Calcutta tournament for Hospital fund

With a net-56 score, the above team were winners of the annual pro-amateur Calcutta Golf Tournament at the Lachute club last week-end. The foursome, with Roger Gravel the Golf Club manager (left), comprises — Pierre Crevier, François Crevier, Jim Seeney (pro) and Antoine Paré, all of the St. Andrews Club. There were 32 teams from Quebec and Ontario entered in this event.

Organized by the Lachute Golf Club, the Calcutta is an annual benefit tournament on behalf of the Lachute Hospital Fund; proceeds for this good cause amounted to $2,000. In addition, the Lachute Lions Club operated a pari-mutuel for the same objective — the Hospital benefitting from this effort by another $500 or $600.

No positive cases of polio here, says health official

The Watchman is informed by Dr. L. Turcotte, County Health Officer, that there have been no positive cases of polio in this area to date. A 22-months-old child was taken to the Ste. Justine Hospital in Montreal last Sunday with symptoms of undiagnosed malady, but the result of hospital tests in this case is not yet known.

The health officer issues warning, however, that both adults and children should be on guard against infection. He warns against bathing in waters contaminated by sewage, and urges strict personal cleanliness and plenty of rest.

This area has not been seriously affected by poliomyelitis since 1953. It appears that cases reported currently in the city are among persons who have not taken advantage of immunization. In Montreal there have been about 160 cases to date, with a dozen-or-so deaths.

Police acquire speed trap for traffic slowdown

The Town Council and Chief of Police have acquired a traffic-timer apparatus which should effectively curb speeding in Lachute. The timing device may be placed, as desired, on any thoroughfare around town, and from his observation post the constable on duty can check the speed of vehicles passing the trap.

There are presently two speed-control signs on the town approaches. Three more are on order for delivery, so that there will be a sign for each of the five highways entering Lachute.

Ald. Mozart Carriere presented the police department report at the August session of Council, showing levies of $421.80 in fines and costs, with $23 additional for traffic tickets issued. Bicycle permits produced a revenue of $106.25, and dog taxes $22.

Chief F. Trepanier's summary showed also 403 police calls during the month; 14 accident cases; 4 people injured; and 48 detained in police cells. Mileage registered on the patrol car was 3,585. There had been 19 tickets issued for minor traffic infractions; 8 fines had been paid; and 28 cases taken before the authorities.

Housing project approved, 38 homes in Ayersv'l limits

It is understood that Robert Legault, building contractor (son of Henri Legault, Lachute Road) is promoting a residential building development in Ayersville and will shortly commence construction on 38 dwellings. Site of the project will be on Hamford Street between the Brownsburg Road and the West River, not far from the new hospital now under construction.

According to Mr. Legault the scheme will get under way in mid-September. There will be houses in five or six different designs — all one-storey, six-room brick dwellings. Lot measurements will be 80 ft. frontage by 100 ft., on one side of the thoroughfare, and 80 by 80 on the other. The homes will be built under provisions of the Central Housing and Mortgage financing.

At the Ayersville Council meeting last week, the Council gave approval to the project and agreed to service this subdivision with the necessary utilities. The venture is viewed with some enthusiasm by the municipal authorities, who recognize this development as an evidence of expansion and progress.

Carillon project to start soon

Hawkesbury, Aug. 7 — Premier Duplessis announced that work on the Carillon project under the supervision of the Quebec Hydro Commission will begin in early August. The project will employ close to 1,200 men.

The dam, which will back up the water to near Hawkesbury and Grenville, will cost $200,000,000 and is expected to generate close to 500,000 horsepower. The water backed up will cover all the low-lying land including old Highway 17. Work on the dam will be completed in two or three years.

Richelieu Day harness events

The annual Richelieu Club harness racing at the exhibition grounds takes place this Saturday, August 15. In addition there will be a series of bingo games.

This is the fifth annual venture of its kind sponsored by the Richelieu Club, to augment its funds for the welfare of underprivileged children.

A regular sidelight of this show is the lucky drawing, and prizes offered this year are a portable television and an electric refrigerator. A book of five tickets entitles the holder to admittance to the grounds — the cover of the book serves as admission ticket.

The popular Maurice "Rocket" Richard will be on hand to thrill the hockey fans. His presence is by courtesy of Dow Breweries and their local distributor, René Laurin.

This big field day is the only appeal to public generosity promoted by the club each year, to finance its bursaries to students, milk for school children, and other charities in this community.

From the turn of the century

This replica of a 1902 Oldsmobile was an object of interest in town last week-end. The veteran automobile is seen here in front of Muir's Service Station, with George Muir at the steering bar.

This valuable showpiece was brought here by Dave Campbell from Montreal — specially loaned to him by the firm of John Millen & Son as an attraction for the Shriners' Golf Tournament at Marlborough and the Calcutta Sweepstakes at Lachute. The old-vintage model was presented to Mr. Boyd Millen of the Millen firm (a past-president of the McGill Graduates Society) by a number of his friends and business associates.

Among spectators in the above group may be recognized members of the Muir family and other well-known townsfolk.

Building and business permits, other evidences of expansion

Preceding the regular August session of Town Council last Wednesday, a meeting of ratepayers from Fern and Cedar streets on the Cruise subdivision was held to approve or reject By-law 216 providing for a loan of $6,000 for sewer and water mains. All were in favor, with no opposing voices — thus obviating the formality of a referendum.

Under chairmanship of Mayor Jas. W. McGibbon, all members of the Council were present, with exception of Ald. E. O. Pollock, to tackle current business of the town administration.

Aristide St. Jacques appeared with a request for paving to the intersection of Wilson and Edwin Streets. The matter was referred to Joseph Senecal, town officer, and Ald. Ludger Gibeault.

André Bergeron, clerk of the police department, asked to be remunerated for services as a volunteer fireman. Ald. Mozart Carriere replied that the omission was being looked into, and the payment would be retroactive.

Aldermen S. Church and L. Laurin proposed that the $5 rental on a soft drink dispenser at police headquarters be lifted, but the other aldermen disagreed.

The Mayor and town secretary were authorized to sign a transfer of land behind the St. Julien school yard to the ownership of the Catholic School Commission.

Building permits were issued to Georges Legault, for a house on Roy Street; Claude Labonté, for a house on Cruise Blvd.; Arthur Bougie, for a dwelling on the McGibbon subdivision; Laurent Lavoie and Hubert Lemire, a residential building on Taylor Street; and Lachute Enterprises for eight additional homes on Bedard Blvd. East.

A request for permit to operate a potato wagon on the Brownsburg Road, opposite Desrosiers Automobiles, was presented by Adrien Houle, but was held over for consideration. Request for a special dance permit at the Lucien Lacoste restaurant, corner of Bedard Blvd. at Main, was also tabled. In reply to a question raised by Mme Jules Charlebois regarding vendors of beauty products, it was ruled, on the advice of Fernand Legault, Q.C., that such dealers were subject to business tax like all other distributors.

Accounts payable for the month amounted to $79,364.32. This sum included a bill for $68,112.28 for work on the White's Bridge water main by H. J. O'Connell Ltd.

Ayersville deal in real estate

It is learned that Dr. Roger Lavigne and Paul Laliberté, civil engineer, have negotiated an important sale of 105 building lots, to Riverview Construction, of Montreal, for the sum of $50,000.

The deal, completed last week, was effected through Gaetan Paquette as interdmediary. The lots are on a sub-division of the Hammond farm land, facing the airport.

St. Andrews landmark to be torn down

Due for demolition

The old Convent at St. Andrews East, abandoned and stripped by thieves and vandals, will soon be levelled to the ground due to taxes which the present owner, Mr. Chas. A. Shaffer, considers excessive and beyond reason.

It is learned from authoritative sources that the old Convent, a landmark of the St. Andrews community, will shortly be torn down by reason of taxation costs.

The building was vacated and abandoned about 10 years ago, when condemned as unsafe. Since its occupancy as an institution of learning under supervision of the Sisters of Providence, it has met an inglorious fate at the hands of thieves and vandals. It soon became completely uninhabitable, although, for the past few years, the ground floor has been used as a warehouse by the Tru-Craft boat works. The remainder of the building is useless.

Despite this lamentable condition of the structure, it appears on the property roll of St. Andrews with an imposing valuation of $28,000 at a tax rate of 80c. The present owner, Mr. Chas. A. Shaffer, considers this levy of $230, with school rates and other charges, quite out of proportion to the actual use and value of the building. So, for this reason the historic stone edifice which has contributed much to the Catholic culture of the community, will be dynamited and demolished.

Records reveal that the Convent was erected in 1848 by the Rev. François Bonin, then parish priest at Ste. Scholastique. It was operated by the St. Viateur Brothers as a classical boys' school. In 1876, on the opening of the Bourget College at Rigaud, the Sisters of Providence took over, and the so-called "Bonin College" became a girls' convent. Later the establishment became on orphanage and children's home.

Was storekeeper in Brownsburg for over half-century

The Late Ira McFaul

Brownsburg — This community was saddened on Saturday, August 8, by the passing of one of the oldest and most highly-respected citizens, George Ira McFaul, at his residence here.

Mr. McFaul was born at Brownsburg on December 25, 1875, and was the son of Archibald McFaul and Elizabeth Gordon. In 1903 he opened a general store here, and operated this establishment until 1958 when he was forced to close on account of illness.

The late Mr. McFaul was keenly interested in all activities of the community and was always ready to lend a helping hand to those in trouble. He was an elder of the United Church, a charter member of the Rotary Club, and a member of the Masonic Lodge. His wife, Margaret Ann Hutchin, predeceased him in 1929.

He leaves to mourn his loss two daughters, (Ruby) Mrs. Alex Gordon, (Elva) Mrs. Harry White, three grandchildren, George Gordon, Brian White and Wanda White, one great-grandchild, Terry Gordon, also one sister, Mrs. Smith, of Sarasota, Fla.

The funeral took place Tuesday afternoon, August 11, in the Brownsburg United Church. The Rev. Wilson Bridge officiated in the absence of the pastor, the Rev. Garfield Bruce.

Pall-bearers were — Messrs. Gordon McFaul, Archie McFaul, Edgar Pollock, Stanley Thompson, William White and Andrew Hardie.

Floral tributes were both numerous and beautiful, marking the deep esteem in which the deceased was held. . . Interment was in the Lachute Cemetery.

Echo of tragedy Mille Isles family in Ontario, 1958

Rockland, Ont. — A verdict of accidental death was returned August 6 by a coroner's jury in an inquest in the death of Rene Savage, of Eastview, one of five persons killed in a head-on collision in the village of Cumberland, three-quarters of a mile west of the Ferry Road, September 19, 1958.

A car driven west by Savage swerved into the path of an eastbound car.

Killed in the eastbound car were, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kirkpatrick, of Mille Isles, Que., and their two sons, Earl and Norman. Mrs. Norman Kirkpatrick was seriously injured.

Dr. W. C. Tweedie, of Rockland, presided at the inquest. W. R. Hall, Q.C., was Crown attorney.

Toll on property, farmhouse fires in St. Canut district

St. Canut — Two fires within two days destroyed farmhouses in the St. Canut vicinity last week.

The first conflagration razed the home of Marcel Lajeunesse, about two miles west of the village, on Tuesday last. The blaze occurred around noon. Other buildings and machinery were also destroyed. Mr. Lajeunesse received burns in his attempts to quell the fire.

On Thursday, another fire destroyed an unoccupied farmhouse belonging to Lionel Robert, about one mile east of St. Canut. The premises being vacant, the loss in this instance was considerably lower.

Council ponders final points in zoning by-law

The building and zoning regulations under preparation by Fernand Legault, Q.C., legal advisor, and Paul Laliberté, civil engineer, for the Town of Lachute, have finally been drafted into more definite terms. These consultants appeared at the last Council meeting to report progress, indicating that the final draft hinged upon certain points to be discussed with the councillors. These pertained notably to the prescribing of residential and of commercial zones, to building specifications, and to other such details.

Mayor McGibbon expressed his satisfaction that Messrs. Legault and Laliberté has approached the completion of this job, and asked that a tentative draft of the regulations be prepared for approval of the Council. Mr. Legault suggested that, to avoid unnecessary work, a committee of the Council should first discuss with them the points in question. . . . Aldermen Laurèat Laurin, Stanley Holt and Gerard Lefebvre were assigned to the ironing-out of final details.

Action on dumpsite precipitated by proximity of hospital building

Dr. Jules Lafleur, a former mayor, appeared last week at the Town Council session to make certain recommendations on garbage disposal. The doctor was concerned primarily with the dumping ground and its proximity to the new Regional Hospital.

"Garbage is being burned at the dump, contrary to sanitary procedure; and please note, I am speaking not only for myself but on behalf of the hospital medical board. The town already owns a tract of land in Chatham Township, and the thing to do would be to go to Quebec for a Private Bill in order to annex this land," said Dr. Lafleur.

The visitor did not wish to trace back the proceedings on this matter, but he reminded the Council that preliminaries on the site in Chatham had been brought up several years ago. It was quite evident that the dump would have to be moved sooner or later, and a new site should now be used for this purpose.

Mayor McGibbon stated he was well aware of the seriousness of this question, and promised that the Council would give it attention.

It is recalled that in June 1956 the corporation purchased a bull-dozer from the firm of Charles Cusson, to bury and level the garbage deposits. It was claimed at the time that the machine would compress refuse to a quarter of its volume and that the method could be carried on in any suitable site even adjacent to properties and public buildings, as it would eliminate all fumes, odours and vermin. . . . However, for some time past, the procedure here has been hampered by shortage of fill, and for this reason it has become necessary to burn the garbage, causing noxious smoke and fumes. The erection of the new hospital has brought the matter to a head, and the City Fathers will now have to tackle the problem without compromise.

Auto crash victim former manager, known hereabouts

Friends of a former resident here, Derwood Cooke, heard with regret last week of the tragedy which claimed his life on Highway 17 at Haley's Station, near Renfrew, Ont.

Mr. D. A. Cooke, 46, of Buckingham, and his sister-in-law, Mrs. Donat Larose, 40, of Pte. au Chene — also an occupant of the car in head-on collision with Mr. Cooke, Gerald Hawkins, 50, of Haley's Station — were killed in the accident.

Six persons were injured, including Mrs. Derwood Cooke, 42; Monique, 21, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cooke; Michele Larose, 4; Lise Carriere, 12; and two others.

Gerald Hawkins was driving west towards his home. Mr. Cooke was returning from Noelville, south of North Bay. The accident occurred on a straight stretch of road nine miles west of Renfrew. Both vehicles were smashed almost beyond recognition.

Mrs. Larose and Mrs. Cooke are sisters and were visiting another sister who is the mother of Lise Carriere. Herb Dudley, also injured, is engaged to Monique Cooke.

Derwood Cooke was the owner of the W. D. William Manufacturing Ltd. at Gatineau. He had been manager of the Shurly - Dietrich - Atkins Saw Company, operating above Giles Publishing House here for several years, and counted a number of friends in this community.

Born at Cheneville, he was the son of the late Allan G. Cooke and Rose Godin, who survives. A resident of Buckingham since 1949, he was married to the former Bella Carriere in 1936.

Surviving, besides his wife and mother and daughter, Monique, are two brothers, Allanson of Montreal and Vernon of Buckingham; two sisters, Mrs. Evelyn Crepelle, Montreal, and Mrs. Eugene Seguin, Cheneville.

Funeral rites were held Monday at Buckingham, Que.

August meeting of B'burg Council

Brownsburg — In contrast to the lengthy July meeting, the August 3 session of the Brownsburg Council turned out to be one of the shortest on record.

Council approved payment of monthly vouchers amounting to $1,108.53 in addition to a payment of $1,150 for asphalt used in sidewalk repairs. A motion was passed to install a stop sign on 6th Avenue N.W. to establish the right of way on 2nd Street N.W., and money was voted to provide for the moving of eight light poles on St. Joseph Street. This is the first of many arrangements necessary for the hoped-for installation of sidewalks.

Police Chief Bell's report listed six speeding and four parking offences. This is a far cry from last month's figure, and surprisingly so, with all the vacation traffic now in evidence.

The meeting was adjourned until Monday, August 10, at which time the Council agenda included street names, waterworks, and speed traps.

Mines Minister on the job

Says Fitz ("On and Off the Record") in Tuesday's issue of The Montreal Gazette: Quebec Mines Minister William Cottingham spent Saturday and Sunday in a provincial police patrol car stopping and personally warning motorists using the new Lachute - Lakefield highway to observe caution and the 40 m.p.h. speed limit, in a bid to make it the safest stretch of road in the province.

Complaint on water pressure

A dozen or more East Ward property-owners lodged a protest at last Council meeting regarding poor water service in the locality east of Bethany Street. The complaint was in the form of a signed petition from Grace and Sydney Street residents. They asked for better service and improved water pressure in the mains.

Fernand Legault, Q.C., who was present at the meeting, stated he had not signed this complaint, but would have done so had he been approached, for water pressure in his section was sometimes deplorably low. He added his opinion, also, that the gravel on certain roads in this area was of a nature to cause blockage of the drains.

Mayor McGibbon, after reading the petition and hearing these views, declared the difficulty revolved once again around the question of inadequate waterworks . . . "We have been expecting a visit from one of the departmental engineers," he added. "I suggest that a copy of this protest be sent to Quebec, in order to speed things up."

Do outboards scare fish?

For generations, anglers have been admonishing each other to "be quiet or you'll scare the fish". With the advent of the outboard motor there were unfounded fears that the exhaust, the noise, the wake — something was bound to disturb the fish. Factual evidence, however, was lacking to prove or disprove these theories.

To discover the true relationship of outboarding to fishing and fish mortality, the Outboard Marine News Bureau offers this information based on factual studies, proving that outboard motors have little or no effect on angling success or fish supply. This conclusion is supported by leading naturalists and conservation experts . . .

In a 1957 Congressional hearing in the United States, Richard H. Stroud of the Sport Fishing Institute told lawmakers: "It is our considered judgment as pro-experienced fish conservationists, based on evaluation of the scientific data available, that there is no factual basis to indicate that use of outboard motors on our waterways is in any way harmful to fish populations or to their tendency to strike an angler's bait or lure."

One of the first truly scientific studies on the subject was conducted in 1950 by Prof. Karl Lagler of the University of Michigan. Experiments conclusively proved that outboard operations have no harmful effect on fish nests, mortality, reproduction or catch by anglers. A more recent research program was conducted by the Texas Fish and Game Commission in 1955-56, and substantiated the earlier findings.

In its report, the Commission stated: "Surface noises apparently have little or no effect on fish at depths of over 10 feet. A 10 H.P. outboard motor is used frequently in diving areas where observations are in progress. No difference in the number of fish seen or general activity can be seen during periods of extensive use of the motor and periods when the motor is not in use. On one occasion, the boat was run at full speed back and forth over a test area. The fish in the area completely ignored the motor noises and continued normal activity. With the exception of a small whirring noise, no effect of the motor below 10 feet was noticeable."

Additional research programs by scientific groups and conservation agencies have reached the same conclusions, and it can only be concluded that while motor noise and wash may be bothersome to some fishermen, the evidence proves that outboard operations are not in the least harmful to fish or fishing.

ELECTRONIC MACHINES READ AND TRANSLATE

Winnipeg CP — Experiments are being carried out in electronic machines which will "read" a book, produce a digest and translate from English to Braille.

G. H. Sheppard, president of International Business Machine Company Limited and president of the Toronto Board of Trade, told the fifth annual meeting of the National Machine Accountants Association here that some modern machines have a printed output equal to a 400-page novel in four minutes.

Machines like this are used to assist in the design, projection and tracking of missiles, rockets and satellites, he said. Electronic computers some day may be reduced to the size of a typewriter, and will operate at 482 degrees below zero for maximum efficiency.

Assorted craft seek haven in high winds; islander's ringside seat on a navy show

"Outdoor Round-up" — by Bob Atchison

Main Duck Island,
South Bay, Picton. Ont.

July 26 —

This has been one of those weeks when everything has happened. It all started last Sunday evening. Very bad winds came up around 3 p.m. and it was a race with the small boats and cruisers to get to a safe anchorage. For some of them, Main Duck was the closest. By 8 p.m. we had eight tied up in the cove and harbour, ranging from little outboards to big cruisers. You can imagine the fun there was, trying to please everyone. Then naturally some of the people aboard wanted to let their folks know they were O.K. What a time was had by all! A few of the boats had enough grub to get by with, the others had to hope something would turn up. Even fires were allowed along the shore for the people to cook their fish. Most of them, though, spent a very uncomfortable night. Fortunately, the winds died down around 7 a.m. Monday, and stayed flat for about three hours making it possible for all the boats to get away. I'll bet some of them were very happy people to get to shore. The wind picked up again in the afternoon very strongly, and we had visitors once again. This time it was a 45 ft. yawl that had been in the Freeman Races and was just returning to Rochester. The crew had gone ashore at Henderson Harbour and two men were to take it through to its destination. The boat could certainly have taken any bad weather that comes up around these parts in the summer, but as the gents explained, it was too hard for two crewmen to handle in a heavy wind. They left around 5.30 a.m. Tuesday. That was a terrific sight to watch. The seas were running very high and to see that craft take those waves was a real pleasure. Most of the time all that could be seen was the rough weather sails and it looked as though it were a cork bouncing around. Those boys sure knew how to handle a sailer in rough weather.

Since then, in some of the towns along the shores of Lake Ontario the temperatures were hitting 95 and 96 degrees. We were glad to be out on the island. At least we could go in swimming to cool off. (I thought about you all and how you must be liking the heat.)

Friday the winds brought another cruiser in for shelter, and this one sure needed it. Originally heading for Rochester, N.Y., they were pounded by the waves so much the top decking of their boat was all broken. There were four aboard, husbands and wives, and to say they were a little worried is putting it mildly — and a nice shade of green they all were. One of the men was an Ensign in the U.S.N. on a destroyer, and the way he talked about the lake and small boats after what they had been through, I don't think he would be keeping the boat very long after they got ashore. It takes something drastic like that to make people see just how bad Lake Ontario can be.

On Saturday, storm warnings were up all over the lake for small craft, and we didn't have one caller.

Sunday, and more callers taking refuge here. Just as the sun was going down I spotted a man walking across the Island from the south beach. Going over to see what was what, I found out he had swamped and run aground. There were two of them in a 14-foot cartop boat who had started out from Oswego to head into the Bay of Quinte, intending to go up the canals into the chain of Kawatta lakes in Ontario and thence into Georgian Bay. All was straightened out and we finally got them into the cove. Everything they owned was wet, so it was necessary for them to stay with us for the night and try and dry all their clothes. When we got the full story of all this, we were really amazed. The owner of the little boat comes from Sault Ste. Marie, Mich. He is a school teacher at the State school for retarded children. On his vacation he and his son, 13, had wanted to take a trip by boat someplace. Nowhere in particular; they had got right down to Sorel in Quebec, and from there they had travelled canals and rivers to New York City. Up the Oswego chain of canals to Oswego on Lake Ontario, they were now heading back to Sault Ste. Marie. They had been out for a month and were intending to stay out another two weeks. It sure seems the Spirit of Adventure is still among some of us. Even though it may seem a little foolhardy to some of us, and by that I mean the outfit they came away with. Even the compass they had was of the dollar variety. Another thing, this was their first trip and I think the first time they had ever been in a boat for any length of time. . . Good luck to them, anyway. By Tuesday morning the food situation was getting tight, so a message was sent out to our bosses for food. Wednesday morning the plane was in with all the grub we had asked for, also a couple of little goodies we hadn't, so everything was hunky-dory. The Cat left late Wednesday evening and from what was told me, we should be having VVIP's in very soon.

Thursday we had a chance to look over the Island to see how the Deer were doing, and the Ducks, and I am pleased that everything is doing well. Edith and self saw nine young Deer and untold numbers of young Ducks. There are Canada Geese by the dozen, also Wood Ducks are as common as the Teal and Blacks. We are extra anxious to see if they will stay any length of time after they sprout their flight feathers. We are hoping they will. The only real worry just now is fire. Everything is so warm and dry that I have been setting out 45-gallon drums filled with water, just in case. Let's hope it rains a lot in the next couple of days to subdue this hazard.

The raspberries are out in great quantities, within an hour we can pick about two quarts. It's funny but the spots we picked over last summer have got fruit on them about twice the size of the others. I don't know anything about agriculture, but it seems that the berries we cleared off have made the shrubs much heavier-bearing this year.

More visitors, four power cruisers at the one crack. I get just a shade envious seeing some of these cruisers. Beautiful is the only way to describe them. I would never want to go ashore if we had some of these. Head for southern waters during the winter and come back into these parts in the spring. — But maybe I like it around Lachute too much.

You have heard about the American Navy having a scheme on around the Lakes. I'll try and give you some of the highlights of what we have seen. . . . Five of them running at full speed, spreading out as they passed through the narrows so that they looked for all the world like a huge fan; the white from the bow cutting the water seeming to be a ruffle around a wrist. They sure look pretty, but when you stop and think of their purposes, it kind of takes the prettiness away. We have seen single ships nearly every hour at some point of the lake. To see the aldis lights and semaphores blinking away, you have spots in front of your eyes. Of course, the high winds have not hindered them in any way. To see some of them plowing into the big swells and to hear the roar of their engines is a real thrill. Meanwhile, some of the freighters did tie up when the winds got extra bad, but not for very long. I would think that the Seaway is one of the busiest places in the world right now. My impression is that before too long they will have to build it much bigger. The good it will be doing to the country will be one of those things that will go down in history. . . .

Edith just gave me a hurry-up call — there was a U.S.N. submarine off the Island about a mile. Naturally it was running on the surface, but what a sight that was. I'm wondering what will be next to show up . . .

Friday. — What comes next was answered early this morning — five destroyers, two supply ships and all kinds of sub chasers. The winds had got very bad during the night, and along with everything else, a sail boat came in and is going to stay a few days. The boss aboard is the associate editor of Yachting Magazine. Maybe I'll get a chance to go out sailing with an expert. He can qualify for that too — the way he handled his boat in the rough sea. Well, we can't all be good, just the few.

That's all for this time. Remember — A sportsman is always a conservationist and a conservationist is always a sportsman.

Bag limit cut for duck hunting

A reduction in the number of ducks and geese that hunters in Quebec will be allowed to shoot this fall is announced by the Canadian Wildlife Service of the Department of Northern Affairs and Natural Resources.

The reduction in the legal limit reflects the general decline in the waterfowl population in Canada. Limits in all provinces will be reduced until the population recovers.

This year Quebec hunters may shoot only six instead of eight ducks a day and hold in possession 15 instead of 20 geese, of which not more than 10 may be species other than Greater Snow geese.

Wildlife Service officials said the changes are necessary to protect the waterfowl population which has been showing a decrease every year.

Hunting season on ducks, geese, rails, coots and gallinules will be Sept. 12 - Nov. 22 in the northern district; Sept. 19 - Nov. 29 in the central district; and Sept. 26 - Dec. 13 in the southern district.

Won weekly golf trophy at Digby Pines Hotel

Competing against a group of Canadian and American tourists (both ladies and gentlemen), Miss Mildred Towsey, of Lachute, won the third Digby Pines weekly golf trophy recently with a net score of 66.

The Digby Pines Golf Tournament is a feature attraction at the hotel and is open to all registered guests. It is proving very popular among golfers at the "Pines".

Presentation of the trophy to Miss Towsey was made by Mr. Howard S. Walker, manager of Canadian Pacific Hotels in Nova Scotia.

When caution pays

AS LONG AS there are level crossings in Canada, and regardless of what warning devices mark the tracks, cars and trucks will collide with trains and people will be killed or maimed.

It is impossible to escape this conclusion after scanning the latest accident statistics issued in Ottawa by the Board of Transport Commissioners.

In the last five years, the board reports, 952 persons have been killed and 3,524 others injured in 2,661 crossing accidents across Canada. More alarming is the fact that about 23 per cent of these crashes occurred at crossings "protected" — as the railways call it — by gates or automatic signals.

It is a foregone conclusion that the trains involved in these accidents had the right-of-way. That's the law. And the automatic warning devices — the flashing lights with bells, the wig-wags and others — are practically failure-proof.

The fault, then, must lie with the motorist or with some mechanical defect in his vehicle. That decision is almost inevitable after most crossing accidents, and far too often the verdict is delivered posthumously.

Couldn't the driver see or hear the warning signals or the approaching train? Did he misjudge his ability to brake the car on a slippery highway? Perhaps, just for a second, his mind was elsewhere. Or was it just plain recklessness?

The transport board has the frustrating job of trying to outguess the motorist on these questions in an attempt to cut down accidents. As an experiment the board has ordered the CNR and CPR to spend thousands of dollars in making boxcars luminous by placing reflector markings on them.

But, judging from Canadian past records, it's a mathematical certainty the some of them will hit these boxcars. It seems there always will be cases of motorists trying to race the train to the crossing.

Ranked among the greatest

VINCENT MASSEY, Canada's first native-born Governor-General, will hand over his office to another Canadian, Maj.-Gen. George Vanier, on September 15. As he does so, he has proven that a Canadian can be Governor-General, and he likely will be ranked among the greatest ever to hold office.

Mr. Massey, 72, assumed office at the age of 65, a time of life when most men are thinking of retirement. There were Canadians who doubted the wisdom of breaking with past tradition that saw only distinguished Britons fill the post of the Sovereign's representative in Canada.

But hardly anyone would seriously question now that Mr. Massey proved the wisdom of setting a precedent. Mr. Massey's influence was felt in all strata of Canadian society. He travelled to all parts of the country frequently. He spoke to individuals and groups and his words were more than "governor-generalities". He played a large part in fostering the emerging nationality of Canadians.

Looking back over a record seven years in the job, Mr. Massey last year summed up his views of Canadian nationalism:

"I feel deeply that Canada's national consciousness is more powerful than it has ever been. I know how difficult it is to express this through some formula or figures, but we are a different country than some years ago.

"I feel we have become more self-reliant; that we have greater pride in our country. We shall maintain our identity as long as we remain loyal to our tradition and keep doing things our own way."

As Governor-General, Mr. Massey logged close to 200,000 miles using everything from plane to dog sled. He went to the remotest regions as well as the bigger centres of population, and always with a purpose in mind.

"A Governor-General should travel," he said. "He should go every year, particularly to remote places, for he is in his own way weaving a thread that plays a part in unity."

He followed this self-imposed duty, as far north as the north pole — the first Governor-General to fly over it — and throughout the length and breadth of the country.

Head up — feet on the ground

ON CANADA'S railways, and the economy of our country generally, we find Mr. Donald Gordon a bearer of good news abroad. A splendid publicist for Canada, in fact — his enthusiasm nevertheless (unlike some of the glowing travel pamphlets his company, and others, distribute) being tempered with restraint, lest the over-ambitious listener be misled.

We delighted in an address given just recently by Mr. Gordon, president of the Canadian National Railways, to the Canadian Chamber of Commerce in Great Britain — from a resumé of which we relay the following highlights. . . .

Mr. Gordon gave his emphatic view that, despite the inevitable ups and downs, Canada on the whole is prospering, and everywhere there are striking forerunners of future growth and development.

Canada is suffering some of the "growing pains" of expansion, but Mr. Gordon said he has never been able to worry too much about the "problems of prosperity".

"Granted the honesty of purpose and the fundamental good sense that I verily believe are to be found in our governments, our businessmen and our responsible leaders generally, I remain convinced that my father was right when he chose Canada and that my children and my children's children will continue to endorse that decision."

He said the long-term prospects for Canada justify increased immigration, but Canadian immigration policy has been to encourage immigrants to Canada only if the economy shows the buoyancy to provide opportunities for employment reasonably soon after their arrival. "No immigrant has ever been sold a bill of goods by Canada on Canada. We have never pretended that opportunity in Canada comes pre-packaged, prepared like some frozen food, waiting to be gobbled up. The immigrant will not find an engraver standing, chisel in hand, waiting to engrave his name on a brass plate somewhere."

But there is in Canada, he continued, a remarkable degree and diversity of opportunity open to everyone, regardless of the station or circumstance into which he was born. There were opportunities for self improvement in abundance for those willing to work and to take advantage of them.

Canada, he said, had welcomed more than one and three-quarter million newcomers since the Second World War. They had established homes, farms and businesses, provided a significant addition to the Canadian consumer market, and contributed to industrial and commercial expansion. "I stand unabashed in my expression of confidence in the continuing development of its resources, both human and physical."

Canada's railways, he stated, are still pushing back frontiers, tapping the mineral riches of the North, bringing out uranium, copper, silver, aluminum, cobalt and many other metals. The government-owned railway, as well as the privately-owned Canadian Pacific, operate "under the discipline of the market place" in order to preserve the competitive integrity between the two systems. The operations, organization and business principles of Canadian National were modelled upon those of private enterprise, he pointed out. Control of its administration was vested in a semi-autonomous group of professional managers, and the yardstick of its success must be found in its profit and loss account. Mr. Gordon said short-run results must not be confused with long term objectives.

Where is the End of Steel?

The term "end of steel" was frequently used in the great days of Canadian railway building. It referred to the terminus of any particular railway. During the period of greatest rail activity, a place was often only quite temporarily the end of steel.

What Chief Justices exchanged jobs?

Caesar Colclough, chief justice of Prince Edward Island from 1807 to 1812, and Thomas Tremlett, chief justice of Newfoundland from 1803 to 1812. Colclough, an Irish barrister appointed to the Prince Edward Island post for services rendered during and Irish rebellion in 1798, served during a period of strife between landed proprietors and settlers. He was accused of taking sides with the proprietors and at the request of the House of Assembly was suspended by the Governor. He then exchanged places with Themlett, but encountered similar difficulties in his new post and retired after three turbulent years. Tremlett, a native Newfoundlander, came into conflict with the island's merchant oligarchy, who petitioned the Governor to remove him, specifying three main charges of injustice. Tremlett's reply to the charges was: "To the first charge, Your Excellency, I answer that it is a lie; to the second charge I say that it is a damned lie, and to the third charge it is a damned infernal lie, and, your Excellency, I have no more to say." Tremlett made the switch to Prince Edward Island but, like Colclough, fared no better in his new post.

Who was the First Woman K.C. in the Commonwealth?

Helen Alice Kinnear. Judge Kinnear was born in Cayuga, Ont., and was called to the Ontario bar in 1920. When she was appointed a King's Counsel in 1934, she became the first woman in the Commonwealth to receive this honour. In 1943 she achieved another first. On her appointment as county court judge for Haldimand in that year, she became the first woman in the Commonwealth to be appointed to a county court bench. She had previously appeared as counsel before the Supreme Court of Canada, the first woman to do so.

What is the Skunk Blackbird?

The bobolink. It is often called skunk blackbird because the summer plumage of the male is black with white on the back. The female closely resembles a large sparrow. The male bobolink is noted as a remarkable singer. Bobolinks are found in meadows and hayfields and are commoner in Eastern Canada than in the Western Provinces. They winter as far south as southern Brazil.

Has Satan been outclassed?

Specially contributed — by Norman Thorburn

If you were asked what was the prime pursuit of man, what would you say?—Money, liberty, pleasure, the opposite sex, or what?

I am no philosopher, I may be quite wrong, but I would answer that query by saying that to escape from pain was man's chief aim in life.

It was the desire to escape from the pain of an empty stomach, that drove ancient man to work. The search for food to allay the pangs of hunger gave skill to the hand and cunning to the brain of prehistoric man.

There is a law of physics that tells us, to every action there must be an equal and opposite reaction. Moving, inanimate bodies cause friction. To life, too, there is a reaction; all living creatures fear the penalty of pain.

Not content with avoiding pain in this world, man has given much thought to avoiding pain in the next!

Again I may be wrong, but I wonder, if the desire to avoid pain in the next world is not the main support for religion throughout the world, even today!

The native Indians of this country believed that the soul of the brave and good warrior would go to the happy hunting grounds, where it would be reincarnated. Here the deer, the moose and caribou, would be sleek and fat; the brave and good warrior would escape the pain of an empty stomach in the next world.

Again I may be wrong, but if I were asked what was wrong with religion today, I would say that we have taken the God of Evil off his throne in the infernal regions, and placed him on a pedestal. We are not so much afraid of hell-fire as we used to be.

Today, man can outdo the Devil in deviltry. Satan has been outclassed by man. The Author of Evil never threatened to destroy mighty nations with hell-fire, in an afternoon's sport, as man is doing today.

Is it the Devil who is slowly poisoning the milk that babes and children drink, with Strontium 90, a product of radio-active fallout, which has a great affinity for the calcium in milk?

No, the terrible thing is that it is good men who are doing this.

Yet, I believe man is as good as he ever was, but the power to do evil that has been placed in his hands staggers the imagination.

Give the Devil his due, he is necessary to True religion. God created all things — except evil.

Albert Einstein, the greatest of modern thinkers, believed in God, but he did not believe that God would judge his own creation, man.

To answer this, I believe we must employ the aid of the God of Evil. If Satan has tarnished the souls of men, has not God the right to examine the amount of damage done? Has he not given, to his own creation, man, a will to resist temptations of the Evil One?

Of course, Einstein, in philosophy, was a disciple of De Spinoza, who did not believe in man's existence, because man had no permanency. God alone exists, said Spinoza.

Shakespeare, too, compared man's life to a dream, but Hamlet in his soliloquy expressed his fear of the painful dreams to come when he had "shuffled off this mortal coil."

Man has believed in the immortality of the soul since time immemorial, and has sought to avoid pain in the next world throughout all his history as man.

When we die, I believe we lose everything but our soul. When we die, memory's photo, audio-sensitive cells, and the electric current that activates them, are scattered and dispersed. Even our traits of character are mortal, but the soul returns to the Soul of Nature, which is God, to be endowed once more with the living current of life when He so wills.

I was reading today that armed holdups have increased six times in number, during the last 10 years in Montreal. Eleven of the bandits this year were women; one was a grandma bandit.

Can you imagine an old granny going into a store, pulling a pistol from her purse, poking it into the ponderous paunch of the proprietor with a palsied palm, and barking in piping treble, "Stick 'em up, or I'll fill your fat hide full of lead?" . . . Something surely is wrong.

Drivers take heed!

If you don't do anything else today, please read this letter (published here by a parent's request):

Dear Driver:

A few weeks ago, I saw a little girl struck by a car as she tried to cross the street. I saw a father race toward her and hold her to him as she struggled in the agony of death. I saw all the plans that had been made for her dashed and I saw the look of despair that came over his face. I could only offer a prayer that such a thing might never happen again.

Today my daughter, who is 6 years old, started off to school. Her Cocker spaniel, whose name is Scoot, watched her leave and whined his belief in the folly of education.

Tonight we talked about school. She told me about the girl who sits in front of her, a girl with yellow curls, and about the boy across the aisle who makes faces; about the teacher who has eyes in the back of her head; about the trees in the school yard and the big girl who does not believe in Santa Claus.

We talked about a lot of things — tremendously vital and unimportant things.

When her doll gets broken or her finger cut or her head gets bumped, I can fix them. But when she starts across the street — then, Mr. Driver, she is in your hands.

Much as I wish I could, it's not possible for me to be with her all the time, I have to work to pay for her home, her clothes, her education.

So, Mr. Driver, please help me to look out for her. Please drive carefully. Please drive slowly past schools and at intersections. And please remember that sometimes children run from behind parked cars.

Please don't run over my little girl.

With deepest thanks for whatever you can do for her, I am,

Very sincerely yours,

Father.

This letter was written to the Elmira (N.Y.) Advertiser, which observes: "If any driver can resist its appeal, he has no business with a driver's license."

Of Many Things

— By Ambrose Hills —

EXPERIMENT

Recently I wrote about a book called "The Management of Time," by Jim McCay. Since then, I have been experimenting with its principles. They work.

One principle is the practice of alertness, in order to increase your output while on the job. To practice alertness, it is necessary to change your routine — take a different route home from work, go to new places, try different foods. To do any of these things, you must be alert — and this practice tends to carry over into your job, and to increase your output per hour.

I found this to be true, and I hope I persist in the practice for a long time to come. By increasing my output per hour, I increase my freedom. I am less likely to be depressed by a pile of work undone. I ought to be able to get work done ahead so that my holidays will be carefree.

There is always a payoff for efficiency. True, increased output may not be of much use if there is no demand for the product; but in most cases, by increasing output per hour the price of the product can be lowered, the demand then increases, and the producer and his customers both profit.

The profit is of different kinds. Money, yes. I am virtually certain to make more money if I increase my efficiency. But there are far more important gains; I feel better when I work better. I have a sense of accomplishment. By giving more for less, I gain new customers and friends and greater security.

This, of course, is a paradox many men never understand. They go through life trying to get more for less work. Their character, efficiency, and self-respect diminish daily. I feel sorry for them. They are misled.

Would you like to increase your output per hour? Then get out of every rut for just one or two weeks and note the difference. Rise fifteen minutes earlier; read a new book; take a new route to work; visit a new restaurant; make a new friend. Just see how much more alert you are, and how it reflects on your production. I guarantee you'll want to continue the experiment for a long time to come.

MORE BONERS

A Boner, as I may have explained some time ago, is a wrong or badly phrased answer to an examination question. Here are a few more. . .

Shakespeare wrote "The Merry Widow."

The Complete Angler is another name for Euclid because he wrote all about angles.

Milton wrote "Paradise Lost". Then his wife died and he wrote "Paradise Regained."

Q. — Name three tragedies by Shakespeare.

A. — MacBeth, King Lear, and Twelve Nights in a Bar Room.

Humor was then introduced into the English Drama, for instance — a wife wringing her husband's neck.

The dome of St. Paul's Cathedral is supported by eight peers, all of which are unfortunately cracked.

Contralto is a low sort of voice that only ladies sing.

Abraham was the father of Lot and had ten wives. One was called Hismale and the other Hagar. He kept one at home and the other he sent into the desert where she became a pillow of salt in the daytime and a pillow of fire by night.

The Gorgons were three sisters that lived in the islands of the Hesperides somewhere in the Indian Ocean. They had long snakes for hair, tusks for teeth, and claws for nails. They looked like women only more horrible.

And once in a while you see a classified advertisement that has room for improvement, such as these three. . . .

"Paint your floors, walls, and ceilings with our Quick Drying Enamel and you can walk on them the same night."

"Antique desk for sale suitable for lady with curved legs and large drawers."

"Stableman wanted to take good care of carriage horse that speaks French and English fluently."

HONOR SCOT

Beaumont, Que. (CP) — French speaking Canadians with the family name Fraser are to gather in this St. Lawrence south shore community in October to pay homage to Augustin Fraser, the Scot who brought their names to Quebec. He fought under General Wolfe in the battle of the Plains of Abraham, and later married a French girl and settled on a Beaumont farm.

For example, British kindness and good manners.

We were tired when we got off a ship at Southampton about 7 a.m. and made our way to the customs table where our luggage was assembled, inside a railway station.

An amiable porter moved the cases up to the customs table and stood waiting to take them further. A railway official asked whether there was anything he could do to help. A customs officer asked the routine questions in a courteous tone, while looking us over in that searching, intuitive way that customs men have.

In my limited experience, I think that British customs officers are the politest and New York customs officers the rudest.

The man in charge of luggage was doing business from a suitcase, with a cheerful and unhurried air. While I negotiated with him to have a trunk and two suitcases forwarded, my two boys were standing at the barrier, coolly inspecting my mother-in-law and my wife's nephew Trevor and cousin, Arthur, who had driven down to Southampton to fetch us.

The two boys decided that they liked Trevor and Arthur, and showed their goodwill by climbing and pummelling them.

"Do you live in a castle?" young Michael asked Arthur.

The car moved past puffing steam locomotives, double-decker buses, police in familiar tall helmets; scores of men on bicycles, motor-cycles and motor scooters; past brick walls and gleaming store fronts.

Last time I saw Southampton it was a bomb-shattered ghost of a town. Now most of the ruins have been swept away, and streets of handsome glass-fronted stores built. Only a few weedy bombsites remain. The shops are crammed with a rich assortment of groceries and appliances, and the streets are crowded with cars.

The boys cried out with excitement when they saw a double-decker bus or a three-wheeled car.

We drove on through the New Forest, that ancient, park-like woodland interspersed with open places where the wild ponies wandered. We brushed off the children's suggestion that we should take a pony home.

In Bournemouth, the post-war shabbiness had given place to a look of wealth and abundance. A new multi-storey hotel had arisen where the shattered wreck of the Lansdowne Hotel used to be. The war seemed a distant memory. Only by strenuous effort could the mind call up images of blackouts, air raids, barbed wire and iron posts on the beaches, and thousands of Canadian airmen laughing, chattering and playing cards and dice in the bare rooms of the seaside hotels.

The pier, formerly broken in half to frustrate a possible German invasion, had been repaired, and a paddle-wheel steamer plied from it. My little boys took off their shoes and socks on the beach and ran squealing with pleasure along the fine golden sand, while I sat back in a deck chair, nearly asleep.

It was early. Only a few mothers, fathers, dogs and children with buckets, spades and rubber balls were on the sand. Soon the place would be jammed with people. It was summer, at an English beach resort.

Regina minister says clergy must be human

Regina (C) — Rev. A. D. Stade, superintendent of United Church of Canada Home Missions, says a preacher can't do his job unless he knows what it means to be human.

"I was brought up in the old school, whose students were made to contend with the latest ideas," Mr. Stade said in an interview.

"Many a person, when he hears some of these ideas expressed in a sermon, will go away with a distorted idea of what was meant.

"The minister is at a disadvantage because he naturally builds his view on emphasizing the one particular thought, which is so often misinterpreted."

A preacher must be sure he is getting his message across and to do this he must understand his congregation, said Mr. Stade.

"Man has to be answered when the old ideas are challenged by science. Over 60 per cent of the minister's job is to educate.

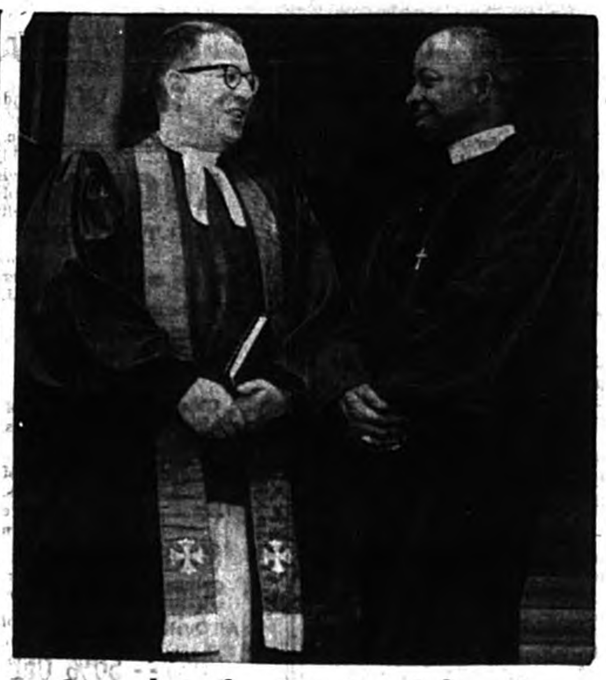

"The tendency used to be almost entirely on the minister as an educator, but today there is also the need to work with people, particularly those on the fringe of the church.

"Any minister who thinks that all he has to do is preach his sermon and marry and bury his people is being misled. The preacher must get out and meet his public on their own footing — whether it be coiling hay or joining a city club."

Crusaders for inter-racial amity

The Rev. Wilson Bridge, Lachute, and the Rev. Raphael Michael, from North Carolina, who have many mutual interests, having previously exchanged pastorates between Quebec Province and the Deep South. . . Despite their successful experiment in inter-racial understanding two years ago, the ministers had never met each other personally until last week-end, when the Rev. Dr. Michael and family came to visit again in these parts.

Dedication at Un. Church service; North Carolina minister is visitor

It was to the opening strains of "Lord, this day Thy children meet in Thy courts with willing feet", that the people of the East Settlement United Church gathered for worship last Sunday morning at 9.15. The crowded congregation consisted of parents, children and friends, some of whom had come from a distance for the special service. . . The occasion was Children's Day, and the dedication of the new hymn-board presented to the church by Mrs. Arthur Beecroft, of Dunville, Ont., in memory of her father, the late Mr. Albert Hamilton Copeland, who served for 23 years as superintendent of the East Settlement Sunday School. It was very fitting that the unveiling of the hymn-board should be undertaken by Mrs. Copeland of Lachute, widow of the late Albert Hamilton Copeland. As the congregation stood for the ceremony, the act of dedication was carried out by the Rev. Wilson Bridge, minister of the Lachute pastoral charge, who said: "We dedicate this hymn-board to the glory of God, and in memory of a good and faithful servant." Mrs. Edward Armstrong presided at the organ. The Scripture was read by Miss Margaret Boa.

Another outstanding feature of the service was the presence in the congregation of the Rev. E. Raphael Michael, D.D., minister of the Little Rock A.M.E. Zion Church, Charlotte, North Carolina. Dr. Michael, as some friends will recall, was the colored minister with whom the Rev. Bridge exchanged pulpits and manses, in August 1957, in what has been described as the first international inter-racial exchange on the North American continent.

Dr. Michael shared with the Rev. Wilson Bridge in the 11 a.m. service in the Lachute United Church. "It is a great pleasure", said Mr. Bridge, "to welcome Dr. and Mrs. Michael, and their two daughters, Margaret and Vernoca, after an absence of two summers — especially so in view of the fact that we have personally never met until this week-end. Even though we had shared home and churches for a month, we did not have the privilege of meeting, owing to a change of plans on the return journey. The Michaels have won a warm place in the hearts of our people, and we are delighted to have them back in Lachute."

Dr. Michael, in reply, expressed the happiness of himself and his family on being here once more. He assured the congregation that he had never received more kindness from the people of any other church, and he wanted them to know that the congregation at Charlotte thought very highly of the Bridges. He stated that Mr. Bridge, by his preaching, had written his name indelibly in their queen city, and that both families were making plans for another exchange. . . During the service, Mrs. Michael, who has a beautiful solo voice, sang two selections by special request, "Lord, I want to be a Christian" and "We are climbing Jacob's ladder". Mr. Jack Gorman was at the organ console.

A most interesting day of services and social calls was brought to a close with a service in the Avoca United Church at 8 p.m. Dr. Michael, the Rev. Wilson Bridge and Mr. George Clifford, student minister, shared the service, in which there were five baptisms.

Bride in Ontario was former Lachute girl

Underwood - MacKimmie

The marriage of Annabelle Mary, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John K. MacKimmie, of Lachute, to Robert James, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. Underwood, of Agincourt, Ont., took place Saturday, August 1, at 6 o'clock in the Knox United Church in Agincourt — the Rev. Galloway officiating at the double-ring ceremony.

The church was decorated with white gladoli. The wedding music was played by Mrs. H. Preston.

Given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Donald MacKimmie, the bride wore a floor-length gown of off-white nylon net, with a shirred bodice trimmed with Irish lace and tiny sequins. The tiered skirt was also trimmed with bands of Irish lace. Her veil of tulle illusion was held by a coronet of tulle leaves and seed pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of white gladoli and pink tea roses. The bride also wore matching pearls and earrings, a gift of the groom.

The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. Edward Wigley, as matron of honor, and Mrs. M. Davis, sister of the groom, as senior bridesmaid. The junior bridesmaids were Miss Karen Wigley, niece of the bride, and Miss Georgia Underwood, niece of the groom. They wore cocktail-length dresses of crystal charm in colors of turquoise, rose, mauve and yellow, fashioned with full skirts, wide criss-cross sashes extending to the hem at the back, and matching feathered hats. They carried cascade bouquets of yellow mums, pink carnations and tea roses.

Mr. George Underwood acted as best man for his brother, while the ushers were Mr. Gordon Underwood and Mr. Arthur Underwood, also brothers of the groom.

The groom's mother wore a dress of blue floral silk with white accessories, and a corsage of yellow mums.

A reception was held in the church hall, which was decorated with white gladioli and colorful sweet peas.

Following the reception, the bride and groom visited the groom's father, who is a patient in the Scarborough General Hospital. The guests went on to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Clark in Markham.

Later the happy couple left for a trip to the States and Quebec, the bride travelling in a blue embroidered jacket, with white accessories and a corsage of orchids.

Mr. and Mrs. Underwood will reside in Scarborough, Ont.

— Jehovah's Witnesses —

"This Good News of the Kingdom

You may remember Jesus said it would be preached, but do you know why and what is to follow? Jesus said it is "for the purpose of a witness to all the nations, and then the accomplished end will come." That means God's finial war. But does it mean the end of life on earth?

"After Armageddon — God's New World"

The "good news" is that God's kingdom is now established. Soon, at the battle of Armageddon, it will destroy the old world, with its wickedness, poverty and distress, and bring in a new world, where there will be no pain, crying or death! That is the hope God gives for mankind in our generation. Nothing can change or prevent it.

Have You A Question on UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE OR EMPLOYMENT?

In this column we publish questions about unemployment insurance and employment, together with answers received from the Unemployment Insurance Commission.

If you are uncertain about any point do not hesitate to send us your question. We will obtain an answer and publish it in this column.

Following are some questions with answers which may be of interest to you:

Q. If I am pensioned off from the place I work and receive a pension of $100 a month, am I entitled to draw unemployment insurance?

A. Yes, provided you are able, ready and willing to work, and fulfill all the other conditions of entitlement to benefit.

Q. I have been out of work for some time and am drawing unemployment insurance benefit. My neighbor who is ill has offered to pay me $10 a week to do some light work in his cellar. If I take the job can I still draw my benefit?

A. Whether or not you will be able to draw benefit while working for your neighbor will depend on the hours worked, nature of the work, and so on. It is suggested that you consult your local office, giving full particulars. In any event, be sure to report to your local office all work that you do while on benefit, and all earnings.

Q. Why can't your office tell me if I will qualify for benefit instead of having to wait a week or more to find out?

A. Qualifications for benefit and the duration of benefits are based on the contributions made in the two years prior to claim. Records of contributions prior to the current year are kept in the regional office, and these prior records must be consulted before it can be determined that a claimant has qualified. Rarely, however, does this result in delay in payment.

Q. I had 26 stamps when I filed my last claim and I was told that I needed 30 to qualify for benefit. I now have an additional six stamps. Will I qualify?

A. To qualify for regular benefit, a person must have at least 30 contribution weeks in the two years immediately prior to claim, with eight of these contribution weeks in the last year. If the additional six contribution weeks enable you to fulfill these requirements and you can meet the other conditions for the receipt of benefit, you may now qualify.

PIPELINE FOR WOOD?

Canadian pulp and paper industry is on the move toward a tremendous technology break-through — pipelining wood from forest to mill, said Jack McArthur recently in The Financial Post. This is still in the laboratory stage. But there's big news from the Pulp and Paper Institute of Canada. Some time this year — all going well — it may become logical for some Canadian pulp and paper company to set up a wood pipeline as a kind of commercial "experiment".

The work of fully exploring the economics of sending wood chips through pipelines for many miles cross-country may take years more. But the prizes to be won could be very rich.

Care of Cut Flowers

(Copyright)

— By NANCY CLEAVER —

Did you ever walk into a florist's shop and long to ask just how the flowers were kept looking so fresh and lovely? Perhaps you have wanted to — but the florist was busy, other customers were waiting, and anyway you felt a bit shy!

What homemaker with a flower garden is not eager that her blooms will give the greatest amount of pleasure to the members of her family and to her friends, especially those who are sick? A gift bouquet combines beauty and the knowledge that one is remembered. These blend into the best of medicine for the sick — but the present of flowers is always appreciated, and an apparently healthy person may need this "medicine for the soul" too!

A person who is slowly convalescing will often appreciate several small bouquets rather than one large one. These little floral surprises give pleasure for more days and boost the morale of the sick person over a longer period.

A bouquet will last much longer if it arrives in an inexpensive container holding water. The time the flowers are out of water is the time which shortens their life. Florists often use an inexpensive fish bowl, filled with a commercial preparation. But a homemaker can use a squatty glass jar or even a low tin can covered with foil or painted as a substitute vase.

If you are giving away a bouquet, try to arrange it at once and place in a cool place until it can be delivered. If you have a sheet of wax paper or cellophane place a light "tent" around the bouquet to conserve the moisture and protect from air currents. If there is room in the refrigerator, and its temperature can be set at around 45°, that is a good spot. But do NOT place it in the coolest place near the freezer. The leaves as well as the petals are apt to turn brown when brought out later.

The cellar floor in the "cold room" may receive your bouquet, providing it is not draughty. Flowers can stand a warm temperature better than a draught. The colder temperature retards the growth of the flower. Roses placed in the florist's refrigerator kept at 40° to 50° will last four times as long as those at room temperature.

Beware of a top-heavy effect! It is not pleasing and may even fall over, vase and all. The flowers should not be more than twice as high as their vase. The buds should be towards the outside of the bouquet, not in the middle.

The greatest color concentration should be in the centre. Colors should be either contrasting or blending. More than three colors are hard to use together effectively. It is best to have an uneven number of main blooms — seven, nine, eleven, even thirteen!

Flowers with any height need to be anchored or they and their bowl may topple over. A heavy glass "frog" can be purchased, or commercial "pebbles" used. One can be made from a little square of fine chicken wire crumpled together and fastened to the bottom of the container with plastite clay. Clippings from cedar are sometimes used but after a short time they are apt to foul the water. Always place the flower stems in the vase at an angle, not straight down.

One of the most important things to keep in mind in caring for cut flowers is that they MUST have abundant fresh water to drink. When the stem is cut on an angle it has more "drinking surface." Woody stems like lilacs or chrysanthemums need to be hammered at the ends so they can "imbibe" more freely. A rose stem will benefit from being slit in the centre an inch or so up the stem from the bottom. Keep leaves out of the water. They will soon decay and spoil its freshness.

When arranging flowers, don't feel you MUST use all the ones you have picked in one or two bouquets. Increase the number of bouquets and have more artistic effects. The Orientals have taught the Western World the beauty which lies in simplicity in flower arrangement. You want quality, not necessarily quantity! Have a picture in your mind of your completed bouquet and then try to achieve this "masterpiece!"

Dust frozen French-fries with seasoned salt before oven heating. When hot, for each package stir in ¼ c. small-diced sweet green pepper and 1 tbsp. minced onion; bake 15 min. in butter in oven with potatoes or until color turns.

Baked Stuffed Tomatoes Alabama: Remove stem ends from 6 ripe medium tomatoes. Cut thin slice from top of each; spoon out and chop most of tomato pulp.

Mix with ½ c. smooth or crunchy peanut butter, ¾ c. soft bread crumbs or cooked brown rice or cooked quick barley, 1 tsp. salt, ⅛ tsp. pepper, ½ tsp. oregano, 2 tbsp. minced onion and ¼ c. small-diced celery.

Fill hollowed tomatoes.

Oil good-sized cupcake pans; put ½ tsp. water in each. Place 1 tomato in each pan.

Bake 25 min. in hot oven, 400 deg. F.

Note: Serve this on toast as a luncheon entree; garnish with crisp bacon.

A tea-time treat

The popular song "If I knew you were coming, I'd have baked a cake", sums up the idea that a piece of cake on the table waiting to greet a guest is one way of spelling out hospitality. The great popularity of cake might stem from the fact that it can be made in an almost infinite variety. And just about everybody from the toddlers on up can think of their own favorite flavor. A cake such as Mocha Square with Chocolate Butter Icing has special appeal because it has not one, but many flavor ingredients. . . . instant coffee, nutmeg, brown sugar and chocolate. For variety, a coffee or vanilla butter icing, or a brown sugar, seven minute frosting may also be used as a topping. The party-pleasing appearance of this cake makes it an ideal choice for more formal entertainment as well as family desserts.

Mocha Square

(Yield — one 8-inch square cake)

1½ Cups once-sifted all-purpose flour, or 1¾ cups once-sifted pastry flour, 2½ teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon baking soda, ½ teaspoon salt, 1½ tablespoons powdered instant coffee, ½ teaspoon grated nutmeg, ⅔ cup butter or margarine, 1½ cups lightly-packed brown sugar, 2 well-beaten eggs, ¾ cup milk, ½ teaspoon vanilla.

Grease an 8-inch square cake pan and line in the bottom with greased waxed paper. Preheat oven to 350°F. (moderate).

Sift together 3 times the all-purpose or pastry flour, baking powder, baking soda, salt, instant coffee and nutmeg. Cream butter or margarine; gradually add brown sugar and beat until light. Add eggs, part at a time, beating in well after each addition. Measure milk and add vanilla. Add sifted dry ingredients to creamed mixture alternately with milk, combining lightly after each addition. Turn batter into prepared pan and spread evenly. Bake in preheated oven 45 to 50 minutes. Let cake stand in its pan on cake rack for 10 minutes, then turn out into rack and peel off paper; let stand until cold. Frost with the following Chocolate Butter Icing.

Chocolate Butter Icing

(Yield — Sufficient for top and sides of an 8-inch square cake)

¼ Cup butter or margarine, few grains salt, 2 cups sifted icing sugar, 2 tablespoons (about) scalded cream, 2 ounces (2 squares) unsweetened chocolate (melted), ½ teaspoon vanilla.

Cream butter or margarine until soft; add salt. Work sugar into butter or margarine alternately with very hot cream, adding melted chocolate after part of the scalded cream has been stirred in — use just enough cream to make a frosting of spreading consistency; beat in vanilla. Spread on cold cake.

Teatime Topics

Written Specially for The Lachute Watchman

By Edna Blakely, Canadian Press Staff Writer

June was dairy month, July was salad month, and August is sandwich time. Sandwich Time was officially declared by Agriculture Minister Harkness.

The consumer section of the agriculture department has some good ideas for sandwiches for picnics. They suggest meat sandwiches be made for impromptu picnics and stored in a freezer. The sandwiches will keep fresh for a week or two.

In this way, it will take only a few minutes to prepare for an outdoor meal. Crisp cucumbers, tomatoes, onions and salad dressing can be taken along and added to the sandwiches just before eating. A large can of apple juice makes a fine beverage.

Cake can be made in advance and frozen also. A crumb cake is fine since it has no icing to become soft or sticky. It's best to take cake along in its own pan.

The Canadian interpretation of picnic is much different from the literal translation. Picnic is the combination of two old French words, "pique" and "nique" which, when joined together, meant "to pick very little of practically nothing."

For a Change

During August, a change from sandwiches can be a creamed filling in crisp bread baskets. The only ingredients are sliced white bread, butter and filling.

Remove crust and butter both sides of bread. Tuck into large-size muffin tins. Bake in a 375-degree oven until crispy and brown. It takes approximately 15 minutes. Fill with creamed meat, fish or vegetable. Serve warm.

Canadians and Cheese

Canada's annual per capita consumption of cheese is climbing, but Dorothy Dew, Toronto associate editor of a national magazine, says this is largely due to the number of former Europeans who are now residing in this country.

Mrs. Dew says to increase Canadian consumption, manufacturers and processors must use more effective and eye-catching advertising, store displays and product packaging.

Many housewives will applaud Mrs. Dew's plea for a package that can be opened quickly, reclosed neatly, and when reclosed, will protect the contents.

Helpful Hints

When the doctor gives the green light for a patient to sit up in bed, it's often a problem to make the patient comfortable.

A chair placed upside down on the springs and against the headboard will raise the mattress to a good angle. The back of the chair provides the prop.

A simple way to improvise a bed table is to place a dining room table leaf on two kitchen chairs. The table leaf must be longer than the bed is wide, and the chairs must be strong and of the right height and shape.

An orange crate will double nicely for a bed table and a shoe bag can hold knitting, crocheting, letters and stationery if pinned to the mattress.

Consommé Salad Stars at Summer Meals

Star performer at any summer meal is a jewel-like gelatin salad. For hearty rich flavour, start with condensed consommé as the base. This meaty broth contains gelatin which makes it a natural for these jellied specialties. Add chopped meat and vegetables to the consommé (along with more gelatin); and let the refrigerator take over. One bite and you know how good a salad can taste.

A basic recipe for Consommé Salad can be made with either chopped chicken or tongue. Both make delightful summer suppers.

JELLIED CONSOMME SALAD

1 envelope unflavoured gelatin
1/3 cup cold water
1 can (10 ounces) condensed consommé
2-4 tablespoons lemon juice
½ cup diced tongue or chicken
½ cup minced cucumber
2 tablespoons sliced, stuffed olives
1 hard cooked egg, chopped

Soften gelatin in cold water; then dissolve over hot water. Add consommé and lemon juice; chill until mixture begins to thicken. Fold in remaining ingredients. Rinse a 1-quart mold or loaf pan with cold water (for decoration, arrange slices of tongue or chicken in bottom of mold so they form a pattern on top of jellied salad). Chill until firm. Unmold and serve on crisp greens. 4 servings.

SOUP SCOOPS

GRAVY GLORIFIES SANDWICHES

When there's roast meat left from dinner, plan double deck sandwiches for the next day. Glorify the sandwiches with hot gravy (using 1 can of beef gravy). For each sandwich, place a slice of meat between 2 slices of toast and top with more meat. Pour hot brown gravy on top. Each can contains 1¼ cups beef gravy, enough for 3 or 4 sandwiches. Garnish sandwich plates with cold crisp celery, carrot sticks and pickles—a real meal.

SOUP SANDWICH SPECIAL

For a picnic table treat, try this sandwich idea. Butter about 16 slices of white bread. On half the bread slices, spread the contents of 1 can (1¼ cups) condensed cream of mushroom soup. Top with 1 cup flaked tuna (6-ounce can, drained). Cover with remaining bread slices. Serve a green salad with sour cream and cottage cheese dressing. Makes 8 to 10 sandwiches.

NOTES FROM ABROAD

— By R. A. Giles —

Six years ago, Mrs. Giles and I were privileged to visit the Old Country and at that time sent back a resumé of our experience. This appeared in The Watchman and I believe was appreciated. Now it is our good fortune once again to travel, and for the benefit of those unable to make a similar trip, I will endeavor to send a brief account of our doings, which I trust may be interesting and I hope instructive.

Friday morning the sun shone brightly as we boarded what was to be our home for the next week, the Cunard Liner "Saxonia" — a vessel of some 22,000 gross tonnage, built in long graceful lines, with an overall length of 608 feet and a breadth of 80 feet. Friends and relatives were on hand to bid us a bon voyage. The warning gong was sounded at 11 o'clock — at 11.30 sharp the gangways had been lowered and we moved gently out from the dock waving our farewells as long as identity was possible. A gift of field glasses from The Watchman and L'Argenteuil staff gave us considerable advantage and we kept in touch with our waving well-wishers as long as possible.

The trip down the St. Lawrence was, as always, picturesque, with gaily painted houses and summer cottages standing out and arraying the shoreline.

Passengers were taken on at Quebec with the pilot and the last mail dispatched around 10 p.m. at Father Point.

Regulations for the Saxonia call for a maximum of 120 First Class passengers, 819 Tourist, 101 children 1-to-3 years, with a crew of 457 — a total of 1,497 persons. On this trip we have 108 First, 751 Tourist and 445 crew, a total of 1,304. Tourist travel, as can be seen from the above figures, is becoming more popular each year, and while there is not quite as much fuss in this section, meals, accommodation and service are all that can be desired.

On Saturday, another real hot day, we busied ourselves in getting our bearings and finding the different spots of interest such as library, theatre, beverage room, beauty parlor, barber shop, reading room, novelty shop, and mainly the dining room. There is also an elevator which is in constant use, for with the several decks, climbing becomes tiresome. To put it simply, ocean liners of today resemble large hotels, with every modern convenience, affording the greatest possible comfort to passengers.

Divine service is held on board each Sunday. On July 26 there was a large attendance, with the ship's officers in charge. A collection of $55 was received which is turned over to the Sailors' Relief Fund. One lady we met during the day was quite surprised to know that Rev. Wilson Bridge was our minister, for she too knew him and frequently attended his former church at Hove in England.

Quite different to travelling by train, there being nothing but sea around, it is quite a novelty when another ship is passed, and particularly at night, when the bright lights stand out so prominently against the dark horizon.

Weather was extremely warm over the week-end, but as we reached the Gulf, the change to cold came quickly, for we had entered the region of icebergs. We passed several, one of which was as large as our ship and towered majestically, a gleaming and beautiful mass of white.

It is now noon on Wednesday and the staff have just been called out for lifeboat drill. All passengers received their instructions on how to act in case of emergency, earlier on the trip.

Officers and all personnel are most courteous, obliging, and anxious to make the voyage as pleasant as possible. Last evening we were guests of the Purser, Mr. J. D. Horsford, prior to dinner, and found him a gracious and entertaining host.

Packing will be the next order of events, then the excitement of landing and meeting relatives and friends, whom we have not seen in years. Similarly, others are returning from Canada and will be warmly greeted. There is something fascinating about it all, something hard to explain, and which really has to be experienced to be appreciated — perhaps some day you may enjoy it.

This is Thursday evening and a great number of our passengers have disembarked, for we are at Le Havre, the French port landed at over 40 years ago, under much different circumstances of course, for the 1st World War was then on. And yet still, so long afterwards, those who left us today were airmen accompanied by their wives and children, some going on to Germany, others remaining in France, mostly for a four-year stay.

It was most interesting to note the eager eyes watching the first sight of land, and then to see the outline of structures along the shoreline of this great port. Several large vessels were passed and the pilot came aboard to guide us into port, while numerous large planes could be seen doing manoeuvres overhead and at the same time giving us a great welcome.

Unloading facilities are wonderful in this large dock, with huge cranes hoisting up from the holds 50 boxes of oranges at a time, gently dropping them on a small truck, which in turn transports them for further distribution.

During the night when our cargo has been unloaded, we will proceed to Southampton, our destination.

Baggage was all taken by 7 p.m. on Thursday, and after an early breakfast on Friday we disembarked, met one of Cunard's officials and were soon on our way by taxi after fond farewells to newly-made friends. Our hotel for the night was a few miles away, very comfortable and serving good meals.

One of the first things to seem strange is that of driving on the left-hand side of the road and we expected accidents to happen at any moment, but after a few hours the custom seemed natural and our main worry was in crossing the streets.

Friday afternoon we went to Eastleigh, where Mrs. Giles was born and lived until about 12 years of age. It was 32 years since she last visited the district and it was a pleasure particularly for her to recall early childhood days and meet a few friends whom she had then known. Naturally there had been extensive changes, as are taking place all over England just as in Canada, in new and elaborate homes. One thing I have noticed here, buildings are put up strong and substantially, with continued inspections. Lumber is quite scarce and brick is the principal material used, even to partitions. A small but very attractive bungalow, solid and well built, may be had for $12,000 to $15,000 and you can be sure it won't be falling apart in a few years. There are no cellars, and on account of the milder weather heating is done mainly by gas or electricity. Rents are quite reasonable.

Saturday our taxi arrived and brought us safely to Hove, near Brighton, where we are presently staying and enjoying ourselves to the full. We are quite close to the sea front and are thrilled to be walking along the parade looking out to sea, getting the breezes and sun which are so invigorating.

On Sunday morning we attended the Cliftonville Congregational Church, where Rev. Wilson Bridge and Mrs. Bridge had served before coming to Canada. We were most cordially received, with many enquiries from their old friends as to their welfare.

This was the August 1 holiday week-end, or what is known here as August bank holiday, and needless to say the streets and beaches were crowded with visitors at this famous seaside resort.

During Monday, I wandered around Brighton looking over old familiar streets and spots well known to us during the First World War, for we were stationed only a few miles away at Shoreham for final military training before going to France. There were still some friends whom we knew then, delighted to see us again. Of course they, like we, had grown much older for our acquaintance started over 40 years ago. Then, we were physically fit and frequently my chum Doug. Davis and I would think nothing of the following routine on a Saturday — Up at 6 a.m., breakfast and a route march with full pack, return at 11.30, a shower, dinner and off to Brighton, take in the afternoon show at the Royal Theatre, eat supper at the Rendez-Vous (generally poached eggs on toast), then the first performance at the Hippodrome from 6.15 to 8.15 p.m. (a variety show), dance at the Oddfellows Hall until 11 o'clock, and missing the last bus to Shoreham have to walk back some 7 miles. I'm positive we couldn't do it now! The restaurant still operates, under different management, and last evening we attended the theatre, which still draws as big crowds as ever. Guess I'm a little sentimental but I do get a kick in seeing old familiar places and meeting again friends who during our war experiences, far away from home, were so very kind to us.

Thursday and another perfect day with the sun shining brightly. Have been along the sea front and enjoyed the wonderful array of flowers in the sunken gardens. 'Tis rather hard to explain, but the one here is approximately 200 x 500 feet and 20 feet deep with sloping banks covered with multi-colored flowers of all kinds. There are seats and chairs amidst the flowers and at the band concerts (from a large stand in the center) there are crowds to enjoy the music and beauties of nature.

Lawn bowling is quite popular and I watched with interest several games being played. The greens are perfectly level and the game is quite similar to our Curling, even to the antics of the players, who frequently become quite excited.

All for now.

What the kids have done

Anyone who is convinced that the younger generation is going to the dogs, might stop for a moment and consider what the kids in the Canadian Junior Red Cross have done, comments The Financial Post.

They have raised, since the beginning of the year, some $11,450 — and done it the hard way. From St. John's to Vancouver they have sold candy and fruit, staged concerts and dances, washed cars, shone shoes and added it up penny by penny and quarter by quarter.

The purpose: To promote international friendship by bringing to Canada for a few weeks 50 or so boys and girls from Nigeria, Haiti, Ceylon, South Africa, Peru, Vietnam, Yugoslavia and some 35 other countries.

Two farmers attacked by bulls

Two well-known Glengarry farmers were attacked by enraged bulls while doing work around their farm buildings. The two were Willie K. MacLeod and John Donevan.

Mr. Donevan was spraying his stable recently with the help of two farmhands. During the operation he had taken the bull and calves outside. After he had finished the work he untethered the bull and attempted to lead it into the building. The bull bunted Mr. Donovan, knocking him against a post, and butted him twice before he was rescued by the two farm workers.

Mr. MacLeod was putting the cows in the barn when he was suddenly attacked by the bull. The bull tossed him three times before he was rescued by the quick action of his wife and his dog. The dog went to his defence instantly, distracting the animal's attention long enough for the hired man to dart out into the yard and rescue Mr. MacLeod. He was taken to the Smith Clinic with two fractured ribs and body bruises.

Rare cattle breeds at Ottawa 'Ex'

Toronto — Santa Gertrudis, the first breed of beef cattle ever developed on the North American continent, will be on display August 21-24 at Central Canada Exhibition in Ottawa.

Cold Creek Farm at Woodbridge, Ont., owned by J. Grant Glassco, which has the largest herd of Santa Gertrudis in Canada, will exhibit seven of the big red Santa Gertrudis at the fair.

The development of the Santa Gertrudis breed dates back to early in this century when the famous King Ranch of Texas, in the United States, started an effort to produce cattle which would be hardy in South Texas' dry climate, and which, at the same time would yield a good carcass and quality beef.

There will also be an interesting exhibit of Charolais cattle to be seen at the Central Canada Exhibition. Of all the different breeds of cattle, one of the most remarkable is the French Charolais. Some 200 years ago, they were located in a small area around Charolles, France, but it was not until 1770 when a herd was established at Nevers, that their popularity spread to other parts of France and since then to North and South America.

They have silvery white or light wheat-colored hair which grows very thick in cold weather so they adapt easily to different climates.

Courtesy and Consideration on the Highway

(This is one of a series of 10 articles compiled under the direction of the Institute for Safer Living of the American Mutual Liability Insurance Company, and is offered to this newspaper as a public service to its readers.—The Editor)

By
ARTHUR S. JOHNSON
Vice President — Engineering
American Mutual Liability
Insurance Company

The automobile and all that its use implies can become one of our most civilizing material influences. But the glaring facts remain — as a nation of drivers we have much to improve in our feelings and attitudes toward our fellow travelers on the highway.

As a safety engineer dealing with the problems of highway safety, I say that the automobile will be operated with decency and courtesy and common understanding as soon as the spiritual potential in our American way of living becomes understood and knowledge of it widely known and distributed. That means learning the moral principle that underlies courtesy. We who work in the safety movement has an unparalleled opportunity to study moral principle. In it, one is not dealing with villany or viciousness, but merely simple ignorance and lack of skill in the use of new tools.

It is in the safety movement that men study accidents caused by simple human failures, and teach safe practices in the practical school of human relations. The nine other chapters deal with technical material aspects of safe driving. Perhaps the simple techniques of courtesy should comprise this chapter also. I have chosen, however, to deal with courtesy as synonymous with the moral principle which should control the behaviour of motorists toward each other.

The principles which define civilization are charity, compassion, and tolerance. If the automobile is to serve as the greatest single factor in the creation of wealth and its distribution, to be used as a material force for good, it must help to reach the realization of these civilizing principles. It does, and it will — give it time, patience, and the driving energy of teaching.

Give the other fellow a break. Be courteous!

The screaming, swearing, impatient ejaculation aimed at the passing motorist or pedestrian for action that one does not like, merely because it makes one change his own path or speed, is the antithesis of charity. As a matter of fact it is an expression of hate. It is an act of pointless savagery that could otherwise have been a much simpler act of courtesy. There is more to charity than laissez-faire, for it connotes love; at the least good will and liberality.

Teamwork plus Courtesy helps to get you there safely.

When the driver acquires sufficient skill and ability not to be afraid, so that his car responds deftly to his will and reflexes, he can then learn to let it teach him charity. Most drivers encountered today are mature, skilled and courteous; many still need to learn.

Let's talk about the man so heedless of others that he operates ruthlessly, in utter disregard of the effect that he has upon his neighbors on the road. Such a ruthless wretch (speeders included) needs to be barred from the road temporarily, even as the anti-social and the felon need to be denied freedom temporarily. Such behaviour is the antithesis of compassion. Compassion for the other driver is not doctrinaire, but is very practical attitude that marks the civilized man.

I have put charity and compassion in the spotlight of human behaviour as it applies to the man behind the wheel. But the quality which comes into play constantly in every situation, and allows for the slightest as well as the greatest differences between us as individuals, is tolerance. It makes one allow for the behaviour of another in manners different from one's own. To the engineer tolerance is the acceptance of something at variance with a measured standard. Driving can never be measured to an exact standard. There will always be the necessity to accept variation in some degree. Only those things which are spelled out in the statutes permit of no tolerance. Tolerance is freedom of choice rightly used.

All three of these qualities, of which courtesy is the common gauge, are unenforceable. They come into proper use and understanding through acts of self discipline. Recognizing them and learning them, and heeding them, will help to make the automobile the civilizing force that it can become.

Common understanding among drivers will produce decency and courtesy.

"The screaming, swearing, impatient ejaculation aimed at the passing motorist."

The next article, "Safer Cars for Safer Driving," is written by John O. Moore, Director, Automotive Crash Injury, Research, Division of Public Health and Preventive Medicine, Cornell University Medical College.

Cadillac

A GENERAL MOTORS VALUE

Hoped for the Best...and Got It!

Just a short time ago, he walked into his dealer's showroom—with his heart and his hopes high—to see if the time had come for his first Cadillac.

Well—his fondest hopes were realized—and here he is today with the car of his dreams.

What were the facts about Cadillac that made this happy and memorable moment possible? Let us count them off.

First of all, the original cost of a new Cadillac is remarkably modest—in fact many models are actually priced competitively with other motor cars of Canadian manufacture.

There is also Cadillac's extraordinary economy of ownership. Mile after mile, the car is amazingly frugal with gasoline.

And then there is the way a Cadillac protects its owner's investment returning an exceptionally high percentage of its price at resale time.

So before you decide on any car—visit your Cadillac dealer. He'll be waiting for you—with the most surprising economy story of the year!

Six injured in auto crash

A late-model Volkswagen was demolished early Friday evening when involved in a head-on crash on Route 41, several miles east of Lachute. Driver was Robert A. Hudson, 26, of St. Janvier; he and five passengers were treated for injuries in the St. Jerome hospital. The other car was driven by Arthur M. Hart, 35, of the RCAF station, Lac St. Denis. Traffic Officer Albert Legault, who investigated the crash, reports that both cars appeared to have been on the wrong side of the road. The injured were treated at the scene by Dr. Jacques Castagner, former Brownsburg physician now practising in St. Jerome, and two medical co-freres who were returning to St. Jerome.

Attempted theft of motor boat

Jean Liasse, 23, and Rosaire Roy, 18, both of Montreal, were held over in St. Jerome court on Tuesday, after being charged with the attempted theft of a motor boat owned by Gaetan Cadieux, of St. Andrews East.

The incident occurred around 2 a.m. on August 8 and the accused were caught and turned over to Traffic Officer Lawrence Cruise. Appearing on Tuesday of this week, Roy pleaded guilty, while Liasse pleaded not guilty to the charge. The sentence and trial, respectively, are expected September 8th.

Lions Club award to former citizen

Buckingham — The President's Appreciation Award of the Lions Club was presented to Bob MacArthur at the Lions Club meeting in Buckingham, when the Lions were guests of the Buckingham Gliding Club at the local airport.

Lions Club President Rhéal Nadon told guests Mr. MacArthur was chosen for the award because of his "unfailing work and devotion" in construction of the new swimming pool.

Rev. Bro. Hermidas, chief instructor at the Gliding Club, recalled that the Lions presented the club with its first glider and that the club has since logged more than 3,000 hours of gliding.

(Bob MacArthur is a former Dalesville and Lachute resident, and has many friends in this community.)

Method and equipment demonstrated at Harrington Forest Farm field day

Harrington, Que. — More than 100 visitors toured the Harrington Forest Farm of Canadian International Paper Company last week-end and saw at first-hand the latest developments in forest research.

The group, composed of tree farmers from the region and their families, were guests of M. R. Wilson, C.I.P. resident manager, at a field day on Saturday. Tour director was Doug Morrison.

A highlight for the tree farmers was a description by farm superintendent Jaap Salm of forced feeding of conifer seedlings and a display of the results to date. Red pine and white spruce were seeded indoors under partly controlled conditions in containers which were taken into the open air and their growth studied. This research project is aimed at producing planting stock in a short time.

In the farm's 10-acre nursery, visitors were shown red pine and hybrid larch now completing their third growing season. Next year, they will form the first crop of young trees which will be made available at cost to tree farmers who supply wood for C.I.P. operations. Red pine, white spruce, jack pine, hybrid poplar and European larch are also being grown. Eventually, the program will make 1,000,000 young trees available annually.

Thinning operations in an immature hardwood stand were also demonstrated. Main object of this experimental area was to explain how selection of quality trees for the future should be made and the importance of clearing out undesirable growth.

R. T. Reppert, C.I.P. biologist, showed how a lake had been cleaned to make it suitable for stocking with trout. A specially-designed dam to prevent backmigration on a creek flowing from the lake eliminated re-entry of coarse fish and parasites. The lake will be stocked with fingerlings this fall.

A tree marking contest was held to determine the trees to be cut in a virgin stand. The contest ended in a five-way tie.

Following an outdoor lunch of barbecue pork chops, the tree farmers saw the latest equipment used in tree farming.

The Quebec Branch of the Canadian Tree Farmers' Association took advantage of the field day to hold a seminar and discussed the ramifications of the developments they viewed during the visit.

Harrington Forest Farm superintendent Jaap Salm (extreme left) describes growth of seedlings to tree farmers. Red pine, hybrid larch, white spruce, jack pine, hybrid poplar and European larch seedlings have been planted in the 10-acre nursery and starting next year 1,000,000 young trees annually will be made available at cost to local wood suppliers of Canadian International Paper Company, which operates the farm.

Notable speaker at Rotary urges 'sense of proportion'

Rotarians of the local club — anticipating an unusual and forceful speaker with the recent visit of W. Arthur Simpson from Lydonville, Vt. — were not disappointed. Mr. Simpson is a notable figure in the affairs of Vermont State, with a record of public service in different capacities. His address to the Rotary clubmen revealed him also a man of discerning judgment on trends of this day . . . Following are brief extracts from his address, entitled, "A Sense of Proportion". . .

"I speak for a hardy race of men and women who carved out of the soil, forests and rivers of North America two free and independent nations — loving freedom and liberty, fearing God, and restrained only by a government of their own creation. They built their homes without an FHA loan; tilled the soil without a government subsidy; educated their children without public funds; reconstructed their social and economic structures without the aid of a four-point program — a race self-reliant and thrifty, who believed that one was only entitled to what he had earned.

"We have been living in a fool's paradise for over twenty years. . . Anyone who continually lives on borrowed money is courting disaster. We know this, but have shut our eyes to the consequence of mortgaging the future of the young people of this nation. As a people we desperately lack a sense of proportion.

"Doctor Ernest Martin Hopkins while President of Dartmouth, said: 'The foundations of American Society were laid by men who endured economic want and physical hardships. . . There was no thought that the conditions of life ought to be anything but a challenge or the rewards of life could be possessed except through valliant effort. Thus, from recognition of the fact that life must be a struggle for men to profit most from it, arose a great people.'

"I am not one who believes that all the accumulated experience of the past and the fundamental values which have made us a great nation have necessarily disappeared down the drain of history. They were achieved, tested and proven by blood and sweat and tears. One reason for our admitted failure to solve the problems of a complex

Misappropriated automobiles

Two youths, one a resident of Lachute and the other of St. Andrews East, have been arrested and charged with taking cars without the permission of the owners. The two are scheduled to appear in St. Jerome court on Wednesday of next week.

Court cases on drunk driving and disturbance

Appearing in St. Jerome court last Tuesday on charges of driving with ability impaired, the following persons were each sentenced to fines of $75 plus costs, their driving permits being suspended for a three - month period: Edmond Massie, 42, of St. Laurent; Rodolphe Daraiche, 37, of Lachute; Emile Lalonde, 47, and Anthony Fahey, 22, both of Montreal.

Sentenced to 24 days in jail was Garry Faubert, 23, of Chatham, arrested by Grenville Police Chief Laurent Davidson and charged with "public mischief". Faubert was arrested following a street fight in Grenville in which several windows were broken.

Fabien Hogue, 48, was sent to Montreal for a mental examination following a charge of discharging firearms in a populated area. A resident of the northern section of the County, Hogue has been in similar trouble on previous occasions.

All charges were laid by Sgt.-Det. Ralph Allen.

Sequel to recent police chase

Jean-Guy Charlebois, 19, and Robert deGagné, 22, both of St. Jerome, were sentenced to two days in jail and a fine of $75 plus costs each, or 15 days in jail, when convicted of syphoning gasoline from a parked automobile in Brownsburg. Both chose to pay the fine and costs.

The two were arrested at Masson, Que., after a hectic highway chase by Brownsburg Police Chief Richard Bell, early one Sunday morning last month. Charges were laid by Sgt.-Det. Ralph Allen.

Failure to provide

René Cosgrove, 36, of Lachute, was arrested and charged with failing to provide for his wife and two children. He appeared in St. Jerome court on Tuesday of last week, and trial was set for Wednesday, August 26.

Ferguson fund aids re-building for fire victims

Morin Heights — The "Ferguson Fund", sponsored by a group of Legion members of Morin Heights on behalf of a Laurel family victimized by fire last May, has accumulated donations amounting to $408.40. This amount has been devoted to the cost of doors, windows and roofing shingles for the new home built by Mrs. Ruby Ferguson, to whom the receipted bills for these items will be presented at a rally in the Morin Heights Legion Hall on Monday, August 24, at 8.30 p.m. All donors, friends and well-wishers are welcome on this occasion; refreshments will be served. Chairman of the fund committee is Mr. Geo. Payne.

It is recalled that Mrs. Ferguson's two daughters, Barbara Hazel, 27, and Doris, 21, lost their lives in a tragic fire which razed the Ferguson home at Laurel on May 29 last. The blaze occurred in the early morning, and the two young ladies were trapped in the inferno. Mrs. Ferguson and her four-year-old son escaped.

The garden party at Carillon Museum last Saturday — annual highlight in the program of the Historical Society of Argenteuil County — proved a pleasurable and successful event.

The proceedings were opened by the Kilmar - Harrington pipe band, a group of young bandsmen who paraded into the Museum grounds, kilted in their colorful MacTavish tartan. The band and their leader, Pipe-Master Gilbert Young, of Harrington, were introduced to the audience by Mr. Allen Talbot, who acted as master of ceremonies.

A recital by the band was enjoyed by over 100 people at this afternoon gathering — the young musicians giving a very creditable performance.

Mrs. Basil Clarke conducted a successful auction of white elephant and antique articles, which had been contributed by friends and members, and collected by the Misses Wales, and a few active enthusiasts of the Society. As a memento of this venture, Mrs. Clarke was presented with a cup and saucer by Mrs. Norman Holland, president of the Historical Society. Mrs. Holland thanked the attendance for their warm support.

The young bandsmen played further selections from their repertoire, and tea was served to the gathering by ladies of the St. Mungo's Church, convened by Mrs. Dennis Swail. . . A drawing for a handsome Ayers blanket was held, the ticket being drawn by one of the Harrington group. Mr. Leighton York, of St. Andrews, was the winner.

The ever-present parking problem was alleviated on this occasion by courtesy of the Brothers of St. Croix, who made space available for cars adjacent to the Museum, on property belonging to the Novitiate at Carillon. Traffic was ably directed by Officer Lawrence Cruise, of the Provincial Police.

In charge of the various phases of this function were — Tickets; Messrs. R. Davidson and L. York; Drawing, Mrs. R. Davidson; Auction, Mrs. H. Booth and Mrs. L. Duncan — besides the St. Mungo's group who catered for the tea.

St. Philippe boy injured by auto

Ten-year-old Robert Seguin, of Ayersville, was seriously injured when struck by a car in St. Philippe recently, and after having been treated by Dr. Jules Lafleur the boy was rushed to Ste. Justine Hospital, Montreal, with hip, pelvis head and arm injuries.

The boy was walking along the side of the highway when struck by a car driven by Alcide Leroux, 53, of St. Eugene, Ont. Leroux was in the act of passing a truck on the outskirts of the village, when the truck pulled out to pass another car, forcing Leroux onto the side of the road.

The accident was investigated by Traffic Officer Albert Legault and Sgt. Roger Massie.

Recreation centre, roller skating rink, to open Saturday

An addition to local sport and recreation facilities will be welcomed by many residents here, with the opening on Saturday of an establishment near the west-end boundaries, to serve primarily as a roller skating rink, on the Lachute - St. Andrews road.

The building, on the John Cruise farmland, is a project promoted by J. Henri Legault, contractor, providing a skating surface 144 x 39 ft. The actual building measures 156 x 64 ft., on a site 495 x 380 ft., to permit ample parking space. The structure is between No. 29 highway and the North River, well ventilated with large windows, to catch the breeze of an unobstructed countryside. Mr. Legault hopes eventually to install bowling alleys in the basement; also, possibly, tennis courts, a swimming pool and wading pool on the surrounding terrain.

Official opening will be at 7 p.m. this Saturday. Municipal, provincial and religious authorities have been invited, and there will be a skating demonstration on the new floor, by a group of 75 roller-skaters of professional calibre from Hull, Que. This will be followed by a public skating period. In the building there are restaurant facilities, and a booth for sale and rental of skates. Théodore Mallette, manager of the enterprise, will m.c. the opening program.

Carpenters, plumbers and electricians have been rushing the job to completion, and Mr. Legault is confident there will be an enthusiastic acceptance of this public amenity to which he has devoted much thought and planning.

New recreation centre

The new recreation building erected by Henri Legault, contractor, on the Lachute - St. Andrews road, will be officially opened Saturday evening at 7 o'clock, with a benediction by the parish priest, Mgr. Chas. W. Lascourse. The public are cordially invited to this function, to inspect the building, and to view a roller-skating exhibition by a professional group from Hull, Que. There will be roller skating for the public, following this program.

Branch 70 Correspondent

Members of the Executive Committee reviewed tenders submitted for painting the exterior of the Legion Memorial Hall. Their selection, at the Executive meeting held last Tuesday, will be presented to the general body for approval at the regular monthly meeting this Wednesday evening, August 19. It is proposed to complete this work as soon as the weather permits.

The Executive Council were in favor of holding the second annual Legion Picnic on Labor Day. Watch this column for details.

Best wishes for a speedy recovery go out to Com. H. P. Lecorre. So far he has been in remarkably high spirits in spite of the fact that he came out second best in a bout with a bad foot. He hopes to get around soon in a chair, and is eagerly awaiting his fitting for an artificial leg.

All Legion members of the district and their friends are reminded not to miss the Branch 70 Legion Golf Tournament, to be held at St. Andrews East on Sunday, August 23. Com. Jim Duncan, who has organized this activity, stated that "tee-off" time will be 8 a.m., rain or shine. Contestants may arrange their own foursomes and a good turnout is expected from various sections of the district. Entries have been received from Montebello. Jim says not to worry about your ability to play golf, as he is working on a special handicap formula which should give everyone an equal chance. The women's 9-hole competition will be separate from the 18-hole men's play, with separate prizes. Incidentally, ladies of the Auxiliary should all turn out for the special occasion, whether they golf or not.

A special trophy has been provided for the member of Branch 70 having low-gross. The trophy is to rest in the Memorial Hall; however, it will be suitably engraved and the winner will receive an additional prize. This trophy will be up for annual competition.

A buffet lunch and prize presentation will take place in the clubhouse at approximately 7.30 p.m. Non-playing visitors are invited to stay for the luncheon, at $1 each. In addition to the cost of the supper, playing guests will be assesed $2.50 green fees (non-members of St. Andrews Golf Club) and $1.50 towards prizes. Golf sets may be rented at the clubhouse.

Several members have assisted Com. Duncan with the details, but a special thank-you goes out to Jim Seeney, golf-pro at St. Andrews, and members of the organization, for their cooperation in this venture.

So to all Legionnaires of the district, and friends — we'll see you at St. Andrews East, next Sunday morning at 8.

Duck hunting innovations

Ottawa (CP) — Concern over the number of dead and crippled ducks escaping the hunter's bag has led this year to two major conservation measures in Canada. The Canadian Wildlife Service announced that for the first time shooters in Quebec, Ontario and Newfoundland will be allowed to use power boats to travel, with unloaded guns, to within 200 yards of their blinds to retrieve wounded or killed birds.

Another measure will allow hunter-members of organized retriever clubs to keep for dog training purposes a total of 125 birds in addition to the individual members' legal wildlife possession limits.

Suggest compulsory identification cards

Quebec (CP) — Demand for a compulsory identification card for all residents 16 years and over, appears to be gaining momentum in Quebec Province.

The idea is being promoted at the municipal level, but likely will end up in the lap of provincial authorities.

Basically, what is sought is a simple way of preventing youngsters under 16 from entering motion picture houses, taverns, grills, and night clubs. Licensed establishments do not sell liquor to youngsters under 20.

Many municipalities feel it would be a fool-proof way to prevent impersonations at the polls during civic elections.

Ottawa has record peacetime deficit

Ottawa (CP) — A record peacetime deficit of $609,316,844 was reported by Finance Minister Fleming in a final accounting for the 1958-59 fiscal year ended March 31.

A major factor was the one-year rise of $276,628,522 in federal spending as the total reached an all-time high of $5,364,039,533, exceeding even the Second World War levels.

At the same time, a general drop in tax yields saw the decline in budget revenues to $4,754,722,689, down $294,065,590 from the 1957-58 year even though they still were the third largest in Canada's history.

The final deficit of $609,316,844 compared with the previous peacetime high of $390,342,586 nearly 40 years ago — in 1919-20 — and with the all-time record of $2,558,277,125 for the war year of 1944-45.

However, the deficit was some $8,000,000 lower than the $617,000,000 estimated in Mr. Fleming's April 9 budget speech, which forecast expenditures of $5,387,000,000 and revenues of $4,770,000. The previous year's deficit was $38,622,732. In the current fiscal year Mr. Fleming is forecasting one of $393,000,000.

Besides the last fiscal year's budgetary deficit, the government also went into the red by $183,979,162 — a record — on operations of the Old Age Security Fund, which provides the $55-a-month pension to those over 70. The pension payments are not included in budget transactions, and fund deficits are covered by temporary treasury loans later written off as losses. The deficit in the previous fiscal year was $103,907,896 and in 1956-57 it was $56,012,857.

STRANGE ITEMS LEFT ON BUSES

Calgary (CP) — What do you do with a keg of nails, a pair of pink shorts and a set of false teeth when you find them on a bus?

Jack Savage, the lost-and-found official of the city transit department, doesn't know either.

He says bus drivers this year have turned in such items as a hotel directory, a lampshade, a transit driver's cap, a Chinese checkers game, two cups and saucers and a length of plumbing pipe.

He remembers a plastic bag that was turned in once. It held 96 items including lipstick, perfume, bracelets, two pairs of panties, two marbles, and two pieces of sticky toffee.

Aftermath of pugilistic dream

Archie Moore, incredible ring veteran who is as adept at publicity as he is at boxing, belted Yvon Durelle the rugged fisherman from Baie Ste. Anne, N.B., into never-never land last week in their return match for the world light-heavyweight crown.

Even Durelle came to the conclusion that he had been bounced into fistic oblivion as far as light-heavies are concerned.

"I'm going to hang up my gear and sell it," he said after his ill-fated walk down the aisle at Montreal Forum to keep his date with Moore. "If I can't sell it, I'll give it away."

This was uttered while Yvon was in state of depression. Men say all sorts of things in such a condition, but Yvon seemed to mean it.

Plans to Retire

He said he had plans to retire after two or three heavyweight bouts in and around Moncton, N.B. Chris Shaban, his manager, figures Yvon shouldn't fight as a light-heavyweight.

"He's a big man with big bones and it would be a lot easier for him to fight in the heavyweight class," Shaban said.

To emphasize Yvon's sincerity, Shaban said he had turned down a $20,000 offer to fight Mike Holt of South Africa for the British Empire light-heavyweight title. Durelle stopped Holt in a ninth-round technical knockout in Montreal last year.

Another fight against Moore is out of the question. Durelle staggered the boxing world last December when he decked the old man and almost beat him. But Archie, who will admit to almost any age, but is generally considered to be between 43 and 49, made him look silly in the second clash.

He smashed him to the canvas four times and won by a kayo at 2.52 of the third round of the scheduled 15-rounder.

Pre-fight Confidence

When Durelle entered the ring, he was bouncy and confident. Fifteen minutes later he departed, his shoulders sagging, his eyes avoiding the crowd.

Pre-fight talk had it that Durelle had improved his stance under the tutorship of veteran trainer Charlie Goldman. Maybe so, but if he did, Yvon was so preoccupied with his footwork he didn't concentrate enough on his mitts.

It is doubtful Goldman did much for the gallant fisherman. There's an old saying that you can't teach an old dog new tricks. At 29, Yvon is old for this business.

It wasn't a complete bust for Durelle. He took home $15,000 plus $5,000 in expenses. That should be a big help for his fishing fleet. Moore was the big winner, he pocketed $175,000, the guaranteed price. That isn't a million, but it's a lot better than walking-around money.

Seaway boosts fruit selling

St. Catharines, Ont. (CP) — Roadside fruit sellers in this district have found the St. Lawrence Seaway opening a boom to their business.

There has been a big increase in the number of people who come to watch ships go through the Welland Canal, a 27½-mile inland waterway linking Lakes Ontario and Erie. More ships and a greater variety of ocean freighters flying foreign flags are using the canal than ever before.

As a result, said one fruit grower, business has quadrupled. "They like to have fruit to eat while they're sitting on the canal banks watching the ships go by," added a fruit seller.

"And many of them pick up some more fruit on the way back home," he said.

Among the visitors were many from the United States. On a five-mile stretch from Port Weller, on Lake Ontario, to Thorold, tourists can watch vessels go through seven locks, which lift them 326 feet.

civilization, is because we have abandoned or lessened our reliance upon eternal truths.

"The world is 'heavy with hate' and the United States of America has been suspect in the minds of enemies and friends. That wise old statesman, Winston Churchill, who has been proven right in his forecast of things to come more often than any other man of his generation, believed the United States might be wrong in its adamant assumption that Russia did not desire peace. We are a nation of extremists with some 'holier than thou' attitudes.

"Another area requiring a sense of proportion is in the field of agriculture. Two or three generations ago this nation was predominantly rural and engaged in agriculture. Today the agricultural population comprises little more than ten per cent of our population. In spite of the increasing number of consumers, those producing food and fibre have . . . continued to feed the nation — kept down inflation, reduced the cost of living and received less money for their efforts. Agriculture in the U.S.A. faces catastrophic prices for livestock within the next few months.

"We desperately need a sense of proportion in the U.S.A., and perhaps in Canada, in respect to demands on the public treasuries and upon the taxpayer. Taxation is no longer a problem for the well-to-do and the property owner — it is a problem for everyone. There are no limits on what some of our politicians would spend and borrow.

"One of the manifestations of the attempts to mold people in a common pattern, is the growing vacuum in public leadership. There is an increasing dearth of statesmanship, courage and ability in competition for high places in government. The great militant crusaders seem to be a lost generation. No one dares to be a Daniel of a Moses.

"Some years ago Archbishop Cushing expressed some challenging thoughts: 'I am a great believer,' he said, 'in the idea that trouble is the best thing that ever happened to us. If all the troubles in the world were eliminated and all the problems solved, we'd be more tired than work ever made us; we would be bored to death. . . In my opinion, the wolf at the door has been given too much of a bad name. Mankind owes the wolf at the door more than we owe all the cats and dogs that ever fought. The wolf at the door has been a spur to achievement. He has kept us from going soft. There are a lot of people who would never get out of bed in the morning except for the necessity of keeping the wolf away from the door. People study, sweat, strive, and scheme their way into posts of mighty accomplishment, all because of fear of the wolf at the door. . . . Now the Christian is a man who worries about the wolf at the other fellow's door. That's how he differs from the self-centred materialist or pagan. . . More men have been made soft, even ruined, by crowns than by crosses. More men have been blessed through adversity than have been perfected through prosperity.' How often history confirms that the battle, far from being to the strong, is frequently won by the weak."

"The late Wendell Wilkie over and over emphasized this great truth — 'Only the productive can be strong, only the strong can be free.' To this I would add the old admonition by St. Paul, in Chapter 12 of the Romans, 21st verse: 'Be not overcome by evil but overcome evil by good.'"

MORE PROOF... IT PAYS TO FEED PURINA

Ralph Shantz with a 5 month batch, ready for market.

He Averages 10 per Weaned Litter
Markets at 5 Months on 555 lbs. Feed

Ralph Shantz, R.R. 1, Alma, Ont., kept 25 sows last year. This year he has around 35. He takes their pigs right through to market weight. And his figures show that he averages an even 10 pigs per litter weaned.

On the average, his hogs go to market at 5 months. He keeps close track of feed consumed; on one lot of 26 the average amount was 560 lbs., on another lot, 36, the average was 555.

These figures indicate that Mr. Shantz is getting good livability, good gains, and good feed conversion — all keys to profit. Here is his feeding programme:

He conditions his sows for big thrifty litters and plenty of milk by feeding Sow Chow with his own grain. He starts his little pigs on Baby Pig Chow; then changes, at 5 weeks, to Pig Startena. For growing ration, after weaning, he balances his home-grown grain with Hog Chow; and for final finish he uses a barley-corn Hog Chow mix.

If you want to get your hogs off to market in a hurry, give us a call. We'll work out a plan that best fits your situation. (It will pay to finish by Oct. 1.)

"In this Parliament are three Estates, the Lords Spiritual, the Lords Temporal and the Commons, but in the Reporters' Gallery yonder sits a Fourth Estate more important far than all."
— Edmund Burke

Do you know Canada?

TWO MONTREAL youths, after many months of saving, recently set out on a seven-week, cross-country trip. Their aim: to see Canada at first-hand and get to know it better.

They are not the first to do this, and they will not be the last; but it is good to know that there are young Canadians with a keen interest in investigating the attractions of their own country before those of any other.

How well do most of us know Canada? Not very well, we fear. In all but a few cases, personal knowledge of Canada is likely to be limited to the province in which we live. What percentage of Canadians in British Columbia or Alberta have ever visited the Atlantic Provinces, or vice-versa? How many of those in Quebec or in Ontario have ever spent a vacation west of the Rockies? These are extreme examples, it's true. But even inter-provincial travel between adjoining provinces is not what it could be. The truth is that as a people we are much more prone to take our vacations south of the border.

To some extent this is understandable. But going south can often be a good deal less of an adventure — and certainly less rewarding — than discovering one's own land. And if we are to give meaning to our nationhood and foster a sense of national pride and cohesion we must surely come to know more about — not only our own province or region — but the Canada that is the sum total of all the provinces and regions.

The vastness of this land, spanning as it does half a continent, is perhaps a formidable barrier to frequent comings and goings between the peoples of the various provinces. But the barrier is by no means an insuperable one. We enjoy better communications and greater freedom of movement than ever before. In consequence, there is less justification for "compartmentalized" thinking than at any time in our history.

As air travel becomes less costly, faster and more convenient, we can perhaps look forward to a big increase in exchange visits between groups of young Canadians from the nation's schools and colleges, as well as to an even-larger volume of commercial and tourist traffic.

Out of all this will come — is maybe already coming — a new appreciation of the country that is Canada.

Relax with sobriety

IF YOU ARE one of those queer birds who take tea, while all around you yell for coffee, strong — take heart that medical science is on your side, against those who rate the tender leaf as a pink indulgence. In fact, if you feel disposed to defend your tastes, here's ammunition for an argument:

Tea has several merits heretofore unsuspected. The Journal of the Canadian Medical Association quotes from papers given at a symposium on tea presented at a conference of the New York Academy of Sciences.

One scientist, Waife, points out the advantages of tea as a component of medical diets. It has neither caloric value nor sodium content, and can therefore figure in any reducing diet. In addition, the supposition that tea is bad for gout, hypertension or gastric disorder is shown to have no foundation in fact.

Frohman, another authority, suggests that tea may be given to children with no ill effect, and that it is a valuable source of riboflavin for those on the wrong side of forty. Stanley and Schlosberg, after carrying out psychological tests on six subjects, produced evidence that a cup of tea affords an immediate as well as a delayed lift without inducing secondary pression.

Jenkins contrasts the delightful stimulation of tea with the cortex-anaesthetizing effect of alcohol. He concludes his comparisons of various beverages by saying: "The customs which have evolved about drinking of tea contribute to the cultivation of an art too far lost in modern America — the art of relaxed while fully conscious. They contribute to the enjoyable experience of finding oneself socially accepted by people who are quite sober. They encourage courteous and lively discussions in an atmosphere of mutual respect. Such customs have a social and mental hygiene value not to be underestimated."

Another beneficial aspect of tea-drinking not included in this report, but which has been stated by the Health League of Canada and the Canadian Dental Association, is the fact that exactly the amount of fluorine recommended for the prevention of caries is present in one cup of tea — one part per million.

Maturing by stages

NO PUBLIC service, perhaps, has undergone such sustained scrutiny as the CBC — at least, in respect to television policy. It is at least encouraging to know that public opinion is having effect, no matter how desultory. Here is the latest word on moves affecting TV broadcasting. . . .

A new policy is taking shape that likely means a choice of stations for television viewers in several areas of Canada within the next couple of years.

Until, now, the government has maintained a policy of permitting only one TV station for each city. Now, the Board of Broadcast Governors has announced that it will receive applications for second stations.

For a start, Winnipeg and Vancouver apparently are to be the first places where second stations will be permitted. Hearings on applications for stations to compete with CBC outlets in those centres are to be held in January.

Similar hearings will be held in the months following at Toronto, Montreal, Edmonton, Calgary and Halifax.

At the same press conference that the policy-change was made public, the board also outlined a new set of broadcasting regulations to govern TV. A prime requirement is that stations broadcast programs with a minimum of 55 per cent Canadian content in any weekly period.

The Board proposes to put these regulations into effect about mid-1960 and Dr. Andrew Stewart, board chairman, indicated that a measure of censorship will be maintained to see whether stations live up to the requirements.

Inspiration from capitalism

IN A BRIEF opportunity to catch up on our reading, we find news items missed which deserved wider comment. But it is rewarding to find, also in the same pile, that some fellow editor has remedied the omission and done justice to a provocative topic. We quote on a recent Montreal incident, with acknowledgment to The Printed Word:

According to a recent published account, at least two people "pointedly walked out on a luncheon address on Russia" given by Dr. Cyril James, principal and vice-chancellor of McGill University. "One of the two or three men, who left noisily just after Dr. James began his address, spoke of not wanting to hear 'all this communist stuff.' "

It is likely that those who departed read the account of the proceedings, if only to make sure they got a fair share in the news. If they saw the summary of what Dr. James said they may have wished they had stayed to get all the details, as the main point appears to have been that the Russian success in industry and the production of food and consumer goods was being brought about, not through an adherence to communist theory, but by educating their most able young folk and offering them personal incentives "on a scale that certainly would not be tolerated by labor unions in the West." The Russians were relying on "purely capitalistic motivation" to get high rates of production from their people.

Dr. James said that the idea of extra reward for extra skill and effort was "a frank expression of an idea once common here," and that in Russian thinking and motivation today "communism is not a basic factor."

Among the charming features of being alive are the peculiar switches that appear. Loyal Canadians walk out on a speech that turns out to be eminently loyal, frighteningly so. And it appears that Russia is getting ahead by abandoning communism, while Canada, the U.S. and Western European countries are losing in the race because they have given up some of the most useful aspects of capitalism.

KNOW YOUR Canada

Prepared by the Research Staff of Encyclopedia Canadiana

What was the West's First Newspaper?

The Nor'Wester, the first newspaper in the Canadian Northwest, was established in Winnipeg in 1869 by William Coldwell and William Buckingham. It was published fortnightly and reflected the views of the small but vociferous Canadian party in the settlement. It attacked the charter of the Hudson's Bay Company, aroused doubts of the validity of the land titles of the old settlers and preached immediate annexation by Canada. The fears thus aroused provided the foundation for the Rebellion of 1869-70. Both Coldwell and Buckingham were born in England, the former coming to Canada in 1854 and joining the staff of the Toronto Leader, the latter arriving in 1857 and joining the staff of the Toronto Globe. In 1859 they conveyed a press, type, ink and paper to the Red River by oxcart to set up their new paper. Buckingham later returned to Upper Canada and became owner of the Norfolk Reformer, then of the Stratford Beacon, before serving as private secretary to Prime Minister Alexander Mackenzie from 1873 to 1878.

What is Actinolite?

Actinolite is a mineral, a silicate of calcium, magnesium and iron. The fibrous variety is often mistaken for true asbestos. Deposits of this mineral have been noted in Quebec, Ontario, British Columbia and the Yukon, but the only deposits ever worked in Canada were those near the village of Actinolite in Hastings County, Ontario. They were mined intermittently from 1883 to 1927. The mineral was ground, mixed with coal tar and used for roofing purposes.

When was Canada's First Census?

Almost three hundred years ago — in 1666. In that year the great Intendant Talon directed the taking of a census that probably antedates any other national census in the world in the modern sense of the term. Talon himself acted as one of the enumerators. The 1666 census ascertained the number of inhabitants in New France, their sex, age, marital condition and occupations. The count was 3,215 persons. A complete census of the Dominion is taken every ten years — the next one will be in 1961 — and a partial one is taken midway between the regular decennial ones.

Is Acclamation a Canadian Word?

Certainly the word itself is not of Canadian origin. But its use in the phrase "elected by acclamation," meaning elected without a vote because there is no opposing candidate, would seem to be peculiar to this country. At any rate, this meaning of acclamation is not given in any authoritative English or American dictionary.

Where is Nancy Island?

Nancy Island, which owes its existence to the foundering of a ship, lies near the mouth of the Nottawasaga River at Wasaga Beach, Ont. The Nottawasaga flows into Nottawasaga Bay, an arm of Georgian Bay. During the war of 1812 the schooner Nancy, originally a trading ship belonging to the North West Co., was commandeered by the British Navy and fitted out for war. In a naval battle with three American ships in 1813, it sought shelter in the Nottawasaga River where it was run aground and burned. Silt and sand gathered around the charred hulk and formed what is now Nancy Island. In 1925 the hulk was disinterred and now rests in a museum on the islet.

DON'T FENCE ME IN!

If laying hens had a theme song these days it would be, "Don't Fence Me In," and they could quote agricultural experts to prove the validity of their request.

It seems that in a carefully conducted test, hens allowed to run free on the range laid more eggs than their fenced-in sisters; and they were healthier and heavier too.

This might surprise some folk, but it doesn't surprise me. I know that artificially stocked lakes don't give you the fighting fish you can hook in waters where the fingerlings have been on their own from the start.

There is something about freedom of action which inspires stamina, productivity, and an assortment of other virtues.

Soldiers of the free world have shown remarkable ability to outmanouvre soldiers from more regimented lands. Workers in free countries have always been able to out-produce slave labor. Farmers in a competitive economy beat the trousers off the workers in so-called collective farms or communes. Freedom to stand on your own two feet, to lose or gain, is worth someething.

Freedom would not be in the danger it is today if everybody knew its worth. But it is hard to explain that freedom is not just a word; it is a value, dynamic, worth its weight in gold, as well as in spiritual satisfaction. Freedom is, indeed, a spiritual matter and when men gain it all else seems to be added unto them.

Strangely enough, we have to learn this lesson over and over again. We give up a little freedom here, a big freedom there, for some immediate, short-term material gain. Soon we find that in giving up freedom, we suffer a long-term material loss. Freedom and prosperity go together, but cannot be traded one for the other. Whenever someone suggests that you make such a trade, get ready to shout, "Don't Fence Me In!"

Thin end of communism

By Lewis Milligan

If the government continues to buy up the surplus products of the farms — such as grain, eggs, butter, pork, etc. — at prices that the farmers cannot get on the open market, there can be only one result of that economic folly: government bankruptcy.

In buying up those agricultural products the government has itself gone into the grain, eggs, butter and pork business. Its object was to help the farmers by maintaining market prices; but already the government has enormous stocks of those products on hand, which it is selling to other countries at lower prices than those charged to the Canadian consumers. Thus the government is entering into competition with the farmers by cutting prices in the foreign market, upon which the farmers have to depend for the sale of a large portion of their products.

The worst feature of this foolishness is that there is the thin end of communism, which eventually would have to be adopted through the government's appropriating all farm products and marketing them, as in Russia. That is a more sensible and businesslike system than the present one of subsidizing overproduction and freezing vast surpluses at the cost of millions of dollars in taxation. Those taxes are paid by the Canadian consumers of farm products, which means that they are pyaing higher than the market price for their food, while the government is piling up surpluses at increasing storage costs annually.

Some years ago there was a popular outcry against the burning of food products in order to create a shortage and thus maintain market prices. And what is the difference between that and the government's creating a shortage by withholding and hoarding good food and rendering it valueless? Far better that it be destroyed outright in the first place, saving the expense of hoarding and preserving perishable commodities for no useful purpose.

In the case of grain, the western farmers formed Wheat Pools in the belief that they could get more for the grain by holding it, thus creating an artificial shortage that would increase its market value. But the market refused to pay higher prices asked for Canadian wheat and the Pools were left with large surpluses on their hands. In order to pay the farmers for their crops and meet the costs of storage, the Pools borrowed from the banks. That landed them into financial difficulties, with the result that the government had to back the bank loans and eventually establish a Wheat Board, which assumed full responsibility for marketing and storing the surpluses.

If it wasn't so financially serious, this idea of the government's buying and storing surplus products would be funny. Imagine what would happen if the system were to be extended to other industries. The manufacturers would be relieved of the anxiety of being unable to market all their products, and the government would be swamped with surplus goods of all kinds, from motor cars to tooth brushes, for which it would require acres of warehouses in which to store them.

with G. E. MORTIMORE

Poole, Dorset, England — We entered a public house (tavern) which used to be locally famous for its pianist. The place used to be jammed every night with cheerful, singing people.

That was eight years ago. Now the pub had changed. The piano was still there, but nobody was playing it. Instead, rock-and-roll issued from a loudspeaker.

The place was now occupied by morose-looking teen-agers and early-twenty-agers. The boys' hair was over-long, or else crew-cut, their lips distended in Presley pouts. The girls' lips were funelled in Bardot puckers.

This collection of strange young people (whom I would frankly describe as creeps) sat brooding over glasses or hunched around tables with a conspiratorial air, as though they were playing parts in a cheap melodrama, and making a poor job of it. Youth had fallen on that public house like a blight.

We gulped our drinks and got out of there as fast as we could. Brigitte Bardot herself couldn't lure me back in, if she stood on the threshold and did a hip-wiggle dance.

American influence has become stronger in Britain since I was last here. Britain has imported such American things as "hire-purchase" (instalment buying), supermarkets, canned beer and the teen-aged cult.

Youths in black leather jackets can be seen streaking past on motorcycles. Numerous young people of a certain type are trying to be imitation Americans.

A popular television figure is a gifted disciple of Presley who switches from rapid-fire Cockney to a convincing Southern burble. He has a paralytic twitch and stammer, to match anything that ever came out of the corn-fritter belt.

I thought about him as we made our fast exit from that nightmare pub and moved down the street to another one. It happened to be a singing pub where a harsh-voiced woman had seized control of a microphone and was delivering a tuneless solo.

But the atmosphere was friendly, and the people in the pub were at least human beings, not young things from Mars. There were young people here too, but they looked normal.

At closing time (10.30 p.m. here) we took a stroll on the quay, and I was pleased to observe such wholly English enterprises as cockle-and-mussel stands (sea food) lighted up to catch the crowds coming from the pubs.

I have been in two or three other pubs since, and I am pleased to report that they have neither been extinguished by television nor taken over en masse by creeps. There are many snug, wood-panelled hideaways where dart games are in progress, and where British workmen view the world and its troubles through a fragrant fog of pipe-smoke.

Bournemouth, England — There wasn't a smile in sight, when I looked around that palace of pleasure, Bournemouth Pavilion.

The place was jammed with glum, travel-worn men and women, who had come there determined to enjoy a holiday in Bournemouth even if it killed them.

A great many of them had obviously just arrived, and were trying to get their bearings. I caught a distinct smell of moth-balls from one man whose creased black coat had just been unpacked from a suitcase.

Britain's wages have climbed faster than the cost of living. Many people now take more elaborate holidays than they could ever afford before. Such big seaside resorts as Bournemouth are human ant-heaps. The streets are crowded with tense and worried-looking people.

I heard a number of north-of-England accents as I squeezed through the mob. Once I saw a group of lads laughing over a newspaper. Had I found some happy English holiday-makers, at last? No. The newspaper was France-Soir. Numerous French youngsters are here for the summer, learning English.

Elsewhere in Britain, there have been seven-hour traffic jams on roads that lead to holiday resorts. A car on "hire purchase" (instalment buying) has come within reach of millions of people who couldn't dream of buying a car, five years ago.

The more remote and peaceful resorts are being invaded by mobs of tourists.

It is widely held belief in democratic countries that the good things of life should be available to everyone. But suppose that we think of a quiet fishing village as one of the good things of life, and invite several million holiday-makers to enjoy it. — Then it ceases to be a quiet village. It's Coney Island. When some good things are made generally available, their value is destroyed. That sounds undemocratic, but it's true.

This portable spraying unit, shown to tree farmers at the Harrington Forest Farm of Canadian International Paper Company last week-end, serves a double purpose. It can spread a fog for insect control or, with a hose attachment, actually blow out small fires.

"This Good News of the Kingdom

You may remember Jesus said it would be preached, but do you know why and what is to follow? Jesus said it is "for the purpose of a witness to all the nations, and then the accomplished end will come." That means God's final war. But does it mean the end of life on earth?

"After Armageddon – God's New World"

The "good news" is that God's kingdom is now established. Soon, at the battle of Armageddon, it will destroy the old world, with its wickedness, poverty and distress, and bring in a new world, where there will be no pain, crying or death! That is the hope God gives for mankind in our generation. Nothing can change or prevent it.

Marriage vows at Morin Heights United Church

Meredith - Seale

The Morin Heights United Church was the scene of a pretty wedding on Saturday, August 15, at four o'clock when Miss Doreen Mavis Seale, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willis Seale, of Morin Heights, was married to Mr. Melvin Gerald Meredith, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Meredith, of Montreal.

The Rev. C. G. Westhaver officiated at the double-ring ceremony. Mrs. M. Sims, church soloist, sang "Oh Promise Me" before the ceremony, and "Because" during the signing of the register. Mrs. George Watchorn played the wedding music. The church chancel was banked in white gladoli and maidenhair fern, the guest pews being marked with white ribbons and pink phlox.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white Chantilly lace and tulle over satin. The dress was fashioned with fitted bodice beaded in sequins and pearls, a scalloped neckline and cap sleeves, her full skirt ending in a chapel train. Her elbow-length veil of tulle illusion was held by a matching, three-tiered tulle coronet, beaded in sequins and pearls, and she carried a cascade bouquet of American Beauty roses and stephanotis. Her only ornaments were a cultured pearl pendant and earrings, a gift of the bridegroom.

Miss Helen Seale, sister of the bride, as maid of honor, and Miss Jean Dick as bridesmaid, wore matching frocks of dotted net over taffeta, having fitted bodices, boat necklines and bouffant skirts. They wore matching halo hats and mitts, and carried nosegays of pink carnations and heather. Miss Seale was in sky blue and Miss Dick in azure blue. The flower girl, little Miss Darleen McCambly, wore a matching hat and frock of blue net and carried a basket of yellow mums and heather.

The best man was Mr. Keith Rathwell, and the ushers were Mr. Bevan Jones and Mr. Earl Dryburgh.

Mrs. Seale, mother of the bride, wore a sheath gown of Dior blue shantung and lace, matching feather hat, and navy blue accessories, with a corsage of Talisman roses. Mrs. Meredith, mother of the groom, was in a gown of dove grey chiffon and taffeta, blue accessories, and wore a corsage of pink carnations.

The reception was held in the Alpino Lodge, where multi-colored gladoli and fern decorated the tables. Mr. and Mrs. Meredith left later by motor for Toronto, to board a plane for the Barbados — the bride travelling in a parchment shade faille two-piece ensemble; the fitted bodice was beaded, and the matching duster was lined in blue taffeta. She wore a matching blue feather hat and beige accessories, and a corsage of pink roses. Upon their return they will reside in L'Abord à Plouffe.

Excavate for traces of Cartier settlement

Quebec — A Toronto archaeologist last week started excavations in the heart of lower-town Quebec that he hopes will unearth traces of the first winter settlement of Jacques Cartier in Canada.

Kenneth Kidd, of the Royal Ontario Museum, set his crew of university students digging into a vacant lot at the junction of the Lairet and St. Charles rivers.

The lot first was divided into squares of 5 x 5 ft. As each is deepened the earth taken out will be carefully sifted for traces of the camp built by the French explorer during the winter of 1535-36.

The archaeologist and his crew expect to spend three weeks on the search.

Boost interest rate

The Bank of Canada's interest rate on money it lends to the chartered banks and other agencies soared last week to a record 6.41 per cent. The Canadian Bankers' Association issued a statement suggesting that under this condition, the banks will be unable to make any new loans or expand existing ones.

Diocese of Montreal host to 20th session of Anglican Synod

Montreal — The General Synod of the Anglican Church of Canada, which convenes at Ste. Anne de Bellevue, Que., on September 1, will be the 20th session since the Synod was constituted in 1893.

Sessions are normally held every three years, but the regular meeting in 1958 would have clashed with the world-wide Lambeth Conference of Anglican Bishops, so was postponed 12 months.

The General Synod has authority and jurisdiction in all matters affecting the general interest and well-being of the whole Church. These include the relations of the Church to other religious bodies and to the other churches of the Anglican Communion; the definition of the doctrines of the Church in harmony with the Solemn Declaration adopted in 1893; the Prayer Book and Hymn Book; and direction of all agencies carrying on the work of the Church.

Upper and Lower House

There are two Houses in the General Synod. The Upper House consists of the Bishops—active and retired. Forty-three are eligible to attend this year. In the Lower House are an equal number of clergy and lay members elected by their diocesan synods. The delegation from the diocese of the Arctic — which has no synod — is appointed by the Rt. Rev. Donald Marsh, the Bishop.

Representation in the Lower House varies according to the number of active clergy on the roll of a diocese. The dioceses of Cariboo and the Yukon send only one clerical and one lay member; the diocese of Toronto is entitled to 11 in each order.

The Synod meets in various centres across Canada at the invitation of local dioceses.

Regulate tranquillizers

Ottawa — The federal health department has put the co-called "happiness pills" on the list of drugs which may be had only by prescription.

The department put an immediate ban on across-the-counter drugstore sales of tranquillizers such as Meprobamate, a drug now sold under several trade names including Miltown and Equanil.

The decision was reached on the recommendation of the department's food and drug directorate, the Canadian Medical Association and the Canadian Pharmaceutical Association — which comprise the Canadian drug advisory committee.

BELL LINES

by Dick Pearson
your telephone manager

Two weeks ago, one of our cables crossing the North River at the foot of Gilbert Street was shot through, putting some 50 telephones out of service for 24 hours. The shot came from a .22 rifle fired by some children boating in the river. The fact that any of 50 families could have had an immediate urgent need to use the telephone, and not been able to, points up the thoughtlessness of such "gun-play". Our men hung dangerously suspended over the river on a platform for hours to repair the cable, at a cost of over $300. Parents would do well to strongly caution their children and young folk on the safe and sane use of firearms. The fall hunting season is quickly approaching and the prevention of many accidents in the woods, and damaging incidents such as this recent one, could be avoided by proper instruction in the care and use of firearms and approved target practice.

Bill Poley

When you watch a perfect double play, you see the results of experience, skill and team-work. In the telephone business too this combination is hard to beat. That's why we take pride in an organization called the Telephone Pioneers of America. To become a Pioneer, a telephone employee needs to have 21 or more years of service in the industry. There are some 8,500 Bell of Canada Pioneers in Ontario and Quebec, both active and retired. In this community, W. F. Poley is a Pioneer, to name just one. Telephone people like Bill have brought, and continue to bring, a tremendous amount of skill and know-how to the telephone team; experience that enables them to do their jobs efficiently and to give you the best possible telephone service. They also give invaluable training and guidance to our younger people. We salute these "Telephone Pros."

A supposedly true story that recently came to our attention concerns a service representative with a telephone company somewhere south of the border. Explaining to a customer why it would be better to have a routine maintenance job done during a week-day, the girl said: "Over the week-end, we have only a small force of skeleton men on duty over the week-end . . ."

"New arrivals" in families around town would indicate that the population of this community is getting a healthy boost this year. . . . There's always so much to tell when a new baby arrives, isn't there? For out-of-town relatives and friends, it's the telephone that carries news of gains in weight, the cute little tricks; and then momentous announcements of the first tooth, the first word, and the first brave, uncertain step. Grandparents particularly are anxious for every scrap of news concerning the new baby — and when they live in a far-off community, it's the long distance call that puts them in the picture.

Montrealer of C.I.P. heads conference on forest fire research

Montreal — F. A. Harrison, of Montreal, will be chairman of the third National Forest Fire Research Conference, to be held early in September at Lake Waskesiu in Prince Albert National Park — according to conference planners in Montreal.

Mr. Harrison, who is chairman of the Woodlands Section of the Canadian Pulp and Paper Association sponsors of the national conference series, is also vice-president and manager of woodlands of Canadian International Paper Company.

Purpose of the conference is to stimulate a coordinated program of national forest fire research with participation by industry, research agencies and government.

Some 120 forest industry and government officials will attend the conference.

Previous conferences have established a top priority program of fifteen subjects for fire research. Work has started on five of these including such spectacular studies as weather modification, and basic research into fire behaviour.

This year's conference, being held in cooperation with the provincial forest service of Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and Alberta, will feature demonstrations of aerial fire fighting with helicopters.

Smoke-jumpers, air-borne firefighters that can be dropped quickly to contain small fires, will also demonstrate their specialized fire control techniques.

Safer Cars for Safer Driving

By

JOHN O. MOORE, Director

Automotive Crash Injury Research, Division of Public Health and Preventive Medicine

Cornell University Medical College

This present civilization has often been referred to as "The Age of Motion," and by depending on this motion, we have seen the motor vehicle become the number three killer of all age groups and the number one killer of the 15-through-24 group. The Bureau of Vital Statistics, US Public Health Service, has shown that 75 per cent of these annual thirty to forty thousand deaths and over one million injuries occur in accidents involving passenger cars. More than 100,000 of these injuries are permanent disability cases. But each year the people of this nation demand more passenger cars and fewer deaths and injuries. This is the problem: How can we secure more movement for more people at a faster pace and still produce much less injury and death?

The most consistent effort to solve this problem has been in the direction of increasingly effective accident prevention programs based on enforcement, education, and engineering. The cause of accidents has been studied and restudied, but until four years ago no one had studied the cause of injuries. To pursue this new concept, it was necessary to employ the medical approach to mass disease problems, ie, the study of the host that incurred the disease in relation to the environment in which the disease was incurred.

To institute this new approach, the Armed Forces Epidemiological Board made funds available through the Office of the Surgeon General of the United States Army to inaugurate Automotive Crash Injury Research in the Department of Public Health and Preventative Medicine, Cornell University Medical College. This Project started with the theory, later factually demonstrated, that the accident and the injury are only related chronologically and that the type, frequency, and severity of the injury are actually decided by such factors as ejection, type of deceleration, point of impact, and seated position.

Puncture-proof tires mean maximum road safety.

The three working tools used by Automotive Crash Injury Research are: (1) Fact Finding — the roads and highways or selected areas in cooperating states are turned into giant laboratory sites where the hundreds of factors in injury-producing accidents are reported by the local medical and state law enforcement agencies on specially designed forms and accompanied by photographs. (2) Analysis — each completed case is analyzed by trained specialists using a standard procedure, then coded and punched on IBM card decks. (3) Utilization — these decks are sorted and collated to form studies and findings which are made available to automotive engineers, traffic enforcement, safety, insurance, medical, and educational groups.

The initial study of Automotive Crash Injury Research was from an analysis of 300 cases and has been reconfirmed by an analysis of over 2,000 cases. It shattered the popular opinion that it is safer to be "thrown clear" of a car during an accident. The facts showed that in almost 50 per cent of the injury-producing accidents one or more doors "pop" open. That when doors open, one out of every four occupants is ejected. That ejection more than doubles the risk of sustaining an injury of a moderate-to-fatal degree. Another finding showed that there was little or no change in the injury potential in cars from 1940 to 1954. Still another, that 40 per cent of all injured drivers are injured by the steering wheel assembly.

Each new automotive year brings a new and double challenge to Automotive Crash Injury Research. The first challenge is in assessing the injury potential of the present car designs. The second is in assessing the injury protection offered by the newly engineered safety designs. In 1956 many of the new model cars appeared with such safety features as new door locks to cut down on ejection, energy absorbing steering wheels to lessen driver injuries, padding on the interior forward structure, and seat belts. These changes could be engineered and produced because, for the first time, the injury potential of the automotive structure could be identified as to its rank in the injury producing scale. Thus a change in design could be predicted to produce a measured degree of improvement in the quality of the product being sold.

No research groups studying the causes of injury in motor vehicle accidents can expect to produce data leading to complete protection against injury observed in high speed accidents of extreme violence. However, since almost 70 per cent of all injury-producing accidents observed to date have occurred at impact speeds of less than sixty miles an hour, the incorporation of safety engineering principles should definitely produce safer cars for driving in the low speed range.

The next article, "Nation - Wide Car - Inspection Programs," is written by Rudolph F. King, Registrar of Motor Vehicles, Chairman, Massachusetts Highway Safety Committee.

First Baby

(Copyright)

— By NANCY CLEAVER —

Do you remember when your first-born was put into your arms? There are a few moments in all of life which can compare with this experience. There are none greater!

Mother forgets the long months of waiting, the hours of child birth in the joy of feeling this warm, vibrant little bundle, with the soft hair, the long lashes sweeping the delicate pink cheek, the miniature nose and mouth. She slips one of her fingers into a tiny shell-like palm, and baby's fingers close tightly around hers.

"I had no idea a new baby was so small!" a young father said recently, "But when I looked through the Hospital Nursery glass at my son asleep in the tiny crib, did I ever feel big!" Many a father is almost as relieved as a mother, that the baby is safely here — and is perfect in every way. If father had been counting on a boy, and a daughter arrives, any sense of disappointment soon disappears. Little girl babies have ways of casting a spell over their fond fathers!

One of the loveliest of good wishes for a child's future appeared in "Antony, A Record of Youth" by The Earl of Lytton. Antony writes these lines to Lady Gage, after the birth of her son. "May all the best things in the world be his always, and life fall on his shoulders like a brave, rich and beautiful cloak."

"The best things in the world" — all parents want just that for their children, and whether or not boys and girls will receive this heritage depends to a great extent upon the character and ideals of the parents. Mother or father must try to be what they want their children to become, because example is so much more effective than precept.

A well-adjusted, happy, successful individual usually comes from a home where parents enjoy their children. It is not easy to enter imaginatively into their joys and sorrows and try to understand the reasons for desirable or undesirable behaviour. A good parent views problems objectively and not with a personal or emotional bias.

In a recent book Mary Lincoln, Biography of a Marriage, by R. P. Randall, there is a chapter "Four Dollars A Week" of the early married life of the future president of the United States.

The author writes:

"One can picture the anxiety in the deep-set eyes at the birth of his first-born, and then their lighting with the joy of fatherhood. A basic human experience had come to the Lincolns to bind them together; two heads bent over the perennial miracle of a newborn baby, flesh of their flesh. From this time on the name "Molly" disappears from the record. Sometimes Lincoln called her playful pet names like "Puss", "child-wife", or "little woman", but mostly after this he called her "Mother".

Freda Newton Bunner, a Canadian poet who is the mother of three children, has echoed the emotions of many parents as they look down on the lovely little form of their baby in these thoughtful lines, which are quoted by special permission:

New-Born

This is our child — at last!
The dream of yesterday is past,
And now he lies — a person — in my arms.
What have we done? What have we done!
Brought a new soul to birth,
To face a lifetime on this earth.
All lies ahead. And what's ahead?
Oh God! What glory, or what dread?
What can we do?
We are not wise enough, we two,
To guide this precious life we have begun.
"God show the way!"
We both must pray —
We both each day.

DISPLAY JEWELS

Ottawa, CP — Replicas of the British crown jewels will be shown at the Ottawa Exhibition this month. The collection includes duplicates of St. Edward's Crown and the Imperial Crown of India.

Peaches prime for jams, preserves

In markets right now there are peaches galore. Canadian peaches are at their best, and we suggest you make some jam, jelly and marmalade with the easy, sure, pectin method. In fact, you can use grapes, apples, plums — any fruit, to make jam or jelly with the short-boil method. All you do is follow the kitchen-tested recipes that come with every bottle of liquid pectin or box of crystal pectin, and add commercial fruit pectin yourself in either liquid or crystal form.

Pectin is a natural jellying substance found in all fruits in varying amounts. Commercial fruit pectin is extracted from fruits rich in this natural substance. When you add commercial pectin to your fruit, you can make jam or jelly with perfect confidence in the results. And more important, you'll get up to 50% more jam or jelly from the same amount than you do with the long-boil method.

Peach Preserves

Yield: about 9 medium glasses (4½ lbs. preserves)

4 Cups sliced peaches (about 1½ quarts ripe peaches), 6 cups (2 lbs. 10 oz.) sugar, ¼ cup lemon juice (2 lemons), ½ bottle liquid fruit pectin.

Peel and pit about 1½ quarts fully ripe peaches. Slice thin. Measure 4 cups. Place alternate layers of peaches and sugar in a very large saucepan. Let stand at room temperature 4 to 6 hours.

Squeeze the juice from 2 medium-sized lemons. Measure ¼ cup into saucepan with fruit. Place over high heat, bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard 3 minutes, stirring carefully. Remove from heat and at once stir in liquid fruit pectin. Skim off foam with metal spoon. Then stir and skim by turns for 8 to 10 minutes to cool slightly, to prevent floating fruit. Ladle quickly into glasses. Cover preserves at once with ½ inch hot paraffin.

Cherry and Peach Jam (using sour cherries)

Yield: about 11 medium glasses (5½ lbs. jam)

4 Cups prepared fruit (about 1 quart ripe sour cherries and 1 quart ripe peaches), 7 cups (3 lbs.) sugar, 1 bottle liquid fruit pectin.

First, prepare the fruit. Stem and pit about 1 quart fully ripe sour cherries. Chop fine. Peel and pit about 1 quart fully ripe peaches. Grind, or chop very fine. Combine fruits and measure 4 cups into a very large saucepan.

Then make the jam. Add sugar to fruit in saucepan and mix well. Place over high heat, bring to a full boil and boil hard 1 minute, stirring constantly. Remove from heat and at once stir in liquid fruit pectin. Skim off foam with metal spoon. Then stir and skim by turns for 5 minutes to cool slightly, to prevent floating fruit. Ladle quickly into glasses. Cover jam at once with ½ inch hot paraffin.

Peach and Pear Jam

Yield: about 9 medium glasses (4½ lbs. jam)

3½ Cups prepared fruit (about 1 quart each ripe peaches and pears), ¼ cup lemon juice (2 lemons), 6½ cups (2¾ lbs.) sugar, ½ bottle liquid fruit pectin.

First, prepare the fruit. Peel and pit or core about 1 quart each fully ripe peaches and pears. Chop very fine or grind. Combine fruits and measure 3½ cups into a very large saucepan. Squeeze the juice from 2 medium-sized lemons. Measure ¼ cup into saucepan with fruits.

Then, make the jam. Add sugar to fruit in saucepan and mix well. Place over high heat, bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard 1 minute, stirring constantly. Remove from heat and at once stir in liquid fruit pectin. Skim off foam with metal spoon. Then stir and skim by turns for 5 minutes to cool slightly, to prevent floating fruit. Ladle quickly into glasses. Cover jam at once with ½ inch hot paraffin.

Know causes of coughing

"Cough is one of the most common and disturbing symptoms of childhood," states Dr. J. A. Peter Turner, of the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto, writing in "Health Magazine," official publication of the Health League of Canada.

Dr. Turner remarks that to many parents a worrying cough means only one thing — lung trouble. Some explanation of the causes of coughing may alleviate this worry.

Cough is a reflex which acts as a safety mechanism. It prevents the accumulation of secretions in the respiratory passages which might interfere with normal breathing. The act of coughing depends upon a complex pathway of nerve reflexes which travel from areas in the throat, trachea and bronchi to the brain and thence back to the lungs. When these sensitive areas are irritated, the cough reflex begins.

This produces a short, forceful, upward movement of air which carries any excess mucus up to the throat where it can be expectorated, or, as is more common in childhood, swallowed.

There are four main groupings of coughs:

1. Cough due to secretions from the nose and sinuses. — This is the most common in childhood. It is persistent, and is loose and productive and usually clears. Allergic factors may create a cough exactly similar to this which may be very distressing to the child. Their detection may have to depend on allergy skin tests.

2. Cough due to inflammation of the throat, larynx or trachea. — The cough is dry and raspy in character. With such viral infections there are usually associated symptoms of loss of appetite, fever, and the complaint of a sore throat.

3. Cough due to secretions in the lower trachea or bronchi. — This type of cough is less frequently encountered, and is due to pneumonia infections, lung abscess, or allergic factors.

4. Cough due to specific irritants. — This includes coughs due to such diseases as whooping cough. In this group should also be included coughs due to foreign body aspiration. Of all foreign bodies encountered, peanuts are the most common and dangerous.

Generally speaking, coughs are likely to be worse at night. When the child lies prone, there is a tendency for secretions to "pool" in the areas of cough sensitivity. This causes coughing to occur at frequent intervals throughout the night.

Treatment of cough should be directed toward helping the cough in what it is attempting to do. In the case of mucus in the nose and throat (the loose cough) the use of nose drops or nasal spray may aid in the drainage of these areas. When the cough is dry and due to catarrhal inflammation, increasing the moisture of the inhaled air is of great assistance.

Although some coughs do have serious implications, it may be of help to know that cough is protective to the body and does not by any means indicate involvement of the lungs.

Fashions

CHIFFON is very much present in the new season's fabric line-up. Bright red silk chiffon is a chic choice for this youthful dress. The bodice and short sleeves are tucked and the very full, flared skirt is gathered at the top. Matching red satin makes the set-in sash and the bow in back.

Tips on Touring

By Carol Lane

Parking presents a problem to some distaff drivers. I frequently receive letters from women who have particularly knotty questions in navigation.

One of the most common difficulties is parking a large car in a small garage that has a difficult approach, without fender fatalities. I usually suggest that the driver make a straight-line approach to her vexing garage. If this doesn't solve the problem, certain car accessories will. The driver can have her car equipped with "curb feelers," devices which make a magnified, whirring sound to warn when you're too close to objects on either side of your fenders. "Feelers" also prove helpful in ordinary curb parking.

Front fenders can be outfitted with upright wire guides which serve as sights to help you in judging distances between your fenders and other objects. These guides also double as valuable aids in judging distances in ordinary driving and in passing other cars.

Here are other parking tips to help you avoid fines and frustrations:

1. Be sure the coast is clear in the front and in the rear before you park at the curb.

2. Don't cause a traffic jam behind you while you manoeuvre into a difficult parking space on a heavily-travelled street.

3. Try to avoid over-shooting your mark. It's wisest to back into a parallel parking space at a sharp angle, straightening your car up gradually as you move in.

4. When you park diagonally to the curb, make sure that the rear of your car does not project into the traffic lane.

5. Allow space in front and rear for other cars to get out without bumping you.

PROGRESS THROUGH RESEARCH

TROUBLE WITH CALORIES

In motherhood, calories can be critical. An overweight expectant mother puts both her own and her unborn baby's life in jeopardy.

Physicians are paying more and more attention to weight control in mothers-to-be, for a sudden and rapid weight increase may herald the condition called toxemia of pregnancy.

Toxemia of pregnancy is one of the major causes of death in childbirth and accounts for some 25 per cent of maternal deaths. Its symptoms include swelling of limbs, high blood pressure and headache.

The exact cause of toxemia has not been determined, but physicians have become more attentive to weight control during pregnancy.

Proper diet is essential in pregnancy, according to Dr. W. C. W. Nixon of the University of London. He recommends that mothers-to-be follow a strict 1,800 calorie daily diet, which is supplemented by a daily glass of orange juice and a vitamin and iron capsule.

Normal diet cannot always provide the pregnant woman with sufficient vitamins and minerals. To reinforce her food intake with those elements most needed, the multivitamin - mineral supplement is indicated.

For the woman who cannot stick to a strict diet during the critical periods of pregnancy, physicians report another effective aid. A combination of dextro-amphetamine, multivitamins and minerals, the drug helps her control her appetite and to compensate for restricted food intake.

Corn oil has been suggested by two different sources as a special dietary aid.

The American Medical Association says vegetable oils, commonly used in cooking and in salads, have come to the aid of diet-conscious teen-agers who suffer from acne.

Corn oil, used as a dietary supplement, apparently prevented weight loss and fatigue associated with the low-fat diets frequently used for acne treatment.

Dr. W. R. Hubler of Corpus Christi, Texas, said corn oil was especially well tolerated and "made pleasant low-fat diets more palatable."

In Canada, one of the country's largest food industries has introduced a 100 per cent corn-oil margarine. Medical research studies associate saturated fat with high blood cholesterol levels and consequent high blood pressure.

A spokesman for the company said that evidence indicates corn oil is the most unsaturated fat ever used to make margarine or other table spreads. The new margarine should prove an effective dietary aid in lowering the cholesterol content of the blood, he said.

Deep-frying Technique

Those on low-fat diets and weight watchers may be interested in a new "dry-frying" technique which adds no calories to the food.

A fine film which is tasteless and odorless is sprayed on the pan or casserole. The manufacturers say it's because the frying, broiling or baking is done on this film instead of in it, that no calories are added in the preparation of the food.

Usually the 70-77 calories contained in a raw egg are increased to 110-125 calories by frying the egg in half a tablespoon of shortening. Hamburgers and other foods may be increased by 15 to 30 per cent.

For those who aren't counting calories, the new "dry-frying" method may be used with the amount of shortening, reduced to just enough to produce the desired flavor.

The new system simplifies washing pots and pans too. The thin film prevents food particles from sticking to the surface of the frying pan, casserole, barbecue grill, or whatever dish is used.

Last Stronghold

American men must have been disillusioned to read that President Tito has told husbands in Yugoslavia to help their wives with the household chores.

American men have long regarded Europe as one of the last strongholds of the domineering male and the obedient wife.

Tito blamed a number of broken marriages on the fact that wives are over-burdened with housework, children, and a daily job.

He said the work at home should be distributed in such a way that both the husband and wife work at it.

"The wife should be helped here so that she has time for a family," the Yugoslav President said.

Have You A Question on UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE OR EMPLOYMENT?

In this column we publish questions about unemployment insurance and employment, together with answers received from the Unemployment Insurance Commission.

If you are uncertain about any point do not hesitate to send us your question. We will obtain an answer and publish it in this column.

Following are some questions with answers which may be of interest to you:

Q. — I have not worked since April 1958 when I left my position as stenographer with the provincial government because of pregnancy. My baby was born in October 1958; and in December 1958 I put in a claim. I received benefits until March 1959 when I was offered a job with the Unemployment Insurance Commission as an office clerk at a much lower salary than I had received. Is it right that an experienced stenographer be cut off benefit for refusing such a job?

A. — Every effort is made to help you find work of the same kind and under similar conditions to those which you previously enjoyed. However, if, after a reasonable period, these efforts are unsuccessful, refusal to apply for or accept employment of another kind at the going rate of wages for that occupation in the district in which the job is located may affect your entitlement to benefit.

Q. — Are school teachers insurable when working in summer holiday employment?

A. — A school teacher is insurable while engaged in summer employment during the holiday period, subject to the following: If his yearly earning as a teacher or his combined earnings from teaching and his summer employment are in excess of $4,800, he is not insurable in respect of his summer work. In addition, a teacher may apply to be accepted if his summer work is in certain part-time or seasonal employments. Details may be obtained from the Commission's local office.

Women's influence in car comfort

By Carol Lane

Ever since Cleopatra chose linen for the sails of her Nile River barge, women have been calling the turn on style and comfort in travel. Nowhere is the woman's touch so evident as in the design of today's cars.

In recent years, women have steered car designers toward important changes in both the car's interior and its mechanics. If the distaff driver hadn't put in her two cents' worth, cars most probably wouldn't have glove compartments, inside lighting, assist straps, floor carpeting, ample baggage space in the trunk compartment or non-skid tires.

The designing female has affected car design in other ways, too. Car manufacturers listened to women's pleas and answered with the light, low stream-lined car currently on the road. Women's need for cars that were easier to handle resulted in modern power assists in steering, brakes, window lifts and seat adjustment. In an effort to simplify women's driving, manufacturers introduced automatic transmissions to replace clutches and gearshifts.

Milady's other suggestions resulted in wider doorways, lower steering wheels, larger back-up lights, more adjustable sun-visors and glove drawers in place of conventional compartments. Two ashtrays in the front seat were introduced to eliminate her need to reach so far; the door button was redesigned to preserve her fingernails, broader windshield expanse was added to give the petite damsel better vision; instrument panels were regrouped to place them in easier reach.

Two new fire trucks delivered

The two new fire trucks photographed above were received by Police - Fire Chief Fernand Trepanier (appearing at right of the photograph) several days ago. The Mercury and Chevrolet trucks are fitted with King-Seagrave pumps and are identical in operation.

Equipment undergoing tests

The two pumps, set up at the riverside near Barron's Bridge, are shown spraying water across the river, while under a test by the Fire Commissioner's Department. The test was carried out on Thursday of last week, and the equipment was declared ready for use following the three-hour run.

School repairs $145,000 due to building defects

Defects in the structure of l'Ecole Secondaire, the Catholic High School at Mary Street and Bedard Blvd., which have caused a gradual deterioration of the building, have saddled the School Board with a $145,000 renovation job. It is stated that the Board has instituted proceedings for loss entailed, against those responsible.

The repairs involved are extensive, including re-roofing and installation of an expansion joint, which was not introduced into the structure at the time of building, in 1951. There are repairs needed on the plaster, and incidental redecorating of the whole building.

Undertaking this job in the school vacation period is the firm of Magil Construction Ltd., Montreal; their representative in dealings with the Board is Mr. Roland Cyr. The company's bid of $144,000 was the lowest received for this contract. The provincial government has agreed to make a substantial grant.

It is recalled that this fine looking, modern school, which opened in 1951, was built by Raymond Matte to plans and specifications prepared by Maurice Champagne, architect. The cost was $610,000 — for which the Hon. W. M. Cottingham procured a Quebec grant of $400,000. The new building was blessed by Bishop Emilien Frenette in August 1953, just six years ago.

Injured in mishap

Carolle Batt, 22, of Outremont, was seriously injured at 4.45 a.m. Monday when a car driven by her fiancé swerved out of control on the road between 16 Island Lake and Morin Heights.

The other occupants of the car, including the injured girl's father, were unhurt in the crash. The 1956-model sedan, driven by Vincent Morin, 23, also of Outremont, was considerably damaged — according to Traffic Officer E. Perrier, who investigated.

Rural road surfacing spurs plea from Hon. Cottingham for speed observance

Extensive roadwork has been effected in the resort area and elsewhere in Argenteuil this season. These improvements by the Quebec Roads Department have been procured through the efforts of the Hon. W. M. Cottingham, Minister of Mines and deputy for the County, whose interest in the local communities is manifest through his continued gestures of this kind.

On completion of the paving, especially in the Laurentian regions and on mountain roads, Mr. Cottingham now issues a personal plea for observance of the speed laws, that these thoroughfares may serve as a public facility with safety and convenience to all users.

Reporting on progress of the asphalting crews — Route 31 (a long-standing headache to motorists) is near completion; Route 30 is paved from Lachute to Lake Sir John; the Lake Louisa road is paved to the Wentworth line (Johnson's Lake) — while paving has been done in Mille Isles, Morin Heights, Sixteen Island Lake, St. Adolphe, and other places.

Emphasizing the traffic speeds on all such winding roads as these, the Hon. Mr. Cottingham states that auto speeds on straight stretches with clear vision, should not exceed 40 m.p.h. On curves and hilly spots, speed should be reduced much lower to ensure safety. . . . The Watchman feels that, in cognizance of Mr. Cottingham's efforts along these lines, his request for cautious driving should receive active co-operation.

Following are clauses in the provincial traffic guide (1959 Auto Code booklet) regarding speed on rural highways:

A driver of a motor vehicle should not exceed:

(a) A speed in excess of 60 miles per hour on hard-surfaced highways having no bordering dwellings or establishments;

(b) A speed in excess of 50 miles per hour on hard-surfaced roads having dwellings or establishments with access thereto;

(c) A speed in excess of 40 miles per hour on mountain roads or on gravel roads affording good visibility in a straight line;

(d) In cities, towns and villages, a speed in excess of 30 miles per hour on any street or public highway bordering an agglomeration of dwellings.

A speed of 20 miles per hour on winding mountain roads, in dangerous curves and commercial districts, in front of schools, at intersections of roads or streets and at railway level crossings.

Close Rotary pool, precautionary step

The Rotary Club of Brownsburg - Lachute, following similar action taken in Montreal because of the severe outbreak of poliomyelitis, has decided to close the Swimming Pool as a precautionary measure. Swimming, henceforth, will be at the bathers' own risk.

Steam locomotive and wooden coaches for Railroad Historical Assocn. outing

Montreal—For those who mourn the passing of steam from the Canadian railway scene, all is not lost. The Canadian Railroad Historical Association has come to the rescue, and will sponsor two steam excursions out of Montreal on October 3 and 4.

Power on both trips will be supplied by a Canadian Pacific steam locomotive of the 4-6-0 type, a small ten wheeler once familiar on Canadian branch lines but now all but extinct. Canadian Pacific will also assemble its last wooden passenger cars for the excursions, and the CRHA advises that this will probably be the last opportunity to ride a train composed of this distinctive and picturesque rolling stock.

On Saturday, October 3, the first excursion will leave Windsor Station at about 8.15 a.m. EST on a 180-mile round trip to St. Johns, Iberville and Farnham, thence on a freight-only branch to St. Guillaume through rural French-Canadian countryside. The train will be a double-header, that is, it will be pulled by two steam locomotives. It will arrive back in Montreal about 6 p.m. EST.

The second excursion, on Sunday, October 4, is a 237-mile round trip to Ottawa via Ste. Therese, Lachute, Montebello and Thurso and returning to Montreal via Vankleek Hill, when autumn foliage is expected to be most colorful. Leaving Montreal at about 7.30 a.m. EST, it will arrive in the capital city about 1.30 p.m. About two hours' time will be available in Ottawa for sightseeing before the fast non-stop return run to Montreal. It will arrive in Montreal about 6 p.m. for evening connections out of the city.

Information and bookings are available from the Passenger Agent, Canadian Railroad Historical Association, P.O. Box 22, Station B, Montreal 2, Que.

Hear story of transition to socialized satellite state

Speaker at the Rotary Club last Thursday was Mr. George Novotny, one of the newer citizens of this community, who presented to his listeners a clear, if poignant, picture of Czechoslovakia — a country of 16 million souls hemmed in by more powerful neighbors.

Mr. Novotny came to Canada from Prague in 1948 at the age of eleven. He had his early schooling there but continued his education in this country, attended McGill and graduated with honors as an electrical engineer. He still has a strong attachment for Czechoslovakia, which has survived 1,000 years in the middle of Europe, surrounded on all sides by large, strong and aggressive nations.

The speaker was introduced by Rotarian Jim Humphreys and thanked by Rotarian Sid Stilwell.

Scanning briefly the history of his native country, Mr. Novotny led up to the experience of his people in more modern times. Following are extracts from his narrative covering the period within more recent memory:

"In 1918 the Czechs were at last able to break away from the Austro-Hungarian Empire to form the Czechoslovak Republic. . . . The next twenty years, 1918 to 1938, saw a great revival. Industry grew up and Czechoslovakia became quite a respected nation. The standard of living just before the war was, I'm sure, equal to any other European country.

"Came 1938, and you may remember Munich. At that time, Mr. Chamberlain and other dignitaries decided that it would be all right to give Czechoslovakia to Hitler, because then there wouldn't be a war. This of course made the Czechs mad, because they were by then ready and willing to fight, and also because England broke a treaty in agreeing to the occupation. However, the Germans first chopped from Czechoslovakia the mountains which always protected it, and then they moved into the country. We all know that the war came anyway, a few months later. Czechoslovakia was occupied until the end.

"In 1945, the Russians were closing in from the East, the Americans from the West. The Americans were progressing much faster than the Russians, and reached almost to Prague. At that point someone remembered that during the Crimea conference President Roosevelt, Stalin and Churchill had agreed that Czechoslovakia would be on the Russian side of the dividing line. The American troops had to withdraw — and the Russians moved in to liberate us.

"In February 1948, Czech communists placed their own government in office, and the rule of terror began. There was no fighting, not a drop of blood was shed — yet. There was no point in fighting, with umpteen Soviet tank divisions ready on the border, and the West happily minding its own business. And so quietly, easily, the Iron Curtain fell — and nobody really noticed it until it was all over.

"Living in Czechoslovakia today is obviously no fun. To have a car, you must be a fairly high official of some sort. To get a good job, your political history must be without reproach.

"You cannot travel more than fifty kilometres away from your residence without a permit. And judging by many old friends, you try to avoid writing to anyone abroad. If you do write, you must hand it in at the post office unsealed. Naturally you can't write about everything.

"Those of us who could, got out of the country in 1948. We lost almost all we had. We didn't leave in order to improve our living conditions or to look for something better. We had to leave. Many of us were labelled as enemies of the people, and then there was no choice. Most of the refugees underwent years of hardships, in order to come to strange lands, where they had to learn a new language and start completely from scratch. I think the fact that they chose this rather than to stay at home indicates that you would find few Czechs who believe in agreement with Russia or in peace with the Communists. We have seen only too well, how easily and how completely you can be defeated without a war.

"Today, Czech doctors, lawyers, professors, engineers and craftsmen are scattered literally all over the globe. There are tens of thousands of Czechs in Canada, and from personal experience I would say they have been received very well. A few have become rich; a few haven't got anywhere yet. Most, I think, are doing well and have adapted themselves fully."

Safe rifled, cash stolen in midnight job at Golf Club

Professional thieves cleaned out the safe at the Lachute Golf Club chalet early Monday morning, escaping with an estimated $7,500 and leaving little clue or evidence, other than their method of operation. The robbery was discovered around 8 a.m. Monday by a club employee, Rudolph Gagné, and Sgt.-Det. Ralph Allen was immediately notified.

The men, believed to be three in number, entered the building by means of a window in manager Roger Gravel's office, closed the two doors leading into the office, and gained access to the safe by means of a high-speed electric drill. They left the office in the same way, footprints leading to and from the pavement at the rear of the pro-shop, where the car is believed to have been parked.

Two employees in the clubhouse at the time heard nothing of the robbery, until notified of it Monday morning. The premises closed around midnight Sunday, and it is believed the robbery took place shortly after this hour.

Sgt.-Det. Allen, who turned the inquiry over to Sgt.-Det. Merrill Lawton of the Hold-up Squad, reported this as being "one of the best jobs of opening a safe" he has seen in his career with the Provincial Police.

Season shorter for deer hunting in this area

The deer hunting season in this area, as in other sections of the province, has been curtailed approximately one week this year. The dates are set at, Saturday, October 3, to Sunday, November 15, or seven week-ends. Argenteuil and all neighboring counties are in Zone D.

Zones A and B, south and southeast of Montreal, have hunting from October 31 to November 22, while Zone C, the section of the province close to the New Brunswick border, has hunting from October 3 to November 22.

Many favorable comments have been heard on the later opening, as hunters have in the past found a large number of wounded and dead deer in the bush, as a result of heavy foliage still remaining on the trees. It is anticipated that the later opening will eliminate a lot of this wastage.

Natural death

John A. O'Brien, a 73-year-old Montreal resident, died suddenly while visiting relatives at Kilmar on Friday last. The death was discovered by a neighbor, Mrs. Pearl Goodland.

Sgt.-Det. Ralph Allen and District Coroner Dr. Jules Lafleur investigated the case, the coroner declaring the death due to natural causes.

Women's Institute program reports, month of August

Arundel Women's Institute program for August took the form of a party to entertain the grandmothers. A donation was sent to the fund for the "Home for Senior Citizens".

Frontier ladies held their annual picnic, which was well attended by their children and friends.

A Grandmother's Day was also held by Jerusalem-Bethany branch. One member entertained a college student from Hong Kong. The members made plans to cater for a wedding.

The Citizenship convener for Mille Isles read an article entitled "Indian Rights". Donations were sent to the fund for the Home for Senior Citizens, and to the Community Hall. A social evening is being planned for August 28.

Pioneer branch held its meeting in Vankleek Hill, where the ladies were entertained by two former members. A military whist is being planned for October.

A talk entitled "A Modern Problem" was heard by Upper Lachute - East End branch. This concerned the later years of life, and how we should prepare ourselves for that period. Money has been sent to Lachute High School to be used as a Progress Prize. The ladies are also catering for a wedding.

Argenteuil Art Association presentation —

Handicrafts authority to speak at Exhibition opening this Saturday

Miss Alice Lighthall, who is to give an address at the opening of the Handicraft Exhibition sponsored by the Argenteuil Art Association on Saturday, August 29, at 3 p.m., is well known for her interest in the handicrafts of Quebec Province. As president of the Quebec Provincial Branch of the Canadian Handicrafts Guild from 1948 to 1952, she was largely responsible for the development of public interest in this work. She was chairman of the Indian and Eskimo Committee of the Guild and is an authority on carvings by Eskimos. Her work has resulted in the development of a pure native art, with economic benefit to those craftsmen whose work had previously not received public recognition.

She was also president of the Women's Branch of the Antiquarian and Numismatic Society in 1954-55. Her work in this organization was recognized when she was appointed to a special committee to organize the Chateau de Ramezay's 250th anniversary in 1955.

Miss Lighthall has given interesting addresses at various meetings held in this County in the past. All who attend — at the Exhibition opening in St. Andrews municipal hall — are assured that her explanation of the many items which she is bringing from the Montreal Branch will be both informative and entertaining. Her travels in connection with the various hobbies, particularly in this province, have given her many experiences which should please all listeners. She will also be in attendance on Sunday, and while she will give no formal discourse, will be happy to explain the various exhibits.

This exhibition will be officially opened at 3 p.m. on Saturday by Maj.-Gen. F. R. Phelan, mayor of St. Andrews Village. It will remain open each afternoon, over Labor Day, September 7.

Haul of clothing in store break-in at Brownsburg

Thieves made their escape with an estimated eight to ten thousand dollars in clothing, from Tuesday night to Wednesday morning of last week, in a robbery at the premises of Robert Matte, tailor, at Brownsburg.

Entry to the building was made by means of a small cellar window and from here, the stairs were used to remove the merchandise, consisting of men's clothing. The loss was not covered by insurance.

The robbery was investigated by Brownsburg Police Chief Richard Bell and Sgt.-Det. Ralph Allen.

The proprietor, discussing his misfortune, deplored the fact that Brownsburg has no regular night patrol, during the hours when proprietors and storekeepers have the most need of police protection. He estimates the vehicle used in this instance must have been parked unseen in a lane next to his property for around two hours, while the robbers loaded their haul.

Gov.-Gen. arrives to assume post

Montreal — Major General the Hon. George P. Vanier, D.S.O., M.C., Governor General Designate of Canada, is due to arrive in Montreal aboard the Cunard liner Ivernia today (Wednesday).

Youth formerly of Grenville died in drowning tragedy

A former Grenville boy, Lee Roy, 17, was the victim of a drowning tragedy which claimed two lives at Blanche Lake, near Buckingham, last Saturday night. The other victim was a 17-year-old girl, Dianne Daugherty of Buckingham.

Lee was the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Roy, of Silver Creek, near Masson. The family were formerly of Grenville, and the young victim had attended school there.

According to an Ottawa news report, the accident occurred when a plywood boat ferrying 10 teenagers to an island nose-dived into 20 feet of water. Survivors said the 16-foot boat — powered by a heavy airplane engine and propellor — stood on one end and sank 100 feet from shore. The boat was ferrying the teen-agers to an island, ½ mile distant, for a weiner roast.

Former acquaintances here extend sympathy to the bereaved parents.

Red Cross swimming and safety tests

LEGION NOTES

"ACTIVE SERVICE YESTERDAY COMMUNITY SERVICE TODAY"

— by —

Branch 70 Correspondent

A well attended general meeting, held Wednesday last in the Memorial Hall, approved the Executive Committee's proposal to paint the exterior of the building immediately.

It was indeed a pleasure to see Com. H. P. Lecorre in attendance after having so recently undergone a leg amputation. He was most profuse in his thanks to members of the Branch for their many kindnesses.

Com. Ray Holmes expressed his pleasure and thanks on receipt of a "talking book" from the Ladies' Auxiliary. With records from the Canadian Institute for the Blind, Com. Holmes hears monthly periodicals, such as the Reader's Digest.

It has been decided to proceed with a Corn Roast, to be held on the Legion Hall premises, Foundry Street, on Friday, August 28. Admission is 50 cents per person — everyone welcome. All members are asked to keep the date open.

The second annual picnic is to be held on Sunday, September 6. This will be a gala affair for all members and their families. Watch for more details in the next issue of this column, and in your monthly Branch news letter.

Com. President Tom Smith noted that Com. W. Blakely, Branch Steward, is on two weeks' vacation and Com. R. Giles, chairman of the Sick and Relief Committee, is currently visiting with friends and relatives in England. Com. Smith wished these members a happy holiday on behalf of Branch 70.

A new member, Com. J. Lepine, was duly initiated into the Branch by Com. Smith.

After discussion of the subject the meeting duly authorized Com. B. Jenkins to form a committee as required and to submit a proposal for the purchase and loaning out for public use of wheelchairs, hospital beds, crutches and canes. This project is intended purely as a public service and to supplement equipment already available through local agencies.

Well, as we write this up, it is indeed a pleasure to advise that, as predicted by Com. Chairman Jim Duncan, the first annual Branch 70 Legion Golf Tournament was an outstanding success. "Teeing-off" commenced shortly after 8 a.m. on Sunday last at the St. Andrews Golf Club, with 14 male and four female foursomes contending for honors. The weatherman did his share by providing a clear, comfortably cool day, and the contenders provided plenty of excitement, as expert and tyro tried for trophies, which either could win by a handicap procedure applied by Jim Seeney, the genial "pro" at St. Andrews East.

As all the scoring sheets were tallied up it became apparent that two tyros would have to play off for the trophy. Coms. Howard Ward and René Paulsen were called upon to play one hole to decide the winner, with René taking the decision. Jim Duncan had low gross for men, and Mrs. Peggy Seeney for the ladies. Mrs. Doug Hay won low gross for members of the Ladies' Auxiliary. Outside Branches represented at the tournament included Montebello No. 205, and St. Eustache. In addition to the major prize-winners, nearly every participant received a gift during the buffet luncheon, served to 95 Legion members and friends. During his remarks as m.c., Com. Jim Duncan assisted by Coms. Tom Smith and B. Jenkins, promised that next year's tournament would be bigger and better. It was felt that the enthusiasm of the membership, and the experience gained this year, would result in a much larger turnout for the 2nd Annual. Com. Duncan thanked the members, visitors and prize-donors, with special thanks for Jim Seeney and staff at St. Andrews Golf Club.

Lest We Forget —

August 19, 1942; The Canadians attacked Dieppe. In a fierce raid on Hitler's Fortress Europe, about 5,000 Canadians were engaged for nine hours. During this time they had more prisoners taken than during the later Northwest Europe campaign or the 30-month Italian campaign.

Cheery notes from Island haven as wildlife thrives in sanctuary

"Outdoor Round-up" — by Bob Atchison

Main Duck Island.
South Bay, Picton, Ont.
Aug. 12, 1959

Well, this letter will not be all about visitors, and that will be a change —, even though we have one very VVIP with us for a few days.

Edith and myself have scouted the Island very thoroughly for the past few days, and we have a lot to make us happy. In the Deer we discovered 11 new ones, two sets of twins, so in this case the severe weather last winter didn't undermine the birthrate. Right now they are in very good condition, not a trace of the ordeal they have gone through. I think the future holds a lot of good times for all the Deer on this place. Also if the herd is kept down to a liveable size, they should have no worry as to where their next meal comes from. (That is, if they do worry.)

Some of the wild rice planted last spring is starting to show up for the Ducks, and they will also be well looked after. The number of Ducks and Geese around is one of those things you would have to see. Just the Geese staying around to have their young is encouraging — but since we checked them over last, there are a few more that have taken up residence. The Wood Ducks are all in very good condition; not many of them seem to have fallen to our friends the turtles. (One of the turtles killed had 23 eggs inside her — so that cuts the population a little for next year.) Even the snakes are being co-operative; there are not too many of them around. I don't know how many we killed, but it has been enough to use all the ammunition I brought from Lachute (1,000 rounds). I'm now on my last 50 out of 500 rounds that we got up here. Of course, every shot doesn't mean a snake, but at least 50%, besides the ones that were taken care of with my pacifier, lead-pipe. They have been cleaned out in a big way. Only one more Rattler has been seen. Edith spotted it, near the house, but by the time she had got the gun he was gone.

Now for the fishing. I can't even begin to tell you! The Perch have given us some very good eating for the past week. What with fresh-caught fish and all the raspberries we can eat, I don't think this fare is hard to take. As regards the berries this may give you some idea of the quantity — in 45 minutes Edith and I picked a full quart. Even at this late date there are still plenty of them around. If there was only some way to keep the fresh taste in them. . . . To continue with the fishing, however. Bass are better now than they have been for a good number of years, according to the guides we talk to once in awhile. We know there is a difference ourselves, even from last year when we had such swell sport. One thing is sure, they are bigger and heavier. Only a few Lake Trout are being taken, and the beautiful weather is largely to blame. It hasn't only been warm, it's hot! Sure there are still the winds, but after awhile they don't bother you. Only when the boats start into the harbour for shelter.

The boats going up and down the lake now make the number we saw earlier, just a drop in the bucket. It's impossible to look out and not see a steamer of some kind. We even saw a submarine being towed yesterday. It was being hauled back up the lake, so it had most likely had trouble some place along the line.

There isn't any lack of seeing something, these days. We sure can't get lonely. From the little boats that come out fishing, to the biggest ocean-going vessels that can get through the Seaway. The amount of tonnage that has passed through must be in the millions. It's good sport just trying to guess where some of them come from, and where they are going; I'll bet we are wrong on all counts. One of these days I imagine they'll find out that the Seaway is too small, and start all over again.

The weather has been very warm I had hoped that our marshes would stay full for the Ducks during the warm periods, but right now they are bone dry. All the Ducks have taken to the lake, and it's wonderful to see the number around. One of the fortunate things during this time is the number of Great Blue Herons. They usually get into a marsh and stay there. Being a very timid and shy bird it isn't very often a number can be seen together. Patience is their crowning virtue — waiting in the water for the odd frog or minnow to come within reach, and spearing it with their long bill. When they move their heads to catch some unsuspecting victim, they move with such speed it is difficult to see. It sure is funny seeing them take off when they are scared — like a plane that looks as though it would never get into the air. These birds seem about to do a belly flop every time they do get airborne. I also think every little bird within calling distance is out after them. It looks for all the world like a big bomber being attacked by fighter planes. I don't know why, but everything that can fly is out after these Herons.

As I remarked earlier, the Eagles have deserted us and not a trace can be seen anywhere. With the Voles disappearing, these birds took off, and to my knowledge, they haven't been back.

The Ospreys are around in good numbers, and can be seen every day diving after fish. Another of the gull family is in evidence — that's the Sooty Tern. It's a real treat to see these birds in action. You can throw a piece of bread in close to shore (and by close I mean about 2 feet) with just enough water to float it, and these Terns will come right down beside you and pick it up without missing a beat. We have never had the chance to watch them so closely, and this sure is a great opportunity. Crewmen on the boats tell me they are so cheeky that often when a fisherman throws out a minnow on a line, these things will scoot down and take the bait right off the hook. Seems a little far-fetched, but they claim it's true. . . . But of course, the real aerial actor is the Osprey. It's unbelievable the way they can shoot down to grab some unwary fish, sometimes from a good 100 feet in the air. How they can see and tell just how far under the water the fish are, is beyond understanding. It's very seldom they miss having a feed, but when they do, they vent their wrath in a mighty noise. The speed they come down is another thing that is difficult to figure. When they hit the water with wings extended, it's hard to see them at times, for the spray. I've often thought they must beat themselves to a pulp in a day's fishing. Sure is a hard way to get your meals!

Once again we are hoping for a good rainfall; the trees are starting to turn yellow, and the meadows are just a brown patch of hay. In some of our coves around the Island, the rushes and weeds are growing in great profusion. As a matter of fact, there is only inches of water in these spots — even the Ducks have to go some distance out for a swim. I thought we would have been OK this summer, judging by the depth of the lake when we arrived; also taking into consideration the Seaway, deepening the back flow. But up to now the depth situation is worse. By the end of September we'll be able to walk for our supplies! Even the fishermen say that the Lake level

Trials of the Guards

THERE IS something about the ramrod-straight, bearskin-topped Guardsmen who patrol the entrance to Buckingham Palace that touches an inner chord in most spectators.

This inner something, it would appear, is not necessarily noble and uplifting. In a fair number of cases the main ingredient is curiosity — morbid curiosity at that.

Many tourists regard the red-coated soldiers of famous Guards regiments as fixtures like the palace itself, or Nelson's column, or the double-decker buses.

The straight-faced Guardsmen who march their beat, knees high, with a decisive heel-thump as they "about turn" at the end of their stretch, are fair game for any little scheme the thrill-seeking visitor may cook up.

The smart-Alec approach earned a young American woman a smart kick in the obvious region just recently. The Guardsman who was provoked beyond endurance was confined to barracks, but probably figured it was worth it.

Guardsman Victor Footer (certainly an appropriate name for these human automatons) apparently was unable to contain himself in the face of what he considered the woman's abuse. He stepped briskly forward in the correct manner but somehow the woman, who was in the way — which she shouldn't have been — received a boost in the rear.

She complained to official quarters, but while Footer contemplated the inside walls of the Guards' barracks his cause was taken up by many of his countrymen. Many complained that the tourists were being absolutely beastly to the Guardsmen.

A writer in the London News-Chronicle, Frank Barber, expressed the opinion that the tourist got no more than she deserved.

The Buckingham Palace Guards, he wrote, are a long-suffering breed. "Banana skins are put in their path, tricycles wheeled over their boots, people sing out the wrong marching tune, cameras are poked in their faces, bootlaces are untied, cigarette packs are hung on their bayonets."

The swift kick was deplorable, against all traditions — but it showed that the palace Guardsmen with all their training and determination to uphold the tradition of the famed Queen's household brigade of guards are only human. Guardsman Footer has earned a place for himself in the annals of the regiment.

The skeleton staff

IN THE LAST weeks of the holiday season, these impressions from The Printed Word are timely. They will be shared by many who, like ourselves, have "had it" — and the consequences:

Holiday times are especially invigorating for those who are not holidaying. The stay-at-home, work-all-day husband, whose family is at the cottage, is expected to perform many new tasks, such as feeding himself, washing the dishes and making his bed. If he measures up to these assignments he may find a new interest in life around the home. Even dodging work is apt to stir his mind, as through improvising labor-saving devices such as putting the frying pan in the refrigerator after breakfast, instead of washing it. Such great inventions give a man a fresh sparkle, though the refrigerator may get dingy.

Down at the office, the holiday season offers like interests. Some of the work of those on holidays may turn out to be necessary after all, even though the holidayers had been considered unnecessary. Doing their jobs is a challenge. A portly executive finds himself forced to wrap a parcel and look up the correct address to put on it. This leads him into discovering the files, a labyrinthine area of the offices where he begins to understand something of the frustrations and excitements of explorers. The late afternoon when he types a letter all by himself, finding the paper, carbons, envelope and an old stickumless stamp — this experience grows extra knobs on his brain and makes him a better man. Holidays are invigorating.

New deal for Indians

A MAJOR revision of federal legislation affecting Canada's 174,000 Indians likely will be authorized during the present Parliament. Problems facing Indians were studied last session by a joint committee of the Commons and Senate, and work is expected to continue when Parliament meets next year.

It is doubtful that the committee will be able to complete its work and submit a report in time for a revision of the Indian Act at the coming session. This is more likely to take place in 1961.

There is a genuine feeling among members of the government, the Commons and the Senate that the present Indian Act is in need of drastic revision. They feel that present laws governing Indians on reservations fail to treat Canada's first inhabitants with equality.

There also is a growing feeling among the general public that Indians are not receiving a square deal. It's felt that federal legislation should give Indians more opportunity for education, provide better housing on reservations, make provisions for improved health services and pave the way for integration.

One of the main proponents of a new deal for Indians is Senator James Gladstone, Canada's only Indian senator.

Senator Gladstone, born "Kay-Na-Muka" or "Many Guns" 72 years ago on Alberta's Blood reservation, says the dawn of a new life for his people is just around the corner.

He says the committee last session didn't have time to more than scratch the surface of the many problems facing Indians. But he hopes that at the next session it will be in a position to make concrete recommendations that will later be put into force through revision of the Indian Act.

Senator Gladstone, incidentally, is careful not to do anything that will focus public attention unduly upon himself. He says he could use his status as an Indian senator to get a lot of publicity — but that this would not help in his fight to get beneficial amendments to the Indian Act.

Viewpoints and perspectives

GOT THEM TALKING. — We hope the Canada Council is noting, as evidence of the country's cultural progress, the argument about art that's going on in Toronto. The city's art gallery is at present showing a large collection of abstract and other modernistic works. These have been denounced by one or two of the traditional painters as artistic garbage; and the battle is as hot as any election campaign of the past ten years.

Regardless of which side is right — observes The Financial Post — when they take to making speeches in the gallery to anyone who will listen, collectively booing or applauding the works in dispute, and possibly bashing one another over the head with umbrellas — then we shall really be on the cultural map.

ROYAL TOUR BENEFITS. — The benefits accruing to Canada from the Royal Visit will be many, and many will be intangible. But one benefit both perceptible and substantial will be the information about this country that has been published in the United Kingdom as a result of the Royal Tour.

— The St. James (Man.) Leader

VACATION SEASON. — The daily round, whether in classroom, shop, office, garage, factory or farm, does become monotonous. People need a change of pace; they need to see new places and new faces . . . do something quite different from their daily work. Vacation should be recreation of mind and body.

— Virden (Man.) Empire-Advance

NOTHING, 'tis said, is surer than taxes and death. Evidence of the truth of this old saying comes from Halifax, N.S., where, effective this month, anyone who purchases property within the N.S. capital will be required to pay a deed tax totalling one-half of one per cent of the purchase price. Unless evidence that the tax has been paid is forthcoming, the registrar of deeds will not accept any deeds for official registry. The new Deed Tax in Halifax is the latest example of ingenuity of the politicians at all levels in devising new ways of getting money.

Our Shrewsbury correspondent relates a sad affair which happened in the Parish of Ste. Marguerite. One of the French farmers working at the rear of his farm was awaiting his daughter to bring him his dinner. When 3 o'clock came, he was approaching his home when he saw a big bear eating something. He shot and killed the animal, and on examination found the remains of his 12-year-old girl; only the hand was recognizable.

KNOW YOUR Canada

Prepared by the Research Staff of Encyclopedia Canadiana

Did Vancouver Island have Another Name?

Yes. At one time this island on which the capital of British Columbia is situated was known as Quadra and Vancouver Island to commemorate the friendship of Capt. George Vancouver and the Spanish navigator and administrator, Juan Francisco de la Bodega y Quadra. Quadra, born in Peru about 1744, commanded a ship that in 1779 voyaged up the northwest coast of America as far as the sixtieth degree of latitude, sighting Mount St. Elias. In 1792 he was sent to Nootka Sound on Vancouver Island as Spanish envoy to meet Captain Vancouver and to arrange with him for the restoration of British properties seized by the Spaniards in 1789. The two men differed on details of their diplomatic mission but became firm friends. An island at the northern end of the Strait of Georgia, between Vancouver Island and the mainland, is still called Quadra Island. Quadra died in 1794, probably in San Blas, Mexico.

What Does Acadia mean?

The name Acadie (in English, Acadia) was given by France to her Atlantic seaboard possessions in the New World. The origin of the name has never been definitely traced. Indians of the Abnaki, Malecite and Micmac bands inhabited this area and the name is not unlike others of Micmac parentage. The map compiled by Gestaldi in 1548 showed the territory as Larcadie and after 1604, when the first settlement was established, it was normally referred to as Acadie.

Who was first Manitoba Chief Justice to be Born in that Province?

The present chief justice — the Hon. John E. Adamson. Mr. Adamson was born at Nelson (now Morden), Man., in 1884, and received his education in local public schools and at St. John's College, University of Manitoba. He was called to the provincial bar in 1910 and practised law until 1922. When he was appointed a justice of the Manitoba Court of King's Bench in 1922, he was the first native son of the province to achieve this honor. In 1948 he was elevated to the Court of Appeal and in January 1955 he became the first native Manitoban to serve as chief justice of the province.

When did the first Canadian Coins appear?

The first Canadian coins, silver 5-sol and 15-sol pieces, were struck in 1670 by Louis XIV of France for his colonies in North America. The 15-sol piece has become one of the rarest of all Canadian coins and today is worth about $600. The first official Canadian coins to be produced in Canada appeared in 1908, the year the mint was established in Ottawa. Before that, all Canadian coins since the conquest had been struck at either the Royal Mint at London or the Heaton Mint in Birmingham, England.

What was the Royal William?

The Royal William, a wooden paddle-wheel steamer launched at Quebec in 1831, was the first steamship to make an easterly crossing of the Atlantic. She set sail from Pictou, N.S., on Aug. 18, 1833, and reached Cowes on the Isle of Wight on Sept. 6. She was not under continuous steam power throughout the voyage as it was necessary to stop her engines every fourth day in order to clear her boilers of salt. The Royal William had been built to run between Quebec and Halifax but the cholera epidemic of 1832 forced the abandonment of this service and she was sold early in 1833. Her new owners decided to send her to England for sale, since it was believed a better price would be obtained there.

TORCHES FOR BURNING

An old school pal dropped in last week. He is a radical. In very short order he was trying to convert me to communism or something like it. And he spoke of another classmate who, like himself, is "working hard to change things in this dog-eat-dog economy," as he put it.

I have thought a good deal about these two old school pals. Of all our old class, they are the only ones who became radical and stayed that way. Most of us got bruised a good deal by the depression, and we have had moments when we wanted to tear society apart, but we soon got too busy building lives for ourselves and our families. Indeed, of all my classmates, I think only these two are radical, about 90% are very conservative, and a few of us are almost anarchists, and we'd be happy if there were fewer governments looking over our shoulders and doing things for us and to us.

I am still quite fond of my two old classmates who are radical — but I am afraid I pity them more than I respect them. Neither has contributed anything much to a better country. Neither is quick to pick up a check in a restaurant, or carry an extra load on a camping trip, or make a loan to a friend. Both want the world to practice charity, but neither do much of it personally. One of them, I am quite sure, is simply a misguided soul caught in a crowd that thinks society is set against them, and that all would come easy if the government owned everything and shared it with everyone equally.

I feel fairly certain that if every citizen in Canada had the same notions as these two, we would all starve to death within a couple of years. They are not builders. They do not want to do more than their share, and I suspect they often do less. They resent the success of others and would like to cut everybody else down to their own size.

"Only a torch for burning, no hammer for building?" cried Carlyle to the iconoclasts and the malcontents of his day. I think it applies to a few Canadians who let the depression cast them in a mold of bitterness from which they have never recovered.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY TO YOU!

The dignified, well-dressed old gentleman entered the caterer's shop with an air of great importance. He wore an immaculate grey suit with a matching tie, tan shoes, white spats, and carried a gold-headed cane. Removing his expensive Panama hat, he addressed the proprietor.

"I want to order a very small birthday cake. Only one pound in weight, with white icing, pink trimming, and the letter S in the centre. Can you do this for me?"

The storekeeper assured him that he could, and that the cake would be ready the following evening a 6 p.m. At the appointed hour the customer returned and was shown the cake.

"That is not at all what I wanted," he complained. "I must have you change it. I wanted the letter S in script, and you have put it on as a block letter."

"But you didn't specify", said the caterer. "You merely said a letter S, in no particular style of type."

"Yes, you're right," said the old gentleman. "I now admit that the mistake was mine. But it will have to be changed and I am quite prepared to pay for your extra trouble. But it must be done not later than this time tomorrow."

Having been assured that the cake would be ready on time, the customer left and was back again the following evening and was again shown the cake. He fairly beamed with delight.

"Just what I wanted," he shouted.

"But the last delivery has just left," exclaimed the caterer. "I'm afraid I must ask you to take it with you."

"Oh, that won't be necessary," said the old gentleman. "Just bring me a plate and fork and I'll eat it here. This is my birthday!"

Be seein' ya!

London — Towers of glass are rising among the gray stones of this old capital.

Some of the new Britain is taking shape outside our hotel window. Two big office blocks in process of building loom above the chimney-pots and trees of Dorset Square.

My wife and I are lodged at the top of four flights of stairs in a hotel near Baker Street ($7 a night for the two of us, including a hearty breakfast). From this vantage point we can see workmen clambering about the steel-and-concrete skeleton of a building.

Another building, which seems to be made entirely of glass, stands nearly completed, with scaffolding still on it.

You can look out of nearly any window in London and see something either being torn down or erected. You can open almost any newspaper and read of one vast company swallowing another (a profitable form of cannibalism) or of fat dividends declared, or another rise in the standard of living.

Below our window is the square, that piece of greenery enclosed by wrought-iron rails and gates, to which only the residents have entry. Two small boys are playing cricket on the square, and a lady gardener is gathering leaves.

Only a few years ago, the old residential squares (the town houses mainly converted into offices, flats and lodging houses) were grimy and run-down.

Now they are blossoming in the bright colors of fresh paint. Housefronts, doors and area railings are beginning to sparkle. It is another sign of Britain's new prosperity.

There is money around again. Bomb damage from the 1939-45 war has healed over. Chauffeur-driven Rolls-Royces have reappeared. Sleek women carry toy poodle dogs. These little creatures 'like pieces of topiary on legs, are a current fad. I saw one eating from a plate alongside its mistress at a sandwich bar.

Basically, London remains the same — a huge warren of bustling, varied humanity, living among ghosts and relics, a city as old as the Roman conquest and as new as the jet plane that whistles overhead.

Scores of dapper men in dark suits and dark hats move at a dignified pace through pouring rain, carrying tightly furled umbrellas which are symbols of status rather than instruments of shelter.

I saw a neatly-attired colored man hastening through the rain with the rest of them, clutching his status symbol.

In a post office queue I stood behind a girl who spoke in musical accents from Jamaica. A negro ticket clerk and an East Indian station girl helped direct me in the Underground Railway.

A number of colored people living in London has greatly increased. As always, there are many exotic visitors of all shapes and colors — German youths in leather shorts; beautiful Indian ladies in brilliant sarees.

London's political power has diminished. British forces have retreated from the outposts in widely scattered countries, leaving the natives of those regions to govern themselves — as the Romans left Britain, long ago.

For me, the retreat from empire blunts the sense of power and excitement that used to belong to London.

London no longer feels like the centre of the world. But the city lives on, vast, complex and sophisticated, and it still has its magic.

These feelings are mostly in the mind. Outwardly, London looks rich and strong. Its money power seems to have increased as its governing power has waned.

The glass tower above the trees, the colored man with his rolled umbrella — these things belong to the new London. But we still have the Thames and the ships of the world; London taxicabs; the House of Commons and Big Ben.

We still have newsvendors crying the late headlines; shoes outside the hotel door to be polished, and tea in bed in the morning.

Permit for new autobus service in town limits

Ben Marion, Provincial Transport agent at the Berry Street terminus, has been granted a municipal permit to operate a bus service within the town limits. He expects to put this service in operation about September 5. A matter for careful consideration is the location of suitable stops; this question is being studied by the operator, the town authorities and the police chief, before any route or schedule is announced.

Mr. Marion already holds a Department of Transport franchise for his bus routes between Lachute-St. Jerome and Lachute - Brownsburg.

British schoolboys on Canadian tour

Montreal — The 11th group of British schoolboys to tour Canada under the W. H. Rhodes Canada Educational Trusts arrived in Montreal August 19 on the Cunard liner Carinthia.

The group comprises 48 boys from secondary schools in Britain. They are accompanied by two schoolmasters and I. W. Cunningham, deputy director of education, Glasgow, who will represent the Trusts' management. The tours were founded by Bradford industrialist W. H. Rhodes in 1938 following a pilot tour of eastern Canada by British schoolboys which Mr. Rhodes had sponsored the previous year. His aim was to establish friendships between British schoolboys and Canadians and to enlarge the boys' knowledge of this country.

Over the years the itinerary for the tour has been extended, so that principal cities now visited include Quebec, Montreal, Toronto, Hamilton, Niagara, Sudbury and Ottawa. During each tour, it is arranged for the visitors to meet Canadian boys of similar age, about 18½, in cities visited.

The tour ends on September 4, when the British visitors sail for England.

is going down year by year, and they know, through the sonar depth-finders on their boats. Mr. Vancott, the real big fisherman around here, says that the level has dropped at least five feet in the last three years. He is blaming the Seaway and the Chicago sewerage and canals for all this. . . Who is to blame will probably never be known, at least in our time. . . . But humans are to blame just as sure as they are to blame for our lack of game. . . .

Now, with the hunting season right upon us, here's a thought: A gun doesn't fire itself, so don't blame the gun. Use a little common sense.

One in every four

This is a boom year for car sales, says Rodney Touche in The Financial Post. That is, for cars that have not been made in Canada.

The total number of cars sold in the first six months of 1959 has soared above all earlier first-half levels. It's shaping into a 420,000 car year (compared with 380,000 last year, and the record 405,000 of 1956).

But it also looks as if one out of every four of the 420,000 total — a staggering 105,000 cars — will have come from European and British factories.

Sales of Canadian-built cars may actually be lower than in 1956 and 1957.

NOTES FROM ABROAD

— By R. A. Giles —

Hove, Sussex, Aug. 16

When I last wrote we were expecting some friends from London, of long acquaintance to visit us, which they did and a very happy re-union was had on Friday.

This by the way is one of the finest summers that has been experienced since our last trip 6 years ago, so we are very fortunate.

On Sunday a bus to Eastbourne took us along the sea front, a very pretty drive where we met Editor Don Titman's sister, Miss Lily, and again a most pleasant afternoon was had. All along this sea front precautions in the manner of heavy cement walls and blockings were put up to help stop the enemy in the last war should they manage to reach England's shores (which happily they did not). These are still in evidence.

Returning to Brighton we attended a non-congregational service at the Dome. During the first war I had been there several times. There is a large pipe organ and everyone sings heartily. Friends of Mother's the Hookers, whom she knew when a young girl, still attend and Mr. Hooker, now 85, is still singing in the choir. He has been a member since he was 15 years of age and for some years organist — a record of over 70 years.

Tuesday morning I decided to hit for France; caught a train at noon to Folkestone, then over to Calais by boat and a train to Lille. It was around this district that most of our sojourn had been during our war experience. On registering at the hotel the office manager was quite pleased and surprised to know that I came from Lachute, for he had worked at Val Morin and at the Lapointe Hotel, St. Jerome, and had frequently passed through Lachute. As the saying goes "It's a small world."

Next morning I hired a "Renault" car, small but very efficient. With it I was able to visit some of the smaller villages where we as soldiers had been billeted and where we sometimes made friends with the occupants. I looked up several of these, all of whom were delighted to see me and to know that they had been remembered.

Of particular interest to the old Vets are the names of places I passed through — La Bassée, Festubert, Auchez-les-Mines, Bethune, Lillers, Bourecq, St. Hilaire, Auchez-au-Bois, Ferfay, Bruay, Estrée Cauché, Villers-au-Bois, Souchez, Noeux-les-Mines, Aubigny, Chamberlain Abbée, Carency, Neuville St. Vaast, Givenchy, Arras and Cambrai.

At Bourecq, I stood again in the two-room Estaminet where we used to occasionally get a little hot water to shave, for cold water from the creek in December was none too pleasant.

At Noeux-les-Mines our shelter, where Doug Davis and I slept, was the carriage shed, with no front door, so quite breezy. It was a case then of putting our groundsheets down first, then two blankets to sleep on, with two on top and our kilts as an eiderdown, fastened at the sides with big safety pins; we would slide in at the top and be fairly warm — but oh was it cold in the morning. Mr. Leclerc, the owner of the farm yard house, was a prisoner of war in Germany when we were there, but with his wife and family gave me a wonderful reception, produced the customary wine and beer, and had me stay for dinner.

Such were some of the pleasantries, but the sad and depressing part was, after seeing the spot where I had been wounded, visiting various cemeteries and seeing row after row, thousands of them, of white stones, bearing the names of those who had paid the supreme sacrifice. I am sure, could those responsible for starting war, be taken together to the hundreds of graveyards that are so prominent, their ideas of conflict would surely change that peace might reign.

The old ruins at Mont St. Eloi still stand out on the horizon, a reminder of the terrible destruction that can so quickly come.

At Vimy the huge Canadian Memorial stands high, in contrast, and looking down from the Ridge, where on April 9 so many lost their lives, can be seen well-cultivated fields of grain and pastures green, so quiet and peaceful in comparison.

Life in the larger centres of France is as elsewhere, gay and fast, with apparent progress, huge apartments, as in Canada and England being constructed. In the poorer sections and small villages, life changes little and the farmer still plods away with the big heavy waggon and his horses. The season has been dry, but crops are good.

Back in England once again, we are enjoying the sea, and last evening took a long walk along the front, breathing in all the fresh air possible, and watching the thousands of bathers and holiday makers getting the greatest pleasure possible from their vacation.

This week we visit relatives in Weymouth then take a week's tour of Devon and Cornwall, which I will tell you about in my next.

Cheer-i-o.

— R.A.G.

Polio vaccination no deterrent to blood donors

People who have recently received salk vaccine can give blood without danger to themselves or to the patient who will eventually receive the blood. This was announced recently by Dr. W. Stuart Stanbury, National Commissioner of the Canadian Red Cross Society.

"Recent vaccination with the salk vaccine against poliomyelitis is no counter-indication for the donation of blood", said Dr. Stanbury.

"Salk vaccination", he said, "unlike certain vaccinations, does not cause a reaction which could in anyway upset the recipient. Moreover, salk vaccine does not produce in the recipient's blood any substance which can be harmful to a patient who might subsequently receive this blood."

The marriage of Olive-Jane Bickerton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Pollock, of Lachute, to Mr. Douglas Kenneth Mackay, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth B. Mackay, of Montreal, took place recently in St. Simeon's Anglican Church, Lachute, with the Rev. C. R. Lang officiating at the double-ring ceremony.

The bride, given away by her father, wore a gown of white peau-de-soie, fashioned with a fitted bodice having a V-neckline and long sleeves ending in points over the hands. The full skirt had a pleated godet at the back, falling into a chapel train. Her fingertip veil of tulle illusion was held by a coronet of seed pearls, and she carried a cascade bouquet of white roses. Her only jewelry was a diamond and sapphire pendant, the gift of the groom.

Miss Rosalind Syvertsen, of Hanover, N.H., was maid of honor, and wore a gown of Wedgewood blue organdie over taffeta. The bridesmaids, Miss Bertha Pollock, cousin of the bride, and Miss Elaine Williamson, of Kelowna, B.C., wore gowns of ice-blue organdie over taffeta. All three carried small cascade bouquets of bronze mums.

Mr. John Mackay, cousin of the groom, was best man. The ushers were Mr. Norman Jones, and Mr. David Pollock, brother of the bride.

The bride's mother was gowned in champagne pure silk, with bronze accessories and a corsage of Orange Delight roses. The mother of the groom wore a dress of pink organza, with pink and lavender accesories, and a lavender glamelia corsage.

A reception was held in the Masonic Hall, following which the guests returned to the home of the bride. Later the happy couple left for a trip through the Maritime Provinces, the bride going away in a Regal blue suit and hat, black accessories, and wearing a white orchid corsage.

Wedding held at St. George's

Mackay - Davidson

The marriage of Ethel Kristine, foster-daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Davidson, of Brownsburg, to Mr. George David Mackay, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. K. Mackay, of Barney's River, N.S., took place Saturday, August 15, in St. George's Anglican Church, Brownsburg, the Rev. C. R. Lang officiating. Mrs. C. Wheeler played the wedding music and Mr. E. L. Pearson was the soloist. The church was decorated with baskets of pink and white gladioli.

Given in marriage by her foster-father, the bride wore a floor-length gown of Chantilly lace over bridal satin, fashioned with a fitted bodice, sabrina neckline, long sleeves and bouffant, tiered skirt. Her fingertip veil of tulle illusion was held in place by a tiara of lace and seed pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of red roses and white stephanotis.

Mrs. Joy Williams, sister of the groom, was matron of honor and wore a waltz-length imported gown of azure blue silk chiffon with a matching lace jacket; her headpiece was of lace and flowers in the same shade of blue, and she carried a smaller cascade bouquet of red roses and white stephanotis.

The little flower girl, Patricia Snyder, wore a floor-length frock of pink silk organza over taffeta with a garland of pink flowers in her hair, and carried a basket of Sweetheart roses and baby's breath.

Mr. Blair Erskine, of Ottawa, was best man, and the ushers were Messrs. Geo. Gordon and Melvyn Tomalty.

The reception was held at the Century Inn, Grenville, where pink and white gladioli decorated the tables. The toast to the bride was proposed by Mr. W. Mann.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Mackay left on a motor trip to the New England Coast, the bride travelling in an ensemble of mint green with white accessories, and wearing a corsage of yellow roses. On their return they will reside in Montreal.

Do you love Life?

It is such a natural feeling for normal people to want to live. Death is our enemy. The Giver of life is our faithful Friend who caused his Son to say: "He that hears my word and believes him that sent me has everlasting life." — John 5:24.

How can we get acquainted with the Author of life, Jehovah God, and with the Chief Agent of life, Jesus Christ? Is there a way of being sure we can live eternally? Yes, there is!

We must learn how to live now as men and women, single, married, young or old, showing love, living it, preaching it. If we live according to Jehovah's will now, we assure ourselves of life forever. Obtain the book "THIS MEANS EVERLASTING LIFE." Study it with your Bible, and your knowledge of life and your love of living will be greater.

Mail 50 cents and you will receive the above-mentioned book, also another booklet free, "GOD'S WAY IS LOVE."

"Sunnyacres Sketches"

By Margaret Cook

The season is about to change. A thousand clues are there for the observant eye. The apples that bow down the tree just beyond the window where habitually sits the typewriter, are no longer small, green, barely-visible spheres, but round rosy globes. Later, they will develop stripes. The crab-apples down in the orchard remind by their golden sheen that it is time once again to take out the preserving kettle. The phlox is a riot of color, the goldenrod luxuriates in the fields, ragweed awaits the hay fever victim (but not just here), the hawthorns are becoming red, but not yet the clear, vivid scarlet of September. On the spruce trees I have recently surprised the newly-formed cones, a lovely shade of purple, frosted with glittering drops of resin. A lovely sight that, not as startling as the small crimson candles that the tamaracks sport earlier in the season.

In among the green moss the delicate flowers of the wintergreen lift their tiny pinkish bells. A handsome plant the wintergreen, at all seasons. Its botanical name is Pyrola Elliptica; the pyrola, says my authority, is because of the pear-shaped leaves. Near the wintergreen, shines the jet of the blackberries. From now until snow-fly the woods and fields abound in wonders; one presumes that there are always wonders, but only when the grass begins to wither are they discernible.

But small animals show no signs of withering; there is a veritable plague of mice, squirrels, etc. This we owe to the absence of foxes, which, in turn were devastated by rabies. Nature is wonderful. Near us, a large, fat hawk is vainly trying to cope with all this abundance, abetted by our two cats. It's a poor day when our pets do not catch at least one mouse each. Some days they outdo themselves.

Two weeks ago we had what we refer to as Animal Day. Peter, the elder cat, who always brings his catch to me, presented me with a half-grown rabbit before I was up. It was awaiting my appearance all neatly laid out on the doorstep. Then, Evie, the young cat, caught a shrew. Like all adolescents he is self-centered and does not make offering of the results of his cleverness. He merely enjoys them. At mid-afternoon, I was tapping away (even as now) in the porch which has an all-round view, when I heard tiny shrieks of anger, and finally focussed Peter wrestling in the lane with a weasel. As these little fellows are notoriously fierce and strong for their size, I was uneasy, but Peter seemed to be using his fifteen pounds to some effect, and was protected by his thick Persian coat, so I awaited the outcome with confidence. Nor was I disappointed, for, after a fight that went on fully fifteen minutes, Peter was the victor. He was too tired to bring the prize all the way home, but only into the yard. Then he retreated to the top of the woodpile, and pointed out his booty to us. He points with his chin. We told him he was a remarkable hunter and that we need never worry about food as long as he was around. His cup was full, and he bore himself with even more than his usual dignity the rest of the day. Presently, to even things up, Evie caught a mouse. It had been a full day for the cats, so we brought them in early, fed them and recommended that they go to bed. Surprisingly, they obliged by going upstairs, which was just as well, considering what followed.

The head of the house and myself settled down by the fire, each with a book. Glancing up, I was at first persuaded that the old brain had at last given away, for wriggling on the floor not far from my feet, was a snake! I looked at the representative of the stronger sex, to see if he blanched. No response. So finally, I enquired timidly if he saw a snake. . . . Minutes later, the snake was finally taken up with a pair of oven mittens and released outdoors. It is typical of the uninformed attitude of most people, that a lady to whom I told this story asked indignantly why we had not killed the snake. The puzzle as to how the snake got into the house was solved by finding a hollow log in the firewood basket.

Partridge are about as usual before the annual slaughter. This week, we saw one calmly walking along some lumber piled on the verandah of an abandoned cottage. Rabbits habitually eat on our lawn, and a raccoon passed along the border not long ago, looking dissipated about the eyes (as they all do, to me). One deer only has been spied this summer, but that does not mean they are not around. No stories of bears of wolves are being circulated at present, but life is not dull.

We note with interest various family gatherings being held hereabout. Next to fiftieth wedding anniversaries, I like family gatherings. Both speak of courage above the ordinary. Our good friend, Erskine Rodger — he of the prize cattle and many sons — tells me that the first Rodger arrived at Lachute in 1834. At the present moment there are ten Rodger sons on four farms in the vicinity of Lachute. Long may the breed flourish! The Macdonald family of Lakefield are still quite numerous, and they arrived about the same time. The Kerrs were, I believe, a little later. We look forward to seeing a gathering of these clans. . . .

History, after all, is just you and I and our ancestors. Pity the fellow who has none, or rather, remembers none. Few of us now can say that we were born, brought up and hope to die in the same house, but ancestors are more durable than houses. Nice to look back at Uncle Jim's peculiarities. Even the black sheep were interesting. Our own black sheep, two generations back, collected wives and wrote poetry. I can remember him florid of face, courtly of manner, sitting on our verandah spouting poetry — his own. I suppose the urge that gets these articles on the typewriter is a tiny twig of the tree that flourished in Cousin Ned. The daughter of the house paints a recognizable picture, so the artistic bent is noticeable in the Irish side of the house. So far, from the British side, she has inherited brown eyes and a dimple in the chin; attributes that will probably take her as far as the painting. She is also stubborn, and that is an Irish or English trait — according to which parent is speaking. . . . The space is gone. Happy ending to everybody's holiday.

Mother-and-child welfare in Japan

The Japanese government is giving more and more assistance to widows with young children to raise and support.

This assistance is both administrative and financial, and financial aid is provided one-third by the local governments and two-thirds by the central government.

Financially the widows and children are eligible for loans, reduction or exemption from taxes, special annuity programs and public residences.

The loans are in eight categories, ranging from training and establishing the mothers in occupations, to monthly livelihood loans and grants for the children's education. The loans are repayable over various periods and all bear a three per cent interest, except the educational loans which are interest free. Orphans are eligible for the same loans as the children of widows.

To assist them in finding occupations, special preference is given to widows to open stalls, barber shops or tobacco shops in public parks or grounds. Since 1956, 917 such stores have been established.

Consulting offices have been established to administer the loans and to give guidance and instruction for the rehabilitation of the widows. The 830 counsellors who work in these offices handled more than 1,200,000 cases between 1953 and 1957.

Handicraft Fever

(Copyright)

— By NANCY CLEAVER —

Children love to touch things and they learn a great deal by using their fingers. If you have ever watched the little tots in a Nursery School, you will have seen their delight in various handicraft activities such as finger painting.

Kindergarten youngsters are eager for the time in the day when they can work with plasticene, and older school children take real pride in objects they make from clay. Blunt scissors, colored paper or a scrapbook and old magazines and paste, give a pupil the chance to build silhouettes, posters, or compile a scrap book. The older boys and girls often want to try their hand at papier maché articles, especially masks and marionettes.

Often when a boy or girl wants to continue a handicraft activity at home which has been enjoyed at school, mother objects.

"It's too messy!" or more often on the grounds that the material is too expensive.

But busy children are happy children. If they are making things at home, parents know they are not getting into mischief elsewhere.

Most kitchen floors and tables can be covered with newspaper before the handicraft projects begin.

Then when it is ended the newspaper can be carefully gathered up and put in the garbage. This saves a lot of cleaning up and it is good training for a child to leave his place of work spick and span.

Wearing an apron or smock saves clothes. A mother will find that her husband's old shirt cut off way down the sleeves and buttoned at the child's back makes an excellent cover-all!

The following recipes all use materials found in most homes. By taking an interest in making this material, she will not only save a lot of money, but she will also reduce the nerve strain of living with a child who complains, "I've nothing to do!"

Clay can be bought in jars or powdered form to be mixed with water as needed, or it can be made from the following hand-made recipe: Mix two cups of flour, one cup of salt and a teaspoonful of alum. Add enough water so that it can be worked easily with the fingers, but do not add so much that it will be sticky. Keep it moist by wrapping it in a damp cloth or in wax paper.

Paste — To one cup of flour, gradually add cold water until it is the right consistency. Add one teaspoon of glycerine to help keep it sweet or buy a box of powdered paste used to apply wall paper. Mix a little at a time as needed in an empty cold cream jar.

Papier Maché — The papier maché objects may take several days to dry, but they are great fun to make. Tear newspapers into small pieces and soak in a tub of hot water over night. Pour off the water and squeeze and wring out as much water as possible from the remaining pulp. Then use a large strainer or sieve to remove any excess water. Next add generous quantities of paste to this pulp mixture. Stir thoroughly with a large spoon.

Add coloring matter now or color the finished product with poster paint. Model with the fingers as if the material was plasticene. Beginners should use a base such as a jar for a vase with a papier maché covering or a child's round cereal box or a salt box as a foundation for a pig. Wads of newspaper with wire to stiffen it can form the body of a doll or marionette. Masks can be modelled over the outside of a large mixing bowl — but remember to apply grease first so the mask can be easily removed when dry.

Clip these recipes for future reference. You will only want to use one of them at a time! Keep them in a large envelope, or a file or a scrapbook.

How much water should infants drink?

The quarrelsome question of just how much water a baby should drink to maintain health is answered specifically in the current issue of "Health Magazine", official magazine of the Health League of Canada.

The Question Box of the magazine says that a baby's requirements of fluids, everything included, are as follows:

Three ounces per pound of body weight up to 40 ounces. After the baby in twelve pounds, a little less is usually needed. More water is indicated in hot weather, or if the baby is feverish.

This, of course, includes water-bearing items, such as milk, both in formulas and in cereals, fruit juices, water used in formula and bath water swallowed.

Most formula are calculated on the basis both of fluid and caloric needs.

Fashions

A smart team for casual wear is this cardigan and skirt, the cardigan in white or in matching skirt colors. Brass buttoned, it reaches to just below waist length. The skirt, box-pleated all around, is in sun yellow linen. It is worn with a matching short-sleeved silk blouse. The sweater should see plenty of service later on as a cover-up.

Home-baked bread spurs appetite

One of the most delicious dishes a kitchen can produce is home-baked bread. This is a statement that will elicit few arguments from most people . . at least from anyone who has ever eaten bread warm from the oven, with lots of butter or margarine on each thick slice. Perhaps the poet Owen Meredith had such a memory in the back of his mind when he wrote "We may live without friends; we may live without books; but civilized man cannot live without cooks". And now on to a recipe for Cracked Wheat Bread that helps to prove the point. This recipe differs from the average loaf of white bread in both texture and flavor. The difference is accounted for by the cracked wheat and brown sugar included in the ingredients. As a result, the bread has a very open, light and porous texture with a crisp top crust and delicately nutty flavor. You will find these loaves make temptingly different breakfast toast or lunch-box sandwiches.

Cracked Wheat Bread

(Yield — 2 loaves)

2 Cups cold water, 3 tablespoons brown sugar, 1 cup cracked wheat, ½ cup lukewarm water, 2 teaspoons granulated sugar, 2 envelopes active dry yeast, 4½ teaspoons salt, 5½ cups (about) once-sifted all-purpose flour, ¼ cup soft shortening.

Measure cold water into a rather small bowl; stir in brown sugar and cracked wheat. Set aside for 2 or 3 hours to soften cracked wheat.

Measure lukewarm water into a large bowl; stir in the 2 teaspoons granulated sugar. Sprinkle with yeast. Let stand 10 minutes, then stir well. Stir in cracked wheat mixture, salt and 2½ cups of the flour. Beat until smooth and elastic. Add and beat in soft shortening. Work in sufficient additional flour to make a soft dough — about 3 cups more. Turn out on floured board or canvas and knead until smooth and elastic (this will require a little more kneading than white bread). Place in greased bowl. Grease top. Cover. Let rise in a warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk — about 1¼ hours.

Punch down dough. Turn out on lightly-floured board or canvas and knead until smooth. Divide dough into 2 equal portions; shape each portion into a smooth ball. Cover with a tea towel and let rest 10 minutes. Shape each ball of dough into a loaf and place in a greased loaf pan (4½ x 8½ inches, top inside measure). Grease tops. Cover. Let rise in a warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk — about 45 minutes. Bake in a hot oven (400°F.) 40 to 45 minutes, covering the bread with a sheet of brown paper if it darkens too quickly.

Modern chemicals kill dreaded Poison Ivy

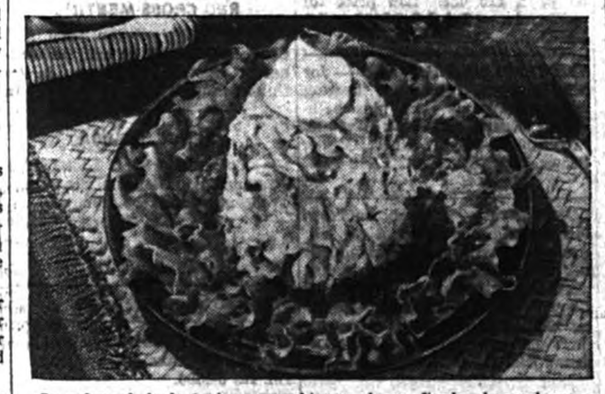

Each year, hundreds of holidays are marred by an innocent looking three-leafed plant — poison ivy. Some people can touch this pesky weed without any ill effects but for others, even a whiff of the fumes from broken or burning plants will cause the itchy blisters to appear.

It is relatively easy to rid an area of this dreaded plant with modern chemicals. Three which do an effective job are Chipman poison ivy and brush killer, atlacide and amino triazole. All three are used as a spray but care should be taken that none of the chemical gets on trees, plants or shrubs for it will destroy them along with the poison ivy plant. It may take two treatments to remove the weed, so check it two to three weeks after the first spraying. If there are still some parts of the plant thriving, spot-treat them with another spraying. Never burn the weed, because particularly sensitive people may be affected by the volatile oil in the smoke.

Though poison ivy doesn't grow in cultivated areas, it often thrives in the woods around summer cottages and picnic grounds — just where people congregate. It is wise to inspect the areas thoroughly before children and pets begin exploring. Even the family dog or cat can carry enough sap on its hair to contaminate a sensitive person.

Poison ivy plays no favorites. Young and old alike are affected by its sap. If someone does come in contact with it, the exposed area should be washed immediately with a strong soap solution. However, if watery blisters are the first indication of contact, bathe the affected part with a solution of bicarbonate of soda and avoid rubbing as the blisters will spread to other areas. Don't use powders which will form a crust and cause further irritation.

Salmon for summertime

Crunchy salads featuring canned salmon reach a new high in appetite appeal when temperature and humidity soar. They are refreshing just to look at, to say nothing of their light yet staying qualities, so essential in hot weather fare. Here's a salmon salad with a new twist. The rich-tasting fish is set off with crunchy celery, cooling chopped cucumber and—crisp little bits of mild, raw cauliflower. This unique addition adds a delicate and different flavor touch. A dressing blended from creamy mayonnaise, tangy French dressing and lemon juice helps lift these Simple Salmon Molds into the specialty class.

Simple Salmon Molds

1 Cup flaked, drained canned salmon, ¼ cup finely chopped cucumber, ¼ cup thinly sliced celery, enough raw flowerets of cauliflower to measure ¼ cup when broken up, 1 tablespoon minced onion, ½ cup thick mayonnaise, 3 tablespoons French dressing, 2 teaspoons lemon juice, salt and papper.

All ingredients should be thoroughly chilled. Lightly combine salmon with vegetables. Blend together mayonnaise, French dressing and lemon juice. Lightly toss with salmon mixture. Season to taste with salt and pepper. To shape, pack salad mixture into four custard cups. Unmold on lettuce leaves and top with additional mayonnaise. Makes 4 servings.

When she married Gerard Deschamps in 1947, she had no idea she would be "mothering" 15,000 bees. She was so terrified of bees it took her a year to get used to them. She says conquering fear of bees in the most important step in the life of a bee handler since the bees instinctively sense the fear.

The Deschamps' 300 hives are in five locations within a five-mile radius of their home. Last summer, some of the hives were taken to the Lake St. John district for 15 days to take advantage of the excellent clover crop there.

When Mrs. Deschamps drives to market in Montreal three times a week, it's not to buy goods but to sell honey. She also helps at the processing workshop attached to the house, keeps house and looks after her five young sons.

Bee Stings

While on the subject of bees, the Health League of Canada warns that stings from wasps and bees can be severe. The League recommends immediate application of a cold paste of baking soda, which it says is time-honored and effective. Actually, most bites do not need treatment, says the League.

In a Hurry

For those days when housewives seem pressed for time, eggs can be prepared quickly and easily.

Here are a few simple ideas.

Broiled Eggs Au Gratin: Fry eggs in skillet on top of range just until white begins to set. Sprinkle with grated cheese and place under broiler until done as desired.

Baked Eggs and Hash: Spread canned corned beef hash in baking pan. Make "wells" in hash. Drop eggs in "wells". Bake in slow oven about 15 minutes.

Farmers — Attention

WANTED: A limited number of farmers to set out a commercial block of Red Raspberries for shipping to Montreal and Ottawa wholesale trade. Production is not keeping pace with the demand in these two fast-growing cities.

HOGLE NURSERY COMPANY LIMITED, a well known Eastern authority on raspberry culture and marketing, is sending a trained representative to personally interview interested farmers.

Bookings can only be made for FALL PLANTING limited to one acre. 3-year plant guarantee. Unusual repayment plan. Head office cultural and marketing service.

This is a rare opportunity for financial gain. Whether for local or big city market, few cash crops can equal the revenue for an acre of raspberries. Life expectancy 8 to 10 years.

If genuinely interested in berry growing write Box 400, Campbellford, Ont., on or before September 3, giving the location of your farm. Our specialist will call and describe the business in detail. Late replies cannot be handled this year.
