Car somersaults at Upper Lachute

Thomas G. Norkett, a Main Street resident, escaped serious injury on the new section of Route 41, near the Bourbonniere settlement several miles east of Lachute, when the 1960-model car he was driving swerved out of control after he passed a truck. The car overturned after narrowly missing a roadside pole. The driver was alone in the accident, which was investigated by Traffic Officer Gilles Lavigne. — Photo, Syd Drew

Seized automobile loaded with Ontario cigarettes

An arrest was made last week by Provincial Police Officer Gilles Lavigne together with Maurice Pouliot and Albert Gilbert, of the tobacco tax investigation staff, when a Carillon resident was apprehended on the Perley interprovincial bridge while transporting cigarettes which did not bear the red provincial tax mark required by regulations.

The officers seized a 1957 Oldsmobile convertible car containing 70,000 cigarettes of different brands, and proceedings are being taken against the owner-driver, for illegal trafficking in contravention of the Quebec tobacco tax.

C.I.P. Field Day, presentation of woods management awards

Harrington, Que. — Winners of the 1960 Woodlot Management Contest, sponsored by the Grenville Division of Canadian International Paper Company, were presented with certificates and cash prizes during the annual field day for tree farmers at the Harrington Forest Farm.

First prize and a cheque for $200 went to Charles Maisonneuve, a tree farmer from St. Philippe d'Argenteuil; second prize and $100 was won by R. L. Tomalty, a Brownsburg tree farmer; and third prize, with a cheque for $50, went to Montreal City Councillor E. T. Asselin, who owns and operates a tree farm at Choisy, Que.

The contest was open to all certified tree farm owners in the Province of Quebec within a 50-mile radius of Grenville. Performance was judged on: (a) improvement work, including selective cutting or thinning, reforestation, drainage, road construction and fencing; (b) forest protection from grazing, from insects and disease, from fire, erosion and rodents; and (c) making best use of all merchantable parts of a tree.

More than 100 visitors toured the C.I.P. forest farm and were brought up to date on the latest developments in forest research and woodlot management practices. Company president Vernon E. E. Johnson welcomed the guests and accompanied them on the tour.

In the farm's 10-acre nursery, the tree farmers were shown jack pine and white spruce seedlings which will be ready for planting in the spring of 1961. This year, more than 150,000 red pine seedlings were made available at cost to local tree farmers for reforestation. It is expected the number next year will rise to 1,500,000.

The group were also shown plantations of Norway spruce, Japanese larch, red pine and white spruce in various stages of development. Uses of fertilizer and insecticide in these areas were explained by farm superintendent Jaap Salm.

Grenville Division manager M. R. Wilson demonstrated the operation of mechanical tree planters, one of which can plant 985 seedlings in one hour. Newly developed hand tools were also shown.

An explanation of the principles involved in calculating the board foot volume of sawlogs was given by division forester G. D. Morrison, following which the tree farmers had an opportunity to scale logs and study wood piling methods. Fire fighting pumps, suitable for home and woodlot protection, were also demonstrated.

The Quebec branch of the Canadian Tree Farmers' Association held a special meeting in the farm's administrative building and discussed application of the developments viewed during the tour. Branch president Stuart Armstrong then announced the certification of nine new tree farms.

Lady resident dies, four seriously hurt as car hits culvert

Mrs. Gerry Collins, a well-known County resident, was instantly killed on Friday morning, July 22, when the car she was driving swerved out of control on a curve on Route 31, in front of the George McGibbon farm property. On leaving the road, the foreign-make car struck a concrete culvert after plunging into a 6-foot ditch. The vehicle was demolished.

Accompanying the 48-year-old Pine Hill resident was her sister-in-law, Mrs. Onil Gagné, 45, also of Pine Hill, and the latter's three children, Jean Guy, 9, Jean Marie, 6½, and Normand, 3½, all of whom sustained serious injuries.

Mrs. Gagné and her children were rushed by ambulance to the Royal Victoria Hospital, the two younger children being admitted to the Neurological Institute. The victims are still in hospital, two of the children being reported still in a serious condition.

Dr. F. Walter FitzGerald, Lachute, and Dr. Gerald Daigle, Brownsburg, hastened to the scene. The accident was investigated by Sgt.-Det. Ralph Allen, Traffic Sergeant Albert Legault and Officer Bert Keille, assisted by several off-duty officers. No inquest will be held, the death being ruled accidental.

Warning given on juveniles using firearms

Sgt.-Det. Ralph Allen reports the seizing of several .22 calibre rifles, owned and being carelessly used by juveniles. Complaints have come from Pte.-au-Chene and Upper Lachute, and following the investigation and seizures, a report has been sent to the Attorney General's Department.

Parents are requested to keep careful watch on young children who have these dangerous weapons, and to be sure all teen-agers using the rifles know how to handle and operate them in a safe manner.

St. Philippe men winners in dist. chain saw contest

Mont Laurier, Que. —

M. Baril and L. Baril, both residents of St. Philippe d'Argenteuil, were first and second-place winners, respectively, of the chain saw cutting contest in this area, and both are eligible to compete for the Quebec championship to be held in September.

M. Baril's first time in cutting with a McCulloch D-45 saw won him the first prize — a new chain saw and $100 cash — in the regional "McCulloch of Canada Contest" held here.

As the runner-up in the contest, L. Basil won a new McCulloch D-45 chain saw.

The contest to discover the province's chain saw champion has been underway for the past two months. Preliminaries of the contest, which is restricted to the one classification of chain saw — the D-45 — were run off through co-operation of the company's dealers in various centres, and the semi-finals were held in Val D'Or, Sherbrooke, Shawinigan Falls, St. George de Beauce, Rimouski and Chicoutimi as well as in Mont Laurier.

Both M. Baril and L. Baril, along with 12 other contestants, will compete in the finals, which will be held at the Quebec Provincial Fair in Quebec City on September 4.

Monitor at new Richelieu Park

HERVE TESSIER, chief monitor at the Richelieu playground, who is sponsored in this position by the Ste. Anastasie Loisirs to supervise sports for all ages. The Richelieu parkland also provides an excellent spot for picnics, and was the scene last Sunday of the Lacordaire annual outing. The spot is much appreciated by parents whose youngsters have previously enjoyed no adequate place for summer recreation.

Rivington bridge under repairs

The Rivington bridge over the Rouge River is under reconstruction, repair work having commenced this week. Residents of the district will suffer certain inconvenience due to closing of the bridge for approximately two hours every day, from 8.30 to 10.30 a.m. The bridge will be impassable to traffic during these daily periods, which may last for a month.

Contractors on this repair job are J.-Paul Garant Ltée, of Chicoutimi, assigned by the Quebec Department of Public Works.

(Contributed)

The third 1960 exhibition of the Argenteuil Art Association was opened to the public Saturday, and will remain open daily from 2 to 5 p.m. until Sunday, August 7. The president, Mrs. Vivian Walker, welcomed those present and called upon Mr. A. G. Talbot, past-president of the Association, to introduce the guest artist, Miss Freda Pemberton Smith, of Montreal.

In his introduction Mr. Talbot referred to the earliest exhibits in 1957 and the increasingly favorable recognition which this Association was receiving, evidenced by the willingness of Montreal artists to bring their paintings to St. Andrews, for the enjoyment of residents and guests of Argenteuil County. While the guest artist had exhibited here before, this was the largest number of paintings which had been exhibited in one show, ranging from small sketches to quite large canvases. He urged those present to have a chat with Miss Pemberton Smith and discuss her paintings, as each was the complement and reflection of the other.

When entering the Council Room of the St. Andrews Town Hall a first sweeping glance at the overall collection gave a feeling of cheerful lightness and brightness, due to the brilliant key, with white as the contrasting base in which Miss Pemberton Smith works. Even the flat greys of barn interiors can be successfully interpreted into a range of brilliant colors when the proper relationship is maintained. This was exemplified in "The Hayloft", a striking example of this type of work, where the light from the high trackway door was split into various colors on each surface of the great beams it illuminated. It was as if a prism were in the opening, breaking the white light into all its beautiful components which were caught by the varying surfaces.

A second and closer look at the nearest painting was somewhat upsetting to one not familiar with this type of work, as examination revealed the coarseness of the strokes, applied with a palette-knife. The artist has proven herself a master of this technique, as the cleanness of the individual color application bears witness, with no tendency to that "messiness" and confusion of color often seen as the result of overworking the medium by this method.

From our first critical examination we step back and begin looking about us, at paintings at a greater distance; we immediately forget about the method and technique, and enjoy only the results with accumulating pleasure.

The pictures, from St. John's, Newfoundland, to Victoria, B.C., show the wide diversity of subject which has appealed to the artist.

Newfoundland is remembered by a painting of the pre-Confederation Government Building with its majestic columns, also scenes of the Avalon Peninsula and Conception Bay. A visit to Lake Memphremagog is recorded. In our nearer neighborhood are local scenes of historic interest—"The Old Forge, Cushing," in which the blacksmiths of the previous century forged the ironwork for the gates of early Carillon and Grenville canal locks; the "Old Methodist Church, Cushing," now converted into a private residence; "A Farmhouse, Cushing," a permanent record of one of the many which have been expropriated, whose past is mingled with "the Front of Chatham."

It is regrettable that this and other artists have not been delegated to do more of this work, such as permanent records of the Wanless Academy and the many historic farm houses of "The Front of Chatham," many of which have been already demolished. Viewing these local subjects, the lighting contrasts of the old buildings, and brilliantly illuminated walls against those in shadow, are particularly pleasant.

Only in a few scenes is brown the predominating color, as most of Miss Pemberton Smith's work is done in the brilliant primary or secondary colors. Brown was particularly effective in "Farmhouse Verandah," "Grain Elevators at Old Alberta" and "Indian Tepee with Little Girl." This was one of a Banff group including "Banff Indian Days" and "Three Little Indian Girls." Her interest in Indian painting was again revealed when she visited the West Coast, resulting in "Old Lady, Indian Bay Reserve," "Indian Heraldry at Alert Bay," a study of totem poles, and "Indian Fishing Cottages."

Among her larger canvases are several portraits, including "The Old Newfoundlander," a terrifically strong character revelation of that passing race of dory fishermen. The hardness of that life is clearly depicted in the tanned, lined face of her subject, his huge frame and his gnarled "salt water hands" from years of work, baiting the clammy nets.

The "Old Lady" and "The Newfoundlander" seem fitting subjects for the palette-knife method, method, where coarseness of personality and body are to be depicted, but we still do not feel that it is suitable to reflect the fine features of the beautiful young women who have been her subjects.

Easier to enjoy because of their lineal simplicity were a small group of drawings depicting females in their peculiar contorsions. Our favorite was of a young girl on toes, knees and elbows which reminded us of our neighbor doing her homework over the phone with her pal. The drawings included an attractive pastel portrait of a young teen-ager. The seeming simplicity of strokes is remarkable in these drawings.

Again a sweeping glance as we departed — again the feeling of bright cheerfulness — in the mental impression of Miss Freda Pemberton Smith's creations.

The Argenteuil Art Association is pleased to invite the public to this exhibtion, and hopes that a large number will drop in for a view of these interesting pictures.

Summer rally of Auto Club on August 21

The third annual summer rally of the Lachute Auto Club will be held this year on Sunday, August 21.

An auto Rally is a motoring event which is designed primarily as a test of navigational ability. Although many people think that a Rally is limited to sports cars, any make of car may be entered, thus emphasizing the fact that a Rally is in no sense a race.

The organizers extend an invitation to all those who may be interested. During the past two years the competition has been very keen, and a great deal of fun was enjoyed by all. The schedule of this particular Rally is considered by the organizers to be quite simple but very interesting, and no previous experience in rallying is necessary. . . . For further information please call: Bob Armstrong (LO 2-5005 or LE 3-6394), E. Berry (LO 2-5221 or LO 2-2516), P. Brosseau (LO 2-5221 or LO 2-5971).

Viewpoints in Commons on Ottawa River navigation

Ottawa — Liberal and Conservative members in the Commons recently agreed that development of the Ottawa River as a carrier of commerce should be forwarded, but the Liberals doubted whether the Government meant action.

Hon. Lionel Chevrier (L—Montreal Laurier) said the key to the navigation system would be a lock on the Carillon dam being built near Hawkesbury. His information was that it would allow for navigation only at a nine-foot depth. He denied that the key to Ottawa River navigation would be a bridge the former Quebec government was to build on the west side of the island of Montreal.

Mr. Chevrier noted that Paul Martineau (C—Pontiac-Timiskaming), Parliamentary Secretary to the Prime Minister, had advocated an Ottawa River development to allow ships of 5,000 tons to proceed at least to the Ottawa-Hull area. Mr. Chevrier said a 5,000-ton vessel would require 18 feet of draft.

Suggest Barges

Mr. Chevrier thought that the use of the Ottawa for barge traffic, such as on the Rhine, should be considered.

Mr. Martineau agreed that river traffic facilities should be developed. He noted that Transport Minister Hees had said the key to development would be the bridge at Ste. Anne de Bellevue, and the lock at Carillon had been designed so that it could be enlarged.

Mr. Chevrier claimed that alteration in the lock in the future would be highly expensive.

Mr. Martineau added that Mr. Hees had said that if the Montreal bridge is built it should be a high-level structure to allow navigation.

Mr. Martineau said he could not speak for the Government but he would like to see the Ottawa River navigation development carried out

Late Robt. McFaul was storekeeper in early business

Following a sickness of some two years spent mainly in a nursing home, an old townsman, Mr. Robert McFaul, passed away in the Montreal General Hospital on Tuesday, July 26. He was 84 years of age.

Born at Brownsburg, Mr. McFaul was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. James McFaul. The family comprised five boys and five girls — of whom Charles, of Lachute, Lizzie (Mrs. E. Wilson), of Winnipeg, Jessie (Mrs. H. Partridge), and Eva (Mrs. T. Carpenter), of Lachute, remain. James and John, of Lachute, Willie, of Ottawa, Mary (Mrs. Geo. McGregor) of Winnipeg, and Maggie (Mrs. John Scott) of Lachute, predeceased their brother.

The late Robert McFaul was married in 1909 to Miss Nellie Annett, of Gaspé, who passed away in 1948. A daughter, Helen (Mrs. R. Blakely) survives, with Mrs. McFaul (by a second marriage), the former Miss Hanna Jean McArthur of Morin Heights, to mourn his passing.

During his early days Robert had worked in Brownsburg at the store of his brothers, James and John later serving a further apprentice ship at Avonmore, Ont. Returning to this district he worked in the Carpenter Bros. Store (now the location of the Beamish Store) and became its proprietor shortly after. He had been retired for a number of years.

Funeral service was held on Thursday, conducted by the Rev. Jas. Armour.

Camp lifeguard is victim of lake fatality

Gordon Rose, a 17-year-old Ville St. Michel resident and a swimming monitor at Camp Louis (on Lake Ste. Marie, near St. Adolphe d'Howard) succumbed to injuries received while swimming July 24.

The victim and other swimming monitors were making a practice sweep of the swimming area of the camp, following the afternoon swim. All the regular swimmers and camp members had been accounted for, and the practice search was being carried out under the waterfront director.

The victim is reported to have duck-dived under the edge of the wharf and apparently misjudged his distance, striking the bottom of the structure. He was seen standing on the bottom of the lake by his buddy, another monitor, who immediately sounded the alarm for assistance when he spotted him in the same position a moment later.

The experienced life-saving crew, of which the victim was a member, immediately commenced mouth-to-mouth respiration and the victim, attended by a doctor within moments of the accident, was being treated in hospital within 30 minutes. He died a short time later.

Sgt.-Det. Ralph Allen investigated the incident, accompanied by District Coroner Dr. Jules Lafleur, who gave a verdict of accidental death due to drowning or to head injuries received while swimming.

Judging team among winners, Montreal district

Ronald Bain and Lloyd Elder, of the Lachute 4-H Calf Club, were among top winners in the Montreal District Judging Competition, held last Thursday at Macdonald College. Six top judges were selected to go to Sherbrooke during the last week of August to take part in the Provincial Competition. Ronald Bain placed second with a total of 492 points out of 650. Lloyd Elder placed sixth with 478 points.

Twenty-four contestants from the counties around Montreal took part in judging a class of Ayrshire cows, Holstein cows and Holstein heifers, as well as a written examination on general agriculture.

The boys are to be congratulated for their fine work, and will now be trained for Sherbrooke in judging Jersey and Canadian cattle, as well as Ayrshire and Holstein.

Local textile student is winner of scholarship in study course

Two first-year students from the Textile Institute of the Province of Quebec, St. Hyacinthe, have been awarded scholarships totalling $10,000 by Dominion Textile Company Limited.

Gilles Girouard, of Montreal, and Yves Sanche, of Lachute, receive the grants for being top students in the first-year class. The scholarships, worth $5,000 to each student for the remaining three years of both courses at the Institute, were first presented in 1959.

Yves Sanche, Lachute

One scholarship is awarded for the year's work in preparation for cotton manufacturing studies, and the other for the Institute's chemistry and dyeing course. Girouard and Sanche are currently engaged on summer work at Montreal Cottons Ltd., Valleyfield, a subsidiary of Dominion Textiles.

The company also announces the establishment of a third scholarship, to be awarded next year to a student completing his first full year of cotton manufacturing.

Over the past 15 years, Dominion Textile Company has awarded more than 100 scholarships to the only two textile training schools in Canada, the Textile Institute of the Province of Quebec, and the Hamilton Institute of Technology, Hamilton, Ont. These grants have cost the company well over half a million dollars.

Vacationers urged to advise police

Local residents leaving town on their holidays are asked to contact the municipal police and inform them of their departure, leaving their name, address, time of leaving and time of probable return. Chief A. J. Whiteway reports that all such houses will be checked daily as an additional service.

It is also recommended that all deliveries of bread, milk, newspapers, etc., be stopped prior to commencing vacations.

Resident found in river at St. Andrews East

The body of David Morrison, 82, a long-time resident of St. Andrews East, was discovered floating in the North River a short distance from his home on the Golf Club Road, shortly after 7.30 a.m. Tuesday, about 20 minutes after he left the house for his regular pre-breakfast walk.

According to Sgt.-Det. Ralph Allen, who investigated, Mr. Morrison arose around 7 a.m. and left the house some 15 minutes later. Det. Allen reports following the man's footprints to the river's edge where the evidence indicates he suffered a heart attack and fell into the water. He was found floating on the surface a short distance from his last footprint.

Mr. Morrison the previous evening had complained of indigestion. He has been treated for a heart condition for approximately a year.

Argenteuil Outdoors

— By BOB ATCHISON —

Some very good Bass fishing is going on in Lake Louisa, and this goes for all types of fishing. I have heard of some fine catches on fly rods using Bass Bugs and poppers. Not too many of the spin fishermen have tried this method of catching Bass; it's well worth while. If you do try this, give the poppers a lot of time on the water. Try putting the poppers in close to weed beds or lily pads. Let it rest on the water awhile before starting your retrieve. Keep the popper on top of the water, and in this way you have to reel very slowly. It is a slow and very exciting form of fishing, so try it.

By the way, if you want to make some poppers yourself, get some corks, not too big, shave a piece off one end, making a slant, then slit from the head or slanted part to the other end. Place a long shank hook in this slit, bind the cork either with thread or very light copper wire, paint it any color you fancy, and there you are.

Just because the Trout have stopped hitting, is no reason to stop fishing. Perch are being very considerate, along with the Bass, so there is no reason for suspending activities. Along with these, the odd big Northern still pops up; although not so good eating just at present, they still present a challenge in landing them.

Still on the subject of fishing, what is happening to the minnow ban? Also how about our wardens. Could be they are having a vacation for awhile? It sure doesn't take any Sherlock Holmes to detect infractions in the fish and game laws every day on some of our lakes. It does seem strange that these laws are for our benefit, and not for the Government's. It's just a certain few that don't use what little brains they have. Every one suffers because of this, and the sooner something is done about it, the better.

I have been trying to give you a rundown on the loons around lake Hughes. I'm sorry to say that only six young are with the parent bird now. What has happened to the others I don't know; my guess would be some of them have been hit by hawks, and by 22's in the hands of youngsters. Even young rabbits are taking it in the neck. The funny part of it is, the parents don't seem to bother about anything like this. Even the cats brought up with some of these families are just left to run wild. I suppose by the end of summer they will be too wild to catch. Not that I dislike cats, but the damage they do to the wildlife is terrific.

This is something I'll get a kick out of writing. To begin with, I have been telling you that Grey's could and do get caught on flies. Up to the present no one seemed to take much stock in this. The reason I think was the amount of deep trolling being done in this area. . . . Well, Saturday night one of the new fly men was around to give us an account of his first week's vacation and the fishing. This enthusiast has just been at the fly fishing since the spring and has had marked success with it. The past week however, everything seemed to be in his favor. Trout started the week. Red's were the best; on Tuesday afternoon he hooked and landed his first Grey. This was taken on a Special, patterned along the lines of the Memphramagog Smelt with a couple of variations. Later on in the evening a couple more were hooked, but were not boated. The following day, Bass took the spotlight in a big way. As a matter of fact (A couple of these fish were brought to us for eating.) The same evening another good Grey was taken, over 3 lbs.; this one was taken on the same type of fly, but an evening version.

All week the Greys have been taking the flies, and from now on this man is a confirmed fly fisherman. We all know that fishing is starting the right way. By the right way, I mean, one is willing to learn and profit by his or her experiences. But it still is fly fishing as far as a lot of people are concerned, and as far as I know more and more are getting into this field for the sport and not for the bag.

While on this type of fishing I was just told of another instance, 35 keeper Perch all taken on flies. In this case dozens were caught, but only the ones fit for eating were kept. This is very gratifying to me, as I have told you all so often that these fish could be taken on flies, with a much better chance of getting big ones than with any other type of bait. All I'm waiting for now, is for one of these fishermen to pursue this sport on the North River. Sooner or later they are going to tangle up with a big one, and that will be that!

For some of my readers, it is true the River is pretty dirty just at present, that is, on the top. Underneath however, it is clan. Of course you won't believe this. One big reason for the surface dirt is the motor boats. With the river being so narrow, and these boats all trying to pass each other (just like a highway), they naturally kick up a lot of rollers. These wash into shore, stirring up the mud, and plenty of it. As a thought, after last Monday, I sure wouldn't be surprised to see the R.C.M.P. up around this way. There are just as many stupid boatmen as road drivers. (Maybe more, for the number of boats.)

This may be a surprise to most residents, but the number of people who have been in this district asking for camping accommodations has been considerable. These were not just our Quebec residents, but from the U.S. and other provinces in Canada. There are a few of these campers around right now, but doesn't it seem a pity that actually there is not a decent camping ground in the whole of the County. By decent, I mean a place that is cleared, clean, with water near at hand, and the most important, approved toilet facilities. At some time or other most of us have seen a properly outfitted camping area. When you stop and think of the cost to provide a couple of these, and the revenue that could be gained from them, it's surprising it has not been done. Take a good look at any town or village that has camping accommodation — take a look at the economy of the same communities and the initiative of its citizens — then wonder why we can't do it.

Molson golf tournament at St. Andrews

FARM HAVEN

Rockburn, Que. (CP) — Dr. Allan S. Reid, 83, retired clerk of the Presbyterian synod of Montreal and Ottawa, operates a farm in this Eastern Townships community.

Quebec livestock industry depends on soil fertility

Mont Gabriel — If the livestock industry in this province is to increase and prosper, Quebec farmers must increase the fertility of their soils — Pierre Labrecque told the annual conference of Quebec Fertilizers Inc., here recently.

Mr. Labrecque, who is director of the animal husbandry division of the Quebec Department of Agriculture, said that while agriculture in the province is based on livestock production, which is the principal source of our farm income, there is insufficient good forage to feed any more cattle because of the poor condition of most of our soil and "very little is being done to improve it."

Lime, to neutralize acid soils, and commercial fertilizers, to increase the fertility, he said, are almost unknown on some farms. Even if they are used occasionally, amounts are so small the effects cannot possibly be anything but very limited.

"We are accustomed to estimate the efficiency of farms in the Province of Quebec by the number of acres required to feed one unit of livestock," Mr. Labrecque said. "On these terms the number of units which can be kept on a farm depends on the amount of hay and pasture available. But it's not the quantity of hay we are worried about, but the quality, and Quebec hay does not measure up to expectations. Liming and fertilization will improve both quality and yield."

Describing tests conducted at Lennoxville, Que., the speaker said one experiment with dairy cattle showed a profit of $6.52 for every dollar spent on fertilizer. A second experiment with beef cattle realized a net profit return of $4.36 for every fertilizer dollar.

"Any business would consider this a good investment," he concluded.

Guy Gubbay, chairman of the agronomic committee, reported that Q.F.I. started off in 1959 with only 39 pasture demonstration plots and at the beginning of June of this year the association had 101 under its supervision. Fertilized plots, he said, showed an average return of $3.16 in increased milk production for each dollar spent on fertilizer and the average revenue per arpent of fertilized pasture was $147.04 against $96.08 from non-fertilized check plots.

Events enjoyed by lady golfers at local club

Although a full report on the new Lachute 18-hole golf course will be made upon its official opening, we would like to mention that the adventurers who played the nine holes opened to members last week-end, came back captivated by the infinite challenge offered, and delighted with the velvety texture of the rolling greens.

While playing these nine holes, the remoteness of the rest of the world is an almost overpowering sensation. It seems rather incredible that this ever enjoyable and frustrating sport can be played in surroundings so close to nature in its pristine purity.

July 14 — Compliments to Mrs. Richard Stevens and her committee whose good planning played a major role in the success of the CLGU Field Day held in Lachute.

Out of 110 entries the following Lachute members were among the winners: Third place was shared by Mrs. Paul Lefebvre and two visiting players with 100 low gross. Mrs. John Jelinek, who carded 73 net, was a low-net winner; while Mrs. Ruth Wiseman won a special gross prize for players with a 31-36 handicap.

July 18-22 — The Women's Provincial Golf Championship matches were held at Marlborough. The prerequisite to enter this week-long event was a 0-25 handicap.

Lachute members who distinguished themselves in this competition were Miss Janet Young in the Championship Consolation Flight, and Mrs. Richard Stevens in the Consolation Silver Division. Mrs. Gilbert Ayers was runner-up in the Bronze Championship Consolation. On the third day, while playing in the Silver Division First Flight, Miss Ann FitzGerald caused an upset by tallying a trim 93 thereby defeating her 12-handicap Islesmere partner.

Other Lachute participants were Miss Barbara Brown, Miss Fleur-Ange Carriere and Mrs. Howard Watson.

July 21 — The eight ladies who played in Cornwall's yearly Invitation Tournament had an excellent day.

The group was composed of three Montreal members — Mrs. Jim Neil, Miss Barbara Brown, Miss Janet Young; and five local members — Mrs. Norma Rodger, Mrs. Roy Fraser, Mrs. Paul Lefebvre, Mrs. Wm. Cottingham and Miss Hanna Smith.

Miss Janet Young won low gross, while Mrs. Roy Fraser won low net. Champion of the putting competition was Mrs. Wm. Cottingham.

It is gratifying to note that some of the club's Montreal members were able to attend this event.

July 29 — Whitlock came through with flying colors in the 18-hole PQGA Mixed Foursome hosted by Lachute.

Smelled a Rat

Mr. Chevrier said that he had "smelled a rat" about the proposal for a bridge at Montreal and now felt his doubts justified in that there appeared to be no plans or specifications for that structure.

Mr. Walker said the clearance for the bridge would be about the same or higher than for the railway bridges downstream on which no modifications were proposed at present. On the Carillon lock, vessels up to 14 feet would be accommodated without major expense when the need arose.

Mr. Chevrier said it therefore was clear that 14-foot navigation vessels could not pass under the CNR and CPR bridges at Montreal.

Mr. Walker said the important point was that vessels drawing up to 14 feet could be handled without major expense when the need arises.

Olympic funds

ABOUT THE middle of August a 99-member team of athletes will leave for Rome to represent Canada in the Olympic Games.

If past performance is any indication, the Canadians will probably not win many medals. But they'll give their best efforts and perhaps will personify the Olympic ideal as stated by the founder of the modern Games, Baron Pierre de Coubertin, who said:

"The important thing in the Olympic Games is not to win, but to take part. The important thing in life is not the triumph, but the struggle. The essential thing is not to have conquered but to have fought well."

The point seems to be that if the Olympics are worthwhile for their contribution to athletic development and to good relations between nations, then they are worth supporting.

But there is plenty of evidence that most Canadians don't care enough to dig into their pockets for a few dollars to help send a group of youthful representatives to join with athletes of many countries in one of the world's great sporting events.

At last report the Canadian Olympic Association was $36,000 short of its objective of $211,000 to pay for sending teams to last winter's Games at Squaw Valley, Calif., and the summer Olympics in Italy.

Only two provinces — British Columbia and Saskatchewan — had reached their objectives. Nothing at all had come from Prince Edward Island.

The federal government had contributed $60,000 of the $176,000 raised up to the end of June.

But the public — and that includes cities, towns, business corporations and service groups — seems to have largely ignored the appeal for money.

If, as it turns out, the Canadians do not distinguish themselves in a field that includes such sports-minded countries as the United States, Soviet Union and Australia, there are likely to be howls of derision from many people in this country.

But wouldn't it seem hypocritical to be a critic of Canada's performance if you weren't one of those who helped at least in a small way to get the team to Rome?

Anyone can be a real team supporter for just a dollar or two, and, once having given financial support to the athletes, you can criticize to your heart's content with a clear conscience.

Freight riddle

FREIGHT RATES have a dry-as-dust ring. They sound abstract and amorphous — a massive, passive catalogue of tariffs for moving goods in Canada.

Yet these dull, unglamorous freight rates wield a mighty power over Canada's economy. They influence who sells what and where. They often open or shut doors to industries seeking new markets or new communities in which to set up shop. They have a tremendous impact on the various regions of the country, notably the Prairies and the Maritimes.

And like almost everything else, they always seem to be going up.

In the last 12 years or so, they've risen 157 per cent. The last increase — a 17 per cent boost in 1958 — sparked such a storm of protest, from every province except Ontario and Quebec, that the government set up a royal commission to look at freight rates and what they mean to the railways and to Canada as a whole.

It's a far-reaching investigation. There are so many ramifications, so many factors — economic, political, historical, geographical — that the commissioners are still at the job more than a year after being appointed.

And the chances are they'll still be at it early next year, despite strong pressure from the federal government to finish the job quickly. The commissioners have made it clear they intend to make a thorough study; to try, if possible, to produce a report that will serve as a long-time guide for Canada.

Yet the commission is often stymied by the simple self-interest of individual industries and regions.

Somewhere in this riddle, the commissioners hope to uncover an answer that satisfies most of the people most of the time, a compromise that keeps the railways healthy and yet eases the burden of further rate increases on the hard-hit regions.

The answer is expected to include somewhere a proposal for government help — either to the railways or to the shippers themselves.

World Refugee Year

IT DOESN'T TAKE much imagination to realize how much misery and despair must have been bred among thousands of homeless people confined to European refugee camps for more than a dacade.

These unfortunate victims of the Second World War must often have been on the verge of giving up all hope that they would ever have a real home again. Who could blame them if they concluded that the rest of the world had forgotten them?

But then the idea of World Refugee Year was born and the people of many nations got together in a great effort to raise the money necessary to clear these camps and resettle their unhappy inhabitants.

Sponsored by the United Nations, WRY officially came to an end June 30. But while many millions of dollars have been raised in this and other countries, the fund-raising program has not yet reached its objective.

Canadians have contributed almost enough money to close 11 of the camps in Europe and also to build a vocational training centre for Arab refugees in the Middle East.

Those Canadians who have contributed to this worthwhile program have reason for satisfaction. The money will go to give a fresh start in life for more than 1,200 refugees.

The federal government has sponsored a special program to bring another 800 tubercular refugees to Canada with their families.

But have we done enough? The WRY program in this country is still almost $1,400,000 short of its goal and the fund-raising drive is being continued here and abroad until this fall.

For a wealthy nation that will soon have a population of 18,000,000, this amount doesn't seem like a great deal. It would take less than a dime from each one of us to realize the figure.

Governor-General Georges Vanier summed it up in a recent speech marking the termination of World Refugee Year when he said:

"I think the fact that many thousands of us have been made deeply aware, for the very first time, of the desperate plight of so many refugees, will probably stand out as the greatest single contribution of the various Canadian committees for World Refugee Year.

"Unfortunately, no one year of effort can hope to solve all of the world's refugee problems. Much still needs to be done. But I am confident that the new spirit and the new interest . . . will make us eager to go on giving generously to those agencies who will continue their wonderful work on behalf of refugees."

UP THE LADDER BEHIND THE COUNTER. — Here's a note for the kids who have finished school and are looking around for their first job, comments The Financial Post.

The Canadian Retail Federation is launching a drive to expand training facilities for retail salesmen and saleswomen — and it's out to change the public image of retailing as a career that leads nowhere.

It's time, indeed, that it did both. For too long the customer has had to bear the tactless and unaccommodating salesclerk. Sloppy dealings over the counter have been frustrating both the retailer and the public for years.

But the truth about retailing is this: It's one of the places where employment is growing fastest; it is one of the places where there is now reasonably rapid advancement and very satisfying careers for ambitious young people.

Now that the industry has recognized that it has a problem, it's half-way to solving it. If it does spend a lot more money on training it will be obvious both to the public and to the promising youngsters that this, indeed, is a career to go after.

HOW MANY UNEMPLOYED?

The unemployment picture is a deceptive one.

For example, a married woman, whose husband may be making from $5,000 to $9,000 a year, can be classed as "unemployed" if she is temporarily out of a job because her husband was transferred and she had to resign her own position to move with him. Fishermen, and other seasonal workers, are now classed as unemployed when they register for unemployment insurance at the end of a season in which they might have earned $5,000.

It seems obvious that the present unemployment situation is not much different to that which existed some fifteen years ago — in the so-called boom times. It appears worse only because a change in rules has made more men and women eligible for unemployment insurance.

However, although not nearly as black as it is painted, unemployment worries us all. Strangely enough, the thing that may help us lick it is automation. Labor Minister Mike Starr has pointed out that automation might help us cut costs enough to price ourselves back into the foreign markets we have been losing.

I can see where automation would help, but not unless we take other means to reduce costs. Machines are not entirely self-operating. The men who operate them must be productive too, and do everything in their power to get the most out of them. Workers who do not understand our foreign difficulties are not always inclined to welcome automation and make it work. Governments, too, have a responsibility to help industry price itself back into foreign markets. Practically every cent governments spend is eventually added into the cost of goods and services that Canadians sell. For example, an Englishman who buys a car from Canada must pay his share of our government spending, because a portion of that spending is added to the cost, in wages, overhead, etc., etc. The same applies to our farm produce — to every single thing we sell. It is clearly impossible for us to maintain a high-cost economy without also having high-cost products . . . and thus losing out in the markets of the world.

Yet some of the people who deplore unemployment most loudly are the first to call for government measures sure to create more unemployment.

A lift, a crutch

By C. L. Harris

That it may start out as a temporary lift and end up as a permanent crutch is one of the problems of welfare spending. This is becoming a matter of concern in metropolitan Toronto, where it is reported that local sources are now putting up $33 million a year to aid the needy — $23 million through municipal taxation plus $10 million through Red Feather and other private agencies.

As a case in point welfare workers tell of a man named Harry, who was a garbage collector until he fell off a truck and broke an ankle ten years ago. For a while workman's compensation supported the family. Later several private agencies took their turns. For some years the city has had to provide a regular welfare cheque. Harry has had many jobs, but never for long, and he has spent about as much time in drunk court as on a job. Two days after the welfare cheque for the month of May had been mailed, a case worker found Harry in bed with a hangover, his wife in bed really ill, and not a cent left for food for the eight children. Welfare agencies estimate that to date this family has cost the municipality $40,000 and that the final bill may be $100,000. Nor, apparently, is Harry's an extreme case; some families have been drawing welfare payments through three generations.

No one begrudges help to the helpless but, perhaps because there is so much of it, financial handouts from government seem now to be regarded as a matter of right. Very much out of fashion is the idea that all are better off if each looks after his own.

Today I have been going around with my head tilted sideways, listing to starboard as though boring into a gale.

Yes, I have a stiff neck — the silliest of all the minor ailments.

But a victim of stiff neck isn't ill, and he has no excuse to hide. He has to move among people and answer questions.

He is forced to listen with a show of politeness to theories about the causes of stiff necks. Did he twist his spine in a knot by swivelling back and forth to look at girls in summer dresses? That is the usual level of medical knowledge, among the people who diagnose his case.

Sometimes people lean sideways in sympathy, without realizing what they are doing. So the man with the stiff neck may find himself in a clump of people who are all bent like pines on a windy ridge.

Straighten Him Out

The man with the stiff neck is forced to acknowledge that yes, there is a lot of it around, and he is sorry to hear about the kink in your uncle's backbone, which was so bad that they had to straighten him out with a sledgehammer.

The patient moves in puppet-like fashion. To listen or to ogle, he must swing his whole torso, head and shoulders together, as though he were welded in one piece.

Very tired of viewing the world from a slant, he cranks his way home at last and lies down, only to find that there is no such thing as a comfortable position.

Finally he drifts into an edgy sleep, in which he dreams that he is in the hands of lynch mob of mingled Russians, Cubans and Americans, who are stringing him up from the framework of an oil rig.

Who named Insulin?

Insulin was named by its discoverers, Frederick G. Banting and Charles H. Best, who were working under the direction of J. J. R. MacLeod in Toronto when they isolated the substance in 1921. Insulin is one of the class of substances called hormones, which have the function of exciting action in some organ of the body. In 1922 J. B. Collip did important work on the purification of the crude substance and insulin quickly came into general use in the treatment of diabetes. It is produced from the pancreas of cattle.

The Earth Abideth Forever
— Eccl. 1 : 4

You may survive Armageddon into God's New World

"Then there will be great tribulation such as has not occurred since the world's beginning until now, no, nor will occur again." With those words Jesus foretold the greatest of trouble ever to hit the earth — the universal war of Armageddon. (Matt. 24: 21). Who will survive? Not many. All the nations will be destroyed in this fiery outpouring of God's wrath. With over two billion dead, "the slain of Jehovah shall be at that day from one end of the earth even unto the other end of the earth; they shall not be lamented, neither gathered, nor buried; they shall be dung upon the face of the ground." (Jer. 25: 32, 33). The death toll will be so all-surpassing that there will be too many bodies for the survivors to bury.

But will there then be nothing to survive for? No indeed. The destruction of this evil, demon-controlled world, together with its god Satan the Devil, will not leave a vacuum. It will be replaced by a new world of righteousness, and the earth will become a paradise. For that new world God will preserve survivors. There is no need to die. Would you like to know how you may survive "the war of the great day of God the Almighty" that will come upon this generation? The 384-page book "You May Survive Armageddon into God's New Yorld" answers. The book is sent on a 50c contribution.

Write: Watchtower, 150 Bridgeland Ave., Toronto 19, or ask any Jehovah's Witness you may happen to meet, anywhere.

Harrington Glen accident victim laid to rest

The Late Earl Tomalty

Arundel — Not only his family but the whole community suffered a sense of deep grief in the sudden and tragic death by drowning, on July 16, of Mr. Earl Tomalty, of The Glen of Harrington — as the great number of mourners at his funeral testified.

The funeral was held July 18 from the Church of St. John the Divine, with the Rev. C. R. Lang of Lachute officiating, in the absence of the Rev. Frank Bussell; the remains were interred in The Glen cemetery. The pall-bearers were — Messrs. Russell Tomalty, Bill Davis, Tyrone Courte, Edgar Williams, Jack Flood and Albert Flood, Jr.

Earl, the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Tomalty, was born at Pine Hill, in 1911, and moved to The Glen with his parents in 1913. In 1937 he married Margaret F. Thompson, of Weir, and they have two children, Ruth, aged 20, and Bruce, 15. Also left to mourn are his parents, four brothers, Basil, Leonard, Charlie and Jimmie; and one sister, Pearl (Mrs. Chas. Davis); also Miss Maggie Burns. Mr. and Mrs. Tomalty were married from the home of Miss Burns and her now-deceased brother, Tom, with whom the bride had lived for eight years and with whom Mr. and Mrs. Tomalty have resided ever since.

— What is said of a man after he is dead, is usually an indication of his character; of Earl Tomalty, his neighbors say, "His hand was against no man, and no man's hand was against him; he was a good friend."

Local resident dies suddenly

She leaves to mourn her passing one son, Lyster, daughter-in-law, Jean, and two grandchildren, of Montreal.

The service was conducted by the Rev. Wilson Bridge, with burial at Montreal Memorial Park. The pall-bearers were Messrs. Gordon Conley, Murray Lyster, Walter Lyster, Gilbert Kirkpatrick, nephews of the deceased, and two former neighbors, Messrs. Willis Hodge and Lawrence Silverson.

DRUG ADDICTION

Ottawa (CP) — A maximum life sentence — perhaps even for first offences — is the federal government's idea of a punishment to fit the crime of narcotics trafficking.

Justice Minister Fulton said cabinet approval has been given for such a sentence in the Justice Department's preparation of a new approach to narcotics addiction.

The statement was made as the Commons studied the justice department estimates. The perusal will continue later.

(Copyright)

— By NANCY CLEAVER —

"I want my child to be a guest, not a pest!" one poor mother exclaimed.

"But I've decided that visiting with a pre-school youngster is too much of a trial on my relatives, on my child and on me too. I think I'll wait for him to go visiting until he is older!"

If relatives are understanding, if they like children, it is possible to have a happy visit, but it should be of a definite duration, and preferably a short one. It is always wise to leave when one's host and hostess are sorry to say "good-bye!"

A child's schedule should be observed as far as eating, sleeping and play go, but details can be a bit flexible while visiting. If an aunt or uncle or older friend offer to take a child for a walk, or to visit a park or playground, do accept the offer. A child and an adult who are attracted to each other can have a grand time on 'a spree.' Don't worry about your child's actions — he will likely be on his best behaviour when your watchful eyes are no longer observing his conduct!"

It is a real adventure when a boy or girl is old enough to go on a visit all alone. An older child may be a bit homesick. But learning to be happy away from home is a valuable experience in the long slow process of growing up — of learning to stand on one's own feet.

One small girl, who for her age was a particularly nice guest, when visiting her aunt was asked if she missed her parents. She replied, "I think about them, but I don't fuss about them. Mother doesn't want me to be a 'fusser'!"

A child on a visit should be encouraged to be a considerate and appreciative guest, fitting in with the family's plans and causing as little trouble as possible. Visitors should be on time for meals and should eat what they are served. They should be thoughtful in using the bathroom, the phone and the radio. Their host and hostess will look to them to join in the conversation without arguing too much or talking all the time.

A boy or girl learns the art of being a good guest — one who is asked back — by having the chance to put into practice his mother's and dad's good advice.

The writing of a little thank-you note or "bread and butter letter" by a visitor as soon as he has returned home, expressing appreciation to those who have entertained him, is very important. It is something every visitor who can write should do — no matter how young or old. This little courteous letter gives real pleasure to those who have gone to the trouble and expense of having a visitor in their home.

BY BOAT WITH CHAMPLAIN... over 350 Years Ago

August 1608 . . . and the rugged, sea-swept shore of "La Gaspésie" beckons Samuel de Champlain. His tiny sailing ship makes its way about the Gaspé promontory from Matane to Isle Percé . . . to grim Bonaventure Island . . . to warm Baie des Chaleurs. This summer, take a "Gaspesian" holiday . . . circle the Gaspé Coast in leisurely fashion . . . golf, fish . . . visit Percé Rock in a fishing boat . . . revel in good food (Gaspé salmon a "must") . . . good accommodation — and a good rest . . . in the peaceful, sun-lit splendour of the "Gaspé".

NOTICE — Not returning a borrowed book is akin to stealing. The owner of this book having the patience of Job (sans his boils) and, not wanting to lose faith in the weaker sex on account of the oversight (shall we say?) of one of these fair creatures, who is neglectful (to put it mildly) is still waiting. — Mac-Gibbon d'Argenteuil. 1c

The only way to make farming pay... modern methods and machines

You can't farm profitably today by using yesterday's methods and obsolete machinery. They simply don't meet the demands of modern farming . . . high productivity and low production costs.

The profit potential of your farm can only be fully realized through utilizing modern methods and the latest farm machinery. Today's farm machinery measures up to the task of doing more work faster and more efficiently. Farm labour, a major cost in the operation of any farm, is kept to a bare minimum while the amount of work done per day is greatly increased. Critical farm operations get done at exactly the right time without depending on the availability of high priced farm labour.

Massey-Ferguson machines and implements completely fill the requirements of profitable farming—more work with less manpower at lower cost.

Presbyterian manse goes travelling

This familiar residence, the manse on Court Street, was sold to Jas. Pollock, contractor, after the Protestant School Commission had made land available for its new location. The building sold for $500, and the lot (on Harriet Street north of the Curling Club) was offered for $2,500. Mr. Pollock has cleared the site to make way for the High School extension, and the manse, lifted intact from its foundations, is still in transit. Being hauled inch by inch with winches, it is headed for its new position by way of the school playground. The High School building may be seen in background. — Photo, Syd Drew

Vandalism in cemetery at St. Andrews East

Some 35 headstones were reported overturned in the St. Andrews East Protestant Cemetery, known also as The Pines, on the western limits of the village. The incident was reported to Sgt.-Det. Ralph Allen early Monday morning. According to reports, none of the headstones was broken.

Only a short distance from this scene of depredation, thieves broke into the cabin of the golf driving range, opposite the old convent now under demolition, and stole a quantity of cigarettes—which was all the contents they were interested in; the proprietor had taken the day's cash receipts. The intruders gained entry by breaking a door. Owners of this enterprise are Raoul Fournier, St. Andrews, and Marcel Décary, Carillon.

Campers emulate TV "Rifleman" — ordered to vacate

(Our District Correspondent)

Brownsburg — Television showed its effect on at least two young men recently when they set up a campsite on the Dalesville River and appeared to be attempting to live the life of the well known "Rifleman" of TV fame.

The first indication of the presence of the "gunmen" was the whine of bullets near the home of Gaston Paquette. Mr. Paquette reported the situation to Police Chief Roger Boutet, who apprehended the culprits. The two young men were warned to keep the firearms outside the town limits; they agreed readily and returned to their campsite on the river bank.

In the second episode, another landowner spotted the duo building a fire and shouted at them, asking them to be careful. Apparently the answer was the smack of a .22 bullet into the ground nearby.

Third episode — the children of another landowner visited the area of the campsite and, hiding in the bush some distance downstream, observed the actions of the two men. A whistle from one of the youngsters apparently brought forth more shots, although they were not directed at the boys.

Final episode — the father of the youngsters, in company with Police Chief Boutet and yet another landowner, visited the campsite and surprised the two campers, who were cutting down trees with an axe in one hand and a .22 calibre rifle in the other. The campsite was complete with tent, fireplace and clothesline and the campers themselves were busily engaged in building a bridge across the river. Some 20 trees had been cut down for this project.

A short discussion between the Chief and the two landowners produced a request that the campers vacate the premises. When the men asked how long they would be given to move on, the answer was "We'll wait while you pack up."

The last time the intruders were seen, they were hitchhiking towards Lachute.

Quebec petitioned to re-build two bridges over North River

Two requests to the Quebec Provincial Government arose out of last week's regular assembly of town council, under the chairmanship of Mayor Jas. W. McGibbon — the materialization of which will mean several thousand dollars to Lachute.

The first request dealt with street paving. The Union Nationale Government, prior to elections on June 22 last, had agreed to pave certain roads in the municipality. The work had been partly undertaken, but in some of the places only the preliminary grading had been started, and it was at this point that the U.N. was ousted at Quebec. The municipal corporation accordingly went ahead on its own, commissioning the contractor, H. J. O'Connell Ltd., to complete the paving. The town therefore seeks a re-emburse-ment of the expense, $20,206 from the new Liberal Government.

According to the mayor, similar works had been completed after the elections in neighboring municipalities, and it seemed only fair that Lachute should be re-imbursed.

Ald. Lauréat Laurin, with Ald. Stanley Church as seconder, sponsored the motion.

Second Request

In view of the convergence of several provincial highways here, and consequent congestion with increasing traffic, it was decided to petition the government to rebuild two bridges spanning the North River, at Millway Street (Fish's Bridge) and at Main Street (Barron's Bridge).

According to the mayor, who read a resolution prepared to this effect, Barron's Bridge was erected in 1916 and the Millway Street bridge in 1926. At the time these structures were built, cars were far less numerous than today and the spans could adequately handle the traffic of that time. But now they are too narrow altogether, and moreover, both are in need of repair, stated Mayor McGibbon.

Sponsors of the motion for this request were Aldermen Lauréat Laurin and E. O. Pollock.

Dual-Purpose Vehicle

Following a request for tenders issued at the July meeting, Council approved the purchase of a Meteor Ranch Wagon for the Police Department at a cost of $2,365 from Polock & Graves Motors. This represents a price of $4,015 less $1,650 trade-in allowance.

Bids had been invited for the supplying of a passenger car or a station wagon. Offers were received as follows:

Desrosiers Automobile — Pontiac 2-door Strato-Chief $3,665; trade-in $1,200; net $2,465 . . . Station Wagon $4,095; trade-in $1,250; net $2,845.

Lacasse Automobile — Chevrolet 2-door $3,519; trade-in $1,069; net $2,450; Station Wagon $3,954; trade-in $1,104; net $2,850.

Emphatic on "No patronage"

To refute certain rumors contradictory to Premier Jean Lesage's "no patronage" dictum — Mr. Rodrigue Durocher, spokesman for the Liberal party in Argenteuil County, wishes to advise the populace that he is completely in accord with the Premier's policy. He states that no one has authority to engage or dismiss employees on provincial government work, no matter who it may be, without order from the consultative committee for this area. Mr. Durocher must make known the decisions of this committee to the minister concerned.

Marked increase in police surveillance, revenue from fines

Lachute Police Department continues to exercise close vigilance on traffic offenders, with a result that 183 tickets were issued for various violations in July and fines amounted to $1,170.80. . . . This brings to $5,342.40 the amount collected up to July 31, whereas the entire estimate for the year, in the financial budget, was $1,500.

Other sums collected in July (according to Chief A. J. Whiteway's report submitted to Council by Commissioner Horace Lamarche) were 75 bicycle licenses, 25 dog licenses, four taxi permits and an identification card, also $210.35 in fines of various classifications — totalling $1,567.15.

The report indicates the police staff answered 218 service calls, investigated 10 car accidents, made 11 arrests, and brought 86 cases to court. There were 22 persons detained or given protection at headquarters, four persons injured, five animals destroyed, one person missing, three cases of breaking and entering, and one theft.

Fire Report

Seven calls were answered by Lachute Fire Department during July, according to a report by Chief Donald P. MacCulloch. It is significant that all of these were outbreaks beyond the town limits, and that four of them were at the town dumpsite.

The three blazes occurred at — St. Colomban (car and bush fire); Norman Romer's, Lakefield; Mme Denis Major's, Ayersville.

Public views solicited in Brownsburg on installation of parking meters

(Our District Correspondent)

Brownsburg — The most time-consuming and word-producing item of the agenda of the August session of the Brownsburg town council, turned out to be that concerning the possible installation of parking meters in front of the commercial establishments on some Brownsburg streets. Council has been concerned over the inability of traffic to flow smoothly through the main thoroughfares, particularly during rush hours. The suggested cause of the traffic tie-ups is the large number of vehicles parked along the town's traffic arteries. Council believes that the use of parking meters might help to improve conditions by prompting car owners to leave their autos at home, or at least move them within a reasonable length of time. If there is a possibility that dawdling over a "Coke", or the purchase of an item, or a conversation, might cost the driver the price of two or three gallons of gasoline, he will probably cut short these activities and head for home. The Council members pointed out that everyone will benefit, not only rush-hour traffic drivers. Naturally, the meters should produce more frequent arrivals and departures, and shorter stays, so that more individuals may avail themselves of the parking spaces. Whether or not the meters are put into use, the Police Department will probably be on the look-out for double or angle-parking, for which drivers of some commercial vehicles are notorious. (Lately drivers of some commercial vehicles have also been known to park the "wrong way" on a street where parking is permitted on one side only.)

Before actually making a decision as to whether or not to make use of the equipment, Council has asked that the citizens of Brownsburg voice their opinions on the subject. Suggestions or criticisms are always welcome, but it is seldom that Council emphasizes that public opinion is particularly desired on a certain subject. Whether they are drivers or non-drivers, for or against, all residents are invited to make their opinions known by contacting any of the following members of the Council, by phone, letter, or in person:

Mayor René Lafleur, Councillors Ernest Gagné, Ernest Legault, Fred Monette, George Therrien, Gerald Vowles.

If anyone has watched the passage of the traffic from the lakes on Sunday evenings, he or she cannot help but notice that the average speed has dropped considerably, and far fewer drivers exceed the speed limit coming down into town from the north or heading east out of town. The people responsible for the change — Chief Roger Boutet and his assistants, who kept up their anti-speeding drive by fining a whopping 63 drivers for exceeding the limit during

C-I-L president's safety prize to B'burg employees

Another safety milestone has been reached by the Brownsburg ammunition works of Canadian Industries Limited with the winning of the company's President's Prize, one of a number of awards under C-I-L's no-accident record plan.

K. W. MacGibbon, works manager, announced that the plant qualified for this award at midnight, August 1. The record represents 195 accident-free days or 1,113,000 man-hours. The last lost-time injury at the plant occurred last January 19.

Mr. MacGibbon said that if employees continued to observe safety practices on their jobs, the plant could qualify for the next award — the Board of Directors Prize — on November 19 of this year.

Individual awards will be presented to each employee in a few weeks.

Summer resident drowning victim at Curran's Lake

Robert Pritchard, a 60-year-old Montreal resident and long-time summer cottager at Curran's Lake, was drowned on Wednesday afternoon, August 3, when his canoe overturned some 200 yards from his cottage.

Mr. Pritchard had left to get some spring water just prior to the accident. His wife and Mrs. Herbert Gilbert were sitting in front of the Pritchard home, when they looked up and saw the overturned canoe. The victim called out for his wife to get the boat to assist him, and started swimming towards shore. Mrs. Pritchard ran to the house to get the oars for the boat, but when she returned her husband had disappeared.

Residents of the community dragged the lake for the body during the afternoon and evening, and were assisted by skin-divers, who recovered the victim early the following morning. Sgt.-Det. Ralph Allen and Traffic Officer Lawrence Cruise investigated the tragedy. A verdict of accidental death due to drowning was rendered by District Coroner Dr. Jules Lafleur.

Police warning to traffic offenders

Lachute Police Chief A. J. Whiteway would like to inform all drivers that the municipal traffic timer will be in use daily in an effort to cut down speeding. In addition, court tickets are being issued for U-turns in front of the A&P Supermarket and left turns onto Barron's Bridge, contravening the signs which forbid this practice.

New field gun for civic park; various items of town business

The Memorial Park adjacent to Lachute's town hall will be enhanced with the addition of another field gun, to be presented shortly to the town authorities. The Council has been advised to this effect by the Department of Defence; and according to Major G. G. Mitchell, of this town, the field piece, from World War II, is a larger gun than the one presently mounted in the Park, which was captured by the Canadian Grenadier Guards in World War I. . . . The offer was made by Major Mitchell and Legion Ex-President Tom Smith at the last Council session, and there was no question on acceptance of this war souvenir, through the local Artillery unit and Legion 70, as a suitable addition to the Memorial Park.

Citizen Protests

Mr. Laurence LaChapelle, jeweller, appeared before Council to state that the police had given him a ticket for allegedly having disregarded a stop-sign at Foundry and Bethany Streets. According to Mr. LaChapelle, however, this sign was wrongly placed; it was on the east side of Bethany facing Dr. Lafleur's property, whereas it should be at the right of Foundry. He received the ticket on Sunday, and returned to the spot next day, where he saw several motorists, even a police officer, pass this sign. . . . He returned the ticket to Council and told them to "do what they liked" about it.

Various Business, Correspondence

Aldermen Pollock, Laurin and Morrissette were asked to prepare a winter works program and submit it to Council at the next meeting. It was time (according to Mayor Jas. W. McGibbon) to outline local works in order to benefit by government aid in winter projects.

On motion of Alderman Thibodeau, seconded by Ald. S. Holt, the municipality was authorized to borrow from the Bank of Nova Scotia an amount not exceeding $35,000, pending issue of debentures according to By-law 221 for the purchase of heavy equipment.

A letter from the C.P.R. asked the town authorities to make an offer for the old water tank situated on the Chatham Street riding, but the councillors unanimously agreed they were not interested in purchasing.

An appeal from the Ste. Therese Seminary building fund was held over.

Legal advice will be sought on the taxing of trailers established on vacant lots and connected with town water and sewer lines.

Accounts totalling $11,172.10 were passed for payment.

Ald. Gerard Lefebvre was absent from this regular Council assembly.

Two road mishaps, one fatality, in Riverfront district

Provincial Police investigated two accidents on Route 29, the Riverfront Road, over the week-end. Serious injuries were sustained in both instances, in which the vehicles concerned swerved out of control.

The first accident occurred at 10.30 p.m. Saturday, when a 1959 high-priced convertible driven by 19-year-old Claude Gerard, of Montreal, and owned by his father, went off the road about a mile from the Perley Bridge, crashing into a boulder weighing several tons. The vehicle was demolished.

The driver was accompanied by Jean Bougie, Jr., 18, of Pte-au-Chene, who was treated at the Smith Clinic, Hawkesbury, and transferred to a Montreal hospital the following day. The driver was rushed to hospital in the city immediately following the accident, and is reported to be in serio is condition. The mishap was investigated by Traffic Officer Jean Guy Foucault.

* * *

Several hours later, Traffic Officer Gilles Lavigne was called to a motorcycle accident on the Morin Montee, just off Route 29, when the cycle driven by Marcel Lemieux, 21, of Pte. Fortune, crashed into the ditch. Lemieux was taken to the Smith Clinic, Hawkesbury, and later transferred to a Montreal hospital, where he died Sunday night.

At the time of the accident, Lemieux was accompanied by Rene Daublaise, 20, also of Pte. Fortune, who escaped without injury.

Drivers' permits

The mobile unit for issuance of new driving permits will be stationed in the Court House yard on August 17. Those wishing to apply and undergo driving tests, should present themselves at this time and place. The staff will be on duty commencing 9 a.m.

Councillors see film operation of snow-blower

Members of Lachute Town Council viewed a film last Wednesday evening demonstrating a snow-blower manufactured by the firm of Adrien Volh, of St. Marc-des-Carrières, and sold by Richard Piché, of Cap Santé, Portneuf. Mr. Piché offered to bring this equipment, on loan without charge, for one month, December 15 to January 15 next.

Mayor McGibbon termed this offer "generous", and asked the visitor to submit the matter in writing.

Finance — Gerard DeBellefeuille, Stuart Armstrong.

Drainage — Herbert Gordon, Murray Lyster.

Incurably ill, Hwksb'y girl dies

Hawkesbury (CP) — Yvette Malette, 13, after seven years of suffering from an incurable heart disease, has died.

Death came to the pale little girl Sunday at St. Joseph's Oratory in Montreal, where she had gone with about 300 other Hawkesbury persons to pray for an end to their suffering.

"She was so sick . . . there was no hope," said the Rev. Rodolphe Couture, her parish priest and best friend.

"Over Ninety" Birthday Club

Congratulations to Mr. W. C. Stonard, of St. Andrews, who will be 90 years of age on Wednesday, August 17. Mr. Stonard enjoys good health. He and his wife (who has just passed her 84th birthday) have been residents of St. Andrews for almost 30 years. They celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary last December, at which time they received a congratulatory message from Her Majesty the Queen.

Mr. and Mrs. Stonard came to Canada from England in 1907, resided in Montreal until 1921, then moving to St. Andrews; they have occupied the same house for the past 26 years.

— By BOB ATCHISON —

Fishing has been generally poor for most of us this past week. All the information I have received has been the same, with the exception of a few fishermen who really fish the water. In these cases the catch has not been of the best, but they have caught eaters. This brings us right back to staying in the one spot and working every inch of the spot, be it a creek or a lake. The most trouble at present is that those fishing are not getting into any flow of water; thus due to the lack of oxygen, and the warmth, the fish will not rise to anything unless they are interested. We have been around Louisa this past week; this is one good example — to get any size of catch at all, the water was almost whipped into a froth.

Fishing this spot we sure were handed a surprise. Minnow fishing is very prevalent. Buckets could be seen hanging over the sides of boats, and not much attempt was made to cover it up. Maybe these "sports" think that Louisa is something special and the ban doesn't apply to them. Not only in this lake is the law not being observed; all over the area minnows are in use.

A few tips on the fishing might help you right now. Everything has to be tried, with conditions the way they are. The spinning man can start by using smaller baits, at least half the size he has been using. Even putting a small bit of cloth at the end of the hook, or a worm, etc., may be the thing they want. With the abundance of feed, fish are not going to come up and ask you for the particular bait they relish. Even a little extra action may turn the trick. This also goes for the fly man. Smaller flies; and stick to the nymphs the way they are. There isn't much difference in the nymphs except the colors, so try lifting some of the underwater obstructions to find out.

The Crane flies are just about the same as always. True there are some smaller types in these, but the Damsel fly will take care of them. So use it. Of course, you still have to find out for yourself what the fish want. It's still the try-and-see method. After all, if fishing came down to the point where we knew just when and where we could catch fish, there wouldn't be any fun to it.

A tip to the owners of a couple of dogs. One is a black and some white markings on it, the other a pure white. These dogs can be seen swimming the river, near Bourbonniere Camps, crossing to chase the sheep on the other side. I have been told to try and find out whom they belong to, and give them this information. If any sheep have to be destroyed, there could be a lawsuit on someone's hands.

* * *

The crows are around in very heavy numbers right now, and for the varmint shooter, it's a shooter's dream. They seem to be bigger than I have seen for a long time. Of course, shooters will have to be careful of the other people around, but a good sportsman never takes chances, either with himself or others.

I have just finished reading about Loons. Very prolific egg layers at all times, but only a couple of the young ever reach maturity. Cases have been observed where only one survived out of a hatch of 16 eggs. That's rough, when you figure out all the trouble and suffering they go through, just to die. Nature sure is a hard taskmaster. But I suppose if this did not happen, we would be over-run with them — maybe as bad as the Starlings. . . . There is so much to learn about nature.

As most of you know who have travelled in our Provincial Parks, the condition they have been in during the past sure hasn't given us anything to write home about. . . . But, happy to relate, conditions have improved greatly in the past little while. Noticeably in Mont Tremblant Park. This has been a sore spot for years with the sportsmen, and every reason they had for it. The camping grounds have been cleared up to the point of exceptional cleanliness. The whole atmosphere has changed for the good. Even the roads are improved. True there are still some very bad spots in them, but everything can't be done at once. Goodness knows, nothing much has been done in this respect for a good number of years. The Provincial Police now pass through once a day. This could be increased as there are still the odd jokers who think it is a speedway. But let's hope the good work is kept up, and our Parks continue to be restored.

Hopes for the duck hunter do not appear very promising. Thousands of these birds are out of luck due to poor conditions which have prevailed up to this time. By the time the fall flights are on, a lot of them will have perished. Nesting grounds have been very poor; shortage of water, feed, etc., has cut down the birth rate by the thousands. One big worry for Ducks Unlimited, is the South Saskatchewan Dam in the proposal stage right now. When this is started thousands upon thousands of acres of nesting grounds are going to be flooded. Something will have to be done now, and not later. This will apply to geese, along with all waterfowl. Not a very pleasant prospect for the future.

Bouquet to Chamber of Commerce

It isn't often I have the opportunity of passing on some thanks. I met a party from the State of New Jersey. They had called in at the tourist tent for information. This they had received, with courtesy and understanding. . . . Believe me, it is great to hear from tourists that they are pleased with the co-operation given by a town. I wouldn't be surprised at the powers-that-be receiving a thank-you note from them. One thing that was mentioned to me by these ladies and gentlemen: "Why hide your services under a barrel?" they said. By this they meant, why wasn't a big sign put up announcing whom these services were given by. . . .

A few more little things like this, and maybe our citizens will start to feel proud of their town once more.

It's easy for a community to drop into doldrums if the people themselves aren't interested in it. This can also apply to the supposed investigation on spring flooding. From the lack of action, it looks as though this will be another one of those "things forgotten." It can only be presumed, those responsible are just not interested in the average citizen. Flooding has been going on for years, and no one party is to blame — but for heaven's sake, let's get moving and start doing now. Progressive-minded citizens could do something about this; but it looks as though their progressiveness is strictly for themselves.

Auto Rally on August 21 "for young and old"

Have you ever entered an auto rally? This is the question asked by organizers of the 3rd annual Summer Rally of the Lachute Auto Club, to be held this year on Sunday, August 21. The answer received 90% of the time is: "What is a rally?" — A rally is primarily a test of navigational ability, that is, the combined abilities of a driver and his or her partner, known as the navigator, to figure out the route to be travelled and calculate the time a certain distance is to be covered in. In all rallies, the speed to be travelled never exceeds the speed limit of the roads over which the rally passes.

All calculations are made quite simple, insofar as the information is given each competing entry on the instruction sheets.

Another weird idea many people have is that a rally is only for younger people; anyone over 25 years of age can't take part. However, a rally is a sport for anyone between the ages of 17 and 97, providing they are licensed to operate a vehicle.

So how about it? Disregard the golf clubs and bathing suits for one Sunday and be among the entrants on August 21 for a really enjoyable and fun-filled day!

July. Another 75 were given warning for various traffic offences. Chief Boutet should be commended for his interest in the operation of the town. One has but to glance about the streets to see the results of this interest — new traffic signs; pedestrian crossings and school crossings clearly marked on the pavement, parking areas marked out; and double-line markers at the stop light. For the benefit of the uninitiated — the double lines indicate the spot beyond which a driver shall not advance his car unless he has the right of way (green light). This eliminates walking around the front ends of cars which are actually on the pedestrians' walk-way.

A short demonstration of two-way radio failed to impress the councillors sufficiently to produce any avid enthusiasm. The main obstacle in the way at the moment is the cost of such equipment. However, other problems must also be considered, among them, maintenance and the selection of someone to act as telephone and main station operator during the evening, when the municipal office is closed. If radio equipment is purchased sometime in the future, the latter problem will probably be solved by the acquisition of an outside answering service, or by automatic relay equipment.

Council briefly discussed the Cottage Avenue sewerage question, when Secretary Vincent Charbonneau read a letter received from residents in that area requesting action on their application for town sewer services. Apparently the result will be the same as it has been elsewhere in town — the individuals pay for the digging and backfilling, and the town will install the pipe. However, in this case the interested landowners must obtain a right-of-way for installation and servicing of the sewerage pipe, on a section of private property between the end of Cottage Avenue and Woodbine Avenue.

The town foreman plan appears to be working very well. Much has been accomplished by Fern Brisson with regard to installation of new sidewalks, erection of new signposts, and road repairs. Bank Street was scheduled to have asphalt applied over the section of road not covered last June. Along with this, Mr. Brisson indicated that he would make an inspection of all town roads, to locate areas in need of asphalt repairs.

Fire Chief Robbins reported that the department had responded to only one fire during the month. This was a grass fire opposite Vowles' gate on the road to Lachute. Chief Robbins opined that the fire had probably started from a cigarette thrown by a passing motorist. . . The Chief has not yet retired from his position, due to lack of a replacement, but Council hopes to come up with a successor in a matter of days.

Saturday harness racing at Fair Grounds is star attraction of "Richelieu Week"

Enthusiasts of the sulky track will have an opportunity — for the second time this season — to witness an exciting harness racing program, this Saturday. The event, at the Lachute Exhibition Grounds, is in the nature of a charity effort, representing the only public appeal of the year launched by the Richelieu Club, whose object is to extend aid to less fortunate children.

A manifestation of this purpose, apart from personal aid to the underprivileged, is the recreation park which the Lachute Richelieu Club has opened this spring. A swimming pool and extensive recreation facilities are envisioned in the development of this park, on Paquin Avenue.

Eight events, with interesting prizes, are listed on the afternoon program, which will attract some of the finest trotters and the best drivers in this district, also from Montreal and Eastern Ontario.

There will be a grand drawing for an automatic washer and dryer, valued at around $600. Books of tickets are on sale, the cover of which provides admission to the grounds. In addition there will be a drawing for two bicycles as door prizes. These attractions will be held at 5 p.m., after the last race.

By collaboration of Dow Brewery and their local distributor, J. René Laurin, there will be a star attraction for youngsters and for adult hockey fans, in the presence of the popular Maurice "Rocket" Richard. He will give autographed portraits and shake hands with all who come to make his acquaintance.

This week, by courtesy of the municipal authorities, has been dubbed "Richelieu Club Week", and the organizers confidently hope for public support, to boost their funds for charity and for the playground development. A parade will mark the opening of the big event on Saturday, around 11 a.m., and the first of the races will get under way at 2 p.m. There will be four races and eight starts.

Further report on Federated W. Inst. survey on radio, television programs

"Truly we are living in a visual age," says Mrs. Geo. Wilson, Public Relations Officer, Federated Women's Institutes of Canada, in her report on a radio and television programs survey just completed by the Provincial Women's Institutes for the season 1959-60. She goes on to say that television has replaced radio as the centre of entertainment in 90 per cent of the homes reached by this survey, with an average of six viewing hours per day.

Reports show, however (continues Mrs. Wilson), that radio still has a definite place in the home. It is turned on first thing in the morning for news and weather, and during working hours the homemakers enjoy the musical programs. There are also areas in Canada that still do not have television. Here the radio is a valued friend of the country woman.

The survey was carried on for both radio and television programs, under the headings: Children's, Women's, Entertainment, Religion, Agriculture, News, Advertising. The more popular programs under each were listed and recommendations and comments given in each instance. Less crime and violence, especially in the programs during children's viewing hours, were requested, and "Commercials toned down" was another improvement asked. Mothers were unanimous in complaining about "child persuader" advertising (appeals to children for enclosed gifts and premiums). Women's programs, religious ones and those on agricultural topics were, on the whole, highly rated and in general, news coverage was commended. A variety of tastes was recorded in entertainment, but all approved of programs providing an outlet for talented young Canadians. "Country hick" impersonations were found objectionable, also simulated accents.

All reports, concludes Mrs. Wilson, in this survey by Women's Institutes across Canada, commend the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and private stations for their varied interest and express appreciation of their cooperation with W.I. "This is highly valued," was a frequent comment.

EDITORIAL NOTES...

"In this Parliament are three Estates, the Lords Spiritual, the Lords Temporal and the Commons, but in the Reporters' Gallery yonder sits a Fourth Estate more important far than all."
— Edmund Burke

Throwing away our past

AT THE RECENT exhibition of paintings by Miss Freda Pemberton Smith in St. Andrews, the speaker in his opening address commended the artist on certain "documentary" canvases depicting buildings in the Ottawa Valley — buildings which, like many other landmarks in the area, will shortly pass into vague memory and finally into the limbo of forgotten things.

This appreciation was voiced by Allen G. Talbot, past-president of the Argenteuil Art Association, whose ardor and personal effort for the preserving of historical records — if not widely known, are both sincere and energetic. Although not a native of these parts, Mr. Talbot is vitally interested in such matters pertaining to the district. He is one of a few — very few — in our acquaintance. . . . In his address he deplored the fact that artists had not been commissioned to perpetuate those scenes and buildings which will soon disappear with the flooding of the Ottawa River — as well as earlier structures now crumbled or demolished which were significant in our past. And the some holds true concerning the fading memories of our old-timers, whose dim recollections are the fading past of this historic County. It is regrettable that in so few cases they have been written down and preserved.

This seeming disinterest in local annals was crystallized in one clipped sentiment heard at Carillon thirty years ago. It lingers in our memory. Quoth an old lady of our acquaintance (French-Canadian) at that time and place: "We are so history — mais we are so negligee."

While painfully conscious of this negligence, we find scant consolation in the fact that it is no more acute, locally, than in other parts of Canada. A viewpoint in the current issue of Chatelaine comes as a coincidence. "We're throwing away our past", says the article in question. Canada is the only country in the world which neither respects nor preserves its pioneer architecture, according to Patricia Clarke, the author.

In Ottawa (she states) a century-old stone inn was torn down last fall to provide space for a gas station. In Halifax, wreckers demolished Gorsebrook House, the home of nineteenth-century privateer Enos Collins, one of the city's few remaining Loyalist mansions and a gem of Georgian architecture. At St. Andrews, Manitoba, on the Red River, a school built in the 1830's, where some of the West's early leaders were educated, was torn down to supply lumber for a pigpen. Less than a hundred years ago Toronto was a Georgian city like Baltimore, Mrs. Clarke reports; now it has almost nothing left to preserve.

Why don't we treat our ancestors' homes and public buildings as the national treaures they are? Anthony Adamson, Toronto architect and university professor, felt we hadn't the national self-respect to value them. Ruth Home, director of museum research of the Ontario College of Art and president of the Architectural Conservancy of Ontario, believed that "because our traditions were two thousand miles away, we couldn't believe that we had anything of our own that was worthwhile."

Only two governments, the Federal and the Province of Quebec, have power under law to buy buildings valued for their architectural beauty alone, to save them from destruction. And this power has been exercised seldom by either government, the writer found.

Educating the young driver — pros and cons

ABOUT 100 CANADIAN schools have driver training programs and more are being introduced — says the Imperial Oil Review in an article debating the pros and cons of this method of cutting the young driver's accident rate.

The cost of the courses averages roughly $30 a student, and the results reported from points across Canada suggest that this is more than repaid in accidents prevented. The article also quotes the American Automobile Association's calculation that, for every $1 invested by the schools in driver education, $2.60 is returned in accidents prevented . . . quite apart from the saving in lives and injuries.

Though educators are agreed that school-trained drivers have fewer accidents, they do not agree that driver training should have a place in the regular school curriculum. One objection, of course, is that the schools have more than enough to do with their own particular work, which is education rather than training. Another objection is that driver courses can't reach enough students, since the earliest age for leaving school (16) is also the earliest age for driving. Many who drop out of school before that age tend to get jobs involving transport, it is said.

But W. Arch Bryce, executive director of the Canadian Highway Council, maintains there is no comparison between driver education and other so-called frill subjects. "The young driver may look forward to a driving career of 64 years," he is quoted as saying. "This carry-over value cannot be equalled by such time-consuming subjects as football, basketball, archery, rifle shooting, and square dancing."

The review reports that there are an estimated 350,000 licensed young drivers in Canada between 16 and 18 years of age. Because of Canada's post-war baby boom, an added 150,000 young drivers will be coming along each year. While boys in this age group comprise only five per cent of drivers, they are involved in more than 12 per cent of all accidents.

A common approach to providing better driving training for young people is to arrive at a compromise between the traffic safety need and the school's academic standards, the article notes. High school students are offered driving training as an "extra" in spare periods or after hours, but it is not included in the curriculum.

Exciting times

FIFTEEN YEARS ago this month the second world war of the twentieth century ended with the dropping of two atomic bombs on Japan. Is it any exaggeration to describe these post-war years as among the most significant in the history of mankind? — asks the bulletin, "Industry."

Within their span we have seen the virtual end of white rule in Asia and Africa; the most populous and potentially most powerful country on earth pass under Communist control; the birth of a score or more new nations; unexampled prosperity in the western democracies; revitalized Europe, for so long the battleground of bitter national rivalries, take long steps toward that economic integration which is the undoubted forerunner of political confederation; most important of all, we have seen man perfect within this brief period his power to accomplish the total destruction of the human race overnight.

Yes, fateful and awesome years indeed; yet strangely exciting ones for all that.

Viewpoints and perspectives

CORONARY heart disease is now the leading cause of death in Canada and the U.S., reports Dr. J. M. R. Beveridge, Professor of Biochemistry, Queen's University. Dr. Beveridge says that since 1920 in many areas of the world, the death rate from this cause as standardized by age has doubled and at some ages even trebled. He said a good way to fight heart disease is to watch what you eat, since diet has an effect on such factors as blood pressure, obesity, blood coagulation and blood fat levels.

THERE ARE unmistakable signs of the steady decline of Communism in the United Kingdom. The Electrical Trade Union, regarded as a stronghold of the Reds, had 239,334 members at the end of 1957. A year later the total membership was 230,136, a drop of 9,198. In the Communist Party of the U.K. membership has fallen from 56,000 in 1943 to 26,000 in 1960. Moreover the sales of the official Communist "Daily" have dropped by a half in the last three years. Prosperity apparently is an obstacle Communists cannot surmount — remarks Gladstone Murray in "The Outlook".

NEW TREND. — Recently there is a new factor — the trend to shift responsibility from the individual to society as a whole, to the state. Not only is the individual less inclined to champion his own self-reliance, but the belief that each is his brother's keeper is giving way to the belief that the state is everybody's keeper. —Peace River Block (Alta.) LET 'EM LAUGH, DOC.

The socialist press has been having fun with the doctors in Saskatchewan.

Let them laugh, Doc. There'll come a time when other sectors of the community will wonder why they laughed so hard at you.

Consider the farmers, for example. A vast number of Saskatchewan farmers must have voted for socialism. And I know a few of them laughed very hard at the cartoons which ribbed the doctors when Tommy Douglas won the day.

Would they have laughed if their farms had been socialized? Would they have chuckled so delightedly if they had become State managers of their farms, rather than owners? I am inclined to doubt it.

I think it is true that you muffed your campaign against socialized medicine, doctor. You may be a wizard with the scalpel but you're a washout on the stump. As individuals, you're honored and respected, but as an organized group you're all thumbs. You sounded as if you were trying to keep the people from getting something for nothing, and that's no way to win friends and influence people in a province that has so many citizens with more faith in the something-for-nothing theory than they have in simple arithmetic.

When the bills start coming in, the citizens of Saskatchewan are going to need you. And when their ulcers start acting up, they'll come running to you as of yore, and there won't be half the raucous laughter. They can hide the cost of just so many "free" services, and then it'll start to show.

In not too many years, they'll be crying for some sort of plan to protect them from disastrous bills, but leave them on their own to pay for the little aches and pains and emergencies most families can well afford to handle on their own. Meanwhile, every time your precious hours are taken up by a hypochondriac with an imaginary pain in his left toe, console yourself with the thought that the people who are laughing at you now will then be squirming impatiently in your waiting room, perhaps reading the dogeared copies of Elementary Lessons In Arithmetic you have thoughtfully supplied.

"The Scotchman's Bible"

— By Lewis Milligan —

When I was a reporter on The Globe of Toronto, that paper was often referred to as "The Scotchman's Bible," the reason for that being that the paper was owned by a Scot, and the population of the city — indeed, the whole of Ontario — was made up largely of Scottish immigrants or their descendants.

In Toronto itself, in addition to the Burns Society, the Caledonian Society, the St. Andrew's Society, there were social clubs representing almost every county north of the Tweed. There were a Caithness Society, a Perth Society, a Dumfries Society, etc., at which old and recent immigrants from those countries would gather to talk about old times and compare notes on their experiences in the new land. Usually the proceedings would be enlivened by a local Scot in the rendering of Harry Lauder's "It's nice to get up in the mornin' " or "Roamin' in the gloamin'." A favorite solo was "Oh, but I'm longing for my ain folk," and the Burns Club always closed with their hands clasped and arms crossed, singing "Auld Lang Syne." They were all exiles to a man and a woman in those days; but they were as canty as they were cannie, and had no great hankering to return from their exile — except for a brief visit, which usually cured them of their longing.

I was reminded of all this during a recent visit to an elderly couple who live a retired life in a humble but comfortable cottage in the Welland district. The husband is an Englishman of Scottish descent; but his wife is a born Scot; her tongue canna deny it. And she still keeps in touch with relatives over there and regularly receives copies of Scottish newspapers. She gave me some of these to read, and I have been browsing through them since with keen interest. One of the papers, The Sunday Post, is a very newsy family journal with big banner headlines at the top of every page. Examples: "She went 3,000 miles to wed — but he didn't turn up!" "By Jings, the Mon's got something to blaw aboot now!" Most of the general news is written in the same chatty style, flavored with a little of the Doric vernacular. There are many special columns dealing with domestic, social, religious and political problems. Sport is given good space, particularly soccer.

The editor must be flooded with letters from readers asking questions about everything under the sun and the moon. The latter came especially from love-lorn readers seeking advice for the settlement of some courtship incompatibility or matrimonial mixup. In a column headed "Postbag" are the following: "I used to get sixpence from the ragman for a sackful of children's outgrown clothes. Now I have my wits about me. I give a small parcel each week — and still get my sixpence." . . . "I handed a friend a tin of treacle when she came to borrow some. 'I can't make treacle tart with that!' she said. It always amuses me the way English folk say treacle, when they mean syrup!"

Here is a labor news item, entitled "Well Said". One figure who did not make the big headlines in last week's Boiler-makers' Society conference at Ayr was a gentleman called James Carberry. Alone among the 130 delegates, Mr. Carberry urged the union shouldn't press again for higher wages. He warned that higher prices and income tax would follow — and eat up any rise they gained. The union should call on the Chancellor to reduce taxation on hard work and success. This would increase the buying power of present wages." To which the Editor adds: "A lone voice in the wilderness. But a voice with the ring of truth and courage of its convictions."

Opening car doors at 50 miles an hour is one of the numerous ways that children have of attempting suicide.

For the people who want to frustrate them in this aim, I can offer some solutions: Have a two-door car, or make your own four-door model safe by removing the inside rear door-handles.

The last method was the one that we used in my wife's car, an old beetle of English manufacture. It worked all right, except that the children kept climbing into the front and trying to commit suicide from there.

Now the two little boys are old enough to know better, and they have graduated to more complex ways of trying to kill themselves.

There is a gadget on sale to secure car doors from being opened by small hands. A clip-on bar, locked on the outside, keeps the door firmly in place.

Falling out of a moving car is no joke for an adult, either. Yet all kinds of people drive around with rickety doors that obviously need just a touch to open them and send the occupant of the car tumbling to the pavement.

I remember once riding with a lady in a veteran car that had a loose-swinging door on the driver's side. The driver had to hold it in place with one hand. The lady was driving, and if she let go to make a signal, the door flew open. Luckily, she seldom did make a signal.

One Christmas Eve, my wife and I were driving over a mountain to my parents' house in a 15-year-old Model A Ford, the first car I ever owned. (The one I have now isn't much of an improvement.)

We hit an unexpected patch of slippery snow and went into a zig-zag skid. My wife screamed. I turned to scold her for screaming. After all, it doesn't help, but only makes a bad situation worse.

Just as I was opening my mouth to deliver a homily on this point, my wife disappeared out the door. The catch had given way.

As near as I knew, there was a drop of about 500 feet, straight down. I finally brought the car to a halt and hiked back. A thin wail in the darkness told me that my wife was still there. I found her at the side of the road, undamaged.

Soon afterwards I had the door catch fixed.

Townslady was 91; resided 73 years in East Ward

Late Mrs. E. H. McCoy

An old and well-loved resident, Mrs. E. H. McCoy, passed away last Friday in the East Ward of Lachute, where she had resided for 73 years. The former Mary Louisa Arnott of Lakefield, she was born September 9, 1868, and was approaching her 92nd birthday.

In 1887 at Bodie, California, she was married to Edmund Henry McCoy. The couple came east, and Mr. McCoy served many years as superintendent on the Carillon-Grenville Canals before his retirement. They were well and favorably known through the community. Mr. McCoy predeceased his wife.

The late Mrs. McCoy, during her long residence in East Ward, enjoyed the esteem of many friends and fellow townsfolk. She was a member of Lachute United Church and a life member of the Woman's Missionary Society.

She is survived by her six children — Mr. Lorne McCoy, Ottawa, Mrs. F. S. Swaine, Montreal, Mrs. F. A. Brennian and Mrs. S. J. McFaul, Lachute, Mr. G. A. McCoy, Montreal, and Mrs. D. M. Hay, Lachute; also 14 grandchildren and 16 great-grandchildren.

The funeral, largely attended, was held Monday afternoon from her late residence, conducted by the Rev. W. B. Rosborough.

Pall-bearers were grandsons of the deceased — Edmund McFaul, Robert Hay, Dr. Ralph Swaine, John Swaine and Fred McCoy, also William Reade. The remains were laid to rest in Lachute Cemetery.

Late Mrs. H. Gall active in church, community work

On Sunday, July 31, the death occurred of Alice J. Gall, wife of the late Hugh M. Gall. A well known resident here, she was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Armstrong, of East Settlement.

Mrs. Gall was a faithful member of the United Church, and in her quiet and unassuming way took an active part in its work. For almost 50 years she belonged to the Women's Auxiliary, and for several years was president. She was also a life member of the Woman's Missionary Society. The Sunday School, also the church rummage sale committee, knew her as a loyal helper. During the first world war she served wholeheartedly in the Red Cross Society, and many of her fellow-workers remember the inspiration and encouragement which they received from her.

Mrs. Gall had a great and never-failing interest in her family, her church and her community, and their welfare was very close to her heart.

During the last few years of her life it was her great regret that she could not attend church or join other gatherings and activities.

Surviving are her brother, Albert J. Armstrong, of Vancouver, and numerous nieces and nephews, who will greatly miss her presence and kindly interest.

The funeral, conducted by the Rev. W. B. Rosborough, took place on Wednesday, August 3, from the United Church. Interment was in Lachute Cemetery.

Pioneers honored at memorial service in Shawbridge

A memorial service, in honor of the early Protestant settlers in and near Shawbridge, Que., was held recently in the Shawbridge United Church. A suitably engraved plaque was dedicated in memory of William Shaw and his wife, Martha Maria Mathews. Several of the settlers bearing the names of Shaw, Mathews, Scott, Robinson, Bell, Stevenson, came from Mount Mellick, Queen's County, Ireland, in June 1827. The Laurentian valley town where they lived was then called Mount Pleasant. Other friends settled in what is now New Glasgow.

Mr. Shaw, who acquired large holdings on both sides of the North River, was instrumental in erecting the Wesleyan Church which, improved and enlarged, is still used by the United Church.

Some 42 members of the Shaw family were in attendance at the service, conducted by Rev. Clyde Westhaver, the present minister. Four of eight surviving grandchildren of Mr. Shaw (three of them over 80 years of age) were present.

"This Beautiful Earth, in God's Purpose."

Our kind, loving Creator of the heavens and the earth, whose name alone is Jehovah (Psalms 83:18) . . . In His book, the Bible, He says "The heaven is My throne, and the earth is My footstool: I will make the place of My feet Glorious. (Isaiah 66:1, 60:13.)

Literal Earth to Abide and be Inhabited Forever

Gen. 1:1: "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth".

Isa. 45:18: "For thus saith the Lord that created the heaven; God himself that formed the earth and made it; he hath established it, he created it not in vain, he formed it to be inhabited".

Eccl. 1:4: "One generation passeth away, and another generation cometh: but the earth abideth for ever".

Ps. 37:11, 29; Matt. 5:5: "The meek shall inherit the earth; and shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace. The righteous shall inherit the land, and dwell therein for ever".

Ps. 78:69: "He built his sanctuary like high palaces, like the earth which he hath established for ever".

Ps. 115: 16: "The heaven, even the heaven, are the Lord's: but the earth hath he given to the children of men".

Ps. 119:90: "Thou hast established the earth, and it abideth".

Prov. 2:21, 22: "The upright shall dwell in the land, and the perfect shall remain in it. But the wicked shall be cut off from the earth, and the transgressors shall be rooted out of it".

Prov. 10:30: "The righteous shall never be removed".

See also: Ps. 104:5; Isa. 60:21.

The Search for Peace

Peace is as sure as Tomorrow's sunrise, and just as independent of man. Unto us a son is born, unto us a son is given, and the government shall be upon His shoulders. Of His government and peace there shall be no end. Isaiah 9:67. Daniel 2:44.

"I delight to do thy will, of my God: Yea, thy law is within my heart." — Psalm 40:8, Am. Stan. Ver. . . . It was a delight to the psalmist David to know what God's will was and then to do it. To know what to do he gave careful consideration to God's law and filled his heart with it. As a result, David is spoken of in the Scriptures as "a man after God's own heart". Would you not like to have a place in God's memory too? Could any creature ask for a greater honor? Little wonder that David expressed delight! If this is your desire, begin now to fill your mind and heart with God's written Word, the Bible.

At the annual meeting of the Argenteuil Advisory Board of the C.N.I.B., held recently, Mr. A. Zaplaski, district fieldman, presented a review of activities during the year. Facts of interest were as follows:

Field Report

During the year eight eye clinics were conducted in Lachute, five under Dr. Kral and three under Dr. Pelletier.

The Home Teacher had given 46 lessons in leathercraft and Braille to sightless people in the Lachute area.

During the year the field secretary made 226 calls in the County.

The Institute issued bus passes, railway forms, white canes, financial help, fuel and clothing; eight people borrowed talking-book machines and are receiving a great deal of pleasure from the records supplied free from the C.N.I.B. library.

At the end of July, 1959, the Institute installed a workshop to give employment to the sightless people. The progress of this shop has been extremely slow. The venture employs one sightless person repairing bicycles and restringing tennis racquets. This workman proved that it was feasible for a sightless person to repair bikes, as his workmanship was of the first quality. Plans are underway to improve this workshop and introduce other types of employment.

Women's Auxiliary

Under the leadership of the Women's Auxiliary, the Argenteuil White Cane Club met on eight occasions at the Lachute Legion Hall, which was made available by members of the Legion.

At these meetings the Auxiliary provided transportation and delicious lunches, also assisted with the recreational activities. During the summer, the ladies organized a picnic for the sightless. Last December a successful Christmas dinner was given.

The Women's Auxiliary have purchased three talking-book machines and have contributed to the Reader's Digest Talking Book records. They also take a deep interest in the C.N.I.B. Centre.

Officers Elected

Chairman, W. G. Richardson; vice-chairmen, Thos. Ayers and M. R. Wilson; secretary, J. B. Chalmers; treasurer, Miss M. Preece.

A motion was adopted to record the gratitude of the Board for the great service Mr. Léopold Carrière had given and for the progress accomplished during his term of office.

The next board meeting was set for August 9, to lay plans for the annual benefit dance at Lachute Golf Club on August 20.

TIDY

A father was absorbed in his favorite TV program when his young son ventured to ask him about a homework problem. "Dad," he said, "where are the Alps?"

"Ask your mother," came the reply. "She puts everything away."

BELL LINES

by Bill Flanigan
your telephone manager

IT'S LITTLE, IT'S LOVELY, IT LIGHTS!

. . . It's the "Princess" — a new extension phone that's dramatically different in size and styling. Yes, it's small — takes up less room on table or desk. It's modern — for the modern taste that asks for beauty with simplicity. And it lights up. That's right, it actually glows in the dark so you can find it quickly and lights up when you lift the receiver. It's available in five popular colors — white, beige, pink, blue and turquoise. The Princess is on display now in our office at Lachute. Come on in and see for yourself.

We heard a story recently of how a telephone call was used to catch a thief. It seems that a Montreal clergyman received a telephone call from a man who said, "I'm eating my breakfast in Windsor Station having just arrived from Saint John, and somebody has stolen my wallet. Can you lend me $100? I'm on my way to Vancouver." The churchman asked him how he knew him and the man said he had heard him preach in Saint John the Sunday before. The clergyman, who had preached in Saint John at the time mentioned said, "Telephone me in half an hour and I'll see what I can do." Then the clergyman phoned a priest in Saint John seeking his advice. The advice was: "Don't give him a cent, he's a crook." When the confidence man called again, the clergyman told him of the message from Saint John. And that was that!

There is no doubt that our society is becoming more color-conscious all the time. It wasn't long ago that all automobiles had to be black. How many black cars do you see today? Look also at the wide range of colors in our new suburban developments — everything from chartreuse to rancho red. Inside the home too, the decor takes on new exciting hues. That's why the modern family wants any item for the home — be it for the kitchen, bedroom or playroom — to be in colors that will complement the decor. With the wide range of colored telephones that are available you'll find any room can be enhanced by the presence of a colored extension. And, of course, as well as adding to the beauty of the home, the convenience of an extension telephone increases your enjoymnt of living. Taking a long look ahead recently, A. G. Lester, vice-president — engineering, of the Bell, predicted that every household in Canada will have telephone service by 1970, and 30 per cent of these telephones will have extensions. But Mr. Lester said it could run higher — possible 50 per cent. If this is the case, by 1970 the number of telephones in Canada would reach 10-and-a-half million. Of all these telephones, he predicts that by the end of the decade 80 to 85 per cent will be in color. If you're a modern family you'll want colored extensions too. Make it a point to find out all about the wide range of colored telephones that are available to you.

TOMORROW'S DINNER

Pineapple Fruit Cup
Pork Chop-Macaroni-Bake
Chopped Spinach with Grated Carrot
Raspberry Loaf
Coffee Tea Milk

Measurements are level; recipes for 6

Pork Chop-Macaroni-Bake: Half-cook ¾ lb. high-protein macaroni in boiling salted water according to directions; drain.

Add contents, 1 (No. 2½) can tomato with 1¼ tsp. salt, ¼ tsp. pepper, ½ tsp. thyme, ½ tsp. vinegar and ¼ lb. sharp processed American cheese cut into bits.

Bake in mod. oven, 375 deg. F. for 20 min. Then turn chops; brush with cooking oil; continue to bake 30 min. more until well-browned.

Raspberry Loaf: Place small loaf of plain cake, homemade or from baker, in low baking dish that can go-to-table. Pierce in 8 places with 2-pronged kitchen fork.

To 2 pkgs. frozen raspberries add ½ c. sugar. Thaw-simmer 20 min. to form thick syrup. Pour over cake.

Bake 50 min. in slow oven, 325-350 deg. F. Baste loaf three times with raspberry syrup.

Cake should be thoroughly moistened throughout, yet keep its shape.

Serve warm or cold with plain or whipped slightly sweetened heavy cream, or with a whipped topping.

ANADAMA BREAD

One thing that's bound to spark up any meal is a home-baked loaf of bread. But many housewives hesitate to bake their own bread because they don't have the time to spend long hours in preparation, especially if they are unsure of the end result. However, nowadays baking with yeast is not nearly as complicated as some people think. Many recipes are so simplified that the time involved is no more than required for ordinary baking. And rigid testing of recipes before their publication ensures even the novice baker of successful results.

Typical of the many yeast products that can be made in double quick time is this recipe for Anadama Bread. Families who enjoy the unusual will love this robustly flavored bread with cornmeal and molasses. And there's no need to knead the dough. The ingredients are mixed in one bowl, turned into the baking pan and allowed to rise just once before baking. After the bread has baked the top is brushed with butter or margarine and sprinkled with cornmeal. For a special treat, serve Anadama Bread with butter and jelly, while it is still warm from the oven.

Anadama Bread

(Yield — 1 loaf)

½ Cup yellow cornmeal, 2 teaspoons salt, 3 tablespoons shortening, ¼ cup molasses, ½ cup boiling water, ¼ cup lukewarm water, 1 teaspoon granulated sugar, 1 envelope active dry yeast, 1 egg, 2½ cups once-sifted all-purpose flour.

Measure cornmeal, salt, shortening, molasses and the ½ cup boiling water into a large bowl; stir until well blended. Keep at room temperature.

Measure the ¼ cup lukewarm water. Stir in the sugar. Sprinkle with yeast. Let stand 10 minutes, then stir well. Stir dissolved yeast, egg and 1¼ cups of the flour into lukewarm cornmeal mixture. Beat until smooth and elastic. Stir in remaining 1¼ cups flour and blend well. Turn out the rather sticky batter into a greased loaf pan (4½x 8½ inches, top inside measure) and spread evenly. Cover. Let rise in a warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk — about 1¼ hours. Bake in a moderately hot oven (375 deg. F.) 45 to 50 minutes, covering loaf with a double thickness of brown paper after the first 20 minutes. To test loaf: tap the crust (which becomes quite brown) with the knuckles; when bread is baked, the sound should be hollow. Turn out immediately and place in a wire rack. Brush top with melted butter or margarine and sprinkle with a little cornmeal. Allow the loaf to cool completely before storing.

Teatime Topics

Specially Written for The Lachute Watchman
By Edna Blakely,
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Summer days are salad days, and experts in the consumer section of Canada's agriculture department say they're always glad to talk about salads because there are so many good Canadian foods that go into them.

Green salads are both delectable and delightful to look at. Lettuce is the most popular base and there is a variety from which to choose. Iceberg or head lettuce is firm and solid with crisp leaves. Boston lettuce has smaller, softer heads with tender, inner leaves which feel oily or buttery.

The Romaine type has a long, narrow upright head. The leaves are stiff and spoon-shaped and have a more distinctive flavor than other leaves. Leaf lettuce does not head.

Of course, it's not necessary to use lettuce. There are many other green vegetables that are fine additions or substitutes.

Chicory or curly endive is a loosely-formed head of narrow, curled feathery leaves. The outer leaves are dark green and the heart is pale yellow. The taste is slightly bitter.

Endive or French endive looks somewhat like a small, light creamy-white head of celery except that the leaves are broad and thick and taper to a point.

Escarole has broad wavy leaves with ruffled edges, darker green outer leaves which are lighter at the centre. Escarole is less tender than some of the other greens and is slightly bitter.

The dark green leaves of young, tender spinach add variety to a salad bowl.

Watercress has small bright green leaves with tender stems. It has an agreeable peppery flavor.

Chard has dark green wavy leaves which may be used alone or may be chopped up with stalks.

Freshness Important

When buying greens it's important to make sure they are young, fresh and crisp. Homemakers are advised to wash them thoroughly under cold running water. A wire basket is ideal because it permits every bit of dirt and sand to escape. Shake gently to allow the excess water to drain away, then store in a covered container or plastic bag in the refrigerator to crisp.

Drain and shake the greens dry in a clean towel before using. Tear, don't cut, them apart. Lettuce alone, or combinations of vegetables in varying shades make an attractive salad bowl.

For a piquant touch, try adding chopped chives or onion, and if herbs aren't included in the dressing, a dash of basil, chervil, dill, marjoram, rosemary or tarragon is a pleasing addition.

— By NANCY CLEAVER —

As soon as a child begins to talk he begins to ask questions and, during the years he spends at home the number of questions he will ask are beyond counting. Asking questions is one way of learning, and the education of an individual never stands still. Sometimes a father or mother wearies of the constant "Why?" "How?" "Where?" "What?" and "When?" issuing from the child's lips. But a parent must try to answer a child's question when it is asked.

A parent should always pause in whatever he is doing to answer a child's question at once. A child's interest soon shifts. Once the edge is blunted on curiosity about a particular thing, that question may not be asked again.

It is sometimes inadvisable to attempt to answer certain questions in front of visitors. A child old enough to understand situations will be temporarily satisfied with mother's "Mother cannot tell you about that just now. But she will tell you about it at bed time."

A parent cannot always answer a question; and it does no harm to admit ignorance. Father and son can look up the question about "How does electricity work?" in a reference book, such as the Book of Knowledge. This particular set of books with an extensive index is very valuable in that a child, who can read, can find his answers without help. A parent can also encourage an older child to look up material on a topic under discussion in the public library.

Sometimes a parent will know of some other individual who is better equipped to answer that question. This is particularly true in vocational guidance. If mother was a teacher, and Aunt Susan was a nurse, Janey can learn a lot more about nursing from Aunt Susan, or from recently graduated nurses, then from mother.

All questions are not real questions. Sometimes a child who hungers for attention asks a stream of questions, not even waiting for an answer. A child who wants to put off his bed-time hour may use question-asking as a device to delay his departure. Mother can easily see through this subterfuge.

The questions about sex are most likely to receive no satisfactory answer from parents. This is a great pity, because if Mother and Dad do not satisfy the child's curiosity, the child will seek answers from his playmates. It is not a matter of keeping children ignorant, or "innocent" as some prefer to call it, but it is the duty of both parents to decide early in the child's life if they will answer these questions truthfully at the proper time, or leave this part of the child's education to the misinformation and nastiness conveyed by their playmates.

A little child may ask the same question over and over again. He seems to have forgotten the previous answers, but resist the urge to go into great detail. Your child's questions, at every stage of his life, deserve honest answers, made as simple as possible. Thus one generation pays its debt to the next.

Do give your child the best answers you can to the questions he directs at you!

Sesquicentennial Proves Colorful Event at Norwich

Mrs. A. Graham spent Tuesday in Toronto and Wednesday in Ottawa, on her way home from a very pleasant visit at the home of her cousin, Mr. Ellwood Pollock, of Norwich, Ont., where the town and township around were celebrating the 150th anniversary of the very beginning of Norwich. This dated back to the time when two Americans from New York bought 15,000 acres of land at 50 cents an acre, and resold it to 50 of their American neighbors who were unhappy over conditions in that country at the time. This Sesquicentennial celebration was interesting from first to last, with the gaily decorated buildings also some of the store windows featuring wonderful old antiques, including dolls, silverware and furniture.

The special parade had 131 floats, including the playground float with the children dressed as Puritan maidens and some of the boys as Indians. There were lovely floats, odd floats and humorous floats, even to the real Holstein cow in the centre of the Dairy float. All of these ended their itinerary in the Fair Grounds, where the different contests were held, with prizes given for the oldest man on the grounds who was 87. The heaviest, the tallest and the very youngest child which (believe it or not) was only 8 days old.

The person from farthest distance to receive a prize was from Belgium. There were contests for women such as "Husband calling" and "Hammering in the spike." A grand concert on the Fair Grounds, with extensive fireworks, ended the festivities.

The sacred part of the celebration included special services in all churches on Sunday morning, with free noon lunch after the service where old friends greeted each other. A special Union service of all churches was held in the park, from the bandstand, with Rev. F. Rodney of St. Thomas as special speaker, followed by a sacred music concert by the Norwich band, on Sunday night.

Six different bands were in the parade, as well as children on donkeys and several extremely high bicycles and, of course, the bearded men, who received a prize for the thickest beard, for the scraggliest beard and the reddest beard. And, of course, John Meyers caught the greased pig.

"Sunnyacres Sketches"

By Margaret Cook

Summer rushes on — or does it? Some days it is summer, but often it is the bleakest autumn; not the colorful time, but the time of wind and rain and general bleakness. On those days, we sit gratefully by the hearth fire, and think compassionately of those in cottages and boarding-houses far from such comforts. On the fine days, we sally forth to see what we can see.

Driving along, we are intrigued by the number of the hawk and partridge families. They are both sleek and fat, for there is no shortage of mice, moles and shrews. Nature is wonderful. No foxes, so the lesser breeds and those that feed on them are everywhere. The rabbits still browse at dusk and dawn on the lawn, but with even more nervous tremors than usual, for two have had accidents involving the grey Persian that shares our home. Now the younger cat has come to join us for a holiday, so the rabbits will need to be doubly cautious.

When we do not drive about we seek the various berries of the countryside. We spent a painful afternoon among the raspberry bushes, and acquired along with scratches about a quart and a half of the fruit. Then a generous friend said come and pick her cultivated variety, which we did, lovely great red globules of juicy berries. We also bought a few at the farmers' market in St. Jerome, so we ate raspberries, made a pie, made jam and jelly, and even preserved a few pints. Next winter when we open the jars, we'll not only enjoy the food, but relive again the summer. We tried to find some black currants, but no one has any. The bushes harbor an insect (we are told by our daughter not to say "bug") that destroys pine trees, so the black currant is not in favor in these parts. But we bought some gooseberries, and made jam with brown sugar. A lovely product, but tiring to make, because of the "tailing" involved. The currants (red, I mean) await our attention but we have become sidetracked by the half-painted kitchen. Even as we write, the head of the house is grimly painting the ceiling; he has paint on his chin, but we do not mention it. This could be tact, or it could be mischief.

The daughter of the house, who has been with us briefly, reports that the lady who is keeping her company in the town house is extremely curious to know what I do all the long days in the country. The real facts being dull to the stranger, Betty obligingly tries to dig up a few exotic items. In the nick of time she remembered the three or four innocents who so many long years ago were buried on the hill near the house. Legend has it they were interred in shoeboxes, but that is probably not a fact. The pioneers of this country were perfectly well able to shape a little coffin of wood. This modest tale draws shudders from the city-dweller; and the comment, "Your poor mother!" She evidently is firmly convinced that we are held here incommunicado by our grim husband. Hearing this tale, the head of the house says, "Tell her I keep your mother chained up in the attic".

The ignorance of the city person is appalling. We took a tea-guest out for a walk. We had proceeded perhaps two hundred yards from the house, when she said, "Do you think we shall meet a bear?" . . . "I don't expect to," I replied. The lady was full of questions. "Are we still on your land?" she asked just after the bear scare. We said yes, modestly. "Oh yes, you have six acres, haven't you?" she pursued. Goaded by a long hour of questions, I decided to get tough. "We have one hundred and twenty-eight." The next query was, could we see a neighbor's light at night. It has never occurred to me to look. But, after thought, I opined not. This was dreadful. The lady refused to go farther, but volunteered the information that she had been brought up on a farm. This I found hard to believe.

We are pursuing our research into the different resort spots of the Laurentians. Just yesterday, we finally decided to stop for tea at a delightful-looking place perched on the side of a mountain near Ste. Adele. The back of the house is to the road, but the front faces down one of those unexpected valleys that are always surprising one. This one stretches perhaps three miles to the highway, where one can discern a few houses; the hills come down on each side enfolding the meadows. The ground drops sharply a few feet from the inn, and along the edge riot crimson poppies and petunias. The grounds are cunningly laid out with, here a bed of pansies, there a burst of campanulas, in the shade some brilliant begonias. Tables and seats are scattered about, and after a decent interval, the lucky guest has a tea of hot rolls, jam, cakes and cookies. We elected to have ours indoors, as the clouds were threatening. We ate in a room with authentic beams, a stone fireplace nearly as large as our own, a profusion of couches, cushions, lamps, in the European fashion. Over the hearth a grim ancestor looked down with disapproval. As our host said they had been there for twenty years, and was obviously German, we deduced a hasty flight from the little maniac with the moustache. It was nice they remembered to bring along the ancestor. The whole thing was surprising in the Canadian Laurentians. It was almost like a Devonshire Inn, but no Devonshire cream — which reminds me, for tea there was also fresh raspberry tarts crowned with whipped cream! If anyone cares to write, I will give the name so you, too, can guzzle while looking at beautiful scenery.

* * *

I, Margaret Cook, have a wasp sting. For years, Betty and I have lived intimately with wasps, bees and their kind; no stings. But this creature had crept into our slippers during the night, and when I put on a slipper in the morning, a sharp needle-like stab puzzled me. But not for long; the ache began, which was to go on for twelve hours, then the swelling came, and now, after three days, the whole area around the smaller toes is inflamed and puffed up. We consulted some of the neighbors about treatment. Opinions varied, but all were agreed that prompt attention was the best, which had not been accorded in this case. Suggestions ran from putting one's foot in a manure pile for an hour, to linseed poultice. The latter not being available, we are about to have a session with an Epsom salts solution. One of our younger and less devoted friends said hopefully that people have been known to die of a sting. Well, as one of my friends said when refusing to motor with a drunken companion, "I like living" — so here's for Epsom salts!

HISTORY OF A STRATEGIC WATERWAY

By Priscilla Lee Reid

The closing of the locks at Carillon in June, marked the end of a long chapter in the history of that part of the Ottawa River made famous by the Long Sault Rapids. With the inauguration of the Hydro-Quebec project now in progress, this colorful and historic section of the waterway has entered upon a new phase of development.

Those who in former years have sailed through the canals and locks which link Carillon and Grenville, have marvelled at the beauty of the sturdy stonework, and the skill of engineering which made possible their construction. Many questions have been asked about them, but since little has been written on the subject, answers have been hard to find. The sources of information are widely dispersed both in government documents and in private archives.

From earliest times the rushing Long Sault Rapids presented a serious navigation hazard. Samuel de Champlain, the first European to sail these waters makes special mention of them in his Journal. Many others, some to their sorrow, had cause to remember them. However, since there were no settlements along the Ottawa west of the Rapids during the French regime, nothing was done to make their passage easier. What is more, the Indians and the coureurs de bois who were the only travellers in these parts, would probably have scorned the use of a canal as an alternative to the thrill of shooting the rapids.

After 1763 when the British took control, there was a slight stirring of official interest in the Ottawa as a navigable river. But it was not until 1783 that the Imperial Government sent Lieut. Jones to explore its north and south banks between Montreal and the Chaudière Falls. He reported favorably, recommending strongly that some improvement be made in the area of the Long Sault Rapids, to allow for the passage of larger boats. Still nothing more was done.

About 1783 a new factor entered the picture. Settlers, many of them United Empire Loyalists, began to move into the Ottawa Valley. The first families to arrive, discouraged by the more than twelve mile barrier formed by the Long Sault, made homes for the most part, east of the rapids. Not until after 1800 did pioneers such as Philemon Wright push on to found settlements farther west.

With the gradual opening up of this new area, the need for good communications became very apparent. The lack of a highway or waterway caused hardship. Supplies could be brought in only with greatest difficulty, owing to the necessity of portaging goods around the rapids, along a road that was little more than a track in the forest. Also, as the rocks of the Long Sault wrecked many rafts and barges, the products of the land destined for markets in Montreal and Quebec, frequently never reached their destination.

Nathaniel Hazard Treadwell made the first attempt to remedy the situation when he dug a number of crude canals on the north shore, known locally as "Treadwell's Trenches". The remains of these may still be seen. Later, about 1813, Col. John Macdonnell, a recent arrival in Point Fortune, also tried to by-pass the rapids by digging on the south shore, more trenches, called by the residents "Macdonnell's Ditches". These two men had the right idea but they lacked the funds to implement so gigantic a project. Only a war and fear of invasion from the United States could move the British Government to take action.

With the outbreak of hostilities between Canada and the United States in 1812, the authorities in Britain were forced to recognize the weakness of Canadian defenses. Actually, had the United States at that time, made prompt and full use of its advantages along the international section of the St. Lawrence River, then the outcome of the war might have been very different. Official opinion is well expressed by Sir James Yoe, the British Commodore on the Great Lakes, when he wrote that " . . . victory was due not only to the mutual executions of the army and the navy, but even more to the stupidity of the enemy."

It might be more correct to say that the Americans suffered from poor timing rather than from sheer stupidity, because a confidential letter-book of the U.S. Secretary of War reveals the draft of a complete plan for cutting the British lines of communication along the St. Lawrence, and for a two-fold invasion of Canada — one by Lake Champlain and the other by a crossing of the St. Lawrence at a point between Montreal and Kingston. This plan was to have been put into effect by General Jacob Brown, in February, 1815. By this date, however, the war was over.

The years which followed the peace were uneasy years. The British army, realizing what might have happened during the hostilities, advocated the development of an all Canadian route to the west and northwest. Communication with that vast and only partially explored land, the heart of the fur industry, had to be kept open and protected. At this point the route via the Ottawa River and the Rideau Lakes appeared as the solution to the problem. Although immediate action was indicated, owing to the rather inefficient colonial administration, progress was slow.

After 1815 the British Parliament made a survey of all its colonial defenses. The Montreal Gazette, reporting on the section which dealt with Canada, stated on July 14, 1817, "Strongest fears have been expressed on the subject of the safety of Canada". Still, officialdom would not be hurried.

The feeling within the United States at this time is hard to determine. Articles can be found in various newspapers which lead one to believe that the republic to the south desired only peace and friendship with Canada. On the other hand Washington was improving its facilities for an invasion. The United States Government built two military roads . . . for the speedy movement of troops in case of a recurrence of hostilities". One of these ran west along the border from Plattsburg and the other east from Sackett's Harbor. In 1817, James Munro, the U.S. President, personally inspected these and other military improvements in the international section of the St. Lawrence River.

What is more, in July 1817, construction of the New York State Barge Canal, to link Lake Erie and the Hudson River, began. A little later, the Champlain Canal, to join Lake Champlain and the Hudson River, was also started. These were completed in 1825 and 1822 respectively.

While all this was going on, the British talked much but did little. On February 18, 1818, the Montreal Gazette stated bluntly, "Much has been written on the subject of canals. Even the French, before 1763, saw their advantage. Cannot something arouse the Legislators to activity?"

Finally, after much agitation, the Journals of the House of Assembly of Lower Canada reveal that on March 24th, 1818, the following resolution was introduced: "Resolved that it is expedient to authorize the appointment of Commissioners to meet with representatives from Upper Canada, to consider and report to the Legislature what measures may be necessary on the subject of the improvement of water communication between the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, as well by the St. Lawrence as by the Ottawa route".

Early in the summer of 1818, the Duke of Richmond, the new Governor General, arrived in Canada. Concerned about the lack of defenses, he at once took action. A complete survey of the matter convinced him that a safe, all Canadian route to the west and northwest, secured by military settlements along its bank, was an absolute necessity. This he reported to Lord Bathurst, the British Secretary of State for the colonies, in such forceful terms that by October, 1818, Captain J. F. Mann, with members of the Royal Staff Corps had arrived from England to survey the Long Sault Rapids with a view to building a military canal.

With the prospect of definite action, both Canadians and members of the Parliament at Westminster began to raise objections and doubts. Lieut. Col. Cockburn, Deputy Quarter Master of Ordnance, wrote discouraging reports. "The expense would be great," he said, "due to swift currents and the great variations in water levels at the different seasons of the year". Others asked, "Who is to pay for the project?" The reply to this was that certain monies would be contributed by the British Parliament, but Lower and Upper Canada would be expected to help. The Duke of Richmond wrote that the Legislature of Lower Canada would "cheerfully" pay half of the cost, although the Journals of the Legislative Assembly reveal quite the contrary.

Red tape might have strangled the whole matter right here, had it not been for the Duke of Wellington. As Quarter Master of the Ordnance, he, on presenting the Report on Colonial Defenses to Lord Bathurst on March 1, 1819, urged that immediate steps be taken to improve the Canadian situation. He wrote, "The enemy has only to place a few heavy batteries at almost any point in the international section of the St. Lawrence River, between Kingston and Montreal, to prevent our use of the navigation. We might also do the same thing, but its use is absolutely necessary to us, but not to him." He recommended that "the canal at Lachine be built speedily, that the Ottawa be made practicable and easy, and that a junction be effected with the Rideau."

The result was that the Long Sault Project began in the spring of 1819. It was entrusted to the Royal Staff Corps, working under the Ordnance Corps, and it was to be paid for jointly by His Majesty's Treasury and the Canadas.

Capt. Mann's report provided the general plan. The rapids, concentrated in three main groups between Carillon and Grenville, a distance of twelve and one-half miles, with a rise of fifty-nine feet, were to be avoided by means of locks and canals at Grenville, Chute à Blondeau, and Carillon. The north side of the river was chosen because "the ground was less rocky." Mann also stated, "No accurate estimate of cost can be made until plans are drawn up, but it should be in the neighbourhood of £16,340."

During the first two years, the operation, under Col. DuVerney, went forward comparatively well. Lord Dalhousie, who by this time was the Governor General, writing to Lord Bathurst on October 27, 1821 stated, " . . . the work must go forward with vigour since it is an important military communication, and a road into the interior of two provinces. However, I do not want the project to be finished in less than three years since it gives work to immigrants." On this score there was no need for worry because it was not completed until 1834.

The fifteen years which the task required were difficult years for Col. DuVerney. Reading his Progress Reports, one feels the complete frustration and despair of the man. At times the work advanced, then it would slow down and even halt, often because of inefficiency or lack of government interest. "Why spend such large sums? After all, Canada and the United States are not at war," many began to argue. Others however, notably Wellington, Dalhousie, and Bathurst considered the undertaking "of such importance that it cannot be arrested".

During the whole period of construction, numerous and varied problems plagued DuVerney and his men. Very high on the list was the terrain itself. In some places the engineers encountered large areas of solid rock through which they had to cut. In other sections they found soil mixed with boulders of every shape and size, and in such quantities that at times it seemed that there were more rocks than earth. This situation required back-breaking labor. Then too, the swift current and the great variation in the water-level from season to season added to the difficulties.

The weather was also a problem. Records show that the summers were very hot and the winters bitterly cold. This naturally affected the health of the men. They suffered not only from the usual occupational hazards and accidents, but from frost bites, pneumonia, sun stroke, summer complaint, and even cholera. Bouchette, in his Topographical Dictionary, written during the 1820's, stated that " . . . the officers and their families have small neat houses along the canal, . . . but the enlisted men all live in tents." This latter fact, coupled with the great extremes of temperature caused much illness.

Then too, most of the tools and materials used came from England. Frequently these did not arrive on schedule, thus causing a stoppage in the work. If, as occasionally happened, supplies were delivered too soon, there was a storage problem. Sometimes orders had to be duplicated because of loss due to rust, damage, and theft. Since he could have purchased many of these materials, especially tools, locally, it is easy to understand the Colonel's impatience.

Scarcity of food for the laborers presented difficulties. The small number of farmers in the area could not posibly support such a large work force, so supplies had to be brought from a distance. This involved problems of transportation and storage.

Expropriation of land also caused trouble. The Government had included a reservation clause in all letters patent to the lands granted in this area stating clearly that ". . . the Crown reserved to itself as much land as was necessary for the building of a canal." Still some of the early residents refused to accept this, and demanded payment. One man, and his son, carried on a battle with the British Parliament for more than ten years. He even went so far as to say that either the land withdrawn from his holdings, for this construction, be paid for, or the canal be resigned to him. These were bold words, considering that the gentleman had no legal grounds on which to base his case. It is not surprising that Lord Dalhousie, in a communication to Lord Bathurst wrote, "The canal is a military work and of such importance that it cannot be arrested by an individual under influence of madness, drunkenness or caprice."

Finally, the lack of money presented an ever present problem. From the very beginning, disagreements over the passing of estimates, and the amounts to be paid by the British Treasury, and the Legislatures of Upper and Lower Canada, caused trouble. Money was doled out grudgingly, often just enough being forthcoming to prevent the work from grinding to a halt.

The estimates themselves were frequently incomplete and confusing. At the close of a report on estimates, of March, 1830, Lieut. Col. Sir James Kempt stated to the Colonial Secretary of State, "it is not clear if pay and allowances of Staff Corps employed be included. . . . If not £14,676 must be added for three years pay, from 24 December, 1828." From this and similar examples, one can see that bookkeeping was not well done.

The one thing, however, which emerges clearly, is that expenses had sky-rocketed. Capt. Mann's original estimates in 1818, had been approximately £16,340, for the whole construction. Later, after completing the three locks at Grenville to measure 108 feet by 19 feet, with a draft of 4½ feet, it was decided to construct the remaining locks to conform with those of the Rideau System, which were much larger, the estimates then rose to about £85,000. This is understandable. But the matter did not end here. By the time the work reached completion, expenses had amounted to a staggering £192,920, of which £134,920 was for the narrower Grenville section. And this was not in a period of inflation.

In passing, one might compare these figures with those for the Lachine Canal, built by a privately owned company between 1821 and 1825. The total cost of the 8½ miles of canal, and the locks which raise shipping 44 feet was only £105,000.

On April 24, 1834, Capt. J. C. Lighthall, on the bridge of the St. Andrews, a tug-steamer, made the first passage through the new canal system, at a speed of three miles per hour. The work begun in 1819 was finished.

Immediately, however, the folly of leaving the three small locks in the Grenville section became apparent. Yet years passed and nothing, except the building of the Grenville-Carillon Railway, was done to improve the situation. Thomas C. Keefer, the Civil Engineer, in his book Canals of Canada, published in 1850, wrote, "These three locks still exist, completely neutralizing all the advantages of the enlargement. They are still monuments to Imperial centralization and the misdirection or impotence of Colonial influence."

About 1880 the obstacle was finally removed. At this time all the canals between Montreal and Ottawa were enlarged and made uniform in size. The locks now measured 200 feet by 45 feet, with nine feet of water on the sills. At this time too, the old Carillon dam was built, which so raised the level of the water that the lock at Chute à Blondeau was no longer needed.

The irony of the situation is that improvement came too late to be of much use. With the building of the C.P.R. in the 1870's it was found that both passengers and freight could travel more cheaply and quickly by land. Besides, trains did not stop with the fall freeze-up. Still, even as late as 1910 river traffic was heavy. Between 250 and 300 barges, each with a capacity of about 300 tons, used the canals, in one season handling as much as 337,850 tons of freight.

During recent years traffic has slowed down, and few, except owners of pleasure boats, have used the Grenville-Carillon Canal System. Thus the history of this strategic and commercial waterway seems to have come to an end.

NATURE'S REMEDY

There was the young lady whose dermatologist advised her to take a milk bath. Next morning the milkman knocked on the door and asked,

"Lady, are you sure you want 46 quarts of milk?"

"Yes," she replied.

"Pasteurized?" he inquired.

"No," she said, "just up to my armpits."

Diary of a Vagabond

BY DOROTHY BARKER

I never thought I'd succumb. I always looked upon bird watchers as a community unto themselves. Persons with too much leisure and not enough responsibility to fill their time. So they take to watching the skies for their feathered friends, I decided, in order to jot down data for records, only a few would be interested in. Or at least I thought this was a good description of bird watchers at the time.

That was before a recent morning when I stretched out on a sun cot under the old apple tree to contemplate, with considerable relish, plans for my summer travels. I felt I needed this period of relaxation after my strenuous day conducting my first "tour". It still seemed a miracle to me that I had safely delivered six small youngsters to their parents from the wilds of Ontario's vacationland following that memorable birthday party train jaunt.

I don't know why I did not recognize the first symptoms of bird-watching-itis, for I had purchased a most attractive bird house at an auction and hung it high on a bough overhanging the patio. Evidently I had tried to subconsciously convince myself I made this purchase merely because the house was such an unusual type. I simply thought it would add to the atmosphere of our outdoor living room.

Amidst the drone of bumble bees and wasps, the croak of the bull frog in the farm pond and the baying of a hound two farms away, I had become conscious of a flutter and chirping that attracted my attention to the bird house.

Jenny Wren and her newly acquired husband were pulling and tugging at a twig much larger than themselves. Or, I should say, Jenny was doing the tugging while friend husband sat on an adjacent twig and trilled a hallelujah chorus. For two solid hours I watched this performance. How she ever managed to get some of the twigs they chose for their nest into the small hole of the house was a mystery I could not attempt to solve.

There is no automation in bird-land, no unions or prohibited boundaries for the gathering of home building materials. Those mites worked until dark and were up again long before I opened my peepers. If Jenny slackened her pace, her helpmate scolded and hopped around like a wound-up toy.

They were my chief source of interest and amusement for three days. Finally, apparently the house was to Jenny's liking and she settled down to raise her family. Now her mate's song almost burst his tiny throat. This was dangerous, for it attracted a red squirrel who reconnoitred the house, surveyed the possibility of gnawing the hole large enough to admit his supple body and was about to begin his murderous operation when another drama in nature's story unfolded.

On a topmost bough, a huge robin took up sentry duty. Every time the squirrel would approach the house, the robin would dive-bomb him. Jenny never budged during all this alarming evidence that an enemy was present.

I watched avidly for days, hoping to see the young parents teach the birdlings to fly, but I never did. They must have spirited them away during the night, or under cover of a shower. But I have caught the birdwatching fever and it is costing me money. Bird books, binoculars, rubber boots for swamp wading, records to identify bird calls and a whistle guaranteed to attract my newly found feathered friends, have been added to my belongings.

Bird watchers, I have found, are moralizers. They would have the human race imitate the winged population of this crazy old world. Birds with their open sky policy, loyalty to mates and excessive industry should, they feel, set an example for us befuddled and frightened mortals who search the skies these days, but not for birds.

Have they forgotten the communists of birdland, starlings who steal nests, keep smaller birds in constant terror of attack and strut their superiority in all their pristine plumage? Or the northern shrike, who zooms down on tiny, unsuspecting sparrows, spears them and hangs them on a thorn apple tree as a warning to any other bird who would usurp the shrike's authority to air lanes populated with feathered creatures.

Human or bird, we seem to have inherited our enemies. Who will play robin in our present human drama, and scare the bogey man away, remains to be seen.

Bats harmless and useful

Bothered by bats?

Bats often establish colonies in attics and walls of dwellings in rural areas and become a nuisance.

But, advises the Canada Department of Agriculture's Research Branch, bats are harmless and useful creatures that feed exclusively on night-flying insects, many of which are destructive pests.

An effective repellant is two to five pounds of naphthalene flakes scattered in spaces occupied by bats. If applied during warm weather, reports claim, this will prompt bats to leave — even in daylight. They will stay away as long as the naphthalene odor persists.

After the bats have been evicted, all openings three-quarters of an inch or more in width, such as small crevices around the eaves and at the bases of rafters, should be filled. Cracks at the base of the chimney should be filled with cement.

If these openings are not closed after the bats have been driven out, the supply of naphthalene must be renewed periodically to prevent their return.

Fumigation will kill bats, although use of poison gas is recommended only as a last resort. Hydrocyanic acid gas, although highly effective, is also extremely poisonous to human beings and should be applied only by a licensed fumigator.

Canned foods and regulations

At this season of the year, the canning and preserving of vegetables is in full swing. H. A. Robert, of the Quebec Department of Agriculture, draws the attention of both industrial and domestic canners to certain articles of the Canned Foods Act and Regulations.

The permit for the making of canned goods for commercial purposes, which must be renewed annually, must be conspicuously posted on the wall, in the place or premises where the canned goods are manufactured. The number of the permit must be printed on all packing cases, in letters at least half an inch in height.

Every can offered for sale must bear a label showing the name and address of the canner, the name and a true and correct description of the canned product, its quality and net weight. An identical label must be affixed to the packing case.

All establishments shall be suitably lit and ventilated. All appliances, such as tables, trucks, vats, machines, kettles, containers, etc., shall be kept clean and sanitary. All operations in connection with the preparation or packing of products shall be carried on carefully and with strict cleanliness.

All yards, outhouses or other premises belonging to or used in connection with any establishment shall be maintained in a clean and sanitary condition and shall not be used for the emptying or storing of refuse. The drainage system shall be ample and kept in proper working order.

Most canners in the Province of Quebec willingly conform to these requirements. From time to time, however, one or other of the foregoing regulations are not properly observed, although they are clearly set forth in articles 6, 7, and 14 of chapter 40 of the Canned Foods Act.

WHEN CONDITIONS ARE RIGHT YOU'RE ALWAYS Ready WITH MODERN FARM MACHINERY

Gone are the days when a farmer could quickly hire all the manpower he needed for work that had to be done fast to take advantage of right field or weather conditions. Today, experienced farm labour is scarce and costly.

The answer to this problem is modern farm machinery. It provides an efficient, economical working force that is available at all times. The danger of profits being left lying in the fields because of a shortage of harvesting help is eliminated. The ability of modern farm equipment to handle heavy work schedules at top speed with a minimum of manpower often means the difference between profit and loss on today's farm.

Follow the trend that leads to more profitable farming. Team up with Massey-Ferguson machines and implements. They keep labour costs low—provide a wider margin for profits.

Young Miss wins prize

Young winner of the Richelieu Club drawing for an automatic washer and dryer, held at the Harness Racing annual event last Saturday on the Exhibition Grounds, was Joanne Raymond, Ayersville, who is seen here with her mother, Mme René Raymond — with two notables of the occasion, Maurice (Rocket) Richard, star guest, and Dr. Charles Roy, Richelieu Club president.

Winners of two bicycles awarded as door prizes were Edward M. Jones and Adélard Rocquebrune, both Lachute residents.

LHS girl student wins bi-county Science scholarship

Word was received by Principal Fred Royal at the High School last Monday, that one of the year's L.H.S. graduates, Brenda Morrison, was the recipient of the $500 Prescott and Argenteuil Scholarship awarded by the Chemical Institute of Canada, Hawkesbury Section.

Pupils from Prescott and Argenteuil Counties sat for this competitive scholarship. Miss Morrison, completing Grade XI at Lachute High School, was among the candidates. Miss Morrison, whose home is in New Glasgow, Que., studied only one year in Lachute, having taken the Grade X course at St. Jerome the previous year. She is going on to Bishop's University for higher study; the $500 bursary will accetably augment her finances for this course.

For the third year in succession since the inauguration of this annual scholarship, the honors have been won by graduating pupils from the Lachute school. The winner last year was Roland Gow, and in 1958, Miss Jean Taylor, both members of Lachute families.

Couple watched "Echo" satellite in 11-minute transit

Taking a breather from their spell in the dark-room late Sunday night, Syd Drew (photographer) and his wife sat in their garden scanning the skies for America's artificial satellite in orbit — which, the newspapers announced, should be visible between Ottawa and Montreal around 1 a.m.

It was at 12.49 p.m. that Syd spotted three stars, one of which was steadily changing its position eastward in relation to the others. With their field glasses the couple were thrilled, and somewhat awed, to watch this satellite, the "Echo I", for 11 minutes continuously, until it disappeared from sight.

Travelling at 15,000-odd miles an hour, at a distance between 1,018 and 1,160 miles from the earth, this was the giant balloon rocketed from Cape Canaveral in a 26-inch container and released into orbit — and from which two-way communication bounced messages back to the earth, including a recorded conversation from President Eisenhower . . .

Mr. and Mrs. Drew were considerably thrilled to see evidence of this marvelous achievement.

Repeat Performance

A repeat performance was witnessed Monday night, when Photographer Drew was joined by Garth Boyd and together they followed the satellite for 15 minutes, from a higher vantage point towards Dunany. . . . Here in Lachute, a number of friends and relatives were also keyed to enthusiasm and viewed the man-made phenomenon. Syd Drew endeavored to catch a photographic record of the satellite in its course.

Boy drowned in artificial lake near St. Canut

Jacques Gratton, a 14-year-old Ste. Therese boy, was drowned Sunday afternoon while playing with a beach ball in Lac Rouchon, an artificial lake near St. Canut. He was playing in the water with his family at the time the mishap occurred.

The youth got into difficulties when he went after the ball which was being swept away by the wind. He moved out into the centre of the lake and fell into the old creek-bed, some 12 feet deep, which runs through the lake. The body was recovered some 20 minutes later; attempts to revive the victim by artificial respiration failed.

Two girls hit by automobile at bridge approach

Young Francine Durand, 13, and her two-year-old sister, Danielle, were injured Thursday afternoon of last week when struck by a car across from the Memorial Park at the entrance to Barron's Bridge.

According to the children, who were taken to the Providence Hospital by a passing motorist and treated by Dr. Marc Papineau, they had started across Main Street when they saw the approaching car. They waited, standing near the sidewalk, where they stated the car struck them.

The auto was driven by Conrad Deslauriers, 49, of Calumet R.R. 2, who stopped on the bridge immediately following the incident.

* * *

On Saturday, an identical mishap was reported to police by Chas. E. Murtagh, a New York City resident. He reported he had just stepped off the sidewalk when he was brushed by a car owned and driven by Gordon Massie, 466 Chatham Street, Ayersville.

The driver told police he realized he had touched the pedestrian when he got onto the bridge, and immediately stopped. The visitor was not injured.

Final agreement ends impasse on naming of Ayersv'l committees

Some argument occurred at the August session of Ayersville Council when Councillor Maurice Dumas took issue with Mayor Gaetan Paquette over the formation of civic committees for the year's administration.

Main bone of contention was the Public Assistance Committee. Councillor Dumas wished to serve as chairman of this committee in order to keep an eye on hand-outs to needy applicants. In this regard he accused the mayor of having issued, without authorization of the Council, 10 credit orders of $15 each to a family which takes in $187 a month from various provincial and federal security benefits.

The mayor paried this charge with the assertion that it had cost the municipality absolutely nothing, since these grants would be absorbed by Social Service. Councillor Dumas expressed strong doubt on this claim.

Mayor Paquette retaliated by accusing Mr. Dumas of having neglected his duties last year in the capacity of vice-chairman of this committee — which the councillor denied.

There were charges and countercharges that political capital had been made of these matters. (It is known that Councillor Dumas has shown aspiration for the mayoral office at next election.) . . . The Public Charities Act and the Municipal Code were also brought into the discussion.

Acceptance of Committees

Councillor Gauthier, siding with Councillor Dumas, asserted that the welfare of the municipality was more important than the personal preference of a councillor to serve on a particular committee. As for himself, the mayor's proposal that he be named to the Sewer and Waterworks committee was not at all to his liking.

In the end, a slate of committees drawn up by Councillor Maurice Dumas was given precedence over those proposed by Mayor Paquette, and the various committees were adopted as follows:

Finance — Councillors Douglas Simon and Wilfrid Durocher.

Public Works — Rosaire Quenneville, Napoleon Corbeil.

Amendment

Councillor Douglas Simon attempted to reconcile the two viewpoints and restore peace to the chamber by proposing an amendment to Councillor Dumas' motion. He suggested that Gerard Gauthier assume the chairmanship vacated by former Councillor L. J. Bigras last year. He received the support of only one vote, however, and the amendment was dropped. Finally Councillor Dumas' list was accepted unanimously on suggestion of the mayor, "in order to keep harmony in the Council."

Mayor Paquette insisted, however, that a committee on Industrial Development be added to the other departments.

New chairman named to Quebec Hydro Commission

"QUEBEC THIS WEEK"
By Leo LeBlanc,
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Quebec — Jean-Claude Lessard, vice-president of the St. Lawrence Seaway Authority, was appointed chairman of the Quebec Hydro-Electric Commission last week. He succeeds J. A. Savoie, who has resigned.

The Montreal professional engineer, one-time deputy transport minister at Ottawa, will step into his post at Hydro's Montreal headquarters September 1. His salary was not announced, but it was understood to be upwards of $20,000 a year.

Mr. Lesard is a native of Granby, Que. He was educated at College Ste. Marie in Montreal and attended the University of Montreal where he obtained a bachelor of arts degree. He took commercial studies at McGill University and — under a Quebec Scholarship — studied business administration at Harvard, where he obtained a master's degree.

He has been with the Economics Bureau of Canadian National Railways and joined the Board of Transport Commissioners as an economist in 1939. During the Second World War he was with the Department of Munitions and Supply. He became deputy transport minister in Ottawa in 1948 and in 1950 was chairman of the Canadian Maritime Commission. He retired from the Civil Service in 1954.

Teen-agers charged with thefts from Laurentian homes

Montreal — At least 10 juveniles, ranging in age from 12 to 16, were arraigned in St. Jerome Juvenile Court Tuesday following a major crackdown by the St. Jerome detachment of Quebec Provincial Police.

The 10 youths face a total of 67 burglary charges.

Sgt. Det. Aime Bertrand, of St. Jerome QPP, said six arrests were made Monday afternoon. The boys, including four arrested Friday, were nabbed in their homes at Ste. Marguerite-du-Lac Masson. At least four more arrests were imminent.

"We have been working on this roundup for some time," Sgt. Bertrand said, "but we didn't get our break until one of the suspects attempted to pass a silver dollar pried from a souvenir ashtray."

Homes in Ste. Adele, Piedmont, and Ste. Marguerite have been plagued by burglaries throughout the summer months.

The thieves took typically teenage articles, like transistor radios, portable television sets, fishing rods, cameras, etc. They seldom managed to escape with money.

The 67 known burglaries attributed by police to the 10 suspects represent a total loss from summer homes, parked cars, a post office, a church and a hotel of approximately $6,000.

"The thieves would wait until occupants of a summer cottage went for a swim or a family outing," Sgt. Bertrand stated, "and would break in to take anything that came to their fancy."

Home and School bursary winners

The Lachute Home and School Association announced this week the successful pupils for their annual scholarship. The chairman of the Scholarship Committee, Mr. Fred Royal, reported the committee had decided this year to divide the amount into two, and the successful pupils from last year's Grade XI of Lachute High School, are Rodger Titman and Ian Vessie, both of whom are planning to attend McGill University this coming term. They will receive $125 each towards their tuition.

The scholarship from the local Home and School Association is one of many positive actions taken by this group, and it is hoped that in the fall, when the Association reassembles, many additional parents will take a keen interest in its programs and activities.

Search for Canada's oldest Fordson farm tractor

A tractor dating back to the close of World War I could win some farmer in Canada a brand-new model.

The search is on now — the search for the oldest Fordson tractor in the nation, still in operating condition.

Deacon Motor Sales Ltd., Ford Tractor dealers for Argenteuil, report that Fordson tractors were first sold in Canada in 1918 and that many of these "originals" are probably still being used on farms scattered across Canada today.

"Whoever owns and registers the oldest one in operating condition by October 15 of this year, will receive a brand-new Fordson Dexta Diesel tractor in exchange," says Harold Deacon, of the local firm.

He adds that the offer is limited only to bona fide farmers in Canada. Dealers, collectors, and so on, are not eligible. Age of the tractors reported will be determined by the serial numbers stamped on the engine block. Where models are of the same year, the lowest original serial number will be the determining factor.

So if you're a farmer and own an old Fordson that you think has a chance of being the oldest, get in touch with Deacon's. You could be the winner.

Photos published with weddings and engagements

Readers submitting photographs in connection with wedding reports and engagement announcements, are reminded that engravings are required in order to print from such photographs. In the case of a reproduction the same size, it takes The Watchman 24 hours or more to procure the engraving or printing-plate; therefore such pictures must be received by The Watchman on Monday morning at the latest. . . . In the case of 8x10 pictures or photos to be reduced in size, these take considerably longer, and should be received by this newspaper the previous Thursday to the date of issue . . .

New station agent at St. Andrews

Jean-Guy Lefebvre, C.N.R. agent at Hawkesbury for the past five years, has received a transfer to the station at St. Andrews East, where he assumed his duties last Thursday.

A native of Lachine, Mr. Lefebvre is married and has two children. While continuing to reside at Hawkesbury for the time being, he plans to take up residence at St. Andrews shortly.

Died of injuries in dynamite blast at Maniwaki

The Late Lewis Strong

Burial of the late Lewis Strong, of Maniwaki, took place Thursday afternoon at Lakefield Cemetery, the Rev. C. W. P. Baugh officiating. Funeral service was held at 10 a.m. in the Maniwaki Anglican Church.

Manager of the Barwood Company since it began operations in Maniwaki, Mr. Strong, aged 59, died August 8 in hospital at Ottawa, after injuries received in an accident July 7. He was attempting to dynamite a tree stump in the company yard when he was injured.

Born and educated in Lakefield, he was the son of the late John and Francis Strong. He was married to the former Laurence Desautels, who survives.

He was a member of the Maniwaki Anglican Church, the Rotary Club and Board of Trade.

Surviving, besides his wife, are two sons, William and Garnet, at home; two daughters, Ruth, of Montreal, and Frances, of Ottawa; four brothers, Edgar and Cecil, of Lachute, Ira, of Shawbridge, and Leslie of Lakefield; and two sisters, Mrs. Harry Scott (Alice), of Lachute, and Mrs. Wesley Hamilton (Amy), of Montreal.

New pavement may put an end to potholes

Thetford Mines, Que. — An experiment being conducted in this centre of the world's asbestos supply, may soon put an end forever to the motorists' nightmare — potholes.

Engineers of Asbestos Corporation, together with a local firm of asphalt contractors are laying a test strip of asphalt paving over 100 yards long. The asphalt is spiked with some two per cent of short-length asbestos fibre. Cost of the experimental paving was borne by the Asbestos Mining Company.

Similar tests in other parts of Canada and the U.S. by Johns-Manville and highway engineers show that the addition of asbestos fibre to an asphalt mix helps make the road surface tougher and more resilient, reduces upkeep costs and protects against springtime frost heaves, a major cause of potholes.

Quebec Roads Minister Bernard Pinard sent provincial highway experts to observe the experiment, take samples and report on wear and tear over the next few years.

If successful, the asbestos-asphalt paving experiment may develop into the yearly use on Canadian and U.S. highways of thousands of tons of short-length asbestos fibre from Quebec's 12 mines.

TAXPAYERS' DEBT

Toronto — City finance commissioner William Campbell said municipal taxpayers owed the city of Toronto $6,502,056 to the end of 1959. The total was the highest since the depression of the 1930's.

Commons ends a long session seen 'unusually significant'

"WEEK IN OTTAWA"
By Jack Van Dusen,
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, — Parliament has ended seven months — 146 sitting days — of hard work and likely will go back into session this fall.

Political sources say Prime Minister Diefenbaker is planning to steal a three-months' march on the next session, and to make a limited number of changes in the cabinet lineup. The likely date for opening of the fall session is October 13. Normally the next session would not open until January.

Cabinet changes are expected about Labor Day. Informed political sources say only one retirement seems sure. Veterans' Affairs Minister Brooks probably will be appointed to the Senate, and two or three ministers sworn into the cabinet.

Long Session

Fewer than 50 members were in the Commons as it reached prorogation — members who had lasted through the final month-long crush of late business in the fourth-longest session since confederation.

The session was "long, arduous and productive," said the prime minister. It was "long, difficult and contentious," said Opposition Leader Pearson.

It was the third session of the 24th Parliament — the session in which divorce shared the limelight with the Bill of Rights, Prime Minister Diefenbaker's most prized piece of legislation.

The session finally ended August 10. Mr. Justice C. H. Locke, in the absence of Governor-General Vanier, read the speech from the throne, which termed the session "an unusually significant and useful one for Canadians".

It was a long session and it was a wordy session. The words covered 7,787 pages of Hansard — official record of Parliament — the day before prorogration. The verbiage weighed 27 pounds, five ounces — an average for each member of 1.64 ounces or 29,000 words.

Divorce Issue

A two-man CCF filibuster against Parliamentary divorce petitions from Quebec and Newfoundland brought divorce to the fore. They are the only provinces without divorce courts and CCF members felt Parliament shouldn't be called upon to make the divorces. The filibuster was lifted in the final days of the session.

The June elections in four provinces also had their effect on Parliament. The Liberals won two provincial votes — in Quebec and New Brunswick — and, heartened by these successes, the Liberal opposition in the Commons dug in with renewed vigor.

Back benchers had their say in a sparkling two-day debate in the Commons in February on a private bill calling for abolition of capital punishment for murder. The bill never reached a vote, and was withdrawn on the final day of the session, but will be reintroduced in the next session. . . . The debate showed there were 20 speakers against abolition, 12 for, and two undecided.

Bill of Rights

Liberals and CCF members aimed 21 amendments at both the government's bill of rights and its anti-combines legislation. Both measures were passed.

Defence Stand

On defence, Defence Minister Pearkes thrust aside all suggestions of scrapping the Bomarc missile program. The defence department estimates, approved on the final night of the session, included $22,000,000 for the Bomarc program.

The defence department's reduced spending program for the 1960-61 fiscal year came to $1,593,272,266 — the smallest defence budget since 1951-52 when the defence build-up brought on by the Korean war was getting up steam.

But the government's forecast expenditures — even with the six per cent cut in defence spending — soared to a record $5,821,794,405 and brought Liberal charges that the government was on a wild spending spree.

The session also saw External Affairs Minister Green state Canada's opposition to all nuclear testing; the franchise in federal elections given to all Indians of voting age; and establishment of a new department of forestry.

ALL THAT GABBING

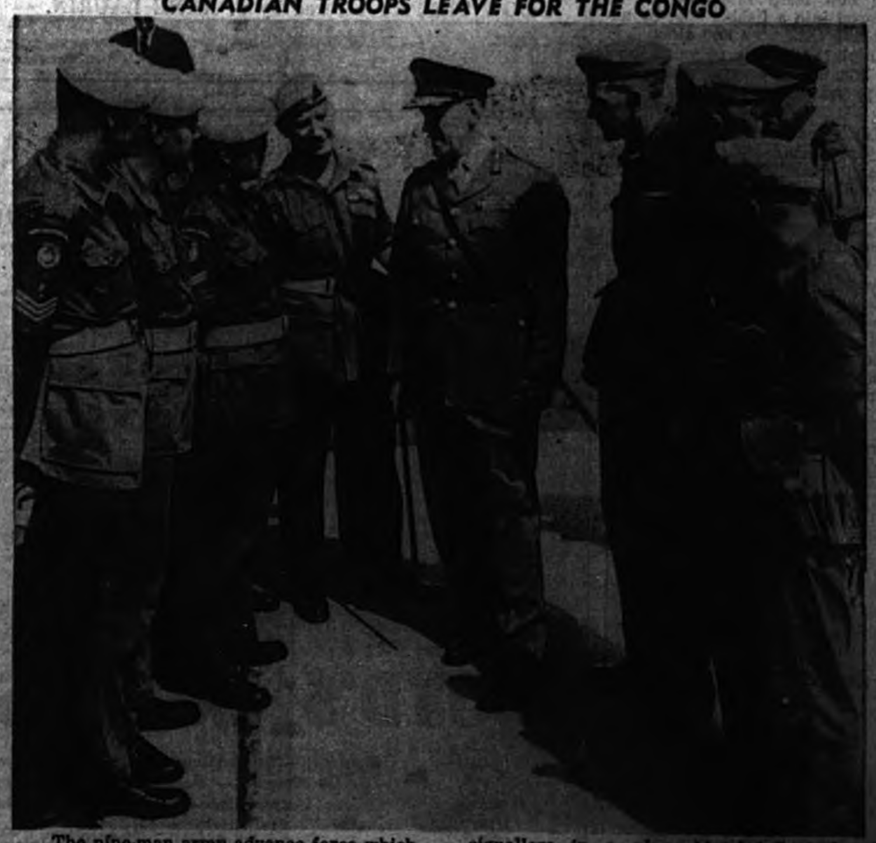

Rober Lang, a page in the House of Commons, carries 27 pounds, five ounces of Hansard which represents one of the gabbiest sessions on record. Each M.P. averaged roughly 29,000 words. They've filled 7,787 pages. If they fill 8,000 they'll set a record of 8,000,000 words.

CANADIAN TROOPS LEAVE FOR THE CONGO

The nine-man army advance force which left Trenton, Ont., for the Belgian Congo got a personal farewell from Lt.-Gen. S. F. Clark, chief of the general staff. He told the signallers in a plane-side briefing they should act to the credit of Canada. The men hoped to be billeted in the Leopoldville hotel taken over by the RCAF. Above Lt.-Gen. Clark briefs the group before take-off.

Argenteuil Outdoors

— By BOB ATCHISON —

One of the most interesting things I have ever had the pleasure of watching occurred this past week at one of the lakes. We spotted a head in the water; as it got closer to us, it could be recognized as an Otter. It must have wanted to get in close to where we were anchored, as it hung around us for at least half an hour. The antics of this animal sure gave us an eyeful. Not having a mud slide nearby to play on, it had to be content with the rocks and debris around. We never imagined a water animal could get into so many queer positions. The thing that intrigued me was the way it would speed through the water, suddenly flip on its side then, as it slowed down, it would float on its back with all four feet in the air!

* * *

We can be prepared for a poor Fall shoot with the Ducks. That is, if one can believe all the literature being given out. Drought in the Prairies can be blamed for all this. Ducks Unlimited state the numbers of birds that have died due to this, are beyond counting. It's hard enough for the Ducks to survive, without pot-hunters getting after them. I don't know if you remember, I mentioned last spring two hunters who had been caught with 90-odd ducks in their possession. These birds had been taken during the spring flights. At any rate, these gents were caught. I just heard what happened to the culprits: fines totalling $1,500 each were assessed against them, plus the confiscation of all equipment. This will make other pot-hunters think twice before they try this.

* * *

The crows are still giving some good sport. All it takes for a really good shoot is a little patience. Nearly every morning numbers of them can be seen around the district. I have seen a couple of the locals out after them; evidence of their skill can be seen along some of the roads. I don't imagine these were shot on the roads; the parties concerned have brains enough to know better. . . . Anyone going out after these pests, take it easy. A lot of people are in the bush and they won't like shots whizzing around their ears.

* * *

I don't know how many of you have heard of the supposed dynamiting of fish. Wardens have been investigating this, but up to now, not a word officially has been said. The queer part of it is, one fish has been found. Whether it died from explosions, is not known. Three sticks and caps were found in the bush, but from what I am told, no explosions have been heard at any time. Of course, these things have to be investigated, but not too much time should be spent doing it. It seems to me, giving the lakes a good look-see will pay off much better than this. I know the dynamiting will cause much more damage than what goes on in the lakes; but if I heard about this, it's a cinch the offenders will have heard of it, and stay away. . . . I know you are going to say, not much damage can be done in the lakes by fishermen. Did you ever stop and figure just how many minnows can be dumped into a fishing spot by unthinking fishermen and allowed to multiply? A couple of years later the lake will be overrun with Chub, Carp, and what-have-you.

* * *

The game situation seems to be very promising. Deer are plentiful in and around Lachute. Travelling around the back-country, one can see them almost every day. Rabbits are all over in great profusion. Even the Partridge are still with us. I haven't seen the Pheasants for a long time, but I'm sure they are still here. Even a few Woodcock can be heard, and the Doves are still with us, getting fatter all the time. Boy I didn't think there were as many around until I saw a bunch of them in a field that had oats in it I couldn't estimate the number, but there were certainly more than I have ever seen before.

* * *

The fishing should start to pick up very soon. All the lakes and streams are very shallow and warm. With these cool mornings though, things should get better. For the fly caster it should be very good. As most of us know, this summer not too many flies were with us (and how!) — this was evidenced also by the myriad of fly cases to be seen on any spot of water. Why this was so, I don't know. Biologists will have an answer.

I have been told of a number of lakes that are yielding up Carp. These will, without question, be from minnows used in fishing. There are other reasons that could account for their presence in lakes, but the minnows are the most logical cause.

* * *

A number of new guns on the market will give us shooters a lot to think about, also a lot of manipulation of the bank book! The latest Nylon is the 12-gauge shotgun, semi-automatic. This will probably be one fine gun to use. I have also handled one of these Anschutz small-bore rifles; these are for the expert .22 man. Nothing like you have ever seen before, and certainly nothing like you would expect to see in a target rifle; they are used by the Olympic boys in their matches. Wonderful guns for the purpose, and as might be imagined, a wonderful price; roughly $300. This weapon sure looks as though it would place a shot where it was aimed. I wasn't fortunate enough to try it, and don't suppose I ever will, but at least I can dream.

Even though we have all these new guns, with safety refinements and everything else — it will be a sure bet someone will end up thinking he saw a deer, and plug some poor joker . . . Happy thought to end a column, isn't it?

Steam locomotive excursion on C.N.R.

Montreal — The steam locomotive and its 124-year history in Canada will be honored Labor Day week-end by a special excursion to Ottawa and return.

The trip — organized by the Canadian Railroad Historical Association — will be a final salute to the steam locomotives which have already disappeared from regular service on Canadian National Railway lines.

The 12-car special train will be hauled by locomotive No. 6153 — a 31-year-old veteran of a million miles in depression, war and peace, coming out of retirement for the occasion.

The train will leave Central Station at 8:15 a.m. EDST September 4 for Ottawa, and will return to Montreal at 5 p.m. that evening. There will be a two-hour stop in Ottawa, in addition to stops en route to allow camera bugs to photograph No. 6153 being coaled, watered and turned.

The largest automotive parts warehouse in Canada has been opened by General Motors of Canada in the Pointe Claire industrial area of Montreal. The new $3,500,000 building becomes GM's Quebec headquarters for parts, service and sales. It contains 240,000 square feet of floor space — more than 14 times as large as the ice surface at the Montreal Forum — and stocks quantities of more than 60,000 different automotive parts.

PROGRESS THROUGH RESEARCH

SUMMER SORE THROAT

A sore throat in the summer time is your body's warning signal that you might be coming down with a serious illness.

A sore throat at any time can warn of an impending cold, or a more serious respiratory tract infection such as influenza or pneumonia. However, these illnesses usually strike during the cold, wet months and rarely occur during the summer.

A summer sore throat may be the first sign of measles, diphtheria or polyiomyelitis. If it is coupled with fever, you should call your physician immediately, for prompt medical diagnosis and treatment can stop a potentially serious illness from getting too deeply rooted.

However, most summer sore throats are merely symptoms of the common cold. Although antibiotics are of great value in controlling serious respiratory infections, they are largely ineffective against the common cold.

In fact, scientists have yet to discover any completely effective agents for the common cold — summer or winter variety. Although unable to prevent or cure them, physicians can help to remove much of the string from common cold symptoms.

For the headache and muscle fatigue accompanying a cold, they recommend aspirin. For the stuffed nose often accompanying the cold, they prescribe a nasal decongestant. For the patient, they advise patience — for the cold-causing germs, no matter what the medication, can persist in your body for as much as a week or longer.

We can do little to prevent summer sore throats, but with proper care, we can prevent more serious illness from developing after the first warning signs.

"In this Parliament are three Estates, the Lords Spiritual, the Lords Temporal and the Commons, but in the Reporters' Gallery yonder sits a Fourth Estate more important far than all."
— Edmund Burke

Time for some action

TOOTING OF horns, blazing of loudspeakers at all times of the day and night, unnecessary screeching of brakes and shouting by irresponsible persons within our town limits, and particularly on our Main Street, have been in existence for quite some time in Lachute despite many objections from this paper and from individuals, and once again we register a protest and say openly, "It is time such nonsense was stopped — once and for all."

The climax was reached on Sunday morning when before 6 o'clock residents along Main Street were awakened by loudspeakers, discordant and raspy singing, shouting and other disturbing noises, which came from the first of a group of males and females, mostly young people, who having left St. Jerome on Saturday night, had walked some 20 miles during the trip. Footsore and weary but with tremendous lung-power, they straggled into town en route to the Shrine, and with some 1,100 in the group took about two hours passing along our main thoroughfare.

Most citizens, after a hard week's work, look forward to a quiet rest, and a few extra hours' sleep on Sunday morning, but they were certainly disappointed on August 14.

We are informed that a similar "carrying on" took place last year and we are wondering WHY precautions were not taken, to avoid such repetition. Where were our police in allowing the whole neighborhood to be awakened at such an hour?

We, and I think all right-minded citizens, have no objections whatever to any person or group of persons visiting the Shrine, but let them do so in an orderly and proper manner.

With regard to Sunday's affair, cases of loudspeakers bellowing forth their messages, whatever they be, unnecessary tooting of horns, and other violations of the law, we would again request that the town authorities give earnest thought to the disturbing effect these noises have on sick persons, mothers with young children, hundreds of them, whom they are trying to get to sleep, and hard-working citizens who enjoy and need their proper rest.

Teach them — to protect them

THE PROS AND CONS of school instruction for young drivers were debated in this column last week, quoting from an article in Imperial Oil Review.

A strong argument for such training comes to attention since this was written. . . . Some people maintain that teaching teenagers is the responsibility of parents and that driver education does not belong in the high school curriculum. But it should be remembered that many parents are arrested for traffic violations and that some parents pass on to their children their own bad attitudes and driving behavior.

Youthful drivers should be the nation's safest drivers. Their reflexes are quicker, their coordination more accurate, their eyesight and hearing better than at any other time in their life. But this group does not have a favorable traffic safety record. Traffic accident studies, based on the number of miles driven, show that young drivers proportionately are involved in far more fatal accidents than older drivers.

It may well be concluded that the public schools are the only agencies that can effectively reach the bulk of youth at the time they reach legal driving age, and that the schools can best develop attitudes and provide proper training to improve driver behavior. . . . Personally, we favor this as an extra-curricular activity, but emanating from the school.

There are one or two factors in driving behavior which are sometimes overlooked. Among young drivers there is the show-off attitude, easily recognized. Then there is youth's defiance and impulsiveness — the psychology which brings a bicycle to a stop with a long skid of the rear tire — and graduates to accelerate an automobile with a screech of powered wheels, then another skid of tires at the first intersection . . . Behind this impulsiveness, there could be today's easy-come, easy-go regard for money. The youngster's pleasures have been financed largely by indulgent parents, and the embryo driver knows nothing of the high cost of wear and tear, nor of the still higher cost of accidents.

Youth's attitudes and reactions have been classified and catalogued by the safety experts. Organized young-driver training might well take advantage of analysis and research along these lines.

Keeping check on calories

CANADIANS, with bigger incomes in an era of prosperity, are living and eating better than a generation ago. Today's well-stocked larder is reflected in the Canadian's average calorie intake of 3,060, compared with 3,010 in 1935.

No one would deny the obvious benefits of a good diet, nor wish that any Canadian should go hungry. What is less readily understood, however, is that living conditions and living habits have changed so that the number of calories is not necessarily an accurate index to properly-balanced diet.

Experts estimate the increase in calorie intake has been offset by a decline of expenditure in energy. Housewives, who used to burn up 250 calories an hour washing clothes by hand, now use only a fraction of that figure because of the automatic washing machine. The story is the same for the man who drives from home to office instead of walking to the corner bus stop.

This combination of overeating without compensating additional use of energy is considered a frequent cause of death. A study of 5,000,000 insurance policyholders in Canada and the United States shows that the death rate from all causes is higher among those who are overweight. The death rate is 75 per cent up for men 50 pounds overweight.

It's estimated the average woman who eats 100 calories a day more than she should will gain nine pounds a year. These 100 calories might be found in an ounce of cheese, a tablespoon of butter, or a slice of bread.

Only an old-fashioned traditionalist would argue "well let's return to the good old days" of hand laundering or give up their cars to burn up more energy. And doctors agree that exercise alone is not always the best way of reducing weight.

What then is recommended? For most overweight persons, the prescription today is usually a well-balanced disciplined diet. Scientists have also developed low-calorie intake formulas which taste good, satisfy the appetite and contain no drugs. These formulas do away with strict calorie counting and the willpower required to adhere to a diet.

"Be Prepared"

THE AIM of the Boy Scout movement is to help mould character and develop youngsters who are cheerful, neighborly and resourceful.

That such goals are not mere catch-phrases is amply demonstrated in the list of awards announced recently for those of Canada's 150,000 Boy Scouts who distinguished themselves in various ways.

Who for example could be better prepared than Robert Harold Brannan, plucky 14-year-old Scout from St. Thomas, Ont., who "never forgot to smile" all through an illness that eventually took his life?

And what better deed than his decision to donate his corneas to the eye bank of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, enabling two blind persons to regain their sight?

Doctors discovered in October, 1958, that Robert had a malignant tumor of the right leg. The leg was amputated above the knee and fitted with an artificial limb. But the tumor spread to his lung and he died July 6, 1959.

"Bob never complained or forgot to smile," said his Scoutmaster, Gerry F. LeCourtois. "He was a patrol leader and kept up his work as long as he could during his illness. He was an inspiration to the entire troop."

Robert's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Brannan, will be invited to receive the Cornwell badge — highest Boy Scout award for gallantry — from Governor-General Vanier in the fall.

Every Scout promises to help other people at all times, and this, too, is borne out by the long list of awards to those who saved others from possible death.

The Silver Cross for gallantry with considerable risk went to Scout Peter Lawrence, 12, of North Sydney, N.S., for the rescue earlier this year of 5-year-old Gordon Fiander from drowning; to Cub Ronald Richmond, 10, of Parry Sound, Ont., for rescuing 4-year-old Patricia Milne from the Seguin River; and to Cub Andrew Kitchen, 8, of Kitchener, Ont., for saving his 7-year-old sister Heather from the Grand River.

The Boy Scout movement had its beginning in Canada about 1908, and stories of helpfulness and heroism have been turning up each year with regularity that leaves no doubt of the value of Scout training.

Of Many Things

— By Ambrose Hills —

TENDING STORE

It happens that I have quite a few friends who are in the general store business in small towns, so some of the illusions I had about storekeepers have been dispelled.

When I was a boy, I envied Mr. Cochrane who owned the big general store in Manitou. I thought his life was perfect. Any time he wished, he could have a chocolate bar; or he could slice delicious slivers from the huge round cheese always on the counter. All day long people came in and gave him money for groceries; or else brought eggs and butter from the farms, trading them for manufactured or processed goods from his shelves.

His store was a wonderful place. He used to pay me $4 per week to deliver groceries after school and to help out behind the counter. I would have worked for free — the place always smelled so nice, and he had given me the freedom of the candy case (he almost wished he hadn't because I came close to disproving his theory that boys soon tire of chocolates if they can have all they want), and I got to meet all the people who came into shop and chatted.

And I was taken into the secret about these markings on the goods. If you knew the signs, you could tell what markup had been added to what the groceries cost in the first place. In some cases, it was quite high, and I was sure that Mr. Cochrane was coining millions of dollars!

Alas and alackaday, storekeeping, when you get to know the details, isn't an easy road to riches. Markup is a long way from being profit, and those groceries don't get on the shelves by themselves. Profits range from two cents to four cents on the dollar of sales — and a few unpaid accounts or unhappy purchases can turn those slim profits into fat losses. And when my friends have a bad month, no one comes to help them with deficiency payments, disaster funds, or anything else. They are on their own. The only time anyone from the government shows an interest in them is at income tax time, or to make sure they are paying proper wages and giving honest weight!

So, my illusions are dispelled — and yet, I think I'd like to be a storekeeper. Dreams die hard!

What is a Communist?

— By Lewis Milligan —

The best answer to the above question was given over a hundred years ago by Ebenezer Elliott, when he wrote:

Elliott was known as "The Corn Law Rhymer." He opposed that law as a tax on the bread of the common people. He took an active part in the Chartist movement in England, which agitated for political reform and the social betterment of the working classes. But Elliott turned against the extremists who were advocating socialism, which he foresaw would lead to communism. When he wrote the hymn, "God Save the People," he was thinking as much of their spiritual as their material welfare:

"God save the people; Thine they are,
Thy children, as Thine angels fair;
From vice, oppression, and despair,
God save the people."

Elliott was not asking God to save the people from excessive taxation; he joined the Chartist movement and wrote his corn law rhymes and other verses to rouse public opinion for political reform, which was badly needed in those days. The Chartist program demanded universal manhood suffrage, vote by ballot, equal electoral districts, annual parliaments, payment of members, and abolition of their property qualifications. In short, representative government. That was the direct opposite to communism, which was being advocated on the continent by Karl Marx and others as the only remedy for all social problems. They would have nothing to do with reform of existing political institutions; these must be abolished by complete revolution.

That is what happened in Russia, and the Soviet Union is an example of the result of those "yearnings for equal division of unequal earnings." Communism has been defined as "A system by which the means of production and distribution are owned by the government, and the goods produced are shared by all citizens according to their need." The Soviet Union has fulfilled the first part of that program; but the goods produced are not shared by all citizens according to their political status. Members of the Communist Party, who are the upper class of the population, have preference in government appointments and civil services, receive higher pay and have special privileges in the distribution of the products. The workers, who are the producers and do most of the earning, are needier than ever. This is revealed in a table just released by The Conference Board of New York, showing comparisons of work required to earn enough to buy certain consumer goods in New York and Moscow, as follows:

"Worker in New York can earn enough in three minutes' labor to buy a pound of sugar. Worker in Moscow would have to work one hour and 40 minutes to do so. A man's cotton shirt, in New York, represents 58 minutes of work time — in USSR 15 hours of work time. A rayon dress in New York can be paid for in 4 hours and 36 minutes of work. In Moscow the same dress, if available, would call for 73.30 hours of work. A man's woollen suit, in New York, takes 23 hours of work time to earn enough to pay for it. A similar suit in USSR requires 275 hours of work time." — Enough said.

SPEAK NO ILL . . .

Speak no ill, but lenient be
To others' failings as your own;
If you be the first the fault to see,
Be not the first to make it known.

No lip may tell how brief its span;
Then, O, the little time we stay,
Let us speak of all the best we can.

with G. E. MORTIMORE

The two brothers are much different from one another in temperament. The older boy with the green eyes rushes into new things, and expects to do them exactly right, with no mistakes, on his first attempt.

If he fails, he pouts and slams objects down, and goes away in a rage.

His small brown-eyed brother stops and thinks deeply before he tackles any task. You can almost hear the wheels turning. Then he goes about the task slowly and carefully. If he makes a mistake, it doesn't ruffle him.

"Yes, it's wrong," he says calmly, and sets about trying to do it right.

In the older boy I can see a kind of small caricature of myself, like a reflection in a fun-house mirror.

The younger boy gives me a picture of myself as I would have seldom allowing emotions to fog liked to be, cool and deliberate, the mind.

However, the younger boy does slip sometimes, and loses his temper. I'm glad he does. If he always preserved that unearthly calm, I would have been worried in case I had been chosen to have a small saint billeted in my house.

But sometimes the small saint flies into a rage. As I lift my hand to administer a wallop, I catch the brown eyes turned up toward me, blazing with defiance. Even in moments of rebellion, the young wretch (a born public relations man) has a charm about him that almost persuades me to let him off.

But it doesn't work. Whomp! Whomp! The little fiend goes away howling. In a few minutes, however, he will have forgotten the whole thing.

His green-eyed brother, in the same position, would stubbornly carry the grudge all day.

Even when he is in the right, the older boy has a trick of nagging and irritating people. But with the younger one, it is exactly the reverse. Even when he is in the wrong he draws sympathy.

For the older boy, life is going to be a long, hard fight. But the younger one is certain to charm his way through. That's the unfair trick that nature plays on some of us.

Learn how to control temper

Learn how to control your temper if you are a motorist, urges the Provincial Highway Safety Committee (Prudentia). Perhaps it is mighty difficult to keep your temper before the foolhardiness of other motorists, cyclists or pedestrians. But to lose one's temper does not help. It only prods the motorist into driving behavior which he would never think of if his temper were normal. Remain coolheaded, and remain safe.

The former Miss Margaret Leith Joss, she was born in Lachute in 1890, a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Joss. Married to Mr. Russell Carpenter, they resided at Three Rivers and Grand'Mere until moving to Lachute some eight years ago.

Left to mourn the passing of a devoted wife and mother are her husband and family of three — Elsie (Mrs. Jean Coté, of St. Vincent de Paul), Edna (Mrs. Gordon Sutton, of Port Arthur) and Harry, of Montreal. There also remain a sister, Muriel (Mrs. Proven MacCulloch, of Isle aux Chats), and a brother, Charles, of Lachute.

A member and regular attender with her husband at the United Church, Mrs. Carpenter will be greatly missed by many friends and relatives, to whom during her lifetime she had been most kind and helpful.

Funeral service is being held Thursday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock from Lachute United Church, conducted by the Rev. W. B. Rosborough. . . . Pall-bearers — Messrs. Edgar Pollock, John Chalmers, Ross Swail, Leslie Kerr, Fred McGill and R. A. Giles.

Criticizes programs on French CBC network

Quebec (CP) — French-language broadcasting and telecasting has come under fire from a priest writing for the official publication of the Quebec Diocese, "La Semaine Religieuse".

The Rev. Daniel Croteau, a Sherbrooke priest, says there is an immoral outlook in programming content.

He was particularly critical of the CBC French network. He said, "The programs seem to be undermining the very foundations of the spiritual and religious traditions which are held in such high respect by our people."

District assembly of French-language Jehovah's Witnesses

French-speaking Jehovah's Witnesses from the locality of Lachute will attend a district assembly to be held at the Verdun Auditorium September 1 to 4, inclusive.

This convention will attract delegates from all parts. It is also expected that delegates will attend from several other provinces and from the United States, an attendance upward of 2,500 being anticipated.

For some years the Witnesses have appealed their cases before the courts in their fight to establish freedom of worship. Their legal counsel, Mr. G. How, well known in this province, will be one of the principal speakers.

The purpose of this gathering, which has as its theme "Seek Peace and Pursue It", is to help each Witness to improve his Bible knowledge and to apply the principles of God's Word in his life. An interesting feature of the assembly will be the baptism by total immersion in water, which will take place Saturday morning.

The climax of this four-day assembly will be the public lecture to be given Sunday, September 4, at 3 p.m. by Mr. Laurier Saumur, supervisor of Jehovah's Witnesses for Quebec and the Maritimes. The subject under discussion will be, "Security During 'War of the Great Day of God Almighty'."

HOW TO DEAL WITH YOUTHFUL STEALING

— By NANCY CLEAVER —

A young Chinese Christian was asked why he did not take advantage of an opportunity to steal a sum of money. His answer was, "I would have to live with a thief the rest of my life."

In old China parents accepted responsibility for bad behaviour of a child and often a father was punished for a boy's theft. When a son or daughter get into trouble about stealing or anything else, father and mother are likely to be upset and ashamed. How did their child give in to temptation? Most parents know that bitter reproaches piled on the young offender are worse than useless. He needs to feel that his parents will see him through, help him replace the stolen goods, and make a fresh start.

Dealing with the young thief is puzzling to parents. Often a trained social worker or juvenile police officer can help both parents and the boy himself discover some of the reasons behind his mistake.

Jimmie White has been caught by a plainclothesman in the act of stealing a pocketknife off a display counter. There were several boys who planned a thieving expedition and Jimmie was rather flattered that the older boys included him. He had been lonely and now he was one of the gang.

Now he has been caught Jimmie doesn't know why he was such a fool to be led astray. Bitterly he agrees that "Crime doesn't pay!" His parents can direct him in making good for his share of the loss to the store. Likely he will refuse to "squeal" on the other boys but it is important that he should receive help in finding more suitable companions.

Boys in their teens naturally crave activity and fellowship. Lads who are in a Scout Troop, a Y.M.C.A. group, a Junior Farmers' organization or some other constructive youth group have fun under able leadership. They very seldom get into trouble stealing because they are occupied with other interests.

In many cases of persistent stealing, social workers or officers of a Juvenile Court have discovered after careful study that the offender is upset emotionally. His great lack is the knowledge that his parents love him and accept him as he is. The child who feels he is unwanted or a failure, may take to stealing to "get even". Life has given him a raw deal, so why should he care if he brings disgrace to his family?

Boys and girls from homes in the low income bracket sometimes steal because there are things they want to own which they have not the money to buy. A boy may covet a hunting knife, "like the other fellows have." Sometimes a girl, not old enough to earn money baby-sitting, steals money to treat her chum to a movie.

Whatever the cause of stealing, the young offender needs to be given a new start, and continued moral support and affection. No effort at understanding and guidance is too great to salvage a youngster from the shadowy path of stealing.

He's made a mistake — a serious one. Parents, teachers and friends should work together not to humiliate him further, but to see he doesn't repeat the offence. Faith and real affection can help him in this time of need without making light of the seriousness of a black mark against his good name which stealing makes; a youth needs to be given guidance in returning and making good anything he has taken. Many a fine adult citizen had one thieving youthful episode. The boy who has stolen needs a "second chance" to get back on the right and honest road. Do give it to him!

Fashions

Sheer white silk woven in a cross-bar effect and posed over a pale blue slip is the sweet story of a beautiful bridal coat. The snug bodice with its three-quarter-length sleeves has a small collar that curves up in back. The gathered skirt is slightly longer in back. The slim waistline is garnished with a large red rose to add color contrast.

Canadian dresses in Moscow and Paris?

There's just a chance that the young ladies of Moscow, Tomsk or Omsk may soon be wearing Canadian-made dresses, says The Financial Post.

The enormous — and so far almost unsatisfied — Russian market for smart Western clothes is now receiving the close attention of the lively Dress and Sportswear Manufacturers Guild. Paris and provincial France isn't being overlooked.

The Guild already has won more than $650,000 worth of orders from Britain in less than a year. Now it is looking for fresh fields.

A grilling topic

Outdoor eating has come a long way since Grandmother's Day. The backyard grill is standard equipment in many families today, as is portable cooking gear that goes along on a family outing to favorite country, seashore or lakeside haunts. The range of menu items for outdoor cookery is increasing too as we experiment with many foods previously considered strictly for indoor cooking. Fish fillets and steaks don't demand any particularly fussy treatment and they take on delightful new appeal when cooked on a grill over glowing coals. Because of its fatty nature, salmon is one of the best varieties for outdoor cooking. Halibut, haddock and other fillets may be used, although they must be basted frequently, and it is best to use more oil in the marinade.

Barbecued Salmon Steaks

4 to 6 salmon steaks (at least ½ inch thick), ½ teaspoon salt, juice of 1 lemon, 3 tablespoons salad oil, ¼ teaspoon pepper, ½ teaspoon dry mustard.

Arrange salmon steaks in refrigerator dish. Combine remaining ingredients and pour over steaks. Cover dish and let marinate in refrigerator about 4 hours. Place on greased grill over low glowing coals. Grill ten minutes, turn and grill another ten minutes or until salmon flakes when tested with a fork. Baste during grilling with marinade. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Menu Note: If grill is big enough, grill whole tomatoes along with salmon. Medium sized tomatoes take about the same length of time as salmon steaks. Cut off stem ends of tomatoes. Scoop out a little of the tomato and add a pat of butter, salt and pepper. Frozen French fries also take same length of time to cook in oven. Follow directions on package. If picnic is away from home, serve with potato chips instead of French fries.

THE VOTE FOR WOMEN

Wyoming put its women on a pedestal long before the other states. According to World Book Encyclopedia, Wyoming granted women full voting rights in 1869.

Rub table salt on a cracked egg before boiling it to keep the egg white from seeping out.

Urgently wanted — air passengers

Urgently required: Several hundred thousand people willing to fly the Atlantic between October and the end of March at special low rates, writes Clive Baxter in The Financial Post. While the message will be phrased in more attractive terms, that is what airline advertisements will soon be saying as the much-feared off-season of air travel approaches.

This summer, as the big jets hit the market for the first time in force, passenger records have been sent spinning. The increased capacity of the new jets means lines must carry more passengers this winter than last.

"Those jets are fabulous money-makers", one worried airline official told The Financial Post. "But if they aren't kept busy they can lose it all again in no time flat. We are now slaves of our machines."

TREAT FOR BIRDS

Meaford, Ont. (CP)— Gulls had a field day when Meaford harbor, near Owen Sound, was filled with an influx of shad. The fish swarmed in the water, leaping above the surface by dozens.

Teatime Topics

Dinner-in-a-dish is one way of allowing the homemaker extra time to enjoy the sunshine outdoors or perhaps to finish the gardening.

Casseroles are particularly suited because they can be prepared in the morning, leaving the afternoon hours free for other activities.

Macaroni and cheese can be turned into a complete first course, say Ontario home economists. Sausages to be served with it are baked in the oven at the same time.

Pork sausage meat, kernel corn, cracker crumbs and green peppers can be combined into a tasty casserole dish. Shape the meat into patties and brown in bacon dripping then thicken the brown drippings with flour and add milk or vegetable stock to make a sauce. Add green pepper to the sauce.

In a buttered baking dish place a layer of cracker crumbs next a layer of kernel corn and then the sausage patties. Pour the sauce over this and sprinkle cracker crumbs on top. Dot with butter and bake at 350 degrees for 40 minutes.

Lawn Care

Don't be stingy when watering the lawn. Give it a good soaking. Doing one section at a time is good garden logic, say the experts Water each section until you have applied one-and-one-half inches. You can tell when there's enough by placing three or four pans in the area.

Sparse watering often can do more harm than good by luring the roots to the surface. Apply fertilizer after watering the lawn, not before. If applied while the grass is wet, it may stick and burn the grass.

Twitch grass can be destroyed by mowing the lawn twice each week. The bothersome grass can't survive the constant cutting.

Clippings aren't a problem unless they are full of crabgrass seed heads. In that case, the lawn will need to be raked.

Painting Hint

Ever wondered how to get hardened paint splatters off the floor? Ordinary nail polish remover does the job. Let the remover sink in for a few minutes, rub off with a clean cloth then wash the spot with warm, soapy water.

Colorless nail polish can be used to solve the problem of costume jewelry which discolors the skin. Wash the jewelry with warm, soapy water, rinse and dry, then add a coat of polish to the back of the jewelry.

Matching Sets

The mother and daughter sets of matched carriages are new on the market. Mother pushes the baby in one and her daughter pushes her doll in the other.

The features of the baby carriage are reproduced in the doll carriage. It's equipped with brakes, fenders and a washable hood complete with sun visor. The detachable body can be used as a bed for the doll in the same way the body of the baby carriage can be used for long car trips.

LONGEVITY NOTE

A Korean child would be certain that the Hamilton resident who recently reached her 100th birthday had eaten many long noodles — for in Korea, noodles are a symbol of long life! Although the lady from Hamilton probably attained her longevity without eating noodles, in the midst of birthday celebrations including greetings from Queen Elizabeth and Prime Minister Diefenbaker, she remembered her young friends in Korea with a contribution to the Unitarian Service Committee at 78 Sparks Street, Ottawa.

FIRST ESKIMO ORDAINED

History was made at St. James cathedral, Toronto, Ont., as the "laying on of the hands" climaxes the ordination of Rev. Aramand Tagoona (right). He is the first Eskimo ordained into the Anglican priesthood. He's a member of the Ivelik tribe.

Florence Nightingale, 'Lady of the Lamp'

The year 1960 sees two Nightingale anniversaries. Fifty years ago, on August 13, 1910, Florence Nightingale died in London at the age of ninety. A hundred years ago, her creation, the Nightingale Training School for Nurses, opened on July 9, 1860. Her name will always be associated with nineteenth century advances in the care of the sick and the promotion of health, and especially in the transformation achieved in the status and quality of nurses.

The British public had been shocked to learn of the disorganized and inadequate provision for the care of the sick and wounded both in the Crimea, and at the base at Scutari. Miss Nightingale accepted an invitation to go, at Government expense, and she took with her medical supplies and money provided from a fund raised by "The Times", and a picked team of women nurses. At this time only male nurses, themselves soldiers, were employed in military hospitals, and the typical women nurses of the day, with some honorable exceptions, were uneducated and unskilled, and notorious for drunkenness and promiscuity. Miss Nightingale accordingly had to overcome considerable prejudice on the part of the military medical authorities against the employment of her women nurses. Eventually, she succeeded in getting her nurses accepted. She also became the chief supplier of good food and clothing for the troops in military hospitals, and cleansed and repaired the infested and squalid buildings. Unsparing of herself, she earned from the grateful soldiers the name, "The Lady of the Lamp", from her making a final nightly round, lantern in hand; equally important was her unceasing work in administering funds and stores, controlling her staff and writing reports to the Government in London on the deficiencies she found.

In 1856, Miss Nightingale returned to England to find herself a popular heroine. She then disappeared from the public eye. She had more than half her life yet to live, and she continued to work "behind the scenes", although her way of life was for most of this time that of a retired semi-invalid. The contacts she had in Government circles enabled her to influence people in a position to take action, and her achievements had brought her recognition as an unequalled authority on nursing and hospital matters.

Almost immediately after her return Miss Nightingale became the driving force of a movement for army medical matters. Thanks to her efforts, a Royal Commission was appointed in 1856 to enquire into the health of the army.

In all this activity, the cause of nursing as a profession continued to occupy an important place. She was active in the promotion of a Training School for Nurses; and in 1860 the school named after her was opened in association with St. Thomas's Hospital in London. The first students were carefully chosen under Miss Nightingale's personal supervision, and the school was financed from the Nightingale Fund for Training Nurses, into which Miss Nightingale had converted the money raised by the British public in 1855 as a personal gift to her for her services; it flourished and is still in existence at St. Thomas's Hospital.

It is appropriate that this remarkable Englishwoman is still best and most widely remembered not as a research worker and adminstrative reformer but as the pattern of personal service epitomized in the "Lady of the Lamp."

That Sellers' Market

By C. J. Harris

The New York magazine Vital Speeches has seen fit to include in its pages a talk made in Winnipeg by a Vancouverite, Howard T. Mitchell, president of a west coast publishing house. What the words of a Canadian talking about Canada would have value for Americans seem unusual, but it is that kind of a speech.

This country's very high living standard, Mr. Mitchell said in part, is largely because "from 1939 to about 1957 Canada had a great abundance of raw materials to sell, on the greatest sellers' market in history." But, he asked, has this long period of easy prosperity set the stage for industrial strife by convincing us that every year wage levels in industry must rise?

"Surely we need to realize," he went on, "that our high standard of living comes from no such device as merely the jacking up of wage scales. If that were so we'd be stupid not to agree to up all remuneration rates at once by 50 per cent and become forthwith the richest people in the world. Our high standard of living has come far less from organization of labor — useful though that has been in wiping out some areas of exploitation and social injustice — than from organization of inventive talent, savings, machinery, management and labor into effectual teamwork for production and distribution.

"We are only beginning to organize our thinking on the subject of trade union responsibility. . . . May I quote fairly recent experience in British Columbia. There existed in B.C. all the original tendency to leave unusual power vested in labor unions because it was felt that unions had been the underdogs. . . . But then came Big Unionism. People in British Columbia became convinced that unions had too much power and that it was often exercised unwisely. . . . First came the secret, supervised strike ballot. Reform of the law to effect this change was attacked by union leaders in most intemperate terms. . . . Far from wilting under the impact of this reform, unions gained in membership. Some strikes were undoubtedly prevented for lack of membership support, some labor union policy decisions were made with more restraint. But if that was injurious to unionism it would be hard to show in what respect. . . .

"I am impressed with the fact that throughout Northern Europe, which has some of the most advanced trades union movements in the world, the strike has been virtually abandoned as a device to attain union objectives. Europe has found answers, too, in incentive pay systems of a kind generally rejected by trades unions in North America and in joint works committees which serve as a channel of communication so sadly lacking in our labor-management set-up in North America. . . . Both employer and employee interests in Canada would do well to make an examination of these European techniques."

The all-time favorite movie girlfriend of Bob Hope and Bing Crosby is to be featured at the Ottawa Exhibition grandstand show, August 22-27.

Dorothy Lamour, the girl who made the sarong famous in any number of films with Hope and Crosby, will be appearing in person at the Lansdowne Park grandstand stage.

Miss Lamour will be supported by an outstanding variety show including the famed Mariners Quartet and a precision dance line of beautiful and talented chorus girls.

On the opening nights of the Ottawa Fair, a Teen-Age Jamboree will be held at the grandstand. Thus, on August 19-20, there will be leading singers and entertainers of particular appeal to the younger set.

Have You A Question on UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE OR EMPLOYMENT?

In this column we publish questions about unemployment insurance and employment, together with answers received from the Unemployment Insurance Commission.

If you are uncertain about any point do not hesitate to send us your question. We will obtain an answer and publish it in this column.

Following are some questions with answers which may be of interest to you:

Q.—I am receiving a pension from the Federal Government. I am 71 years old and still working in insurable employment. In the summer of 1959, I worked for 18 weeks. Am I entitled to seasonal benefits for the period January, February and March, 1960?

A.—In order to have qualified for seasonal benefit during the period you mentioned, it would have been necessary for you to have made an application for benefit and to have fulfilled in all respects the conditions for entitlement to benefit. It would have been necessary that you had at least 15 contribution weeks between March 28, 1959, and the week in which your claim was filed, or to have had a regular benefit period which expired after May 16, 1959.

Q.—I have a son who owns a store. I have been living with him for seven years and working as a clerk. Can he give me unemployment insurance stamps?

A.—Your son can only insure you if you are employed under a contract of service — that is, if there is a genuine master and servant relationship. This question cannot be determined on the basis of the brief information supplied. Your employer should submit full details to the local NES office and ask for a ruling.

Q.—When infractions are discovered, who determines the penalty to be imposed?

A.—The enforcement officer reports all the facts of each case he handles to his regional office. A legal staff reviews the evidence and decides on whether prosecutions should be undertaken or a penalty imposed against future benefits. Extenuating circumstances are considered, and each case is examined on its own merits. Policy and direction are given from head office in Ottawa, and the Department of Justice provides technical assistance when required.

Slow down and Live

No Admittance! AFTOSA

Few are the countries of the world where the livestock owner does not live in dread of seeing the above notice tacked upon his gate. For he knows that if his animals become infected with this disease they will waste away and never regain normal weight and milk production.

He also knows that once aftosa hits the only way to stop it is to kill off all livestock in the entire infected area!

But the economic losses caused by this animal ill—formally named foot-and-mouth disease, but more commonly known as "aftosa" — are not limited to stock owners. Today aftosa is a world problem. Here are a few reasons why:

— Because aftosa control and eradication measures are expensive to governments.

— Because in a world where too many millions are already undernourished, aftosa is the number one cause of loss of animal protein.

— Because aftosa cuts down international trade by foreing aftosa-free countries to bar animal products coming from infected lands.

Only Australia, the Guianas, New Zealand, Norway, Sweden, and the western hemisphere north of Panama are free of aftosa. Yet even these areas run danger of infection as the aftosa virus can be carried in bones, blood, milk and hides as well as fresh, dried, canned or even frozen meats.

Taxes National Economies

In stamping out six aftosa epidemics between 1900 and 1930, the United States suffered direct and indirect costs totalling almost $200 million.

Therefore when aftosa broke out in Mexico in 1946, the U.S. found the need to protect its own livestock at one with its sympathy for a sister republic's plight. Both countries fought shoulder to shoulder for six years before aftosa was eradicated. The cost: $130 million to the U.S. and more than $500 million to Mexico.

In South America, Argentina alone estimates aftosa costs it $150 million a year.

When aftosa suddenly appeared in limited areas of Canada's Saskatchewan province in 1954 all shipment to the United States of Canadian breeder and feeder cattle was abruptly halted. In the few months before the outbreak was put down Canadian farmers lost millions of dollars of customary revenue.

Pan American Center Set Up

It was in recognition of aftosa's international dimensions that the 21 American Republics jointly founded the Pan American Foot-and-Mouth Disease Center on the outskirts of Rio de Janeiro in 1951.

Administered by the Pan American Sanitary Bureau, and financed through the Organization of American States' Technical Cooperation Program, the Center's purpose is to aid the countries in controlling and eventually eradicating aftosa from the hemisphere.

The Center trains anti-aftosa workers, provides the countries with consultants, organizes multi-national campaigns, furnishes reference laboratory and diagnostic services, and carries out research.

Center experts hope soon to produce a vaccine that will protect livestock for much longer periods than do any in present use. Such a vaccine could mean aftosa's eradication.

Diary of a Vagabond

BY DOROTHY BARKER

I have a profound statement I feel I must make. If more people would hang a sign on their front doors, "Gone Fishin'" and take it for its literal meaning, there might be less world wide tension.

I lost any I ever had some weeks ago, when I offered to help a friend of mine out of a spot. She had promised to take charge of her eldest grandchild when his mother was birthing her third baby. Scheduled to take place over a week-end, everything seemed to be going smoothly until the new heir refused to arrive on time. This threw the family for a hassle, especially the grandmother, who is a hardworking weekly newspaper editor.

Because our friendship has the strength of a Damon and Pythias relationship, I stepped into the breach and offered to take charge of young Pete, age six. I didn't realize what I was in for. My conceit, that all you have to do to control any obstreperous youngster is to be pals with him, took an awful beating during those hours before a certain weekly newspaper was put to press and one demon was delivered to his lawful grandmother's loving care.

The morning I picked him up was a glorious day. In a chirpy, cheerful tone I asked my small guest what he would like to do. "Fish," he said laconically.

This seemed like a good idea so we dug for worms, cut poles from the willows in the swamp and attached bent pins to long pieces of baker's twine. I knew a dandy spot, a small creek that runs under the railway trestle on the outskirts of our town.

We settled ourselves on the bank of the little stream and immediately swarms of black flies settled themselves on us. For some untold reason, Pete was oblivious of their sting. In the beginning of our adventure, I was too revolted at the thought of attaching worm to bent pin to notice the rocky mountain ridge that was being raised on my brow through the thirsty industry of gnat-sized insects.

This knowledgeable Isaac Walton informed me there must be no talking. We sat there like statues waiting for our first nibble. I began to pray for some kind of an interruption that would throw Pete off his determination to "fish." Then it happened. A small Scotty pup came around the cement abutment wagging her funny little tail and prancing about like a ballet dancer. She dashed into the water, grabbed Pete's line and returned to shore in great glee.

Pete jumped up and down in rage. The water was all muddied up and the spell broken. I told him to sit still and I would walk the dog up the highway to lure her away. When I returned Pete was entranced again with line suspended and that blissful, vacuous look all fishermen acquire, on his funny little elphin face.

Then a train came rumbling over the bridge, again disturbing the tranquility of the day. Pete blew a fuse. The only way I could appease him was to offer to take him to a nearby school where the 100th anniversary of this place of learning was being celebrated. The teacher had arranged a fishpond for the pupil's delight and when she offered Pete a pole and asked what he would like on the end of his line, this one-track minded child demanded "a perch".

His frustration knew no bounds when he found a comic book on the end of his line. However, he refused to give up the pink crepe paper-bound fishing pole. We left the school with one rather feminine looking pole, one disappointed child, one comic book, but no fish.

Pete was to get his wish, if not for a perch, at least for a fish. On our way home we saw three men fishing under the trestle. Pete yelled for me to stop the car and he dashed up to one of them. I couldn't hear the conversation, but the instruction must have been good, for soon his line was jerking out one finger-length carp after another, as he attempted to control the unrolling of frilly pink paper decoration from his pole.

The fish ended up in a death struggle, flapping around on my cellar floor. Apparently Pete's only interest in "fishin" was in the catch. He hated the slimy, wiggly things once they were out of the water. By the time I had dug their last resting place in the garden, I had forgotten all about any worries I ever had. That is, other than to keep a small boy busy while his mother labored and his grandmother wrote copy.

Two young farmers offered U.K. study tour

Ottawa — The Canadian Federation of Agriculture's National Office in Ottawa has again received authorization from the Nuffield Foundation in the United Kingdom, to announce that applications will be received from young Canadian farmers who are interested in qualifying for the annual Nuffield Travelling Scholarships. These scholarships provide the opportunity for two young farmers to visit Great Britain early in 1961, all expenses paid, and for a period of six months to study all phases of agricultural practice and farming conditions there.

The scholarships are administered in Canada by the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, and all applications must be placed with the offices of the Provincial Federations, or member bodies of the CFA. The deadline for these applications to be in the hands of the National organization is October 30.

BEAVER COLONY

Calgary (... The fish and game league was told that a colony of about 30 beaver is annoying farmers in the High River area by felling trees and changing water courses. The provincial government offered the farmers special licenses permitting destruction of the animals, but the fish and game association suggested borrowing traps and catching the beaver for the Calgary zoo.

Tips on Touring

By Carol Lane

Women's Travel Authority

Travel gadgets are sold in all stores now — for a price. But the resourceful traveller can devise ingenious ways to save himself trouble and expense.

Take, for instance, the lowly spring-type clothespin. One driver I know fastens it to his dashboard ashtray and parks his cigarette snugly between the two upper prongs. I've also seen it used to clamp a road map to the sun-visor — very handy.

Ever try to jam ice into your old, not too foolproof thermos bottle? A friend once showed me how she made triangular pieces of ice by doubling a piece of wax paper, folding in into pleats, and placing it into a water-filled refrigerator tray. The next morning the ice triangles slid effortlessly into the thermos!

A travelling family I know takes along an ordinary metal cookie sheet to serve as a drawing board or game table for their restless children. They also keep a small footstool in the back seat so the small fry can enjoy the view. It can double as an armrest for adults, too.

My prize story on this subject is the couple I observed picnicking on the roof of their car one sunny Sunday. The reason, they explained, was . . . to avoid the ants!

EFFICIENT FEEDING AND LIVESTOCK MANAGEMENT

By Gustav Bohstedt
Emeritus Professor of Animal Husbandry
University of Wisconsin

Our Calorie-Conscious Nation

It's been said that two of the most pressing questions before the American public are: (1) How can I reduce? and (2) Where can I park my car?

An acquaintance has a quick answer for both questions: "Leave your car home and walk!"

Surely we are not walking as much as we used to, or perhaps as much as we should.

Dr. Bohstedt

The change in ways is seen on the farms too. Older farmers remember walking all day, for weeks at a time, behind the plow or harrow. Or what is more strenuous than husking corn by hand, perhaps 100 bushels or more a day? How this burned up the calories!

And how, with that work, we would eat huge portions of mashed potatoes, home-made bread, meat, eggs, milk, pie, vegetables and fruit in season!

But we are mechanized now and do a lot of push-button work. A housewife has many labor saving devices. She no longer churns or washes clothes by hand. Much food and clothing is ready made. Enough to prove that muscular work has eased a great deal.

Eating habits changed too. The per capita consumption of bread and potatoes has tobogganed during recent decades, and we don't want any more fat pork or gobby cuts of beef, nor a lot of butter or lard.

These changes in our working and eating habits create the demand for meat type hogs, meat type beef and lamb—even chicken. Lots of red meat with just enough marbling to make for flavor, tenderness and juiciness.

This calls for earnest and persistent research work by geneticists, nutritionists, physiologists and meat technologists. Practically all experiment stations and other research institutions are now bending every effort to satisfy the consumer who wants the best of nutrition but a modest quantity of calories. Farmers and stockmen are following the researchers by turning more and more to production of the meat-type animals.

Question: May trace minerals be expected to improve a corn-soybean oil meal type ration which is already supplemented with calcium, phosphorus and salt?

Answer: The Purdue Experiment Station found that significant increases in gains in pigs from 30 to 100 pounds in weight were made by further additions of several or all six commonly used trace minerals, including cobalt. A very practical way of supplying these trace minerals is through the trace mineralized salt.

Massey-Ferguson Limited

MORE HORSEPOWER— LESS MANPOWER... THE KEY TO MORE PROFITABLE FARMING

The basic principle of sound farming economy is getting the maximum amount of work done at the lowest possible cost. The only way this can be accomplished is with modern farm machinery.

Modern farm machinery is designed to do more work in less time at lower cost. More horsepower per man allows you to reap full benefits from today's more productive farming methods by keeping labour costs in line. It also assures you of a reliable work force you can swing into action at a moment's notice. Critical farm operations get done without delay and without depending on the availability of high cost farm labour. Whatever kind of farming you do you can look to Massey-Ferguson for the machines and implements that will do every job faster, more efficiently, and more economically.

Watchman photographer on trail of "Echo I" satellite

This slightly enlarged photo shows what Syd Drew, Watchman photographer, recorded on film of the passage of the new "Echo I" satellite over these regions, at approximately 12.07 a.m. Tuesday, August 16. By placing his camera on a tripod for rock-steady support, and opening both lens and shutter for an exposure of about three minutes, Syd had the satellite recording its own course (the white line) across the film. At the same time all stars in its vicinity also recorded themselves on the film and, due to the rotation of the earth, their slight motion was shown by the short white lines on either side. . . .

It is somewhat awe-inspiring to realize this man-made satellite is in orbit about 1,100 miles from the earth, travelling at a speed of 15,000-odd miles an hour — that is, circling the earth every two hours or so.

Syd Drew states he will gladly offer assistance or advice to photo fans wishing to record this event on their own cameras while the satellite is still visible over these regions.

'L'Argenteuil' best French weekly in under-3,000 circulation grouping

The French-Language Weekly Newspapers of Canada held their 28th annual convention with an assembly of 240 persons, last Thursday to Saturday at the Manoir Richelieu, Murray Bay, Que. The Hon. Jean Lesage, Quebec premier, was principal speaker at the closing banquet.

The best all-round newspaper contest in the under-3,000 circulation class was won by the contemporary and offspring of this newspaper, L'Argenteuil, under the capable editorship of Fernand Berthiaume, who with his wife attended the conference and received the award.

This is the second time in its somewhat brief career that L'Argenteuil has won top honors among the French weeklies. In 1957, when there were two categories in competition, large format and tabloid, L'Argenteuil won the plaque in the former classification. The grouping of this contest was changed this year to provide two classes of a different nature: (1) over 3,000 circulation, and (2) under 3,000 circulation. Winner in the larger circulation group was L'Echo du Nord, St. Jerome.

Hawkesbury residents "in the dark" ask information on Hydro flooding

Beginning of expropriation proceedings around Hawkesbury to make room for the Carillon power project has led to complaints by area residents that they have been given no knowledge of how future flooding will affect them — writes Gordon Dewar in the Ottawa Journal.

Complaints have drawn the attention of Osie Villeneuve, Member of Parliament for Glengarry-Prescott, which includes Hawkesbury. He recently made two trips to question residents and engineers on the project and he is now prepared to plead the case of the residents to responsible authorities, Mr. Villeneuve said.

"The major complaint of residents", Mr. Villeneuve stated, "is that they have no idea what is going on. They would like to see a map, at least, which would show them how the area will look when the work is done."

Most of the people involved are lifelong residents, he declared, with no desire to move from the area. If they must move because of the the flooding, they want to settle nearby in equivalent situations.

"I hope that during expropriation they will be given fair consideration and first choice at new sites to rebuild", the M.P. said.

He had heard one or two complaints concerning the amount of expropriation offered, but said he felt these would be settled amicably after a bit of haggling.

His own rule for such settlements, however — and one he intends to make known to provincial authorities — is that all expropriated property should be paid for at replacement cost rather than present value so people involved will not suffer losses in rebuilding.

Had No Choice

"After all", he explained, "this is a situation they did not ask to be created — it was forced on them."

In Hawkesbury itself, said Mr. Villeneuve, about 180 buildings involving more than 100 families will be flooded or made useless by the higher water on the east-central part of the town along the river.

His concern there was that new homes to be provided for the families would be carefully planned and, as far as possible, on a non-speculative basis.

He has approached town authorities on the subject, he said, and made other inquiries.

Wants Experts

"I sincerely hope the municipal government will accept the offer of Ontario Hydro to engage the best planning engineers available and be guided by their advice for the future of the town", he stated. "It is also to be hoped there is not much speculation, that will be detrimental to the town's welfare."

The entire process of expropriation is going to be costly, Mr. Villeneuve suggested. When estimates were made in 1943 it was decided that $2,500,000 would be needed to pay for Ontario properties. Rising values since that time may well put total expropriation costs closer to $25,000,000, he said.

Nonetheless and despite the long-run beneficial nature of the project, he did not want to see anybody given a bad deal now, said the M.P.

There is time to make sure everyone receives fair compensation (the project is to be completed in late 1962 and probably not flooded until early 1963) and Mr. Villeneuve said he was "confident this will all be worked out satisfactorily".

Historical Society garden party held

The Historical Society of Argenteuil held a very enjoyable bridge and garden party on Wednesday afternoon, August 10. Fine weather encouraged an attendance of about 80 members and their friends.

Cards were played on the lawn, where tea was served at four o'clock.

The beautiful blanket which the Society's president kindly donated as a door prize, was won by Miss Freda Pemberton-Smith.

Water shortage — use sparingly

Lachute residents, and those serviced by the town water supply, are requested not to use hoses and sprinklers to water their lawns, due to the current shortage of water. While no emergency exists at present, a water shortage could reach the emergency stage in the not too distant future, should extreme caution not be taken.

Reports from Brownsburg indicate a similar shortage is being experienced there.

Inaugural Sept. 12 of new Boy Scout District Council

Ste. Adele — Scouting has grown to such an extent in the Laurentian area that a Boy Scout District Council has been formed to organize, extend, supervise and promote Scouting in Ste. Agathe, Ste. Adèle, Lac St. Denis and at the Shawbridge Boys' Farm, where Scout troops have been operating as Unattached Groups.

The inaugural meeting of the new Council will be held at Chantecler Hotel, Ste. Adèle, on Monday, September 12, and will be open to the public. The Provisional Committee which is planning and organizing the event consists of Lynch Caya, Ste. Agathe; Gib MacLeay, Ste. Adèle; Arthur Riddington, Shawbridge; and F/Lt. Ken Leavitt, of RCAF Station, Lac St. Denis.

A District Council in any area is formed by agreement of the Quebec Provincial Council and the areas concerned and is located in a natural economic or geographic area. It is expected that the formation of the new District Council in this area will not only mean better Scouting for the 175 boys already members, but will open the doors of Scouting to many new members.

Father and family of five children first victims in new ambulance car

Lachute's new ambulance-patrol car was pressed into use for the first time in an emergency last Sunday morning, when six persons were injured in an automobile accident on the Brownsburg Road.

The accident occurred when a car owned and driven by Jean Charles Blais, 41, of Whisseltown, rammed the rear of a halted car owned and driven by Jean Charles Noel, of Montreal. Damage to the cars was light.

Injured and requiring hospital treatment were Mr. Noel and his five children — Alaine, 13; Dora, 13; Lucien, 6½; Louis, 5; and Normand, 4. They were given first aid on the scene by Sgt.-Gilles Poirier and Cst. Romeo Gagné, and then transported to the Providence Hospital.

The fourth and last exhibition of the season for the Argenteuil Art Association will be held in the St. Andrews East municipal hall each afternoon from Saturday, August 27, to Monday, September 5, and will show paintings by three members of the Arts Club of Montreal, Leslie Coppold, A.R.C.A., G. Leslie Smith and Jack Young.

This three-man show will bring together paintings in oil and water colors which are widely different in styles and techniques, by artists of established reputation in both artistic and commercial fields.

Leslie Coppold is an associate of the Royal Canadian Academy. His paintings, in blending color tones and detail, are unusual, and whenever exhibited they create great interest. In the commercial art world the character of his work is widely appreciated and involves not only design but also construction of displays, of which the most publicized has been the annual Christmas decoration of the Central Station in Montreal.

A. Leslie Smith, like Mr. Coppold, is a graduate of the Beaux Arts. He is a voluminous painter in a great variety of subjects and styles and the pictures to be shown have been selected to illustrate this diversity. They will range in water colors and oils from traditional to the abstract. A number of quick informal sketches and drawings will also be included, selected from a recent exhibition at the Arts Club for the particular interest of beginner painters, who will find that Mr. Smith, an instructor in art at Sir George Williams University, reveals in these sketches the basic techniques of sound painting.

Jack Young, who had his art training in London, has recently retired as head of the Art Department of the Imperial Tobacco Company. The greater time which he now devotes to painting his familiar and popular subjects of the hills and trees and streams of the Laurentian and Green Mountain country, has not equalled the demand for the work of this well-known artist.

Five sentenced for impaired driving

Five persons appeared in St. Jerome court before Judge Omer Coté on Tuesday of last week and were each sentenced to fines of $50 plus costs, their driving permits being suspended for a three-month period. All charges were laid by Sgt.-Det. Ralph Allen, officer in charge of the local Provincial Police detachment. The arrests were made by Lachute and Brownsburg municipal police, and Provincial traffic officers.

Sentenced were Noel Belley, 24, of Chute à Blondeau, Ont.; Albert Richard, 26, of Pont Viau; Gedeon Dagenais, 53, of Ayersville; and two 19-year-old youths, one from Brownsburg and one from L'Original, Ont.

(Our District Correspondent)

Harrington — The Harrington-Kilmar Pipe Band attended the Fergus Highland Games near Guelph, Ont., last week-end, where a massed band record was set in North America, with 18 bands in all.

The local boys will always remember this experience and the wonderful hospitality given them by the people of Fergus.

Said a news report from Fergus in a district newspaper: First pipe band to arrive in town for the Highland Games was the Harrington-Kilmar Band, Calumet, Quebec. They reached Fergus Friday noon by train, travelling over 400 miles.

The nine young men are staying in a private home arranged for them by the executive of the Chamber of Commerce. They were invited to use the swimming pool and did so. They were also entertained by Dr. and Mrs. Hugh Templin at dinner.

They lost no time on Friday afternoon, however, and were down in Victoria Park practising under the watchful eye of their Pipe Major, Gilbert Young. Mr. Young explained that they came a day earlier so they would have a chance to rest before entering the piping competitions.

This is the second competition for this band, which is tutored twice a month by Pipe Major John MacKenzie of the Rockcliffe Band, Ottawa, and Sgt. John Kerr, also from Ottawa. In a recent competition at Maxville, they fell slightly short of winning, mostly says their leader because they did not have a full band. Their ages range from 14 to 21. They wear the MacTavish plaids.

Lachute acquired a village pump!

From The Watchman of August 21, 1885:

An abundance of good pure water is now supplied to the public by a pump ingeniously fixed on the sidewalk opposite the butcher shop of Messrs. McArthur & Co. in the West End. It is the Town Pump — but without expense to the town, as a few public spirited citizens subscribed to lay pipes to a spring in a cellar. People come even from the East End to water their horses at the trough.

The Lachute Police Department's newly acquired ambulance-patrol car is photographed here with the staff of the department. Police Chief A. J. Whiteway pointed out that the ambulance was for police and fire emergency cases only and would not be used for domestic ambulance cases in competition with private concerns. Photographed left to right with the new vehicle are — Clerk Jean Charles Menard, Special Cst. George Taylor, Cst. Romeo Gagné, Chief A. J. Whiteway, Sgt. Gilles Poirier, Clerk Yvon Larocque, Cst. Felix L'Allier, and Cst. Gaetan Theriault.

The vehicle is equipped with a two-way radio; stretcher; first aid kit; the inhalator donated some years ago by the Lachute Lions Club; a fire axe and extinguisher. As an ambulance it proved its worth for the first time Sunday when six persons, two of them stretcher cases, were given first aid and transported to Providence Hospital within ten minutes after arrival of Sgt. Gilles Poirier on the accident scene. All members of the Police Department, along with a number of volunteer firemen, have been taking a St. John's Ambulance course in first aid given by Police Chief Whiteway.

— By BOB ATCHISON —

The best fishing to be had in and around our County seems to be at Sir John Lake, for Bass. It's true most fishermen don't bother about them locally, but they still give a very good account of themselves. We were up one night this past week, and while not getting anything worth boasting about, we had a lot of fun catching small ones and releasing them. All taken on flies, they sure provided a lot of pleasure. Red Trout are starting to hit very well now, and I have heard of a couple of fellows who were lucky enough to get their limit. Even the Greys are improving, too. A few have been taken, just 2 to 3 lbs., nevertheless these are better than nothing. For the North River, the Northern Pike are living up to their reputation of being mean and miserable when hooked. A couple that I know of have been landed and released, these were not big, one 8 lbs. the other 11 lbs. . . . It all adds up to some excellent sport later on in the year, however.

We can see cars going by, with their garbage bags and cartons in view, provided with the compliments of different organizations. Even with all this, our countryside looks like a prize junk-yard! When are we going to take a little pride and respect in our own countryside. It does make you wonder if these pigs act like this at home. This also applies to our waters. Ever take a look at some of the supposedly clean lakes in the district? Not so clean, are they? As a matter of record, any lakes in the area can be counted on to give up some good catches of cans, auto tires and rubbish. Then all the talk is on anti-pollution! That's a laugh, really. How can we talk on anti-pollution when we don't even practise it in our own County?

This certainly makes a person wonder at the stupidity of us humans. We talk of dumb animals, but how can we mean this when we aren't as clean as the animals. . . . You think this is stupid maybe? Well, did you ever see animals throwing junk all over their homes? Not much! Goodness knows just how and when these lessons are going to be put across to US of supposedly higher intelligence.

Still a lot of talk — and that is just about all for the present — on our firearms laws. It's getting toward the time for all good men to go out and shoot themselves a poor little human in place of a Deer. . . . Kidding aside, it's time some legislation was enacted protecting these unfortunates. We all know just what is going to happen during the season; and what is not being done. As an afterthought, how were we protected last Sunday morning? These are the types that get in shooting Deer. Everything that moves will be in trouble. All this talk of safety in the bush is to me just a farce. How can there ever be safety, when any joker can get a gun, and use it?

* * *

I have mentioned a number of times the fly casters in this district. I don't know just how many there are, but if enthusiasm counts for anything, we have one of the best groups anywhere. It's about time we got the fly fishermen's club going — so anyone interested, give a shout. From talks we have had with a group of these Waltons, only fly men or ladies will be entitled to membership. This may seems nuts, but from my point of view it's good. A fly fisherman is first and foremost a conservationist, and not a pot fisher. There is still a standing offer to anyone wanting to learn fly casting. Come on up, and get yourself a thrill.

* * *

I was fortunate enough this past week to see a good number of animals in their natural habitat. . . . First, the Moose mentioned earlier this year, are still around. Deer can be seen everywhere. As for the Rabbits they are getting to be a nuisance on the roads. A couple of mink are making their homes on Lake Hughes. Also Muskrats. I'm waiting for the day when those two animals bump into each other. I hope I'm around to see the fur fly! I haven't seen the Bears around, and probably won't, until the leaves start falling. If it was possible to find a good bee hive, sooner or later Mrs. Bear and offspring would show up.

Partridge are in good supply, and should stay that way until the fall. there will be plenty to give the wing shooters a work out. We won't forget the Crows; while not classed as a game bird, these too give some good sport.

* * *

Just got an interesting story on a Salmon trip down to N.B. Sixty fish were taken by this party. Of course when a salmon is landed it is classed as a kill, even though the fish is returned to the water. One fish of 27 lbs. was taken on a stream rod of 6 ft. 6 inches, weighing 3½ ounces. This battle took one hour and forty minutes to complete. This fish was kept and is going to be mounted. We were given a couple of Grilse, a young variety of Salmon getting the name from its weight, age and habits. The largest one is 3 lbs. and will make excellent eating. Anyone envious? . . . This is just a shade better than the fish landed by you, Clint.

* * *

Finally the Department of Fish and Game has cracked down. As most of us know by now, a group of professional poachers have been nailed killing ducks out of season. It's about time something like this happened. This is a practice that has been going on for a good long time. It has really been a ludicrous situation. Fellows going out after game before the season, then selling it to anyone interested.

It isn't only ducks that have been taking the beating, though. Right around this district I have been phoned on a number of occasions concerning certain "fellows" who have taken a few deer. If anyone can convince me that they can eat a couple of deer themselves, they sure are going to have a hard time. The sad part of this, is that these same jokers will boast of their good hunting ability! . . .

I'm not going to say any more on these types, but I think you know my feelings about the breaking of the game laws.

Veterans and their guests enjoyed the second annual Canadian Legion Golf Tournament, held Sunday last at the St. Andrews East golf course. There was a heavy entry in spite of the showery weather, and competition was keen among the experienced golfers and tyros alike. Several members recorded their first game of golf, and while scores were well outside par status, they were right in stride with pro friends as a result of the Sealed-Hole Atlantic system of scoring applied by Chairman Jim Duncan and his scoring assistant, Tom Smith.

Low-gross Branch 70 trophy was won for the first time by Lloyd Bryson, and the low-net Branch 70 trophy by Jim Duncan. This trophy was won in 1959 by Rene Paulsen.

Top ladies in the tourney were Mrs. Doug Hay with low gross, and Mrs. Eunice Dandy with low net, respectively. Mrs. Hay was also recipient of the Ladies' Auxiliary tea cup and saucer.

Two special events won by Bill Bevan, of Carling Lake, included Putter Driving from 6-inch tee and Chip 'n Putt contest.

A wide range of lovely gifts were presented, the majority of players coming away with some memento of this enjoyable event.

President B. A. Jenkins presented the Branch trophies and in his welcome to guests and friends thanked all who had contributed to the success of this affair, particularly Molson's, represented by Mr. Guy Besner, Dow Breweries, represented by Mr. Rene Laurin, and other individuals for their generous donations of prizes.

The usual hilarity and good cheer reigned during the meal, which was of excellent quality, and the enlarged banquet facilities at this club were put to good use. . . . Seated at head table in addition to Chairman and M.C. Jim Duncan, were President and Mrs. B. A. Jenkins, Mr. and Mrs. Guy Besner, and Mr. and Mrs. René Laurin.

Chairman Duncan and his tournament assistant, Tom Smith, expressed the hope that, for another year, even more players and guests from outside Legion branches would find it possible to turn out for this event.

George Kirby was the lucky recipient of an expensive set of golf irons, drawn for during the evening.

LEGION NOTES

"ACTIVE SERVICE YESTERDAY COMMUNITY SERVICE TODAY"

Owing to the fact that there was no gathering in July, the meeting of the Branch held last Wednesday had a full slate of business and reports.

After much discussion it was decided that Branch 70 would hold its Remembrance or Armistice Day parade on Sunday, November 13. In this manner it is felt that more Legionnaires and Veterans will be on parade, and that the townspeople will be free to attend the service at the Cenotaph.

It is hoped that the Legion members and the general public have noticed the new gun in the town park. Comrades G. Mitchell and T. Smith have worked in close alliance with the Town Council and the local R.C.A. Battery, to obtain and place this World War II field piece. An appropriate "handing over" ceremony is planned for early in the fall. This 25-pounder "dug-in" at the park must bring back a wave of memories to all gunners — once a gunner always a gunner — and to many an old infantry man as well.

It was also decided that the Legion Family Picnic would be held on the first Sunday after Labor day, September 11, at Bradford's farm. This is a date to remember, and the Sports and Entertainment Committee assure us of a real good get-together.

Com. R. Giles, chairman of the Sick and Relief Committee, reported on the various calls to members in sick bay. He expressed his sincere thanks, heartily endorsed by the members, to Com. Sam Bradshaw for his arrangements and work in obtaining an additional wheelchair for our hospital equipment.

It was reported that the Legion Pony Raffle and the Horse Pull at the Lachute Spring Fair were both highly successful. Com. Pres. B. A. Jenkins expressed his thanks to all the members who helped to put these events across in such a manner.

By the time that this is published, the Legion Golf Tournament will be entered in the record books. All indications point to a bigger and better time than last year. Com. J. Duncan has worked hard to make this an interesting and enjoyable affair. The winners and prize list will be announced.

With the holidays coming to a close, Branch 70 is looking forward to a full and active season. All members are requested to attend the forthcoming meetings to lend their advice and support to all the Legion activities. — Active Service Yesterday — Community Service Today.

Students engaged in Mines Dept. geological surveys

The number of geological surveys in the Province of Quebec this summer approaches — if not surpasses — the total program of all other provinces combined.

Authorities of the Quebec Department of Mines state that these surveys total 57 parties, one more than the 1959 summer program.

Terrain investigated in this summer's program includes mapping of new territories, while parties are also studying older territories in closer detail.

Over 300 persons are engaged in this program, led by 26 permanent geologists of the Mines Department, four university professors, and 12 other graduate geologists. The number of students working with the parties is at least 186. Canoemen, cooks and other help employ 100 men, raising the total to 334.

Weekly editors to convene in Vancouver, B.C.

More than 400 representatives of weekly newspapers from across Canada are expected to attend the 41st annual convention of the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association in Vancouver, September 12, 13 and 14.

Theme of the conference is "Pacific 60" and delegates will examine the importance of trade with Pacific countries.

Among convention highlights will be a report on Russia by Dr. A. E. (Dal) Crauer, B.C. Electric president and University of British Columbia chancellor.

Presentation will be made during the convention of the 1960 Better Newspapers Awards, given annually by the CWNA in recognition of outstanding achievement. Included are awards for the best all-round paper, best editorial page and best front page in the various circulation groups.

Chairman of the sessions will be CWNA President Leslie E. Barber of the Chilliwack (B.C.) Progress. Convention program chairman is Cecil Hacker, of the Abbotsford (B.C.) News.

Traffic nightmares

TWO TORONTO motorists who travelled 9,000 miles through Central and South America — overcoming the hazards of swamps and jungles — found themselves badly snarled in downtown traffic back in Toronto.

Richard Bevir, 30, and Terry Whitfield, 27, were caught in a jam of cars en route to the city hall for an official reception. Finally disentangled, they lost more precious minutes finding a place to park before reaching Mayor Nathan Phillips' office 15 minutes late.

Their plight is typical of that facing motorists all across Canada. The story is the same in Montreal and almost everywhere: Clogged city arteries where traffic is slowed to a crawl.

The problem is most acute at week-ends on the "open" road and during rush hours in urban centres. The trouble is that additional vehicles are pouring onto the roads faster than new highways are being built.

Since the end of the Second World War the number of cars has multiplied. Meanwhile millions of dollars have been spent on new roads, on widening and improvement of existing roads.

Motor vehicle registrations totalled 2,034,943 in 1948. By 1957 they had climbed to 4,459,595. In that year there were 3,383,419 passenger cars, one for every five Canadians.

Expenditures on roads and highways for the year ended March 31, 1958, totalled $701,972,824. And for the same fiscal year provincial revenues from registration and operation of motor vehicles amounted to $480,894,523.

There doesn't seem to be any prospect of a halt in the increase of cars on the road. And it seems equally clear that traffic congestion problems will remain — and perhaps grow worse.

A case in point is the section of Ontario's four-lane Highway 401 in Metropolitan Toronto. Originally it was designed to carry through traffic around the city. But by the time it was opened, the expanding metropolis had engulfed it. During rush hours solid lines of vehicles slow the traffic.

Meanwhile there's little the Canadian motorist can do about the situation — except grin and bear it as he waits for the latest traffic jam to ease.

Ills of the automobile industry

APPOINTMENT of Professor Vincent Bladen of the University of Toronto as a one-man Royal Commission to probe the woes of the automobile industry in this country, cannot fail to strike most people as an exercise in futility — says the Fort Erie "Letter-Review", adding: "This is no reflection on Professor Bladen."

Causes of the troubles of the auto manufacturers are so obvious that to set up a Royal Commission is a sheer waste of time and money, contends the writer. The automotive industry, like not a few other industries in this country, has been the victim of the union-fostered wage-price spiral, and at the same time has faced intensive foreign competition. Automobile industry has a record second to none in productive efficiency. Yet wage structure prevents the public from benefitting as it should from the industry's own productivity gains.

—To which we add our own pet peeve, that the Canadian manufacturers missed the boat through their own persistence that Canadian buyers preferred big, expensive, chrome-covered, tail-finned, multi-lighted models. They cited opinion polls to prove it. They denied, and neglected, the small-car potential, until it was too late. Meanwhile the English and European cars stepped in to make a clean-up on that market which supposedly didn't exist.

It needs no one-man commission to sleuth these trends and ferret the facts.

Upholds government aid to farmers

CANADA'S FARMERS will approve of recent statements by Hon. D. S. Harkness, in which he attempts to keep the record straight on the cost of food to the consumer. Mr. Harkness lashed out at "city folks" who are critical of government aid to farmers. Speaking in Ottawa to the Canadian Seed Trade Association, Mr. Harkness said, "It seems to be the general idea that food should be bought at the same price that prevailed 10 to 15 years ago, despite the fact that wages and the prices of all other goods have gone up meanwhile."

"Food is cheaper today in relation to the average income of the workers in Canada than it was 20 years ago", said the Minister, "Canadian consumers pay a smaller percentage of their income for food than is the case in almost any country".

Mr. Harkness expressed the opinion that urban people must realize that food prices must be increased through government supports to give farmers what he chose to call "a reasonable slice of the national pie".

Viewpoints and perspectives

AGRICULTURAL CHEMICALS. — "If the use of agricultural chemicals were to be banned tomorrow, the yield of many crops would be reduced from 10 to 90 per cent and the surplus stocks would soon disappear." — This is the contention of Dr. George C. Decker, principal scientist and head of economic entomology, Illinois Natural History Survey and Illinois Agricultural Experiment Station. He said in a recent speech the price of most items of food sold in stores would double, some would treble and others, such as fruits and vegetables, would disappear from the open markets.

MAY PLUG HOLES IN BANKRUPTCY LAW — Canada's sharply rising toll of business failures could soon lead to a tightening of the laws relating to bankruptcy, writes Vincent Egan in The Financial Post.

In Toronto, a multi-industry committee, sponsored by the Board of Trade, is drafting proposed revisions to existing law, to be submitted to the provincial government this fall. If Ontario accepts its suggestion, the committee hopes that other governments will enact similar legislation.

Some trustees who specialize in bankruptcy cases are convinced that a substantial proportion of insolvencies have a touch of fraud about them. And where bankruptcies are genuine, existing law too often discriminates unfairly in favor of certain creditors and against others. The heaviest loser in many bankruptcies and in nearly all of the fraudulent ones — is not the owner of the business, but rather the supplier who furnished the business with its inventory.

UNSKILLED STUDENTS. — About 70 per cent of the pupils enrolled in Grade II in our schools today will leave the school system before receiving their junior matriculation or its equivalent, in many cases ill-equipped to compete for anything but the unskilled and semi-skilled types of employment.

— Grenfell (Sask.) Sun

PROFIT IN DIVORCES. — Measured in unemotional dollars, parliamentary divorce has grown to a $500,000-a-year industry, writes Don Peacock in The Financial Post. By presiding over the break-up of marriage, the Senate Divorce Committee apparently is the only committee of Parliament that could show a profit on its operations — if it tallied income against costs. At this session, 609 persons applied to the committee, where all parliamentary divorce proceedings start, for release from marriage. The senators heard and recommended 492 divorces — 486 for Quebec residents, six for Newfoundlanders.

Fees paid into the federal treasury for this session's divorce operations totaled $102,655 from petitions heard and recommended. The usual $210 fee the Senate committee charges for each divorce is only a fraction of the final price for having Parliament dissolve a marriage. In a cost check of 15 cases, the committee found: Most expensive, $2,500. Most economical, $600. Average, about $1,100.

IN A POLICE COURT in Montreal within the last few weeks, a news vendor was prosecuted for selling copies of a notorious book. Two would-be lights in the growing galaxy of Canadian literary stars gave the book their benediction as suitable reading for Canadian youth. In our opinion both of these gentlemen if they aspire to real greatness in the field of literature, should have their heads read. It should be little satisfaction to have made a contribution to the spread of obscene literature in Canada and by the same token to increase adultery, prostitution and venereal disease. — Dr. Gordon Bates, in Health Magazine

STATE HEALTH. — Nationalization of medicine in Canada . . . could result in a disastrous decline in the standards of medical care and seriously hamper progress and research in medical science.

Radio soap opera is fading out. Columbia Broadcasting System, last refuge of the daylight weepers, may pull down the curtain forever on the band of suffering sisters, weak brothers and meddlesome grandmothers who have been clogging the air with their maudlin adventures all these years.

I'm going to miss Ma Perkins, Young Doctor Malone and the rest of the gang — although not very much.

As a matter of fact, I didn't even know they were still there, until I read about it in the paper. But I'm going to miss them, because they remind me of the 25 years of my life that have vanished like smoke since I first heard them.

It was depression time, and I was a youth living at home, unable to land any kind of a job except mowing lawns and piling wood now and then. I had plenty of spare hours which I might have devoted to improving myself. Instead, I whittled wooden marbles in cages, read a few books and listened to the radio.

Nobody told me that the stories on the radio were called soap operas, or that it was lowbrow to listen to them. I don't know whether the phrase "soap operas" had been invented then.

I only knew that daytime radio was inhabited by people in trouble and distress, and I tuned in every day to see whether they would get loose. Of course they never did.

Just as Sarah's baby had come back from the hospital, the real parents arrived for their blackmail payment. And then the Hammond organ signalled the end of another 10 minutes of Life Has the Right to be Happy and Beautiful, or something.

These trite sagas of frustration, with their dull plots and flat people, were habit-forming. They contained a drug called Heroine.

The stories were mainly female wish-fulfillment, spread thickly with the kind of happy pain that the girls love. As I listened to them, my head began to ache and I noticed the same feeling of helpless cotton-woolly frustration that a man gets after an hour of shopping with a woman.

But the suspense hooked me to continue listening.

Outside radio hours, I was going through a phase of reading Edgar Allan Poe. The two art forms — soap opera and early horror fiction — had a softening effect on my wits. Together they acted to keep me in a kind of mawkish daydream.

I got a job in time to save my sanity. At least I think I did. After that I heard soap operas only at intervals — and then I stopped hearing them altogether.

All these years, my old friends of radioland have been fighting valiantly to save their virtue and to keep poverty and disease at bay — and I haven't been in the audience to cheer them on. Now it is almost too late.

The writers and actors of the soap opera — veterans of so many imagined perils — are in real danger at last. They are in danger of losing their jobs.

I can see those writers and actors, like old fat mice who have been trapped for 20 years in a cave, gasping and blinking as they emerge into the daylight.

But I'm sorry about the oblivion that menaces Ma Perkins, in spite of the harsh things that I have said about her. She was a well-meaning busybody.

How will the writers get rid of her? How will they discard all the other lovable, priggish, mealy-mouthed old denizens of soapland?

Will they let them find happiness? Or will the writers kill the heroines, and sign off with the hint that more suffering will be in store for them, in another world?

The Paper Mountains

By C. J. Harris

During World War II a relatively unimportant project in Britain was under the command of an admiral, assisted by a colonel, a major and a captain. None of the four slacked on the job and the project went along satisfactorily. Then it happened that the admiral was temporarily assigned elsewhere, the colonel was on leave, and the major was taken ill. However, the project went right ahead because the captain discovered, during the many days that he was in sole command, that he could finish all the paper work by lunch time.

It sounds like a fairytale, but it was an actual occurrence. The captain was C. Northcote Parkinson and out of the experience he later framed Parkinson's law, namely: Work expands to fill the time available for its completion. In a book that has become a best-seller, Parkinson supports his theory that administrative officials multiply without reference to the work they have to do with two axioms: (a) that an official wants to multiply subordinates, not rivals; and (b) that officials make work for each other. It is his observation, too, that expenditure rises to meet income.

Before returning to England, after a year on the history staff at Harvard, Professor Parkinson was invited to expound his views to the Ontario Legislature's select committee on the organization of government. One of the professor's suggestions to the committee was that the Ontario government simply cut its spending next year by 20 per cent. Another was establishment of a three-man tribunal — possibly a treasury-department officer, a businessman and a judge, all retired — to invite and reward proposals for departmental economies, with all savings earmarked for debt reduction rather than diversion to another department. Another was elimination of three minor departments. None of the suggestions aroused enthusiasm in official quarters.

In his Toronto visit Professor Parkinson told of a British chain store company that last year cut its staff from 26,000 to 18,000 by what he termed "three decisions of monumental common sense." One was to assume the staff was honest, thereby eliminating an elaborate internal bookkeeping system to guard against pilfering. A second was to return money to dissatisfied customers without argument, which eliminated a paper mountain of complaint forms. The third was to stop filling filing cabinets with data no one would ever have time to study.

No doubt it is easier for private enterprise to take "decisions of monumental common sense." If it doesn't, more efficient competition will put it out of business. Public enterprise, on the other hand, can go on building and climbing the paper mountains.

PUNGENT POINTS

When a woman asks to see something more expensive, she's shopping; when she asks to see something cheaper, she's buying.

There is some consolation in the fact that even if your dreams have not come true, neither have your nightmares.

The plural of whim is women.

Nowadays when you see a father and son together, chances are the one with the beard is the son.

Water Supply Fails

How many times one hears the quotation, "We never miss the water till the well goes dry" — which proved true in Brownsburg last Saturday when the majority of homes were without water all that day. Some were more fortunate; others resorted to their old wells or springs for their water supply. However, by evening everyone was happy when the water pressure was restored and there were no excuses about taking the "Saturday night bath".

Concluding program, successful Bible School at People's Church

The theme of the Vacation Bible School at People's Church this year was "Signalling for Christ". The two enjoyable weeks were spent studying scripture verses, learning new action songs and doing handwork.

The Nursery Department was in charge of Mrs. A. Stewart and Mrs. E. Young.

Beginners were under the leadership of Mrs. E. Stephens and Miss Sandra Stansfield.

Those of the Junior Department were under the direction of Mrs. W. Morrison and Miss Julia Kettyle.

There were 74 pupils enrolled, with an average attendance of 60.

Friday evening found over 100 parents and friends gathered to enjoy the closing program; those attending kindly assisted in the cost by a generous offering.

The Lachute Watchman, Kerr's Diner, Walker-Kingsbury Inc., and Lachute Flooring. Thanks are also due to the following individuals who graciously assisted in transportation — Mrs. G. Noble, Mr. J. Kettyle, Mr. W. Prosser and Mr. E. J. Rogers.

STAINLESS STEEPLES

Steeples of churches are now being made of nickel stainless steel because of its strength and durability, and the fact that virtually no maintenance is required.

Engagement Announced

Mr. and Mrs. John J. Bates, of Harrington, Que., wish to announce the engagement of their eldest daughter, Enid Audrey, to Mr. Donald Duncan Angus, son of Mrs. Norris Angus and the late Mr. Angus, of Shawville, Que. — the wedding to take place September 24 in Harrington United Church.

The marriage was solemnized recently in the Margaret Rodger Memorial Presbyterian Church, Lachute, of Lois Fay Clark, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Clark, to Mr. Joseph McKinstry McMaster, son of the late Mr. J. M. McMaster and Mrs. McMaster, of Airdrie, Scotland, with the Rev. Jas. Armour officiating. Mrs. Wm. Cottingham played the organ, while Mrs. Leonard Armstrong sang. The church was decorated with baskets of mixed gladioli.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length gown of pure silk organza and Alençon lace over tulle and taffeta. The gown was fashioned with a fitted bodice, having a scalloped decolletage neckline of Alençon lace and long sleeves, and a front panel of Alençon lace extending to the hemline of the bouffant skirt. The elbow-length veil of tulle illusion was held in place by a matching lace cap encrusted with seed pearls and diamants, and she carried a semi-cascade bouquet of American Beauty roses and stephanotis.

Matron of honor for the bride was Mrs. R. L. Hunter, and bridesmaids were Misses Anne McLean and Margaret Brass. The attendants wore matching cocktail-length frocks of Romance blue silk organza over tulle and taffeta with very bouffant skirts, having puff sleeves and low neckline. The crowns, also in Romance blue, were low tiaras of pearlized buds and petals, over which were tinted veils. All carried bouquets of white and blue-tipped carnations.

Attendants for the groom were Mr. C. Nantel as best man, and Mr. Wm. Hunter and Donald Clark as ushers. All wore midnight-blue trousers, bow ties and white dinner jackets.

— Jehovah's Witnesses —

"Let Your will come to pass"

For centuries these words of Jesus' model prayer have been on the lips and in the hearts of sincere men.

WHAT DO THESE WORDS MEAN TO YOU?
What is God's will for this earth? For God's will to be done here as in heaven there must be drastic changes in world affairs. How will those changes affect you? Are you ready for them? Do you know what you will be required to do to share in the benefits when God's will is done on earth?

"YOUR WILL BE DONE ON EARTH"
Here is a frank and honest appraisal of past and present world events in the light of Daniel's inspired prophecy. Its convincing comparison of fact with prophecy makes this book well worth your most serious consideration. Read it.

"THIS MEANS EVERLASTING LIFE"
These words of Jesus emphasize the vital need for knowledge of God and the One he sent forth. Basic Christian living is only the beginning of God's requirements for those who will see his will done. Learn what life can mean to you.

These two Bible books will help you. Send $1 for both.

Parents and the School World

— By NANCY CLEAVER —

With the approach of September, parents are thinking about their child's education. The school doors open again and a whole army of boys and girls return to their studies.

The activities at school are very different from play in the familiar surroundings of home for the children who are starting to school. The adolescent entering Collegiate or High School discovers that he is much more "on his own" than he was in the lower grades. But what of parents and the school world?

Mothers try to send their children off to school clean, suitably clothed, fed and in a happy frame of mind. They also strive to see to it that there is not too much hurry at breakfast time. School books should be kept in a definite place and clothes laid out the previous night.

Many mothers set the table before going to bed. It is easy to fuss about the children being late. Agree with them about the best time to leave home for school. Encourage them to watch the clock themselves. Tardy adults are produced by mothers who consistently "timed" their child's day.

A happy start to the day sets the stage for learning which should be a fascinating and satisfying experience. How eager the little child is to find out about the things which attract his attention! The famous explorer, Captain Scott, in his last message to his wife wrote, "Make the boy interested in natural history, if you can; it is better than games; they encourage it at some schools."

Why do so many children "hate" school? (At least, they pretend to abhor it!) This attitude arises partly from their playmates' scorn towards "A Brain". Sometimes fear of failing, dislike of the teacher or unpopularity with his school mates makes school disliked.

Parents help their children to enjoy school if they anticipate that it will be a happy experience. They can encourage appreciation of the parts of school the children really do enjoy. Helen may find arithmetic an awful chore, but she may discover painting a satisfying leisure time activity. Richard may be a born mathematician but the art periods are just something to be got through with. No two children are built on the same plan. Both Helen's and Richard's parents can assist them if they expect them to do their best in all their subjects.

In Canada the family allowance plan and provincial legislation, backed by probation officers, combine to keep the majority of boys and girls in school until they are sixteen. It is rather sad to see quite a number of scholars, especially boys, stopping school the day they reach their sixteenth birthday. If only they could measure their schooling in terms of equipment for life!

Children learn a good deal, even in academic subjects, from their chums. Rudyard Kipling in his autobiography wrote of teaching his chum "Turkey" all he ever knew of French, and "Turkey" in turn tried to make Kipling and another lad "Stalky" comprehend Latin. Kipling said, "If you want a boy to learn anything, he will remember what he gets from an equal where his master's words are forgotten."

The extra-curricular activities — Athletics, Choral Clubs, Debating and Dramatic Societies and others, form quite an array in many schools. The members of these voluntary groups benefit greatly from them, provided they do not become more important in the scholar's eyes than his studies!

Outdoor sandwiches

There is something about fresh air and sunshine that makes sandwiches taste more delicious and satisfying. Preparing sandwiches to eat outdoors seems to add fuel to the imagination and the results are often vastly more interesting than when prepared indoors.

Most outdoor sandwiches are the grilled or barbecued type, prepared on a backyard open barbecue or grill. Nothing can compare with the tangy flavor that charcoal or wood imparts to food. Wieners and hamburg are particularly popular for this type of cooking. Here are a few ideas for varying the familiar hot dog and hamburger theme.

Barbecued Hot Dogs — Heat your favorite barbecue sauce over fire and add wieners. Cover and heat slowly for a few minutes. Add chopped onion, green pepper and celery to sauce, if desired and cook a little longer. Place each wiener in a heated or toasted bun. Spoon sauce over wieners in hot dog buns before serving.

Beefburgers — Cook hamburger patties on top of grill or cook in hot coals in aluminum foil. To cook in foil, place patty on a large square of foil, top with steak or chili sauce, add slices of onion and tomato. Season with salt and pepper. Add 1 tablespoon water. Seal tightly. Toss into hot coals for 10 to 15 minutes. Cooking time will vary depending on thickness of patties. Serve on a toasted bun.

Roll-up Sandwich — Trim the crusts from a slice of bread, spread with butter and prepared mustard, add a slice of process cheese and a boiled wiener placed diagonally. Bring two opposite corners of the bread together and hold together with a toothpick. Broil or grill until the bread is toasted and cheese begins to melt.

Cheese Stuffed Wieners — Split wieners lengthwise to within ½ inch. Spread inside with prepared mustard and add a strip of process cheese. Wrap a strip of bacon tightly around each wiener, fastening ends with toothpicks. Opening should be covered or closed tightly by bacon so cheese will not run out. Broil or grill and serve on toasted hot dog buns.

Barbecue Sandwiches

Why not try barbecue sandwiches for a change? Make them on bread or buns with slices of hot cooked roast beef, ham, meat loaf or chicken and hot barbecue sauce. Serve them open-faced with plenty of meat spread on both slices of bread or bun and cover with the hot barbecue sauce. Of course, you need a knife and fork to eat this sandwich.

Kabob in a Bun

Food cooked on skewers is particularly attractive for outdoor eating. Let each person prepare and grill his own kabob, if possible. If cooking different kinds of food on the same skewer, choose those that require approximately the same cooking time. Cut your pieces of meat and vegetables to the same size. Or give each food its own skewer so it can be removed from the heat at the right time.

Use cubed beef, lamb, ham or canned pork luncheon meat. Brush meat with oil and sprinkle with salt, pepper, chili powder or other barbecue seasonings.

Use quartered tomatoes, also thick slices of onion and pieces of green pepper. Brush the vegetables with oil or butter and sprinkle with salt and pepper.

Teatime Topics

Trying to keep the children indoors long enough to eat can be a frustrating experience, now that the summer school holidays are drawing inevitably towards their close.

If the meal is particularly for children, gear the size of the sandwiches to their appetite. A few small sandwiches placed attractively on a plate is a much more appetizing view to youngsters and they'll likely reach for more. There's nothing the matter with a triple-decker if it's cut smaller than it would be for adults.

Garnishes are best if they're bright and edible. Among the favorites are tiny boats made from cheese cubes or hard-cooked egg halves with sails made from sliced processed cheese.

Hawaiian Dinner

The next time you are wondering what to get for dinner that is just a little different, try these Hawaiian Short Ribs.

Cut the meat from two pounds of beef short ribs and flatten slightly. Mix one cup of soy sauce and one tsp. ground ginger and pour over the meat. Let stand from one-and one-half to two hours, then drain.

Place the meat on the broiler rack, three inches from the heat until well browned. Turn, then spoon sauce over the meat and broil until brown. Serve hot.

Care of Iron

A steam or combination iron will work better and last longer if distilled or demineralized water is used, say the experts from Manitoba's home economics department.

Distilled water can be bought at a drug store and tap water may be demineralized with a two-part gadget available in many stores.

A few rules are important for the long life of the iron. Disconnect before filling or refilling with water and always empty while it is hot. When the iron has cooled thoroughly, wrap the cord loosely around the handle and put in a dry spot.

Beeswax or soap and water or a soft cloth while the iron is warm will remove any starch which collects on the plate.

An abrasive should never be used, nor should you iron over pins, uncovered zippers or anything that will scratch the ironing surface.

It's a good idea to fill the water chamber once a month with vinegar and water and allow to stand overnight. Rinse out in the morning with fresh water. This cleans out small mineral deposits and contributes to the iron's efficiency.

Calculating in Coffee

Italian statisticians in Rome recently figured out that the average man in Italy works 216 minutes to earn a pound of coffee. Workers in the United States, in comparison, work 16 minutes for the same pound of coffee. Canadians labor 34 minutes.

Hunter-Gagne

The marriage of Shirley Louise Gagne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Omer M. Gagne, of Brownsburg, to Mr. William Denis Hunter, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Hunter, of Notre Dame de Grace, took place August 13 in the Brownsburg United Church, the Rev. A. G. Moore, B.A., B.D., officiating.

The wedding music was played by Mrs. C. J. Wheeler, and Mr. Frank Steere sang "Because" during the signing of the register. Mixed gladioli and greenery were used to decorate the church.

The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a floor-length gown of white French lace with sweetheart neckline, long sleeves and full skirt. Her veil of tulle illusion was held in place by a cap of matching lace and seed pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of deep red roses and baby's breath.

Mrs. Peter Cruise, sister of the bride, was matron of honor, wearing a gown of aqua nylon sheer over taffeta, with matching headdress. The bridesmaids were Miss Judith Higgs and Miss Dorothy Withup, both of Montreal; they were gowned in matching dresses of yellow nylon sheer over taffeta with matching headdresses. They all carried colonial nosegays of white daisies and blue cornflowers.

The little flower girl was Deborah Ann Gagne, cousin of the bride, wearing a dress of aqua taffeta with an overskirt of white nylon sheer, with matching scooped bonnet; she carried a basket of white daisies, blue cornflowers and baby's breath.

Mr. Kenneth Hakening acted as best man, and the ushers were Mr. Roger Anderson and Mr. Alexander Stevenson, all of Montreal.

ELECTRICITY IS THE BIGGEST BARGAIN IN EVERYBODY'S BUDGET.
All you need is a pencil and a piece of paper to see how big a bargain electricity really is. Look at Reddy Kilowatt's wages on your next electric bill, then divide this by the number of jobs he did for you, or divide by the 20 to 30 work-saving appliances that make your life easier and happier. It wasn't much per job was it? In most cases only a penny or two per hour, day, or even per month as in the case of an electric clock.

6 a.m. Reveille oppressive, but camp otherwise tops, say Cadets

Four cadets from the Highland Cadet Battalion "D" Company, Lachute, returned last Thursday from Camp Farnham — a tented camp, specially erected each year for cadets — where they had been undertaking seven weeks' summer training. The cadets from Lachute formed part of "E" Company of 168 members, who were English-speaking.

The seven weeks training consisted of normal basic cadet training subjects with an introduction to National Survival work. This latter work was mainly in the correct handling of casualties on stretchers.

Daily training was started with Reveille at 6 a.m. Then followed breakfast at 7 a.m., company training parades from 8.15 to 11.30 a.m., with suitable breaks for soft drinks, etc., lunch 11.30 a.m. to 12.30 p.m., company training parades to 4.30 p.m., with supper at 5 p.m. Sports were available every evening from 6 p.m. The main Drill Hall was converted into a cinema and films in English were shown alternate evenings. Cocoa and biscuits were available at 9 p.m.

Each Thursday morning "E" Company took part in company sports. Two Lachute cadets, Cpl. R. Morrin and Cadet R. Haydon, were selected to represent their company in Javelin Throwing and Swimming, respectively. As a result of competitions with the other companies, Cpl. Morrin and Cadet Haydon were awarded trophies for their skills. There were upwards of 1,200 cadets in camp, so that competition for these trophies was very keen. These two cadets are to be congratulated on their efforts.

The climax of the summer camp was a full ceremonial parade and inspection by Maj. General J. M. Rockingham, C.B., C.B.E., D.S.O., on Monday, August 22.

The general report is that this camp was thoroughly enjoyed. Cpl. G. Morrin, Cpl. R. Morrin, Cadets R. Haydon and G. McAdam, are already planning which courses to take at next year's camp. . . . The one big bugbear, they state, was Reveille at 6 a.m. — on holidays too!

These cadets who attended summer camp will now be in a position to assist in local instruction of their own Cadet Corps, when fall training commences on Tuesday, September 13, and each Tuesday following. Any boy who was 14 years of age on January 31, 1960, is eligible to join the Army Cadets, and next year join other cadets at Camp Farnham.

TO THE EDITOR

Lachute, Que.
August 23, 1960.

Mr. Editor:

Through the medium of your paper, I wish to make known my thanks to the two Lachute Town police officers, Sgt. Poirier and Const. Therriault, for their assistance at the scene of an accident in front of my home in the early hours of August 23rd.

The corner on Route 8 in front of my home has been the scene of many accidents, and, sorry to say, in the past I have had much difficulty in notifying the proper authorities for assistance, with at times, delay and little response from some quarters. In the early hours this date, this area was the scene of another accident, and another victim lay trapped beneath his car, severely injured, and requiring immediate medical attention. On the spur of the moment, I phoned the Lachute Police, giving all details, and asking for assistance. My phone call was immediately answered at the police station, and I was assured that my request would be immediately dealt with, and all information passed on to those responsible. Within five minutes of my call the two mentioned police officers were at the scene of the accident, helped remove the victim from under the car, placed him on a stretcher removed from the new police vehicle, and were shortly on their way to the hospital. All this within a matter of some ten minutes from the time of the accident!

The prompt action of these two officers possibly saved a man's life, and I feel, in that it is so easy to criticize and condemn police work, that they should be commended for their action. This incident shows community spirit, and lastly, thank God, human feelings for your fellow man.

My thanks to these two officers.

(Signed) Andrew Cleland

Y. Larocque, 21 Thurso resident, killed in accident

Yves Larocque, a young Thurso man and former resident of Lachute, lost his life Saturday evening in a highway accident two miles east of Montebello. Four other occupants of the car were admitted to the Smith Clinic at Hawkesbury but were allowed to return to their homes after treatment.

Together with Larocque, aged 21, were François Gauthier, 29, driver of the car, Leon Labelle, 17, Albert Barnes, 23, and Laurier Groulx, 20, all residents of the Papineauville-Thurso district.

The victim was married only two months ago, to Monique Deschatelets, of Montebello. He is survived also by his parents and two sisters. The family formerly resided here, the father, Napoleon Larocque, having been employed at J. C. Wilson Co.

Following the funeral rites at Thurso (today) Wednesday, the remains are being brought to Lachute for interment.

Car snaps pole

Four St. Jerome district residents escaped serious injury Saturday evening when a car in which they were driving crashed into a pole on Main Street East. The car was severely damaged and the pole broken.

The occupants were taken to hospital by the Lachute police emergency vehicle and a local ambulance, and according to reports, Gordon C. Allard, the driver, and Gilles Laurin, Jacques Filfe and Marcel Lariviere were treated for minor cuts, abrasions and shock. They were all released after treatment.

A 29-year-old Welland, Ont., man, Rheo William Prevost, was arrested by Provincial Police and charged with impaired driving following a Sunday evening accident in which two hitch-hikers were injured.

Treated in the Smith Clinic, Hawkesbury, were Jean-Guy Williams, 20, of Hamford Street, and Raymond Robinson, 21, of Bedard Blvd., Lachute. According to police, the two were hitch-hiking on Route 8 near Calumet, when they were struck by a truck driven by Prevost. Robinson was dragged some 60 feet by the truck, but neither he nor Williams was seriously injured. They were accompanied by Marcel Williams, 27, who escaped injury. Charges were laid by Sgt.-Det. Ralph Allen following the investigation by traffic police.

Fellow motorist's aid to speeders a misguided gesture, says observer

(Our District Correspondent)

Brownsburg's attempt to reduce Sunday evening speeding received a jolt last Sunday when a couple of outsiders took a direct hand in the campaign.

The speed trap was in operation on Maple Ave., near Mountain St., effectively slowing down traffic and pointing out speeders, but suddenly the average speed dropped to well within the limit and speeders were non-existent! A driver who appears to have had the best interests of the town at heart informed Constable Albert Vary that an unofficial warning sign had been posted at the top of the hill near the town limit. Constable Vary quickly removed the sign, which advised speeders "Slow Down, Speed Trap Ahead". . . . As though proud of their efforts, the people responsible for the sign had also added, "Courtesy of —" (name, a Hawkesbury firm).

The general consensus of the "spectators" in this area was, "Why would anyone do that?" If authorities in a town are unlawfully apprehending drivers — or failing to allow for small errors in speedometer readings, etc., in order to fill the town treasury — one might find some support for the practice. However, this is not the case in Brownsburg. The object here is to slow down the average speed and to fine the drivers who exceed the limit (plus a liberal tolerance).

Those who place signs of this type around our town would do well to consider this. — Admittedly the cars are slowed down when the operators read the sign, but if a driver is fined for speeding in the north end of town he will probably stay within the speed limit until he reaches the limits at the other side of town. He has learned a lesson, and our children are safe. A driver who reads the sign will slow down for the trap, then, knowing that he is in the clear, may in all probability increase his speed beyond the safe legal limit, and could be involved in an accident as a result. This driver has learned his lesson — but too late, and one of Brownsburg's citizens, child or adult, may have been killed or maimed for life.

Rotarians are looking forward today (Thursday) to the official visit of Rotary District Governor St. Clair C. Holland. President Bob Wyse and Secretary Bert Moore will meet Governor Holland in Lachute where a Club assembly has been called at the Shriners' Hall at 4.30 p.m. Governor Holland will discuss various club matters with the members, and will address the Rotarians and their guests at the regular Club meeting in the Legion Hall, Brownsburg, at 6.30 p.m.

District Governor Holland is a past-president of the Rotary Club of Montreal, chairman of the board, director, president and past-president of over 30 different institutions and organizations. His wide experience in various fields throughout the province and the nation make his visit to the Brownsburg-Lachute Rotary Club one of the outstanding events of the Rotary year.

Two fires on Sunday evening

A small crew of Lachute firemen battled a stubborn blaze at Sandy Hill, Ayersville, on Sunday evening — receiving the fire call at six o'clock and staying at the scene until after nine p.m. During this time, several of the firemen responded to a call involving a small brush fire at the corner of Bethany and Stuart Streets.

The major fire destroyed a frame building owned and occupied by Louis Demerse, 254 St. Antoine Street, and threatened several other buildings in the vicinity. Some 800 feet of hose was laid over fields in an effort to obtain sufficient water to extinguish the blaze.

One member of the brigade, André Bergeron, received severe cuts on both hands when he fell into some broken soft-drink bottles. He was given first aid on the scene and taken to the Providence Hospital in the police emergency vehicle, where he received additional treatment.

Power failure, widespread damage as freak windstorm sweeps district

High winds played havoc with district power lines on Monday, some 19 Gatineau Power poles having been reported broken by Rod Carreau, local manager. "Damage was widespread over the district," Mr. Carreau stated. "Trouble of a serious nature was reported from Lachute, Grenville, Brownsburg, Louisa, Dunany, Mille Isles and Ste. Scholastique.

"On the St. Jerome highway alone, nine poles were down in one clear sweep, and the number of broken wires and power lines fouled by fallen branches was uncountable."

Power in Lachute was off for a 24-minute period — the St. Andrews Road being blocked by two large trees, just south of the Catholic cemetery. This prevented the Gatineau trouble trucks getting directly to the power station as they had to back-track and cross the Ayers Dam. The East End of town was without power for an estimated hour and a half, due, according to Mr. Carreau, to the fact that not one report of the trouble was received from that area. "This trouble could have been repaired much sooner had we known about it," Mr. Carreau added.

Some 50 power interruptions were reported, some of which were repaired within a few minutes. Sections of Brownsburg were without lights until after supper, and it was 12.10 a.m. when the power was restored to residents of Lake Louisa.

Tuesday and Wednesday have seen the Gatineau road crews checking and patrolling all lines in their territory, and replacing damaged poles which were only temporarily repaired following the storm.

Bell Telephone officials report a major interruption on Grace Street, near l'Ecole Supérieure, and numerous private lines put out of order. The majority of this trouble was of a minor nature, however.

Reports of roofs torn from several district barns have been received, along with damage to store fronts, plate glass windows and signs. A house owned by Alfred Carrière, situated at the corner of Grace and Bethany Streets, Lachute escaped serious damage when a large tree was blown over, striking the house.

Two large semi-trailers were damaged on Route 8, between Calumet and Pte.-au-Chene, when the front vehicle plowed into a large tree lying across the highway. Immediately following this accident, another transport struck the first vehicle. The drivers were not injured.

Driving at this time was almost impossible and extremely hazardous. Motorists had to pull over to the side of the highway until the worst of the storm had passed.

High standards on Grenville farm win recognition

The Hon. Alcide Courcy, Minister of Agriculture and Colonization at Quebec, has announced the winner of the Agricultural Merit Gold Medal is Edgar Larose, well-known Grenville farmer. His farm scored 907.5 out of a possible 1,000 points in the contest — which this year embraced farms in the Montreal region. . . . In 1955, Mr. Larose had won the Silver Medal division with 874.5 points; this award was taken this year by a New Glasgow farmer, Armand Théoret.

There were 38 contestants in the Gold Medal contest. The award is accompanied by a cash prize of $200.

Edgar Larose, 57, has been farming the same property (125 acres under cultivation and 100 acres bush) since he was 15 years of age. His brother, Leo, is a partner and the farm has been in the Larose name for 135 years.

With a herd of 70 Holsteins he also rents a further tract of 100 acres. His milk production of 12,000 lbs. is purchased by Lowe's Dairy. His barn and stable are clean and modernly equipped, his dairy is spotless, complete with hot water, cooling tank, electric milking machine, terrazo floor, etc.

Mr. Larose will receive the "Commander" title of Agricultural Merit at Quebec Exhibition next Wednesday in the presence of various Quebec notables.

EDGAR LAROSE,

Grenville farmer, who has won an Agricultural Merit award in the annual Quebec provincial contest. The gold medal accompanying this award, "Commander of the Order of Agricultural Merit", will be presented next Wednesday, September 7, at the Quebec Exhibition. . . . Arundel barn burned, break-ins, theft; young orphanage fugitives being held

Six teenagers who ran away from the Huberdeau orphanage early last week appeared in St. Jerome court on Friday and were sent to the Montreal Juvenile Court detention home. There they will be held until September 13, when they will again appear in St. Jerome.

The youths were arrested by Provincial Police traffic constable Bert Keile, assisted by District Game Warden Gordon Cooke, after a barn owned by Albert Morrison burned to the ground. The building was filled with hay at the time of the fire. The youths are also accused of breaking into two houses, where they allegedly caused damage to contents and stole several items, also a third theft. Reported missing were blankets, food, a radio and numerous other items.

Judge to Get Tough

According to Judge Albert Paquin, of the St. Jerome Social Welfare Court, he aims to end the reign of terror caused by juveniles in that area. Following the arrest of the youths, Judge Paquin stated he would, if necessary, imprison juveniles' parents, to stop the series of burglaries and break-ins perpetrated by teen-agers in the district recently.

"There are some youngsters here whose parents may think themselves socially influential, or prominent in other ways, and therefore above the law. They are quite wrong. If their children come before me and are found guilty they will be punished, and the parents also will be punished, if I consider it necessary."

He noted that near Lake L'Achigan, a band of hoodlums, led by the son of a prominent television personality had, within a few days, caused $10,000 worth of damage.

"I am warning the hoodlums and their parents that I will put an end to this, and I assure the property owners and visitors in the area that their belongings will be safe."

He said some hoodlums had been arrested by the provincial police, but later released without punishment. He added that he had ordered their re-arrest and they would be given the justice they deserved.

Oddments tackled at Ayersville adjourned session

An adjourned session of Ayersville Council was held last week, with Councillor Wilfrid Durocher presiding in the absence of Mayor Gaetan Paquette.

A letter from the Edwards Brothers, acrobatic trio, requesting a $65 grant for a half-page in a program for crippled youngsters, was read and pigeon-holed — the budget having made no provision for such donations.

On proposal of Councillor Maurice Dumas, the chairman of the Public Assistance committee was authorized to sign charity relief cards, on advice of the legal advisor, Philippe Valois.

It was decided to call in engineers from the firm of Desjardins & Souriol to establish road levels on the Richelleu development.

A delegation comprising Philippe Valois, Councillors Douglas Simon, Rosaire Quenneville, and the secretary, Jacques Poitras, were appointed to see the Argenteuil Hospital building committee with regard to taxation. . . . The committee was formed following a remark by the secretary that the Council would be in financial embarrassment if tax dues were not collected.

Variety for all tastes in three-man art exhibition

The Argenteuil Art Association's fourth exhibition this season, featuring works of Leslie Coppold, A.R.C.A., Leslie Smith and Jack Young, opened to the public last Saturday and remains on view at the St. Andrews East municipal hall each afternoon until Labor Day. The exhibition was opened with an appropriate address by Mme F. Robin, vice-president, who introduced Mr. F. O. Peterson to give a brief and intimate commentary. Mr. Peterson, of the Association's exhibitions committee, had been responsible for collecting the paintings for this show. He spoke also on the background and program of the Arts Club of Montreal, in which the three exhibitors are fellow members.

If you, reader, have never attended one of these local exhibitions, you are urged to start with this one; the Association is proud to have brought these paintings for the public enjoyment. . . . And if you know nothing about art, but know what you like — this show is for your pleasure. . . .

If you are an artist or a critic, there is here the largest assembly of paintings by Leslie Coppold, A.R.C.A., that has ever been exhibited together. There are 11 examples of his work; most are privately owned and borrowed for this show. Only one, his latest, is for sale. The master of detail, artist, designer and draughtsman — all are revealed in a precision of painting beyond comprehension. The closer the examination, the more will be the realization of his marvelous brushwork. Beauty and humor are all within his able range.

Mr. A. Leslie Smith is a voluminous painter in both oil and watercolor. He catches the day-to-day beauties that are constantly about us, and it is only when we see them in a painting that we realize how beautiful they are. This artist has 44 pictures including a most interesting collection of 20 random sketches grouped together. The first quick sketch, the development of the subject, and the finished painting are to be seen. Many of his paintings were made between Lachute and St. Andrews during a summer he spent in Argenteuil. Oils, watercolors, monotones and pencil sketches are included.

In a third section are the paintings of Jack Young, 19 in number. These are for those who know nothing appreciable about painting, but who "know what they like." It is interesting to watch newcomers wander round the hall viewing everything a second or third time, and then in conclusion just looking at these paintings — fascinated by their beauty, the same beauty that they have seen time and again in our Laurentians, at all times of the year, at all times of the day.

Readers are urged to come, look, and share the enjoyment of this splendid show.

Argenteuil Outdoors

— By BOB ATCHISON —

The general impression among the outdoors public, is that Game Wardens are a joke. After reading this you may alter your opinion and have a better understanding of their work.

I was given the opportunity of seeing the Department of Fish and Game branch in action August 20. Inspector LaRuche, of Montreal, Warden A. Gagné, of Lachute, and myself, started out early in a very heavy rainstorm, which didn't improve one bit all morning. We headed for an area near Weir where reports have been filtering in of minnow seining for resale. Getting to the known spot was not too bad; outside of having water run out of shoes and everything else, it was fine. The creek in question is about 150 yards from the road in heavy bush. The only way the minnows can be transported out is by 5-gallon cans or some such container. By the time everything was in readiness to welcome the visitors, not one bit of equipment was dry. This cat-and-mouse game in a rainstorm is not so hot, either. . . .

After a couple of hours it was assumed no one would be showing up, so it was decided to leave one warden there and the other go on and check the lakes. These were only 1½ miles back in the bush, and really rough going. A small tent was spotted some distance from the lake, and on closer investigation, two men and a dog could be seen. The men naturally were fishing, and getting closer, it could be seen they were using minnows. On checking of permits, it was found one of the men had forgotten his. Now this is part of the law few people know, the Warden can, if he sees fit, have you take him to your place for the same permit. Also you are responsible for his well-being, such as meals, mileage, use of cars, etc. This is charged at the rate of 45 cents per mile.

Being sensible, these fellows readily admitted the minnows, and before finishing this you will see why I say readily admitted. They had come up on Friday afternoon for the week-end of fishing, so from all that could be seen, they were going to be out of luck this way. On top of this they were told the amount of the fines, so they got busy trying to raise it. As I have mentioned, they had a dog with them, a beautiful silver-grey shepherd. This is where I came into the act. These sports had given up their tent for the dog, so that it would not have to be outside in the rain. The tent was one of these very small pup tents, large enough for one man but no more. . . . I was sold right then; so seeing how much they were short in the fines, I added my funds (not much), and still not able to make up the amounts, it sure looked bad. . . .

However, this is where I (and I hope a lot of others) will have a better understanding of our game officers. The Inspector and Gagné got their heads together and came up with this solution, that solved the problem for all concerned. They could keep on fishing (no seizure of equipment), but not with minnows — then present themselves Monday at the Dept. of Fish and Game, 4 Notre Dame Street East, to settle their accounts. Certainly this new policy of Mr. Firmin Bourque of the Department is one step toward a better understanding of our laws, also the courtesy and general air of good will seemed to give the Wardens a greater respect for the job they are doing. This policy will be an asset to Quebec.

But don't think because of this, that you will be able to get away with anything. I would say, with the new feeling in the Department, there will be a much better crackdown on offenders; there is certainly not going to be any toleration with anyone.

This was proven in two other cases later on. One of these in particular was a stinker, if I ever heard one — not a local character, thank heavens — the lies and dirt the Wardens had to take from this culprit were unbelievable. Even after being caught with minnows on his line, the excuse was that he had worms and the minnows must have got on themselves! Oh no, he didn't have a minnow pail — even when it was found hidden in the bush near him, with minnows alive in it, the tirade continued. This continued to the point of threats (political); but all this only made it worse for stupid, as he soon found out. . . .

Talk about your gloved hand; this only proves that, if people act like gentlemen, they will be treated as such. Take it from me, the glove came off — and the way I figured it out "Loud-mouth" in this case talked at the rate of one dollar a word against himself. . . . It looks as though our province is finally going to get up where it belongs in outdoor prestige — not before it was needed, either.

* * *

The crows are really waiting to be shot at. A number of the boys have been out after them. This is one sport that can be carried on all the time, if you only take the trouble. It takes a little time and care to spot their roosts. We all think of the crow as a crafty bird; it is at times, but not always. This business of shooting over their roosts proves this. You would think, after a couple of shoots, they would clear out. But I know myself, it's possible to get in three or four sessions before they get wise and move out. For a lot of fun, try spotting a roost.

More on the North River — just when is something going to be done about the spring flooding? It's too bad the powers-that-be can't do something worthwhile for the town. Sure they do get going once in a while, but how does it end up! Boy, the things this town could do, for the good of everyone. It makes one wonder how these things can be tolerated.

DR. BARBARA MOORE, FOOTSORE AND MAD

Dr. Barbara Moore threatened to walk past the CNE toward the end of her marathon walk from Montreal to Toronto. She was disturbed at the attention showered on The Star Walking team who set the pace all the way and arrived in Toronto a few hours ahead of her. Dr. Moore said, "I have taken humiliation from the start and have been made a fool of. The CNE is breaking my heart." However she changed her mind and decided to go to the CNE if she were assured an opportunity of expressing publicly some violent opinions.

Priceless historical papers discovered

Four priceless historical documents, 110 years old, written by British Navy officers and left in the Canadian Arctic during the almost incredible 10-year search for Sir John Kranklin's expedition are now in the hands of Hon. Alvin Hamilton, Minister of Northern Affairs and Natural Resources — reports The Financial Post.

Written on parchment in badly faded ink, or hand-lettered on lead plates, the messages were left by members from among the 40 searchers which scoured, on foot, more than 10,000 miles of the far north searching for Franklin. This was Franklin's third expedition, in search for the northwest passage. His death was proved to have occurred on King William Island, June 11, 1847.

The discoveries, found in special airtight canisters, were made by oil exploration teams now working throughout the Arctic Islands, by land and air.

Germany importer of Canadian farm products

In a recent survey of the West German market, the Trade and Commerce magazine "Foreign Trade" reports that Canada continues to be West Germany's main source of wheat, and ranks seventh as its supplier of all farm products. Our wheat shipments to Germany were valued at $51.7 million last year, out of our total agricultural exports to this market of $67 million.

The German market for durum wheat is of particular interest to Canadian farmers. Consumption now exceeds 300,000 metric tons a year and is expanding; some two-thirds of this in recent years has been imported from Canada. Germany is also a good market for Canadian oilseed — such as rapeseed, flaxseed and mustardseed—and for forage seeds. Canada has, in fact, become the main supplier of rapeseed to Germany in recent years.

Ottawa — If water limitations leave a lawn burned and bleached harmless dyes can be sprayed over it to restore the green color and an appearance of vigorous growing turf.

R. H. Turley of the Canada Department of Agriculture's Experimental Farm at Saanichton, B.C., sprayed 750 square feet of lawn with one quart of the dye mixed in 11 quarts of water. The results were satisfactory so far as improving the appearance of the discolored turf went and subsequently, with the return to favorable conditions, the grass resumed normal growth.

The new dyes are no substitute for good lawn management but merely give a green color to grass when water is not available to keep it naturally fresh looking.

A Japanese rugby football team will tour Canada for games with teams in Victoria, Vancouver, Toronto and Montreal.

It will be only the second such tour by a rugby team from Japan, and the last occasion was 30 years ago.

The Yawata Rugby Team, sponsored by Yawata Iron and Steel Corporation, will bring a party of 30 players and officials overseas in arrangement with the British Columbia Rugby Union and the Japan Rugby Association. All of the players are employed at the Yawata plants.

The schedule includes five all-star games and one college team, starting Wednesday, September 21, against a Vancouver squad. September 28 they play in Montreal.

Quebec's 40% aid for winter works; new policy on construction contracts

"WEEK IN QUEBEC"

Quebec City — To combat winter employment, Premier Jean Lesage announced a Provincial winter works plan that would be in addition to the present Federal plan. Under the Provincial scheme — to cost an estimated $5,000,000 next winter — the province will pay 40 per cent of labor costs on municipal improvement projects. The Federal Government already pays 50 per cent, which means municipalities will only have to provide 10 per cent of labor costs.

Works Minister René Levesque announced that from now on his department will handle construction of bridges and buildings for the Government.

Under the Union Nationale, he said, each department handled its own construction needs, which led to lack of control.

He also announced further details in the Government's policy of calling public tenders. A zoning plan, he said, is already in effect for contracts under $100,000. Under this plan the government decides from what areas bids will be accepted for a given contract, to allow local contractors a crack at it. The Government also plans to call tenders for sub-contracts before calling the main contract for a project.

Police check on speeding

TRAFFIC SPEEDING in the town limits has been a blight on public safety, and a source of complaint in these columns and elsewhere, for many years past. Now, having observed the efforts of Lachute Police Department under a new Chief to curb this malady, we note with some gratification the improvement which has resulted. Some may not agree, but others who use the Brownsburg Road, Main Street and the eastern approach, with any frequency, will have found the improvement quite noticeable.

It will take some time for outsiders to become aware that Lachute is "on the map" for traffic offenders. There are still many passing motorists who think our warning signs are merely to be ignored. We are informed that, of 996 offenders ticketed since last February, 589 were outsiders and 407 were local drivers; but Chief A. J. Whiteway notes that, within the past month, the outside offenders have been definitely in the majority — Lachute residents appear to be paying more attention to the law. This is as it should be: without the incentive of law enforcement, home-town drivers should feel it their duty to present a good example to those who care less for the civic welfare.

There are challenging seasons ahead. . . . The Labor Day week-end will reap a crop of highway casualties; let this tragic toll not be augmented here on the thoroughfares of town. . . . And when school days start next week, let parents be warned — and let the police be watchful — lest young cyclists and jay walkers (as they have in the past) imperil their lives in the neighborhood of our schools.

Ragweed and hay fever

IF YOU HAVE been sneezing and wheezing more than usual the last week or so, don't be alarmed — it isn't a cold, it's hay fever, and you are one of the thousands who at this time of year almost have to hibernate to miss the uncomfortable sneezing season.

Ragweed, the major cause of hay fever, is more than prevalent, and it is spouting its pollen faster than the nostrils of a hay fever victim can pick it up.

In this modern age medical science has come up with pills, injections and other treatments that help relieve the suffering for the hay fever victim. But even modern science cannot eliminate all the ragweed, and until this is done it seems that persons with the ragweed allergy will continue to have their annual bout of hay fever. Although ragweed is not the only cause, it is the major one and the one most people try to eliminate. There are various methods like cutting weeds, spraying and burning them, and this helps.

If you are privileged to work in an air-conditioned office most of the time this will certainly help. And there are parts of Eastern Canada where ragweed is a thing of the past, particularly the northern section, and each year about this time thousands of people go there just to be away from the dread ragweed.

Although many people are inclined to laugh at those who sneeze and drip from hay fever during the late summer, the matter is far from a joke. Sufferers are so miserable they often try to flee the scourge and spend much money on taking medical treatment.

Ragweed, the big cause of hay fever, is regarded as a public menace and all of us can do something about it by eliminating it from our properties.

Rights of private enterprise

A UNION official masterminding a strike in an Ontario town reacted with furious indignation to the statement of the owner of the plant that he was contemplating its closure for good unless the strike was settled shortly — reported the bulletin of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association.

But what is there to get hot under the collar about in this? Just as no man in a truly free country can be made to work for a particular employer against his will, so no man can be compelled to keep open his business if he decides that his best interests lie in closing it down. . . . That's his right.

Family life the core of society

IN THIS AGE of international tension when man's scientific genius is capable of destroying civilization with a few bombs, there is a danger that the human race may lose sight of some of its basic values. One of these is the sanctity of the family.

In Canada the role of the family has been changing constantly through the 20th century.

Since the Second World War family life has again been changed through the impact of industrial expansion, more material comforts than ever enjoyed previously in Canadian history, wives going out to work, the growth of suburbia, and increased welfare measures. With teen-agers driving their own cars, the family in many instances is a unit perhaps one day a week.

Now an appeal has been made for Canadians to adopt a more positive approach to parenthood to meet these changing conditions. The plea is based on conclusions of 15 study groups in a survey of the Canadian Family carried out by the Canadian Home and School and Parent-Teacher Federation. The groups included parents, clergy, teachers, doctors, lawyers, businessmen, and scientists across Canada.

"Years ago we insisted that every child be required to learn to read and write," the study says. "It is clear now that we need to insist that every parent has the chance to study the job of parenthood."

There is need for a planned, organized educational program for family life. Community resources should be mobilized to make this possible through education in schools, adult education, family service counselling, churches and other community groups, it declares. There is need for more creative use of leisure and a broader approach to mental health problems.

With greater understanding of human behavior and the basic needs of both parents and children, there is hope that the family will be maintained and enriched as the fundamental core of our society.

Viewpoints and perspectives

CANADA'S eighteenth National Immunization Week begins this year on September 18, Dr. Gordon Bates, General Director of the Health League of Canada, announces. The purpose of the week is to remind Canadians that their families are not safe from such killers as diphtheria, whooping cough, tetanus, smallpox and poliomyelitis unless they have been protected by immunization.

PROVINCES HOLD KEY TO PENSIONS. — Look to the provinces for new developments in Canada's $5,000-million company pension business — writes H. R. Suydam in The Financial Post. It is vital for Canadian workers' security on retirement. The key issue: Will employees changing jobs be able to carry their pension with them?

The provinces are taking a hard look at ways to make contributory retirement plans more effective. Action may be speeded up as the result of Ottawa's withdrawal (as of July 31) of the general instructions regarding the operation of pension plans registered for income tax purposes.

The main problem is vesting. This is the employee's legal right to contributions made on his behalf by his employer (a worker is always entitled to get back what he has paid into a company pension plan). At present, employer contributions don't vest in a worker until he has completed a specific number of years service — usually 20 — or reached a certain age.

Ontario is taking the lead in this vital matter. A committee is studying proposals for preserving a worker's pension benefits under a series of employers.

FAST READING

The newsy just dropped my daily copy of The Winnipeg Tribune on the desk. I'll also read The Free Press at home tonight, along with copies of The Edmonton Journal, The Portage La Prairie Graphic, and the Toronto dailies.

Along with these dailies, I read several weekly papers and two weekly news magazines, plus assorted other publications, such as the CCF's Commonwealth and the business world's Canadian Business.

"How do you plow through so much reading?" Friends ask.

I smile smugly. Some years ago I was talked into taking a course on rapid reading. The fee was outrageous, and I was cynical about the whole thing; but now I consider it one of the best investments I have ever made.

When you read faster you remember better, too. That was one of the pleasant surprises in store for me. The effort to absorb material quickly seems to make you more alert. When you are alert, you are more likely to remember what you read. Speeding up has many beneficial effects.

Because fast reading has helped me so much, I have tried to put the same speed-up process to work in other things. I have increased the speed of my typing a good deal, just by being aware of the fact that speed increases alertness. This is true even of driving an automobile, but you will find that is a hard proposition to sell to the cops. Nevertheless, the man who is driving quickly is often alert, while the dawdler daydreams his way to death.

By speed-up, of course, I do not mean frantic activity — just a steady push forward to completion, a slight tenseness which seems to tone the mind and the muscles.

Try it — and get that tonic feeling of alertness! And with it, the great feeling that comes at the end of the day when you can see a worthwhile number of things accomplished. It will not seem to be such a fast and frantic world to you when you have started to match its speed yourself.

Drive carefully, live longer

Many motorists who complain of the high rates of car insurance are the very ones who have been instrumental in the hike in rates through their careless driving and accident-studded record as motorists. The Provincial Highway Safety Committee (Prudentia) once again repeats — more caution, fewer accidents: And the insurance companies repeat — fewer accidents, lower insurances rates. Be a careful driver!

Grasshopper is big eater

Under normal conditions, their weight increases as much as two and a half times every week.

At five weeks, they become fully winged adults and are 30 to 80 times heavier than when hatched.

Grasshoppers may be slight, but there is nothing slight about their appetites, observes Mr. Putnam.

If there were one newly hatched 'hopper on every square foot in a field, those on an acre would weigh only half a pound; when they reached adult stage, they would weigh 25 pounds.

On 10 acres, roughly the area needed to keep a cow in the dry districts, there would be 250 pounds of adult grasshoppers competing with the cow.

New Polio Vaccine Requires No Needle

A Public Health Nurse of Costa Rica's National Health Service administers oral vaccine against poliomyelitis to a child of one of the houses in her district. These new vaccines are made with attenuated or "tamed" strains of live rather than killed poliovirus and are taken by mouth and not by injection. They are usually given in the form of pills or in fruit-flavored syrups. Costa Rica is only one of several Latin American nations now using oral vaccine in campaigns against polio.

The Pan American Sanitary Bureau, operating arm of the Pan American Health Organization and Regional Office for the Americas of the World Health Organization, assists the countries in combating this crippling disease.

All Aboard

with G. E. MORTIMORE

"It seems to be the fate of Canadians to be taken for somebody else," said Bill.

"During the last war they were taken for British soldiers, sailors and airmen. In civilian clothes in Britain or Europe, they were taken for Americans. They still are. Americans sometimes take them for Englishmen.

"Now I see that French-speaking Canadian servicemen have been mistaken for Belgians in the Congo, and beaten up on that account."

It's true. The Canadian is the Anyface of the international scene. People from other countries bend his identity into various shapes.

However, this isn't such a tragic state of affairs as some people imagine. National labels are not the most important thing in the world. Some people, regrettably, attach too high a value to nationality and to race. But love and death cross all borders.

Never mind if they take us for Frenchmen or Dutchmen. As long as they recognize us as human beings, nothing else matters.

Of course, this was just the thing the Congolese failed to do — recognize our soldiers as human beings. They showed themselves guilty of bitter race prejudice — black against white.

But I suppose that was what we Europeans taught them.

* * *

People-Watchers

Some of us are inquisitive. We like to watch people on the street. The problem is to watch without being caught at it.

Earnest people-watchers often wish they could be invisible. But nobody has been able to manage that trick since Claude Rains did it in a movie called "The Invisible Man."

There are times when I wish to melt away, after saying the wrong thing in a crowded room. But a hand raised to my mouth gives me the bad news: I'm still there.

Some smart people-watching — especially girl-watching — is done with mirrors. A skilled people-watcher can make a cup of coffee last for half an hour as he sits at a counter with eyes fixed on the mirror, observing the twinkle of legs and the flutter of summer dresses.

Girl-watching is just one branch of a larger pastime. True people-watchers are interested in charting the movements and facial expressions of all kinds of human beings, not just the decorative ones.

They like to watch the tense, alert businessmen, wound up to jump when the traffic light changes; the young couples mooning in jewelry store windows; middle-aged lovers timidly clutching hands; old gentlemen casting guilty looks around as they carry home bottles of whiskey; tired housewives wrestling with bundles of food.

It's all part of the show. But for some people-watchers, the fear of being caught spoils the fun. From embarrassment, they will even let their eyes drift out of focus and force themselves to avoid seeing some poor lady negotiating a corner in a high wind, or an angry mother spanking her little boy.

The best device is a pair of dark glasses. Then you can see without being seen. Dark glasses are the next thing to being invisible. It takes courage to wear them indoors — more courage than I have been able to muster, so far. But they work well on the street.

So when you see a man wearing dark glasses at a party, don't write him off as a little jerk trying to look important. He may only be a people-watcher.

Marriage of Convenience

— By Lewis Milligan —

The C.C.F. has always claimed to be the counterpart of the Labor Party in Britain, and it naturally turned to the labor unions in its extremity to save it from extinction. The Canadian Labor Congress, moved to sympathy, if not to tears, was flattered by the implied compliment to its political power, gave its blessing to the proposed new party and urged its union locals to support it actively and financially. The name and the leadership of the new party have yet to be decided upon; but some indication of the former was given by Premier T. C. Douglas in his address of welcome to the delegates at the C.C.F. convention, when he "urged them to forget minor and local problems and concentrate on the challenge of building a democratic socialist movement in Canada." The proper name for the new alliance should, therefore, be The Socialist Party.

But what are the prospects for a socialist party in Canada, whatever title it goes under? Its counterpart, the British Labor Party, has been moving further and further away from socialism, and at the present time is in a state of internal disruption. A CP dispatch from London reports that a "plain-spoken pamphlet, prepared by Morgan Phillips for his national executive committee, told the party's disputing factions to stop blaming each other for past electoral defeats and start planning for the future." The pamphlet is said to have "sidestepped the two major issues dividing Labor's ranks — nationalization and nuclear disarmament." It suggests "a major recruiting drive for party members, and efforts to broaden the basis of party membership, explain party aims to the public, work more closely with trade unions and increase party funds." The pamphlet notes that "labor has been depicted by its opponents as a backward looking party, restrictionist and bureaucratic in office, divided and quarrelling when in opposition." To which it adds: "And we should frankly face the fact that we have sometimes given them, in our conduct, enough evidence to make such charges stick."

Further evidence of the disintegration of the Labor Party is given by the London correspondent of The Sunday Post of Glasgow. He writes: "Sir Tom Williamson, Chief of the General and Municipal Workers' Union, has just underlined the widening gap between the Labor Party and the trade union movement." A growing number of moderate trade unionists are said to be looking for new political affiliations, and the Liberals have already published a paper called "United," with a subtitle, "Fair Play in Industry," which circulates widely in dock areas. The Conservative Party also is said to be "hard at work amongst trade unions. They don't talk much about it, but they reckon that at least one quarter of their general election candidates were members of one union or another."

That situation is paralleled in Canada. The C.C.F., or what remains of it, is in a state of quarrel, not only over the leadership, but is divided on the question of future policy. It wants to revise the dogmatic Regina Manifesto upon which it was founded; but is in a quandary as to how to disguise it out of recognition as an outright socialist program for the proposed new party.

Shower held for popular young Lakefield resident

Lakefield — Last Saturday evening a surprise "kitchen shower" was held at the home of Mrs. George Peet, in honor of Miss Rosemary Legg. About 40 guests were present to extend their good wishes to the bride-to-be, who has recently returned from McMaster University, Hamilton, where she has just completed her studies for her M.Sc. degree.

Mrs. Peet and Mrs. Welsh were hostesses for this delightful evening.

The guest of honor arrived at a house, dark except for the usual brightly-lit kitchen, to find herself suddenly amidst a crowd of friends in a flower decked room, with a "reserved seat" facing her. The "bride's chair," covered in white, stood beneath a dainty pink parasol, in a decorated archway, the tastefully-wrapped gifts piled around it.

Mrs. Baugh, president of the Woman's Auxiliary of Holy Trinity Church, took this occasion to present the guest of honor with a chest of silver, from the W.A. members.

After a happy renewing of acquaintances the guests departed. Several friends, unable to be present sent good wishes in the form of contributions to the "shower".

Reitan-Paquette

The marriage of Margaret Elizabeth Paquette, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Paquette, of Verdun, to Mr. Melvin Joseph Reitan, of Eastend, Sask., and the late Mr. Reitan, took place at St. Aidan's Church, Louisa, on August 20, the Rev. C. W. P. Baugh officiating. The wedding music was played by Mrs. Baugh, and during the signing of the register, Mr. Duncan Malloy, of Verdun, sang "Oh Perfect Love," accompanied by the bride's cousin, Miss Beth Whitcombe, of Toronto. The church was decorated with mixed gladioli and ferns.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a cocktail length gown of white organza with Chantilly lace. The gown was fashioned with a fitted bodice having a scalloped neckline with sequins. She carried a semi-cascade bouquet of American Beauty roses and baby's breath. Her veil of tulle illusion was held in place by a headpiece of matching lace and seed pearls. The bride's only jewelry was a crystal necklace and earrings, a gift of the groom.

Miss Eunice Boyd, as maid of honor, wore a mint green organza street-length dress with bouffant skirt and short sleeves, and headpiece to match. Miss Elaine Boyd, cousin of the bride, as bridesmaid, wore a yellow organza gown and matching headpiece, similar to the maid of honor. Both attendants carried nosegays of bronze mums.

Out-of-town guests included friends and relatives from Saskatchewan, Ohio, Montreal, Roxboro, Ste. Genevieve and Verdun, Que.

On September 1, Mr. and Mrs. Reitan will leave to make their home in Vancouver, B.C.

THANKS

Mrs. George Scott wishes to thank all her kind friends and neighbors who wished her well with cards, gifts and flowers while she was in hospital. 1c

A Weekly Feature of Helpful Hints on Child Training.

— By NANCY CLEAVER —

Children may be funny, but when it comes to clothing a little child for school, parents are sometimes even more puzzling! Of course, mother wants to be proud of her child's appearance. But it is really much more essential that a child going to school should feel at home in his clothes, than that he should look newly outfitted.

The last thing a kindergarten or first grade youngster wants is to be "different"! If his clothes make him feel conspicuous or ill at ease, he is "out of things". He needs to feel that he belongs, and so it is a help for him to look like "the other kids"! Boys especially dread the taunt of being, "Mother's pet!" or "A sissy!"

From the teacher's point of view, she likes to see the children in clothes which are attractive and practical. Mother has only one or two or perhaps three small youngsters in her home, but the teacher's "family" comprise twenty or thirty little folk.

It is a great help to her if Junior's clothes are made so that he can manage his own zipper or buttons when he goes to the toilet. On rainy days the teacher will be thankful if the majority of children have large enough rubbers, marked with their names, and if they can take them off and put them on themselves.

Clothes in September are usually fairly simple. But when it comes to winter time, the teacher hopes her small charges will have snow suits and goloshes which they can remove and dress in themselves, without any assistance. After all, she has only one pair of hands, and time for recess or even the noon break is brief enough. If the scholars are independent, the teacher has more free time.

This first days of school will be much more satisfying for a child if mother talks about the new experiences he enjoys. A good mother hides the little tug at her heart that her "baby" is a baby no longer but entering into a new phase in his life. Teacher shares a place in a child's heart along with mother and dad from now on, if she is a likeable person.

Mother wants her child to look forward to school, to playing and working with other children, to learning new ideas and discovering how to do different things. By anticipating a happy experience, the mother prepares a son or daughter to enter wholeheartedly into this world of school.

The unknown is always a bit terrifying. Mother will want to take away some of this fear of the strange adventure ahead. She will tell little stories about when she started to school, little friends she knew, teachers she liked.

A few days before school opens, Mother will walk to school with the child and remind him to stop at the corner, listen and look both ways and wait till the way is clear before crossing. Just in case he should get lost or be in an accident, he should be able to repeat clearly his name, address and phone number. Mother will also try to make sure that her child knows at least one other youngster who is starting to school in the same class.

A physical check-up by the doctor and dentist, and the eye specialist too if necessary, are also important. Many a child is handicapped in school by some small physical defect. There are many ways of preparing a child for school.

"Let's have a corn roast tonight!" Those were magic words in our town. The suggestion no sooner made . . . plans were underway. The girls husked and precooked the corn in boiling water. The boys were in charge of procuring the firewood and building the fire. Corn on the cob is delicious no matter how you prepare it, no matter where you eat it, but it is really out of this world when roasted over an open fire and eaten with plenty of butter and salt.

For an equally enjoyable evening just build a fire in your own back yard or use your outdoor barbecue if you are fortunate enough to have one. Cook the corn in boiling water as you would indoors, or leave it in nature's wrappings and roast it as follows. Pull back the husks and strip off the silk. Replace the husks and tie the ends with string. Line the ears up on the grill over hot coals. Turn the corn frequently while roasting it to prevent burning. Roast until the husks are dry and browned.

You can also try cooking the corn in aluminum foil. Husk the corn, place it on a large rectangle of foil and spread with butter, salt and pepper. Wrap the corn tightly in the foil, twisting the ends to seal. Roast over hot coals for 15 to 20 minutes, turning several times. When the corn is tender, cut open the foil and use it as a plate or holder. You had better have a good supply of corn on hand as it will certainly disappear quickly.

It is not necessary to eat only corn at a corn roast. Potatoes roasted in the ashes after the fire has died down a bit, taste wonderful. Children and grownups alike enjoy roasting marshmallows. Let the children hunt for long sticks to roast them on. Fruit and a warming drink are ideal to round out the evening.

When the season for corn roasts is ended and the nights become frosty, the taste for corn remains. Why not freeze some corn when it is still plentiful, and you can then enjoy its wonderful flavor during the winter. Freeze it on the cob or if you lack space, freeze the kernels only. The Consumer Section of the Canada Department of Agriculture suggests the following procedures for freezing:

Corn on the Cob — Select freshly picked corn. Remove husks and silk. Trim cobs to even lengths to fit containers. Blanch in boiling water 11 minutes for large cobs, 9 minutes for medium cobs and 7 minutes for small cobs. Chill quickly, drain and pack dry in freezer containers or freezer bags.

"BEEF ON THE HOOF" NOW THEY TENDERIZE

No more tough steaks? Never? says the Financial Post. Swift Canadian Co., Toronto, says a revolutionary new beef processing method tenderizes all the animal's meat.

The implications to the housewife include: Cheaper cuts — round steak, blade steak, stewing beef — will be as tender as the more expensive cuts are now. Cooking may be simpler and faster.

The tenderizing process utilizes an enzyme called "Papain" derived from the Papaya tree. A minute quantity of enzyme is injected into cattle shortly before slaughter. The blood circulates the enzyme throughout the meat. On cooking, the enzyme goes to work to tenderize the meat.

Grape Jelly — year 'round treat

When grapes are ripe, there's always an extra hurry among the jellymakers for two reasons. Year in and year out, grapes are a favorite fruit for homemade spreads and women who have neglected to make jams and jellies with the earlier fruits will rush to "put up" delectable spreads now that flavorful grapes are appearing on the market.

Grape season means jelly as surely now as it did in the days of our great grandmothers. Just recently I found an interesting old recipe for "good grape jell" in an old cookbook which said, among other things, "boil for nearly an hour."

Today we boil only one minute . . . just about the time it takes to read great-grandmother's directions. We get more glasses of jelly, too. After nearly an hour's boil, a lot of her fruit juice had escaped as steam, and the fresh flavor of the grapes was almost completely hidden by an over-cooked taste. How fortunate we are to have bottled liquid pectin and packaged powdered fruit pectin. For using these fine products and kitchen tested recipes, your jam or jelly will set just right after only a one minute boil. And because of this short boiling time each glass of jam or jelly will have the flavor of the fresh fruit. You can make jam or jelly from any fruit . . . even those known as poor jelling fruit . . . when you add pectin yourself.

Fill up those empty spaces in your jam cupboard now using the sure, easy short-boil method. When you add pectin yourself, 15 minutes after the fruit or juice is prepared your sweet spread is in jars ready for storage.

Despite the fact that wash and wear fabrics seem to stay fresh longer, they need to be washed as frequently as regular fabrics, say the manufacturers.

It's difficult to remove heavy soil and stains from wash and wear items. Garments will come cleaner if collars and cuffs are spotted first with soap or detergent.

Do not use chlorine bleaches unless the label advises it. Chlorine bleaches may cause the fabric to turn yellow. If pressing is necessary, use a steam or regular iron on medium for cottons. A low setting is needed for synthetics and blends. A press cloth will prevent a shiny surface.

Feeding the Family

Housewives have been scolded by Professor E. W. Crampton of the department of nutrition at Montreal's McGill University, for their lack of concern about dietary standards.

Writing in the Journal of the Canadian Dietetic Association, he said the dietary standards which are based on man's own nutrient needs, seldom have any important direct bearing on what the average woman buys or prepares to feed her family.

"Custom, habit, prejudices, erroneous beliefs, and sometimes finances are so much involved that it is only with difficulty that adults can be induced to alter their habits for nutritional reasons," he wrote.

The answer, he said, is in an educational program in the schools about food needs. By educating young people, whose eating habits are not rigid, such an educational program should ultimately be successful.

Cauliflower, Too

Yes, you can freeze cauliflower, say the experts. Break the compact, white tender heads into flowerettes about one inch in diameter, wash thoroughly and blanch in boiling water for three minutes.

Chill quickly, drain and pack dry in freezer containers.

Making Way for Hydro

The first house in Cushing to be demolished has been that of Mr. and Mrs. John Bradford. This had been sold by Hydro Quebec to a Hawkesbury purchaser, who has carted it away to be rebuilt elsewhere. Several of the barns from other farms having met the same fate some time ago, with the Hydro up to date, making use of the houses. Progress is the watchword, but "change and decay" is more realistic.

St. Mungo's Church

Much of the beauty of St. Mungo's Church has been restored with the replacing of the original centre chandelier with its five lamps, also the two high pulpit lamps and two wall-bracket lamps on each side of the door. These have all been wired for electricity. Some recent members of the congregation who had not seen the church in a long ago, remarked that the chandelier and lamps added dignity to the church. The restoration of these lamps has been done by Mrs. J. D. Weir in memory of her husband, the late Capt. J. D. Weir, and is much appreciated by all the members.

The Intermediate School will open on Wednesday, September 7. Bus routes will be the same as usual, and vehicles will bring pupils to the school for this first Wednesday to arrive at 9.30 a.m. Pupils will return home before noon.

The new teachers this year are for Grade II, Grade VII and for the High School. Registration for Grade I and Grade II will take place at the old school. Parents of children for Grade I are reminded that pupils must be six years of age before or on September 30, 1960. Pre-school-age children may make an application at the New School, and this application must be made to the principal only; no other teacher or employee of the school is able to accept or promise anything to parents of pre-school-age children. This is to avoid the confusion that has existed in the past.

Fees, insurance, and workbook money should be brought either on the Wednesday or Thursday.

Education is the most important investment for our children that a parent can make. All interested in the community and its young citizens are looking forward to a happy, successful year.

WOMAN'S SUFFRAGE

"Sunnyacres Sketches"

By Margaret Cook

We have just finished making some blackberry jelly. Our hands are a nasty shade of purplish grey, and our neck has bumps where the black flies feasted while we picked — but we are happy. One of our neighborhood ladies remarked that she did not like to make jelly because one had to throw away so much of the fruit. This is, of course, true, but we had never given it a thought. To us, jelly is an edible jewel, and during the winter we like to go down to the basement and gloat over the jars glowing red, amber, green and purple. . . . It was fun picking those thimbles of jet in the clear, cool, sunny air yesterday. We fell to thinking of an English film of several years ago that featured a blackberry-picking expedition. It was quite a day — the pickers all got soaked, and an elderly judge proposed to his lady-love in a boat, and nearly got swept over the dam before he finished. So inept was his approach, that the lady got the impression that he was suggesting the amalgamation of their chicken-houses. Remember "Quiet Week-End"? We have experienced some week-ends almost as hilarious as that, ourselves.

* * *

This is the time of year — not quite summer, not yet autumn — when one hastens to do all one has put off. We drive hither and yon over the countryside. On one of our expeditions, it was our good fortune to be invited into a house, one hundred and thirty years old. This is the "old Pollock place" at the east end of Long Lake, but for the past thirty years, it has been occupied by members of the Benson family. Like most pioneer houses, it is a rectangle, with the familiar steep, slanted roof, so necessary in this climate. The present owner tells me that the insulation used in the walls (the inside is panelled in wood) was sawdust, and that was the accepted material for that purpose long ago. Come to think of it, ice-houses invariably feature sawdust. This house has the downstairs bedroom so much favored by our forefathers, and a staircase leads from the main room upstairs. The kitchen part of the house was added seventy-five years ago, and has two posts supporting the ceiling, about half way across the floor. These posts have long been used to record the varying height of the children. We have a similar totem pole in our porch. As I write, I can see a notation, "George — 3'6". At the right, under the date 1948, Betty's mark at 4'. The highest notation is "Harold — 6' — 1935". Country homes may not be as luxurious as the city ones, but they have character!

Our thoughts have been running on longevity recently, not that we aspire to it, but we note that there are many really old people hereabout. At a church service lately, the priest was eighty-eight, while behind us sat a man of ninety-four. Across from him was one of the pioneers of the district reputed to be "about ninety". That same week, we talked with the founder of this paper, now ninety-one. Each one of these men is upright in carriage, and alert in mind. They can talk of past times, but they mostly do not. Their thinking is as modern as yours and mine.

What is it that makes some people old at fifty, and others young at ninety? Books have been written on this, but no conclusions drawn. Interviews in the press show that some very old people drink alcohol and some do not, some smoke, some not, some eat meat and some eat vegetables — the classic example of this last being the late Bernard Shaw. Some nonagenerians advocate exercise and some despise it. What is the mysterious common factor? Up here, I would say pure air. Most of these long-lived folk do not inhabit a city. I should also think it might help to have some long-lived ancestors, but after that, it is anybody's guess. But one thing I do note, and that is that none of these oldsters is running about frantically trying to be young! Obviously the arteries are young, but the emotions are mature. A friend was telling us of a wonderful centre in the southern States where live mostly elderly people, whose lives seem devoted to the pleasures of dancing, card-parties, etc. How dreary! Surely, if one arrives at seventy or eighty, one ought to have in the mind something more enduring than the so-called pleasures of society. St. Paul put it well, "When I was a child, I spake as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as a child; but when I became a man, I put away childish things." Anyway, a bouquet to our senior citizens. I always enjoy their company.

* * *

Our hug-loving daughter points out that we blamed an insect on the blackcurrant bushes for the disease of the pines. It is not, she says firmly, an insect, but a form of fungus, called white-pine blister-rust. The white-pine blister-rust needs both the currant bush and the pine to complete its life cycle. So now you know!

* * *

To end on a silly note — driving over to Amos' for our dinner a few days ago, a voice was chanting on the radio, "And through the fields of clover, we will drive down to Dover, on our golden wedding-day —"

"Dover?" I queried. "It must have been Dover, New Hampshire".

"Anyway," he added thoughtfully, "it couldn't have been in the States. They don't stay married that long!"

Opportune time for making a lawn

At this time of the year we are entering a period which is very favorable for sowing a permanent lawn. For one thing, the coming season is a little damper and, furthermore, the growth of weeds is now somewhat abated so that the grass does not meet with such vigorous competition. This period lasts until about September 10 or 15.

In order to establish a good lawn without going to too much trouble, it is necessary to have:

2. — between six and eight inches of good topsoil;
3. — good seed.

A good soil is one which holds water well and is well aerated, is slightly acid and rich in plant nutrients. If the soil is well aerated but does not retain water and fertilizing elements, as for instance is the case with sand, satisfactory results will depend on liberal applications of fertilizer and frequent waterings.

Complete and detailed instructions for making a lawn may be obtained free of charge by writing to the Central Experimental Farm at Ottawa or to the Botannical Gardens in Montreal for a bulletin on lawns. But Mr. André Sauvé of the Quebec Department of Agriculture, a specialist in landscape-gardening, strongly urges those who want to make good use of the information given in these bulletins to pay particular attention to one very important point, namely, the depth of topsoil required. The recommendation has already been made repeatedly by every possible means, that in order to make a good lawn, either by seeding or sodding, it is necessary to have a foundation of at least six to eight inches of good topsoil. However, after watching people making lawns one is left with the impression that the publication of this advice has been largely a waste of time. Most people still continue to spread a couple of inches of good soil on top of the subsoil from excavations — in most cases clay — and then sow seed or lay turf on it. It is not surprising to find them later resorting to various palliatives. Unfortunately no remedy has yet been discovered which can supply this vital deficiency. Four inches of good soil is better than two inches but six or eight inches is far better still. Poor soil, such as the subsoil from excavations, is deficient in available plant nutrient elements. It is difficult to correct such deficiencies by applying commercial fertilizer because soil of this kind also lacks good structure, that is to say it becomes too compact and is therefore almost impervious to air and water and fertilizing elements. The structure or physical condition of poor soil can be improved by the addition and incorporation of three or four inches of manure, peat or muck soil, peat moss or sawdust. In the case of a property covering an area of four or five thousand square feet, however, a great deal of trouble will be saved in the long run by removing the poor soil and buying good topsoil to replace it.

C-I-L Appointment

who has been appointed traffic and customs manager of Canadian Industries Limited. He was formerly production manager of the company's chemical division. Educated at Acadia and McGill Universities, Mr. Rockwell joined C-I-L in 1926 as a chemist in the Beloeil, Que., explosives plant, transferring to the chemicals division in 1935. Since then he has served in a number of administrative posts with the division at Hamilton and Montreal in both production and sales. He was appointed production manager in 1954. Mr. Rockwell succeeds D. S. Hart, who has been assigned special duties in the company.

Police Chief has message on holiday week-end

Labor Day week-end will be no picnic for police officers, especially those on traffic duty — it was predicted here by Chief A. J. Whiteway.

"Labor Day means extra work for us," the Chief pointed out. "We don't mind being on duty; policemen always are. But holidays like this can be a nightmare for those who have to sort out the dead and injured from the masses of twisted metal they make out of their automobiles in record numbers, on the last big week-end of the summer."

The prevention of traffic accidents has become a major concern of police forces. "Nearly all traffic accidents could be avoided," Chief Whiteway asserted, "if people would use common sense and observe a few basic rules."

His recommendations on how to drive and stay alive are simple. "Don't go anywhere unless your car is in top mechanical condition. Always be alert for what other drivers might do. On long trips, stop for a stretch and a coffee-break at least every two hours. Be courteous towards pedestrians and other motorists — and obey all traffic regulations."
