept breathing clubs. Everyone goes in for breathing. There is no need to seek out kindred spirits who share the same interest.

I used to think everyone went in for reading, too. Book, newspaper and magazine circulation figures are all rising, but who knows? Maybe fewer and fewer people are reading more and more. We may see a day when people who read are looked upon as a trifle eccentric.

All Aboard For Mars!

By Lewis Milligan

As a means of escape from the babbling confusion of politics and the clamor of wars and rumors of wars, I have been reading the latest books on astronomy, especially those dealing with the moon and Mars, with particular reference to space-travel. Not that I have the least desire to visit either of those orbs, for the more I read about them the more I am convinced that, even if it were possible to reach the moon by a rocket-ship, the occupants would be dead before they got there, or, if living, would never return to tell the tale.

According to the prospectus of the would-be space travellers, the moon is to be the first hop or stop on the trip to Mars, and according to scientific observations of that satellite it is an utterly dead world, void of atmosphere or moisture. Its flat surfaces are deserts of fine dust of great depth and would hardly provide a safe landing place for a parachutist much less for a heavy spaceship. But there are much greater difficulties to contend with, such as the known fact that the temperature of the moon in the daytime rises to many degrees above boiling point, and at night descends to as many degrees below zero. The lack of water or of oxygen is unfortunate, but they skip over all that for the time being and proceed as follows:

"When an observatory is built on the moon, the difficulties caused by an atmosphere will be largely overcome, for the atmosphere of the moon is thin indeed, if it exists at all. It is generally agreed that, if and when such an observatory is set up, it will be the greatest advance that has ever been made in the history of astronomy."

Most of the preliminary explanations are peppered with "ifs" which conveniently span the gaps of space and time and slide over present factual obstructions. We are assured that man has a marvellous capacity for invention and for adapting himself to apparently impossible conditions. The chief thing is to get on with the story. The initial difficulty of a space-trip is that of getting away from the atmosphere and gravitation of the earth; but we are told that the rocket can achieve this and once the ship is out into free space all would be plain sailing.

The crew of the ship would be provided with modern household facilities, on a very small scale, of course, and the machinery for propulsion, steering, observation and communication by radio with the earth, to say nothing of fuel tanks, electric batteries, oxygen cylinders, and equipment for air-conditioning. This last is very important out there in that vast vacuum exposed to the full blaze of the sun on one side and sub, sub zero on the other. But the space-ship builders have got that and all other impossibilities figured out.

I have read and re-read the detailed descriptions of the interior of one of these rocket-ships designed to take-off on a trip to Mars. As I am not an engineer or an expert in electronics, I am willing to take it for granted that there is every provision for keeping the crew alive in such close quarters, but I do not believe a dozen men could endure the physical and mental strain of such confinement for six months, much less for a year and a half, which it is reckoned the journey to Mars would require. The monotony alone would be sufficient to drive most men crazy, to say nothing of the physical discomfort and the psychological effects of so unnatural an existence.

As for the question of propulsion and steering in a vacuum, where there is nothing to push against, the explanations given seem to me fantastic. Even if the ship would continue in a direct course by the original impetus, it would probably go into a spin and explode into gas; or if it remained intact might join by attraction one of the wandering schools of meteorites that burn themselves out in our upper atmosphere.

Anyway, having made this brief escape into vacuity, it is good to get back to solid earth where one can breathe and move about comfortably and when tired of pipe-line politics can take a pocket-trip to the quiet fishing waters. That's an idea.

NATURAL REMEDY

Montreal (CP) — Horticultural experts have informed residents that a sticky, grey film found on cars, houses and shrubs isn't permanent. It is attributed to the excretion of plant-lice called aphids, numerous this summer due to the cool season. The experts say the first rain cleans it off.

Milk-Making Problems

FIRST — you must get A LONG MILKING LIFE, because it will take a cow two or three milking periods to repay the cost of raising her up to milking time, and if she only milks 3 or 4 seasons she doesn't leave you much for profit. But if she milks for 7 or 8 seasons, your raising cost is spread out twice as far, and your profits jump up.

Then again when you get 7 or 8 seasons' milk out of your cow, you need only raise half as many replacements — another big saving. . . But remember, so-called CHEAP feeds don't give these results, because they don't have the delicate balance of nutrients micro-mixed into them that Purina's research has shown to be necessary.

SECOND — you have got to get LOTS OF MILK. Today a cow will need to give around 7,000 lbs. of milk to pay for her board; if she gives less than that amount she is a "boarder", but whatever she gives above this amount will be mostly profit. The lower the price you sell your milk or cream for, the higher the amount of milk she needs to give to make profits. . . PURINA CHOWS are built to do just this.

"Feed to keep the cow in good body condition and she will look after the milk flow" — is a very good rule to go by.

Many of the pastures are now gone, and only "exercising lots" are left. It is time to feed, to maintain the cow's present condition. If you are a creamery shipper, feed PROTENA DAIRY FEED. If a milk shipper, feed MILK CHOW. Or if you have home grain, feed COW CHOW SUPPLEMENT. There is profit in it for you. — We deliver!

Remove the Blinders

In a recent address Mr. R. A. Kipp, Kelley Limited, Winnipeg, issued a challenge to Canadians to remove the blinders and look facts in the face. It is pleasanter to sit complacently enjoying a good life, based on the Good Lord's munificence to us, as though it were something that no one could change, than it is to face facts. But the facts are inexorably changing matters for us.

"If one analyzes Canada's import and export picture today, one fact stands out crystal clear," said Mr. Kipp. "Less than 50% of our total exports now consist of fully finished manufactured goods, while more than 75% of our total imports are of that category."

What Mr. Kipp was saying is that we are buying vast quantities of goods fully manufactured so that they can offer little employment to Canadian workers, and we are selling abroad the resources with which we have been endowed, and into which we have put the minimum of work effort. We know, or should know, that what we are selling are disappearing assets. They cannot last forever. Then what will we do, for we must trade abroad or forgo our place in the sun; the generous life to which we have grown accustomed.

It is possible to sit and argue by the hour, and make very pretty arguments too, but the inescapable fact is that we are selling more raw materials than we are finished goods, that we cannot do that forever, and that we are doing that now because our manufactured goods are priced too high to sell abroad.

Police "Photo-Cars" To Record Violations

Quebec (CP) — Quebec's Solicitor-General and Transport Minister Antoine Rivard stated that unmarked provincial police patrol cars carrying cameras to record violations will operate on Quebec highways during week-ends. The latest move to crack down on highway offences is an experiment which might become standard procedure if it proves useful.

The camera not only photographs the car committing the violation but provides a record of the speed at which the vehicle is moving. Mr. Rivard said the "photo-cars" are used in Ontario and some states, and have been found "extremely effective."

At the present time Mr. Rivard said the photographs are being used only as a deterrent. "I still think that punishment meted out to those who have transgressed the law is the best publicity we can get to further our campaign to educate the public," he said.

Former Resident Passes in Sask.

Late John Charles Miller

John Charles Miller, a former resident of this community, passed away suddenly on August 17 at Meadow Lake, Sask. He was 54 years old at the time of his death.

In 1925 he purchased a farm in Neville, Saskatchewan and later, in 1934, he homesteaded at Meadow Lake. In 1941 he joined the Veteran Guards and served two years, after which he moved to Prince Albert, with his family. In 1954 he returned to his farm at Meadow Lake.

He is survived by his wife Ethel Ivall, four daughters, Vera (Mrs. Eugene Billey); Lorna (Mrs. Carl Anderson), Joan (Mrs. David Stolar) and Joyce and four grandchildren, also a sister, Mary Miller, of Lachute, and a brother Wallace, of Montreal.

Teams Lined-Up For U.S. Vote

The team of Ike and Dick will be up against Adlai and Estes in the United States general elections on November 6. The balloting at the Republican party's national convention in San Francisco last week lacked any element of suspense.

First every state cast all its ballots for Dwight Eisenhower for president. Then came the same thing for vice-president Richard Nixon. The Democratic party at Chicago a week earlier had selected Adlai Stevenson to seek the presidency again, with Estes Kefauver running for vice-president.

President Eisenhower accepted his renomination "humbly but confidently." He told the cheering delegates that it is not enough to promise "the young who fight the wars" that there will be "peace in our time."

"There is only one peace now, and that peace is for all time," he declared. Thermonuclear war had become "not just tragic, but preposterous. With such weapons there can be no victory for anyone. Plainly, the objective now must be to see that such a war does not occur."

Bible Briefs

By A.A.M.

The Bible is rich in stories, and the purpose of this series is to encourage readers to look up for themselves the Bible versions of these incidents. If there are children in the family it is suggested that the story, and the Bible verses on which it is based, be read aloud.

What was the name of the leper of Bethany in whose home Jesus visited, when the woman came to the Master with an alabaster jar of very expensive ointment?

She poured this on his head as Jesus sat at the table. Some of the disciples were indignant at her action. They protested, "Why this waste? For this ointment might have been sold for a large sum and given to the poor."

Jesus was quite aware of their critical attitude. He replied to his followers, "Why do you trouble this woman? For she has done a beautiful thing to me. You always have the poor with you, but I will not always be here. In pouring this ointment on my body she has done it to prepare by body for burial. Truly, I say unto you, wherever the gospel is preached in the whole world, what she has done will be told in memory of her."

You will find the name of the man in whose home Jesus was a guest and this story in Matthew, Chapter 26, Verses 1-13.

CHURCH MEMBERS IN PUBLIC BAPTISM

—Central Press Canadian

Public baptism by immersion was practised in Oshawa, Ont., when members of the Gospel Mission church congregation gathered at the Rotary Park swimming pool. White-robed, the church members waded into the pool to be completely immersed by Rev. Ernest Rothenbush, right.

A Class — Miss O. Pollock.
B Class — Mrs. E. Bazinet.
C Class — Mr. C. Lummis.
D Class — Miss R. Hampton.
E Class — Mrs. Meigham.

A special prize was also donated by Lacasse Automobiles Reg'd. Members of the Choir wish to thank the many who helped to make this show another successful event.

Witnesses' Convention Pleads on Behalf of Soviet-Held Members

A direct appeal to Premier Bulganin at Moscow on behalf of their fellow Witnesses being held in Siberian slave camps, was sent out on Saturday from the District Convention of Jehovah's Witnesses at Verdun Auditorium. The assembly concluded Sunday with an attendance of 5,250 who heard the principal address "Why Permanent Peace Will Come in Our Day!" by F. W. Franz, vice-president of the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society, New York.

The petition to Bulganin which was presented to the assembly on Saturday evening by Mr. Franz also requests a conference between representatives of the Witnesses and the Russian government to be held either in the United States or Moscow, to further discuss the matter. It was also requested that a delegation of Witnesses be allowed to visit the prison camps where their fellow members are being held.

A copy of the petition has been sent to D. S. Chuvahin, Russian ambassador to Canada, in Ottawa.

The petition said in part: "Some 2,000 Jehovah's Witnesses are being held in the penal camp in Vorkuta. In April, 1951, 7,000 Witnesses were arrested from the Baltic States down to the Bessarabia and were then transported in freight trains to the distant region between Tomsk and Irkutsk, and new Lake Baykay in Siberia. There are Witnesses being held in more than 50 camps from European Russia into Siberia and northward to the Arctic Ocean, on the Island of Noyaya Zemlya.

"Called imperialists in communist countries, and communists in western countries, Jehovah's Witnesses do no harm to anyone, and remain neutral toward the controversies of this world."

Mr. Franz compared the Russian government to Pharoah of Egypt. "Pray for them," he told his audience, "not that they will be converted but that they will let our brothers free. If there is any humanity in the Russian Government, let them now liberate Jehovah's Witnesses whom they have so cruelly oppressed."

The Saturday morning session was highlighted by an immersion service conducted by Mr. J. H. Nathan, district minister for Central Canada. His request that, "All those desiring to be baptized please stand up!" prompted 182 to rise. They were then escorted to 50 waiting cars which whisked them off to the Canadian Legion Pool on Mountain Street, Montreal, for their immersion. Complete submersion in water is the official ordination ceremony of the Witnesses.

CREDITED WITH HEALING POWERS

—Central Press Canadian

Rev. Byron Howlett, Baptist minister of Winger, Ont., shown with his three-year-old daughter Marilee, is credited by his congregation with the power of healing by prayer. A woman suffering from asthma says she was instantly cured as he prayed. An habitual criminal had no inclination to crime after association with Mr. Howlett. And a boy given up as lost by doctors is now healthy and a regular attendant at Sunday school. Mr. Howlett says he is not a faith healer of the "circus method" and believes that any cures attributed to faith are gained through the faith of the person afflicted.

MOVE BODIES

Toronto (CP) — The task of removing long-buried bodies from a forgotten suburban North York cemetery has been approved by the Ontario Health department. The cemetery, last used 75 years ago, had become a vacant lot and was discovered during a street-widening project.

Over the Years with THE LACHUTE WATCHMAN

75 YEARS AGO

September 2, 1881 —

A complete return in the number of votes cast in the recent election is as follows: Abbott — 948; Christie 821; Majority, Abbott — 127. The total vote cast, in the midst of the harvest, was within 38 of being as large as the last vote cast in February of last year.

Mount Pleasant — There is some talk of getting a Post Office here. That it is needed is a positive fact.

Brownsburg — The "wrestling" match hasn't come off yet, but is somewhere in the near future; the contestants, we believe are practising daily. Both sides seem sure to win and we hear considerable money changing hands over the result.

Morin Flats — On Monday last, Mr. H. Jekill shot a hawk measuring over four feet from tip to tip of the wings, which weighed only two pounds seven ounces.

Farmers in the vicinity have finished harvesting, but empty barns are this season the reward of their toils. Corn and potatoes, however, promise an abundant crop, and there will doubtless be a number of husking bees.

50 YEARS AGO

August 31, 1906 —

A meeting of the Lachute School Commissioners was held recently in the Academy, with Commissioners Gail, Giles, Garretsee and Secretary Raitt in attendance. The report of the presiding officer for the election held July last was received, stating that Mr. G. Calder was re-elected by acclamation, Mr. H. M. Gail having been re-elected chairman.

A communication was received from Mr. G. H. Perley, M.P., renewing his offer of free tuition to the pupil taking the highest number of marks at the entrance examinations in Lachute Academy from each of the Parishes and Townships in the County, including Lachute. This was accepted with thanks. The Board then purchased the vacant lot of land betwen the Academy and the Methodist Parsonage for the sum of $200.

25 YEARS AGO

August 28, 1931 —

The funeral of the late Mr. Gordon Campbell and his sister, Agnes, was held in Grenville United Church yesterday. The fatality which cost this young couple their lives occurred Monday afternoon in the Ottawa River near Dansereau's Mill. Agnes had gone bathing early in the afternoon, and on wading out into the river, dropped into a hole made by dredging operations. Her brother George, on hearing her cries for aid, rushed into the water attired in his working clothes, and slipped into the same hole.

With great jubilation, the Liberals were able to acclaim Geo. Dansereau as Argenteuil's representative when the returns came in from the varied polls of the County giving him a majority of 436 over Notary F. Lavigne. A total of 3,824 votes were cast, out of a possible 4,741.

Canada's Amateur Golf Champs Head for U.S.A.

SPORTS CAMERA
By Milt MacPhail,
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Now that Moe Norman of Kitchener, Ont., and Marlene Stewart of Fonthill, Ont., have again proved to be Canada's best amateur golfers, they are headed south for a crack at amateur honors in the United States.

Norman, 26-year-old wise-cracking, unorthodox player from Kitchener's Rockway Club, will make his first bid for the U.S. Amateur championship in Chicago next month. He thinks he has a chance of becoming the second Canadian to win the U.S. amateur; Ross (Sandy) Somerville of London, Ont., achieved the feat in 1932.

After Moe won his second successive Canadian amateur crown in Edmundston, N.B., a couple of weeks ago, many competitors including some topflight Americans said Norman's chances were good. Some called Norman the best Canadian golfer they've seen, amateur or professional.

Miss Stewart, who at 22 has been dubbed "Little Miss Poker Face", will compete in the U.S. Women's Amateur at Indianapolis next month. Marlene, a great pressure player of the likes of Ben Hogan, will perhaps be one of the favorites at Indianapolis particularly following her thrilling victory over Pat Lesser of Seattle, defending U.S. women's amateur champion, in the final of the Canadian women's open golf championship at Winnipeg two weeks ago.

It was Marlene's third successive women's open title and followed by a week her sixth victory in the Canadian women's closed championship.

Betty Stanhope, 18, of Edmonton captured the Junior Women's title at Winnipeg; Gary Cowan, 17, a clubmate of Norman's at Kitchener, won the Canadian junior men's crown at Edmundston; and insurance salesman Doug Sanders of Miami Beach, Fla., outshot an international field at Montreal to become the first amateur to win the Canadian Open.

Luck in Weather

The way they're powering to another American League pennant, it sounds queer to call the New York Yankees a lucky club. But compare them with their city rivals, the New York Giants of the National League when it comes to luck with the weather.

The Giants time and again have had games rained out when a sell-out was in prospect, while the Yanks seem able to read the weatherman's mind.

Which recalls the world series of 1951, when these two clubs battled it out. The Giants won two of the first three games and had Sal Maglie ready for the fourth, on a Sunday. The Yanks had nobody, left. But it rained that Sunday and the added day of rest enabled the Yankees to come back with Allie Reynolds. He won the game to even it up — and the Yanks also won the next two to finish it up.

Brownsburg Wins Two-Straight in Final Round

(Our District Correspondent)

Brownsburg — The Brownsburg Tigers made it 2-0 over Hawkesbury in the best-of-five finals this week, with a 6-4 win. They thus attained the threshold of clinching the league championship and cup double. Any win from three games will end it all.

The winning pitcher again was Ronald Cousineau—his 11th against no defeats. "Zag" was in and out of trouble all afternoon, as he conceded 12 hits and one walk while striking out only one. His control was good, however, and he managed to bear down in the clutch. None of Hawkesbury's hits were earned. They were all the direct result of errors.

Mel Tomalty, who experienced a bad day in the field, had a good day at bat. His two-for-four raised his season's hit production to 20. Mel is the first player to reach this mark, although several players still have a chance. Gilles Diotte was the big bat this week. Gilles is the league's best first-baseman, but far from the best hitter. He came through with a solid single to centre — his second of the game — to drive across the tying and winning runs in the sixth inning.

Buddy and Jacques Racine each doubled and Germain Gagné and André Ouellette singled, to round out Brownsburg's eight-hit score card.

Hawkesbury outhit Brownsburg 12 to 8. Jean Claude Cyr hit a single, a double and a triple, and Caron and Seguin both doubled to lead the attack, but Brownsburg came up with two double plays at dangerous spots.

As before Brownsburg's fielding baled them out. In the first inning Keith Hazel turned the unusual trick of putting two men out at the same base. In the eighth Jacques Racine, Buddy Racine and Gilles Diotte combined on a neat double play.

What could be the cup-winning game will be played at Brownsburg on Sunday. This may be the last appearance of the season, and the crowd should be close to 200.

Fish, Like Humans, Extraordinarily Stubborn

Vancouver (CP) — No real solution has yet been found to the "fish vs. power" problem, Dr. Peter Larkin, chief biologist for the Institute of Fisheries, said in an address here.

He said British Columbia salmon are in many ways like human beings. They have a delicate and complicated mechanism but can be extraordinarily stupid.

First problem to be solved if we are to have both fish and power is to get the spawning salmon over the dams, and Dr. Larkin is pessimistic at the projects.

"Lots of people think they have a solution by means of complicated fishways, spirals or lifts, but no method has been devised that takes into account the behaviour pattern of the fish.

Go the Hard Way

"Salmon also will pick invariably the strongest flow for their ascent of the stream, so when they come to the outflow of a dam they will jump to death against the major flow rather than ascend the easier route through a fishway.

"Like human beings, they dislike being crowded or jostled, so only a limited number will enter a fishway at the same time. They prefer to go through only at certain hours of the day so that the peak of the run may squeeze out a big majority.

"That may prove fatal, for a delay of three or four days in getting to the spawning grounds means they will die without propagating.

"High dams of 70 or 80 feet present another problem, for even if the salmon manage to climb up that high by means of fishways, they are so tired when they reach the top that they are swept back over the dams."

Stan Leonard Wins Millar Tournament

(CP) — Stan Leonard, 42-year-old professional playing out of the Lachute Golf Club, won the Millar golf tournament with a three and two victory over Toronto's Al Balding at Toronto last Saturday. The victory was worth $1,000 to the veteran Leonard.

Leonard, competing in the match play tournament for the first time, entered the final with a two-up win over Bill Mawhinney of Vancouver. Balding beat Norman Smith, of Toronto York Downs four and two in the other semi-final.

The Balding - Leonard match was a bitter struggle for the first nine holes when Leonard was one up. At that point he went ahead to stay.

Anglers Pay $175 for Each Quebec Salmon

Montreal — The people of Quebec get by far their greatest cash return when the Atlantic salmon is used by sports fishermen rather than by commercial netters. A report, soon to be published by Laval University, presents the results of a six months' survey made by Prof. Georges Maheux. One of its most striking statements is that on privately-leased salmon streams under club management, the 7,000 fish landed by rod and fly in an average year cost $175 each. Averaged at 12 pounds, the angler paid $14.60 a pound, or 36 times the price realized by commercial fishermen engaged in marketing salmon as food.

The Laval survey, conducted as an independent research project, and financed by members of the Atlantic Salmon Association, indicates that Quebec receives a gross revenue from all branches of the Atlantic salmon fisheries of $2,498,000 annually, of which more than two millions is direct payment to Quebec citizens.

Commercial fishing for salmon, plus processing and retailing, are valued at $448,000. The pursuit of salmon by anglers distributes cash to Quebec citizens far in excess of this amount. The money spent on salmon fishing clubs amounts to $1,245,000; in outfitters' camps, $106,000; on Government reserve waters, $69,000; to which is added the purchases and sundry expenses of anglers, amounting to $480,000.

Caught in Quebec fishermen's nets each season, about 66,000 salmon are distributed to food markets. The catch by anglers on Quebec's fresh-water streams amounts to an average of 12,000. More than half of this number, caught by club members with rod and fly, involve heavy outlays for club management, including $600,000 in salaries and wages, $60,000 in taxes, $180,000 for upkeep of property, $240,000 for food, fuel, etc. and $120,000 in general expense.

Colford's Lodge Defeats Vankleek Hill Team Waiter's Annual Monday

Last Sunday Colford Lodge defeated Vankleek Hill 4-2 in another thriller. Due to the fact Aviation Electric could not field a team, Vankleek Hill substituted for them.

A hard fought game from the first inning, Vankleek Hill went ahead in the third when they scored both their runs on a triple and two singles. After this inning, the Ontario boys were held scoreless. Colford's scored once in the third and coach Frank MacLean drove in Mel Stewart in the sixth to tie the game. In one inning of overtime, Mel Stewart singled and then Yvon Jean Louis blasted the ball out of the park for a home run to end the ball game. Jean Guy Larocque struck out seventeen to win his fourteenth game. M. Hall was the loosing pitcher.

Next Sunday Colford's play host to Dominion Engineering, of Montreal. On Monday Colford's play their annual game with the "Waiters". The last two years the "Waiters" have beaten the powerful Colford Lodge team, so watch out this time as the boys are out for revenge.

September Features For "Wednesday Night"

In Sepember, CBC Wednesday Night will include radio biographies of two of America's great comedians. The programs are from the much praised National Broadcasting Sound", and they are profiles of Company series "Biographies in W. C. Fields (September 5) and Fred Allen (September 12).

"Biographies in Sound" use the voices of famous and little-known people to create a varied and living impression of writers, artists, entertainers and other public figures. CBC Wednesday Night has already broadcast profiles from this series of the novelists F. Scott Fitzgerald and Ernest Hemingway.

In the biographies of W. C. Fields and Fred Allen many entertainers from the United States and abroad contribute memories and impressions of the two comedians, and the program about Fred Allen includes recorded episodes from several of his famous radio broadcasts in the thirties. Fred Allen also acts as narrator for the biography of W. C. Fields in what must have been one of his last radio appearances before his sudden death a few months ago.

Other special series have also been lined up for September. In recent years, through radio broadcasts and commercial recordings, novelists, poets and other writers have been reading their own work for a growing audience of people interested in hearing how the writer himself interprets what he has created. It was partly through his dramatic readings of his own verse that the poet Dylon Thomas gained such a wide reputation on this continent just before his tragic, early death.

On CBC Wednesday Night and "Anthology" some Canadian poets have read their own work, and on the four Wednesdays in September some of our most distinguished prose writers will join them.

Radio Version of Hardy's "Woodlanders"

The second of 10 episodes of Thomas Hardy's novel "The Woodlanders", adapted for radio by the BBC's Desmond Hawkins, will be heard Tuesday, September 4, at 10 p.m. over the Dominion network.

The first episode, "Mr. Percomb's Rural Ride", told of a young couple who are brought together through coincidence. Unfortunately, Giles Winterborne, a simple country lad, is separated by a wide gulf from Grace Melbury, the daughter of the prosperous timber-merchant of the village of Little Hintock. However, in time his suit begins to prosper and Mr. Melbury gradually appears willing to stifle his grand ambitions for his daughter's social advancement and to accept Giles, without fortune or name, as his son-in-law.

In the second and third episodes, these genial circumstances are disturbed suddenly and decisively, in a typically Hardy fashion.

Who's Herb Gott?

Herb hasn't got anybody here, but in case you were wondering just who is Herb Gott, then the above picture should settle that for you. Herb can be heard interviewing interesting personalities on his Saturday radio feature, "Who's Herb Gott?" on the Trans-Canada network of the CBC.

Tips on Touring

By Carol Lane
Women's Travel Authority

Drive-In Movies have become one of Canada's favorite evening entertainments in spots where these are available. What's more — as a friend of mine and her husband have found — "Drive-Ins" are a good solution to the baby-sitter problem. The entire family, baby and all, just packs-up and drives to the local outdoor theatre.

This does take some planning. The wheels begin to turn immediately after dinner. The baby is mother's responsibility; she gets the bottle, extra diapers, blanket and night clothes necessary to prepare the baby for bed. It's up to dad to see that baby's car-bed is in place. Meanwhile, the other members of the "under-five" set are getting into pyjamas, slippers, and bathrobes. A favorite toy, plus a pillow and small blanket are part of each youngster's movie equipment. Pillows make good theatre seats, and the blankets will ward off any evening chill. Teeth are brushed, faces washed and the children are all set to go. A few cookies and a thermos of milk or fruit juice takes care of those nocturnal hunger pangs.

It's wise to plan on an early show with cartoons first on the program. These will keep the children happy and put them in a good frame of mind to sleep through the main feature.

By 8.30, according to my friend, the small fry are asleep and Mom and Dad are enjoying the movie. Before midnight everyone's home in bed after a pleasant family outing at the "Drive-In".

John Wyllie, ex-P.O.W. Reports on "No Escape"

John Wyllie, an English novelist who recently settled in Montreal, will be featured on "No Escape" on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, of next week, when he will be heard at 10.20 p.m. During the war he served in the Far East, and after the Dutch surrender in Java, he and other airforcemen attempted to escape on foot and by boat to Australia. Wyllie was later in prison camps on Java and in Singapore, and in a series of three talks describes the unsuccesful escape attempt.

Macdonald Dean Reports On World Food Problem

Dr. George Dion will speak on "World Food Problems" at 10.20 p.m., Sunday, September 2.

The speaker is dean of the Faculty of Agriculture, of McGill University. He has been a soil specialist with the Food and Agricultural Organization in Rome and has travelled extensively in Asia and the Far East, studying many of the problems of the world relating to food.

Some Philosophy on Museum Pieces, Headaches and Unhumorous Comics

Two Spots of Interest in Argenteuil, With Our "Sunnyacres" Contributor

"SUNNYACRES SKETCHES"
By Margaret Cook

Outside, the summer is weeping itself to a close. We trust they are tears of repentance, for weatherwise, it has been an unsatisfactory season. There have even been times when we would have cheerfully exchanged some of the famed mountain air for the vitiated stuff that passes for oxygen in theatres. As soon as we are safely and thankfully settled in our retreat, the summer theatres begin putting out the most enticing notices. We have always liked plays, since the first one we saw, "Uncle Tom's Cabin." We can still remember Topsy eating a fly, and exclaiming in delight, "Oh, it's got sugar on its laigs!"

We are recently back from the Ottawa Exhibition; that is not a polite "we", for the writer never attends exhibitions — well, hardly ever. Sometimes we are forced to agree with the psychiatrists, who blame all one's faults on one's upbringing. Whether an aversion to fairs is a fault or a virtue, we are not prepared to argue, but certainly the dislike is attributable to a childhood that included a liberal dose of country fairs. My stepmother, a hardy extrovert, always attended all the exhibitions around the Townships and, for reasons quite unintelligible to anyone, insisted on taking her small stepdaughter. I can still remember the heat, the dust, the smells, the high female voices exclaiming, "Well, if it isn't Susie Macpherson! How have you been?" Then would ensue a long conversation, with me standing first on one foot, then on the other, listening vaguely to the flow of reports on Jane, Emmy, Sam, Grace, etc. The cows and horses that did intrigue me, were of no interest to my mother; so the days were long indeed. The next day at home, I invariably had a migraine, but the stepmother never seemed to join the effect with the cause. As soon as I was strong enough mentally, I flatly refused to go to any more fairs. About the same time, I emancipated myself from castor oil. It's a great day in any life, when one realizes that conformity to the local or tribal custom is not really a necessity.

To return to the Ottawa Exhibition — the rest of the family, and two young friends, attended, and report a fine time on the "bomb", at the "races" and in the side-shows. The cattle and horses were approved, and the hot-dogs and soft drinks edible. . . Meanwhile, the writer had spent the day with a friend of her childhood, always a hazardous thing to do. How queer it is that the little girl next door, whom you dearly loved, quite often is revealed in later life as a colossal bore. As for looks — well, often, childhood friends are unrecognizable. But this time, we knew each other at once, and all was well. We talked about the scenes and acquaintances of our youth, and agreed that most of them were best forgotten. Into this nostalgic party, erupted a Warrant Officer of the RCAF, whose first words were, "New York! I hate that dam' place." His reasons were clear and personal. "I cannot sleep because of the noise and the heat, and I cannot open the window wide, because some one will come in from the fire-escape and steal my pants!"

Two weeks ago, we had a family picnic to the Carillon Museum, a first visit for the small nephew and nieces. The people from Sunnyacres go every summer, so it was refreshing to get the reaction of keen, young minds. Niece Penny, looking at a wedding dress of the late 1880's: "Mummy, did you have a dress like that for your wedding?" Down in the kitchen, contemplating the hearth and cooking equipment: "Auntie, did you used to cook like that?" No, dear reader, the niece is not moronic. She leads her class at school, but the idea of comparative time hasn't yet penetrated the brain. It is a theory of the writer's that the present addiction to "comics" has much to do with the deplorable ignorance of children. Comics are not generally vicious, they are merely insipid. And did you ever see the little darlings smiling, or laughing, while reading a comic? They read with grim attention, but with no sign of enjoyment. The other day, we thought we had at last found a child who considered the comics funny. So he did — but he could not read!

Well, as some one recently said to the writer, "I do like your articles; I always turn to them first. They're chatty, but I do like them." . . . Seems to me that this is rather chattier than usual. We stopped the tap-tap of the typewriter, but the rain was still going drip-drip. Today, at the little local hotel, we were a small, cold company, huddled at one end of the big dining-room that has for so many weeks been full to the doors. In spite of the weather, it has been a good summer for those who cater to the public. Reports from the city indicate that it, too, has had its quota of tourists. . . So far as we know, in Montreal one can open the window without losing one's unmentionables.

We also visited Camp Farthing, the new project of the Anglican Church at Lake Worth, and were impressed by the beauty of the spot and the competence of the staff, as well as the more-than-adequate buildings and equipment. A brook comes rushing out of the woods, and cavorts through the grounds. Part of it has been diverted into a fountain, which falls into a quiet pool, before the front door. The cabins are designed for eight occupants, seven children and a counsellor. There is a wash-house with running water and flush toilets. The lodge has an enormous fireplace, and all the necessary equipment to take care of the inevitable rainy day. The head of the camp has the assistance of a chaplain and a nurse, as well as a cook, and a general factotum, the former owner. It was a lovely spot, and the "feel" of the place was good. As our fellow contributor, Geoff, has pointed out, it is always well to have God in an institution. If any of you are wondering about this camp, we can heartily recommend it.

The rain still makes gurgling sounds in the water butts, and the garden must be well watered. The flowers are at their best, except for the roses, which are nearly all gone. The phlox are just coming out, the pinks are blooming anew, the zinnias stand up straight and lift deflant faces to the rain, but the calendulas droop. When the sun comes out again, they all seem to shake themselves, then lift reverent and thankful faces to the sky. . . It will be a wrench to go back to the city and to breakfast looking out at a green wall, rather than at the flowers with the background of the maples. But we comfort ourselves with the reflection that it will be many weeks yet before the old house settles down for its winter's rest.

"CRITICALLY SPEAKING"

If you're visiting the CNE at Toronto this year you'll be delighted by the feast of fashion that women's activities manager Elsa Jenkins is serving up, as a final fling in the varied floor-space she has been allocated in different buildings.

Next year, fashion, food and handicrafts will all be housed in a modern, new women's building.

She has arranged a program of 15 different shows, starting at noon each day. They include fashions by Canadian designers made from Canadian fabrics, clothes made from patterns for the home sewers, historical fashions and conceptions of fashions for the future.

Notice the cool grey-and-blue color scheme Mrs. Jenkins has devised for this year's show.

Outstanding Costumes

And if you won't be among the CNE visitors, you'd like to know anyway about the outfits which are sure to catch the eye.

For instance, a New costumier's collection of wedding gowns dating from 1847 is bound to arouse nostalgia and perhaps a few giggles from the audience.

Paris designer de Givenchy and Trigere of New York have contributed models, and a contemporary evening gown by Ginanca Gusmaroli of white nylon lace trimmed with red velvet is as beautiful as it is unusual.

There's a new slant to furs this year, too. A leopard-skin umbrella is teamed with a black mouton coat which has a leopard collar. Imagination has been used with a frosty pink Arctic fox stole and a grey, white and black striped chinchilla and velvet stole.

Imagine a gold lame spacesuit outfit, which is one designer's idea of what we shall be wearing in 1966. It includes a long, fitted jacket, zipped from collar to hem, worn over tight pants.

Women Ambassadors

Writing about the United States presidential campaigns, Miss Aitken points out that so far four American women have been appointed to important diplomatic posts, the first as early as 1933.

Miss Aitkin, who is Progressive Conservative MP for York-Humber, says this record "makes Canada look like a backward country. We have never had any women appointed an ambassador or minister."

It's not for want of able women to rate such an appointment. Canadian women have for years played an important part in international affairs, and this year five have been appointed to lead international organizations of various kinds.

Let's Eat

BY

IDA BAILEY ALLEN

"Many customes of the gay nineties are coming back!" I remarked.

"You've heard about the fund-raising box parties of those days, when luncheon or supper for two was packed in one box and auctioned off to the highest bidder. The girls packed and brought the lunches, the men were the eager buyers.

Summer Parties

"A friend of mine has adapted this idea to purely socil summer parties at her summer place, where they are proving a great success. Her only requirement is Gibson girl shirtwaist dresses for the women and porkpie hats for the men, right now as high-style as they were in the nineties!"

"How are the parties conducted?" asked the Chef.

"The lunches for two are beautifully packed in baskets," I explained. "The guests draw lots for the lunches. Each couple wanders through the spacious grounds, finds an inviting nook and enjoys the meal."

How About Menu?

"A meat or egg salad in 8 ounce paper containers, assorted sandwiches in envelopes, relishes and a fruit dessert form the pattern.

"She arranges the food in handled wicker baskets, lined with paper napkins, and adds any necessary eating implements, handled paper cups and saucers and plastic vacuum bottle for the beverage—hot or cold according to the day's temperature."

Beans Baked with Tomato

Add 2 teaspoons salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, 3 tablespoons molasses, ¼ lb. salt pork, cut in bite-size pieces, 2 cups canned tomatoes, and 1 chopped medium-sized peeled onion.

Transfer to a casserole. Add water to cover if necessary. Put on the lid and bake 1½ hours at 450 deg. F. Uncover and bake 30 minutes or until browned.

Lemon Coconut Custard Pie

Blend 1½ tablespoons cornstarch with 1 tablespoon cold milk. Stir into the heated milk. Cook-stir 3 minutes.

Beat 3 eggs with ¼ teaspoon salt. Gradually beat in ¾ cup sugar. Pour in the milk. Add ½ cup canned flaked coconut. Cover and cool. Stir in 1 tablespoon lemon juice.

Pour into a deep 9-inch pie plate lined with pie pastry, the edge fluted. Bake 10 minutes at 425 deg. F. Reduce the heat to 350 deg. F. and bake 35 minutes more or until a knife inserted near the centre comes out clean.

An Unusual Dessert

Here's a recipe for an unusual dessert that will be handy to have while fresh apricots are in supply. The filling made with fresh apricots and flavored with tangy lemon juice adds dash to this delicate, feathery cake. If fresh apricots are not available canned apricots, well drained, will make an excellent substitute in the filling. This Apricot-Filled Feather Cake is an ideal dessert for luncheon or dinner and the perfect accompaniment for a refreshing mid-afternoon glass of iced tea or coffee.

Apricot-Filled Feather Cake

¼ Cup butter or margarine, 1¼ cups granulated sugar, 3 eggs (well-beaten), 2 cups sifted pastry flour, ¼ teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon baking powder, 1 teaspoon baking soda, ½ teaspoon nutmeg, 1 cup buttermilk, ½ teaspoon vanilla.

Grease two 8-inch round layer cake pans and line bottom with waxed paper. Pre-heat oven to 350°F. (moderate). Cream butter or margarine until fluffy. Gradually add sugar, creaming until fluffy and well blended. Add well-beaten eggs, beating until mixture is fluffy and well blended. Sift together pastry flour, salt, baking powder, soda and nutmeg. Combine buttermilk and vanilla. Add sifted dry ingredients to creamed mixture alternately with buttermilk mixture, stirring just enough to blend ingredients. Turn batter into prepared cake pans and spread evenly. Bake in preheated oven for 25 minutes. Let stand on cake rack 10 minutes, then invert, lift off pans and peel off paper. When layers are cool, put together with apricot filling.

Apricot Filling

6 Fresh apricots (or canned apricots, well-drained), ¼ cup granulated sugar, 1 tablespoon cornstarch, ¼ cup cold water, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind.

Split apricots in two, and remove stones. Do not peel. Combine sugar and cornstarch; mix with prepared fruit. Blend in cold water, lemon juice and grated lemon rind. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until well blended and thickened. Cool before spreading between cake layers. Yield: one 2-layer filled cake.

Plum Jelly

(Yield: about 12 medium glasses)

First, prepare the juice. Crush thoroughly about 2½ quarts fully ripe plums. (Do not peel or pit). Add 1 cup water, bring to a boil and simmer, covered, for 10 minutes. Place in a jelly cloth or bag and squeeze out juice. Measure 4 cups juice into a very large saucepan.

Then make the jelly. Add sugar to juice in saucepan and mix well. Place over high heat and stir until mixture comes to a hard boil. At once stir in liquid fruit pectin. Bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard 1 minute, stirring constantly. Remove from heat. Skim off foam with metal spoon. Pour quickly into glasses. Cover jelly at once with ¼ inch hot paraffin.

Cold Meats, Home-Prepared

by the Consumer Section, Canada Dept. of Agriculture Marketing Service

Today in the shops there are so many prepared cold meats to choose from that we sometimes forget about the economical, yet well flavored ones that can be prepared at home. The Consumer Section has had great success in preparing home-made cold meats and here are recipes of two of their favorites.

Jellied Beef Tongue

1 Pickled beef tongue (5 to 6 pounds), 10 to 12 cups hot water, 2 bay leaves, 1 tablespoon mixed pickling spice, 1 clove garlic (cut), 1 teaspoon pepper, ½ cup sliced onion.

Wash and scrub tongue well. Soak in cold water for two hours before cooking. Drain. Cover with hot water and add seasonings. Cover and simmer until tender allowing 45 to 50 minutes a pound. Take the tongue from the cooking liquid and while still hot remove skin, excess fat, glands and bones at thick end of tongue.

Strain and heat 3 to 4 cups cooking liquid. For each 1½ cups liquid used, add 1 teaspoon vinegar and stir in 1 tablespoon gelatin soaked in ¼ cup cold water. Press tongue into mould and pour over enough liquid to cover. Chill thoroughly. Unmould and serve. 12 to 15 servings (2 slices, each).

Jellied Veal and Pork Loaf

2 to 2½ pounds veal shank, 1 to 1½ pounds pork hock, 6 to 8 cups hot water, 2 bay leaves, 3 to 4 peppercorns, 1 to 2 teaspoons salt, 2 tablespoons chopped onion, 2 tablespoons chopped parsley, 2 tablespoons vinegar, 1 cup finely diced celery, ½ cup finely diced green pepper (optional), 1 hard cooked egg (sliced).

Wipe meat. Cover with hot water. Add bay leaves, peppercorns, salt, celery salt, onion and parsley. Cover closely and simmer until meat falls from bones, 1½ to 2 hours. Skim off fat. Strain stock and boil down to 2 cups. Trim meat from bones, remove excess fat. Pull meat into small pieces with fork.

Combine meat, vinegar, celery and green pepper. To make a garnish with egg slices cover bottom of loaf pan (approximately 9" x 5" x 3") with a thin layer of cooking liquid. When this is partially set place egg slices in bottom of pan and allow to set until firm. Add meat mixture to remaining cooking liquid and cool until it begins to thicken. Pour into loaf pan and chill until firm. Unmould and serve on lettuce. 6 to 8 servings (2 to 3, ½-inch slices per serving).

Taste Panels in Canada's Kitchen

What is a taste panel? It is the tasting by a group of judges, of several similar but slightly different samples of cooked or uncooked food in order to find out which sample is most desirable. Generally a panel of tasters consists of three or more people and it's best to have an uneven number in case of a tie. The taste panel is an essential part of any experimental kitchen for it's been proven time and again that the taste test is the best test of any food product.

Canada's Kitchen is no exception. Here new methods and new recipes are being tested continually and old ones are being brought up to date, with the result that several hundred taste panels are conducted every year.

There are two types of panels, one being made up of an expert group of tasters who can detect even slight differences in flavor, texture or other characteristics of the food being tasted. These tasters are generally inyited to participate in such projects as frozen meat storage tests or experiments to determine which variety of apple or potato or some other product is best for a certain purpose. The second type of panel usually includes some people who have not taken part in previous taste panels and for this reason are preferred for helping to determine the acceptability of a food from the consumer's point of view. The aim of taste panels to which these so-called inexperienced tasters are invited is to find the best recipe or method of preparation for a certain dish and they may be asked to taste such foods as apple dumplings, peach pie, dill pickles, grape jelly or fried chicken, to mention just a few. Sometimes several variations of a recipe will be tested in an attempt to include, or at least to try, improvements suggested by members of the taste panel.

How do the members of the taste panel score the food samples being tested? Well, the Consumer Section, Canada Department of Agriculture has several different score sheets. Sometimes when more precise results are wanted, numerical scores are used — 5 for excellent, 4 very good, 3 good, 2 fair and 1 poor. When the score for texture, flavor, appearance, color, doneness, etc. are totalled the highest score will generally indicate the most acceptable sample. Other score sheets call for comments instead of numbers and judges may indicate their opinions by phrases such as too thin or too thick, not salty enough, suggest more spices, etc. No matter which type of scoring is used, the home economists and technicians in Canada's Kitchen analyze the results of the taste panel and use them in developing the new recipe or method for which the panel was set up in the beginning. In making the final decision taste appeal is considered in relation to other things such as time of preparation, loss of food value in cooking, etc. So taste panels are just another one of the many behind-the-scene activities carried on by the Department of Agriculture to help Canadian Consumers.

Crochety Polly, 89, Has English Lessons

Andover, N.B. (CP) — Polly at 89 is brushing up on her "serious" English, her formal association with school having been cut short by an automobile accident.

Polly is still inclined to swear every now and then even though there's juvenile company around. But she compensates for it by discoursing on more serious subjects with the youngsters who come to visit her, like "Working on the Railroad", for instance. And Polly at 89 can still cavort for the kiddies but strictly within the limitations of her cage.

Polly is no longer at liberty after being struck by a car near her owners' home here a few years ago. The parrot, say Mr. and Mrs. Hubert St. Thomas, was dizzy for quite a while, but gradually returned to her normal state.

Before the accident Polly had unlimited freedom and daily flew to the Andover school to play with children at noon. She'd go for all-night jaunts too, returning in the morning to greet the sleepy St. Thomas's with a raucous "breakfast ready?"

She may be getting a little crotchety in her declining years but her owners say they wouldn't part with Polly for "any money in the world."

Gift from Quebec W.I.

The Quebec Women's Institutes is sending two treadle sewing machines to Mysore, India. These will be going to Mrs. Kuppuswamy, for use in the sewing classes she has organized among the country women at that place. Mrs. Kuppuswamy was one of the Indian observers at the Toronto Conference of the Associated Country Women of the World in 1953. Many Q.W.I. members met her at that time and the work she is carrying on at this centre at Mysore is being followed with keen interest.

The balance of the fund raised by the Q.W.I. for the UNESCO Gift Coupon project will be used to purchase three sewing machines and some smaller equipment for the Lanka Mahila Samiti (Women's Institute) Ceylon.

FOR STICKY ICE TRAYS

If sticky ice trays are one of your daily irritations, try rubbing a little clean-up wax on the bottom of the tray when you fill it. The wax, a white creamy liquid, will form a coating on the tray bottom and keep it from sticking to the freezer compartment.

PROTECTIVE FOIL "Wraps" 60,000-TON CARRIER

Any housewife would have thought of it! But credit goes to the builders of the U.S. Navy's mighty new carrier, U.S.S. Ranger, for using aluminum foil to keep their product "fresh".

During construction, a ship rests on wooden blocks, which absorb a lot of moisture. To protect their costly steel hull from rust and corrosion during the 18-month construction period, the Navy simply covered the blocks with ordinary household foil. This brainwave was a natural for a marine builder, since nowadays he uses shiny, non-corroding aluminum so widely for superstructures, lifeboats and other important shipbuilding components.

A Weekly Feature of Helpful Hints on Child Training

Money! Money!

(Copyright) — By NANCY CLEAVER —

"Ah, take the Cash, and let the Credit go, Nor heed the rumble of a distant Drum!"
— Wrote Omar Khayyam

"What can I do about it?" his wife replies quickly. "I guess we will have to take time off and decide just what we both can do about it. We should be sure of our own ideas about our youngsters and money."

The subject of a child and money is no easy one for parents today. One difficulty is that boys and girls, particularly those in cities and towns have all kinds of oportunities for spending money long before they have had any real experience in earning money.

As soon as a child is old enough to go into stores with his Mother, he observes her opening her purse and parting with money in exchange for desirable objects. She explains to him that he must not lift a toy car off the counter and go off with it. "Mummy has given the clerk the money for it."

Visitors sometimes give a little ehild a copper or a dime. A youngster may regard these coins the same as other playthings. He soon learns that he must not lose them and that mother and daddy place money in a special class. A small boy who has been allowed to play with keys and other small trinkets in his mother's purse, opens it, from curiosity, and takes out the money from her coin purse. As he is busy spreading it on the floor, he is surprised to find how cross his mother is that he has touched her money!

What are some practical suggestions which parents can try out in teaching their child the value and wise use of money? A child can only learn to use money well by experience, just as he learns to write by writing, or play the piano by practising on it. Around the time he is old enough to count, to keep track of coppers and nickles and dimes, he should be given a regular weekly allowance. The amount depends on the father's income, the child's age, experience, the average amount his chums have to spend in a week. A six or seven year old might be given five or ten cents a week. The little child should not be forced to "keep accounts". If this appeals to him, well and good, but there is little value in forcing him to write down his expenditures. The essence of an allowance is that it is the child's own money, to be spent as he wishes — not to be taken away from him as a punishment and he should not be pressed to put part of it aside in order to save! A small child has little interest in long term saving. But gradually he learns to forego today's pleasure in a ten cent balloon in order to buy a thirty-nine cent motor boat tomorrow!

It is not easy to make provision for younger public school children to earn money at home. There is always the problem that if a boy is paid for carrying out ashes or shovelling a walk or mowing a lawn or a girl is given money for dusting or washing dishes or making beds, the son or daughter in the house will come to think that they need never help with the work unless they are paid. A child should have certain regular tasks as a member of the home, in order to help Mummy or Daddy and other special jobs which he can do or not as he likes for a certain sum of money.

An older boy or girl should be encouraged to experience real earning in the outside world, by selling papers, clerking, running errands, delivering parcels, cutting grass, minding children. As a child grows, his allowance should be increased and the range of things it covers made larger. A collegiate student's allowance and earnings should cover most of his amusements, incidentals, and a good many of his clothing purchases as well. An adolescent can decide on goals such as buying a new bicycle, or a trip or going to camp, which require a considerable sum and use the necessary self-denial to regularly save towards these desirable ends.

"A fool and his money are soon parted" George Buchanan once said. John Wesley advised his followers to make all they could, save all they could and give all they could. Mothers and fathers realize that in a true home love and generosity and imagination and many other gifts of heart and mind cannot be purchased, but at the same time they want to train their children in the wise use of money! How well are you succeeding in this perplexing part of your child's education?

Traffic Officer's Letter of Resignation Accepted Last Week

Lachute, Que.
August 22, 1956

Director,
Quebec Provincial Police,
Montreal Division
Dear Sir:

Having been instructed by you to report for duty in Montreal on Thursday morning, August 23, 1956, I find that I have no alternative but to tender this, my resignation.

Having rendered over eighteen years of faithful service to the Department of Provincial Police, I cannot but feel that your decision in moving me to the Montreal area is most unfair.

Being married with five children to care for and making payments on a house in Lachute, it is impossible for me to exist on a salary of $50 a week and live in Montreal. Therefore your decision of moving me to Montreal puts me in a position which I find I cannot contend with on the salary involved.

Please make arrangements to reemburse me for my contributions to the Department's Pension fund as soon as possible.

Yours truly,
(Signed)
Officer Howard Jones

Civil Defence in the Future

(Last in series of 24 articles)

The need for civil defence in Canada is here to stay for as long as the possibility of war is around. In fact, the civil defence organizations may be with us even after the threat of a nuclear conflict has disappeared — if it ever does — because of the usefulness of such a plan in combatting natural disasters.

Civil defence planners are putting heavier emphasis on their plans' advantages to any community struck suddenly by disaster from nature out of control. That is, in floods, fires, tornadoes and so on.

Since Canada's civil defence plan seeks only to co-ordinate and enhance through proper training and guidance the disaster services that already exist in a community, its value even in peacetime is obvious.

And once a community's civil defence organization has shown its ability to help prevent loss of life and property against disasters that can come even when there are no wars, the inhabitants quite likely would want such a setup maintained.

It would be highly unrealistic, however, to forget the possibility of armed attack at the present time. Until the day of world peace comes, civil defence must be prepared to meet this greatest of all disasters.

How long might that be? It is doubtful that there is a reputable crystal-gazer in business anywhere today who would care to predict the answer.

"What is the grand aim of Soviet Russia?" F. F. Worthington, Federal Civil Defence Co-ordinator, once asked an audience. He gave his own answer:

"Lenin (one of the original Russian Communist leaders) tells in his own words, 'to bring to triumph the world revolution, to create the Soviet Republic of the world' or world domination under Soviet Russia."

Originally the Communist aim was to dominate the world through bloody revolution. If it has changed, it has done so only in the method, not the eventual outcome. The Communists may have decided they can dominate the world by winning a bloodless cold war. Only the Russians could say.

While all of this is only speculation, one thing seems certain: there appears little hope of obtaining an international climate in which free nations can relax their vigilance.

And aside from considerations of the threat of war is the fact man has not yet learned to so control the forces of nature that he can predict and prevent entirely their sudden onslaughts against him.

Health Minister Martin, the Federal Cabinet Minister responsible to Parliament for civil defence, has often stressed that the value of civil defence to a community goes far beyond its immediate objectives.

"Besides their potential for protection in the time of war," he has said, "civil defence measures can have valuable peacetime application as well."

"In a serious peacetime disaster a well-equipped, properly trained civil defence force can be of inestimable value in maintaining public morale, and in restoring normal conditions quickly to the stricken community."

Speaking of Britain's organization, British Home Secretary Sir David Fyfe once said:

"Civil defence is not just a crisis organization to be built up whenever the international situation gets worse and forgotten when it improves.

"Civil defence is a permanent element in our defence, a permanent feature of local government and a permanent part of the responsibilities that fall on all of us as citizens of a free country."

The same applies in Canada. It likely will continue to apply as long as the slightest possibility of the most horrible disaster of all, nuclear warfare, remains.

Have You A Question on UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE OR EMPLOYMENT?

Q. May I draw unemployment insurance if I left my job to go to another town with my parents? I left my job as "extra" clerk in a store. Am I entitled to unemployment insurance as this job was only an "extra" one?

A. If you are a boy under 18 or a girl under 21 and your parents require you to leave your employment to go with them, you would not be disqualified for leaving voluntarily. An older person must show just cause for leaving in order to avoid disqualification and generally speaking leaving employment to be with parents is not considered just cause. The fact that the job was an "extra" clerk would not prevent your being disqualified if you left it without just cause. However, it might mean a shorter period of disqualification.

Q. While unemployed may I travel for about 15 days without losing any right to benefit? Must I notify the office to that effect?

A. If you are receiving benefit, the answer to your first question is no. You may leave your local office area under certain conditions, but you must be available for work; that is, your local office must be able to locate you quickly if it has work for you. Consult your local office for guidance about your own case.

From 1926 to 1954 infant mortality in Canada was reduced from a rate of 94 deaths per 1,000 live births to 32. Approximately 27,000 children lived to their first birthday in 1954 who would have died at the rate prevailing in 1926.

Net income of Canadian farmers was 22 per cent higher in 1955 than in 1954. Farm cash income in the first quarters of 1956 was 11 per cent higher than in corresponding period of 1955.

Old-Timers Relate Saga of Fight

BonaVista North, Nfld. (CP) The old timers wistfully recall the Battle of Sloop's Run Bridge when they gather for a yarn on the pierheads and in the net lofts of this northeast coast fishing community.

In the summer of 1903 a young Horatio named "Fighting" Tommy Roberts stood guard on the bridge over Sloops Run Tickle separating Fox Cove from Newtown. Four Fox Cove bucks pined on one end of the bridge and their lights of love pined on the other.

The price of crossing was kicking the hat Tommy tossed by his feet in the middle of the bridge. As Tommy's wrath would fall on the kicker, the price was too high.

But a time came when the Fox Cove stalwarts and Fighting Tommy found themselves shipping codfish on Capt. Alphaeus Barbour's wharf. Sid Jones elected himself the champion of Fox Cove by whacking Fighting Tom across the posterior with a dry codfish.

Heady Fighter

The enraged Thomas fought using his head — as a battering ram. He had the power but Sid had the speed. Sid leaped aside on the first lunge, rapped Tom on the nape of the neck as he passed, and sent him sprawling in a catch pan under a molasses barrel.

Tom returned vengefully to the fray and was battering Sid with his fists when a referee — Capt. Baxter Barbour had them break it up and resume again 10 minutes later in the loft of Capt. Alphaeus' store.

Tom kept to his tactics and Sid to his. Tom butted and Sid jumped aside and clouted the nape of his neck. After 25 minutes of butting, of frenzied lunging and slugging, the terrible Tom allowed he'd had enough.

Sid was proclaimed the victor, and the village hero. Tom was banished from his stand on the bridge and the Fox Cove boys and Newtown girls stopped pining.

Sid and Tom, of course, became and remained fast friends.

Provincial Transport To Revise Bus Fares

A revised schedule for Provincial Transport Company bus fares in the Province will become effective on Tuesday, September 4, the Company announced today. (This new schedule was recently approved by the Province of Quebec Transportation Board). A few new bus routes acquired by the Company during the past months are still under consideration and will not be affected by the change.

The new rate schedule was prepared by P.T.C. in accordance with a Board ruling which stems from a hearing of the company's request for a fare increase presented last year. The P.T.C. was ordered by the Board to standardize its rates on the basis of mileage covered. The basis used is 3 cents per passenger-mile at 25 miles with a minimum of 15 cents. However, the present 50% reduction allowed to commuters will remain unchanged.

At the Board hearing, last year, a number of municipalities and parishes in an area immediately north of Montreal pointed out that the Company's tariff structure was not uniform or consistent with mileage covered. . . Adjustments have now been made in accordance with the Board's direction.

On commuter routes within a radius of 40 miles from Montreal the following changes will be made: 2,999 fares will be reduced out of a total of 5,568. 1,853 fares will remain unchanged and only 716 will be increased.
