Learning about tree farming

A YOUNG TREE FARMER learns about forest management. That is, trees like other crops, must be harvested before they die and rot, thus providing a cash crop and making way for new growth. The Canadian Forestry Association, through the Tree Farm Movement, assists farmers and others to manage their woodlots profitably.

Canadian Tree Farmers' Assocn. formed at inaugural meeting here

The following is an abridged narrative by Doug Morrison of the C.I.P. Company's Woods Division at Grenville, reporting on leading to the organization of the "Canadian Tree Farmers' Association" which took form recently at a meeting held in Lachute. This informative report was given by Mr. Morrison at a Tree Farm Night of the Rotary Club, original sponsors of the Tree Farm certification plan in this County.

The original resolution to explore the feasibility of forming a Tree Farmers' Association was taken at a Tree Farmers' Field Day held at the C.I.P. Company's Forest Farm in August of last year. The resolution stemmed from a discussion which brought to light the fact that — while Tree Farmers are given individual recognition by local sponsoring committees such as the Rotary Club, there is no machinery whereby they could discuss a mutual problem, arrive at a mutually-beneficial solution and then embark on a combined course of action. Nothing exists to bind one Tree Farmer to another.

Consequently before this August meeting adjourned, a decision was taken to meet in September at the Tree Farm of Mr. C. B. Clarke, at Carillon.

This second meeting came off as planned in September. Approximately 50 persons attended. They represented a good cross-section of the various types of tree farm ownership and several other interested agencies.

A constitution committee was appointed to draw up a set of by-laws, and once this task was accomplished, to call a third general meeting.

Appointed to the constitution committee were as follows. I think they deserve recognition because of the time and effort they put into their work:

J. L. Van Camp, secretary-manager, Canadian Forestry Association, Montreal; Stuart Armstrong, Lachute; Keith Pitcairn, Hudson; J. A. D. Campbell, Rawdon; J. A. MacDonald, Ottawa; A. R. C. Jones, Dept. of Woodlot Management, Mcdonald College; M. R. Wilson, Cushing; John R. Graham, Lachute.

A succession of meetings were held by this constitution committee, and finally it seemed that the fifth draft of by-laws was getting close to the desired result and a general meeting was called for February 28 at the Lachute Legion Hall. The Lachute Farm Forum co-operated in helping to organize this meeting.

As it was the intention of the committee to apply for a national charter, invitations were sent out to all Tree Farmers across Canada, well in advance of the meeting.

Also, in the course of investigating the structure of such an organization, factors were uncovered which made it advisable to broaden the membership to include all woodlot owners — not just those certified as Tree Farmers under the Canadian Tree Farm Movement.

The discussion of the constitution consisted mainly of clarifying a few points, without any basic to the constitution as drawn up by the committee.

Some discussion did centre around the name of the organization — the committee had suggested "Canadian Tree Farmers' Association", and eventually this name was adopted.

Finally a resolution was passed authorizing the constitution committee to apply to the Secretary of State for a national charter as a non-profit organization.

If this application for a national charter is approved, and there is every indication that it will be, what do we have in the way of an organization? . . .

It has been pointed out, this will be a non-profit organization.

The headquarters will be located in Montreal.

Regional branches may be organized within each province.

Membership is open to all woodlot owners, whether as corporations or individuals.

A board of directors will be elected to oversee and correlate the programs of the regional branches.

The purpose of the Canadian Tree Farmers' Association will be as follows:

(1) To encourage and assist members to apply good forestry practices to the growing, harvesting and marketing of wood products from their woodlots, and to encourage the practice of fish and game management.

(2) To obtain and make available to members accurate and extensive information on the growing, harvesting and marketing of their wood products.

(3) To stimulate advertising, education, experimentation and research by government and industry which will increase demand for wood products and develop efficient methods of production.

(4) To strive for the establishment of systems of taxation which will permit and encourage the economical use of land for growing of wood crops.

(5) To stimulate and encourage activities which will reduce waste by fire, insects, disease, grazing and destructive cutting in woodlots.

(6) The co-operation with other organizations having generally similar objectives and purposes.

(7) To encourage better land use in Canada, on both private and Crown lands, and the establishment of tree farms where they would contribute to better land use.

(8) To encourage provincial governments to provide qualified representatives in adequate numbers to assist in woodlot management in the same manner as representatives now assist agriculture.

(9) To accept donations of funds and to administer them for promotion of the purposes of the Association.

(10) To recommend to members, reliable operational contractors whom the Association believes will conform with good woodlot management practices.

(11) To do all such other acts and things as are incidental or conductive to the attainment of the foregoing objects or any of them.

To forward these aims the Association proposes to form the following committees:

Membership; Forest Protection; Legislation and Taxation; Silvicultural Research; Education and Publicity; Harvesting and Marketing.

From the foregoing, it will be seen that this association is well beyond the embryo stage. Red tape, however, takes its toll of time, and some months will pass before the association becomes a reality.

Local Chamber of Commerce visits Hawkesbury filtration plant

A delegation of members of the Lachute Chamber of Commerce, headed by President Adémar Cuerrier and accompanied by Lachute Alderman Stanley Holt and Dr. Jean Paul Dorion, on Monday evening of last week visited the Hawkesbury filtration plant, where they were the guests of that municipality.

The tour was conducted by Yvan Seguin, chemist and engineer in charge of the plant, and the group was accompanied on the tour by Hawkesbury Mayor Rosaire Gascon and several aldermen from that municipality.

The role of the plant is as follows: (a) to remove all dirt from the water; (b) to remove all discoloration and (c) to destroy bacteria. Alum is used for the second and Chlorine for the final operation.

The modern water-purification plant taking water from The Ottawa River, operates as follows: the water is pumped from the river to a coagulation basin where alum is added at the rate of about 1 grain per gallon. The alum is mixed thoroughly with the water for 20 to 30 minutes, in which time a floc develops. The spongelike material enmeshes the silt, or turbidity, and the color particles.

The water then passes slowly through a settling basin where the floc settles to the bottom in 2 to 4 hours. The water, now freed of a large part of turbidity and color, flows onto the top of the filter — made of a layer of sand about 30 inches deep, supported by a layer of graded gravel. Pipes or openings are placed below the gravel so that the filtered water can pass through. The rate at which the filter operates is controlled mechanically to give the best results — usually 2 gallons per square foot of land surface per minute. The dirt and debris that collect on the top of the sand are removed periodically by reversing the flow of water and washing them away.

Filtration produces a clear water, attractive in appearance. Although some of the bacteria are removed in this process, further precautions are necessary. The water is stored in a reservoir with a capacity of one-half million gallons, a sufficient amount for the consumption of the municipality. Chlorine is added in small quantities just prior to the water being distributed to the consumers and is effective in destroying the bacteria.

Hawkesbury is also equipped to floridate their water but are awaiting word from the Provincial Government prior to putting this section of the plant into operation. Samples of the water are sent to Ottawa and Toronto daily and not once in the four years of operation, has an unfavorable report been filed. Despite the fact that the Ottawa River is polluted beyond a doubt, but one operation renders the water fit for consumption.

This plant cost the sum of $149,000, equipment costing $331,000, and was paid for by a loan floated for a 20-year period.

Dr. Dorion thanked the hosts in the name of the local delegation, all of whom signed the Golden Book of the Town.

Easter Seal sales now lagging

The Easter Seals Campaign got off to an excellent start but at latest count, has lagged considerably behind last year's total. As nearly five thousand seals were mailed in Lachute and district it is felt that the returns should be much better than to date. Lachute, particularly, is way behind but special mention should be made to Brownsburg and district where the response has been very public-spirited.

There is still time to help and any persons who may have tucked that pink envelope away are urged to mail it today in order to better last year's effort, requests the Lachute Lions Club Easter Seal Campaign.

Leopold Carriere and R. O. MacLean co-chairmen for Cancer Crusade

Léopold Carrière, president of Lachute Lumber Company with R. O. Dick MacLean, Lachute Oil Distributor, as co-chairman, will lead the 1959 Cancer Crusade in Lachute district—according to an announcement from local headquarters of the Canadian Cancer Society.

The life-saving and fund-raising drive to begin shortly has been termed "the greatest attack ever mounted against disease." The whole month has been designated Cancer Control Month.

Because Cancer eventually strikes two out of every three families there is an urgent need for everyone to join in the counter attack, either as volunteers or donors, or both. Canadians have always worked together to solve important problems. Cancer is one of the most important, for it makes no distinctions between rich and poor, farmer or city-dweller, old or young. It is the No. 2 disease killer.

Crusade volunteers will not only ring doorbells to collect funds, but will distribute life-saving information about cancer. The literature stresses the value of periodic health checkups to "guard your family". The ultimate goal is complete victory in the war against cancer, which claims about 22,000 lives in Canada each year.

The Canadian Cancer Society underwrites a national research program which employs top-flight scientists in laboratories throughout the country.

Wildlife notes from district scene

Who says beaver never lodge trees? Around a small lake in Argenteuil County, it was recently observed that for each tree felled by beaver, four were lodged. This represents a batting average of only .200 and is surely enough to dispel the old adage that beaver never lodge trees.

Deep snow and cold temperatures have forced deer into their yards quite early this winter. It appears that this winter will result in greater than usual hardship for the number one game animal in these parts. Deer yards in this area are usually softwood stands in hollows or swamps with sufficient cover to protect the deer from the biting wind. Also, the deer usually choose yards which contain abundant white cedar or hardwood browse. Several hard winters in succession can reduce the available food supply in deer yards so low that the deer will go hungry or in extreme cases die of starvation. Some local woodlot owners concerned about the welfare of the deer have made it a practice to supply them with hay or feed served up with molasses. This gives the deer a much needed boost when the going gets tough. We think that this is an excellent conservation measure which will pay off in more and healthier deer. — C.I.P. Woods Notes

"Banks twice as high as a man" has been a common saying in these parts this winter, and a photograph by Doug. Bradford proves that saying. Dwarfed between the banks of the North River Road (Bradford Ave.), Ayersville, are Floyd Bradford, a six-footer, a car and a team of horses. This picture was taken following the re-opening of the road several days after a recent storm, and as is clearly evident, one-way traffic is all that is permissable.

The International Gymnastic Meet at the High School on Saturday, April 4, is attracting the attention of gymnasts and gymnastic leaders all over the United States and Canada. People from New York, Boston, Detroit and Toronto have written and asked for tickets and many gymnasts have been turned down as only top calibre will be entered and the number is kept to eight so as the competition will not last more than two hours.

This year some of the best who participated last year will again compete, in addition to some promising young gymnasts who did not enter last year. Lachute is entering two boys. Reggie Stansfield has been in the meet for the last three years, showing some great gymnastics. Ronnie Cairns is participating for the first time and coach Arne Petersen feels that this year, he is ready to take the step up to this selected group of gymnasts. He has worked hard and his routine in long horse, pommel horse and free calisthenics is of very high class. Dod Dixon, the gymnast who was very close to Reggie at the Televised meet last year, will compete and is strong in still rings and high bar. Another newcomer this year is a promising young gymnast with top class routines in parallel bar and pommel horse, from Noranda.

The favorite to win the Meet this year is Richard Monpetit, from Michigan, of close to Olympic calibre. This year he has already won a number of big meets in the United States and has surprised everybody with his daring new routines. Many people are afraid to watch him in the high bar where no circus artist can come close to him.

All gymnasts will participate in the six Olympic events, long horse, pommel horse, parallel bar, high bar, still rings and free calisthenics. With the gymnasts participating this year it looks like an even more outstanding competition than last year when everybody was talking for weeks after the meet about the sensational gymnastics shown.

Again this year the gymnasts will compete for the Lions Club All-Round Championship Trophy, the R. A. Giles Long Horse Trophy, Farmers' Supply Company Pommel Horse Trophy, the Mayor of the Town of Lachute Free Calisthenics Trophy, Ayers Limited Parallel Bar Trophy, J. C. Wilson Limited High Bar Trophy, and the A. Petersen Still Ring Trophy.

Tickets are $1.00, now on sale at Cliff Cunningham's store on Main Street. As it looks like a full house, be sure to get your tickets early to The Gymnastic Event of the year.

Flood damage to forage crops

Ottawa — Flooding can have disastrous effects on certain forage species of grasses and legumes to varying degrees.

Greenhouse tests at the Central Experimental Farm with three legumes: alfalfa, birdsfoot trefoil, and Ladino clover; and three grasses; timothy, brome and reed canary gave some indication of how these forage crops measure up.

Alfalfa was least tolerant of flooding. Plants were killed after 10 days of complete flooding. When the water table was kept at 10 inches below the surface yields of alfalfa averaged 3.28 gms., per pot. A water table 16 inches below the surface resulted in a yield of 5.3 gms., per pot.

Reed canary grass was very tolerant of flooding even for periods of 30 days.

The other four species were affected less than alfalfa.

The members of the Brownsburg Home and School Association enjoyed another interesting evening at their March meeting as parents gathered for the regular business section and the consideration of the subject brought up by the guest speaker.

Among the items mentioned during the airing of current Association affairs was the proposal that the organization sponsor a bicycle safe riding program for local students. It is expected that this will take place during the month of May. Mention was also made of the fact that some preliminary thought had been given to the formulation of a lending library.

Mrs. A. W. Lapp introduced Mrs. George Clarke who began her program by showing a film on the provocative subject "Conformity". The film which featured C.B.C.'s Fred Davis, provided the audience with four excellent examples of the results of not conforming to the unusual ways of our society. Evident, was the surprise, even awe showing on the faces of people watching a C.B.C. camera crew in action while wearing shorts on a hot summer day; the antagonism aroused in an old army buddy by a veteran who does not believe in wearing his service discharge button, the panic experienced by three relaxed people playing cards in a rather untidy room when a phone call informs them that a church worker is coming to call. While these three incidents were on the humerous side, the film also showed an example of more concern to the assembled parents — a teen-age girl "saying" goodnight to her date while the mother and father worry and wait. The girl wants to be popular, to be one of the crowd, so she behaves "as all the other kids do". The father makes no secret of his feelings toward this conformity but admits himself to be in the same category when he grudgingly states that he must get some sleep as he will have to smile at the office the next day because his boss wants everyone to look happy.

This thought provoking subject prompted considerable discussion so the parents were able to arrive at some definite conclusions. A number of the members expressed the view that there should be a rule governing behaviour on certain questions — the rules to be set by mutual agreement of parents and children. Further to this, the rules should be made only when the problem arises, not before. In this way, conforming to dress habits and less important behaviour habits should be tolerated so that the child learns the importance of not conforming to the way of the crowd in the more important behaviour patterns. Other members of the group pointed out that family relationships are most important. Mutual confidence between parents and children should establish proper habits without parents actually having to set up rules which might foster resentment. It was also suggested that since the fear of being different probably forces one to conform to the ways of society in general, this fear could be prevented or lessened by instilling self confidence in children. "However, since so many parents are conformists to the ways of modern society, can we expect our children to be any different"? The speaker asked in closing.

C-I-L fire causes $5,000 damage to Fusee building

A fire broke out around 8:00 o'clock on Friday evening last, March 27, in the Fusee Building of the Canadian Industries Limited plant in Brownsburg. Painters had been painting the interior of the building all day and were still painting at the time of the outbreak.

The fire was located under the floor and as a result the Brownsburg Fire Department had to cut through a considerable amount of flooring before the smouldering beams could be completely extinguished.

K. W. MacGibbon announced today that the fire caused about $5,000 damage and would result in some of the operations in this particular department being closed down for approximately one week. The cause of the fire is unknown, however is presently being investigated.

Would-be thieves fail safe job at St. Andrews East CNR station

Benoit Côté, C.N.R. agent at St. Andrews East, on Wednesday morning last reported an attempted burglary at the St. Andrews station, the would-be thieves failing to gain entry to the safe which contained some seven dollars in cash.

Sgt.-Det. Ralph Allen was summoned to the scene and notified the hold-up squad in Montreal, who investigated and reported that whoever had done the job, knew what they were doing. The main door of the safe was blown clean and the culprits were apparently scared-off while trying to get through the inner door.

Police were at a loss as to why the would-be thieves failed to complete the job as no one in the vicinity heard the blast which blew the main part of the safe.

Sgt.-Det. Allen reports that a deposit is made to the bank every day and it is believed that the thieves were seeking express money orders and not cash.

While a few finger prints were recorded, it is believed that these will not lead to the persons sought.

Lachute Lions' Skating Rink

Activities and Highlights of the Week

It was with regret that on Monday last the Lions Club terminated the activities of their skating rink for the current season. The warm weather necessitated the overworking of the ice-making machine and assistance in the operating of the rink has not been too much in evidence in recent days. The action was taken mainly as an economic measure.

With a roof or covering over the ice surface, it is believed the rink could have been kept in operation until May 15. All the same, those in charge of the operation express their satisfaction at the first year's opérations, despite unkindly weather.

We feel the local population was favored with an excellent program of recreation, including an ice festival for the young and not so young. During the season, the administrative committee organized a broom-ball league; hockey games for all age groups; and fancy skating classes. In addition to this, several out-of-town clubs visited the rink.

The regional broom-ball tournament for the Ottawa Valley championship was classed as a complete success and it is felt that all the amateurs that took part in these activities as well as all spectators were well satisfied. This only came true due to the efforts, devotedness and generosity of those responsible for this recreative centre, the main ones of whom are Horace Lamarche, Lowe Bros., Jos. Dumais, Miville Trickey, Phil Tremblay, Bert Rigg, Ted Vachon, Jim McOuat and Jacques Bourgoing, to name only a few.

Thanks to all for the encouragement and we'll see you at the rink . . . next season.

Ten years of NATO

THE TENTH anniversary of the signing of the North Atlantic Treaty, on April 4, comes at a new period of tension which underlines the importance of NATO for the security of the western world. The threat from Soviet imperialism that led to the formation of NATO is as real as ever. The need for continued unity on the part of the NATO partners is fully as great as it was ten years ago.

NATO was formed in the first instance to halt the westward spread of Russian domination which had already swallowed up the satellite states of eastern Europe. In this task, it has been fully successful. Its deterrent power has held Russian military expansion in check in the vital area of western Europe, and has forced Communism to turn to other areas and other methods in pursuit of its world-wide aims.

This shift in tactics, and particularly the Soviet campaign of infiltration in Asia and the Middle East, has presented the west with new and serious problems. Yet if these problems are to be solved, it is vital that the deterrent in Europe should be maintained at an effective level. Any weakening of defensive strength in this area would not only open the way to new Soviet thrusts, it would make it still harder — perhaps even impossible — to stiffen the uncommitted nations of Asia and Africa in their resistance to Communist pressure.

NATO thus remains the cornerstone of the Free World. Its effectiveness rests on the continued unity and resolution of the western democracies that form the North Atlantic Triangle. This is an enterprise in which Canada has played a significant part from the beginning. In her own national interests she must continue to make her fullest possible contribution during the years ahead.

National Wild-life week

LITTLE DID THE parents of the late Jack Miner realize some 93 years ago, April 10, 1865, when Jack Miner, the Canadian naturalist, was born in the suburbs of Cleveland, Ohio, that not only Canada and the United States, but England and the civilized world would honour and pay tribute to the man who for the last 13 years of his life was Canada's best known citizen whom Eddie Guest, the Detroit poet, refers to as 'the best loved Christian in America'. When he died he ranked fifth in fame on the continent. The ones preceeding him were Edison, Ford, Lindberg and Rickenbacker.

In London, England, Sir Herbert Brent Grotian, Bart D.L., K.C., in paying tribute to Jack Miner, said 'If you wish to see Jack Miner's monument or memorial, look around you.'

On April 17, 1947, some three years after the death of the late Jack Miner, the Canadian Government by an act of Parliament created by a unanimous vote what is known as National Wild Life Week to always fall on the birthday of the late Jack Miner which is April 10th.

Senator Joseph Bradette, paying tribute to Jack Miner in the Canadian Senate, said "The European countries gave the world great artists, great sculptors, great philosophers and great musicians, but Canada gave the world one of its great naturalists."

Since Jack Miner's death a quiz program was held in the United States over a national radio hook up and by a vote of four to one Jack Miner was voted the greatest naturalist that ever lived.

The books of knowledge carry a biography of Jack Miner alongside such great men as Edison, Ford, Burbank and Churchill and even in 1926 Professor W. S. Milner, Professor of Greek and Roman History in the University of Toronto, in his examination paper for students trying for their B.A. degree, compared the philosophy of Jack Miner to that of Aristotle.

Today, the 7th and 8th grade school books of the United States carry an eight page biography of Jack Miner, whose life was considered by the U.S. educators so important that they wanted every school child in their 48 states and Alaska acquainted with the facts about his life and his contribution to his generation.

Senator T. A. Crerar, who was Canada's first federal minister of the Canadian Wild Life Service and now one of the senior members in the Canadian Senate, said, "I doubt if there is in any field of work in Canada, anyone who has contributed more and has rendered Canada a greater national service than Jack Miner."

At the time of Jack Miner's death tributes were paid him by Kings, Queens, Presidents and Prime Ministers and as high as 10,800 people have visited his grave in one day.

During the week of April 10 the people of Canada pay tribute to him by observing National Wild Life Week in the schools, in the churches, in the service clubs and in the open fields of our great Dominion.

School TV wins approval

EDUCATIONAL programs on television, specially prepared to be watched in schools as an aid to curriculum studies, are winning their place in Canadian education.

Two nation-wide experiments have been conducted by the CBC in addition to test series in the province of Manitoba and the city of Halifax.

These experiments are under supervision of the National Advisory Council on School Broadcasting, in co-operation with the CBC. The council has just elected as its national chairman Dr. W. H. Swift, Alberta deputy minister of education, to succeed the retiring chairman, Dr. H. P. Moffat, Nova Scotia deputy minister.

The approach to classroom television has been cautious throughout. The first nation-wide experiment in November, 1954, brought detailed comments from teachers in about 200 schools from coast to coast. The council reported the results "indicate that television programs, jointly planned and executed by teachers and broadcasters, have definite contribution to make as a teaching aid."

Now a new weekly series of half-hour national school telecasts has been approved for the first four months of 1960. The series is based on three levels. For Grades 2 and 3, the telecasts will cover social studies (history) and music. For Grades 4 to 6, they cover social studies (geography) and science. And for Grades 7, 8 and 9 the series is on social studies emphasizing current events and history.

The fact that school television is continuing demonstrates confidence in its value.

After the first national experiment, when TV was still a novelty in many areas, teachers' comments gave high marks to the programs for student interest and attentiveness. They reported that the information contained in the programs was retained by students to a high degree, and that a satisfactory number were stimulated to further interest in the subjects covered by the program.

Chicken pie

THERE IS AN interesting story in the recent issue of "Stelco", official publication of the Steel Company of Canada Limited. It tells why we should buy a Canadian chicken pie. But is serves as good reasoning also why we should buy any items manufactured in Canada by Canadians.

"There is more than just meat, crust and gravy in a chicken pie. There are many forms of employment, including:

"Transportation people who move grain, eggs, live chickens, dressed chickens and chicken pies.

"Manufacturers who make incubators and the material for the buildings and equipment in which the chickens are raised.

"Paper makers who make the paper for the packages.

"Printers who print the packages.

"Bakers who make the pies.

"Salesmen who sell the pies.

SPRING

The robins are back and April's here!
Sunday dawns freshly, transfucently clear;
While my bed is a heaven, which points to the sky,
Lone seagulls wheel strongly and silently by.
The sun's yet to rise for earthbound me;
But there's gold on the wings of the gulls from the sea —
I laugh in sheer joy, to share with God —
The wonder and freedom and beauty so trod.

Is Letterpress Printing a New Process?

"Letterpress" refers to printing from a raised or relief surface. Three thousand years ago the Chinese printed from wooden blocks from which the surface had been cut away to expose a mirror-reverse character in relief. This was inked and the material to be printed was impressed against it. The "relief" principle has not changed but mechanical improvements have so enlarged its scope that it is today still a standard process by which most books and newspapers are printed.

Three major types of printing press produce letterpress work: (1) the platen press moves a flat bed of type and illustration plates against a flat sheet of paper, impressing the entire surface at one time; (2) the cylinder press carries the paper sheet around a cylinder and impresses it against a flat-type form that moves back and forth in sequence with it; (3) the rotary press revolves a curved printing surface against another cylinder, while paper is fed between the two from a roll.

As letterpress is the direct impressing of a printing surface on paper it provides high-fidelity reproduction. For normal requirements, on hard-surfaced papers, its quality is unmatched by other processes. On very long runs, however, the relief surface is subject to wear and deterioration.

What Signal came to Signal Hill?

Signal Hill, overlooking the entrance to St. John's harbour, Newfoundland, is the site of Cabot Tower, and is the point at which the first transatlantic wireless signal was received, by Marconi, on Dec. 12, 1901. Signal Hill was fortified in the 18th century.

Do any Carnivores live in Canada?

A carnivore is a flesh-eater; there are many families of carnivores in Canada Included among them are bears, wolves, coyotes, foxes, dogs, cats, lynxes, cougars, weasels, skunks, badgers and raccoons. The largest of the Canadian carnivores is the bear, which eats other foods as well. Opposed to the carnivores are herbivores or plant-eaters. These include musk-oxen, bison, sheep and goats, deer, moose, elk and caribou. These animals are all mammals. Canadian mammal fauna includes 105 genera with about 185 species.

PROGRESS THROUGH RESEARCH

TERRIBLE TOOTHACHE

Our teeth are among our most valuable properties, but too often they fall prey to the unrelenting pain called toothache. Throughout history, man has searched for relief from the pain of rotted tooth.

In the middle ages, toothache sufferers stumbled to the market place when the dentist — they were mostly itinerants then—came to town and there, to blast of trumpets and cries of clowns, had his troublesome tooth torn from his gums!

The ancients had good reason to know that extraction was a painful and dangerous practice. Before allowing themselves to fall into the clutches of a "dark-ages" dentist, they would first try such remedies as flax, fig, pepper, bee's wax, earthworm, arsenic, gold and iron rust.

Thanks to modern medicine and dentistry, these remedies, largely ineffective, have been entombed in the history books.

Dental techniques have made extraction almost painless and, perhaps more important, we have learned that proper care of teeth can prevent decay.

In the past 10 years, dentists have been able to enlist the aid of antibiotics to control and prevent serious infections of the mouth and gums. New biotics have been found effective in the prevention and treatment of infections and post-operative complications.

Things 'n Stuff

— By — Walter Henry Jackson

IT'S SPRING AGAIN

This time of year is welcome here, when Winter takes a beating. I wrote before of this, I'm sure, but it will bear repeating. The sun shines down from April skies to warm the farmer's furrows, with groundhogs, moles, and kindred souls emerging from their burrows. Returning crows disturb repose of those who love to slumber, and in the air the scent is there of new-cut piles of lumber. New cans one sees on maple trees with sap a-runnin' over, and little shoots among the roots of grass and scented clover.

The ice has gone — the stream flows on — the mill-dam's overflowing. A butterfly flits slowly by to look for flowers growing. The cats and dogs, the hens and hogs, enjoy the sunshine's glamor, and in the bogs the little frogs will voice their sunset clamor. The smell of earth suggests the birth of violets and roses, of gummy sprigs and cedar twigs to please our eyes and noses.

Ah, Spring, Hooray! It's here to stay till summer days mature it. If it were found the whole year round I think we could endure it. If you observe these signs of Spring and in observing, capture, the joys such observations bring fill your heart with rapture!

Be seein' ya!

Of Many Things

Compulsion backfires

When various forms of compulsory marketing were being promoted in the west, those in favor of such plans frequently quoted the Ontario hog marketing scheme as a sample of the success of such things. Western farmers who rejected compulsion will read with interest the findings of Chief Justice J. C. McReur of Ontario's Supreme Court.

Not only did the court declare the last vote, which approved compulsory marketing, to be null and void; it had some sharp criticism of the manner in which the Board used its wide, serious powers in an off-hand way with hog producers.

Indeed, the Chief Justice thought the Marketing Board scheme was pretty poorly handled, and the way the regulations were formulated was confusing beyond his comprehension. When requested to present minutes of Board meetings to show when and how the vote was planned or the regulations introduced, Board's counsel could not or would not do so.

At one point the Chief Justice described the whole procedure followed by the Board as "so frightfully confused, so steeped in irregularity." He commented, "We are dealing with very fundamental human rights handled in an off-hand way."

Because of all this, some 600 hog producers were able to get an injunction restraining the Marketing Board from taking any action on the vote. But getting free of such schemes is not that easy! If the Board so desires, it may still enforce the 1949 regulations, which are very similar to the 1957 regulations which recently were quashed by Mr. Justice Ferguson!

Now there will be another vote; but what regulations will be enforced in the meantime, I do not know, nor I suppose do the farmers. And who knows how the vote will go? Ontario has some 78,000 hog producers, and the chances are that less than half of them will vote. It is entirely possible that about one-third of the producers will manage to keep 100% of producers under the rule of the Board, thus denying freedom to some 12,000 producers actively against such compulsion and to other thousands who don't seem to know or care pust what is happening.

Whenever vast powers are handed to small groups of men, fundemental human rights are in jeopardy. This was the cast in Ontario. It might be the same in any province.

All Aboard

with G. E. MORTIMORE

A Mayo clinic doctor says we should all keep a gun, an axe and a week's food and water in the house, in case of war.

The axe is to build a new house in the hills, and the gun is to shoot our friends dead if they come around trying to steal a can of pork and beans.

After the canned goods run out, we'll need the gun to shoot our food.

By some estimates, about one-third of a big city's people will die in a nuclear bomb blast. About one-third will be badly injured. That still leaves many thousand amateur marksmen prowling through those hills in search of meat.

You may wonder incidently, why everyone seems to be obsessed with the "hills" as a place of refuge. Why not the "valleys" or the "woods?"

Thousands of trigger-happy people hiking across country would soon exterminate every deer, gopher and squirrel in sight.

What will they use for meat then? There's only one answer, and I don't like it. Personally I won't eat people unless they have been government inspected and even then, not on Friday.

In addition to this, it is a bad form for a hostess to serve meat that has been tainted by radiation sickness.

It might be wise to hoard beans and canned water in the basement as well, and do our civil defence homework, by way of insurance, like the man who prayed alternately to God and the Devil, so as not to miss a bet.

My favorite precaution against death by nuclear blast, fallout or starvation is to refrain from dropping the bomb. And I am convinced that 95 percent of the people of the world share this view.

Nevertheless, a war seems to be thundering towards us at express speed, and we are tied to the tracks like the heroine of a melodrama.

I think we should try to struggle loose. The people of the world should shake off their paralysis of fear, and launch a mass movement for peace — not a phony propaganda offensive meant to weaken the West and strengthen the Communists, but a push for survival led by distinguished men and women of many nations and many political parties, and supported by ordinary citizens everywhere.

When such a force has been organized, it could challenge Russia to show good faith. It could propose a peaceful invasion of the Soviet Union, and invite several thousand Soviet citizens to come as unarmed guests into our countries — not for a summit conference, but a conference of ordinary people who want to stay alive.

County native passes suddenly

Late Melvin J. Burk

Although in indifferent health for the past several years, friends and relatives were shocked to hear of the passing of Melvin John Burk, of Lachute, on March 27. He was in his 59th year.

FAITH conquers the world.

Is YOUR faith that strong?

It can be. But how? The Bible says faith follows the report, and the report is through the word about Christ. No place aside from the Bible itself is the word about Christ Jesus given more prominence than in the columns of THE WATCHTOWER. As a result this outstanding Bible journal for almost eighty years has been building faith in its readers and stimulating them to works of faith. It has carried them through severe trials that have tested their Christian integrity to the limit. But more trials and more serious testings are still ahead. Fortify yourself. Build your shield of faith so strong it can even quench the fiery missiles of God's adversary, the Devil.

Easter services numerous in Mille Isles Parish

Easter Services at Trinity Anglican Church brought hundreds of worshippers to join in celebrating The Risen Christ. The Church was decorated with many lilies and Spring flowers, placed as memorials.

The Junior Choir, with their new royal blue and white gowns, sang the anthem "Behold, Your God," with Miss Joan Perry as soloist. Mr. Carl Elder was organist, and the services were conducted by the Rector, the Rev. H. G. Baugh.

The enlarged Church was greatly appreciated by the large crowd.

At the Church of St. Francis in St. Sauveur, hundreds of skiers were unable to find space in the Church and many sat on the floor!

After the 6 a.m. Sunrise Service, breakfast was served in the new Church Hall. Over 500 received Holy Communion at the Morning Services.

Reporting on recent circuit assembly

Mr. Albert C. Mierke, supervisor of the local congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, stated on his return from Montreal last Monday, that 65 members of the congregation of St. Jerome attended the semi-annual circuit assembly held over the week-end.

Mr. Ken Kirkpatrick of St. Jerome was baptized as one of Jehovah's Witnesses, who were shortly to be immersed to symbolize their dedication to God's service.

The highlight of the assembly was the public discourse Sunday afternoon, when an audience of 1,285 heard Mr. Laurier Saumur, supervisor for Eastern Canada, speak on "Paradise Earth Through God's Kingdom".

"If we had to wait for men to transform this earth into a paradise, it would never come. However, this earth shall one day become a paradise.

"The human rulers," he continued, "moved by the ambition to rule or to ruin, have caused the humble people of the earth to sorrow. But this earth will become a paradise because 'the God of the heavens will establish a kingdom that will never be destroyed. . . . it will break in pieces all these kingdoms, and it will stand forever.' (Daniel 2:44)" The audience was encouraged to look into God's promises and to hope for their happy fulfillment.

The Bible today

The Austrian Bible Committee is working on the first edition of the New Testament in the Ilama language, which will be sent to the Llamba speaking people in East Central Tanganyika as a gift from the Protestants in Austria.

The translation was made in Tanganyika by a committee appointed by the Lutheran Augustana Missions of America, while the original suggestion to undertake this project came from Bishop Eivind Berggrav, who was President of the United Bible Societies.

The sacred cantata "Olivet To Calvary," by J. H. Maunder, was rendered in the Lachute United Church, on the evening of Good Friday, the singing being led by a 45-voice augmented choir under the leadership of Lowell B. Hopkins, organist and choir director of the church. Soloists were Mrs. Don Barbour, Robert W. Haydon, Lundy Pearson and Clayton Robinson. There was a large congregation, and by general consent, it was agreed that the soloists and choir excelled themselves in the way in which they gave expression to the various scenes which marked the last days of Christ on earth.

The cantata was arranged by Maunder in ten parts, covering the story of the Cross and Christ. The first chorus "When o'er the steep of Olivet", gave a dramatic introduction to Christ's entry into Jerusalem.

The narration throughout the score was ably sung by Mr. Robert Haydon, the tenor soloist, with his "O was there ever loneliness like His" and "Ye who sin, and ye who sorrow" being particularly inspiring. The bass soloist, Mr. Lundy Pearson, gave a creditable performance, and created the solemn atmosphere needed for this Good Friday cantata.

As the story developed, and Christ was brought to trial in the Judgment Hall, the music fittingly depicted the angry crowds and the choir was well rehearsed for these dramatic scenes, and the clashing chords and close harmonics gave a very realistic interpretation. The part of Pilate was ably sung by Mr. Clayton Robinson. Mr. Lowell B. Hopkins, the director, is to be congratulated for his final result. The soprano solos were nicely sung by Mrs. Don Barbour, and her final solo "Droop, sacred head, upon that breast divine", was feelingly rendered, then taken up by the whole choir in a beautiful finale.

The augmented choir, though depleted by some sickness, was well balanced, and members of St. Simeon's, Brownsburg United, Maple Ave. Baptist, Christ Church (St. Andrews) and Lachute United churches formed the ensemble. The collection was a little over $109.00, and the balance after expenses are paid will go into a special fund for an inter-church choir organization.

After the cantata, the Rev. Wilson Bridge, minister of the church said that the fine rendition had been made possible by the way in which the organist, soloists and choir had continued their practices over a period of many weeks during all kinds of weather. In expressing thanks to them for what he termed "a very fitting conclusion for the evening of Good Friday," he also thanked Master Bryant Graves for operating the tape recorder kindly loaned for the occasion by Mr. Colin C. McOuat.

Refreshments were supplied to the choir and guests, in the church hall. Mrs. Foster Campbell and Mrs. M. G. McCaskill, voluntary conveners of the W.M.S., the W.A. (Evening Group) W.A. (Afternoon Group) and Bowling League members, who helped in this direction were afterwards thanked by Mr. C. L. Duncan. Mr. Payne, spoke on behalf of visiting choristers from the other churches, and interjected a humerous strain into his remarks.

Eastertide at United Church

A large congregation which overflowed into the gallery was a most encouraging sight in the Lachute United Church on the morning of Easter Sunday. Floral decorations were provided by the W.A. (Afternoon Group) and by several friends who wish to remain anonymous. A special feature of the floral decorations was a large white cross in front of the Communion Table, offset on either side with Easter lilies.

Mr. Lowell B. Hopkins was at the organ, and the choir rendered three anthems: "Since by man came Death" (Handel) "In Joseph's Lovely Garden" (Dickinson) and "The Strife Is O'er" (18th century).

The Rev. Wilson Bridge, minister of the church spoke to the children on "What Connection Does The Easter Bunny Have With Easter?" His sermon to the adults dealt with "The Joy Of The Resurrection."

The Sacrament of the Last Supper was administered on the previous Sunday, during which service fourteen new members were received.

Local minister attends sessions in Montreal

"We face the future with confidence," declared Peter Rae presiding minister of the local congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses. Mr. Rae and his wife attended the Witness convention held in Montreal last week-end.

"The program" Mr. Rae said: "was designed to combat the spiritual apathy and materialism of our time."

"An outstanding feature of our convention," he said, "was the ordination ceremony held on Saturday. We were told that there is no minister shortage in the organization. Last year 62,666 new ministers were baptized, and this year it is expected that there will be even more."

"The keynote speech," Mr. Rae continued, "was on the subject, 'A Paradise Earth Through God's Kingdom'. The speaker, Mr. Laurier Saumur, district supervisor, told us that the launching of the first 'sputnik' had caused the world to tremble in fear. 'The trend today' he stated 'is not toward an earthly paradise, but is toward the flaming destruction of the earth. Man has failed to make the earth a paradise because of materialism, superstition and nationalism.

'The Bible at Revelation 11.18 states that God will destroy those ruining the earth. This earth will then become a global Paradise and the happy home of mankind.'

Bible in the East

Oriental floral designes on colorful covers for Gospel portions were introduced by the late Lyman MacCallum when he became Bible Society Secretary of Bible Lands North.

The great masses of the people in the Near East are poor, incredibly poor sometimes. The question of price is therefore of immense importance because it is the policy of the Bible Society to offer the Scriptures at prices which the people can afford. Cost of production must be kept as low as possible; but at the same time produce a book that is attractive and a pleasure to handle.

Heavy demands for Scriptures are daily experienced by the Bible Society depots. All printing projects must be planned well in advance in order to maintain an adequate supply of Scriptures.

Easter Vacation

— By NANCY CLEAVER —

"On Easter let your clothes be new,
Or else be sure you will it rue"
— Old English Rhyme.

Wearing new clothes to church on Easter Sunday morning is a custom in many lands. But what to do with the children during the holidays is just as much of a problem to busy mothers as trying to make the money stretch to cover the clothing needs of the family. Here are a few suggestions which can be used either at a children's party or for the "small fry" when their chums come indoors to play on rainy days in the vacation period.

The new Easter hat is a real event in even a "little" woman's life! If your daughter belongs to a club, perhaps she would like to have the members in for an Easter Bonnet party. If you can find a milliner who is willing to be a special guest and demonstrate some principles in choosing and trimming a hat, this is sure to be popular.

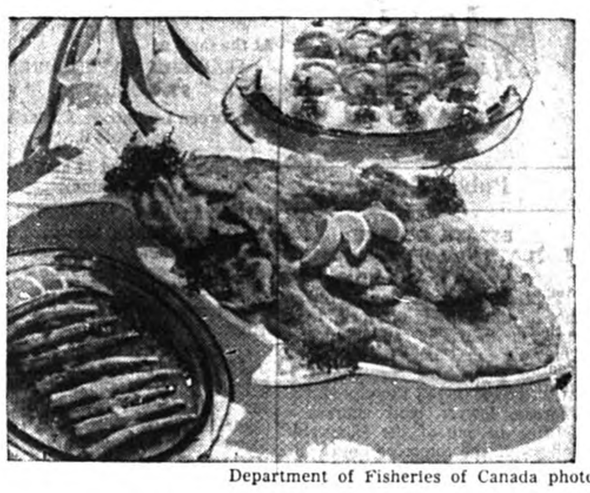

If this is not possible, why not get several rolls of crepe paper in Spring shades, and have a competition for the prettiest crepe chapeau? Small girls can make a charming little hat using a large size paper pie plate as a brim, with the crown cut out to fit the head, and crepe ties under the chin, and crepe ribbon of flower trimmings.

A Newspaper Fashion Show never fails to make a hit! Divide the players into groups of three. Hand each group four or five newspapers and a package of ordinary pins. Give them ten minutes only in which each group will choose which one will be the "model" for a newspaper dress and hat, and then have the other two players fashion the most original newspaper outfit they can design! Warn the amateur dressmakers in their haste not to prick their model with a pin, and not to copy any other group's pattern. Award copies of a weekend newspaper to the three members of the team who create the most effective outfit.

There are two Easter hat circle games. In the first, two old hats are passed around the circle to music. When the music stops, the persons holding a hat must drop out — so the object of the game is to pass the hat along to the player on the left as quickly as possible. In the other game, the players stand in a circle holding each other's wrists and walk around an old felt hat. Each player attempts to pull the player on either side toward the centre so that he must step on the hat. The players who touch it are eliminated until only one player is left as winner.

Many old favorites in games can be changed slightly for Easter Fun. Instead of "Hide the Thimble", why not hide a tiny chocolate bunny wrapped in tinfoil? A "Peanut Hunt" can be converted into a Search for small, colored, candy Easter Eggs. Substitute "Put the Ears on the Rabbit" for "Pin the Tail on the Donkey" which is outlined on a big sheet of paper. A ring-tossing game with ordinary embroidery hoops or mason jar rings can be called "Bunny Ring Game". Each player tries his luck at ringing an upright cardboard bunny's ears, mounted on plywood or tacked to a large carton.

In a home where mother is in the background willing to co-operate by helping to find the necessary equipment for handcraft and games, the boys and girls usually become quite expert at making their own good times. This is an important part of training them to be independent, happy adults who will know what to do with their leisure. . . . Knowing this gives parents more patience during vacation days when in Burns' words: "The mirth and fun grows fast and furious."

Spring and little fishes

SILVERY LITTLE SMELT make a delightful spring luncheon or supper dish when baked in an almond sauce, pan-fried to golden brown perfection, or prepared as kabobs.

It's spring when the quest is on for new things — new hats, suits, shoes, cars, maple syrup — and incidentally at least, some new receipes to add interest to family menus.

Along about this time of year, fresh smelt appear on the market in the Great Lakes area, and a variety of smelt known as the eulachon is in season in British Columbia. In other areas, Atlantic smelt caught during midwinter are available in frozen form, so let's try a few new smelt recipes. Here are three which have recently been developed in the test kitchen of Canada's Department of Fisheries, and which point up the delicate flavor of these little fish.

Parmesan Smelt

2 Pounds smelt or eulachon, ½ cup flour, ¼ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, 1 egg (beaten), 1 tablespoon lemon juice, ½ cup finely crushed soda crackers, ½ cup grated Parmesan cheese, fat or cooking oil.

Trim heads, tails and fins from smelt using a pair of kitchen shears. Slit open, remove entrails; wash fish under cold running water. Loosen and remove backbone from each fish. This is easily done by working the index finger or a small knife under the bone, starting at the head end. If care is taken, very little flesh need come away with the bone.

Combine flour, salt, and pepper; coat fish with mixture. Dip fish in combined egg and lemon juice. Roll in mixed cracker crumbs and cheese. Pan-fry in about ¼-inch of fat, very hot but not smoking. When golden brown on one side, turn and brown on other side. Drain; remove to a heated platter; keep warm in oven until all fish are cooked. Serve piping hot, with or without sauce or relish. Makes 6 servings.

Smelt Kabobs

1 Pound smelt or eulachon, French dressing, 4 tomatoes, 12 strips breakfast bacon, salt and pepper.

Clean, dress, and bone smelt. If fish are fairly large, cut each in half lengthwise. Marinate in French dressing while preparing other ingredients. Fry bacon until transparent but not crisp; drain; cut each strip in half. Cut tomatoes into 6 wedges. Drain smelt; roll with skin side out. Using skewers 8 to 10 inches long, alternate a roll of smelt, a fold of bacon, and a tomato section until skewers are filled. Place across a baking pan, season lightly, and brush with French dressing. Bake in a hot oven (400°F.) for 10 to 12 minutes. If desired, serve on a bed of fluffy, cooked rice. Makes 6 servings.

Smelt Almondine

2 Pounds smelt or eulachon, salt and pepper, ¼ cup butter, (melted), 2 tablespoons slivered almonds, 2 tablespoons lemon juice.

Clean, dress, and bone smelt. Season lightly on the inside with salt and pepper. Place in a greased baking dish. Pan-fry almonds in melted butter until golden brown. Stir in lemon juice over smelt. Bake in a hot oven (450°F.) for 10 minutes. Makes 6 servings.

Citizenship Minister Ellen Fairclough, Canada's first woman federal cabinet minister, has given notice of a resolution to approve the convention. It was signed by Canada, and 21 other countries, at the UN in 1957.

Since then, 14 of these countries have ratified or acceded to the convention, which came into force in August of last year. Canada may become the 15th country to enforce the convention on home ground.

Gives Protection

The convention provides that neither marriage nor its dissolution nor a change in the husband's nationality during marriage shall affect a wife's nationality.

It provides protection for women who lose their own nationality when they get married and as a result might not be entitled to return to their native countries in case of war, or on the death of their husbands, for instance.

A good deal of preparation went into this convention by its originators — the UN commission on the status of women. This commission of 18 members, all women, now is holding a three-week meeting in New York.

Canada has a seat on the commission which is charged with studying all aspects of women's political, economic, social and educational status.

Canada's Delegate

Mrs. Harry S. Quart, a Quebec City housewife and grandmother, is Canada's representative for the second consecutive year.

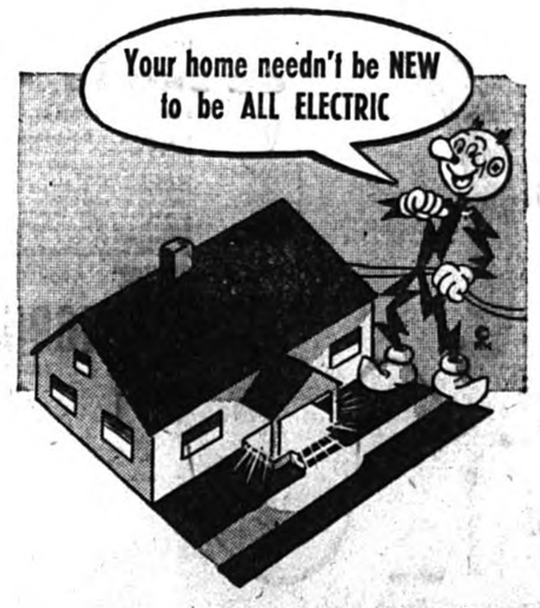

This session, the commission is expected to give particular attention to a series of reports on economic opportunities for women in architecture, engineering and law. These reports are a first step to a general study on the access of women to training and employment in the professional and technical fields.

Keeping a sharp eye on women's rights the world over, the commission after several years of work provided a draft convention on the political rights of women which was adopted by the UN General Assembly in 1952.

Canada in 1957 ratified the political rights convention which gives women the right to vote, to be elected to and to hold public office, rights which Canadian women already held. But these freedoms are comparatively new to some countries. Since the UN's establishment in 1946, for instance, 30 countries have extended the vote to women.

Police Department salaries raised and new car purchase effected

The long-awaited decision to purchase a fire truck and other necessary equipment was finalized on a motion by Ald. Stanley Holt, and seconded by Ald. Laurèat Laurin, at last Wednesday's regular session of Council, the motion passing unanimously. Ald. E. O. Pollock and Ald. Mozart Carriere were absent from the session chaired by Mayor Jas. W. McGibbon.

The decision was sparked by a major break-down of the present fire truck, and a visit of the Provincial Fire Commissioner who recommended that little or no money be spent on repairing what he considered obsolete equipment. According to Mayor McGibbon, he was advised that the equipment was not of sufficient high-standard to use as a stand-by pump, and that rather than apply for a grant on one pumper truck, Lachute should apply for a grant on two trucks, trading-in or selling all present equipment. He added the Commissioner suggested that two identical pumps be purchased, to facilitate operating difficulties.

Mayor McGibbon informed Council that due to the break-down, he had made an agreement with Railway Power and Engineering Ltd., suppliers of King-Seagrave Fire Equipment, to have the present Seagrave truck repaired on a temporary basis. He then recommended that the Fire Commissioner's suggestion be accepted so as Lachute would end up with two new fire pumps and the other equipment considered necessary. "I feel, he added, that with the recommendation of the Fire Commissioner, backed by the Underwriters' report we recently received condemning our equipment, topped by the influence of the Hon. W. M. Cottingham, Minister of Mines, we will be able to swing this purchase with the aid of the Provincial grant."

Questions on the other tenders submitted were raised by Ald. Gerard Lefebvre and Ald. Dr. Jean Paul Dorion. Police-Fire Chief Trépanier explained that the tender submitted by Pierre Thibeault did not follow the called-for specifications. A third tender was submitted by the LaFrance Fire Engine and Foamite Co. Ltd., which although conformed with the required specifications, was higher than the King-Seagrave tender.

The motion read that the tender of Railway Power and Engineering Ltd. be accepted and that work commence on the truck immediately following official word on the Provincial grant, the chassis to be purchased locally.

Increase Wages

Moving on to other business in the same department, the sum of $818 was approved for the purchase of summer uniforms for the five-man Police Department, and the following wage scale put into effect.

A constable starting with the department will receive $55 per week for the first year of employment, this will increase to $60 after that time. Starting salary for a sergeant will be $62.50, the maximum for this rank being $65. A lieutenant will start at $67.50 reaching a maximum of $70.

The force is to be comprised of the Chief and four men and in addition to this, two clerks for phone-answering and office duties. These latter employees will receive $40 per week.

In making the suggestion for the increase, Ald. Gerard Lefebvre voiced the opinion that it was the feeling of the Police-Fire Committee that these higher wages would give the department a better choice of applicants when seeking new employees.

Mayor McGibbon suggested with the more efficient department these increases were liable to bring, a uniform speed limit of 30 m.p.h. be adopted throughout the town and this be strictly enforced. This would not include school or other special zones, he added, in leaving the suggestion with the Police-Fire Committee for further study.

Sgt. Marcel Therrien's resignation was accepted, the former Lachute policeman now being employed as Chief of the adjoining Municipality of Ayersville, Cst. Richard Bell, 26, of Grenville, was engaged on a permanent basis, having been working as a police officer in Lachute for the past several months.

Two tenders for the exchange of the Police car were opened, and it was decided that a 1959 Meteor be purchased from Pollock & Graves Ltd., for the sum of $1,360.50 plus the present car. The new car will be a black 8-cylinder automatic heavy-duty vehicle with a 60 amp. generator. The only other tender was submitted by Deacon Motor Sales, and was approximately $300 in excess of this amount. All Lachute car dealers were contacted to submit tenders on the vehicle.

A sound, wise decision

The decision has been made and we feel it is a good one. Over the past six years, four different mayors and councils have discussed and tabled the fire equipment problem, until finally it was settled at last Wednesday's meeting.

Lachute is to have a new fire truck, the pump and other equipment being supplied by Railway Power and Engineering Ltd., Woodstock, Ont., and the chasis being purchased locally. This tender was the one recommended that Council accept by a committee of the Volunteer Fire Department. The order has been placed and work on the truck will commence upon positive receipt of the Provincial grant.

Tenders were called for under the administration of Mayor Leopold Carrière and have been under study for some months. Twe weeks ago, Lachute's present equipment suffered a break-down and the town was without the services of its' major equipment until Monday last. This was the spark that was needed, and Mayor Jas. W. McGibbon contacted the Fire Commissioner who recommended the purchase be made immediately, also suggesting other improvements which are now under consideration.

It has been a long wait, and a long, hard fight for retired Fire Chief Geo. Y. Deacon, present Chief Trépanier, past and present members of the Volunteer Brigade and The Watchman.

We congratulate Council on their decision and choice and we feel sure they will not regret either. Our present fire equipment has rendered invaluable service over the years. This alone, without the recommendation of the Fire Department committee, is sufficient proof for us that another pump of the same make will adequately meet our needs, coupled with any additional equipment that may be required.

Local brigade battle two fires in Lachute

A Sunday morning fire gutted two rooms of a Main Street West building, causing considerable damage to the contents of the remainder of the tenement-apartment, occupied by Jean Marie De-Montigny, a two-hand amputee. The brick building, located at 217 Main Street, is owned by George Licop, and is occupied by four families.

The fire started shortly after 10 a.m. Sunday and fast work by firemen contained the blaze to a rear bedroom and the kitchen. Considerable heat, smoke, and some water damage was done to the remainder of the tenement, however, and all families in the building were evacuated.

The damage is partially covered by insurance.

Early Thursday morning last, the local volunteer brigade answered a call to the home of Roger Filion, 614 Robert Street, to a chimney fire.

A completely enclosed chimney prevented a thorough investigation without causing considerable damage and as the chimney was stated to be in perfect condition, the fire was allowed to burn itself out under the watchful eyes of the proprietor and several members of the brigade.

A hole was later discovered in the chimney however, and minor damage resulted from a small but stubborn fire in the ceiling and walls. The loss was covered by insurance.

Fined following by-law infractions

Pierre Soumis, proprietor of the Windsor Hotel, pleaded guilty through his lawyer to charges of violating Lachute's Dance Hall by-law, and was sentenced to a fine of $40 plus costs in St. Jerome Court recently.

A total of seven different charges were laid by Town Police, three of these complaints being cancelled. Magistrate Camille deMartigney accepting the four remaining charges as a combined charge.

Police-Fire Chief Trépanier reported to Council that since this conviction, no further complaints had been laid and that all hotel proprietors were operating according to the by-law, expressing the opinion that the "test case" was highly successful.

Mr. Soumis was represented by Jean Yves Filfe, St. Jerome and Lachute attorney.

"Thawing-out" now effective on Provincial roads

Maximum permissable trucking weights in Quebec during the thawing out period — which went into effect Tuesday midnight of this week — apply to roads in this district as follows ("permissible weights" meaning vehicle and load inclusive").

Route 8 — St. Eustache to Hull; Route 41 — Lachute to Joliette (Class B) — two-axle vehicles, 20,000 pounds; three-axle vehicles, 23,000 pounds.

Class C Roads — (all not included above)—two-axle vehicle, 14,000 pounds; three-axle vehicle, 16,000 pounds.

"Thawing-out" applies to all roads and highways of the Province and will be in effect until further notice.

Local resident trampled by horse last Saturday

Lauchie MacLean, 73, a life-long resident of this district, was fatally injured on Saturday last while working with horses owned by Russell Seale, of Louisa. He died in the Montreal Neurological Institute without regaining consciousness.

The victim was discovered half in and half out of a stall around 3 p.m. Saturday, the accident having taken place between 11 a.m. and that time. It is believed he had cleaned the stall and lost consciousness, falling under the horse. Sgt.-Det. Ralph Allen, who investigated, reports he was apparently not kicked but trampled.

He was immediately brought to the Providence Hospital, in Lachute, where a blood transfusion was administered, and rushed to Montreal where he later died.

He had been hired to look after the Seale horses while the family was vacationing with relatives on the Gaspé coast, and commuted from Brownsburg every noon to do the chores.

Sudden explosion in local garage; three occupants escape injury

Three local residents escaped serious injury and possible death on Wednesday afternoon last when a sudden explosion erupted from the pit in Doug Hay's Service Station, Brownsburg Road. In the garage at the time were Mr. Hay, Lester Cheslock, an employee, and Mel Wilson, all of whom were fortunately standing clear of any walls or partitions.

The blast, believed to have been caused from a motor starting and igniting gasoline fumes, went up and then out, raising the roof several inches and bulging and cracking three walls. The front of the building, mainly glass and garage doors, was also shattered as can been seen in the above picture, the only window remaining unbroken is at the extreme right. Fire was at a minimum and was quickly extinguished by the proprietor.

While the garage was temporarily out of operation, business in now being carried on as usual.

"Parents recognize that in the adult world the ability to read fluently and efficiently is an important asset. Research in one's field of endeavor is necessary to the professional group if one is to keep abreast of new developments. Inter-communication in the business world depends upon accurate understanding of the spoken and written word and stimulating use of leisure time is no problem if one has become familiar with the world of books." It was with these remarks, that Mrs. McCabe, principal of the Rouge River School, opened her informal and instructive talk to the Grenville District Home and School Association, at their last meeting.

Mrs. McCabe will be favorably remembered as the popular "Helping Teacher" of the County Assistant Supervisor of English, Quebec Department of Education, and her remarks proved to her audience her qualifications to discuss the reading program as set out by the Department of Education at Quebec.

In continuing, Mrs. McCabe stated — "One does not need a Ph.D. degree to become a good reader. The two essentials for the individual are a mastery of the basic reading skills and a good-sized bump of curiosity. The former is the responsibility of the school; the latter, that of the home and the school, the individual and the community.

In Grades 1, 2 and 3, the primary concern is with word-attack, comprehension, and apprciation. The child is taught to recognize his first words by their general appearance, length and shape, always in connection with their meaning. When he acquires a basic sight list, his attention is then directed to those phonetic principles which he can absorb. Later, syllabication is added, and finally, in Grades 4 and 5, he is taught how to use a dictionary so that he can derive the spelling, the pronunciation and the meaning of the words he uses. In Grades 6 and 7 there is instruction in the use of the encyclopedia and reference books.

At the same time and continuing through his school life, constant provision is made for developing his comprehension of what he reads. His attention is directed to the main idea of selection, the related details, the proper sequence of events — in other words, reading which will enable him to develop efficient study habits which he can apply to more advanced work.

This, alone, is not enough. Unless a child reads the materials at hand with the exciting expectation of the discovery of new worlds, he will read only when he has to. The bump of curiosity which is inherent in every child and which receives stimulation in the primary grades can wither away if there are no rewards in reading.

Parents who share their children's interests, who appreciate the efforts they make, and who provide opportunities for experiences which broaden understanding can make certain that there are rewards. Books in the home, in the school, in the community which all can share, widen the opportunities for the child's explorations. So many books are published that it is difficult to know what to choose without the aid of experienced people who know both children and the books made for them. There are competent librarians and committees in the province who stand ready to assist upon request.

Mrs. McCabe was introduced by Mr. Thomas and thanked by Mr. Tom Harvies.

The Association is sponsoring a Military Whist to be held in the Grenville High School on Thursday, April 16, at 8 p.m. A warm welcome is extended to all.

The next meeting of the Association will be held in the Auditorium of the Grenville High School, on Wednesday, April 29, at 8 p.m.

Plan to attend and help your Home and School grow.

Seek to improve CNR service in St. Andrews area

Owing to curtailment of service on the C.N. line through St. Andrews East and Hawkesbury, interested parties held a meeting at Hawkesbury on Tuesday evening March 31, when the matter was fully discussed and the following resolution put forward:-

"That this meeting request the Canadian National Railway to continue the present service for at least one year commencing April 30, 1959, in order that all interested parties may get together to ensure all railway facilities the company has to offer are placed before the public so as they can take full advantage of the service.

This will enable all concerned to study the matter from all angles in the best interest of the railway and locality concerned, and insure the general public the necessary service they require."

Present at the meeting were members of the Hawkesbury Town Council, and Chamber of Commerce, also representatives from St. Andrews Chamber of Commerce, the St. Placide and St. Benoit Town Council, Mr. O. Villeneuve, M.P. for Prescott, and Mr. J. O. Latour, M.P. for Argenteuil-Deux Montagnes.

Council grants building permits and discusses law concerning chip wagons

Members of the Lachute Town Council at last Wednesday's session, heard a petition from residents of the Bethany and Foundry Street corner area, requesting that Council take some action to curb the excessive noise around the "chip wagon" located there. Considerable discussion followed and a recomendation was made that these vehicles be banned from the streets, it being necessary to locate them on private property. It was later decided, however, to close the wagons at midnight for the present, and take further action at the next session of Council, if additional complaints are received.

Building permits were granted to Leo Morrissette for an open restaurant on Main Street, to be located between John McFaul & Son and the Bank of Montreal property; Real Morrissette for a house on Princess Street; Chevrier Frérès for a warehouse on Robert Street; Aurél Laurin for a house on Elizabeth Street; Ernest Leroux for alterations to his house on Main Street West and Judes Charlebois for an extension to his shop on Bedard Blvd., all under the jurisdiction of the Roads Committee.

A letter was read from Romeo Foucault requesting that he be permitted to buy back land sold to the town on the St. Claire Road, purchased some years ago for the purpose of using it as a dump. This land was never put into use. Mayor McGibbon pointed out that no offer had been made and that in the event the property was sold, it would have to be by public tender, and suggested that for the present, Council retain all its property holdings. This feeling was unanimous among all present.

It was decided to contact the Town Legal advisor, Fernand Legault, relative to the Zoning and Construction by-laws.

Mayor McGibbon informed Council of emergency action taken in the renting of a thawing machine to replace the out-dated equipment which was condemned by an inspector. The monthly rental, he pointed out, was $200 which could, if the Council so wished, be placed against the purchase price of $950 for the second-hand machine. It was decided that the machine be returned after the month was up and that no purchase be made at this time, the motion being made by Ald. J. P. Dorion and seconded by Ald. Laurèat Laurin.

B.A. Oil was granted a permit to make repairs to their buildings, amounting to an estimated $6,000 and a list of accounts totalling $13,103.07 was approved for payment.

Following considerable discussion arising from a Department of Transport request to close the lane across the J. C. Wilson crossing, it was decided to seek legal advise, leaving the matter on the table in the meantime.

Dance Hall permits were granted to the Windsor Hotel, St. Onge Hotel, Chevrier Hotel and Campeau Hotel, all in accordance with the existing by-law, and the summer salary of Adelard Mallette, caretaker, was increased from $50 to $55 weekly, this being the period in which additional duties are required in the Memorial Park.

There being no further business, the meeting was adjourned.

On March 30 the Brownsburg Works of Canadian Industries Limited won the highest award, "The C-I-L Prize", under the C-I-L No-Accident Record Plan for the second consecutive time, and each employee will receive an individual prize for this accomplishment. Mr. MacGibbon, Works Manager, stated that in order to win the award the plant had to complete 487 days without a lost-time injury. During this period 3,379,000 injury-free manhours were worked, which is only 165,000 manhours away from the previous record of 3,544,000 set at this Works 15 years ago. Mr. MacGibbon added that without the full co-operation of every employee working together to eliminate accidents, this award could not have been reached.

The National Safety Council also announced recently that the Brownsburg Works of Canadian Industries Limited has been awarded the Council's Award of Merit for its excellent safety record. The award is presented only where an establishment's record satisfied rigid requirements laid down in the Council's Award Plan for Recognizing Good Industrial Safety Records.

Howard Pyle, President of the National Safety Council, in a letter of congratulations to K. W. MacGibbon, explained that the local plant qualified for the award because of its injury-free period of 2,770,400 manhours from November 28, 1957, to December 31, 1958.

Close call at Ayers mill

A sudden landslide on Thursday night last came uncomfortably close to closing Lachute's major industry for some time as can readily be seen in the above photograph, an arrow indicating the power lines leading from the Ayers power dam to the local woolen mills. Fast work by the factory electricians kept the mill in operation, a temporary over-head power line replacing the under-ground system. Work is now underway to re-route the underground system and fill in the huge hole in the riverbank which also weakened a considerable length of the Ayers siding.

Local gymnasts place high on list at Saturday's International Meet

At the International Gymnastic meet held in Lachute High School last Saturday evening, Reggie Stansfield, of Lachute High School, placed second to Richard Monpettit from Michigan University.

It was a close competition, but in the final stage Monpettit's greater experience was evident and he not only won each event but also the all-round championship.

Some very outstanding gymnastics were shown especially in the Parallel Bars with both backward and forward somersaults in and out of the Bar. Probably most outstanding was Reggie's front somersault with full twist out of the bar. Hed he not missed early in the routine he would have won this item.

The High Bar was also spectacular, three gymnasts finishing the routine with fly-away front somersaults.

The big surprise of the meet was young Ronnie Cairns, of Lachute, who placed fourth all-round. Ronnie was very steady, without any mistakes, all through the meet and when his routine gets a little bigger, Coach Petersen reports he is confident that he will give the best competitors tough competition.

The three judges were Mr. Chas. Dusco, a former Hungarian official now residing in Montreal; Mr. Lew Waller from the Y.M.C.A., in Montreal; and Mr. E. Gagnier, Athletic Director from Ecole Richard, Montreal, all of whom did an outstanding job in judging fairly in so close a competition.

The audience of about 300 was impressed by the excellent performance but it was somewhat disappointing that there was not a full house. It is regrettable that so few teachers and students were present from the school.

Final results were:-

1. Richard Monpettit, Michigan ... 57.2 points
2. Reggie Stansfield, Lachute ... 55.3 points
3. Gilbert Larose, Montreal ... 52.8 points
4. Ronnie Cairns, Lachute ... 50.6 points
5. John Higgins, Lachine ... 50.2 points
6. Leo Provencher, Noranda ... 49.8 points
7. Don Brooker, Toronto ... 48.6 points
8. David Sandy, Scarborough ... 48.4 points

EDITORIAL NOTES...

"In this Parliament are three Estates, the Lords Spiritual, the Lords Temporal and the Commons, but in the Reporters' Gallery yonder sits a Fourth Estate more important far than all."
— Edmund Burke

Symbol of hope

THERE IS A story going around West Berlin that the busiest factory in the Communist-dominated east sector of the city is one manufacturing signs saying: "This elevator is out of order."

That, of course, is exageration but a visit to the two sectors of the divided city points up dramatically the differences in the way of life under democratic and Comunist regimes.

West Berlin is a live, vibrant city, with brightly-lighted streets, teeming traffic, bustling stores and restaurants and the spiciest European night clubs outside of Paris. East Berlin is drab and dirty, far more pock-marked with wartime rubble than the West.

Its stores are dingy and the quality of the products cheap. Restaurants — even those that cater to tourists from the West — are ordinary, if there is any night life it is kept under cover.

Canadian newspapermen visited in Berlin recently at the invitation of the West German government. They found, in both sectors, the marks of war more evident than elsewhere in Germany, but in the West 100,000 new apartments have been built and in the East only one-tenth of that number.

The most attractive East Berlin street is the Stalinallee, a wide boulevard bordered by eight and nine-storey apartment houses where Comunist party officials and other friends of the government live.

Apart from that one street and a few newly-built government buildings there is nothing to attract a visitor. The most spectacular attraction is a mammoth memorial to 7,000 Russian soldiers killed in the fighting for Berlin.

West Berlin, on the other hand, bustles with new building and its stores display a variety of goods equally as attractive as anything that can be bought in Canada.

It has been an expensive operation to bring West Berlin up to this standard for no city in the world is more highly subsidized, but it has been a worthwhile expenditure.

West Berlin is a symbol of hope to all non-Communists in the East. Three million refugees have passed through the city since its division and they still come through at the rate of 300 a day.

If this escape hatch is closed, the Iron Curtain will indeed have rung down between East and West.

Boys' Clubs of Canada

IN THESE DAYS, when almost every edition of the newspaper carries another instance of youthful crime, vandalism or juvenile delinquency, it would be well for all of us to reflect, especially during Boys' Club Week, on how much worse the situation would be if we didn't have such organizations.

The Boys' Clubs—like many another youth organization — offers the practical guidance so badly needed by our young people. Its program is aimed at teaching the principles of good citizenship, and, at the same time, offering attractive and practical ways for the youngsters to spend their leisure time.

That word "attractive" is one of the keys to the success of the Boys' Clubs of Canada program. Almost anyone can offer guidance to a young lad, but if he isn't first attracted to the source of that guidance by something he wants to do — something that's fun — the chances are that he will take little or no advantage of the guidance.

The Boys' Club program spans a full range of activities, planned to offer something to attract almost every boy. Sports, hobbies, social activities, physical development, vocational guidance, arts and crafts, camping and hiking — in fact, almost anything you can think of that boys like to do — are included in Boys' Club programs. A key part of every activity is the quiet, inconspicuous, but very emphatic insistence on the principles of fair play, sportsmanship and honesty.

In communities fortunate enough to have Boys' Clubs, "Boys Club Week" is the time when the parents of the boys and others interested in youth welfare are privileged to enter the portals of the club to see for themselves the splendid results that are being achieved in the development of good citizenship and what the boys do in their leisure time.

The Boys' Clubs of Canada, the National Organization, may well be proud of the rapid expansion that has taken place in the Boys' Club movement within the last few years. There are now over seventy Boys' Clubs in Canada that have qualified for membership in the Boys' Clubs of Canada and this National Organization with its Regional offices across Canada stands ready to assist any group interested in doing an invaluable service to the rising generation by forming a new Boys' Club. The fact that at present only 42 communities have such a Boys' Club, meeting the minimum standard requirements for further expansions. "Boys' Club Week" seeks to call attention to the great need for more clubs for the future benefit of Canada.

Elected by population

RECENT LABOR LEGISLATION in Newfoundland and in B.C. says Canadian Labor Congress vice-president Stanley Knowles, constitutes a "symbol of the conflict" that makes a new labor-oriented political party a necessity.

He forgets that Legislatures of Newfoundland and of B.C. consist of members who are elected by the public secret ballot at election time. Provincial MLAs, like MPs, are acutely aware of the views of their constituents. They know that public opinion in Canada has grown increasingly fearful of excessive union power. They know, too, that many union workers themselves feel that union officials exercise too much power and that the democratic traditions of the trade union government are threatened by such things as the closed shop.

Because neither the Concervative party nor the Liberal party has chosen to call for disallowance of the Newfoundland labor legislation and because neither of the two major parties has denounced the proposed changes in B.C.'s labor laws, Mr. Knowles would like it to be thought that both major parties are anti-labor.

Such reasoning is nonsense. There is not a shred of evidence to suggest that either the Conservative party or the Liberal party is anti-labor. Both major parties are acutely aware of the importance of protecting the rights of workers. Many workers nowadays themselves feel that union power has in some cases become excessive and that the rights of the workers are often abused most severely by union officials themselves.

Canadian Library week

LESS THAN ONE Canadian in every three was reading a book at the time of the last survey by the Gallup organization.

This is not a situation of which we can be proud; nor is the fact that only 61 per cent of our citizens have ready access to public library service, according to the most recent government survey.

Our reading record, by almost any yardstick, seems to be about the worst among western nations, save for the United States.

Whatever the reasons for this dismal picture, we are fortunate that a move is underway to change it. Our first Canadian Library Week is to be observed from April 12 to 18. The week is actually the finishing touch to a two-month, nationwide, "Wake Up and Read" campaign to encourage more reading of all kinds by Canadians.

It is good to see public-spirited men and women from many fields tackling this problem in a practical way. For the question of reading should not be left entirely to librarians and educators. It is something with which every one of us should be concerned.

The key to our democratic method of government is an informed public. Such a state will remain but a dream if only 15 per cent of Canadians over six years borrow books from their public library (another government survey finding).

This is not nearly good enough for a country that is more than 95 per cent literate, has more leisure time and a larger national income than ever before.

The Canadian Library Week program should remind us of the relationship between reading and knowledge and our traditions of freedom. It should help re-kindle an interest in those of us who have lost touch with books; to open the way to new, worthwhile experience for others who have neglected the reading habit.

Canadian Library Week is drawing support from leading citizens in business and industry, libraries and publishing houses, newspapers, radio-tv, the educational and other fields.

But it deserves — and needs — the full support and active interest of all of us.

Fulton's Folly

It could be that I'm biased. From what I have seen of international unions, I don't care for them. If the International Woodworkers of America is dominated in the USA by Hoffa types, then all my prejudices come into play against them. Aside from that, it is a long way from Winnipeg, where I write, to the logging camps of Newfoundland, where the fighting is. So I ought to be slow to judge. Nevertheless, I feel completely sure about one thing; Justice Minister Davie Fulton was dead wrong in taking it upon himself to refuse reinforcements to the Royal Canadian Mounted Police over the head of the RCMP's chief commissioner, Mr. L. H. Nicholson — and Nicholson did the right thing by resigning in protest. After all one policeman had already been killed, and to deny reinforcements to those on the spot, charged with keeping order, would have been a blemish on an honorable career. I am sure Nicholson will never regret having given up job and pension in order to act in accordance with his conscience.

I am equally sure that Davie Fulton will regret his act. For a short time, it may appear to have been a popular decision from a political point of view. After all, Joey Smallwood is a Liberal. Further, the so-called "million-member" Canadian Labor Congress will praise Mr. Fulton as a supporter of organized labor, as a champion of the under-dog.

But Smallwood is not alone in his fight against the IWA. The entire legislature of Newfoundland feels as he does. Countless members of the million-member Canadian Labor Congress, too, if given a chance to vote secretly, would favor his action. After all, the strike had been going on a long time, and the violence had been all too apparent, before Smallwood and the government of Newfoundland got fed up with it, and acted in righteous anger.

If Davie Fulton was forced out of a logging camp in the dead of a cold winter night in his nightgown, and forced to stay out, he'd be quick to holler for RCMP protection. He wouldn't care, then, whether a million-member CLC was supporting the IWA or not. But he, too, is a long way from Newfoundland.

Perhaps no one, far from the scene, can know the rights and wrongs of the dispute over wages; but we all should certainly know that where there is violence and murder, police are needed, and reinforcements should not have been denied them. To do so was an act of folly. Time will prove it to be so.

What Canadian Prime Minister Hated Politics?

Sir John Abbott, who was prime minister of Canada in 1891 and in 1892, once wrote: "I hate politics. I hate notoriety, public meetings, public speeches, caucuses, and everything that I know of that is apparently the necessary incident of politics — except doing public work to the best of my ability." Despite these feelings, his tenure of office was marked by great astuteness, although ill health forced him to resign after less than two years as leader of the government. Abbott had succeeded the great Sir John A. Macdonald as prime minister and was himself succeeded by Sir John Thompson.

Incidentally, Sir John Abbott was one of the two Canadian prime ministers who have held that office while sitting in the Senate. The other Sir Mackenzie Bowell. All of our other prime ministers have been members of the House of Commons.

Who aimed at a Fox and Struck Silver?

This may be no more than a legend, but it is one version of how the town of Cobalt in northern Ontario came to be founded. According to this story, Fred LaRose, a blacksmith working on the construction of the Ontario Northland Railway, was out walking along the new right of way one night in September 1903 when he thought he saw a fox's eyes glowing in the dark. He threw his hammer at the imaginary fox only to discover that he had hit a vein of silver — the world's richest. The discovery did not remain secret for long and by 1905 one of the greatest mining stampedes in history streamed into the silver camp, named Cobalt by Dr. W. G. Miller, provincial geologist, because of the presence of cobalt in the silver ore. Fred LaRose had sold his claim much earlier for $30,000. Within ten years of its founding, Cobalt produced $300,000,000 worth of metal.

Who is a Whip?

A whip (or whipper-in) is a member of a political party in a legislature whose job it is to summon party members to a cacus, to make sure they are on hand when a vote is called in the legislature, to discuss grievances and to arrange the order of speech-making in a debate.

Wit and humor

An old friend recently lent me a book entitled: "Wit And Humor Of The Age." It was published in Chicago and the age referred to was prior to the year 1883, which is the date of the first copyright. It is really a collector's item, and contains writings from the humorists of that period including Mark Twain, Oliver Wendell Holmes, Henry Ward Beecher, Josh Billings, Bill Nye, Bret Harte, Geo. W. Peck, Eli Perkins and Artemis Ward — just to mention a few.

The anecdotes themselves are mostly too long-winded for the majority of 1959 readers. I suppose things moved along in a much more leisurely pace in those days, and that there was not nearly as much reading material available. Today's jokes are mostly known to the trade as "one liners".

Those in this book extend from half a page to two or more full pages! In spite of the copyright, I'll take a chance of not being sued by the descendants of the above authors, and tell a couple in my own words as the originals would be too long. Here's one from the Civil War.

Two officers of the Federal army were discussing a very large cannon that one had seen cast at a West Point foundry. "It was quite as large as one I saw in Europe," said the first officer. "How large was that?" asked the second.

"Well, sir, it weighed 27 tons. The shell weighed 36 tons."

"Wait a minute. If the shell weighed 36 tons and the gun only 27 tons, it would be impossible to fire it."

"Oh, no! I was there when they fired it."

"And what happened?"

"Well, the shell stayed where it was. And the gun backed up twelve miles!"

* * *

And here's another. A man in the Old West was being hanged for horse stealing. As he stood in the scaffold while the rope was being adjusted around his neck, he started laughing so hard that he couldn't stop. The sheriff asked him what he thought was so funny about the situation. The man replied: "The joke's on you, sheriff— You've got the wrong man!"

All Aboard

with G. E. MORTIMORE

Maclean's magazine recently suggested that Canada should throw away her guns and resign as a military nation.

We are too weak to fight, anyway. Why pretend? So the magazine argued in a challenging editorial.

The men who hatched the idea showed courage and imagination, both of which are uncommon qualities in world affairs.

But from this worm's-eye viewing post, I see one major fault in the plan. It's one-sided.

It places us in a position of the weakling who threatens to block the bully's attack by bleeding all over him.

No doubt Mexico could abolish her army, navy and air force, such as it is, tomorrow, and all of us would applaud politely, but we wouldn't attach much value to the gesture — because Mexico is at the fringe of a possible war, and Canada is in the middle.

We are in a sensitive frontier zone between two military giants. If we leave the outpost unmanned, one or other of them will be eager to garrison it for us.

Personally, I don't like the idea of Uncle Sam as an overlord much more than I like the idea of Ivan taking control. Uncle is breathing too heavily down our necks as it is, without inviting him in to handle our defence.

Why not carry the Maclean idea further, and urge that Canada, Alaska and an equal area of Siberia all be cleared of armaments? That would give the plan three legs to stand on, instead of just one.

Some kind of Arctic neutral zone has already been suggested, and niggled away in futile negotiations between the great powers.

Canada might make enormous gains in prestige and goodwill, by putting forward a scheme for a larger neutral zone, in which the whole territory of this nation and a vast tract of Russian territory across Bering Strait, would be cleared of major arms.

In pressing such a bold plan, against the opposition that would certainly arise in the United States, Canada might well dispel the idea that she was an American satellite.

Canada could therefore address Russia with some chance of being heeded as an independent voice.

The disarmament would not be complete. Canada would very likely expect to keep light naval forces, radar warning posts and infantry with small arms.

The whole neutral zone in Russia, Alaska and Canada — would be subject to the strictest inspection by United Nations observers. The Russians have been remarkably stubborn about inspection in the past. But if Canada could prove her independence, and put forward such a plan, the Russians might relent.

The plan may be impractical. But I would like to hear the reasons why it wouldn't work.

Merely by advancing such a plan, Canada might add to its own stature and ease the hatred between the giants who cast such a black shadow on this land.

B'burg citizen, businessman, passes suddenly

The Late David Black

Following a comparatively short illness borne with patience and great hope, David Black passed away at the Smith Clinic, Hawkesbury, on Friday April 3.

Born in Mabel on August 7, 1903, he was one of Brownsburg's best known citizens, having run a taxi business there for many years. Of a pleasant nature and kindly disposition he was ever ready to oblige, did many a good turn, and was popular with all who knew him.

In 1926 Mr. Black married Miss Annie McAllister, of Brownsburg. From this union there were two children, Bobby who died at the age of seven years and Sybil (Mrs. S. Boland) presently residing in Ottawa. Mrs. Black passed away on November 30, 1943.

Hear recording of "Cantata"

The augmented choirs from Lachute and Brownsburg which recently presented the cantata "Olivet to Calvary", had the interesting experience of hearing the recording of the performance, on Thursday evening last.

The ladies of the Brownsburg United and Maple Ave. Baptist Church choirs invited the group to Brownsburg, where the replay was held. Due to much sickness the attendance was small, but those who were present appreciated the experience.

The Rev. G. W. Bruce, minister of Brownsburg United Church, extended a warm welcome to all the guests and congratulated the choir upon the excellent rendition.

The choir derector and organist, Lowell B. Hopkins, commented favorably upon the general impression of the replay, and Jack Gorman spoke on behalf of the visitors expressing thanks for the tasty refreshments served, and of the fine spirit that was evident between the various choirs in the production of the cantata.

Mr. Hopkins expressed the desire for continued interest in the group-choir project, and of the possibility of a still greater number of participants. To this end, an informal discussion took place which resulted in the nomination of Mr. Bernard Hewitt, of Lachute, as treasurer, and for various members of the Lachute and Brownsburg choirs to appoint representatives for an inter-church choir group. These members were to report to Jack Gorman.

Folk singers for next concert, Saturday, April 18

A Saturday night concert was an innovation which proved popular in last year's Community Concerts series. The date encouraged the attendance of a number of business and professional people, who are seldom free to enjoy such relaxation during the week. . . . A Saturday night engagement will be welcome again to a good portion of Association members, who are looking forward to April 18 and the concluding recital here this season.

Artists for this program, to be held as usual in the High School auditorium, are two accomplished folklore singers, Frances Archer and Beverly Gile. These charming young vocalists sing folk songs and ballads of different countries, to their own guitar accompaniment and with appropriate comments to weave an interesting story.

The Community Concerts executive feel confident this program will prove a popular climax to the 1958-59 series.

Anglican Church planned in Ste. Margaret's

Plans are going ahead for the erection of an Anglican Church in Ste. Marguerite Station, in the Laurentians, and last Saturday the sketch of the proposed building was studied by the group which has been meeting throughout the winter months under the leadership of the Rev. Horace G. Baugh.

There is no Protestant Church in this rapidly expanding area, and hundreds of skiers and week-enders are in the vicinity during the winter-time, while the lakes are a great attraction during the summer season. There are a number of highly popular resort hotels in the district.

It is hoped that the land may be secured within the next few weeks. The people have been asked to seriously consider a name for the new Church, and all suggestions will be considered, with final approval to come from the Bishop of Montreal.

A general invitation is being extended to all interested in the project to attend a meeting on May 24 week-end at the home of Mr. Cecil C. Gardner, in Ste. Marguerite, when full details will be presented.

SEES EXPANSION

St. Jerome, Que. — (CP — Jean Claude Lahaie, a town planning consultant, predicted the population of this community in the Laurentian foothills will increase three-fold to 72,000 by 1981. It is fast becoming the distribution centre of the Laurentian area.

"Next to the British Crown -- the greatest!"

A Scotsman expressed himself briefly and with conviction, when he said: "Next to the British Crown — the greatest!" This Scotsman was standing in front of the Bible Society display at the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto, intently studying every detail of the display. One of the attendants at the display handed the interested observer a piece of literature, and asked: "Are you acquainted with the work of the Bible Society, Sir!" "I am." replied the Scotsman, "it is the greatest institution in the British Empire — next to the British Crown — the greatest!"

Is YOUR faith that strong?

It can be. But how? The Bible says faith follows the report, and the report is through the word about Christ. No place aside from the Bible itself is the word about Christ Jesus given more prominence than in the columns of THE WATCHTOWER. As a result this outstanding Bible journal for almost eighty years has been building faith in its readers and stimulating them to works of faith. It has carried them through severe trials that have tested their Christian integrity to the limit. But more trials and more serious testings are still ahead. Fortify yourself. Build your shield of faith so strong it can even quench the fiery missiles of God's adversary, the Devil.

Hopes of farm women are expressed by W. Inst.

By Carolyn Willett, Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa — Canada's Farm Women's Organization has its national office in the heart of the Capital city's hustel and bustle.

Working with the hum of a city in her ears but listening to the voice of the country, Mrs. H. G. Taylor manages the National affairs of the Federated Women's Institutes of Canada from a homey one-room office looking out on a busy confederation Square.

The small blue-eyed widow, the Federation's first National Secretary, maps out what she say "so far is an uncharted course." The 95,000-member organization set up the office last October.

Long Experience

Born on a farm near Sherbrooke in the Eastern Townships, and later a farmer's wife there, she has known 50 years of farm life and has been a WI member for 44 years. Until she came to Ottawa last fall, she worked for 10 years as secretary of Quebec Women's Institutes.

Her family includes three sons, one daughter and eight grandchildren, none of whom lives on a farm.

"But I'm glad they were brought up on a farm," she says. "It gives a person a respect for work and a sense of responsibility."

As for work, when she was farming from dawn to dusk she never dreamed of a five-day week.

Nowadays, there's five days for office work and Saturday for weaving. She set up a wide loom and warping frame in her office because it wouldn't fit into her room in a friend's home here.

Sometime, she might find a small apartment—she doesn't like housekeeping—with "room for the loom."

Weaving is a relaxing hobby "I wouldn't do without." Reading is her other hobby; history and archaeology her favorite subjects.

There are National committee reports to copy and circulate, queries to answer and "boxes and boxes" of material to file in a central spot for the first time in the federation's 40-year history.

The central office serves as a clearing house and liaison between Provincial Institutes and the International Associated Country Women of the World.

The first Women's Institute was founded at Stoney Creek, Ont., in 1897; the National Federation in Winnipeg in 1919. The Canadian movement was the pattern for the World organization which now has 6,000,000 members in 31 countries.

With its emphasis on adult education for rural women, the WI has been called "the farm woman's university. It also is a main social outlet, a best-bid-and-tucker outing for the farm wife. Its welcome-to-all attitude in recent years has played a major part in making New Canadian farm wives feel at home.

But in Canada, as in some other countries, there is a shift from country to city and suburban living, of which Mrs. Taylor says the Federation is "keenly aware."

She said the W.I. program is broad and flexible enough to keep up with the changing farm community itself. Basically the same as in 1897, it promotes more knowledge of homemaking skills, leadership and co-operation for the welfare of home, community and country.

New 5c postage stamp will honor achievements of Canadian women

The Hon. William Hamilton, Postmaster General, has announced that a postage stamp will be issued May 13 to commemorate the development of the Canadian Women"s Institutes, les Cercles des Fermières, and similar groups in other countries, into the world-wide organization of about six million women known as the Associated Country Women of the World.

The 5 cent green and black stamp was designed by Helen Fitzgerald of Toronto and depicts a female figure kneeling beside a tree over which the globe is poised. The words, "Associated Country Women of the World" and "Union mondiale de Femmes rurales" form the border.

Canadians have a particular interest in the movement as the idea of the Women's Institute was conceived in 1897 by Mrs. Adelaide Hoodless of Hamilton, the first Institute coming into being at Stoney Creek, Ont. Another Canadian, Mrs. Alfred Watt, O.B.E. spread the idea of an international organization to Europe.

In 1953 the 7th Conference of the A.C.W.W. was held in Toronto with about 900 delegates and visitors from 28 countries in attendance.

The Federated Women's Institutes of Canada, the national organization, was formed at Winnipeg in 1919 with Judge Emily Murphy as first president. The Federation represents 95,000 Canadian Women.

The "Cercles des Fermières" started in Quebec in 1915 — now has over 785 groups with approximately 47,000 active members. About 50 technicians are employed to give instruction in the domestic and culinary arts.

"For Home and Country" and "Pour la Terre et le Foyer" the mottoes of the Canadian societies indicate the spheres into which the energies of these women are directed. All other affiliates of the affiliatess of the A.C.W.W. have similar objectives.

Breaks Tradition

The all-male Pontiac, Que., County Council has a tradition-breaker in its ranks. She's Mrs. Gordon Gibbons, council's first woman warden. As warden she acts as chairman of council meetings.

However, public office isn't new to this housewife and mother. She has been mayor of the Ottawa Valley village of Portage du Fort for six years.

This minister of finance says — "Yes, we can afford it!"

Mother's decision has not been arrived at lightly. Her peek into her purse is anything but casual—for as family minister of finance she is also keeper of the budget. She weighs every important purchase carefully, because she has a dozen places to put every dollar . . . and only so many dollars.

The same problem — a dozen places for every dollar — is a familiar one to the Minister of Finance at Ottawa. His budget is around six billion dollars. This very large sum of money is spent through various government departments.

It's no secret how the Minister of Finance obtains this money. He gets it largely in taxes from millions of Canadians like you. If he spends more than he gets from you, he must turn around and borrow from you the amount he has overspent . . . or else create new money.

The creation of new money is one factor that leads to inflation — when the dollar buys less and less. So, as a thrifty Canadian, you are wise to ask government only for those services you are willing to pay for . . . with taxes.

Personally you try to pay as you go, to live within your income. It's important that government try to do the same thing.

You want to live well now and to realize all your ambitions for the best possible future. That future is tied up with a sound dollar — a dollar whose purchasing power you can depend on.

A SOUND DOLLAR MEANS A BETTER LIFE FOR YOU

Tribute to Jack Miner

(Copyright)

— By NANCY CLEAVER —

"Jack Miner has rendered our country great services. The inspiration he has given to young and old of many lands by his life and work will live after him," said Mackenzie King a dozen years ago, at the time of the great naturalist's death.

Whenever conservation education is mentioned, Canadian boys and girls hear the name of Jack Miner from their teachers. But this man's contribution to the growth of the bird sanctuary idea should be discussed in the family circle too.

When Jack Miner visited the Fergus School, when I was a child, he made a vivid impression on everyone who heard him. Here was a man, sincere, unaffected, enthusiastic about a great idea, speaking from his own experience. My brother, sisters and I told our parents at supper time all we could about his talk. I can remember my father saying, "Jack Miner is doing what we all should be trying to accomplish, each in our own way. Everyone should leave the world a better place than he finds it." To be at home in the out of doors is an art, and Jack Miner has mastered it thoroughly. Although he had but three months of continuous schooling, he was educated in the vast store of knowledge he possessed of the wild animals and birds of our woods.

Early in this century Jack Miner realized the necessity of conservation of our natural resources. He formed one of the first game protective associations in Canada, indeed, on this continent. His bird sanctuary near Kingsville became famous and served as a model and inspiration for several hundred other bird havens. In the barren fields of his farm Jack Miner and his workers dug the hollows for the ponds for wild ducks and geese. Countless trees were planted as a windbreak and for the use of insect-eating birds.

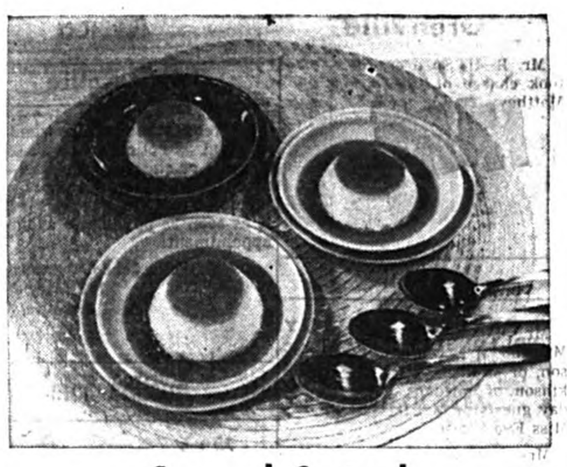

In 1909 Jack Miner began his bird-tagging activities when he placed an aluminum band on a black mallard duck. This duck was killed in North Carolina. Six years later Jack Miner decided to concentrate on banding Canada geese. On the tags he wrote his address and a verse of Scripture. During his lifetime he banded hundreds of geese. This project helped both the Canadian and U.S. governments in establishing strategic bird sanctuaries and in regulating shooting privileges.

In his public address, Jack Miner captured the heart of young and old, and impressed his audiences with the value of their heritage of field and forest, of wild animals and birds. He loved boys and girls, and they found it easy to like him and join in his conservation campaign. At the time of his funeral, one of the loviest comments on the character of the man was made by a girl who had worked on his farm the previous summer. She said, "I will never think of him as dead — he was too nice alive."

Like most men of the out-of-doors, Jack Miner was a truly religious man. Once he said, "No man can live in the great out-of-doors and study the creatures which occupy it before man had any control over them, and consider the regularity of the sun, moon and whispering stars without being compelled to believe there is an over-ruling Power." He had a real sense of purpose in his own vocation, which is shown in his remarks, "Back of me, in all my undertakings, is God."

We need more Canadians today of Jack Miner's caliber. The first concern of parents is the character development of their children, and in this out-of-doors man with so little formal education, there flourished many of the fine things of the mind and the spirit which we covet for our children.

Jack Miner's two books, "On Current Topics" and "Jack Miner and the Birds", may be found in most public libraries. His interest in the conservation of our natural resources — our soil, water, forest, flowers, fish, birds and mammals, is something we all can claim as our own and pass on to the rising generation.

Caramel Custard

Custards are one type of dessert that you can bake at the same temperature as many main dishes such as casseroles and meat loaf. For a change why not try caramel custard?

To make caramel syrup for 6 individual custards, heat ½ cup white sugar in a heavy frying pan and stir until all is melted and amber in color. Immediately add 2 or 3 tablespoons water, remove pan from heat and stir until sugar is dissolved. Spoon into custard cups, rotating each to coat bottom and sides. Or, try a "quick" caramel custard by spooning "golden brown" sugar or shaved maple sugar into cups, allowing ½ cup of either for 6 servings.

Modern version of skim milk powder is both nutritious and convenient

The instant skim milk powder sold in convenient cardboard packages at your grocer's is economical, easy to use and easy to store. It is also low in calories yet it is very nutritious since only the water and fat (along with Vitamin A dissolved in the fat) have been removed from the fresh milk used to make it. All of the other important milk nutrients such as protein, calcium and riboflavin remain the same in the instant skim milk powder.

Instant skim milk powder is made by what is called the "spray process". The skim milk is first pasteurized and then a good deal of the water is removed by evaporation. After that the milk is forced under pressure into a heated chamber where the rest of the water is instantly removed from the sprayed milk. The powder is then re-wet and re-dried. This process makes the powder instantly soluble but does not affect the nutritive quality.

Instant skim milk powder is graded according to regulations established by the Canada Department of Agriculture. What is produced and packaged in Canada is of such excellent quality that you won't find any other than Canada First Grade instant skim milk powder in the stores.

You can use milk powder in some way every day since it can be reliquefied and used in the same ways as fresh milk and it can also be used for cooking and baking just as it comes from the package. To reliquefy, simply follow the directions on the package. After the powder has been mixed with water treat it like fresh milk and keep any that is left over in the refrigerator.

You'll find that the packaged milk powder will keep indefinitely when stored in a dry corner of the kitchen cupboard. Once the package has been opened, be sure to close it tightly after each use so that it will be less likely to pick up moisture from the air and become lumpy.

Scalloped Potatoes (6 to 8 servings)

Prepare 6 cups thinly sliced potatoes (about 6 medium) and slice 1 medium onion.

Mix together 2 tablespoons flour, 2 teaspoons salt and ¼ teaspoon pepper.

Arrange a third of the potatoes in a greased 8-cup casserole, sprinkle on half the flour mixture, dot with butter (about a tablespoon) and arrange half the onion slices on top. Repeat the layers and top with the potatoes that are left.

Dissolve ¾ cup instant skim milk powder in 2 cups water and pour over the potatoes.

Cover and bake on oven rack placed ¼ way up in moderate oven (350°F.). When milk comes to a gentle boil (about 45 minutes), remove corner and continue baking until potatoes are tender . . . 30 to 35 minutes longer.

NOTE: For a complete oven meal served with Meat Loaf, Baked Apples and Date Squares which may be baked at the same oven temperature (350°F.)

Tea Biscuits (12 medium size)

2 Cups sifted all-purpose flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ cup instant skim milk powder, 6 tablespoons shortening, ¾ cup water.

Measure and sift flour, baking powder, salt and milk powder. Cut in shortening until mixture resembles fine bread crumbs. Make a well in dry ingredients, pour in water and stir to make soft dough.

Turn onto lightly floured board, knead quickly by folding over and pressing dough several times. (This makes higher biscuits!) Roll out to ¾ inch thickness and cut with lightly-floured 2-inch cutter. Bake in hot oven (425°F.) for 12 to 15 minutes.

Written Specially for The Lachute Watchman

By Carolyn Willett, Canadian Press Staff Writer

Representatives of a white-collar women's organization have had a talk with Prime Minister Diefenbaker. And it was more than passing the time of day.

The delegates from the Canadian Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs went to Parliament Hill armed with several thought-provoking resolutions. Foremost was a recommendation that a woman be named to the national parole board set up by the government earlier this year.

The 7,000-member federation is just one of several women's organizations which has stepped in to say that the new parole board needs a woman member.

General View

Taken as a chorus, these organizations have followed a similar argument for their point — that qualified women are needed on all policy-making bodies and particularly on the parole board where they can provide a sharper humanitarian approach and ensure that women offenders receive understanding consideration.

This is not to say, of course, that the four men already appointed to the board lack a humanitarian approach or that they will not give due consideration to the problem of women prisoners.

The business women's resolution said that "our experience however, is that in penal matters commissions and boards composed entirely of men tend to focus their attention on male offenders."

The federation recognizes the fact that the number of women offenders is few compared to men. There are fewer than 100 women in the federal penitentiary at Kingston, Ont., where all federal women prisoners are sent, compared to nearly 6,000 men in all federal penitentiaries.

However, the business women and sister organizations have emphasized that in spite of the small portion of women offenders, this minority has a right to be represented.

The prime minister was "very favorable" to the idea of a woman on the board, said federation president Isabel Menzies of Montreal, following the Ottawa meeting.

Visit to Holland

Mrs. Elizabeth van Droffelaar, a blue-eyed, brown-haired housewife and mother from Prescott, Ont., is going to be the "Heather Queen" of her hometown in Ede, Holland, this summer.

The Dutch-Canadian from the St. Lawrence Seaway town will reign for the week of Aug. 15-22 when the Netherlands city celebrates its annual midsummer festival. This year the festival pays special tribute to Canada, whose soldiers liberated Ede during the Second World War and whose doors have been opened to 170,000 Netherlands people since the war.

She will be accompanied on the visit by her husband Hendrick, Karin, 6, and Tommy, 2, as soon as school ends.

Tips on Touring

By Carol Lane
Women's Travel Authority

Undecided about where to spend your vacation? Then how about vacation sampling. Sampling is the best way to see if a vacation spot fits your personel preference.

You can do your sampling on week-ends or days off. You can even plan ahead to next year by splitting part of this year's vacation for a sampling trip.

Sampling is a good way, also, to dispell misconceptions and to test pre-conceived notions. New roads have eliminated old-time traffic jams and have made some areas more accessible than before.

Here are a few rules for sampling expeditions. First, decide what kind of vacation you want. Second, get a road map from your service station dealer and circle vacation areas you want to consider. Third, go vacation sampling. Take time to make each trip yield the information you want. Talk to people. Try the local restaurants.

You and your family may not like the first few places sampled. If there's no general agreement, plan other tours. A little time and effort now will insure a happier holiday for the future.

Quebec grant to Chamber of Commerce

Through the interest of the Hon. W. M. Cottingham, a grant has been procured for the Lachute Chamber of Commerce from the Quebec Department of Trade and Commerce. Presentation of the cheque of $500 was made last week by René Matte (left) on behalf of Mr. Cottingham, to Adhémar Cuerrier, Chamber president. Other interested onlookers, left to right, are — Messrs. L. Laurin, J. Confer with C.P.R. representative on Chamber's plea for commuter train

Discussion on a CPR commuter train service, morning and evening between Lachute and Montreal, made more progress this week when Chamber of Commerce representatives met Mr. E. E. Hooper, Railway representative, at lunch in the Laurentian Hotel. The tenor of this conference was most cordial. . . Present on behalf of the Chamber were Adhémar Cuerrier, president, A. Lafrance, Bertrand L'Heureux, Richard Valois, Miville Trickey, Richard Ayers, Donat Saulnier and Simon Valois.

Points stressed by these representatives in their plea for an early-morning and evening train service were — the considerable number of passengers who would use this service, and the steady growth of this town and community. Without committing himself in any way, Mr. Hooper took serious cognizance of the arguments and promised to place the matter before his superior officials.

A practical idea was advanced by Richard Ayers, who suggested an extension of the existing service between Montreal and Ste. Therese. It was felt this train might be routed further, to Lachute or Staynerville, stopping there overnight and returning to the city early next day.

Notary Richard Valois, as judical advisor, outlined a request to be placed before the CPR authorities; while Gabriel Valois, publicist for the Chamber, presented findings resulting from a questionnaire in the two local newspapers. Answering in support of this proposal, 48 had replied from Lachute, 12 from Brownsburg and 8 from Montreal. Replies had come from travellers, workers and students; others had been forwarded in the name of groups and organizations, which would represent collective opinions in favor, without indication of exact number.

The neighboring Town of Hawkesbury this year celebrates the one hundredth anniversary of its incorporation. The Village of Hawkesbury was officially incorporated in 1859.

Hawkesbury, which derives its name from the Honorable Charles Jenkinson, Baron of Hawkesbury, was settled many years before its official incorporation. The first records of settlement show that Hawkesbury actually began in the first year of the 19th century.

The founding of one of Canada's largest sawmills and the construction of the Grenville and Carillon canals in 1833, did much to stimulate the growth of this community. Over the years industries and manufacturers have become established. To-day Hawkesbury is a thriving properous town of 8,500 inhabitants.

The municipal authorities have decided to direct an organization of the Centennial celebrations. Numerous committees, under a general co-ordinator, have plans well under way to ensure a successful Centennial program. The official celebrations will be held throughout the period July 10-18 inclusive.

The Town of Hawkesbury extends a special invitation to all ex-residents, who are cordially invited to join their old friends and families in celebration.

Hawkesbury offers its visitors a 9-hole golf course, municipal tennis court, outdoor swimming pool or access to beaches in L'Original Bay or on the Rouge River. The municipal camping and picnic grounds are ideal for those who wish to relax in peaceful surroundings, and living accommodation is of the best.

The new Municipal Arena will be finished in time to be inaugurated during the Centennial and will be dedicated as a Centennial Memorial

Spring sprouting for Centennial

A hirsute contest is under way in connection with the Hawkesbury Centennial celebrations this year. Enthusiasts are keeping a close check on progress even to the extent of preliminary judging, illustrated in this scene by exponents of the two best beards, photographed last Wednesday at the Long Sault Hotel, Grenville.

Ch. Commerce affairs discussed at executive meet

At a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce directorate, President Adhémar Cuerrier expressed regret that more citizens had not joined the recent tour to inspect the Hawkesbury filtration plant. If sufficient members were interested from Lachute and Ayersville, it was suggested they might communicate with the president, and the Chamber could organize a second tour. . . . By way of expressing appreciation for the welcome accorded by Hawkesbury officials on that occasion, a token had been sent in the form of potted plants to adorn the filtration plant building.

Rodrigue Quesnel, treasurer, stressed the need for up-to-the-minute accounting, so that the executive of this public body might be informed on its financial status at the shortest notice.

An amount was outstanding for administration costs, clerical services and rental, due to the Caisse Populaire.

The Chamber executive unanimously voted a donation of $25 to the Lions Club rink.

The membership drive is being pushed with good effect, with special attention to the re-enlisting of former members who have relinquished their affiliation. Added to the membership at last meeting were Messrs. Roger Gravel, Roger Regimbal, Gérard Lefebvre, René Desjardins and Armand Desrosiers. It is hoped to enroll others within the next week or two.

Industries are being asked to subscribe $25 as an annual contribution, with the privilege of having two voting representatives.

April meeting of Women's Institute

The monthly meeting of the Lachute W.I. was held in the Legion Hall, with Mrs. J. A. Gordon presiding.

The Leadership Course to be held at Macdonald College from May 25 to 29 is open to all members interested; further information may be obtained from the secretary.

A donation towards prizes for Fair exhibits was voted, also $5 towards "The Lampada", annual High School publication.

The president gave a report on the semi-annual convention, and hoped that Fair handicraft exhibits from Lachute Branch would make a good showing.

Members were reminded that the annual County Convention will take place in Arundel, Saturday, May 2, Transportation will be arranged, and those interested are asked to contact Mrs. Ross Swail.

The public are invited to use the W.I. Library, which will be open every Thursday from 1.30 to 3.30 p.m. in the High School.

Miss Grace J. Gardner, of Montreal, was the guest speaker, and reviewed several books. This proved very interesting, and Miss Gardner was extended a vote of thanks for providing an enjoyable program.

Proprietor of Lachute Auto Parts is Miville Trickey, ex-president of Lachute Chamber of Commerce.

Many overlooked appeal in aid of Easter Seals

As chairman of the Easter Seals effort, Lion George Tattersfield reports certain discouraging aspects in the public response . . . and it is hoped that, before final returns are reported to the Quebec Easter Seals Fund, an oversight on the part of many would be contributors will be remedied. This applies to both individuals and business firms, to whom the appeal represents such a minor request that it is inadvertently overlooked.

Contributions have reached $1,472.50 — as compared with $1600 on termination of the 1958 appeal.

Out of 4,800 direct-mail contacts, replies have been received only in the following proportions:

Brownsburg district, 46%
Lachute district — 40%
Arundel district — 9%
St. Andrews district — 9%
Grenville-Calumet — 5%

These figures surely do not represent the true public sentiment towards this great humanitarian work for crippled children.

It is not too late to help bring the total at least to last year's standard. If anyone is in doubt as to where to send contributions, please remit to the Watchman Office, and a receipt will be promptly mailed.

(Due to the fact that the donor's name is sometimes left off the back of the envelope, some may not have received their receipts; in this case, please telephone LO 2-2494 during the day or LO 2-2657 after 6 p.m.)

Officer appointed

Cst. Richard Bell, 26, of Grenville, who was recently engaged as a full-time member of the Lachute Town police department. He has been employed on a temporary basis for several months.

Cancer blitz date set for Monday, Apl. 27

The Canadian Cancer Society campaign (through the Argenteuil Section in this community) will be promoted with a blitz canvass on the evening of Monday, April 27. Under the joint chairmanship of Messrs. Léopold Carrière and R. O. (Dick) MacLean, the campaign committee has been appointed, many public spirited residents having accepted responsibility for the various phases of the campaign.

It remains for the public to respond in their usual generous manner, in order to promote the increasing fight against cancer and assistance to its victims, both on the national and local levels. This is a steadily expanding enterprise involving costly research, personnel, equipment and organization — and ultimate conquest of the disease depends largely on the consciousness and support of everyday citizens.

Joint Chairmen — Léopold Carrière and R. O. MacLean.

Slim agenda develops into lengthy Council deliberations at Brownsburg

Brownsburg—For a meeting with such a short agenda scheduled, the April 6 session of Brownsburg Council turned out to be a rather lengthy affair. The waterworks extensions get ever closer for those who have hoped for them for so long; Council announced the contract for the purchase of bonds to finance this project had been given to the firm of Savard & Hart. At a special meeting held April 13, five tenders for construction of the extensions were opened, and since it appeared that some discussion would be required, the subject was tabled for further debate on Wednesday evening.

Payment was approved on monthly vouchers amounting to $2,480.54, along with an additional $1,046.22 split up between Insurance costs and Social Welfare and Health payments.

Police Report

Police Chief Richard Gagnon had a busy month; his report showed a total of 18 fines levied for speeding, 27 for parking offences, and 3 for red-light infractions. As the snow decreases, breaking of the speed limit increases—strangely.

Fire Chief's Report

Fire Chief A. Robbins' report covered three fires, two of which were chimney outbreaks while the third alarm called the fire squad to the fusee building in the C-I-L plant on March 27. The Chief also mentioned he had received a number of comments from parents to the effect that children were having difficulty hearing the curfew warning since the siren was removed from the old hose tower and relocated at a lower level. This news brought knowing smiles among the councillors, who ruled that since the school term is nearly over, the siren will remain where it is for the present as the local fire-fighters have no trouble hearing it. (Seems the hearing of the youngsters isn't what it might be.) With the approach of summer, the threat of fire at the dump prompted Mr. Robbins to request Council to consider purchasing a portable pump as auxiliary equipment for the fire truck. He also suggested that perhaps a half-ton truck might be a valuable asset to the department.

Free Inspection

Once again Brownsburg residents are reminded that they may have their houses inspected to detect fire hazards by calling Secretary Vincent Charbonneau (LE. 3-6687). Citizens are urged to take advantage of this service, which is free to all householders in Brownsburg and which could well prevent fires, thereby saving both property and life — your life.

Still on the subject of fires — Secretary Charbonneau read a letter from the Quebec Fire Commissioner congratulating Chief Robbins, his staff and the municipal authorities on behalf of the Hon. Romeo Lorrain and himself, for Brownsburg's having received honorable mention among Quebec municipalities in the 1958 International Fire Prevention Campaign . . . This group also deserves the congratulations and sincere appreciation of all the townspeople for its fire protection efforts!

May is Election Month

All six council seats and that of the mayor will be vacated, and nomination day for the posts has been set for Wednesday, May 13, with election day falling on the following Tuesday, May 19. This should be the most important civic election in some years, with the possibility of six new councillors and a mayor providing adequate grounds for discussion, especially since it appears that our town has begun to move ahead in the field of public services.

Engineers estimate cost $131,000

Ayersville water supply plans submitted to Quebec

Mayor Gaetan Paquette took the initiative at the last regular meeting of Ayersville Council to suggest a civic Clean-up Campaign, from May 3 to 17. . . . Among routine details at the meeting was the approval of accounts totalling $6,796.41; the appointment of Councillor M. Dumas as pro-mayor for three months; and acquiescence to a demand of Jacques Poitras, secretary, that the services of Miss Odette Leblanc as assistant be retained until the end of April.

Councillor Wilfrid Durocher was the only member absent from this assembly.

An offer by Gatineau Power to re-locate seven poles on Bradford Avenue for a cost of $325, was duly agreed upon.

A sickness insurance plan for the municipal employees was held over for study.

At the request of Mayor Paquette it was decided to arrange consultation with the Regional Hospital building committee, to discuss the sewerage and water service to be required for this structure.

Tenders by Walker-Kingsbury Inc. and Edouard Lajoie, for an adding machine, were tabled for committee study, and a building permit was granted to Noel Filiatrault for a residence on Ayers Street. Similar requests from Jules Léger and Marcel Dinel were held over for more details.

At an adjourned meeting of the Council the services of Notary Noel Campeau were engaged to study negotiations with Ayers Realties for the sale of a sewer installation to the municipality. Offers were invited to underwrite a loan of $30,000 for the sewerage works on Bradford Avenue.

Council then dealt with the purchase of a tractor, a model more effective than the one in present use, and the order was given to Gabriel Decarie, of St. Andrews, for $1,900 with trade-in.

Plans and estimates prepared by Desjardins & Sauriol, engineers, for water and sewer system, and an artesian well and pump-house, were duly accepted, and the firm was asked to submit copies of the plans to Quebec for approval of the Department of Public Health. Cost of the project as outlined, will run to $131,000.

Councillor R. Quenneville gave notice that at next meeting he will submit a motion for the laying of sewer and water main on Chatham Street west of Bradford Avenue.

Art Association plans activities for season

Members of the Argenteuil Art Association executive met last week-end at St. Andrews. Under chairmanship of the president, Mr. Allen G. Talbot, plans were made for the annual meeting and election of officers, to be held on Saturday afternoon, May 2. All members will be notified, and it is hoped there will be a good attendance to demonstrate support to this enterprise in the coming season.

It was planned to hold the initial exhibition — the annual display of art works open to members and friends, both amateur and professional — on the week-end of May 24. Further publicity will be given to the event as plans develop.

This non-profit organization has been instrumental in fostering Art appreciation, and active participation, among a considerable number in Argenteuil County. It has sponsored successful exhibitions, arranged visits to interesting Art collections, and organized classes for oil-painting enthusiasts.

The executive hope for increasing support and an equally satisfying program of activities this season.

Looking ahead

Capt. Eric S. Neale, who forecast with some accuracy a severe winter continuing to the end of March, has now come up with the prediction of a very warm summer.

Any who care to lay personal plans on the basis of this man's predictions, may also select from three specific periods as tops for summer vacations — June 13-27 — July 11 to August 2 — August 10-24 . . . Take your choice.

Pupil trio ahead as public speaking eliminations held

Reporting on the Lions Club district eliminations held Saturday at St. Lambert, the chairman of this club venture, Gérard Lefebvre, is highly gratified with the performance of his three charges from the local schools — Miss Rolande Gauthier, Miss Lois Silverson, and Roland Gow — each of whom came first in their respective classes.

The three students, winners of Region 12, Zone A-8, will compete again this coming Saturday at St. Lambert against winners of another district, Region 19, to qualify for final competitions for Quebec-Ontario, to be staged later at Renfrew. (Mr. Lefebvre would like to see local supporters, friends and relatives at St. Lambert this Saturday; the competitions are to be held in the St. Barnabas Church hall on Lorne Avenue, commencing at 2 p.m.)

Rolande Gauthier, from St. Alexandre School, excelled as speaker among French-language female entrants. Second in this class was Nellie Van Gyle, a girl of Belgian extraction, from St. Lambert.

Lois Silverson, of Lachute High School, was first among English-speaking girls. Runner-up was Gillian Topham, of St. Lambert.

Roland Gow, also of L.H.S., ranked first among English-speaking male entrants. His closest competitor was Douglas Hack, of St. Lambert.

Among French-speaking boys, the winner was Claude Denault, of St. Johns, Que. Gerald Huberdeau, of St. Lambert, came second.

Mr. Lefebvre escorted the young orators from Lachute. Others from here who witnessed the event were Mr. Keith Clarke, secretary of the Lions Club, and Mr. and Mrs. R. Gauthier, parents of Miss Rolande Gauthier.

LEGION NOTES

"ACTIVE SERVICE YESTERDAY COMMUNITY SERVICE TODAY"

— by —

Branch 70 Correspondent

At its regular meeting held last week, the Executive Committee decided to increase the allowance for Spelling Prizes, donated annually to Lachute High School, from $35 to $50. This is in keeping with the general trend of Legion programs across Canada. . . .

As a matter of fact, the April issue of The Legionary has a three-page spread, "Reach For the Stars", by Norman Shannon, announcing the Legion's latest project, "Operation Star-Shooter", to be launched by all branches in September of this year. This is a plan whereby branches sponsor exercise programs for youth and youngsters. However, with a choice of three sets of exercises, progressive power and 5BX (Basic Exercises), practically anyone from seven to seventy can take part. We will attempt to keep you posted on this plan as it unfolds. However, coincidental with the action of our own Branch is the opening of Mr. Shannon's article, "Tomorrow Began Yesterday! . . . It began when the more than 3½ million youngsters now attending primary and secondary schools were born. These are the people who will inherit Canada's future. Their training, their attitudes, their physical and mental development will determine how successfully Canada copes with the space age."

A special meeting has been held on the revision of Branch By-laws and it is expected that several more sessions will be required to complete this job.

All members and friends are reminded of the dramatical effort by members of the Ladies' Auxiliary and the Senior Branch. The three-act play, "She's My Daisy", will be presented at Lachute High School on Friday, April 17. Advance sales of tickets indicate that this will be a very successful effort, and you can show your appreciation by your attendance. (See advertising elsewhere in this issue.)

Did you know that the Canadian Legion is to have a new Dominion Secretary?

On March 25, the Minister of Veterans' Affairs, Col. the Hon. A. J. Brooks, announced the appointment, effective April 6, of Thomas Duncan Anderson, 50, Dominion Secretary of the Canadian Legion since 1949, as Chairman of the Canadian Pension Commission in succession to Brigadier James L. Melville, C.B.E., M.C., who retired last November on reaching the age of 70.

Mr. Anderson was born at Mc-Auley, Man., March 22, 1909, and was educated at local schools and the Winnipeg Normal School. A school teacher before World War II, he enlisted in the R.C.A.S.C. in 1940, transferred to the R.C.A.F. in 1941, and went overseas as a Sergeant-Navigator in 1942. Attaining commissioned rank, he was posted to 410 Night Fighter Squadron and made many operational flights over France, Germany and the Low Countries before his return to Canada in 1944 with the rank of Flight-Lieutenant.

In August, 1944, Mr. Anderson was appointed Executive Assistant to the General Secretary of the Canadian Legion, Mr. J. C. G. Herwig. In 1947 he was promoted to Assistant General Secretary, and in October, 1949, following the death of Mr. Herwig, was made General Secretary at Legion Headquarters in Ottawa. For the past nine years he has also been Veterans' Representative and Vice-Chairman of the National Employment Advisory Committee.

The Canadian Pension Commission comprises 15 commissioners, including the Chairman and Deputy Chairman, and has a staff of about 400. Its offices are in the Veteran's Memorial Building, D.V.A.'s new headquarters on Wellington Street in Ottawa. The Chairman, in the order of Government precedence, has the rank of Deputy-Minister.

The above announcement will be of general interest locally, as well as for veterans, in that Mr. Anderson's brother, Mr. Ord Anderson and Mrs. Anderson, residing at Mountain View, have been well known in this comunity for several years. Mr. Ord Anderson is Production Superintendent, Ammunition, at the Brownsburg Works of C-I-L.

See you next week!

Mrs. Ruth Barlow won the second round by default. Mrs. M.-J. Joly, her opponent, was unable to play due to an operation.

The third round continues from Saturday, April 11, until Sunday, April 19. Following is a list of the women participating in this round:

In the B-Series, St. Pat's won against Thistles 7-6; Maple Leafs trimmed St. Andrew's 8-7; Bluebirds defeated All Stars 9-7; and Teenagers were victorious 12-5 against Redwings.

Next Monday the games will be as follows:

Series B

Semi-final A

Beavers vs East Settlement 8 p.m.

Semi-final B

Winners of Series B (8-ends) 8.15 p.m.

It should be noted that the 7.15 p.m. games will be 10-ends, and the two winning teams will then play against each other in the other semi-final game, which will be 8-ends only. The series A semi-final will be 10-ends.

Successful Invitation spiel ends season's curling events

Final games Saturday evening at the Curling Club brought to a close another very successful and entertaining Invitation Bonspiel, in which over 154 rinks from near and far participated.

During the two-weeks play there were numerous demonstrations of skillful play, and competition was keen throughout.

Arnie Butterworth (skip), of Ottawa, with his players, Glen Anderson, Mike Meronek and Les Rodger, were up against a Lachute foursome, Don Bradley (skip), Albert Stewart, Royal Carrière and Lundy Pearson. The latter team had been picked up hurriedly as something of a fill-in earlier during the 'spiel, but proved that they were an even match for some of the more experienced players. For the first few ends it looked as though the local team would at least be able to hold their own against Ottawa — each side gaining a point at a time, until a 3-point score changed the outlook, giving the visitors a substantial margin at the finish.

At the close of the games President Howard Morrison addressed the gathering, thanking the many teams who had attended during the competition, and welcoming particularly to this evening's entertainment the Hon. Wm. Cottingham and Quentin Miller, donor of the coveted trophy.

Mr. Cottingham expressed his pleasure at being present, congratulating the Club, the ladies, and the trophy winners. In a jocular mood he entertained with numerous parliamentary experiences and stories which delighted the audience.

Quentin Miller, donor of the trophy, gave expression to his feelings as follows: "I express my compliments to President Howard Morrison and his executive on completion of another annual bonspiel, with an entry of 154 rinks.

"In 13 days your club members have received and entertained 600 curling friends. All this does not happen by accident; it takes a lot of thoughtful planning to achieve the success you have attained. After much research, I believe this bonspiel has the largest annual entry of any one club bonspiel, and especially so with all games played on two sheets of ice.

"One of the highlights of your bonspiel is the wonderful meals prepared and served by your efficient lady members. This is handled in a most gracious way by these charming, pleasant, cheerful, smiling ladies; we appreciate them all very much.

"Our Lachute friends have been endowed with a wonderful heritage, which is demonstrated by their charitable disposition, their hospitality and cheerful friendliness. I hope this grand heritage will be absorbed by the future generations. If so, one will have the opportunity to continue meeting and making friends with the grandest people one may meet anywhere.

"I wish you success in all your endeavors. — Thank you."

The applause to Mr. Miller's remarks showed that all present were heartily in accord with his sentiments.

The winners were permitted, according to their standing, to take their choice from a large number of attractive prizes.

President Morrison expressed his appreciation of the hearty co-operation given by all, especially the ladies and by Messrs. Linton Armstrong and Lorne Duncan [illegible] to be h[illegible] a good [illegible]. Last year there were 94 entries.

Lachute's water supply

THE LACHUTE Chamber of Commerce recently visited the neighboring Town of Hawkesbury where they were shown through that community's filtration plant, and from the present and recent condition of Lachute's water supply, this visit was well timed.

While the local supply may be free of germs due to the amount of Chlorine that is daily placed in the water, it is far from being free from dirt. In addition to this, the water pressure last week was extremely low.

That Lachute needs a new water-supply system is well-known to all members of Council as well as the residents of the Town. That little has been done in recent years to rectify the situation is also a well-known fact.

Council has many things under study at the present time, the most important of which are the Fire Department equipment now practically solved, and the Construction and Zoning By-law.

These will soon be things of the past and we feel that by this summer, Council should be in a position to commence serious study on Lachute's water supply.

This community has, in the past, received several inquiries from various industries interested in re-locating and one of the main reasons why Lachute was not chosen is the water-supply, or rather the lack of it. It is to be hoped that the matter will be given serious study and that before too long, local residents will be able to enjoy a glass of water.

Painless extraction

GOVERNMENTS, LIKE good dentists, have become highly skilled in the art of painless extraction these past few years. True, they stop short (as yet) at taking our eye teeth away from us; our money suffices for the while.

But, in this otherwise sweet month of April, we are made aware as in no other of the awful magnitude of the personal tribute we have paid to Ottawa this past year. Those figures on the T-4 slips — recording the aggregate sum of the deductions made from our every pay cheque — speak with an eloquence all their own.

We marvel, along with everybody else, at the effortless simplicity with which it has all been done (thanks to the unfailing co-operation of the thousands of employers who serve so nobly as Ottawa's tax collectors).

Yes, it's a wonderful system. And yet, ungratefully perhaps, we find ourselves wondering how different things might be if it hadn't been made quite so easy for governments to collect . . .

What if it was illegal for government to deduct at source? What if every citizen was again to mail an annual cheque to Ottawa for the whole amount? What a thought that is with taxes what they are!

But here's another one: Would they be what they are if that was the way it was done? Or might the demands made on Ottawa then be a whole lot less than now?

We wonder about that. We just wonder . . .

"Made in Canada"

AS EVERY HUSBAND knows, when it comes to shopping it's the woman of the house who counts.

Four dollars out of every five spent in Canada on domestic purchases are spent by the housewife. Win her positive support for the national "Buy Canadian" drive and the battle itself is as good as won.

But can it be done? Many people doubt it. The average woman, they say, is not remotely interested in where the things she buys are made. As a rule, she couldn't care less.

We do not under-estimate the force of this argument. There's a lot to it. The volume of our imports and the level of our unemployment are the best proof of that. But we are decidedly not of the opinion that nothing can be done about it.

We are convinced that where a real and sustained effort is made to get the "Buy Canadian" message across to the housewife she will not be indifferent to it.

An excellent example of the kind of thing we have in mind is contained in a recent issue of a widely-read employee magazine produced by one of Canada's largest manufacturers of steel.

A two-page, well-illustrated "spread" directed at the housewife tells the story of a can of tomato juice. Superimposed on a relief map of Canada there is a series of pictures. These show the steel plant where the tin plate for the cans is made; an operative in the plant of the can manufacturer; the farmer who grew the tomatoes; the plant where the cartons and labels for the cans are made; the canning factory where the juice is packed; and finally the shippers, warehousemen and truckers who handle the job of distribution of the finished product.

"When you do your shopping," says the message, "do you ever consider all the work which has gone into the manufacturing and marketing of the vast array of products on display in our stores?

"Here, for instance, is what goes on to put that can of tomato juice on your grocer's shelf and here are some of the people involved. When you choose an imported brand ahead of a Canadian one you jeopardize their jobs. On the other hand, when you choose a Canadian brand you put your dollar to work in Canada, keeping Canadians working."

As we say, we find it hard to believe that this kind of common-sense appeal will leave the Canadian house-wife cold. On the contrary, we are quite certain that once she is made aware of how much depends on her, she will not be slow to respond. Indeed, there is already some evidence to support this view.

The price and quality of Canadian-produced tomato juice compares very favorably with imported brands, and the same can be said of a thousand-and-one other products.

By ensuring that her purchases, as far as possible, bear the "Made-in-Canada" label, the Canadian housewife will be contributing greatly to the future prosperity of both her community and her country. And, it may very well be, to the continued employment of her own husband, son or brother.

The pace of recovery

THE NATIONAL ECONOMY, by and large, continues to make a good recovery from the recession of 1957-58. The nature of the upturn this far is gradual and steady rather than fast and furious as was the case after the decline of 1954.

The slower rate of recovery has given rise to mild dissappointment in some quarters. But is it necessarily a bad thing? The hectic expansion of productive capacity in 1955 was all very nice while it lasted, but we should not now need to be reminded that it was not entirely an unmixed blessing.

The lesson, surely, is that it is more desirable over the long haul for expansion to be gentle and sustained than to be excessively rapid and rambunctious. For one thing, we stand a much better chance of preventing costs (and therefore prices) from running riot. For another, when the tempo of activity does slacken — as it must from time to time — the economy should experience less disturbance, making recovery that much easier.

All in all then, we should shed no tears because 1959 is not likely to be 1955 all over again. Recovery may not be as frantic this year, but evidence of it was not lacking as early as January.

There were even then 88,000 more Canadians at work than there were a year earlier, and manufacturing output was up by more than five per cent. Businessmen are showing no disposition to be caught with their inventories down.

Canadians in 1959 are earning and spending more than they ever did before. Retail sales, at an all-time high, continue to climb, and capital expenditures this year will once again be in excess of eight billion dollars. These are all things to justify confidence (as distinct from complacency) about the immediate future.

In recent months, too, even the cost of living has held steady. Who knows, if we resist the temptation to price ourselves out of jobs (yes, we can price ourselves out of those, too, as well as world markets), we might even find a dollar buying more than it has done in years.

Meanwhile, with the best months of the year still to come, the pace of recovery to date is not to be despised.

When Were Canadian Women Allowed to Vote?

The movement for political equality started in Canada in the 1880's; it reached its goal during and immediately after the First World War, except in Quebec. There was in Canada none of the militancy and flamboyance shown by fighters for women's rights in Great Britain and the United States. Aside from a dedicated core of suffragettes, Canadian women showed little interest in the question.

There were small groups active in most provinces. With little support and almost no money, they welcomed other groups as allies. The Women's Christian Temperance Union was an ardent champion of woman suffrage, feeling that their own goals would best be achieved if women had the vote. Many local Councils of Women were supporters, and the National Council of Women adopted its suffrage resolution in 1910. In rural areas Women's Institutes were often active.

There was support from men's groups as well. On the prairies the three provincial farmers' organizations were firm supporters. Organized labour (except the Catholic syndicates of Quebec) and individual Protestant clergymen often expressed their endorsement. Many newspapers gave their support too.

The work done by women during the war was the decisive factor. The federal Wartime Elections Act of 1917 gave the vote to women who had close relatives in the armed service. Complete enfranchisement for federal elections came in 1918. Five provinces had acted before the federal Government, however. Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta granted political equality in 1916, British Columbia and Ontario in 1917. The right to vote in provincial elections came in Nova Scotia in 1918, in New Brunswick in 1919, in Prince Edward Island in 1922. Newfoundland enfranchised its women in 1925. The women of Quebec did not have the vote in provincial elections until 1940.

What is Canada's Most Valuable Native Fruit?

The blueberry. It provides considerable revenue for all the Atlantic Provinces, Quebec and northern Ontario. Annual Canadian production, valued at more than $3,000,000, reaches some 18,000,000 pounds, of which two-thirds comes from Quebec. There is also a high-bush blueberry, not native to Canada, that is cultivated extensively in the Fraser Delta of British Columbia. This type is not hardy enough for commercial production in the central part of the country.

Will workers gain freedom?

Canadian workers were shocked by the actions of American union bosses when investigating committees dug up the ugly facts. Violence, misuse of funds, bribery — just about every imaginable misdemeanor had been charged against more than one top union official. Could Canadian unions, with head offices in the USA, be similarly dominated? Many a rank-and-file member began to take a sharp look at his union leadership.

The results of such a sharp examination of union leadership shows up in the daily news. There is a tremendous amount of dissatisfaction. To date, union bosses seem to be able to quell revolt and local insurgents quietly "resign" — but rank-and-file members notice and are disturbed. It is doubtful if union bosses will be able to continue to push membership around so easily from now on.

However, it takes tremendous courage on the part of a worker to criticize his union boss — particularly in an industry where there is a closed-shop arrangement. To lose his union card means to lose his livelihood. Most men think long and soberly before they take such a chance. Any mention of "the right to work" is highly unpopular at union meetings — at least, with union officials.

Another thing disturbs the Canadian union member — sometimes a member only because he is forced to be one in order to work at his job — and that is the way attempts are being made by leaders to force him to support political movements in which he has no faith.

Many workers are active in the Conservative or the Liberal parties. They do not relish being forced, by a career-socialist or career-communist boss in the union, to contribute part of their dues to support political candidates they personally oppose.

Perhaps all this discontent will come to nothing. Union officials have a pretty tight grip on the reins. They are patient, clever, and powerful. Nevertheless, when rank-and-file members are finally aroused, they can act very quickly. Recent events at Sudbury proved that in a time of crisis, rank-and-file members have the courage to make changes.

Perhaps the day is coming when union members will regain their freedom, and union leaders will work as servants rather than as bosses of the members who pay dues. That will be a great day in the history of Unionism in Canada.

What is a boner? It is supposed to be a student's answer to an examination question. Either a wrong interpretation of a word or a situation, or an ambiguous answer that might mean anything. Here are a few that I have collected, but I do not claim that any or all of them are real or fictional.

Renew campaign against sale of obscene literature

TO THE EDITOR

Lachute, April 10, 1959

For the past year or two, a campaign against obscene literature has been promoted all over this province. Most people are conscious that we need such a purging of newspapers, magazines, comics, etc. That is why our authorities, both civil and religious, have supported the effort, to safeguard the education of our children and the welfare of adult people.

Here in our town we have made some progress, but it is still evident that immoral literature can be procured in certain stores. Therefore a group of citizens intends to approach all news-stand proprietors and urge them to remove indecent magazines and books. During the week, such proprietors will be receiving an invitation to sign a written agreement to blacklist undesirable publications.

At the same time we ask all customers to respect this civic spirit and co-operation by the newsvendors. We hope the population will exert a united effort to curb obscene literature, for the good of our families and our community.

My thanks to The Watchman for the publication of this letter.

The common cold is obsolete. It is no use as a population control measure, because it doesn't kill people.

All a cold does is to make people miserable. If they feel miserable enough, it is true, they may hold still whole some other germ bites them. That was what Nature had in mind when she devised the common cold, I suppose.

But a lot of the germs that used to work with the common cold are too weak to stay on the team. Tuberculosis, pneumonia and polio, those old pros of the bacterial world, still claim their victims, just as an over-age pitcher continues to strike out a few men.

However, these germs are not what they used to be. They are getting wobbly, and they have trouble standing up to the power that the medical boys are bringing against them. Those germs are nearing the end of the trail. They're losing la grippe.

I suppose there is a certain pathos about these veteran germs being forced to admit, after so many years of loyal service, that they are too old for the game — being forced to yield their place to some upstart bush league disease.

And which one of the rookies diseases, I'd like to know, measures up to the old-timers, as they were in their prime?

Maybe we could enlist the aid of Dr. Brock Chisholm as a talent scout, to find some promising young micro-organisms. Dr. Chisholm is always reminding us that there are too many people in the world.

The cold germ hasn't the initiative to do much on its own. Nature intended it to play the part of those men who stick darts in the bull at a bullfight (to change the figure of speech). The cold softens the victim up for something more deadly.

Nowadays, however, the man with the sword is more sluggish in entering the ring. But the cold germs keep hanging around, pestering their victims with sniffles and chest pains, a bunch of half-witted picadors who have outstayed their usefullness. They are obsolete, but they don't know it.

That's how I view the situation, anyway. I have a bad cold. I feel too miserable to live, yet not quite miserable enough to perish. Come on, good old rabies, lock jaw or typhoid. Make one last, glorious return to the arena, and finish me off.

Recent marriage in Montreal

Strong — Savage

The marriage of Doreen Patricia, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. V. Savage, to Mr. Wyman Edgar Strong, of St. Laurent, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Strong, of Lachute, took place recently in Loyola Church, the Rev. Masterson officiating. Sprays of white pompoms arranged with greenery were used to decorate the church.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Ray Savage, was in a gown of pale blue lace over taffeta, fashioned with a fitted bodice having a wide cummerbund, and a full skirt having a scalloped hemline. Her short veil of tulle was held by a matching headdress, and she carried a bouquet of pink roses.

Mrs. Curt Dakin, as matron of honor, wore a gown of orchid nylon over taffeta, styled with fitted bodice and full, waltz-length skirt, and orchid-flowered bandeaux. She carried a bouquet of white carnations.

Mr. Angus Strong, brother of the groom, was best man, and the ushers were Mr. James Welden and Mr. George Savage.

Mrs. Strong, mother of the bridegroom, was in a gown of Dior blue crepe, and wore a navy blue straw hat, navy accessories and a corsage of red roses.

Among out-of-town guests were Mrs. W. T. Strong, of Winnipeg, Man., aunt of the groom; Miss Angela Sweeney, and Mr. Norman Savage, of Lapur, Mich.; Miss Katherine Hind, of Cornwall, Ont; Mr. and Mrs. Laurie Morrison, of Perth, Ont.

Election procedure changes this year in Brownsburg

Brownsburg — A change in the Village electoral timing, adopted by the local Council, is due to go into effect this year. The change provides for a mandate of three years in council and mayoral seats. Accordingly, the voters will be called upon to elect a mayor and entire council of six members, this current year.

Date prescribed for this big shuffle is Wednesday, May 13 next (nomination day), with contests the folowing Tuesday, 19th, if necessary.

In the following year, the Council will draw lots; two of those elected will end their term, and the electors will be called upon to fill the vacancies. In the following year, 1961, lots will be drawn again among the four remaining electees of 1959; two will be retired and the same procedure will be followed. . . In this manner two aldermanic terms will expire each year, and the mayoral mandate will terminate every three years. Next replacement for mayor will therefore be due in 1962.

That Frances Archer and Beverly Gile (appearing at the Community Concert here this Saturday) have gone far in their profession, is evidenced by glowing critical notices from papers large and small throughout the country and their personal popularity with audiences who delight in their obvious love of singing.

The Misses Archer and Gile first joined musical forces in 1950 when they were members of a quintet of girl singers who appeared in many famous night clubs and major theatres throughout the United States and Canada. Both young ladies were serious students of singing, and both were eager to prove themselves. The happy discovery that their voices blended particularly well, set them to searching for songs in which they could merge their talents and bring to audiences a sense of their own love of music. Beverly's guitar (which she could not then play but which made an impressive piece of luggage) gave them a clue to their future. Both loved folk music. Their path was clear. Beverly learned to play her guitar, and Frances searched about for suitable songs. The team of Archer and Gile was born.

Firmly established today as particularly bright stars in their chosen field, the team of Archer and Gile has also been recognized by mass media as "sure-fire entertainment".

Folk songs of many lands

Two attractive young artists are booked to appear at the Community Concert here Saturday, April 18, at 8.30 p.m. in Lachute High School. Frances Archer, soprano, and Beverly Gile, contralto, excell in the field of folk music from every part of the world. These attractive young artists compliment each other to perfection, musically and interpretively.

Always on the lookout for new songs to add to their already extensive repertoire Frances Archer and Beverly Gile (who also plays the guitar) have become widely known through national television appearances and their recent recordings for Disneyland.

With their good looks, charming stage presence, original musical arrangements and lovely voices, Frances Archer and Beverly Gile will present a delightful and memorable evening for Community Concert subscribers here this Saturday.

For Parents Only . . .

A Weekly Feature of Helpful Hints on Child Training.

Phone courtesy

— By NANCY CLEAVER —

When you use the telephone do you know that it is only one of about 4,500,000 phones in Canada? This is one for every 3.6 persons, a ratio exceeded only by United States and Sweden. The average calls per Canadian annually is 483, the average per telephone 1,726. The estimated number of calls in a recent year was over seven and three quarter billion!

No mother can disregard training her child in the use of the phone and this should begin at an early age. Her own example from day to day as she talks on the phone will color her child's ideas. Courtesy and rudeness in conversation are as catching as measles!

If small Jean hears mummy talking in a pleasant, low, distinct voice, with an occasional "please" and "thank-you," this child will conclude this is the right way to talk. But if when phoning, her mother is abrupt almost rude, if she gossips at length, before very long Jean will be copying this way of talking.

Mothers are sometimes surprised and hurt when they discover their child telling a lie. They often forget that "the little white lie" a boy or girls has heard his mother tell over the phone puts the stamp of approval on getting out of the unpleasant situation or an unwanted invitation by this means.

Children should not be allowed to make themselves a nuisance by answering the phone or insisting on talking to a stranger who is in a hurry and wants to speak to the parent.

The requests for new phones often outrun the supply and many families must be content with a party line who would prefer a private one. Do teach children to be polite, and use the "Golden Rule" in the use of a line shared with another home!

A fond grandmother or aunt living in the same city can help a child become accustomed to the phone, and also to speak clearly, by talking to him at a time when the phone is not in demand by others.

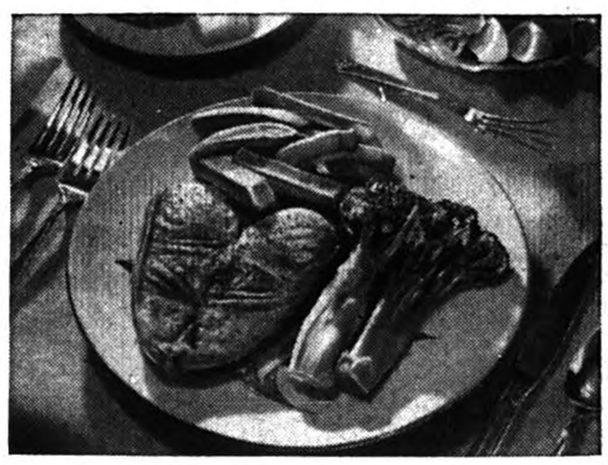

Mother should show a child how to hold the phone and see that the mouthpiece is the right distance—about an inch from the lips.

In a home where there are teenage boys and girls who are going to school or starting to work the use of the phone is often a contentious issue. Once "dating age" arrives, communication is bound to be very popular. When a child has reached adolescence it is a bit late to try to change his telephone habits.

The different members of the family should have a Family Council and come to a reasonable agreement on the length of a telephone conversation, the number of outgoing calls during the "rush hour," and taking turns in the use of the phone. Here is one place where democracy can be at work in the home in incorporating consideration and efficiency in the use of one piece of equipment which is important to each person in the family.

Children as they grow older should also have a purpose for a phone call, not just "putting in time." The telephone is a responsibility, a privilege, and also an opportunity for business and social conversation.

What is your child learning from you about telephone etiquette? How does your boy or girl "rate" in his or her "telephone manners"?

Broiled Halibut Steaks

Most women are aware what a big difference the "little touches" make in a room or on a costume. Let's just transpose this idea to the preparation of meals. Often the transformation from the sad to the sparkling . . . the prosaic to the peppy . . . takes only a few minutes. The results are highly gratifying to the cook. Unlike the mere words usually employed to pay a compliment, the flattery takes on a more tangible form. Clean plates at the end of the meal are proof positive that your ingenuity has been appreciated.

The recipe for Broiled Halibut Supreme couldn't be much simpler; yet it satisfies all the requisites for a flavorful meal. Halibut Steaks are easy on the budget, high in nutritional value, kind to the figure. And perhaps most important of all, a few quickie touches turn them into as delectable a dish as one could desire. The succulent flavor of this dish comes from brushing the steaks with French dressing, salt, pepper and dried or fresh parsley, before popping them into the oven. When they are cooked sprinkle the steaks with lemon juice to bring out the full flavor. Serve them with a colorful vegetable, such as broccoli, and a tomato salad.

Broiled Halibut Supreme

1½ to 2 pounds halibut steaks at least 1-inch thick, ¼ cup French dressing, salt and pepper, 3 tablespoons finely minced parsley, and juice of one lemon.

Preheat broiler and grease broiling pan. Place steaks on pan. Brush on half the French dressing; sprinkle with salt and pepper and half the parsley. Broil about five minutes; then turn and sprinkle with remaining French dressing, salt, pepper and parsley. Broil another five minutes, or until fish flakes easily when tested with a fork. (Allow ten minutes cooking time per inch thickness of fish). Sprinkle with lemon juice and serve immediately. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

A dish with dash

Spring is one of the most beautiful seasons of the year in Canada. But since it is a time of transition from winter into summer, it can be rather trying too. In most areas of the country outdoor sports enthusiasts are at an impasse, and women are puzzling over what to wear. Meanwhile, the cook in the family is looking for interesting dishes to lighten the weary mood and brighten the table.

Curried Egg Croquettes are a savory solution to the problem. They are different from the conventional bill of fare, and they have enough zing to spark suddenly finicky appetites. They're easy to prepare too. There's no need to make a cream sauce base because bread crumbs act as a thickening agent. These delicious croquettes fry to a crisp, golden brown and are at their best when accompanied to the table by chutney or a suitable hot sauce. Serve them with a green vegetable and a color-bright salad, for either lunch of dinner.

Curried Egg Croquettes

Yield — 4 servings

4 Eggs, ¼ cup chopped onion, ½ teaspoon curry powder, 2 tablespoons butter or margarine, 3 cups lightly-packed coarse soft bread crumbs, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, 3 tablespoons chopped fresh parsley, or 1 tablespoon dried parsley, ½ cup milk.

Hard-cook, shell and chop eggs. Combine onion and curry powder; fry slowly in a large pan in butter or margarine until onion is tender but not browned. Prepare breadcrumbs; sprinkle with salt, pepper, parsley and milk. Combine well. Mix in chopped hard-cooked eggs. Cool. Shape the mixture into 8 small croquettes. Fry in deep fat heated to 390°F. or in a little heated butter or margarine until golden, turning once. Serve hot with a celery-soup sauce or pass chutney.

Fashions

This spring, fashion is frosted over with much organdie. This pleasing frock, suitable for graduation and for dance dates later, has appliqued daisies at the neck, sleeves and hem. Bands of pin tucks lend emphasis to the fully gathered skirt.

Deplores demand for possessions

Ottawa — (CP) — A Toronto rabbi has criticized women who try to "keep up with the Joneses."

Dr. Stuart E. Rosenberg of the Beth Tzedec congregation told members of the National Council of Jewish Women that by prodding their husbands to acquire more material possessions they are pushing them toward "great self-destruction."

He said men become so busy providing for their families that they often forget their children exist.

He urged Jewish women to be heroines in their own home.

"Go back to your homes," he said. "Start making a schedule. Tell your husbands, there are books to be read, songs to be sung and dreams to be dreamed."

ROYAL WEDDING

Japan rejoiced over a history-making marriage last week — the union of 25-year-old Crown Prince Akihito and Michito Shoda, beautiful 24-year-old commoner he met during a tennis game. The daughter of a wealthy flour miller one day will share the ancient throne.

LONG SERVICE

Stanstead, Que. — (CP) — Arthur C. Cowles, 90, retired as president of the Derby Line National Bank after 69 years' service. He started as a clerk in 1890.

STILL BEHIND

Prince Feorge, B.C. — (CP) — A new 125-bed hospital here will not be completed until September, but already plans are being made for a 40-bed extension.

On the Parisienne Scene

High fashion experts finally agree

Wonderful news . . . at last fashion experts are unanimous in their choice of the most glamorous creation of the year. It's the most exciting new look in ages . . . the 1959 Pontiac Parisienne! Daring Twin-Grilles are the focal point of this beauty—the lines are crisp, clean, fresh as a daisy. The rear deck is sculptured out to give a lower, sleeker look. Glass area goes up and down and all around—lets you watch all the heads turning as you sweep by. Interiors? Fabulous! Pontiac takes fine materials, dyes them all the colors of a summer sunset—mixes and matches them in the most exciting color trims and combinations of the year. How marvellous to show your new spring outfit off in interiors like these. And just to show you it's a woman's world, try driving this car. It's effortless—you float along.

A flick of the wrist and you're round the corner. A touch of your toe and you stop smoothly, steadily, surely. The Parisienne matches your love of luxury, flatters your fashion sense. Drive the Pontiac Parisienne soon. It does more for you than a hundred new hats.

Bread and fishes interesting meal

This isn't a parable, despite its title. It has no moral, but it suggests that the food dollar may be stretched by serving a good quality protein food which is low in cost.

Many varieties of fish are an economical source of high-grade protein. Did you know that at present price levels, Canadian sardines are one of the lowest priced protein foods on the market? These savoury little fish are readily available in cans at most grocery stores. Though low in cost, they are high in food value and flavour appeal.

Bread is also a nourishing, low-cost food. In the recipes which follow, the home economists of Canada's Department of Fisheries show different ways in which bread and Canadian sardines may be combined to give a hearty, satisfying, hot luncheon or supper dish.

Sardine Fondue

2 (3¼ oz.) Cans Canadian sardines, 2 cups milk, 3 tablespoons butter or other fat, 1 cup granulated Cheddar cheese, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, 3 cups soft bread crumbs, 3 eggs separated.

Drain sardines and break into pieces. Scald milk in the top of a double boiler. Add butter and cheese; heat and stir until melted. Stir in seasonings and bread crumbs. Remove from heat and add unbeaten egg yolks and sardines. Beat egg whites until stiff but not dry; fold into mixture. Combine ingredients lightly but thoroughly. Turn into a greased 1½ quart casserole. Bake in a moderate oven (350°F.) for about 40 minutes or until set and lightly browned. Serve immediately. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Sardines Poulette

1 (3¼ oz.) Can Canadian sardines, 2 tablespoons butter of other fat, 2 tablespoons flour, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 cup milk, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, 2 hard-cooked eggs, chopped, 2 slices bread, toasted, paprika, parsley (optional).

Drain sardines and warm in a skillet. Melt butter; blend in flour and salt. Add milk gradually. Cook, stirring constantly until thickened. Add lemon juice and chopped egg. Place heated sardines on toast slices. Top with the sauce. Garnish each serving with a sprinkling of paprika and, if desired, a sprig of parsley. Makes 2 servings.

Sardine French Toast Sandwiches

2 (3¼ oz.) Cans Canadian sardines, 8 slices bread, 1 cup grated, old Cheddar cheese, 2 tablespoons finely chopped onion, 1 egg, beaten, ½ cup milk, ½ teaspoon salt, butter or other fat.

Drain sardines. Slit lengthwise and open out. Cover 4 slices of bread with the fish. Sprinkle with cheese and onions. Top with remaining bread slices; lightly press each sandwich together. Combine egg, milk and salt in a shallow dish. Quickly dip sandwiches on both sides in mixture. Fry in a small amount of fat in a very hot pan, turning until brown on both sides. Serve piping hot. Makes 4 servings.

For Winter-Weary Spirits . . .

Here's A Spring Treat

Spring is here! Pleasant balmy days are here, and there are signs of green grass and peeping flowers. All giving a new lift to "winter-weary" spirits.

Appetites, too, can be sparked with a "spring-like" flavor treat. Penny Franks and Noodles sauced with V-8. The wonderful blend of eight garden-fresh vegetables in V-8 juice . . . tomatoes, carrots, celery, beets, parsley, lettuce, spinach, and watercress . . . gives a long cooked flavor to this easy top-of-stove dish. Perfect for Spring living.

Along with the sparkling skillet dish, serve a fresh fruit salad. Then, for dessert surprise the family with home-made chocolate cake and a beverage of their choice. It's happy eating!

PENNY FRANKS WITH NOODLES

½ cup chopped onion
½ cup chopped celery
3 tablespoons butter or margarine
3 cups V-8
6 frankfurters, cut in ¼-inch slices
4 ounces (1½ to 2 cups) medium-wide noodles
½ teaspoon salt
¾ cup shredded process cheese

Cook onion and celery in butter in heavy frying pan about 5 minutes. Stir in remaining ingredients, except cheese. Cover tightly. Cook over medium heat, stirring often, about 20 minutes or until noodles are tender. Sprinkle cheese over top; cook until just melted. Makes 4 servings.

If desired, after noodles are tender, transfer mixture to an ovenproof casserole. Sprinkle cheese on top; broil until lightly browned.

SELF-SERVICE

Nanaimo, B.C. — (CP) — The British Columbia Hotelmen's Association said they might start a self-service system in some Vancouver Island beer parlors if bartenders do not modify their wage demands. They ask a 40 per cent wage boost.

Calgary artist is prospector in North areas

She has worked in a Vancouver drugstore dispensing drugs, operated an interior decorating and antique shop in Victoria and travelled through northern B.C., Alberta and the Northwest Territories prospecting.

"Prospecting is the life for me," the energetic brunette said. "There is nothing like it."

"It is the element of chance which makes it so fascinating. My husband, Ronald, who is a prospector for Noranda Mines, and myself have made money this way — but we have sunk a lot into the ground too."

One exciting experience was when she was faced with the prospect of fighting a forest fire. Directly in its path, she and her husband helped fight it for a week.

"People in the north see things differently," she said. "They are interested in one thing — survival —not keeping up with the Joneses."

She says they have used every means of travel from husky dogs and snowshoes to horses and foot. "One can travel a good 12 miles a day on foot."

When Mr. Dale, an active prospector, is travelling his wife settles down in a city or town, preferably close to where he is working, and checks claims and prepares for the next trip.

"We live for the summer when we can once again prospect. As soon as we get enough money for the trip and the season is right, we pick our spot and go," said Mrs. Hale.

Begonias for shady places

Ottawa — The tuberous begonia is one of the most satisfactory flowering plants for use in shady places. An ideal location is where they are exposed to the morning sun, but screened from the noonday sun by the branches of trees or shrubs or by a building.

Out in the open, without shade, foliage is frequently scorched by the sun.

Tuberous begonias require a mellow type of soil, rich in organic matter and well provided with drainage. Ordinary garden loam, a liberal dressing of an inch or more of sharp gritty sand, and three or four inches of well rotted leaf mold or horticultural peat will provide a suitable type of soil. This should be thoroughly dug to a depth of about six inches.

Begonia plants, ready to set out in the garden, may be purchased from growers and garden supply houses towards the end of May or early June, after danger of frost is over. Many home gardeners, however, prefer to grow their own plants in the house. In the home with south or southeast windows, it is not advisable to start the tubers before the beginning of April.

Tubers should be started by setting them with the concave or flat side up in a garden flat or planting box that holds two or more inches of damp, firmly packed peat or sphagnum moss. This flat box should be placed in a warm location with bottom heat, if possible, for a couple of weeks or until the tubers develop a small root system and make some top growth. Then they should be carefully removed from the flat and individually potted into 4-inch clay or fibre pots, using a fibrous sand compost.

When there is no further risk of frost, plants may be set out in the garden or flower bed. If clay pots are used, remove the plants from the pots with the ball of roots and place deep enough to cover the tuber with about one inch of soil. When planting, the lower leaf should face the front of the bed and plants spaced about eighteen inches apart. If plants are crowded, the control of mildew in periods of humid weather is more difficult.

The pendulous-type begonias are recommended for hanging baskets on the north or east side of the house.

M.P.P. TRACKS DOWN OBSCENE LITERATURE

Crusading Liberal Ontario MPP Ross Whicher went on a store-by-store search for "Yankee trash" magazines in Toronto recently. The ones he found were so offensive to him he covers them here with a newspaper. One surprise he said, was that magazines from the U.K., like the one inset, were "even more disgusting" than the U.S. variety. He laid a charge of distributing obscene literature against one Toronto store owner.

This minister of health and welfare insists on—
The large economy size

Mother, as the family minister of health and welfare, knows the value of vitamins. She also knows that they cost money. So she has an eagle eye for the large economy size in vitamins, and many other things, when she shops. This way she keeps the family budget in line.

The Minister of Health and Welfare at Ottawa has a budget too. He uses it to pay for various important services. Among these are Family Allowances and Old Age Benefits.

Money for the Minister of Health and Welfare's budget comes through the Minister of Finance. This is true of other departments also.

It's no secret how the Minister of Finance obtains this money. He gets it largely in taxes from millions of Canadians like you. If he spends more than he gets from you, he must turn around and borrow from you the amount he has overspent . . . or else create new money.

The creation of new money is one factor that leads to inflation — when the dollar buys less and less. So, as a thrifty Canadian, you are wise to ask government only for those services you are willing to pay for . . . with taxes.

Personally, you try to pay as you go, to live within your income. It is important that government try to do the same thing.

You want to live well now and to realize all your ambitions for the best possible future. That future is tied up with a sound dollar — a dollar whose purchasing power you can depend on.

A SOUND DOLLAR MEANS
A BETTER LIFE FOR YOU

Protection

...at your fingertips

The first aid kit and insurance both have important roles to play in the event of accidents.

Each year, the companies writing accident and sickness insurance in Canada pay out more than ninety million dollars (not including automobile accident costs) to policyholders—a mighty bulwark against unusual financial strain.

It is far better, though, to prevent accidents and mishaps, rather than to deal with the treatment of their serious—and often tragic—after-effects. That is why insurance companies are constantly seeking ways to stem Canada's mounting accident toll.

Safety pays dividends . . . saves lives, helps to lower your insurance costs. Be Careful.

More trouble with Doukhobors

Ottawa — (CP) — Enraged Sons of Freedom turned on three RCMP officers seeking information about a new Freedomite school at Krestova, B.C., last week and drove them from the community with a barrage of eggs, rocks and mud. The disorder apparently was started by women, one of whom pummelled an officer with her fists.

No arrests were made, and police withdrew in their spattered cruiser. They had been apparently sent to interview officials of the school, one of four recently opened by the turbulent minority Doukhobor sect. The Sons of Freedom has asked that 100 Freedomite children at a provincial dormitory school at New Denver be released on the understanding they attend the new schools.

The Sons of Freedom at a Krestova meeting a week earlier had presented to RCMP officers a brief indicating that they no longer want to migrate to Russia. Federal and provincial authorities had agreed to assist such a migration, but apparently the Sons had failed to get assurance from Russia that they would be admitted.

ON WATER OR ON LAND, STATION WAGON CARRIES ITS OWNER TO ADVENTURE

Probably Canada's only sea-going station wagon is owned by Lionel Forge, an international adventurer who is now living in Toronto. In his unusual vehicle, a remodelled army surplus duck bought for $300 without motor, Forge can travel as easily on water as on land. To make sleeping room for himself and two companions, he added a station wagon top. In it he intends to travel through the jungles of South America this summer, where he plans to do movies and stills of underwater subjects of archeological interest. Forge lives for thrills and travel. In France he was a parachutist. He was an internationally known figure skater and is an expert skin diver.

Tips on Touring

By Carol Lane

Women's Travel Authority

In February, you probably figured April would never come — but here it is, bringing the promise of warmer weather ahead. And now's the time to prepare your car for it.

Have your service station dealer:

1. Drain winter oil from the crank-case, and put in heavier oil.
2. Check the oil filter; replace if necessary.
3. Give car thorough lubrication.
4. Drain antifreeze, flush the radiator and check hose connections for leaks. Refill radiator with fresh water and add rust inhibitor.
5. Check spark plugs, points, ignition timing, carburetor, fuel pump and air filter.
6. Check tires for worn treads, cuts, abrasions. Make sure they're rotated at least every 5,000 miles.
7. Check entire electrical system. (It's probably been used plenty in cold weather, after-dark driving.)
8. Look at the fluid in the automatic transmission.
9. Give car thorough washing to take away any traces of salt or other corrosive residue used in snow removal. Then wax.
10. You're set for summer. Drive carefully — have fun!

Constructive ideas for Library Week

(Quebec Women's Institutes)

We are asked to observe Canadian Library Week April 12-18. Many children start reading books when they are very young and never stop, while others need some encouragement, but all should develop the habit. It is hard to imagine what those adults do with too much spare time in old age, or sickness, who have never learned to lose themselves in printed words. They tell us that means a large percentage of the people of Canada What can we do about it? It may be too late for the adults, but it certainly isn't for the children.

In some large centres in Canada such as Toronto and London, the library has become a community centre for the arts, where there are art classes, music recitals and drama groups besides reading. More and more small towns are opening libraries, and in the rural communities there are the bookmobiles that travel incessantly through the countryside bringing books to places too small for libraries. Books may also be borrowed by mail.

Goal unlimited in Cancer drive this month

There is no ceiling on the amount of money needed to fight cancer according to an official of the Canadian Cancer Society.

In a statement issued at campaign headquarters here, a spokesman said "We plan to have a target to shoot at here during the April drive, but it will be a minimum one. There will be no maximum goal."

The canvass in this community has been set for April 27, in the form of a "blitz" appeal to all local residents.

"The public must face the fact of the emergency nature of the cancer problem so that it can accept the full responsibility of supplying the resources needed to deal with it. You can't fix a dollar ceiling on the lives of some 45,000 men, women and children, who develop cancer each year."

It would be unrealistic to fix a ceiling for research funds at a time when there is new hope and many research needs are unmet, the Society spokesman said. "Today there is hope; cancer research is on the march. The world never before has seen so many brilliant minds employed on a single problem. The Canadian Cancer Society is supporting leading scientists in research centres throughout the country. Many other scientists, including young scientists trained since the war, have asked for Society support but funds are not presently available.

"There is a feeling of urgency in the scientific community with the cancer problem that is new and unique. Enough of the dust of the ages of ignorance has been swept away to reveal the scope and size of the cancer problem — and how it may well be solved.

"It is not very realistic to put a ceiling on dollars needed for cancer when 22,000 Canadians, men, women and children, die of the disease each year. Reduction of this loss of life is possible now. In view of what we know and can do about cancer, we should be saving a life of one cancer patient in every two. But we fall short of this potential because existing medical knowledge and resources are not used to the fullest. Saving these lives is much more important than putting a ceiling on dollars needed for cancer.

"Placing the objectives in human terms rather than dollar terms carries with it the full and true meaning of the April Crusade against cancer."

Have You A Question on UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE OR EMPLOYMENT?

In this column we publish questions about unemployment insurance and employment, together with answers received from the Unemployment Insurance Commission.

If you are uncertain about any point do not hesitate to send us your question. We will obtain an answer and publish it in this column.

Following are some questions with answers which may be of interest to you:

Q. The plant where I work is adopting a Guaranteed Annual Wage Plan. Will this affect my right to draw unemployment insurance?

A. This will depend entirely on the terms of the plan.

Q. Does an employee lose his right to benefit if, after contributing for some time, he becomes not insurable because he is over the ceiling?

A. No. His rights are protected in any case for a further period of two years. It is also open to him, provided he has made at least 30 weekly contributions in the two years immediately preceding, to elect to continue as an insured person. (In such case his employer can require him to pay both the employer's and the employee's portion of the contributions.

Q. I have been looking for work in another city. Can I draw benefit for days when I am out of town?

A. You should first inform the local office to which you are reporting of your wish to go out of town. The payment of benefit for the period you are absent will depend on your being able to return promptly in the event that work is found for you. You are reminded, however, of the service provided by local offices which have full knowledge of the labour market in almost every part of the country. It is suggested that you enquire of your local office about work opportunities in the area to which you propose going. By doing so, you might save yourself considerable expense.

Q. I am a laborer. During the summer I work on the farm, in winter time I work in the bush. I am paying unemployment insurance contributions, but this work is seasonal in nature and I am not able to work long enough to be able to draw benefits. Have I the right to ask the farmer, in summer, to pay unemployment insurance contributions when I am willing to pay my share?

A. No. Work on the farm is not insurable and contributions cannot be paid for work done there. If you become unemployed in the period January to mid-April any year, you might be entitled to seasonal benefit for which the number of contributions required is considerably lower than for regular benefit. Enquire at your local office should you become unemployed in the period mentioned.

Q. I am working for a contractor in a sawmill. I work ten hours a day and my salary is $5 for ten hours. I eat at home and it costs me $2. To what denomination of stamps am I entitled?

A. The value of the stamp to which you are entitled will depend upon the amount you earn each week. If you work five days in a week and earn $25, you will be entitled to a 60 cent weekly stamp. If you are on a six day work week and earn $30, you will be entitled to a 72 weekly stamp.

Q. Is unemployment insurance payable to a young man of 17 who has paid 25 weekly contributions while employed by United Fishermen of Gaspe and who goes to college in his parish after the fishing season?

A. A person must be available for employment in order to be entitled to benefit. You have apparently withdrawn from the labour market in order to attend college and would not, therefore, be considered as available for employment or entitled to benefit while attending college.

Kale grown for early Spring use

Kale, a popular boiling green for northern gardens, is well adapted to soils that produce good cabbage. It has a spinach-like taste.

Leaves are used for home use. For market the entire plant is cut. This vegetable can be stored in the deep freeze or left in the garden throughout the winter and picked as required. Leaves are improved by freezing.

The variety "Curled Scotch" was grown at the Fort Vermilion Experimental Farm in Northern Alberta in 1958 and proved to be a favorite green for early spring use. When transplanted on May 15 it was ready for table use on June 15. Plants seeded in the open on May 15 were edible on July 26. Rows spaced 30 inches apart with 18 inch spacings between plants seemed most satisfactory.

Federal expert forecasts cattle prospects as being excellent

What about the future for Canadian cattlemen? "Definitely good", says Ralph K. Bennett, chief, merchandising section livestock division, Canada Department of Agriculture.

Canadian cattle prices are tied closely to prices in the United States, he says, and in that country they are expected to remain as high this year as in 1958. Last year Canada exported the equivalent of nearly 700,000 head to the U.S.; about one-quarter of total marketing.

any severe drop for at least two years. He points out that the next build-up in cattle numbers may come in 1961, but more likely in 1962 or 1963.

Moreover, the rapid increase in human population on the North American continent — about 3½ million more people each year— should provide a ready market for vast quantities of beef.

Last year United States purchases included 460,000 head of feeder cattle from Canada and all evidence points to a sizeable export again this year.

An upsurge in demand for Canadian feeders began after the severe drought was broken in the south western United States in the spring of 1957. The ranchers in that area have been buying in cattle to restock their ranges. This phase may be over now, says Mr. Bennett, but supplies of corn are very high in the United States so there is certain to be a good demand for feeders again this year.

This means that the price for feeder cattle will be determined by what Americans are willing to pay for them. If feeders are brought from the west into Ontario, then the price paid in the west will have to be the equivalent of what the Americans figure they are worth to go south into their feed lots.

Enzymes pep feed utilization

In the field of animal and poultry feeds, use of enzymes looms as a major step forward.

Enzymes accelerate the transformation of material in plants and animals.

It has been proved that enzymes improve the utilization of some secondary grains, and research work is continuing.

An early discovery was that a simple water treatment of barley improved its utilization by chicks and that the addition of a fungal enzyme preparation brought about a similar improvement.

R. E. Smith, Canada Department of Agriculture nutritionist, reports that tests at the Nappan, N.S., Experimental Farm showed water soaking of rye significantly improved its feeding value. Various enzyme supplements were also fed with beneficial results. Enzymes most favorable were of the amylase group.

A recent disclosure is that a mixture of enzymes, rather than any specific enzyme, brings about the greatest response. The specific fraction or fractions of the grain being altered by these enzymes, to cause the improvement utilization by poultry, is unknown. Considerably more basic research is needed to determine the mechanisms of enzyme action.

EFFICIENT FEEDING AND LIVESTOCK MANAGEMENT

By Dr. Gustav Bohstedt
Emeritus Professor of Animal Husbandry
University of Wisconsin

Trust A Hog For Balancing His Ration

Pigs are the most food-wise animals on the farm. Hundreds of feeding tests in which pigs could select their feeds cafeteria style have shown that they pick a remarkably correct proportion of protein and carbohydrates. Give them access to, separately, ground limestone, steamed bope meal, and salt, and again these smart pigs, guided by a physiological hunger, select about the right amount of each to avoid nutritional deficiencies. What's more, a pig when self-fed, is not apt to suffer from founder, colic, or other digestive upsets. All this cannot be said with the same assurance of horses, sheep, or cattle.

Dr. Bohstedt

But while a pig is a good nutritionist, he is not necessarily a good economist. By that is meant that if sugar tasted better to him than corn, he would pay no attention to the price but eat as he felt like doing. The same with dried skim milk as compared with tankage.

Also, it has been found that when having free access, along with corn, to straight soybean oil meal of the toasted or roasted kind, a pig will like it so much as to eat much more than is necessary to balance his ration.

So it has been found necessary to mix an inhibitor with the oil meal which at the same time will add essential nutrients to the ration as a whole. Thus ground limestone and a suitable phosphate, also salt, serve this purpose. Usually trace mineralized salt (in case of special need, high-zinc trace mineralized salt) completes the necessary minerals. The entire mineral mixture may amount to five or six per cent of the oil meal.

Another helpful and even necessary ingredient where pigs are off pasture, is alfalfa meal, or finely ground leafy alfalfa hay, perhaps 15 to 20 per cent by weight mixed with the oil meal. This supplies carotene or provitamin-A, also other vitamins and nutritional principles that greatly improve the nutrition of the pig.

If this should be sun-cured hay, it will have the rickets preventing vitamin D. In any event, for indoor or dry-lot feeding it may be desirable or necessary to add from one to two pounds of irradiated yeast to a ton of the mineral-alfalfa meal fortified soybean oil meal that is to serve as a supplement to corn or other farm grain.

Modern hog rations also make use of antibiotics, more during early life of the pig than later. Manufacturers furnish their own directions as to dosage.

Question: Where cows are chewing boards and lick soil at this time of year, what does it indicate?

Answer: It may not prove anything but that they like a bit of variety in their diet after a long winter. But again it may mean that they crave certain minerals, whether phosphorus or cobalt, or salt. Hence it is good practice to provide bone meal or other phosphate, and trace mineral salt.

Few lawn seeds suitable to district climate

When you reach out for that cheapest package of grass seed for the lawn, remember that fewer than 20 grasses of 4,500 species in the world are suitable for Eastern Canadian lawn purposes.

The reminder is issued by J. H. Boyce of Forage Crops Division of the Canada Department of Agriculture who deplores the tendency to go for the cheapest seed. He says the saving of a few cents at the sowing stage can lead to the loss of many dollars in renovation costs at a later date.

Recommended for eastern lawns are Kentucky blue grass (both commercial and Merion), rough-stalked blue grass, creeping red fescue, Chewings fescue and some of the bent grasses, notably colonial. Reputable seed firms sell mixtures of these durable species and Mr. Boyce estimates that by paying perhaps an average of $10 more to seed a lawn with good seed, considerable cost is saved in later maintenance and renovation.

the myth of "greater selection out of town"

The dictionary defines a myth as "a thing whose existence is imaginary." And nothing is more imaginary than the idea that if you shop in some BIG CITY many miles from here you will have a wider choice of merchandise than in our local stores.

True, the metropolitan stores may show more individual items, but they're more of the same! In some cases they may not even have as much variety as your hometown merchants.

And when it comes to style, our storekeepers are just as up to the minute as their big-town brethren. That's because they send buyers to the same markets! The big stores have no monopoly on sources of supply.

When you compare local prices with those of out-of-town stores, don't forget what it costs you in gasoline, oil, car depreciation, parking fees and other expenses when you drive long distances. What might seem like a saving often turns into a loss.

HERE'S HOW YOU BENEFIT BY DOING ALL YOUR SHOPPING LOCALLY

1. HONEST VALUES
2. AMPLE SELECTION
3. INSTANT DELIVERY, SERVICE AND ADJUSTMENT
4. MORE PERSONAL AND FRIENDLIER TREATMENT
5. SAVING OF TIME
6. RELIEF FROM COSTLY TRAVEL
7. FREEDOM FROM ROAD HAZARDS

Masked gunmen held up manager, robbed bank

About 1.30 a.m. last Friday five armed and masked men broke into the home of Jacques Castonguay, manager of the Banque Canadienne Nationale at Ste. Scholastique, waking Mrs. Castonguay. As she went to investigate the noise the five men surrounded her and forced her to return to the bedroom, where they awakened her husband.

Mr. Castonguay was forced to lead the men into the bank which adjoins his home, but explained that he knew only the combination to one side of the bank's vault. The other combination he told the men, was known only by his cashier.

The men first bound and gagged the Castonguays then brought in safe cracking tools and worked on the vault.

During the following three hours the thugs managed to open only part of the safe. Apparently their torch plugged, or they ran short of acetylene. However, the men took between $6,000 and $8,000. Efforts to open the other half and a number of safety deposit boxes failed.

The gang fled at 4.30 a.m. leaving the safe cracking tools plus an amount of scorched currency behind.

An hour later the Castonguays managed to free themselves and ran to a neighbor, Dr. Paul Simard, who notified Provincial Police.

It is the second time in eight years that this bank manager has been the victim of a hold-up.

5-Year sentence for abducting police officer

L'Orignal, Ont. — Two Ottawa district men were sentenced to five years in Kingston penitentiary by Justice J. L. Wilson at the Prescott-Russell assizes last week.

Joseph G. A. B. Foley, formerly of Ottawa and now of Toronto, and Willard Allan Cole, formerly of Smiths Falls and now of New York, were convicted by a jury of abducting Constable J. A. Warner of the Hawkesbury detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police.

Stage set for Cancer 'blitz' to take place Monday night

Plans are well laid for a complete coverage in the Argenteuil Canadian Cancer Society campaign now under way. Monday, April 27, is specifically planned as "blitz" day in Lachute, and householders will be contacted throughout the town area that evening.

At a meeting of the captains of the canvass held last Monday evening in the Town Hall, Phil Tremblay, chairman of organization, gave each captain the required kits for their volunteer canvassers.

"While speaking of volunteers," he continued, "we would like to mention the faithful weekly workers of the Cancer Dressing Service in Lachute, Brownsburg and St. Andrews who, since January of this year, have made over 27,000 dressings. These, as you know, are given out free to those suffering with cancer."

Renfrew finals next stop for 3 young orators

Lachute's young public speakers — those who won the Lions Club local contest and proceeded successfully through the district eliminations at St. Lambert on April 11 — came through again in the semi-finals at St. Barnabas Church hall in St. Lambert last Saturday. The triumphant trio, protégés of Lions' committeeman Gérard Lefebvre, are Miss Rolande Gauthier, of St. Alexandre School, Miss Lois Silverson and Roland Gow, both of Lachute High School, who all ranked first in their respective classes.

This promising trio from Lachute will next proceed to the Quebec Ontario finals of the Lions Club public speaking contest, to be held May 2 in Renfrew, Ont. Mr. Lefebvre will again accompany the local entrants.

In these finals, another successful competitor to emerge from the Zone A8 (Districts 12-19) competetions, will be Claude Denault of St. Johns, who won the class for French-speaking boy orators.

Air Cadet Week to be marked by local squadron

Air Cadet Week will be observed here from April 26 to May 2 — according to Claude Tessier, chairman of the civil committee sponsoring the Ayersville Air Cadets Squadron 648. The idea behind the demonstration is to enlist public support and co-operation in this movement.

Inaugurated in Ayersville last year Squadron 648 has 75 well-trained youths on its membership roll, three officers, four instructors, a chaplain and a physician. Pupils from eighth grade up, in Ayersville, Lachute and Brownsburg schools, are in the present membership.

During Air Cadet Week a father-and-son banquet will be held at the Clément School. There will be a street parade of Cadets in Brownsburg on Sunday morning, and a financial appeal will be conducted on behalf of the squadron.

Every year 80 Cadets are privileged to attend camp and others are selected to go on air trips across the border and abroad. Last year 18 boys from the local squadron enjoyed two weeks in camp at Clinton, Ont. Another 20 or so will go to camp this summer.

The Air Cadet organization in Canada has a total enrolment of 24,000.

Career topics by 3 speakers at local Home-School session

Lachute Home and School Association met in the Music Room of Lachute High School on Tuesday, April 14, under the chairmanship of Mr. Ken Riley.

Mr. Geo. Rodgers presented the slate of officers for 1959-60, the principals being — President, Mr. G. Pride; 1st vice-president, Mrs. J. Thorpe; 2nd vice-president, Mr. T. Porter; recording sec., Mrs. S. Milnes; correspondence sec., Mrs. G. Tabrett; treasurer, Mr. R. McElroy; program chairman, Mr. P. Aitken.

Mr. Riley then called on Mrs. H. Booth to introduce the first speaker, Mr. M. R. Wilson, who spoke on Forestry Engineering. He pointed out that the study of our forests is of recent origin, and that not all rangers man look-out towers about which most people are acquainted. There are a number of Universities where courses are available which lead to a master's degree in Forestry. During the summer months a student can earn approximately $250 a month to help his expenses for the following year. The average starting salary in Forestry is around $4,500, with a future which looks very bright. Positions are available in large lumber companies. There is also a Forestry technical course available for boys who require jobs as technicians. Training can usually be had whilst a boy is working, and leads to a starting salary of approximately $3,000. Of the students who qualify, about 40 per cent go into the pulp and paper industry; around 30 per cent become government inspectors, who are responsible for protecting the country's forests; another 10 per cent go into research. Intensive forestry is most desirable, to replace trees that have been used for timber; a fabulous number are required each year to keep up with industry.

Mrs. R. N. Wyse then spoke on Household Science and Home Economics. Courses are available at most Universities and require above-average study of Chemistry. Qualifying students can find employment in hospitals, hotels, etc., where dieticians are required to apply the principles of nutrition in the feeding of large numbers of people. Large companies need qualified people to educate the public on the use of their products, also to test and study improved applications.

The last speaker, Mr. H. McFarlane, of Montreal, spoke about the Chemical Industry, pointing out the large field covered by this industry. Processing food, dying cloth, odourless paints, drip-dry and mothproofing, plastics and weed-killers, are only a few of the items covered by people like the C-I-L. Chemical companies have broad interests and require on their staffs civil, electrical, mechanical and mining engineers, as well as agricultural scientists. By the same token, companies are becoming more diversified, producing chemicals to produce further chemical products. It is essentially a processing industry, with most of its articles sold in bulk. Therefore machines are numerous and manpower lower than one would at first realize. The industry is dependent on research and development in order to create new products and stimulate life. Future years will see a demand for more people highly qualified in advance studies.

I.G.A. shopping centre for Chatham St. site

Lachute's first shopping centre, headlined by a 15,000 sq. ft. I.G.A. Foodliner, is now a certainty — according to Mr. M. Brown, of Loeb & Co., Ottawa, the deed with A. D. McGibbon & Sons for transfer of property having been signed within the past two weeks. The location of the new shopping centre will be on Chatham Street, near Brownsburg Road, on the McGibbon property east of the highway. Construction is expected to get underway within two months.

"The centre is still in the formative stage, although several tenants have been signed up, and we will welcome inquiries from any local merchants interested in locating in this centre," Mr. Brown stated — adding that information is available from Mr. P. Nicholas at the company's head office in Ottawa.

The new I.G.A. Foodliner will be one of the biggest and most modern stores in the chain operated by this company.

Officer appointed

Cst. Laurent Foucault, 30, of Lachute, who was recently hired to supplement the Lachute Police force. Married with two children, Cst. Foucault is a native of St. Philippe and has been a resident of Lachute for some 11 years.

Comedy enjoyed, largely attended

It is some time since there has been a dramatic play presented in Lachute — the stage and theatre seemingly having become unpopular since the introduction of television.

It was therefore somewhat of a treat for the large audience which filled the High School auditorium, to see the cast of local actors, alive on stage, and despite their first attempt, presenting a play which was so well received.

The three-act comedy dealt with the antics of a scatter-brained young lady who was trying to keep her inheritance by preventing her Aunt Lucy, who controlled it, from knowing that she was already married. This was quite a problem, resulting in some very humorous and embarrassing situations.

The play was sponsored by the Ladies' Auxiliary of Legion Branch 70, and the players were coached by Mrs. Geo. Leggett, who was heartily congratulated and applauded when presented with a bouquet of roses by little Miss Bradshaw, charmingly attired for the occasion.

It would be difficult to single out one player from the others, as all performed very well and deserve credit for their rendition of this comedy which entailed many hours of study and practice.

Taking part were — Mrs. Lena Bradshaw, Doug Hay, Ian Dougall, June Skinner, Kay Ogilvie, Fred Pring, Joan Townsend, Margaret Lavis and Gladys Bradshaw.

Mrs. Helen Blakely officiated at the piano, Mrs. Geo. Leggett directed the play, furniture was loaned by J. W. Lefebvre Ltd., and wallpaper given by Lachute Decorating.

Candy and soft-drinks were sold in the intermission, and the Auxiliary reports a substantial sum was realized for the carrying on of their good work.

Appreciation is expressed to all who helped in making this venture a success.

His wife arrived at the lake shortly after nine p.m., and it was moments later that he succumbed to a heart attack. His death was declared due to natural causes. Mr. Colpitts had suffered previously with a heart affliction.

The Archer and Gile song team which visited here last Saturday, presenting the final program of the Community Concerts season, entertained a highly appreciative audience in the High School auditorium. The attendance was depleted somewhat by a sports highlight, the NHL final, which drew the interest of considerable number elsewhere; but those who sought a full quota of enjoyment at this concert were in no way disappointed.

Frances Archer and Beverly Gile specialize in folk songs of many lands. Their repertoire revealed their versatility of mood and interpretation; it covered a wide range from Irish humor to Welsh hymnology, from the 17th century German legend to modern American blues. Both singers in turn gave commentaries on their songs, and Miss Gile's guitar accompaniment greatly enchanced their melodies.

The program was divided into four sections. The first included folk songs from the British Isles. The second group were of French, German and Italian origin. The Latin and the Oriental flavor permeated their next group of songs, from Hawaii, Japan, Latvia and Mexico. The fourth series was of American origin, and these, in varied themes and tempos, drew warmest applause from the listeners. . . The singers responded to this expression of approval with several encores, and the general sentiment was one of warm acclaim and satisfaction.

Misses Archer and Gile travel 50,000 miles each year on concert tours. They sing in 13 languages successfully retaining the exact feeling and flavor of each song in its own habitat. They "interpret the soul of the different peoples" They appear frequently on TV shows, and have recorded favorite songs in their own arrangement for Disneyland.

Following this recital, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Laliberté entertained a number of friends at their home, to meet the two artists in person.

Community Concerts compaign for next year's memberships is planned for the week of May 4-9, with headquarters at the Bedard Ltée store as usual. Preliminaries are under way this week, however, to organize canvassing for the renewal of former memberships, prior to campaign week. A meeting of the organizers and workers is being held this evening (Wednesday) at l'Ecole Supérieure, Lachute.

Ulster girls' choir recital Apl. 27 for Rosemere Home

One of the outstanding musical events of the season will be the visit of the famous Ulster Girls' Choir from Belfast, Ireland, to the City of Montreal on April 26-27. The girls, over 50 of them, are mostly in their teens, with Lady Brooksborough, wife of the premier of Ulster, as patron and the Duchess of Abercorn president, and Miss Irene G. Browne as conductor of the choir. They have an extensive repertoire of the music and religious items, particularly of the music of their native land. A talented team also specializes in Irish dancing.

What distinguishes this choir apart from their high artistic achievements, is that it aims to aid benevolent projects. Not only in Ireland but in London, Glasgow and Edinburgh, this choir has been acclaimed, performing both in live concerts and over the BBC as well.

The girls arrived in Canada from New York at Malton Airport on April 13. Each day since their arrival they have had engagements at churches, clubs, etc., in Toronto, London, Niagara Falls and Ottawa. On April 26 they will arrive in Montreal at 4.30 p.m., and will attend a dinner given in their honor, Monday, April 27, at 8.15 p.m. they will present a concert at the Ephraim Scott Memorial Church hall, Snowdon Ave. Proceeds from this concert will be given to the Children's Home at Rosemere. — Call LO 2-5696 for tickets. Serious injuries to youths in Calumet mishap

Three Calumet youths were seriously injured in an early morning accident Sunday on Route 8, when a 1955-model sedan driven by James Boyd, 20, slid out of control and, after having gone 1,134 feet on the pavement, continued on some 257 feet in the ditch and field — somersaulting for some of this distance.

Taken to the Smith Clinic, Hawkesbury, were the driver, who was treated for injuries to the head and one eye; Richard Rouchon, 19, who suffered a fractured spine resulting in complete paralysis of both legs, a fractured skull and severe lacerations to his face and scalp; and Edward Brigden, who was treated for scalp and facial lacerations, and was later released.

The accident occurred around 4 a.m. near the Grenville crossing, the car ending up past the cemetery a considerable distance away. The mishap was investigated by Traffic Officer Gerard Loyer.

Main Duck Island,
South Bay, Picton, Ont.
Friday, April 10, 1959

Well, finally we made it! Leaving Lachute early Tuesday and hoping we could maybe make it to the Island in the afternoon, was stupid thinking on our part.

Just before we hit Cornwall it started to rain, and by the time we were in Kingston it was snowing in a big way. We went on to Picton and stayed the night there; a real storm was blowing. Going to Prince Edward Point took us almost three hours due to the bad conditions of the roads. The fisherman just laughed at us for wanting to go out in that weather. As he pointed out, because of the ice it would be hard enough to get close in to shore, without having to contend with the waves. The same thing on Thursday. But the following day we were in luck. The wind had changed during the night, and this you won't believe — there was not a bit of ice in near the shore. The north of the lake is jammed with the stuff, for about seven miles out. On top of all this there wasn't a ripple on the water, so we were able to get right in to the wharf beside the house.

As the fisherman told us we must live "very proper," as someone had looked out for us. Everyone made the trip in wonderful style, even the canary, so we are all very happy.

On the way out a raft of Geese was passed; only about 100 of them, nothing to get excited about. I also have a movie camera, but I forgot all about the thing until it was too late.

There hasn't been time to look over the Island and the game, so that will have to be done tomorrow. There isn't too much snow around but from a few of the drifts left, there sure was plenty. Even the little trees near the cottage have all been smashed down, so that I'm expecting the worst regarding the birds and animals. It does look bad, and as we were told in Picton, the winter was the worst they have had in 25 years. The fisherman also told us that the last trip he made was the one to get me last December, and that it had been impossible to do a thing until 10 days ago. Seeing the ice piled on the shore from the storms, you don' wonder at it. They sure lead a rug ged life.

Saturday —

There was a frost over every thing this morning, but with the weather getting warmer we have MUD to contend with, in a big way I started out to see some of the Island and gave it up as a bad job I did notice how high the trees have been stripped by the Deer. It seemed hard to believe that an animal had done it. I did not see one Deer or Pheasant on the trip, so it looks bad. Of course, there are few birds of any kind around just yet, so may be the Pheasants are holed up in the timber. We did see two loons this afternoon, so maybe we'll have a little warmer weather soon.

Carp can be seen swimming under some of the ice; there aren't too many as yet but the Perch should be supplying a meal very soon. . . .

I just finished saying we hadn't seen a Deer — but three of them visited the cottage, and they look very plump and healthy. So at least I know there are some left. It would have been a simple thing for all of them to have vacated the Island this year; conditions would have been ideal for them to make the shore. As for the Ducks and Geese, I don't think anything could have worried them, judging from the number around the shore.

Sunday —

Cold and windy. The temperature was 20 this a.m. and considering the time of year that's too cold. We did go out for a long jaunt around to see how the game had fared. There were many signs of Deer, but likely they are inside the swamp where we couldn't see them. Also a flock of about 500 Geese taking off for the North. We saw them returning this evening; why I don't know, unless they were headed by a wrong-way Corrigan.

The ice is packed out into the lake. We watched it for a spell this afternoon, and there probably won't be a steamer up around this way for at least another two weeks.

One thing I forgot to mention about the Deer. We found three dead — not from starvation either, as they were very plump — at least judging from one we saw that had been dead only a few days. Maybe they have fared much better than was expected.

— That's all for now. Greetings to old friends and readers!

The annual round-robin for the Tip Top trophy will draw badminton teams from this district next Saturday, April 25. The tournament will be played at Lachute High School, commencing at 1 p.m.

Defending champions are the Calumet club. Teams will be participating from Hawkesbury, Kilmar, Calumet, Lachute and probably Brownsburg.

With the pick of the players representing these centres, it is expected there will be an interesting demonstration of prowess, and keen competition. The public are cordially invited to witness these games; there is no admission charge.

Dual slogan in Cancer Crusade

Many thousands of volunteers across the nation will participate in the Canadian Cancer Society's Annual Crusade — to be climaxed here with a "blitz" appeal next Monday. Men and women have enrolled as volunteers in Lachute district to bring the Crusade's new slogan, "Guard your family—Fight Cancer with a check-up and a cheque," into virtually every home, together with a life-saving message designed to protect families against the disease.

The 1959 campaign will provide funds for the society's nation-wide program of research. Top-flight scientists, supported by the Canadian Cancer Society, are engaged in the research effort to find the cause, and ultimately the control of cancer. In addition, the society is continuing its national program of education to save more lives. In the last decade it has seen the ratio of lives spared from cancer rise from 1 in 4 to 1 in 3.

Cancer Crusade—a personal obligation

MORE THAN twenty thousand Canadians died of cancer last year—according to officials of the Canadian Cancer Society.

Eleven thousand of these deaths were males and just over nine thousand females. Almost 400 victims of the disease were under the age of 15. The age group hardest hit was between 40 and 59, with more than 5,000 deaths. Eighteen hundred Canadians died of lung cancer — fifteen hundred were males and only 300 females. . . .

Narrowed down to community terms, these figures mean that scarcely a family escapes the effect of cancer — the suffering, the heartache, the bereavement and the cost. The experience of each man's family, his kin or his neighbors, reveals that this is true. . . . But these facts have further local significance; each and all may help to do something about them. The opportunity comes next Monday when the Cancer Crusade takes the form of a personal canvass of local homes, to enlist not only financial support but co-operation and understanding in this humanitarian cause.

The Canadian Cancer Society's educational program is designed to cut down the death rate from cancer by persuading people to report early symptoms of the disease and to seek prompt treatment. The Society also supports extensive cancer research and provides welfare services to cancer patients. Your donation will help materially to promote this work!

Inquisitive visitor

MR. A.B.C. visits our office regularly. . . . He is an auditor — one specially trained in the examination of circulation records. He has "the right of access to all books and records" in verifying the subscriptions and newsstand sales you and other Watchman readers order and pay for.

The organization he works for is a co-operative association made up of publishers and advertising men called the Audit Bureau of Circulations. This organization was founded in 1914 to establish standards for paid circulation publications . . and to audit and report only the facts. A.B.C.'s cumulative experience covers more than 72,500 publication audits.

How does the A.B.C. auditor help us help you? . . . By keeping us on our publishing toes. His audit reports are a measure of how well we're serving you. To keep you as a subscriber — year after year — this publication must provide a service worth your money.

Of course, the degree to which we hold your interest — as verified in the A.B.C. report, showing our paid circulation — is what interests our advertisers too. For the rate they pay and the space they use is based on our paid circulation, which is steadily increasing.

Thus, the A.B.C. symbol is a constant reminder that (1) your interests come first with us, and that (2) our advertisers get what they pay for — your interest.

Political hazards

ONE OF THE nation's most eminent editors has taken Canadian businessmen to task for not playing a larger role in party political life.

Now he may have a point. It is certainly true that relatively few businessmen find their way into the House of Commons compared with, say, lawyers or farmers. But, in fairness, it should be recognized that there are at least two reasons why businessmen are not on the whole as politically active as they might be.

One is the involvement in partisan political activity inevitably makes them the subject of some controversy, and, what is worse, all too often produces the suspicion that they are "after something" and "in politics to advance their business interests."

The other is that, in actual fact, political activity, far from furthering business prospects, can be positively damaging to them. Men have been known to neglect their businesses for politics at a very considerable cost to themselves. And others, by identifying themselves with one party as opposed to another, have not always helped their business interests whether their party is in office or out of it.

While we certainly do not want to seem to be discouraging businessmen from taking part in politics (as a matter of record we are strongly in favor of their doing so), these considerations not to be lightly dismissed. The businessman who is politically active, whether at the local, provincial or federal level, hazards much more than many people realize.

Our feathered friends

BIRDS are essential friends to humankind, because of their insect-gobbling activities. But, in addition, the songs of some species and their color and life lend charm and beauty to the Canadian summer.

This is a good time to prepare, now that they are coming north on their annual migrations. By providing food when they are looking for places to raise their insect-hungry young, you will encourage them to stay.

The need is especially great because ornithologists of the National Audubon Society have just termed 1958 as a disaster year for birds, citing enormous losses because of spring storms and other conditions in the southern United States.

The society's report said bluebirds, hermit thrushes and phoebes were among the hardest hit. Song-birds of garden and orchard such as warblers, song sparrows and robins, also suffered heavy losses. Thus friendly human help is needed now to aid the recovery of our winged allies.

Nothing elaborate is required. Small feeding stations nailed to trees or sides of houses, about five feet from the ground, will do the trick. By providing grain and sunflower seeds daily at these places, you will simplify feeding problems and help birds in raising their young. You will also help yourself, when you see the quantities of insects they eat! The Encyclopedia Britannica says protection laws for birds were enacted because of "the imminent peril of food crops should vermin and insect pests get beyond human control."

You can make a bird-feeding station simply by nailing two boards together in the shape of an L, using long, thin nails. The back of the L is then nailed to a tree. To strengthen the station, nail cross-pieces across the ends. You may also nail stripping around the edge to prevent seed rolling out.

A wide piece of tin nailed around the trunk of the tree below the feeding station will prevent cats, weasels and other bird-eaters from climbing up.

BRAIN FOOD. — Dulse has everything. This is because everything is washed into the submarine soil. No land-grown plant, according to the new theory, could have so rich and varied a content of proteins and fats, carbohydrates, salts and minerals. We wonder whether dulse-chewing at youth accounts for the high proportion of pre-eminent Canadians who boast a Maritime origin.

Who wrote the Canadian Boat Song?

It depends upon which of two Canadian boat songs is meant. The song that begins, "Faintly as tolls the evening chime, our voices keep tune and our oars keep time," was written by Thomas Moore (1779-1852), the famous Irish poet, while on a visit to Canada in 1804. He had been inspired by the singing of the boatmen. There is, however, another song also known as the Canadian Boat Song. It contains the well-known lines:

"From the lone shieling of the misty island
Mountains divide us, and the waste of seas —
Yet still the blood is strong, the heart is Highland,
And we in dreams behold the Hebrides."

The author of this song is unknown. It first appeared in Blackwood's Magazine in 1829.

What was the League of the Wabanaki?

It was an organization of loosely allied Indian tribes that occupied the Atlantic seaboard from Connecticut to New Brunswick in the early days or colonization. Wabanaki means "those living at the east." The League comprised the Algonkian-speaking band of Wabanaki — or Abnaki, as they are often called — and also their neighbours and kinsmen, the Norridgewock, Penobscot, Passamaquoddy, Pennacook and even the Malecite and Micmac. In the 17th century many of them became converted to Catholicism through the zeal of French missionaries and, as allies of the French, resisted the incursions of the English settlers.

What Village is Built on an Island between two Lakes?

Bobcaygeon, a village in Victoria County, not far from Lindsay. Most of the village is built on an island between Sturgeon and Pigeon lakes, two of the Kawartha Lakes that form port of the Trent Canal system. A canal, with a lock, to connect the two lakes and make them part of the Trent chain was constructed in 1839 and a monument in the village commemorates that event.

How did Codroy get its name?

Codroy is a lobster-fishing settlement in Newfoundland situated near the mouth of the Grand Codroy River. The Grand Codroy River and the Little Codroy River drain a considerable part of the southwest corner of Newfoundland. The name is derived from an abreviation of Cap de Roy, which was at first written on maps as C. de Roy and then, over the years, became contracted to Codroy. The cape gave its name to both rivers and settlement.

Of Many Things

— By Ambrose Hills —

Welcome, Ericka!

Ericka is young, pretty, and strong. She arrived in Winnipeg Thursday, went to work the following Monday. She came from Germany, under sponsorship of her sister, Charlotte, who preceded her by one year and loved Canada so much she hopes that all her sisters will come here eventually.

Ericka could speak no English when she landed on our shores, but already she has learned to get around, ask for street names, order in restaurants, and understand the housewife for whom she works. She gets $70 per month, her food and transportation for the first two months, while she learns the language and some of the customs.

With this pay and her job Ericka is more than satisfied; she is tremendously happy, and her employer is astounded by her energy and cheerfulness. They housecleaned the kitchen the other day, which meant washing walls and cupboards, but at the end of the day when, with the aid of the English-German dictionary, the housewife inquired if Aricka was tired, the answer was, "Oh, nah, nah — I like to work!"

Ericka and Charlotte are doing some scouting around Winnipeg at the request of another young German — a lad who brought some capital with him and wants to start a business. He is in Toronto now, but will come to Winnipeg soon — because the girls have discovered that a certain product, which he knows how to manufacture, is not made here but is imported from the United States. The young German will soon be supplying the local market, I am sure, although he will be starting in a small way. He will create new jobs and new wealth here, and, I suspect, may one day marry either Charlotte or Ericka — and create some more young Canadians.

I asked Ericka why she came to Canada. She had to leave a job in Germany, good friends, and a younger sister who wept bitterly at their parting. I wasn't too surprised at her answer. "There is so much space — open country — we don't have that in Germany. And here everybody has a chance to make a good living, there are so many jobs to do. And here, too, there is so much freedom, no pass to carry, no permission to get — you are so free."

Ericka and Charlotte have gone together to buy a TV set. They think it helps them learn the language and something about North American customs. They want to be good citizens, good workers, good neighbors. They are the kind of immigrants Canadians need and want. May there be many more like them in the years ahead!

All Aboard

with G. E. MORTIMORE

Through a train window, I saw two small boys playing hangman.

The train was just pulling into a small town. We were moving slowly, so I got a clear view of the lads with the rope. One was putting his head in the noose.

A moment later they were out of sight, and the train pulled into the station.

"I should tell someone," I said to my wife. Numbers of small boys have been killed and injured in hangman games, mostly copied from TV westerns. "Go ahead," my wife encouraged.

I hurried along the corridor. But whom would I tell, and what would I say? "There's a couple of boys back there, playing with a rope." I can imagine how people would stare, when I delivered a message like that.

The porter was standing at the door of the car, but he wasn't letting anyone past. The stairway remained blocked by an iron plate.

"Don't we stop here?" I enquired.

A moment later, the train was rolling again. I pressed my nose against the glass, and saw the houses slip away. That's how things often are. People would like to offer a word of greeting, or warning, but they are too lazy, or circumstances are moving them away, out of reach.

But the lads with the rope probably came to no harm. They soon quit playing hangman, I'll bet, and started on some other boyish game, like playing tenpins with live ammunition.

War veteran died in hospital

Frederick Berniquer, a lifelong resident of this district, passed away at the Queen Mary Veterans' Hospital, Montreal, on April 14. He had been in failing health for some time, and was in his 65th year.

During the first war, Frederick served with the 42nd Battalion, Black Watch, and in the second war was a member of the Royal Canadian Army Service Corps.

He was employed for 22 years on the Grenville Locks, retiring in 1945 and taking up permanent residence in Lachute. Fishing and hunting were his hobbies.

His first wife was Miss Janet Rayson, of Grenville, who predeceased him in 1931. From this union one daughter was born, Frances (Mrs. H. Proulx).

Mr. Berniquer was married again in 1932, to Miss Dorothy Rayson of Grenville, who with his daughter Frances, seven grandchildren, several nieces and nephews, is left to mourn his passing.

Frederick was a son of the late Joseph Berniquer and Mary Gagné, both of Lachute. Two sisters, Marie (Mrs. Rochon), Alice, and one brother, Joseph, predeceased him.

Funeral rites were held on Friday morning at Ste. Anastasie Church, with local veterans attending as a guard of honor.

Bereavement to local businessman and family

Late Mrs. J. W. Lefebvre

A large gathering of sympathizers and fellow townsfolk filled the Ste. Anastasie Parish Church, to pay their last tribute to the late Mrs. J. Willie Lefebvre, wife of an old-established storekeeper and mother of a well-known business family. Mrs. Lefebvre died April 17 after several months' illness, and the funeral was held Monday morning from the Roland Menard Funeral Parlors.

There was a long cortege to the church and cemetery, with many flowers in tribute to her memory. Chief mourners were her husband, sons, sons-in-law and grandchildren. Only member of the family absent was her son Guy, a missionary of the White Fathers in Africa. Sister members of the Dames de Ste. Anne wore their purple sashes and flew their banner in the funeral procession. Many members of the clergy and religious orders took their place in the church ceremony.

Left to mourn, besides her husband, are seven sons and three daughters — Paul, Georges, Louis, Jean-Jules (Quebec City), Henri, André and Guy (in Africa); Miss Antoinette Lefebvre, at home, Mrs. Marcel Laframboise (Gertrude), and Mrs. Roger Fauteaux (Madeleine); also numerous grandchildren.

Mrs. Lefebvre, the former Léona Lalonde, is survived also by a brother and five sisters.

Mr. and Mrs. Lefebvre, old and respected residents of this town, had marked their 52nd wedding anniversary the day prior to her passing.

Was manager of C.I.P. office at Calumet, Que.

Late Wm. Allan Williamson

William Allan Williamson, 66, of Ottawa, died in hospital on Tuesday of last week.

Mr. Williamson was born at Grenville, a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. David Williamson. In 1920 he married Jeanne Lefebvre in Montreal.

For 50 years he was employed with Canadian International Paper Company, until his retirement last December. At that time he was manager of the Calumet office.

He served with the Forestry Corps of the Canadian Army during World War I and spent three years overseas.

Surviving besides his wife are four sons, Rev. Allan Williamson, SMM, Montreal; Rev. John Williamson, Chauvin, Alta.; George of Ottawa and Paul of Montreal; five daughters, Mrs. Dougald Campbell (Claire) and Mrs. Richard Yoshida (Lucille), both of Montreal; Mrs. Roland Hould (Jeannine), Quebec City; Mrs. Paul Guenette (Betty), of Lachute, and Miss Marie Williamson, of Ottawa — besides his sons-in-law and 12 grandchildren.

Also surviving are two brothers, Rev. David Williamson, SMM, of Dorval, Que., and Walter, of Ottawa; three sisters, Miss Amy Williamson, of Montreal, Mrs. Raymond Reid, of Valois, and Mrs. Leonard Cooke, of Windsor, Ont.

The funeral was held last Friday in the Immaculate Heart of Mary Church, with interment at Notre Dame cemetery in Ottawa.

Marriage ceremony at Dalesville Baptist Church

King - McCrae

Carnations and gladioli in pastel colors were used to decorate Dalesville Baptist Church for the marriage of Marion Shirley, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert McCrae, of Lachute, to Mr. Alexander John King, of Ville Lasalle. The ceremony took place April 4, with the Rev. Kenneth R. Miller officiating. Miss Lois Silverson played the wedding music, and during the signing of the rigister Mrs. Kenneth Miller sang "Because."

Given in marriage by her father the bride chose a floor-length gown of white lace over satin designed with a full bouffant skirt sweeping into a bustle effect at the back. The bodice was fashioned with long sleeves extending to points over the wrists, the neckline being embroidered with multi-colored sequins and seed pearls. Her shoulder length veil of tulle illusion was caught to a small cap of matching lace and was also embroidered to match her dress; she carried a bouquet of American Beauty roses.

Her only attendant, Miss Denise Campbell, chose a three-quarter length gown of orchid organza over taffeta, designed with a bouffant skirt and matching bolero and mittens; she wore a small floral hat and carried a bouquet of yellow roses.

Mr. Douglas Fisher, of Montreal was groomsman for Mr. King and the ushers were the bride's brother Mr. Roy McCrae, and Mr. Frank Flood, Jr., of Montreal.

For going away, the bride wore a light blue woollen suit with matching topcoat, navy hat and accessories, and a corsage of pink roses. Mr. and Mrs. King will reside in Montreal.

Church business at St. Francis, St. Sauveur

At the quarterly meeting of the Advisory Board of St. Francis' Church, two new members were added to the present 30 — Messrs. George Powell and W. Johnson. Mr. Powell is president of the Chantecler Hotel and president of the International Hotel Association, and Mr. Johnson is a Montreal executive. Mr. Patrick Forbes was elected Vestry Clerk, and Messrs. G. H. Kirby, L. Brittle, Gordon Raffignon, the Finance committee.

The new Hall was turned over to the W.A., whose efforts have meant so much to the church.

The church mortgage had been reduced to $4,500, and the Hall debt $13,500.

It was decided to install an amplifier system in the Hall, to carry the church services to the overflow congregations.

Cancer Crusade money spent in 3-way program

April is cancer crusade month in Canada. During this week and next Monday, volunteers will call at homes and places of business to collect money for the cancer control program. That money is used in three ways:

(1) To provide grants for scientists doing cancer research. These men and women working in universities and hospitals in every province are searching for the cause of and better cures for cancer. We can help them.

(2) For cancer education. Doctors can cure many types of cancer if they start treatment early. So, it is very important for us to recognize the symptoms of the disease and see our doctor for regular check-ups. In fact, that's the Society's slogan . . . "Fight Cancer with a Check-up and a Cheque".

(3) Assistance to cancer patients. Cancer Society volunteers provide many services for cancer patients. They need our help!

BELL LINES

by Dick Pearson
your telephone manager

During our school days (way back when), we used to look forward to leaving school and entering the world of business; this feeling has been common to young students throughout the ages. But today, perhaps more than ever before, it's important for young people to bear in mind that the more they have in the way of education to offer industry, the better their chances are of securing an interesting job and succeeding at it. Here at the Bell Company, we like the young person to come to us with a sound educational background. After finding out what type of work he or she is best equipped to handle, we provide a thorough training in that job to enable the young person to serve our customers well. Extensive on-the-job training is continued throughout most of an employee's career. . . . A sound standard of education has the added advantage of aiding the employee when it comes to representing his or her company in the community; it enables the employee to grasp quickly the information needed to speak pleasantly with authority and with a sense of responsibility.

A home economist has estimated than an average day's housework involves close to 20,000 steps, adding up to a walk of 8.7 miles! . . . An increasing number of housewives right here in this community are finding a way to reduce their "room-to-room tours" simply by having additional telephones installed. Extension telephone sets are appearing in kitchens, bedrooms and dens, quite often in color to suit their surroundings. If the lady of the house wishes to conserve her energy with the aid of additional telephones, she has only to call our Business Office. Miss Denise Larocque or any of the other girls will be pleased to furnish the details.

One of the biggest of our Company's indoor sporting events is the annual five-pin bowling tournament for the McFarlane Trophy. This year, some 30 Bell teams from widely scattered points in Ontario and Quebec are expected to enter the tournament, which is scheduled to get under way in Toronto, April 25. Lachute will be represented for the first time in the history of the tourney. Team members who will be competing are — Bruce Mason, Germain Binette, John Labelle, Jack Gordon, Louis Guillotte and Bill Poley, team captain. We wish the local keglers every success, and may they bring the McFarlane Trophy home with them to Lachute.

If you plan on moving on or around the first of May, it would help us very much if you would call and advise us well ahead of time. Giving us advance notice of your new address, gives us the opportunity to discuss your telephone needs thoroughly with you and provide you with the service you require at the right time.

THE WATCHTOWER stands as a watchman atop a tower, alert to the greed, delinquency, hypocrisy, perplexity and fear that mark this world's time of the end. Informed by Bible prophecy, it announces Jehovah's kingdom as mankind's hope and twice a month provides eager searchers with spiritual food. It cheers men of good will with glorious prospects of eternal life in a paradise earth. It keeps a sharp and faithful focus on Bible truth. Keep on the watch! Regularly read The Watchtower.

AWAKE! keeps you awake to the vital issues of our times, unfettered by censorship and selfish interests. It recognizes facts, faces facts, is free to publish facts. It is pledged to righteous principles, to exposing hidden foes and subtle dangers, to championing freedom for all, to comforting mourners and strengthening those disheartened by the failures of a delinquent world, reflecting hope of a righteous New World. Keep awake! Regularly read Awake!

Obtain both THE WATCHTOWER and AWAKE! for one year $2. You will also receive, free, six booklets on vital Bible subjects.

Write to 150 Bridgeland Ave., Toronto 19, or ask any Jehovah's Witness you may happen to meet, anywhere.

Short history of settlement and growth

By PRISCILLA LEE REID

This paper was originally delivered as an address to the Argenteuil Teachers' Association, at a meeting held February 26, 1959, in the Grenville School.

A study of the early settlement of Argenteuil must deal particularly with the areas in and adjacent to the old Seigneury of Argenteuil, for it was here that the story began. Centering aroung St. Andrews, the oldest town, Carillon, Grenville, Calumet, and the Chute (as Lachute was first called) it shows the influence of geography and natural resources upon the pattern of settlement. Moreover, from its history may be seen that the development came more as a result of events which took place outside of Canada, than from any local efforts.

First Owner of Seigneury

Charles Joseph d'Ailleboust was the first man to own this land, and it was he who named it Argenteuil, after a place near Paris, associated with his family. The grant was signed by Governor Frontenac, in the name of King Louis XIV of France, on June 15th, 1682.

During the tenure of the d'Ailleboust family little, if anything, was done to settle or develop the area. This state of affairs continued until 1781 when Pierre Louis Panet, a relative of the Seigneur of Mille Isles, purchased the Seigneury of Argenteuil.

From that point down to 1796, when Major Patrick Murray became the seigneur, there was a small but steady influx of settlers. It was, however, during the tenure of Col. James Murray, seigneur until 1814, and later, during that of Sir John Johnson, that the increase in population was accelerated, and the older sections of Argenteuil began to assume familiar proportions.

Factors in Development

Several factors contributed to this development. After 1763 Canadians were free to trade in the British market. They could now sell their lumber and furs directly to England. At first this did not mean too much, but after the American Revolution, in 1776, it gradually became more important.

For many years the British dockyards, and the British lumber marketing generally, had been supplied by countries along the Baltic Sea and by the American Colonies — especially by the latter. Therefore, the loss of these Colonies to Britain meant also the loss of that very necessary commodity. A new source had to be found, and Canada was the obvious place to look. British timber agents opened offices in Quebec and Montreal, and the following years saw Canada and the Baltic countries providing Britain with her needs.

Then came the Napoleonic Wars and the Continental Blockade, by which Napoleon attempted to starve Britain into submission. It became increasingly difficult to import wood, or anything, from Europe. Finally, in 1806, that source was completely cut off. Canada then had the British timber market to herself, and the virgin forests of Argenteuil began to have new economic value.

First Settlers

While these events were taking place in Europe, the first stage in the settlement of Argenteuil was beginning. The earliest arrivals came in during the year 1781. They were French-speaking families from the Seigneuries of Mille Isles and Deux Montagnes, in search of new homes. One of the first to receive a grant from Seigneur Panet was Antoine Cerre. People bearing the names of Giroux, Charlebois and Fournier, soon followed. These and many others who came later, cleared their lands and built their homes. Even today their descendants may still be found on the well cultivated farms of the area.

From 1785 on, the English-speaking settlers began to move into the seigneury. There were United Empire Loyalists, uprooted by the American Revolution. Families named Benedict, Wales, Dewar, Lee, Willman, Harrington, Davis and Treadwell, to mention only a few, made up this group. These Loyalists were later joined by friendly Americans, who were attracted by the natural resources of the area, especially by the timber, which could be floated down the Ottawa River and sold in Montreal.

Since the Ottawa River was the main highway, the new arrivals tended to build their homes close to the shore. Quite a number located around the mouth of the North River, and thus the village of St. Andrews was founded.

St. Andrews gradually expanded. Before long there was a saw mill, a grist mill, and two inns. Here too, in 1804, the first paper mill in Canada was built and operated. The increase in population continued until, in 1855, St. Andrews was not only Argenteuil's largest community, but it was also the home of the Registry House, the Commissioner's Court, and five schools.

While this was taking place in St. Andrews, other sections were developing. In 1796, Hezekiah Clark arrived with his family from Jericho, Vermont. Unlike many others, he did not take up land in the St. Andrews area, but followed the North River back to a spot (near Lachute Mills) close by the falls, where he built his cabin. He was probably attracted, not only by the fine stand of timber, but also by the water-power which could be used to drive the mill that he was planning to build.

For two years the Clarks were the only family in the district. However, in 1798, they were joined by several other Vermonters. The little settlement grew very slowly, but steadily. Gradually the land was cleared. In 1801 the first log school house was built for the benefit of the thirty children in the area.

It was, however, the land bordering on the Ottawa River which continued to attract the newcomers.

Peter McArthur, also from Vermont, was the first settler in Carillon. He was soon followed by Capt. Jacob Schagel, who is credited with building the first house in the present village of Carillon in 1804. Soon others arrived, and another community was started.

Grenville, although not erected into a township until 1808, had been partially surveyed in 1788. Grants of land had been made to Archibald MacMillan, and to a few others, but little development had taken place, largely because of the barrier formed by the Long Sault Rapids.

The year 1798 will always be important to Argenteuil, because in that year there came to the Ottawa River a man of great vision and resourcefulness. This was Philemon Wright, from Woburn, Mass. He pushed west past the rapids, in search of a new home. Finally, he located on the Chaudiere, and founded a village which he called Hull. He brought in settlers, and started what soon became a thriving lumber business. It was he who in 1806 floated the first raft of timber out of the Ottawa River, by way of the Back River, to Quebec City, where it was sold. Soon others were following his example, but it was he who demonstrated the superiority of the raft as a means of transporting lumber.

As time went on, not only Philemon Wright but also Nathaniel Hazard Treadwell, who was endeavoring to develop his grants of land at L'Orignal, and many others settling the region west of the Long Sault, contributed indirectly to the prosperity of St. Andrews and Carillon.

Fourteen-Day Trip from Montreal to Hull

In those days the trip upstream from Montreal to Hull was a long and tedious experience. Even the return trip, with the current — although faster, could present difficulties. The boats, propelled either by sails or oars, or both, required a total of at least 14 days to cover the distance.

The journey was made in three stages: Montreal to St. Andrews or Carillon, requiring five days, the portage over land to Grenville, around the Long Sault Rapids, another four days, and the final lap, aboard another boat, five days. Sometimes good connections could be made, but more often than not, travellers were forced to remain for several nights, either in St. Andrews or Grenville, or somewhere along the way. This was a boon to hotel keepers and also to the merchants, who carried a very wide assortment of provisions.

Need for Canal System

As time went on, it became increasingly evident that a canal was needed. A few experimental ditches were dug, by Nathaniel Treadwell, and later by Capt. John Macdonnell, who ran a line of Durham boats, but the task was too large for private enterprise. At this point, international events once again intervened.

The main route to the west and northwest had always been the St. Lawrence River. However, during the War of 1812 the British began to realize how vulnerable this route was and how easily their vital lines of communication could be cut by hostile Americans. An alternate course, away from the international boundary, was needed.

Col. Edward Macdonnell, a former A.D.C. to the famous Duke of Wellington, and his son, Col. Charles Macdonnell, made a survey along the Ottawa River. They reported favorably to Wellington, who in turn persuaded the British Government, in 1817 to take action. The Royal Staff Corps arrived at Grenville and the work began.

In 1829 the Grenville Military Canal, extending from Grenville Basin to Greece's Point, Chatham, was completed. This opened up a new period of settlement and prosperity for Argenteuil.

Anticipating the development of the areas west of the Long Sault, Philemon Wright built the first steamboat to operate on the Ottawa at Grenville, in 1819. When the "Union", as it was called, went into service, it cut the trip from Grenville to Hull from five days to twenty-four hours.

In 1826-1827 the first steamboat service between Montreal, St. Andrews and Carillon began.

With the coming of better communications, Argenteuil became more attractive to colonists. Settlers bearing such names as McAdam, McOuat, Doig, McPhee, Graham, Cameron, Dobbie and others, arrived from Britain between 1820 and 1840. To many who had been victims of the depression in the old country, the Ottawa Valley seemed like the promised land.

Grenville Village

By 1821, Grenville village was surveyed and laid out in streets. The core of the community was the group of neat houses, near the canal, which lodged the officers of the Royal Staff Corps, and their families. Only six or eight houses had been built, but free lots, four chains wide by five chains deep, were being given to persons who would agree to clear the land and to build a house within one year from the date of the grant. There was also a school, attended by 40 scholars.

The first mention of Calumet, then part of the Township of Grenville, was made in 1832, when it was described as a few huts, built around the mouth of the Calumet River.

Calumet and Rouge River Lumber Industry

Southwell Willman, the son of Valentine Willman of St. Andrews, was the first permanent resident. Interested in lumber, as his father had been, he received in 1835, a large grant between the Calumet and Rouge Rivers. He built a stone house on the west side of the Calumet River, and began his business, selling the timber in Montreal and Quebec. In this way, the industry which is still so important to Calumet, originated.

Later, his son Edward obtained limits, north on the Rouge River, which he also worked. The important thing about all this, however, is that many men, both French and English, who came first to labor in the woods, remained, after the land was cleared, to settle.

Down to Confederation, 1867, Argenteuil continued to develop. It enjoyed a peaceful and prosperous existence. Even the Rebellion of 1837 did little to disturb its way of life. Although from earliest times agriculture was carried on, lumbering continued to be the chief industry. Saw mills were built, and in many cases, the trained workers, brought in from Three Rivers and other places to operate the machines, remained as permanent residents.

The year 1855 is most important in the study of settlement, because in that year the Seigneury of Argenteuil was united with the neighboring areas, then in process of development, and erected into the County of Argenteuil.

Immediately, Lachute, then a village of just over 600 persons, because of its location in relation to the new areas of the county, began to assume a position of prominence. This was heightened further by the fact that in the same year the Lachute Academy was organized. The following year it was incorporated by an act of Parliament. As time went on and the good reputation of the Academy grew, Lachute became the chief centre of education for the county.

Advent of Railway Changes Pattern of Settlement

The final stage in the opening up of southern Argenteuil came with the railroad era. For some time a short line had been operating between Carillon and Grenville, in an effort to speed up transportation of passengers and freight. At this point, however, the transcontinental railway entered the picture — the Montreal Northern Colonization Railway, which became the Quebec, Montreal, Ottawa and Occidental Railway, and which finally merged into the great Canadian Pacific Railway.

Originally, the railroad was to have run through St. Andrews, but when Charles Legge, Chief Engineer of the M.N.C.R., reported in 1872 that the route from Montreal to Ottawa, running via Ste. Therese, St. Andrews and Grenville, would be both longer and $54,959 more expensive to build than one via Ste. Therese, Lachute and Grenville, the latter was chosen. Even the fact that the railway between Carillon and Grenville could be incorporated into the new system did not weigh heavily, because the M.N.C.R. claimed that it "could construct a new road from Carillon to Grenville, at a similar cost to that estimated for the purchase of the section already built." The decision was made — and Lachute, St. Philippe and Calumet immediately gained new importance and began to grow.

The coming of the railway completely changed the pattern of settlement in Argenteuil. No longer was the river the main line of comunication.

Now, new settlers could locate easily in the formerly remote areas of the County. Many, for business reasons, began to move from St. Andrews and Carillon to Lachute, and to other points along the railway.

By 1891 the population of Lachute had grown to 1751. Industries, such as Ayers Woollen Mills, Wilson's Paper Mills, McOuat & McRae Iron Foundry, and the McGibbon Lumber Mill, to mention only a few, were established, and many more were beginning. Because of its central location, its water power, and the railway, Lachute was able to take the lead, which it has kept ever since.

Much could also be said about settlement in the other sections of the County, such as Morin, the Gore, Brownsburg, Mille Isles and Kilmar, for each has its own history. The story of the first settlements, however, forms the basis of all that came later, and illustrates the forces which even today are at work in Argenteuil County.

Danger signals stressed in Cancer education crusade

Words can be a potent weapon in the fight against cancer. In the Cancer Crusade here next week, leaflets will be given away in the house-to-house canvass. These leaflets are designed to save lives that might otherwise be lost to Canada's No. 2 disease killer, by alerting those who receive them to the dangers of neglect and delay.

While more lives are being saved every year due to improved methods of treatment, needless deaths still occur because the disease is not diagnosed in time. Regular health checkups are the best safeguard to protect the family and the home.

Cancer, like other diseases in our time, will be brought under control. But until that day comes, public knowledge of the facts of cancer is still one of the best means of saving lives.

The Canadian Cancer Society Crusade, being promoted in Lachute next week, takes the form of a combined educational and fund-raising effort.

Danger Signals

Foremost among the facts about cancer disseminated by the Society are the "Seven Danger Signals" of Cancer, which are: (1) Unusual bleeding or discharge; (2) A lump or thickening in the breast or elsewhere; (3) A sore that does not heal; (4) Change in bowel or bladder habits; (5) Hoarseness or cough; (6) Indigestion or difficulty in swallowing; and (7) Change in a wart or mole. If your signal lasts longer than two weeks, go to your doctor to learn if it means cancer.

MODERN METHOD

Seaway stamp joint issue by Canada, U.S.A.

Ottawa — The designs for the St. Lawrence Seaway commemorative postage stamps to be issued jointly by Canada and the U.S. were released in Ottawa and Washington by Postmaster General William Hamilton and Postmaster General Arthur E. Summerfield of the U.S. Except for the necessary differences in captions and denominations, the stamps are identical in design.

The stamps are in the 5-cent denomination for Canada and the 4-cent denomination for the United States, these being the respective rates for first class letter mail in each country. Forty million of the Canadian stamps and 120 million of the American stamps will be issued.

The stamps for both nations will be printed in red and blue on white paper thereby utilizing the national colors of red, white and blue for both countries. Both stamps will have the Great Lakes and connecting links of the design on a blue background with captions in red.

Pimples Are No Joke!

— By NANCY CLEAVER —

"My pimples are awful!" Sally exclaimed. "I hate to see them when I look in the mirror!"

Her mother looked at her impatiently, "I've told you again and again to leave your face alone", she reproached. "If it was a serious infection I would take you to the doctor, but —"

"You think he'd only laugh at my complexion! Pimples are no joke to the person who has them!"

* * *

What can teen-age boys or girls afflicted with poor complexions do to improve their appearance? At this self-conscious age it is of utmost importance to their self-confidence that they look as attractive as possible — particularly to the other sex.

If a teen-ager has a severe case of acne (or skin trouble) he should lose no time in seeking expert advice from a doctor — and then follow his instructions to the letter. But if pimples and blackheads are an occasional "headache", then an adolescent can use common sense in tackling this handicap.

The "sweet tooth", which dentists deplore, is at the root of many complexion upsets. The clear condition of the skin has a direct relation to a simple, well-balanced diet. Chocolate, rich foods such as pastries and nuts eaten in excess, frequently result in an outbreak of pimples.

"What is one man's food is another man's poison" and so there is no one sure diet-sheet for every acne sufferer. If this is a sore point for the teen-ager in your home, encourage him to do some experimenting in food selection. See if he will follow a strict regime for a fortnight, avoiding chocolate in any form — icings, milk shakes, sundaes or candy. Fat foods such as "French Frieds" should be shunned too.

At the same time the consumption of plenty of fresh fruit and vegetables, and drinking an abundance of water, will prevent constipation. This is frequently a contributing factor in skin eruptions. Fruit juice, celery and carrot stick, frozen fruit juice cubes colored with vegetable coloring, are good "between meal" snacks.

An understanding of the basic reasons for complexion defects is helpful in overcoming them. An adolescent wants to know why he and so many of his chums are plagued by acne.

At puberty the sabaceous glands of the skin are apt to become overactive, producing a greasy product. If this collects underneath the skin, instead of being thrown off, a red-dish area on the face appears. Frequently this symptom is followed by a "head" of yellowish pus. Unfortunately, an ugly pimple may leave a tiny scar.

A daily rigorous cleansing routine can do wonders to get rid of this undesirable greasy material on the skin's surface. Two or three times a day a bland soap should be used. Rinse with cold water to close the pores. Frequent showers and tub baths are also desirable, especially after exercise.

Boys sometimes appear to be more troubled with acne than girls. But they are not tempted to apply a foundation cream for a powder base! The last thing a girl should do is use a greasy cream on her skin if she is bothered by pimples or blackheads.

Warm soapy water will often loosen blackheads. A tiny "blackhead remover" may be purchased at a drug store. This should be sterilized by boiling each time before using it. It is less apt to injure the surrounding tissue when taking out blackheads than the usual method of squeezing with the fingers. If a blackhead is stubborn and will not come out, do not continue to work on it. Pat the afflicted area with alcohol after treating it.

The best thing to do with pimples is to leave them strictly alone! Resist the urge to squeeze them! Let Nature pursue her own healing process. Sometimes an antiseptic salve or lotion, used in moderation, appears to help this condition. But to get rid of it, requires patient vigilance.

Measurements are level; recipes for 4 to 6

Potted Smoked Beef Tongue: Cover a 4-to-5-lb. smoked beef tongue with cold water; bring to rapid boil. Simmer 5 minutes, drain.

Meantime, prepare 1 cup small-cubed peeled carrots, 1 cup small-diced rutabaga and 1 cup minced celery or ½ tsp. celery seed.

Spoon half of vegetables into large casserole or Dutch oven. Add tongue, topping it with remaining vegetables. Pour in 3 cups boiling water or soup-stock, any kind.

Cover and simmer 3 hours, or until fork-tender, on top of range or in slow oven, 325 deg.-350 deg. F.

Serve meat sliced with vegetable gravy made from residue in casserole or arrange meat on bed of cooked vegetables.

Sauce Meuniere is perfect to serve with filet of sole, brook trout, broiled shad roe filet mignon, small portions of beef or lamb steaks or broiled small game birds. I often spoon a little over a poached egg or use it to spark leaf spinach, asparagus, broccoli spears, broiled or sauteed eggplant, boiled small onions, sliced peeled zucchini or squares of baked acorn or winter squash.

The Chef Makes Sauce Meuniere

To make Sauce Meuniere, place ½-cup butter in small saucepan. Heat until lightly browned. Butter should have the fragrant aroma of toasted nuts. Then add ½ tbsp. lemon juice and ½ tsp. minced parsley.

Spareribs on the family menu

With pork in such good supply this spring, it's an excellent time to turn to the pork section of your cookbook and to try some of the flavorful combinations suggested there. You will find pork teams well with fruits, vegetables, herbs, spices and a wide variety of sauces to make dishes that are spicy sweet, piquantly tart or both.

Take spareribs for example. You can bake them with or without stuffing, either whole or cut in serving-size pieces, in a moderately slow oven (325°F.) until tender and well done, about 2 hours. For special flavor add soy sauce, ginger, sage, thyme, oregano, paprika, cloves, chili powder, marjoram, dry mustard or garlic, all good seasonings for pork.

Try spareribs, also, baked with apple, celery or onion slices on top. Or, after browning drain off the fat and add canned tomatoes, sauerkraut or baked beans and finish cooking. For barbecued spareribs baste the ribs with a lively barbecue sauce several times during baking.

Although spareribs are most frequently cooked in the oven, a favorite meal in many homes is boiled spareribs served with boiled potatoes and sauerkraut. Seasonings are cooked with the spareribs and chopped onion, celery and carrot or other vegetables may be included for additional good flavor.

Chinese-style sweet and sour spareribs are easily made by cooking bite-size pieces of pork in the oven or on top of the stove, then simmering them slowly for a short time in a sweet-and-sour sauce.

Sauce timely and delicious too

The appearance of large quantities of genuine golden maple syrup in eastern market stalls and on store shelves across the country, is a sure sign of spring in Canada. One really nice way to add the distinctive flavour of this exclusive North American sweet to spring-time meals is to use it as a sauce on desserts such as ice cream, cottage pudding, blanc mange, bavarian creams, custards, raw fruits and practically every apple dessert.

Besides using the syrup itself as a sauce, just as it comes from the can or bottle, the home economists of the Consumer Section thought you might like to have three of their maple sauce recipes. The first is simply maple syrup thickened by boiling and chilling, the second is thickened with cornstarch and the third is a light and fluffy type of sauce, containing marshmallows and egg white.

Maple Sauce I

Boil 2 cups of maple syrup in a large saucepan for 10 minutes. Chill. Use as a sauce on ice cream, rice pudding, etc.

Maple Sauce II

2 Teaspoons cornstarch, ¼ cup water and 1 cup maple syrup.

Mix cornstarch and water, then blend in maple syrup. Bring to boiling point stirring constantly to prevent lumping, then continue cooking for 3 to 4 minutes, stirring occasionally. Serve hot or cold.

Maple Marshmallow Sauce

¼ Cup maple syrup, few grains salt, 6 marshmallows (quartered) and 1 egg white, stiffly beaten.

Bring syrup to boiling point, add salt and cut up marshmallows and stir until smooth. Pour slowly over stiffly beaten egg white, beating constantly with a spoon until blended.

Cheese waffles are all-time treat

It's not often that one can find a dish that is equally at home for breakfast, lunch or dinner . . . that can fill in for the main course or for dessert. But Cream Cheese Waffles is just such a recipe. These light, golden waffles have a crisp crust and a melt-in-the-mouth flavor. They're a natural for breakfast. And at lunch or dinner they can be served under chicken à la king, or with sausages or bacon. Topped with lots of butter, syrup or jam . . . or sweetened with fruit and ice cream . . . these waffles take a bow as a delectable and intriguing dessert. The latter idea has special appeal if one seeks a "conversation piece" for a dinner party.

Cream Cheese Waffles

(Yield—about 4 servings)

1¼ Cups once-sifted all-purpose flour, or 1½ cups once-sifted pastry flour, 2½ teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 package (4 ounces) cream cheese, 1 tablespoon granulated sugar, 3 well-beaten eggs, 1 cup milk and 3 tablespoons shortening, melted.

Sift together the all-purpose or pastry flour, baking powder, and salt. Cream the cheese and sugar together until very soft. Gradually blend in the egg and continue to beat until mixture is smooth. Stir in the milk and melted shortening. Add the sifted dry ingredients and beat to make a smooth, thin batter.

Apple juice is vitaminized

The Canada Department of Agriculture advises that approximately 95% of the apple juice packed in 1958 was fortified with Vitamin C. This is quite a step forward, especially when it is realized that the fortification of apple juice is a voluntary action by the packers. One of the biggest reasons for the increase in the percentage of vitaminized apple juice is that the Canadian consumer has become much more conscious of the value of Vitamin C in the diet generally and in juices particularly.

Fortification or vitaminization of apple juice means that at the time of packing 50 mg. of Vitamin C (ascorbic acid) per 100 c.c. of apple juice are added. This insures that at any time within 12 months of the date of packing there will be present at least 35 mg. of ascorbic acid per 100 c.c. of juice. It has been found that immediately following the processing of the apple juice the amount of ascorbic acid has been reduced to about 45 milligrams and after that there is a gradual loss, the amount depending on storage conditions. From time to time samples of apple juice are picked up by government inspectors in the stores, to be analyzed in order to assure that the amount of Vitamin C has not gone below the prescribed 35 milligrams per 100 c.c.

It takes a blend of three or four varieties of apples to make the best apple juice. Most packers try to blend one or two hard apple varieties with other softer sweet apple varieties. Naturally, apples that are juicy and rather tart make the best apple juice. When it is realized that 1400 pounds of apple juice are obtained from one ton of fresh apples, or approximately 11 ounces of juice from 1 pound of apples, it is easy to understand why the juice has such fine, fresh, full flavour.

In making apple juice the fruit is first sorted and trimmed, then washed. The apples are ground in a hammer mill or other device and then pressed in a hydraulic press, the juice draining into special tanks. The apple juice is filtered and clarified, after which the oxygen is removed with vacuum equipment.

In the canning process the juice is sterilized by heating to 194°F. and from here it is canned of bottled. The containers are turned on their sides and held one minute before being completely water cooled. This treatment gives the best juice with a minimum of "cooked" flavor.

There are 18 packers of apple juice in Canada — four plants in Nova Scotia, two in Quebec, seven in Ontario and five in British Columbia. In 1957 these plants processed over 62,136,700 pounds of apple juice. The output for 1958 was even greater.

A great deal has been written and spoken about strontium-90 in recent weeks. Translated, this defines a radioactive product of nuclear explosions and it is the sort of definition that can give people the jitters.

Some qualified physicists have said there are dangerous amounts of strontium-90 in milk. It has been said these amounts can cause leukemia or bone cancer. However, as yet there doesn't seem to be any need to drop the tea or switch from cream to lemon for the afternoon brew.

Federal health department officials, carefully measuring the strontium-90 contents of powdered milk samples collected across Canada since 1955, found the strontium-90 level not harmful to health.

Amid a wave of reports that the radioactive product may be reaching dangerous levels, other Canadian scientists have supported the health department's statement by saying there is no danger at present.

Dr. Robert M. Taylor, executive director of the Canadian Cancer Society and former medical director of the Chalk River plant of Atomic Energy of Canada, said in a speech in Toronto last week that "the dose to the human body from the present atomic fallout is estimated to be less than two per cent of that due to the natural background."

Dr. H. G. Thode, research director at McMaster University in Hamilton, said we should be worrying more about over-exposure to x-rays than about strontium-90. "If we are worried about radiation," he said, "we should start reducing the exposure to the radiation of such as x-rays, which we do know can cause cancer."

Meanwhile, an Ottawa biochemist has found a step on the way to removing some strontium-90 from milk. In his experiment, still in the test-tube stage, he removed the radioactive product without destroying the food value of the milk. To make the separation he used downex-50, a substance similar to water softeners used by housewives.

Education Leader

Ontario's education system has had a springtime going-over. At the end of a five-day convention of the Ontario Educational Association a Scottish-born housewife emerged as president of Canada's largest school organization.

She is Mrs. Jean Milne Watson, 52, from a hamlet near Woodstock in southwestern Ontario, who has been a school trustee and executive secretary of the Ontario School Trustees Association.

Her attitude toward Canadian schooling includes greater emphasis on education, trimming some of the fat out of school curriculums and teaching children to work harder.

Wife of postmaster and the mother of three, she still has one teen-age daughter in school.

Opera Booster

Herman Geiger-Torel has a forthright suggestion about what to do with children if they can be pried away from the television set: get them interested in opera.

The director of Toronto's Opera Festival Association says that because parental influence is lacking, it's difficult to get children and opera together.

Garden Graph

By DEAN HALLIDAY

HOW TO SEED SEEDS

Although a comparatively small quantity of seeds is required to plant the average home garden, most people buy too much and plant it too thickly. It pays to buy the best seeds, but don't waste them.

Tiny seeds, for example, can be handled more easily and with less waste if they are mixed with 10 times the amount of sand. Unless mixed with sand in this proportion tiny seeds are apt to be planted too thickly.

Small, dark seeds, or those which are the same color as the soil, may be whitened with talcum powder before planting. When this is done the seeds are more easily seen and properly spaced, as shown in the Garden-Graph.

When ordering seeds, one should take into account the fact that the very small seeds, such as lettuce and carrots, can be spaced 4 to 5 seeds per inch. The medium size seeds, such as radishes and beets, can be spaced 2 seeds to the inch, while large seeds, such as beans and peas, are usually planted about 2 inches apart.

Check soil often after adding lime

Soils to which lime has been added should be tested every three of four years for acidity or over-liming, says W. S. Richardson, senior agronomist at the Experimental Farm, Lennoxville, Quebec. Supplying calcium and magnesium to the plant as a food, lime is needed for the success of most farm crops, potatoes and tobacco being the notable exceptions.

Principally lime acts as a soil amendment, affecting the soil reaction, the tilth and/or the bacterial life.

Tests should be made to ascertain the right amount of lime needed to bring the best results.

For acid correction purposes 56 pounds of quick lime, 74 pounds of hydrated lime and 100 pounds of ground limestone are equal. The last-named has to be ground fine enough to pass through a sieve with 60 meshes to the inch.

Sandy loams require only half as much as clay loams and mucks but they require lime oftener as it is leached faster from the light soils.

While lime makes phosphorus available, over-liming may tie up some of the minor elements, especially boron and manganese.

Cashier wins top Canadian award

Mrs. Burridge, a Dominion Stores' cashier, was named by a board of judges among candidates representing 2,500 super markets in the United States and Canada in the International Checker of the Year Awards, sponsored annually by Super Market Institute and the National Cash Register Company. Competition is based on customer courtesy, a co-operative attitude toward fellow workers, and cash-register accuracy.

Mrs. Burridge has been a cashier for 10 years. The wife of a fire-fighter, she was chosen to represent her store through customer balloting and management appraisal. She becomes eligible for selection as one of the 10 regional winners who will go to Atlantic City May 25 for the final judging to select the 1959 International Checker of the Year.

EFFICIENT FEEDING AND LIVESTOCK MANAGEMENT

By Dr. Gustav Bohstedt
Emeritus Professor of Animal Husbandry
University of Wisconsin

A Start Toward the 4-H Show

With spring well along, it is none too early to perfect plans for that club calf, lamb, or pig show that comes around about August.

Keep an eye on the young animal that is the oldest permissible in its age classification and therefore is presumably the largest, for size of animal in a show ring, all other things being equal, always makes a good impression.

Dr. Bohstedt

Let us also remember that a calf that is easily led on the halter, or a lamb or pig that is easily guided and does not require a lot of "rassling", has that much in its favor. So, become familiar with your prospect, or rather the other way around, have your show animal become familiar with you and get to like you.

This is greatly facilitated if the young creature looks to you for its feed and for its grooming. As the weather gets warmer, the animal will relish an occasional sudsy washing.

A hair coat or a fleece will not grow out immediately after a clipping or trimming, so plenty of time should be allowed for shaping and sleeking up an animal.

No individual can win in any stiff competition if it stands on feet that need trimming. Simple tools are all that are necessary for shaping feet, just so care is taken with this important operation.

Depending on the condition of the horns, where horns are involved in the first place, their shaping may take the longest of any of the preparations for show. Sometimes suitable weights are required to bring down wrongly upturned horns.

Naturally, as show season approaches, considerable time will be spent in rasping and polishing horns and feet to get them to shine and thus greatly enhance the appearance of the animal.

There are many ins and outs in the fitting of club show animals, and where more information is desired on this subject, whether for beef calves, dairy calves, lambs or pigs, feel free to drop a request to me. Just write to: Doctor Bohstedt, 221 North LaSalle Street (Rm. 507), Chicago 1, Illinois.

Question: When salt is consumed by an animal, or man, do the sodium and chlorine always function in combination, as they exist in salt, or do they split apart and behave independently?

Answer: They do both. At the City College of New York it was found that in only 26 per cent of the cases were sodium and chlorine eliminated in the proportion that they exist in salt, which is sodium chloride. For the rest each of these two elements was present in other combinations, showing that the body has need of each in different combinations for many vital purposes.

Pea varieties for home gardens

Three varieties of peas have emerged as the most reliable for home gardens in short-season localities. The three are — Tiny Tim, Arctic Sweet, and Progress No. 9.

These varieties were compared with others of similar maturity in five-year tests at the Federal Experimental Farm at Morden, Manitoba, and by selected co-operators in the Prairie Provinces.

Tiny Tim, introduced by the Morden farm, has performed well in the parkland fringe of the plains area. It grows about six inches taller there than the average nine-inch height recorded at Morden. The plants withstand late spring frosts and high winds better than other early varieties. Because of this they mature more rapidly and are ready for use consistently early in most years.

Home Type

The Arctic Sweet variety is the sweetest of the three, and yields more than most other varieties in its class. Because the plants are short the variety is strictly a home garden type. The peas are well flavored and good for home canning and freezing.

Progress No. 9 produces large-berried, deep green peas — well suited for freezing. This variety has short plants and the pods are ready for use soon after those of the Arctic Sweet. As a main crop home garden variety, it has been highly successful in short-season areas.

Seed of these varieties is available from seed retailers.

Hog cholera in N'fld herd

Ottawa — About 295 hogs near St. John's, Newfoundland, were ordered slaughtered after hog cholera was diagnosed in the herd, Dr. K. F. Wells, Veterinary Director General, announced recently.

The owner was licensed to feed the pigs garbage collected from a nearby United States military air base, and officials believe the infection came from the garbage.

Precautionary measures were taken immediately, and there is no evidence that the disease has spread.

Hog cholera in Canada was last reported in October, 1957, when it was confined to one small Ontario herd. The last serious outbreak occurred in Western Ontario in the fall of 1953.

The Newfoundland hog producer will be compensated to the market value of his swine. The premises have been cleaned and disinfected, and will remain vacant for several weeks.

Midnight crash in shopping centre

Wedged into the corner of a brick storefront, is the car of Pierre-Paul Mantha, 23, of 514 Meikle Street, which swerved out of control at 2.15 last Sunday morning, after striking a car parked in the centre of Main Street. The four occupants of the car were taken to the Providence Hospital by ambulance, being treated by Dr. F. Walter FitzGerald and Dr. Marc Papineau.

Medical bursary for postgraduate hospital study

Dr. John C. MacKimmie, a native of Lachute and practising physician here, has been awarded one of ten bursaries for the Dominion of Canada to assist in attending a concentrated two-week postgraduate course in one of three Canadian hospitals. The bursaries, of $500 each, have been accepted by the College of General Practice (Medicine) of Canada and are offered by the Schering Corporation Ltd. One bursary was allotted to each province.

The bursaries were thought necessary in an effort to get Canadian doctors to complete their postgraduate work in Canadian hospitals, rather than go to the United States. The program of training in each hospital is moulded on one now in operation in the Montreal General Hospital, and provides that a course of study can be arranged at any time on application by the award winner to the hospital of his choice.

The course of study will include daily ward rounds and attendance at all conferences and surgical procedures, techniques and specialist clinics in either medical or surgical work, and the participant may select the various things which he would like to do during this period. One of the staff men will be assigned to supervise the course and to meet with the participant from time to time to discuss any problems.

Out of the bursary award, the sum of $100 is to be paid to the hospital and the balance to help cover the participant's expenses. Participating hospitals are the Montreal General and St. Luc Hospital in Montreal, and the University Hospital in Saskatoon, Sask.

At press time, Dr. MacKimmie was still awaiting official notification of the award — which had been announced at a Medical dinner in Toronto last Thursday, at which Dr. Jules Lafleur was in attendance. Dr. MacKimmie states the award came somewhat as a surprise and that, at present, he has not given consideration to when, or at which institution, he will take advantage of the course.

BNS district branch managers at Bank conference

Gordon C. Higginson, local manager of the Bank of Nova Scotia, chats with George C. Hitchman, assistant general manager, during a conference of BNS branch managers held at the Queen Elizabeth Hotel in Montreal. More than 50 managers from different communities in the province attended the sessions, which covered such bank topics as credit, staff training and selection, premises, business development and modern accounting methods. From left to right — J. H. M. Jutras, manager, St. Andrews East; Mr. Higginson; Mr. Hitchman; L. C. Neville, manager, Grenville; A. M. Gervais, manager, Brownsburg.

(Our District Correspondent)

The Brownsburg Home and School Association held its second-to-last meeting of the term on April 22. Although there were a number of other important meetings scheduled for the same evening, 40 parents attended to appoint a nominating committee to select a proposed slate of officers for next year. Appointed to act on the committee were — Mrs. A. W. Lapp, Mrs. Ward Moncrieff, Mrs. Paul Villard, Mr. W. Morrow and Mr. D. Graham.

President Mervin Cowley announced that May 29 had tentatively been set as the date on which the Athletes' Dinner will be held. As was the case last year, all students taking part in the inter-school sports, and the students on the winning teams of the intra-mural sports program, will be invited to attend.

All parents present were disappointed to learn that the Home and School request, for the addition of a Physical Education teacher to the school staff, was turned down by the school board. While no action can be taken at the present time, Home and School does not intend to forget about this important phase of children's present-day educational needs.

The members were reminded of the library questionnaire which the school students had taken home. The Home and School Association is proposing to sponsor a parents' book shelf or lending library, if the response to the request for book donations is considered adequate. All H. and S. parents are requested to fill in the questionnaire and return it to the school or to the Association executive.

The theme of the Wednesday-evening meeting was "Bicycle Safe-Riding". A color film featuring the well-known sports personality, Red Barber, showed the importance of parents taking an active interest in their children's bicycle riding habits. It is regrettable that all parents with children who ride bicycles could not have seen this film. Those who were fortunate enough to be present, showed great interest in the plans for a safe-riding program in Brownsburg. It is proposed that those children registering for the program will be given instruction in the handling and maintenance of bicycles, and then will receive a certificate of competence if they pass the test course to be held later in May or early in June.

Police Chief Richard Gagnon was present to answer the questions of parents interested in traffic regulations as they applied to bicycles, and will be on hand during the running of the test course.

Mr. G. King Amos has begun a series of safety lectures in the school, and has arranged for some of the students to assist the project by taking charge of the poster publicity.

Parents are asked to urge their children to take part in the program, so that safety may become more than just a word to them. It can become a way of life or — a way to save a life!

The next general meeting of the Association will take place on May 13 at 8 p.m. (second Wednesday).

Inquiry follows sudden death at Grenville

At the request of her husband, a hotel-keeper at Grenville, an autopsy has been performed on the body of the late Mrs. Jean Laframboise, who was found dead by Mr. Laframboise early on Tuesday morning of last week. She had been ill the previous evening, and had apparently suffered an attack during the night.

Sgt.-Det. Ralph Allen investigated the case, following the discovery of the body, and was convinced the death was due to natural causes, after having spoken with Mrs. Laframboise's doctor. No inquest was planned.

Rumors of poisoning arose later in the week, however, and following a request by Mr. Laframboise, the provincial medico-legal expert, Jean-Marie Roussel, was called in to perform an autopsy—the results of which, at this point, have proved negative. Sgt.-Det. Allen is still awaiting several analysis results before the tests are conclusive, however.

Investigation revealed that Mrs. Laframboise had not eaten for several days, and on the previous evening had complained of severe gas pains. Her death was accordingly believed due to acute gastritis.

Pierre-Paul Mantha, 23, and Jean-Guy St. Jean, 19, both of Lachute, were treated for severe concussion, shock, facial and head lacerations following an early-morning accident last Sunday, in which Mantha's 1951 sedan was demolished. Two other occupants, Jean-Guy Mantha and Jacques Gauthier, both 22, suffered minor injuries and lacerations, all four being treated at the Providence Hospital.

Waste paper canvass in Lachute this Saturday

The 1st and 2nd Lachute Boy Scout Troops plan to hold their spring canvass for waste paper on Saturday, May 2.

The paper drives held by the Scouts are a means by which they raise funds to carry on their good work with boys, in training them to be better citizens. This year, the drives are of particular significance, for most of the funds raised will be spent on the extension and modernization of their own meeting hall, on the J. C. Wilson property. Some of the funds will also be spent on camping equipment and supplies, to enable the boys to gain valuable outdoor camping experience during the summer months.

Residents of Lachute are asked to place any newspapers or waste paper they may have saved, outside in a location that can easily seen on Saturday morning. The drive will start at 9 a.m.; in the event of rain, it will be held on the following Saturday.

Tying the papers in small easily-handled bundles, or placing them in cartons, makes it much easier to carry and pack, and ensures that the papers don't blow away.

Taximan attacked and robbed; three face charge

Three Ontario men were arrested on Thursday last following investigation by Det.-Sgt. Ralph Allen, Sgt. Roger Massie, and Grenville Police Chief Laurent Davidson. The trio were charged in St. Jerome court with the offence of theft with violence.

The charges were laid following an episode on March 28 in which Grenville taximan Lionel Desforges, 58, was hired to drive three men to Brownsburg. Upon reaching Staynerville, he was instructed to take a side road, and when he stopped, two of the occupants gave him a severe beating, taking $7 and the taxi, which was later recovered in Grenville.

Jim Ross of the Maintenance Department of the ammunition plant of Canadian Industries Limited (centre) receives a safety award from Sir Alexander Fleck, chairman of Imperial Chemical Industries Limited, during the latter's recent visit to Brownsburg. Employees of the ammunition plant recently won their second successive C-I-L Prize, highest award under the company's no-accident record plan. At left is K. W. McGibbon, works manager. The last accident at the plant occurred in November 1957.

Two Ch. Commerce regions seek master plan for tourist appeal

Two regional groups of the National Chamber of Commerce, the Laurentides and the Western Quebec, have decided to pool their efforts in a master plan for tourist development of the combined districts. The two bodies met recently in Hull, Que., coinciding with a visit to Ottawa by the Laurentides section. In this party nine members were present from the Lachute Chamber of Commerce.

J. Adelard Ratelle, of Ste. Agathe, chaired the discussions on the tourist plan, and a joint committee on this scheme will meet again at Ste. Agathe, on May 20-21, to decide on their procedure.

"A Tourist Paradise"

Main purpose is to study all points and objects of tourist attraction in the area, and to plan interesting tours out of Montreal and Hull, especially. Several speakers stressed the assets of Western Quebec and the Laurentians — Armand Turpin, new mayor of Hull, branding this a "tourists' paradise".

Marcel Deschambault, M.P. for Terrebonne, urged emphasis on the French-Canadian character of any plan for tourist development, also that efforts should be made to win back the American trade, which appeared to have drifted away from this area in recent years.

A master plan would seek to link the metropolis of Montreal and Ottawa, the national capital, with well serviced itineraries via the Laurentian Mountains and the Gatineau Valley, and to organize trips by rail, bus and auto, so that the "Laurentian Tour" may become as reputed on the map and in the public mind as the so-called "Saguenay Trip" and "Gaspe Tour".

Fine results as 'blitzers' report on Cancer drive

At a "post-blitz" reporting of workers in the Cancer Crusade, Monday evening in the Legion Hall, returns of the door-to-door canvass warranted high optimism for a substantial increase over last year's donations. From Lachute East, Lachute Mills and Ayersville, the returns were all encouragingly higher, and if the same trend materializes in the rural areas under Lachute district, there is indication of fine results from this individual canvass.

Messrs. Léopold Carrière and Dick MacLean, the joint chairmen, were on hand to welcome the returning workers. Both expressed satisfaction, and sincere appreciation to the team captains and the 210 individual canvassers in Greater Lachute.

Returns from the "special names" appeal, the business firms and industries, together with the rural collections, were still unreported at press time. It is hoped to give a more complete account in next week's Watchman.

Mr. Léopold Carrière expressed appreciation to the Legion for their hospitality in use of their Memorial hall, and to the ladies of the Legion Auxiliary, who kindly provided refreshments to returning workers and organizers of the blitz canvass.

At Brownsburg

Mr. Larry Pressault, chairman for the Brownsburg canvass, is less encouraged by the results in that community, which (according to report on Tuesday) show a drop from previous achievements.

Workers busy for 'Concerts' membership drive

Canvassing material was distributed last week to workers in the Community Concerts drive, and these workers are currently renewing memberships for the 1959-60 season.

The regular Campaign Week will be held May 4-9, with headquarters at the Bédard Ltée store (by courtesy of the proprietor, Mr. J. E. Léonard). The Columbia Artists representative, Mrs. A. Cameron, will be here to lend enthusiasm. Campaign chairman is Mme Jacques Bedard, with Mrs. Don Titman co-chairman. The annual rally of workers will be held during Campaign Week, next Wednesday, May 6, at the Legion Hall, when a check will be made on the campaign coverage, and concentration of new enrolments. Telephone number for cantacting headquarters during Campaign Week, is LO 2-5055.

Mr. Jacques Bedard, secretary of the Association this year, has performed a mammoth job in connection with the campaign.

In the season just ended, there has been general approval to the executive's choice of artists, and the attendances have been good. A marked interest has been noted on the part of students and teenage music lovers, many of whom subscribe individually at reduced rates, while others are sponsored by club subscriptions.

With the many newcomers and expanding population, the executive anticipate a higher membership this year — which, in turn, will increase the budget for bigger and better concerts. A big potential for new memberships is seen in neighboring centres such as St. Andrews, Cushing, Brownsburg, Hawkesbury, St. Jerome and St. Eustache.

New industry establishing in foundry building

A new woodworking plant for the manufacture of sewing machine cabinets, is presently in operation in the McOuat Foundry building and according to Menfred Merz, a partner in the concern, it is expected that a dozen men will be on the payroll by the early summer.

Mr. Merz, 24-year-old native of Germany, has been in Canada for five years and was recently in charge of a Montreal plant employing some 30 workers. . . . He has been in Lachute for three weeks setting up machinery, and at present has three employees assisting with the operations. Fernand Pellerin, the other partner of Expert Woodwork Co., will start at the plant early in June.

Former Lachute airman

LAC Ronald N. Moore

Leading Aircraftsman Ronald Norman Moore, 24 (son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Moore of Vancouver, formerly of Lachute) has been transferred to RCAF Station Holdberg, on the northern tip of Vancouver Island, B.C., from the RCAF's 5 Air Division Headquarters in Vancouver, B.C.

LAC Moore, a fighter control operator, served at RCAF station Tofino, also on Vancouver Island, prior to his transfer to Vancouver.

Ronald, who was visiting recently in Lachute, was educated at Lachute High School and Macdonald Agricultural College prior to enlisting in the RCAF in 1954.

Conclusion of dealings with the Barron Estate after relinquishing of the proposed arena site, was reported by President Phil Tremblay, and finances and activities in the first season's operation of the skating rink were reported by Bert Rigg, at last week's meeting of the Lions Club.

Bert Rigg, as chairman of the Lions Rink Governing Body, had a very satisfying report, showing a surplus on activities and several unsolicited donations, to permit a reduction of the bank loan for capital costs. Apart from this, the winter program had adequately fulfilled expectations for the first season. Publicity to the project in the Lions' Canadian and International publications had brought repercussions from as far as Texas and California.

Two new members were introduced by Lion Dr. Eric Mongeon and inducted by Horace Lamarche, past District Deputy. The newcomers, both Lachute businessmen, Pierre Giroux and Yves Gratton—also two new Lions inducted at the previous meeting, Clifford Lowe and Jacques Bourgouing — were a credit to the efforts of Lion Dick Pearson as membership chairman.

Léopold Carrière gave a boost to the Cancer Crusade, of which he is joint-chairman. Gérard Lefebvre reported on the success of his three young charges in the Public Speaking contests. Plans were mentioned for the annual car raffle (Ossie Carrière, chairman) and the re-engagement of Le Grand Pobert, sensational hypnotist, for "Friday Night at the Fair" (June 19 next).

A highlight of this meeting was Rotarian Linton Armstrong's talk on the curlers' trip to Scotland last December, in which the ideals of international fellowship were demonstrated in terms of unsurpassed hospitality. Mr. Armstrong's impressions of the tour (previously reported in these pages) were condensed to a brief but highly interesting talk. The speaker was fittingly introduced by Donald M. Hay and thanked by Ian Gordon.

Acting on a resolution passed March 11 last, Ayersville Municipality is taking steps to borrow $30,000 for sewer installations. Offers have been invited for the sale of debentures — to be received at the secretary's office up to 8 p.m. Monday, May 4, when they will be opened and considered at the regular Council assembly.

These municipal bonds will be redeemable in series from April 1, 1960, to April 1, 1979, with interest not less than 4½% nor more than 5½% per annum, payable semi-annually on April 1 and October 1.

Art Association annual meeting this Saturday

Members of the Argenteuil Art Association are reminded of the annual meeting of this group, Saturday, May 2, at 2.30 p.m. in the St. Andrews municipal hall.

The nominations committee will present a slate of officers for the 1959 season, and the program of activities will be discussed. Membership fees will be accepted for the current year.

It is hoped all present members and others absorbed in art as a pastime, either actively or as a cultural interest, will attend the meeting and support the objectives of this group.

Springtime is hesitant at Main Duck Island

"OUTDOOR ROUND-UP" — by Bob Atchison

South Bay, Picton, Ont.

Monday, April 13 —

Today it was all work — trying to get everything in shape for the summer. Our cottage took a beating during the winter, along with a few broken windows and the front door. With the windows being broken, you can imagine what a mess the place was in. Some birds sure wintered here, at any rate! Imagine having to shovel snow out of your rooms. Such are the joys of this life.

As soon as the weather starts warming up though, everything is forgotten. At least the cottage is still standing. From the number of trees down, I wouldn't have been surprised if the cottage had gone too.

We only saw one Deer on a short walk; but we were not trying to check on them this trip. Another thing, it's hardly worth while using the Jeep; the track is so bad, you can walk faster. The Geese we saw last night going south after heading north, brought in a lot more; the noise from them was terrific. They are going to spend the night with us, as they can be seen out in the lake about half a mile. I'm curious as to why one flock was flying south. It sure makes anyone who is supposed to KNOW these things feel very foolish at times!

Very light winds and getting warmer. It won't be long now before we are in swimming — the end of June, anyway! Anyone falling in this lake just now is wise just to sink. Man, is it cold! It's a good job fish are cold-blooded, otherwise they would freeze too.

Wednesday, April 15 —

Still being blessed with nice weather. It was 50 today, and that is very hard to take. We are still trying to get our cottage fixed up. What with painting, etc., there isn't much time to do anything else. Edith has decided that the cottage should have at least one more big room. Everything is here for the building of it, so guess who is elected!

A small launch was out this way today, surprisingly enough. (That is how you got one letter so soon.) It was a small fisher, 22 ft., but as the weather was so nice they had decided to try out this way. I was very glad they did. I also said in my previous letter, there wouldn't be a boat up or down for at least another 10 days. One went up and one down, today. It was slow going for them, in the ice. It really is worth watching to see the great chunks of ice going by. Some of them look to be big enough to float Lachute on.

There are not too many birds around just at the present. A few crows, and more to come. I guess the other birds will be showing up anytime now. We haven't seen any of the Bald Eagles or Ospreys as yet, but they are probably around. That might be the reason for the acute shortage of Pheasants. A few pair of them and the Island would be cleaned out in no time. There are also millions of Gulls. I don't think we ever saw as many at any other time on this Island. It's a very good thing none of them got into the house! The noise they make is terrific, and you can't scare them away either.

Thursday, April 16 —

Hazy and light winds, but nice and warm. Today we were on the corner of St. Catherine and Peel First the fishermen came in to see if we were O.K. It was nice of them to take the time and trouble to visit us. Their nets were out about 5 miles, and that is quite a jaunt to come just to visit. They stayed for lunch, then just after they left a very unexpected visitor came out. No less than Col. Benson. As Edith said, it's bad enough having to watch for them on the lake, without the sky too. He stayed for about two hours and was leaving for Washington. Naturally he was going visiting. He told us he would be seeing us on Monday.

I also found out that there are at least three Deer on the little island named Yorkshire, about 220 yards from the Main. Actually it's a continuation of Main, but there is a channel dividing it — so the name Yorkshire. I spotted a movement on the island from the binoculars, and getting closer to the tip I could make out at least three Deer. A visit is due there very shortly. They got over the ice during the winter, and more than likely found better feed there, so stayed. Now how do I get them back to Main?

Also saw a few nice, fat muskrats. They look as though they are living on the fat of the land. A couple more warm days and the snakes will be on their way out. We'll be glad to see them, too — strange as it may seem. At least when you see them, you know good weather is on the way.

The trees haven't started to bud as yet and to tell the truth there is still a lot of snow in spots. It will be great to see the last of that for awhile. . . . It's dark outside while writing this, and I can see the lights of another boat going down the lake. Spring is here!

Friday, April 17 —

It was pretty warm walking as we covered the whole eastern end of the Island. Three deer showed up, two Eagles, no Pheasants, hundreds of Ducks and Geese in the pot-holes. With so much water on the land, it looks like a very good layout for the Ducks. A funny think also, we didn't spot a muskrat. Maybe with the Eagles nesting down at the point, they will be staying clear of there. A lot of birds of all descriptions were also seen. They are not too scared of the bigger birds; besides, it would take about 50 of the small ones to make a fair meal for the Eagles.

We hope to get up into the hardwoods tomorrow and then maybe we will have a good picture of how all the game fared. A couple of Raccoons are still with us, also the Snapping Turtles — we saw two of them today basking in the sun. They are mean-looking critters. They were very slow in their movements, as I guess they had just come out of hibernation. Anyway, now there are two less snappers on the Island; as far as I'm concerned they are as bad as the water snakes.

You know what we were just talking about? Frog's legs! We can hear some of the peepers right near us; naturally we think of our stomachs. I'm still waiting to get some Perch, and up to now not one.

The Voles are also out, not very many of them as yet, but we won't rush them. In another week they'll be all over the place. Then Goldie, the dog, gets down to business. Maybe have a Vole coat by the time we get back! Just a few thousands of them for that job, and there will still be plenty left over. Let's hope the severe winter killed some of them off.

Saturday, April 18 —

I can see a fishing tug about two miles out; it looks as though he is heading this way (for free coffee). Maybe I'll get this posted in time for the next edition.

There are a number of lakers going down the American side, out of moth balls come spring. There have only been the two down the Canadian side, but it won't be too long now before we can look out and see them going by. The tug is on its way into the dock, so — a final note:

Features of the conference this year will include extended discussion of policies and resolutions, intensive workshop sessions on administration, program planning and school education, and an address by Dr. J. D. Jefferis, dean of education at Bishop's University in Sherbrooke.

The time of the clean-up

WE'VE BEEN WAITING for the mud in our yard to approach a semblance of terra firma. It is perhaps safe now to deliver an exhortation on the Clean-Up.

We address this message to our fellow residents in town, confident also that rural-dwellers will follow suit, by setting their farm yards and gardens in order when the ground dries sufficiently and conditions are favorable.

Snowdrifts have left in their wake unsightly trash and litter, fallen branches, leaves and debris from the winter's garbage. A little effort with the rake and broom will work wonders. Gardening time will present an early opportunity for some practical effort in beautification, and painting will improve the exteriors of homes and premises. It is none too soon to plan, and to put in practice these elementary duties of good citizenship. The urge is "catching" — let's start an epidemic.

Lest one needs convincing, it might be suggested the reader should approach this town just once, by road or rail, and view the yards and properties with the complete detachment of a stranger. Could that be possible, the first impression could spur some drastic action!

This business of La Grippe

THE PREVALENCE of 'flu or grippe in the past month has been a general topic, but little of a remedial nature has emerged from all this comment.

It would be alarming to take stock of all the man-hours of labor and the class-hours of study lost through the recent epidemic. Taking it from a man who knows (one of our overworked physicians) the time lost in this community has been terrific. And according to this family doctor, there is something that can be done about it. Periodic vaccination will in most cases prevent infection and avert the malady, he affirms.

We are all apt to be negligent in this matter, says our doctor friend. Newspapers and radio reports give information on an epidemic in Europe or the United States; it can't happen to US, we say. . . . One of our youngsters takes the 'flu; we brush it off as a trifling childhood ailment. Next thing we realize, the whole family becomes infected; every bedroom is a sick ward; housekeeping, nursing and meals, present a domestic impasse; our business suffers, duties pile up. Confronted with all these inconveniences we give little thought to the family doctor. Desperately overworked, his conscience is burdened with having to neglect certain patients in order to cope with more serious cases in the epidemic.

In voicing this viewpoint, the doctor has no desire to alarm the population, only to put people on their guard. Grippe usually is a spring and fall complaint and it is his conviction that a periodic inoculation with the required vaccine will ward off most of these seasonal attacks.

It'll happen every time

"NO SIR," said Eustache Coleridge, "it's all wrong. What with the latest medical discoveries and the newest inventions, a man dies just through carelessness. Not for me. I'm going to watch my step, and live forever."

So —

He had a complete physical examination every three months.

He always stayed inside when it rained.

He played golf, but never more than 18 holes at a time.

He never worked under a strain or drove himself.

He never worried.

The funeral of the late Eustache Coleridge will be held next Monday afternoon. He is survived by 18 specialists, four health institutes, six gymnasiums and numerous manufacturers of antiseptic appliances and sanitary foods.

(He had forgotten about driving too fast.)

Bearskins for Guards

THE WOODS of Northern Ontario and the stately environs of Buckingham Palace would seem to be worlds apart, but there's an unusual direct link.

The largest bear hunt Northern Ontario has ever seen is getting under way, to provide bearskin hats worn by Britain's most elite regiments in Her Majesty's Brigade of Guards.

How many bears will be shot, no one knows. But one bearskin provides only two of the towering headpieces, and there are five famous regiments of Guards — the Grenadier, the Coldstream, the Scots, Irish and Welsh. The first two regiments were organized in 1660, and all have distinguished themselves in battle.

These picked soldiers in their tall bearskins and scarlet tunics on ceremonial guard outside the historic walls of Buckingham Palace and Windsor Castle are probably the most photographed subjects in Britain.

But their headgear has been wearing out. A letter to The Times sometime ago complained that some "have no fringes at all and look curiously bald, while others have a slightly tattered, almost mangy look about them." The Brigade of Guards explained the bearskin hats are not easily found, and some now used are 50 years old.

This came to the attention of the people of Timmins, Ont., and Mayor Leo Del Villano organized the hunt. He said: "We'll send over all the bearskins we can get."

Since the word spread, the Timmins mayor has had letters from people all over the world. To those who protested, Mayor Del Villano says: "We are not planning any slaughter."

He declared that in former years these bears were destroyed because they were causing damage to bush camps and to prospectors' outfits. "Our plans are to make use of these animals."

Anyway, the bearskins will help to maintain an historic tradition. They seem to have first been worn by soldiers in the army of Prussia's Frederick the Great, who died in 1786. Napoleon's best foot soldiers wore them, and the Grenadier Guards adopted them after routing the bearskin-topped French Imperial Guards at Waterloo.

These days, the bearskin hats are purely ceremonial. About 20 inches tall, they are kept from sliding down over the soldier's forehead by an interior webbing that fits the skull. They are hot, and if the wearer is bucking a stiff wind he has to bend his head forward to keep them in place. . . . But they surely are picturesque.

PHYSICAL TRAINING — A more encouraging sign of the times is the rise of physical education in our schools. In former days physical education was confined to recess periods, but now most schools have a physical education program and physical directors, and boys and girls are placed on an equal basis as companions in sport and recreation.

FRANK EXPERT — About 1,000 boys and girls competed in a recent musical festival class at Winnipeg. Adjudicator Leslie Woodgate told them: "It's only the stupid boys and the silly girls who don't love singing."

REGARDING the current inquiry by the tariff board on textiles tariffs, Mr. Peter C. Allen, C-I-L president, stated in his report to the company's annual meeting: "It appears, so far, that the pressure of competition from cotton products of foreign origin, some of which affects our business, is not likely to be alleviated through the medium of higher tariff rates."

What Radio Prophet became Premier?

In 1935 William Aberhart, who had made his name as an orator and radio prophet while Dean of the Calgary Prophetic Bible Institute and who became a convert to the ideas of Social Credit in 1932, took over the premiership of Alberta. He remained premier and leader of the provincial Social Credit party until his death in 1943. One of his lieutenants, E. C. Manning, succeeded Aberhart and is still Social Credit premier of the province.

It was during the depths of the depression that Aberhart encountered the Social Credit theories of C. H. Douglas in a book by the actor Maurice Colborne. Profoundly impressed, Aberhart introduced Social Credit ideas into his broadcasts and they met with an enthusiastic response; his candidates swept the 1935 provincial election, winning 56 of the 63 seats.

Aberhart has been described as one of the most forceful personalities in politics of his day. He had few peers as orator and radio prophet and his powers of biblical exposition and homily held audiences spellbound.

Is there a Canadian town called Hardscrabble?

Not now, but it was once the nickname for the present town of Cobourg, Ont. It was apparently used because of the condition of the soil on the site of the community. Cobourg had other names as well. First settled in 1798, it was originally known as Amherst; then the name was changed to Hamilton. Finally, in 1819, it was renamed Cobourg in honor of the marriage of Princess Charlotte to Prince Leopold of Saxe-Cobourg. From 1836 to 1887 Victoria College, now a part of the University of Toronto, was located in this Northumberland County town.

Teenage puzzle

On the street where I live there are three very beautiful teenage girls, and I have known them for quite a few years. The other day I agreed to take them for a drive to see a sports event. . . . I drove . . . They talked. . . And I was puzzled.

These three beauties were short of dates! Not one had a steady boy friend. Yet wherever we went, I saw young lads, bug-eyed, glancing at us, wondering, I have no doubt, how this middle-aged codger had found himself such beauties.

During the game, they cheered loudly. They knew the young players, and they pointed out their heroes to me, but when the play came close to us I never heard them shout the names.

I began. "Attaboy, Dick!" I yelled, when Sue's hero was near us. He glanced up, saw me, saw the girls. He flushed a little, but dug in and played like a demented whirlwind for the balance of the game.

When the game ended, I tried to shepherd the girls to a point where they could applaud their winning heroes in person as they came off the ice. But no sir. These self-sufficient, sophisticated young gals were as shy as any story-book country maiden (real country maidens aren't as shy as writers would have us believe.)

We had a soft drink and chips at a nearby restaurant after the game. Pretty soon a few of the young lads drifted in. My girls acted as if they were completely disinterested. They took on that glassy-eyed, don't-give-a-darn expression.

No wonder they don't have dates! They scare the boys away.

So, driving home, I delivered a lecture to these neighborhood beauties. "When you want something in this world," said I, "you are wise to let the world know about it. And that includes boy friends. You acted as if you thought those lads had leprosy, while an hour before you were telling me they were dreamboats. Get wise. There's no law against a come-on smile, you know."

I think it registered. I know it did. Because the next day, one of the girls phoned one of the boys and congratulated him on their win. And the boys were having a party that night at one of their homes to celebrate, so the girls got invited, and they had a wonderful time.

What is a Bluff?

To most Canadians a bluff is most likely the term for a steep headland jutting into a body of water. But if you live on the Canadian prairies, the word is more apt to mean a grove of trees. This latter meaning is sometimes found in the names of prairie communities, such as Oak Bluff in Manitoba and Poplar Bluff in Saskatchewan.

North America likes to portray itself as a continent of social democracy, where a ditch-digger is just as good a man as a merchant prince.

But this regional myth, cherished by both Canada and the United States, is far from reality.

In fact, both countries number in their population a high percentage of snobs and climbers — people who work themselves into ulcers and heart attacks trying to prove that they are better than their neighbors.

A symbol of status may be anything from the key of the executive washroom to a university degree or a plush mansion with a socially correct address.

"One place where this status seeking is most vividly apparent is in the thousands of new one-layer suburbs where many Americans are establishing homes.

"The home, as shrewdly merchandised today, is much more than a family nest. It is becoming the nation's prime status symbol, the most favored way to stake a status claim."

Unbelievable as it may seem to some people, clever salesmen have learned that American status snobs are suckers for Fractured French tags in real estate advertisements:

They are also suckers for "prestige" gadgets like clothes dryers and air conditioners. Some people buy such machines strictly for use. Gadget snobs buy them for show.

Mr. Packard's depressing chronicle of human vanity raised echoes from my own experience. I remember how, in the house where we once used to live, some neighboring children used to make sneering remarks about our possessions.

In fact the children came from a family that had hocked its income for about ten years ahead, to buy those prestige gadgets. The parents had a clean, well-furnished house and empty minds.

Although I knew that these neighbors were dull people whose opinion didn't matter, I couldn't help feeling a little hurt by the children's sneers. And I felt sorry for the children, too, born as they were into such a mean-spirited house.

Spring In Cushing

The long-latched door is open
And the air is fragrant
With the perfume of budding trees;
And fresh-ploughed meadow leas.

Hepaticas and daffodils
Lift their tinted faces to the sun.
A swallow hovers over the barn roof,
Peeps beneath the eaves—settles

The reckless laughter of brooks
Mingles with the insistent drumming
Of a waterfall, and the cawing of rooks.

Gleaming eyes searching for food.
Small field-mice fashioning their nest
Shiver in dread, skirting the wood,
Close by the coppice gate,
Where the mother hawk, sheltering her brood,
Sits serene, content to wait.

Jennings - Coté

A Naval escort attended the bride and groom at St. Louis de France Church in Brownsburg last Saturday, when Odette Coté, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. A. René Coté, became the bride of Sub-Lieut. (S) Richard Jennings, R.C.N., the son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Jennings, of Vancouver, B.C. The ceremony took place at 11 o'clock, the Rev. Henri St. Denis, O.M., of Ottawa, officiating.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and attended by her sister, Miss Monique Coté, as maid-of-honor.

Lieut. André Coté, R.C.N. (R), was best man, and the ushers were Lieut. Cdr. (S) C. Crothers, R.C.N., and Lieut. Cdr. (SC) W. T Nash, U.S.N.

Mrs. Coté, mother of the bride, wore a draped gown of pure silk in amber shade. Her hat was made of chiffon petals of the same hue. She also had an autumn-haze mink stole, and her corsage was of Talisman roses.

Members of the Naval guard-of-honor were — Cdr. (S) L. Forbes, R.C.N.; Cdr. (S) K. Power, R.C.N.; Cdr. W. W. MacColl, R.C.N.; Lieut.-Cdr. E. Barclay, R.C.N.; Lieut.-Cdr. H. Clarke, R.C.N.; Lieut.-Cdr. (S) C. Crothers, R.C.N.; Lieut.-Cdr. (SC) W. T. Nash, U.S.N.; and Lieut. (SC) C. W. Rivey, U.S.N.

For travelling, the bride donned a Havana brown mohair dress, a green straw hat and beige-toned accessories. Completing her ensemble was a brown squirrel stole and an orchid corsage.

Missionary gives description of life in Africa

The Women's Missionary Society of Lachute United Church held their spring thank-offering meeting on April 23, with Mrs. Ralph Collins, missionary on furlough from Angola, West Africa, as guest speaker.

The first part of Mrs. Collins' address was in the form of a parable based on the making of an African mush basket, which is used to serve cornmeal mush to the menfolk.

The mush basket is made of two kinds of grass — coarse and fine — some bleached and some dyed yellow, black or dark red, with dyes made from boiling roots and leaves. An eyeless steel needle is used to punch holes for weaving the grasses into a beautiful pattern. . .

Building a church is like weaving the basket. Like the African woman, Christ must first have materials. People are there, but they have to be prepared, as the African woman prepares the grasses. . . . We are the people who provide the tools with which Christ works, through our givings, prayer, interest, love and study.

An African woman never weaves a basket without a pattern. By our interest, we show that we are happy to be woven into the pattern of Christ's Church, with other races — the yellows, the blacks, and the reds, all one family.

Mrs. Collins went on to say that Africans love the Psalms. The imaginery and pictures appeal to their imagination. The music appeals to them. They love to sing. The message of courage and victory appeals to them. Psalm 27 expresses what the African wants — life. They do not, as so many think, live a carefree life.

Mrs. Collins spoke of travel in Africa, where the long grasses hide the narrow twisting paths. The different kinds of drums, which speak of darkness, superstition and fear. The witch doctor, with his basket containing an assortment of gourds, animal horns, skulls, and the carved figures which he shakes as he chants. The difference between the Christian village and the others. The mother who had lost one of her twin babies and replaced it with a little wooden figure, carrying it with the other baby to fool the spirits, for fear they would take away the other one too. When she became a Christian, she said, "I have found life," and the missionary now has the little wooden figure.

Renew appeal for discarded eyeglasses

Around 250 pairs of discarded spectacles or lenses were received at the Dansereau Store, Main Street, in an appeal some time ago for the Lions Club "Bank of Light" project. There was delay in shipping these glasses, due to incomplete organization for their disposal. The machinery of distribution is now in action, however, and the appeal is renewed in this locality. Any having disused, unwanted eyeglasses, are asked to hand them in at the Dansereau Store for a good cause.

How Project Works

Lion Tony Zaplasky, well known CNIB fieldman, explained at the club meeting last week that this is an international venture for sight conservation, and the eyeglasses are being sent to India, where thousands of sight-impaired people need glasses but have no financial means of obtaining them. Through instrumentality of the Lions Club in Bombay, the donated eyeglasses from the American continent will be directed to centres where they are most needed.

This is the "Bank of Light" project, in which India was selected as first area for the promotion of a brotherly, humanitarian enterprise.

A large tract of land has been acquired in the Lake Macdonald district of Argenteuil County for establishment of a summer home colony which could eventually number thousands of homes. Laurentian Homesites Ltd., of which Bert Hart is president, has purchased some 1,500 arpents and has options covering 900 more, at a point some 20 miles from Lachute. There are five lakes on the property, and owners of the cottage-type homes would be given lake privileges on one or the other of these. As soon as weather conditions permit, construction is to be started on ten models of the various types of buildings planned for the development, with inspection late this summer. The cottages will be offered for 1960 occupancy.

"The thoughts of youth are long, long thoughts," and parents are prone to forget that teenage boys and girls are at an idealistic age. It may take planning, patience and considerable time to use their help in answering an appeal for clothing. Nevertheless, boys and girls are missing a character-building force in their lives if they are never brought face to face with the misery of others and given a little supervision and encouragement in doing what they can to lessen the suffering of less fortunate individuals.

In your own community, there are urgent appeals for clothing donations. If a busy mother is to respond to this, she must have the co-operation of her family.

How can she get this? Sons and daughters are busy too. They are told why clothes are needed and where they will be used.

Some boys, and most girls will be willing to search for the articles of their own clothing which they have outgrown, become tired of, or do not need, and which they would be glad to donate. Boys with bicycles may be able to give volunteer time in collecting clothes and taking them to the central room where sorting, packing and shipping for the community is being done. The help of older teenage girls in these centres may be much appreciated.

Some of the torn, worn or patched garments for grownups might be made over into clothes for children. A man's trousers worn at the seat can be remodelled into a small boy's pants. This remodelling all takes time and thought. Girls who are old enough to care for their own wardrobe can assist in the washing, mending and pressing necessary to put used clothing in as good shape as possible.

It might be a good idea for the mother with school-age children to list on a sheet of paper the tasks which fill her days — preparing meals, washing dishes, making beds, cleaning, washing, ironing, looking after a baby too perhaps. Her children can easily understand when it is presented to them in this way, that if mother is to have time to hunt up, wash, mend and press the articles of clothing she wants to give away, she must have help from them in this extra special task.

An alternative plan would be for a son or daughter to volunteer to take over some of mother's regular tasks in order to give more free time for this special task. A daughter might well assume greater responsibility for meal preparation and thereby gain valuable experience, or a son help in the weekly cleaning through the house.

The busy people in the world are happy people. A boy or girl will derive real satisfaction in taking some little part all their own in the family's response to this appeal for clothing for needy men and women and little children in our own communities or far away.

Raisin Caraway Casserole Bread

Many a fondly remembered but time-consuming recipe, thrives on modern cooking techniques. For instance, here is a recipe for home-made bread just like mother used to bake, but it can be made in half the time using the new batter method. The dough rises only once, and no kneading is required. Raisin Caraway Casserole Bread is a sweet loaf that will give new pep to the lunch-box and added zest to meal-time and snack-time any hour of the day. The amount of caraway seeds used in this recipe may be varied according to the tastes in your family. A teaspoon of caraway seeds gives a delicate, but definite flavor; however, two teaspoons may be used for a more pronounced effect. Double the recipe if two loaves are desired.

Raisin Caraway Casserole Bread

(Yield — 1 loaf)

¾ Cup boiling water, ¼ cup granulated sugar, 1½ teaspoons salt, ¼ cup shortening, ¼ cup lukewarm water, 2 teaspoons granulated sugar, 2 envelopes active dry yeast, 1 well-beaten egg, 3 cups once-sifted all-purpose flour, 1 cup seedless raisins, 1 to 2 teaspoons caraway seeds.

Combine boiling water, the ¼ cup sugar, salt and shortening, cool to lukewarm.

Meantime, measure lukewarm water into a mixing bowl; stir in the 2 teaspoons sugar. Sprinkle with yeast. Let stand 10 minutes, then stir well. Stir in lukewarm shortening mixture. Add eggs, flour, raisins and caraway seeds. Stir until well blended — about 2 minutes; scrape down sides of bowl. Cover with a damp cloth. Let rise in a warm place, free from draft, until more than doubled in bulk — about 50 minutes. Stir down batter. Turn into a greased 6-cup casserole. Bake, uncovered, in a hot oven (400°F.) 40 to 45 minutes.

Fashion revives the shirtwaist

Fashion has a shirt tale this spring. . . . It stages the comeback of the versatile shirtwaist, banned last season in the wake of the chemise terror.

The shirtwaist trips into fashion with a waistline, placed where it should be, and frankly sashed, bowed and circled by over-size belts.

The shirtwaist skirts the fashion horizon with pouffed or folded or harem-draped effects. They are frankly a bit frivolous, often over-skirted and dipping lower in back as the day lengthens.

The shirtwaist is tailored to a crisp fabric and a fresh print. There are stripes and polka dots, flowers and checks. The shirtwaist has no particular color in focus, but favors ice cream shades in raspberry pink, lemon, orange sherbet, lime, strawberry and pistachio.

Versatile synthetic fabrics will blend into the shirtwaist picture; they insist that shirtwaists stay crisp and wrinkle-free all day. They take true colors and never fade, walk away with hand-washing, little-iron honors. The new fabrics are as breezy as the shirtwaist itself, lovely to look at and easy to care for.

At Ottawa headquarters of the Federated Women's Institutes of Canada, federation officers met recently to discuss plans for the August 3-16 triennial conference of the Associated Country Women of the World.

The conference this year is in Edinburgh, and 90 Canadian women have booked passage for the trip to Scotland. Mrs. J. W. Adams of Ethelton, Sask., former federation president, is looking after tour arrangements.

The international organization has members in 31 countries but has a particular tie with Canada where the first Women's Institute was founded 62 years ago.

World Pattern

The Canadian movement set the pattern for the world organization and on May 13 rural women the world over will be honored by a new Canadian five-cent postal stamp.

The commemorative stamp depicts a female figure kneeling beside a tree over which the globe is poised. It was designed by Mrs. Helen Bacon, Toronto housewife and designer.

Mrs. Keith Rand of Port William, N.S., Federation president, says she personally is keen on the design.

She said it is appropriate because it comes in a triennial conference year, and also marks the 100th anniversary of the birth of Adelaide Hoodless, the late Hamilton resident credited with founding the first Women's Institute at Stoney Creek, Ont., in 1897.

The stamp, in black, white and green, carries the words. "Associated Country Women of the World" in both English and French.

Mrs. Rand says the Federation will offer for sale first-day covers of the special stamp. These will be cancelled and issued at Stoney Creek.

Order forms for the covers will be available to the Federation's 95,000 members, to accommodate stamp collectors.

Luxury vs Fitness

It may sound fine to be in the lap of luxury, but a Chicago college professor says wealth and a lack of physical fitness seem to go together.

Dr. Arthur H. Steinhaus has written several books on physical fitness. Speaking to a Montreal audience, he said North American children are less fit than their European counterparts because of higher living standards on this side of the Atlantic.

The age of luxury has left the adult North American reliant on mechanical and chemical accessories, while Europeans, who can't afford as many luxuries yet, don't have the same problems, he said.

SAUERKRAUT JUICE STUMPED OFFICIAL

Moncton, N. B. — CP — Walter H. Whitehead, retiring as CNR purchasing agent at Halifax, recalled here that he was dismayed when he was unable to meet a recent request for sauerkraut juice.

A veteran of 43 years with the railway, he said he had been called on to supply just about everything else in the food line but that request stumped him.

"It used to be popular," he said, "and the next time a customer orders sauerkraut juice I hope we'll be able to serve it."

Wife Preserver

A medicine "safe" to protect children from poisons can be made by fastening a portable cabinet high on the wall, above all climbing potential of the small fry.

Shrubs to beautify the rural home

(Quebec Women's Institutes)

This is a good time of the year to try to see ourselves as others see us. To take a walk around the outside of our homes and along the highway or street to see how we look to the rest of the world. Maybe we have too much planting around the place and it needs pruning out; maybe we need more. Don't forget, you country people, that there are beautiful shrubs and trees just for the digging.

Besides evergreens for hedges and trees for individual plantings there are flowering trees such as crabapples, mountain ash and thorn apples. For shrubs there are high-bush cranberry, the red twigged dogwood and many others.

Before you sigh for the high-priced ones in the seed catalogue, take a look around and see what you have.

"Reflections on my first air-flight"

— By Lewis Milligan —

The birds are returning from their winter migration to the south and I recently returned from a month's sojourn in the same region. With the birds it is the migratory instinct that impels them to flock together and take their flight before the winter actually arrives. With me it was the instinct of self preservation from a perpetual flu that threatened to develop into pneumonia, that urged me to take flight to a warmer clime. So from the depths of winter I flew to the height of summer in a few hours.

It was my first flight. Like David I had often longed for "wings like a dove" that I might fly away from the perpetual problems of this world, but I was quite content with terra firma means of transportation. I argued that if the Creator had intended me to fly He would have provided me with wings. But the doctor insisted that I must choose between the wings of an angel and those of an airplane, and I cowardly chose the latter.

Waiting at the airport was not unlike preparing to board an Atlantic liner, and as one stepped into the aisle of the plane the sensation was no different from that of entering a transcontinental railway train. Sitting down by the window and gazing at the gaunt wing of the plane and realizing the enormous weight of the whole structure with its human and material freight, my first reaction was one of incredulity. How was it possible that this whale-like creature of man, with a hundred Jonahs in its belly, could lift itself from the ground, much less soar into the skies? My unbelief was lost in wonder as the monstrous thing sped along the runway and glided like a swallow into the empyrean!

In a moment the wild imaginings of Alice in Wonderland and the magic carpets of The Arabian Nights were transformed from the realm of fiction into actuality. Mortal man himself was surely a wonder-seeker in that he could create a mechanical bird that could out-fly the eagle and soar singing at "heaven's gate" beyond the lark. "What is man that thou are mindful of him?" said the Psalmist. Looking down from the height of fifteen thousand feet the surface of the earth was unrolled like a map. Great, sprawling cities with their towering skyscrapers, and innumerable mercantile, industrial and residential structures were reduced to miniature models. And as for their teeming inhabitants they could hardly be detected under a microscope.

From this bird's-eye view, mountains were diminished into mole-hills, big lakes were duck ponds and mighty rivers like tape worms across the earthscape. Compared with all that, man was a mere insect. And yet it was man who designed and built those highly organized cities and created this flying monster from which I was looking down and focusing the picture of his entire dominion in the insect lens of my eye. At once I was proud of my relationship to the creature that could in turn create a world within a world, and humbled by his own insignificance amid the fleeting years of time and the vastness of the universe, of which this planet is but a dark speck in the Milky Way.

From that height one has a broad vision of humanity and all its social, national and international problems are seen in perspective. It occurred to me as I looked down that here was the proper place for a summit conference. The higher up the better — indeed it might be well to postpone the conference until the scientists had "conquered" space and that decisive meeting could be held on the moon. The summiteers and their retinue could be given a one-way ticket and supplied with atomic bombs with which they could mutually agree to settle their differences and save mankind by proxy from self extermination.

The heart of town is not the only place with a late afternoon rush hour. The same problem exists in the heart of the home — the kitchen — which has its busiest moments as the clock turns towards five and six o'clock.

The biggest meal of the day is in preparation by the homemaker, who is probably also using a hand (or two or three) for child tending, finishing the last of the ironing, and adding items to her next shopping list.

In many homes, the hours just before dusk are also important, for appointment-making for meetings or social events, with the necessary phoning back and forth on time and travel arrangements. And there's the call about what time hubby will be home.

This evening rush hour explains the renewed emphasis on the design of kitchens for step-saving efficiency and an end to waste motion of any kind.

For example, homemakers are steadily eliminating the trek to another room to make or take phone calls. Bell Telephone studies show that telephones in the kitchens have, in recent years, led the way in the use of any telephone in the home.

"Fine...I'll send them right home"
Welcome words at meal-time!
Usually a phone call or two among the neighbours rounds them up.
How many cold meals and frayed tempers and moments of uneasiness have you been spared because your telephone was handy?...How many "man-hunts" when small ones have wandered off?
The telephone helps make a neighbourly community—helps us all to live more securely, to get more things done, more easily.

At recent Library opening

The president, Jean-Marc Belzile, did the honors and presented the first volume for public circulation to the parish priest, the Rev. Chas. W. Lacourse, seen in the accompanying picture. The Rev. Lacourse complimented the organizers and workers, who had devoted many months of preparation to the realization of this project.

Change of scene; post-Easter gambol to the seaboard states

"Exile from Sunnyacres"

By Margaret Cook

Easter came and went in a swirl of dust. The new hats were subjected to an assault of dirt; white seemed to predominate this year, with yellow a close second. Our own little number is rose.

We rejoice to have a friend who took the prize in millinery in Toronto, and now works for a wholesaler, but once in two or three years, we work up the courage to ask her to make us a hat. One does not go and choose a headpiece. On the contrary, one takes what is provided by the expert, who first enquires about the wardrobe, then looks critically at the skin and hair to see what erosion and fading time has made. Then she says firmly, "I think rose is the color." Then we try on shapes. The bizarre shapes suit us best, from which we gather that the face lacks symmetry. I did not dare ask why the rose; it might simply have been to combine with the grey, mauve, or blue tints we habitually wear; or again, it might have been that we have reached the stage where rose is grateful to the skin. Anyway, the little hat is beautiful; we wear it with pride. . . . Part of the game is to say casually, "It's a Temple hat", when one gets a compliment. So, we are both happy.

Hats are not just head-coverings to a female. They are one's expression of a mood, one's armor against the "slings of outrageous fortune", one's tongue sticking out in defiance, one's love of beauty, and, of course, an accent on good grooming. The daughter of the house is hat-conscious, too. She reports she got a compliment on her Easter number from a six-foot male ascort, who thus was able to look down on her gay white Breton, and espy the frivolous red flowers at the extreme back, beneath the rolled brim. When a man notices a hat, it's something!

* * *

After Easter, we set out for our old love, Boston. Boston reminds us of some English cities, yet is the true American expression of the fundamental ideas of the early republic. We like the Common in the centre of the city, with the golden dome of the Capitol rising against the sky; we like the smell of the sea and the fish; we adore the Irish policemen; the good manners of the average person on the street, in sharp contrast to those of the inhabitants of New York. These manners reach their epitome in the elevator boys at the hotel, who say, "Number, please?" Then, "Eleventh floor, please." And "Thank you" when you leave. After a few days of this, it was positively pleasant to hear one of these fellows become human and say, "I get tired of those damn lights all the time." This, because he had just been reprimanded by the captain for putting out his light and sitting down for a minute.

From Boston we went to Cape Cod, because the writer had never been. Loathing crowds and noise, it has never been our ambition to visit a popular resort in the season. The Cape was deserted, all right, but it was so cold that I could not walk about the beaches, although they were strewn with the most fascinating shells, of which the head of the house got a good collection. But even he was chilled to the bone. So, we looked at the sea, and thought about the two kinds of people, the sea people and the mountain people. Rarely does the one person like both. If the sea delights him, the mountains oppress. If the mountains uplift the spirit, the sea disturbs it. The sea and I are not buddies. The sea is restless, and so am I. After a few hours, I want it to stop swishing and settle down. On the other hand, "Unto the hills around do I lift up my longing eyes," and find them filled with delight.

But we did see for the first time the cranberry bogs, acres and acres, divided into precise rectangles, and, at this season, a lovely purply red. These are the same cranberries that grow along the shore of our own little lake. We also saw the processing plant of a well-known brand of the berries that we all buy. I think it was at Bourne.

We crossed the State of Vermont and also Massachusetts. These are poor states, but the inhabitants are doing their level best to make a living in their modest way. With this laudable end in view, the prices of accommodation and meals are rapidly getting into the prohibitive area. In 1940, we paid $7.00 for a large double room, at a well-known hotel in Boston. In 1949, a suite consisting of two bedrooms, a dressing room and two bathrooms, housing five people, was $25 per day, or $5 per head. In 1949, a medium-size room and bath was $16.50. The meals had gone up accordingly. Friends tell us that the same thing has happened in Maine, but people returning from the south report that the southerners, true to their nature, haven't caught on yet. . . . Go south, young man, go south.

On our way home, we ran into New York State and had a night at another of our favorite places, Albany. We saw a communion set in St. Peter's, given by Queen Anne to her Indian congregation at the outpost of Albany. There has been a Parish of St. Peter's for three hundred years, although the present building is only a hundred years old. We recommend St. Peter's to you, if you are interested in old churches.

And so home, with a stop at a famous old hostelry in Plattsburg, I may say that both at Albany and Plattsburg the prices were not exorbitant, and old-fashioned courtesy was still flourishing. I am more than ever convinced that what we all need is good pubs and inns!

* * *

Our daffodils are about to burst into bloom, the crocuses and scylla are in flower against the warm brick wall at the front. Inside, housecleaning is under way. Even now a man washes the pantry walls, while I, from time to time, grub about in the cupboards, sorting, shifting, washing. A horrible time of year. We yearn for Sunnyacres, where everything is so much simpler. Not yet, but soon!

Have You A Question on UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE OR EMPLOYMENT?

In this column we publish questions about unemployment insurance and employment, together with answers received from the Unemployment Insurance Commission.

If you are uncertain about any point do not hesitate to send us your question. We will obtain an answer and publish it in this column.

Following are some questions with answers which may be of interest to you:

Q. I have had 19 weeks of contributions for regular benefit; under the Act I must have 24 contributions and, therefore, I am short of five. For seasonal benefit I have 13½ contributions, short of 1½ to make 15. Do you give benefit for the weeks that we have?

A. Benefit is not payable unless a person has sufficient contributions to qualify for either regular or seasonal benefit.

* * *

Q. I would like to know how many contributions a farmer must have to draw seasonal benefits if he has been drawing them for a few years.

A. To qualify for seasonal benefit, a farmer or any other person is required to have 15 contribution weeks since the Saturday prior to March 31 each year, or have a regular benefit period end after the Saturday of the week in which the previous May 15 occurred.

* * *

Q. I have a little business which brings in about $25 a week. My husband is working, but he claims that if he loses his job, he will not be entitled to benefit since I have an income. For my part, I claim the contrary since the business alone is insufficient. We have three children and are tenants. Which of us is right?

A. The fact that you have an income will have no bearing on your husband's entitlement to benefit except that he could not claim you as his dependent.

* * *

Q. I am a lumberjack. Last winter I was not able to work long enough to draw unemployment insurance. Last summer I worked with some farmers at haymaking and weeding the vegetable crops. Am I entitled to stamps for this work?

A. You are not entitled to stamps for your work in farming.

Q. How many contributions must I have to be entitled to unemployment insurance benefit? How much a week is payable to a married man who has 29 contributions, 11 at 9 cents daily and 18 at 8 cents?

A. To qualify for regular benefit you must have at least 30 contribution weeks in the 104 weeks prior to your claim, eight of which must be in the last 52 weeks or since the commencement date of your last claim, whichever is the shorter. If you had a previous claim during the 104 week period then 24 of the contributions must be in the last 52 weeks or since the commencement of that previous claim, whichever is the longer. It is not possible to estimate a person's weekly rate of benefit unless he has sufficient contributions to qualify.

* * *

Q. I am a married woman employed as a stenographer at $210 a month. My husband's health is such that he is only capable of performing light work for limited periods. He has regular part-time employment as a watchman, and earns an average of $82 a month. If I lose my job, can I claim dependency rates on account of my nine year old daughter?

A. It appears that you normally support your daughter and if so you would be entitled to the dependency rate of benefit.

Frank Ryan, a graduate of Queen's University, urged the young people to keep their minds open. "You here today", he said, "are the heirs to everything this age has produced, to the vast knowledge and research that has been built up and put into convenient mental digestive tablets in these past few years for you in schools such as this. What are you going to do with atomic power? What are you going to do with 200,000 pound-producing cows? What are you going to do about vertical integration? These are questions for you to answer. You are the only men and women who can face the future owning your own land, using your own capital and providing your own means of production."

Pithiness in garden radishes

Pithiness in radishes, a long-time annoyance in gardening, has been overcome by plant breeders.

Selections have been brought forth that resist development of pithiness after radishes reach edible size—a condition exaggerated by warm, dry weather.

Several new varieties stood up well in Central Experimental Farm tests made by examining roots from a single seeding at each of three harvestings at three-day intervals.

Most noteworthy in long-standing quality was Aspern Giant, a European variety. One week after the first pulling, only 14 per cent of its roots had become pithy. During the same period, 60 per cent of the roots of French Breakfast were inedible. Aspern Giant has not yet been introduced to the garden seed trade in this country.

In the two years of testing, Champion was rated among the best for appearance, size and quality, in addition to being outstanding. Only 20 per cent of its roots were pithy one week after it was first ready for use.

Cherry Belle, popular for the fresh market, was intermediate in longstanding quality. In 1957 Cavalier was very slow to become pithy, but in 1958 pithiness developed in one-third of the crop in three days.

With longstanding quality, as in Champion and Cherry Belle, two or three seedings at weekly intervals should satisfy the home gardener's needs during the entire spring and summer periods.

Potato quality

Ottawa — Do you want your potato to cook to a dry mealy texture, white or creamy in color and pleasant to the taste, asks Mr. Davies of the Fredericton Research Station, New Brunswick.

The quality table potato so described can be obtained if you buy the right variety, plant it at the right time, give it the right amount of the right fertilizer, the right kind of insecticide and fungicide, harvest it at the right time and store it at the right temperature.

Of course, the weather could ruin the crop; but assume that the location is somewhere in eastern Canada the weatherman is working for you, here is what to do . . .

Don't use more than say 1,500 pounds of fertilizer per acre, particularly if it has a high potash content which decreases the dry matter content.

Give the tuber as long a growing season as possible and remember that it matures better if you don't kill the top artificially. A storage temperature of about 40 degrees F. is best for table stock as it gets sweet and soggy under colder conditions. For chip or French-fry use, the potato should be stored close to 55 degrees F.

Garden Graph

By DEAN HALLIDAY

One of the most troublesome of peony problems is a blight caused by the Botrytis fungus. Watch for signs of it this spring.

As shown in the accompanying Garden-Graph, Botrytis blight causes young peony shoots to wilt and also blasts the buds.

Infected stalks removed from diseased plants, either in spring or fall, should be burned. As an additional control measure, start spraying with fermate as soon as new shoots start up. Spray the ground around the plants. Additional applications of the spray at intervals of a week or two will help to keep the fungus from getting into the stalks or buds.

When the fungus is present, spring shoots are likely to be infected. Then a stem rot develops which causes the young shoots to wilt suddenly and fall over, as shown in the Garden-Graph. Stems of such shoots will show a blackish or brownish rot at ground level.

Spores from the rot on infected shoots are likely to be borne by the wind or by insects to young stalks or buds on healthy peonies.

EFFICIENT FEEDING AND LIVESTOCK MANAGEMENT

By Dr. Gustav Bohstedt
Emeritus Professor of Animal Husbandry
University of Wisconsin

Cooking Feeds Once Popular

Two feeds still need to be cooked, baked or otherwise heat treated, and these are soybeans and potatoes when they are to be fed to pigs, chickens, or to young calves. Mature ruminants do well on these two feeds when fed raw, or at most crushed or sliced.

Dr. Bohstedt

Also, the soybeans in nearly all cases have the oil removed during heat treatment, the oil usually having a higher market value than the offal which is the soybean oil meal. In hog feeding this oil in certain amounts would cause soft or oily pork carcasses, a distinctly unfavorable result. The oil-extracted soybean oil meal on the other hand is not guilty of any such development.

But years ago many different feeds were cooked, not merely for hogs or chickens, but for horses and cattle as well. The list includes barley, which still is steamed by many caretakers of show stock. Oats and wheat bran and still other grains and byproduct feeds might be steamed into mashes, at times sweetened with molasses so as to stir a flagging appetite in sale or show stock.

But even for the run-of-the-mill kind of livestock a lot of cooking was done, even with chopped forage and mixtures of chopped forage and grain.

It was thought that feed was made more digestible and efficient for livestock through cooking. Such practice has long since been disproved, with the exception of beans and potatoes for pigs and poultry.

The cooking custom was brought over from Europe by many Scotch and English and other European grooms and herdsmen that made up a large proportion of our farm labor force some 50 to 100 years ago. These men were needlessly zealous in this respect.

Even Dean Henry, original author of Feeds and Feeding, had difficulty getting rid of a belief in the benefit of cooking feed. He fed cooked and raw corn to experimental lots of pigs, and he did it again and again before he finally gave up cooking as entirely useless and uneconomical.

Question: Now that a hard cobalt pill may be deposited down a sheep's throat to remain in its stomach for a year or more and to release a therapeutic dose daily, does this take the place of cobaltized salt, or of trace mineral salt? And at what comparative cost?

Answer: The claim is that such a heavy pill will last at least a year, and even during the lifetime of a sheep. It is deposited in the fore-stomach or paunch of the sheep as ejected by a "balling gun." The charge is 42 cents a pill.

Cost wise, it is difficult to see how this practice could compete with cobaltized salt, or with trace mineral salt that furthermore constitutes a natural provision for all of the respective minerals.

A mature sheep eats about 8 pounds of salt a year, and if this is trace mineral salt, it costs 5 cents more than iodized salt and supplies balanced amounts of other trace minerals in addition to cobalt. If cobalt alone is needed in addition to iodine, it is being supplied in cobalt-iodized salt for about 2 cents per head, per year.

Diesel tractors

Ottawa — The sale of diesel tractors in Canada increased substantially in 1958, amounting to 63 per cent of all tractors exceeding 35 h.p. and 26 per cent of all tractors below 35 h.p.

The diesel tractor costs more than the gasoline tractor of the same size but the fuel consumption is less and the cost of diesel oil is less than the cost of gasoline.

It remains for the farmer to figure out if the annual savings on the diesel are sufficient to justify him putting out the extra capital outlay to purchase it in preference to a gasoline tractor.

MORE PROOF... IT PAYS TO FEED PURINA

FEED COST TO 17 WEEKS: 59¢ PER BIRD
Mr. & Mrs. Les Sharpe of R.R. 2, Kleinburg, Ont., put in their first lot of chicks (3,500) only last March. Since then they have grown out a batch of 7,000 roasters, 2,000 pullets for layers, and a turn of broilers. At present they are bringing along 3,250 light laying-type pullets.
Mr. Sharpe is an accountant (with a love for farming) and is particularly interested in figures on this lot, grown on the Purina Controlled Feeding Plan.
From early October to early February, when they were 17 weeks, they had eaten $1,913.78 worth. That works out to 58.88¢ feed cost per pullet. And these birds are hard-fleshed, well grown, not far from the nest.
