Two highway fatalities east, west of Lachute

Mrs. Frank Mayock, a 47-year-old Whitby, Ont., resident, died as a result of injuries received in an accident early Sunday morning on Route 41, two miles east of Lachute. The accident occurred July 23 at the junction of the old and new sections of the St. Jerome highway.

The victim was in a car owned and driven by her husband, 45, also of Whitby. Driver of the other car involved in the head-on crash was Ronald Boyd, 19-year-old son of Melvin Boyd, owner of the car.

The drivers of both cars suffered minor injuries and shock, as did Miss Lynda Barrette, 20, of Montreal, a passenger in the Boyd vehicle. The injured were treated at the Providence Hospital, where they were taken by ambulance.

Traffic officers were called to the scene of the accident just as they were investigating another fatal automobile mishap on the Avoca Road, some 20 miles west of Lachute. . . . The fatal victim of the Avoca crash was René Simard, 26, of Alfred, Ont., who was instantly killed when the car in which he was driving swerved out of control, rolling across the road and through a field a considerable distance, until it crashed into a tree.

Inquests into the two accidents will be held in Lachute.

Policeman rescues Carillon man from Ottawa River

Police officers at Carillon were instrumental in averting a drowning, near the ferry landing one evening last week.

According to information received, at 8.20 p.m. on Monday, July 24, Chief Germain Girard and Lt. G. Theriault were parked some 50 feet from the dock when they saw two men plunge into the Ottawa River. One of the bathers, R. Duguay, 25, of Carillon, dived and came to the surface, then sank from sight.

A lady nearby, Mrs. Desormeaux, cried out in alarm and the policemen ran towards the dock. Lt. Theriault removed his revolver and shoes, and dived in; he succeeded in grasping the victim and swam back to shore. The chief extended his police belt, which the rescuer grasped while helping Mr. Duguay to the dock. He was taken to the police station to rest and recover from his misadventure.

It was stated by Chief Girard that the victim could not swim. He was in 15 feet of water when he got into difficulties and tragedy was so narrowly averted.

Publishing House en fête at St. Andrews East

A pleasant function was enjoyed by the Giles Publishing House staff recently when the management hosted their employees, with wives and partners, to a supper at St. Andrews Golf and Country Club. Although starting on holidays, all 16 members of the regular staff were present.

The gathering numbered around 35 persons, and the occasion was specially in honor of Hugh McEntyre, veteran pressman, on his "coming of age" (70) and being the first employee to qualify for the company's pension benefits. Mr. McEntyre has been employed by the firm for 31 years, and has seen many changes. He and Mrs. McEntyre were lauded for their loyalty in a speech by Mr. R. A. Giles, manager. "Hughie" was presented with an engraved wrist watch and a cheque, while, from the members of the staff, the couple received the practical gift of an electric frying-pan.

Gratifying to the staff and management was the presence of Mr. R. S. Giles, president of the firm, now heading for his 92nd milestone. Special guests also were Mr. and Mrs. Edward Jones and Mr. Stewart Jones, partners in Gall & Jones, insurance brokers, who initiated the employee pension plan for members of the Giles establishment.

Sgt. Albt. Legault earns retirement

Traffic Sergeant Albert Legault, who last week commenced a month's holiday prior to his retirement from the Quebec Provincial Police. A veteran of more than 30 years' service, Sgt. Legault has served the population with courtesy and efficiency over this long period. The good wishes of this newspaper, along with those of the community at large, go to Sgt. Legault on his retirement.

Police linked by all-points radio

A short-wave radio was last week installed in the local Provincial Police office, in a tie-in system extending throughout the province. The unit installed is a temporary one, which will later be replaced. It connects Lachute instantly with Montreal, Hull, Quebec and all intermediate Provincial Police offices.

Bill 65 discussed at meeting in St. Andrews East

St. Andrews — The increased opportunities offered by the new Provincial Bill 65 to municipalities in their efforts to promote industrial development, was the theme of a meeting held at St. Andrews East Golf and Country Club on Saturday, under auspices of the Ottawa Valley Development Association and St. Andrews East Chamber of Commerce.

In opening the meeting, Mr. Paul Labreche, president of the O.V.D. Assn., extended a warm welcome to the guest speakers, Mr. René Garlepy and Mr. Ronald Daoust, of the Quebec Department of Trade and Commerce, and to delegates from Arundel, Ayersville, Brownsburg, Calumet, Carillon, Chatham Township, Grenville, Lachute, Morin Heights, Montebello, Oka, St. Eustache and St. Placide.

The guest speakers gave a detailed and instructive account of the new Bill (65) which provides for technical assistance and financial advice to be made available to municipalities concerned with promoting industrial development within their communities.

Questions were invited by the chairman, Mayor Antoine Paré of St. Andrews East, and a lively discussion followed. Closing remarks were made by Mr. John Payne, vice-president of St. Andrews East Chamber of Commerce, who, on behalf of all delegates, thanked the guest speakers for a very rewarding introduction to this important Bill.

Brownsburg Council orders radar unit; parking regulations to be enforced

Our District Correspondent

Brownsburg — With some members seemingly under the impression that one meeting a month will not solve the municipal problems, the Brownsburg Council finally closed the books on July after holding two long drawn-out sessions which in the long run did not produce any startling legislation.

Of primary interest was the announcement by Georges Therrien, chairman of the Police Committee, that Police Chief Roger Boutet has been advised to crack-down on parking regulations. The drivers hardest hit will be those who double park, park over the white lines, on sidewalks or on those areas marked as walk-ways for pedestrians, as well as those who stop past the double white line at the stop light. Parking overtime at areas having time limits will also bring a fine instead of a warning. Drivers should note that the time limits apply only during store hours. The only regrettable part in the announcement was that it contained no reference to a crack-down on speeding. While the enforcement of the law in regard to parking is highly desirable, particularly since the town is so well equipped with parking signs, a speeding automobile in town is far more hazardous than a stationary one. This reporter has long argued for better speed control, but to no avail. Now that Councillors Therrien and Vowles have indicated their intention of increasing police department efficiency, perhaps the lack of interest exhibited so often in the past will be replaced by a desire to make this community as safe as it should be. To help toward this end Council approved the rental of a radar speed-timer for a period of three months. If the unit is satisfactory, its outright purchase will be approved and the rental payments applied against the cost of the equipment. Now, again quoting Councillor Therrien in a remark made by him some months ago, "No matter what equipment we have, we must use it." . . . Council also approved a motion authorizing the Police Committee to sell the little-used speed traps.

Dogs and dog-licenses came in for some lengthy discussion as Police Chief Boutet complained of the difficulty of collecting dog taxes on a door to door basis. Council checked the wording of the by-law governing dog taxes and ruled that dog owners are responsible for obtaining a license for their pets. A fine of from $5 to $25 may be imposed on owners who fail to adhere to this regulation. Council left the subject at this point without clearing up the question of what to do about dogs running loose in town, with or without a

Welcome Wagon idea explained to Rotary Club

At the weekly meeting of the Brownsburg-Lachute Rotary Club on July 20, Peter Denker of Lachute was inducted into the club by Rotarian Fred Royal. Following this procedure, Rotarian Jack MacKimmie gave a light-hearted but interesting talk about his recent visit to Scotland and England, also showing some fine color slides.

At the meeting of July 27, Alex Kerr of Lachute was inducted into the club, by Rotarian Linton Armstrong.

The guest speaker was Mrs. Lafontaine, from Quebec City, who is an organizer for the Welcome Wagon Committee. This is an organization composed entirely of women who send out representatives such as Mrs. Lefontaine to set up new Welcome Wagons in towns and cities in the Province of Quebec. Their job is to welcome new families and newlyweds who have moved into the community, calling on them and presenting them with baskets containing goods and products donated by manufacturers, stores and businesses in the community. In some cases the business card of a merchant is used, which may entitle the holder to a special discount. Mrs. Lafontaine informed the club that Mrs. Janet Wilson had been appointed in charge of the Welcome Wagon for the Lachute area. Mrs. Lafontaine's talk proved most interesting, as the Welcome Wagon is a new venture in this part of the country.

Sgt. Ralph Allen to Sherbrooke post

Sgt. Ralph Allen, formerly in charge of the Provincial Police in Lachute and for the past year in charge at St. Jerome, has now been transferred to supervise the Sherbrooke detachement — according to an announcement by Director Josaphat Brunet.

HOODLUM FATALLY SHOT BY MANAGER —

Four-bandit bank hold-up stirs serenity of Arundel

A sensation disturbed the normal tranquillity of Arundel last week, when bandits entered the Bank of Montreal branch in that village and met more than they bargained for, in shotgun reprisals from the manager. The known toll of this escapade is $5,700 stolen and one bandit killed.

Police were searching for three robbers believed to be hiding in the woods around Arundel. Uniformed officers were everywhere in the normally quiet community, which was the scene of the robbery last Thursday. Three bandits made their escape, and a fourth was killed by a shotgun blast from manager Charles Farran.

Mr. Farran, a World War II veteran, lives in an apartment above the bank. His wife and two children, a girl of three and boy of two months, were sent to another community in case of possible reprisals.

A force of some 50 Quebec Provincial and local police took part in the search, establishing roadblocks and patrolling roads in the area.

The slain bandit, Martial Trottier, 26, was found in the abandoned getaway truck where he had been left dead or dying by his companions.

The robbers beat a hasty retreat from Arundel in the half-ton pick-up truck, the bank manager firing on them from a second-storey window.

Police said his shots may have wounded one of the survivors now being sought. A .38-calibre revolver was found in the truck beside the body of Trottier, a Montreal gangster with two previous holdup convictions. Also found in the truck were a dozen .45-calibre shells for a machine-gun one of the bandits had been toting.

Police estimated that 30 shots were fired during the incident. When the bank manager first opened fire, the bandits apparently had no idea where it was coming from and in their flight they riddled the street and Gordon's service-station directly opposite the bank with machine-gun bullets; 16 empty cartridge cases were recovered from the street and service-station yard.

Manager Chas. Farran

Mr. Farran said he was sitting in his first-floor office when the truck, stolen the day before in Montreal, screeched to a stop in front of the bank.

"It was their cowboy driving that made me suspicious," he said. "When men wearing hoods started piling out of the truck, I ran through the rear door of my office and up the back stairs to get my gun from my apartment."

Grabbing the gun, loading it and running to a window, he started firing when the first bandit ran out of the building.

Two employees and a customer, all unharmed, were in the bank when the robbery occurred.

Ledger-keeper Ken Ferry, 19, and Teller Lois Gray, 20, said the bandits scooped money out of the tills and fled outside.

It is reported the abandoned 1960 truck had been stolen the previous day from a Rosemount Blvd. firm.

YOUNG LADY WITH M.D. AT 23 —

Former Police Chief Donat Villeneuve has daughter and son degree-graduates

Mr. and Mrs. Donat Villeneuve, who moved from Lachute some seven years ago, were recent visitors to this district while attending a family re-union at Calumet. Mr. Villeneuve will be remembered as Chief of Police in Lachute for 10 years, and for his interest in welfare work, being also an active member of the Lions Club. In Granby he now occupies a position with the G. M. Plastics Corporation as a technician, and is security officer for the plant.

The former Danielle Villeneuve

While they resided here in Lachute their daughter, Miss Danielle Villeneuve, received her education at Ste. Anastasie Convent, later taking her B.A. in Montreal. Now married to Lawrence Barry Mutty, M.D., she has continued her studies, spending three years in medicine at the University of Ottawa, and at the medical college of South Carolina in Charleston, where she received her M.D. degree at the age of 23 years.

Also on the honor list is a son, Clement Paul Villeneuve, who has recently received the degree of Bachelor of Commerce and Master of Economy. This young man also received his early education here at l'Ecole Supérieure, Lachute High School and then at D'Arcy McGee, Montreal. He also spent two years at the North West Polytechnic College, London. Now graduated, he will join the Shell Oil Company, as an economist.

Clément Paul Villeneuve

To the parents and children of this former Lachute family, their friends extend hearty congratulations.

Valuable horses killed on highway

The Smith Brothers at East Settlement, who raise purebred Clydesdale horses, suffered considerable loss when three of their animals got loose on the highway and were struck by an eastbound car, shortly before 11.30 Sunday night.

Fortunately, the occupants of the car escaped with only minor injuries, for which they were treated at the Providence Hospital. Their car was badly wrecked.

Douglas and Melville Smith were notified their horses were on the highway. They immediately went out to round up the stray animals, some distance east of their home near the county line. They attempted to halt an approaching car, but the auto crashed into the horses. One animal was killed, and another so badly mutilated it had to be shot an hour later. Another of the horses is badly gashed, but recovering under veterinary care.

Driver of the car was André Lussier. Other occupants were Michel Dubreuil and Yvon Carriere — all Montrealers.

The incident was investigated by Officer Richard Dubé, of the local traffic squad.

Child drowned at Lake Louisa

Peter Wockner, two-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wockner, was found drowned by his parents on Tuesday of last week. The accident occurred at the parents' summer home at Lake Louisa.

Dr. R. B. Smith, of Montreal, a neighbor, rushed to the scene immediately upon hearing Mrs. Wockner scream. He and two other physicians, Dr. A. L. Gordon, of Montreal, and Dr. A. R. Côté, of Brownsburg (all lake residents), worked on the infant for almost an hour in an effort to revive him.

As joint district coroner, Dr. Côté ruled the death accidental.

$170,000 lawsuit for fatalities in plane crash

Action for $171,000 against Wheeler Airlines is being taken on behalf of the widows and families of two St. Jerome officers of the Provincial Police killed last September in a plane crash at Lac Rupert, north of St. Jovite.

The deceased police officers, Lucien Danis and Jean-Marc Godmer, were making an investigation in the course of their duties, when the plane accident occurred. (Lucien Danis was the brother of Mme Yvette Raymond, secretary treasurer of Lachute Town.) A third member of the provincial force, Jean-Claude Légaré, accompanied the pilot. Légaré, whose home is at St. Michel de Wentworth, suffered injuries in the crash. The pilot, André Godbout, was killed.

Counsel for the plaintiffs are Thinel & Pilfe, a St. Jerome law firm, who have entered action in Superior Court on grounds that the aircraft was not flight-worthy, nor the pilot competent, also that the airline company failed to comply with flight regulations.

Argenteuil Outdoors

A column for the sportsman

— By BOB ATCHISON —

— BACK HOME once again, and to say we are pleased, is putting it mildly. One thing we have found out in country like this, food is one of the most important items of all. Loss of weight sure is a tough thing to combat.

I wrote you early in April about the waterfalls that were covered with snow and ice, showing no sign of water at all. You may also remember we travelled by train, or what passes as a train. However, our trip back out was by Northern Wings, and as luck would have it, we came over the top of these same falls. Not flying too high, this gave us an excellent opportunity of really seeing them in action. Some of them are as high, if not higher, than Niagara, but of course not having the same volume of water. Flying out gave us the opportunity of seeing some of the lakes and rivers not seen before. Majestic is not the word for some of these. In particular the Moisie River, that is rated one of the finest salmon rivers in North America. Wending its way from almost the heart of Labrador through some of the most impassable terrain, to be seen finally ending up in a torrent of white water that seems to stretch for miles. You know, flying on these fishing trips gave me a chance to see some wonderful country but this last trip out left nothing to be desired. Seeing lakes right on top of a mountain, seemingly without any flow of water into them except for rain. I am certainly not a good enough writer to describe these beauty spots, but maybe you will understand when I tell you it is the most fantastic country I've ever seen. It would be impossible to describe the colors, or the rugged beauty; the only thing I can say is, SEE IT YOURSELF. Naturally it would be impossible to say we covered Labrador in such a short time. But we did see a lot of it.

This is one of the few countries or provinces that is still unspoiled; how long it will remain like this is anybody's guess. Progress has to go on. There are a few good things on its side though; one of them is the weather. Maybe you will get tired of all the talk about this, but believe me, it's not a thing you can forget. The last snowfall of our sojourn was on July 5, when 4 inches fell. . . .

The very next day the weather started to warm up and you know what happened then. Flies by the millions — not only Black Flies, but the biggest and certainly the worst I have ever seen or come in contact with. The Cariboo fly sure takes the cake. You know you can put on all the dope that is made, so what happens — they LIKE it. They just swarm all over you. The way these flies get after the Cariboo from which they get their name, is something to see. If you can imagine a Cariboo so covered with flies that it wasn't even bothered with humans, then maybe you can understand just how they swarm. I have watched them on Cariboo, getting into the animal's ears and seemingly shutting off the hearing. When the animal does start to go, away the flies come out of the ears by the hundreds. It sure is not a pretty sight to see. Just in case you think they bother only animals — don't. Man, when a couple of these get on you, a transfusion is needed right away. I know you won't believe all this, but to see a Cariboo absolutely beat from these flies is an appalling sight.

These are a few of the rough aspects of Labrador; now for some of the nice things. I don't think I have ever seen sunsets so vivid or so brilliant as they are there. To see the fast rivers starting breaking up from the onslaughts of winter, is another grand sight. Seeing the ice thrown up onto the shore gives you a very little idea of the power of water.

Another strange thing was the complete lack of fear in any of the animals we saw — no doubt due to the fact there are not very many human killers around. To give you some idea of this, just the day before we left, a timber wolf that had been around the area for weeks without doing any harm, was shot and killed. When you stop and think of things like this, it makes you mad. After all, these wolves do no harm to anyone or anything in this part of the country. To my way of thinking, anything wild that lives here should be given a bonus, and not killed. But you know it takes the great white hunters to upset the cart!

So ends our visit to Labrador for this year.

Naturally, the first point I visited on getting back was MY creek. With the rains, this creek is nice and high and should provide excellent sport for some Brookies. One very gratifying thing was the way the creek had cleansed itself of all the junk that had been thrown into it. This also applies to the North River. Let's hope this continues as I don't think it will be too long before something is done about it. I don't think it can be kept the way it is without some action being taken. I'm not going to start beefing about it so soon, but wait awhile. The same applies to the roadsides in our county.

I think the crow shooters have been on vacation, or else they have given this up as a bad job. The number of young ones around gives you some idea of how fast these critters multiply. The number of birds in evidence makes us realize just what we have been missing, too; just the other day when we saw about a dozen canaries in one of our hedges. Beautiful!

I was fortunate in getting some information on a new shot shell reloader for those gents who do a lot of Trap and Skeet shooting. I do know this is a fascinating hobby, and an expensive one. But let's forget about this minor detail. This loader has been perfected now to the point where it will load the solids, plastic, or just plain old shot shell. It's also supposed to do all this with just a change in dials. This I would like to see, and probably will, before too long. I do know some loaders will not handle two kinds, so if this one will do what is claimed, it will be a great thing for the loaders.

We have been out fishing on the North River and with some good catches. Perch were the main thing for us, and I will say some good feeds are in store for us. I was down in Lake Emily and saw some terrific fish in there. Boy, there must be some Northerns up there that will break a record.

license. This particular point has been the subject of a number of recent complaints.

Council passed a motion to homologate the revisions to the tax roll, after the recent completion of the survey conducted by the official evaluators. This was the first year that the tax was based on house dimensions and type of external finish, and further refinements are being planned for next year. Council hopes that this will provide the evaluators with a more accurate method of arriving at a just tax value.

Another problem which demanded the attention of the assembled councillors was "What to do about the town dump". A former mayor, Tom Hall, paid a visit to the assembly to advise the municipality that the town-owned dump area was completely filled and that further use of the site would cause overflow onto his property. Council now faces the necessity of finding a new location and a formidable task this may be.

Morrow-Donaldson

The wedding of Miss Malford Grace Donaldson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Donaldson, of Chatboro, and Mr. Calvin Ernest Morrow, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Morrow, of Monalea Road, took place on Saturday, July 22, at 4 p.m. in St. Mungo's Church, Cushing.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown of pure silk organza and Alençon lace. It was fashioned with a fitted bodice, having a decolettage neckline and long sleeves ending in points over the hands. A front panel of re-embroidered Alençon lace fell to the hemline of the bouffant skirt. Her short veil of tulle illusion was held in place by a matching headdress, and she carried a bouquet of white stephanotis and mauve orchids.

Miss Marion Elliott, as maid of honor, Miss Carol-Lynn Cavanaugh, Miss Linda Maslin and Miss Claire Cruise, as bridesmaids, were in gowns of pure silk organza over taffeta, fashioned with fitted bodices, square necklines, draped cummerbunds and bouffant skirts. The maid of honor was in lilac and the bridesmaids in aqua. They wore matching flower-veiled headdresses and carried bouquets in lilac tones of carnations and forget-me-nots.

The bride's mother, Mrs. Donaldson, was in a Carib blue silk costume with a lace bodice. She wore a shell pink picture hat with gloves to match, and a corsage of split pink carnations. Mrs. Morrow, the bridegroom's mother, was in a ciel-blue gown of pure silk organza and Alençon lace. She wore a petal hat of the same shade and a corsage of pink tea roses and split carnations.

The marriage was solemnized by the Rev. K. Feltham and the Rev. C. W. Sorley, and as the bride and groom left the church, they were preceded down the aisle by the sound of bagpipes. Miss Bonnie Gain, of Cushing, sang "I Love You Truly", "Because", and "The Lord's Prayer".

The couple left to spend their wedding trip in Niagara, the bride travelling in a pale blue silk linen costume. She wore a white petal hat, white accessories and a corsage bouquet of mauve orchids. The couple will reside in Lachute.

Recent Wedding at Mille Isles

Dawson-Clark

The marriage of Miss Mildred Lillian Dawson, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Dawson, of Mille Isles, to Mr. David Wesley Clark, son of Mr. and Mrs. Garnett Clark, of Montreal, took place recently at Christ Church, Mille Isles. The Rev. Horace G. Baugh officiated, and Mrs. Norman Patterson was the organist.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore an ankle-length gown of white nylon net over taffeta with full skirt, enhanced with chinchilla lace appliqués. The fitted, V-shaped bodice, buttoned down the back, was of chinchilla lace with long sleeves coming to a point over the hands. The scalloped neckline was studded with sequins. Her shoulder-length veil was held in place with a tiara of white pearls. She carried a bouquet of tiny red roses and white carnations.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Norma Dawson, and her little flower girl was Miss Linda Janes, cousin of the bride. The bridesmaid wore a pale blue dress of peau de soie and carried a bouquet of pink carnations. The flower girl wore a pale pink dress of nylon over taffeta. She carried a nosegay of white carnations.

Mr. Floyd Clark acted as best man for his brother. Mr. Lincoln Dawson and Mr. George Dawson, brothers of the bride, were ushers.

The bride's mother wore a green dress and matching bolero, with a green hat and white accessories. Her corsage was of pink carnations. Mrs. Clark, mother of the groom, wore a mauve dress of chiffon and matching duster. Her accessories were white, and her corsage was of pink carnations.

The bride's going-away dress was a two-piece pale blue sheath with matching jacket. She wore a pale blue hat and white accessories. Her corsage was of white carnations. The couple will reside in Montreal.

Military whist at Gibb Parish Hall

TOO MANY FIRES

Montreal (CP) — Fire department statistics show there has been an average of more than 14 fires a day in Montreal in the last two years. In 1960 the daily average was 14.7, up from 14.1 in 1959.

Jottings from the Canadian Authors' Dominion Conf'ce

By JANET POLLOCK GRAHAM — Specially Contributed

The Dominion Convention of Canadian Authors was held in famous old Hart House, in connection with Toronto University, and was well attended during the sessions.

Forty years of such conventions had of course brought many changes, many new faces, but there were still quite a number of celebrated and familiar figures. Amongst those noted was that of John M. Elson, originator of the Pen Club, at one time named the "Elson Club". This was changed to "The Pen Club" because of changes some of those taking office wished to have made, and which Elson felt were not desirable or to the club's interest, so much so that he did not wish it operated under the name of Elson. However, he is still a strong supporter of this club which quite often meets in his home and the interest of the sessions is due to his lectures on subjects of interest to writers — several of his former pupils having been prize winners in their published books.

Another old friend, Mrs. Stone, whose face told you that (as the Indians sometimes expressed age) she "had seen many moons" yet was young enough at heart to keep her age to herself — as one member found out when she said, "Mrs. Stone, I know it's an awful thing to ask any woman, but just how old are you?" The answer given quite spiritedly was, "I just won't tell you" — although she was quite willing to talk of her two books published so many years ago, regarding "This Canada of Ours" that they are long out of print.

There were others as well easily recognized as old-timers, seemingly drinking in as eagerly as the younger ones the words of wisdom, or otherwise, that fell from the lips of the speakers.

One speaker, Marjorie Freeman Campbell, told us that history was to be found in the "Hatch, Match, and Dispatch Columns" of the newspapers, in other words, Births, Marriages and Deaths that appear daily. . . . That would doubtless entail a bit of research work regarding each individual mentioned.

One of her admonitions was, "Don't try to tell everything." That no doubt applied to the use of known names in book writing, as in some cases doubtless it would not be a wise policy to tell everything about those so named. One writer has been known to comment that "All have a past". In that, of course, he is correct — but there are widely different "pasts".

Later Mrs. Campbell said, "To be brutally frank, names help to sell books". She also said in writing a book: "Have a date-line, and stick to it". I expect that she was warning against being too lengthy, and knowing when to finish; also, in writing historical books, to be sure to have a solid body of actual facts in your story.

Wm. Arthur Deacon, past-Editor of Toronto Globe and Mail, from years of experience claimed that local history is much more interesting than political history. Many will agree. Political history can never give the homey touch that the history of the lives of those around us can.

Dr. Pratt, who was classed as Canada's oldest poet (who, though a sufferer from rheumatism, had come with his wife from Newfoundland, where they are presently making their home), was one of the interesting platform speakers — after having been given an introduction by his wife first, an introduction that proved that, through the years, they had grown more closely together and that she had faith in his poems and their meaning, beyond all doubting. Among some of those were twenty poems about birds spoken of in the Bible, some from the Book of Job, and one in particular regarding the prophet Isaiah's speech about owls. A study of birds seems to have been Dr. Pratt's hobby; he claimed that pigeons have been the most popular birds depicted on stamps, and that Shakespeare had by far the most knowledge of birds than any celebrity of the past.

The Bliss Carmen Centennary was marked by a sketch of his life, and reading of several of his poems by Miss Elsie Pomeroy, of Toronto.

Mr. Don Thompson, Dominion president, had a pet peeve, claiming that "in our (own) country, performers in other cultural fields continue to attract far greater financial assistance and public acclaim than do the creators of literary works. Wealthy individuals, private corporations and public agencies vie with one another to subsidize and to glorify the actor, the ballet dancer, the vocalist and the instrumentalist; and while authors can never hope to displace performers in those arts, and few would seek to do so, there ought to be some reasonable balance — some sense of proportion, some equality in fiscal aid, in the passing of laws by which the creative writer could be accorded more than the minimum recognition, and authors in Canada given at least a token of support.

Furthermore, Mr. Thompson said, the Canadian Authors Association had survived almost unsuperable obstacles and had become firmly rooted in the National Life. During the past year 140 new members had been gained, making the total membership 800; also that, more than ever before, books written by Canadians are winning approval and markets abroad. For example, what began as a week's display of Canadian books on Fifth Avenue, New York, had now stretched into four months.

Mr. Thompson is particularly interested in correcting, if possible, what he thinks is an unjust ruling, the fact that a book written by a Canadian is not safe from plagiarism in the United States, even if it is copyright in Canada. It must, at the present time, first have been published and copyrighted in U.S.A. to make it safe.

Dr. Helen Creighton, of Halifax, who has collected many hundreds of folk songs of Nova Scotia, as well as ghost stories, gave a short sketch of her work. — A work which gave her a Doctor's title. She also gave an interesting recording of a ghost story, considered to be a true tale — in which, inspired by the desire to earn the one hundred dollars which the owner of a haunted house offered to anyone who would sleep the entire night through in that house, the man did earn the money and caused a murderer to be apprehended as well, and stolen money to be found and restored to its owners. . . Dr. Creighton claimed the story was supposed to be authentic, and only one of many such as she had unearthed in her survey of her province. Don Thompson, in speaking of Dr. Creighton, claimed that she was preserving for us, "the singing heart of the nation".

Other interesting speakers were Dr. Norman Ward, of the University of Saskatchewan, winner of the Leacock medal for his book, "Mice in the Beer," and Dr. Wilder Penfield, who gave an extremely interesting account of medicine, dating as far back as early Grecian times. So interesting, that more than one felt that this was an article that would be enjoyed re-reading it again in the quietness of one's own home. This address was given at the banquet given us by the Province of Ontario.

Three of Toronto's prominent publishing firms treated the members and friends to a coffee party, on three evenings in succession. These were to be held in the quadrangle outside, but rain and cold weather made that impossible, so that the parties had to be held in the Great Hall, where the portraits of many of the great Counsellors of Ontario were hung, and one could almost feel that their ancient eyes were watching on every movement with pleasure.

The Ryerson Press coffee party was distinguished by having Lieut. Governor J. Keiller Mackay and Mrs. Mackay present to welcome us to Hart House. His welcome was one not easily forgotten, as he held each person, whether lady or gentleman, by the hand until he had found out just where they came from, etc., even though his Aide had just announced us. When he heard "Mrs. Archie Graham", he said, "Ha! that smacks of the Duke of Montrose", and Mrs. Graham truthfully replied, "It does, Sir. The Graham Montrose plaque hangs on our wall in Cushing, Quebec." Other treats were a tour of our favorite publishing house, with refreshments served at each; a tour of a wonderful theatre whose building was assisted greatly by the famous E. P. Taylor; and lunch at The Granite Club, given us by Lady Eaton, Gordon V. Thompson, Frances Shelly Wees.

Among the notables whose friendship I delighted in, and whom I met for the first time, was, Janet Jean, of The Canadian Countryman, still conducting a column in Farmer's Advocate — a tiny little lady, who in real life is Dora Conovar; also Ethel Chapman, whose worthwhile articles also appear in the Advocate.

The convention next year will be held in Edmonton, with real Western welcome.

Attending conventions means meeting new friends also old ones, and is a wonderful experience. While attending the sessions and moving about among friends, the words of a song (a favorite of those who in past years heard Mr. J. S. Giles so often sing it at concerts) came repeatedly to mind, "Make new friends but keep the old," and I realized to the full the good advice given in those words.

Flash-back — Rouge River bridge

This picture of the Rouge River bridge at Pointe au Chene was published by The Watchman in 1938, supporting a plea for the replacement of this old and hazardous structure. The bridge was duly replaced by one of modern design and engineering. . . . At certain seasons, however, the bridge is still a danger spot, when ice is formed due to underside exposure of the metal floor to cold weather. Numerous motorists approaching on the wet highway have met disaster on this unsuspected icy surface.

Late Miss Lamb was link with early St. Andrews

Served 20 Years as Missionary to Western China

With the passing of Miss Mary Letitia Lamb on July 22, another chapter has been closed in the history of the Village of St. Andrews. Her father, Thomas Lamb, a Fenian Raid veteran and at one time Major in the 11th Regiment, Argenteuil Rangers, was for many years postmaster at St. Andrews East. Shortly after his death in 1901, Miss Lamb succeeded him, serving as postmistress until 1919. After the death of her mother, Margaret Susan Wales, she prepared to go as a missionary to China, where she served for 20 years as an ardent and devoted worker in the western province of Szechwan.

On her retirement from the mission field in 1940, Miss Lamb again became a resident of St. Andrews. She gave skilled leadership in C.G.I.T. and Sunday School groups, was a member of the Pioneer Women's Institute and of the W.C.T.U., and contributed active support to many public causes for the benefit of the local and the larger community life. Her home, like that of her parents, was known throughout the community and beyond its boundaries, for its gracious hospitality. She will be deeply mourned by relatives and friends alike.

The funeral service, held in the United Church on July 25, was conducted by the Rev. K. L. Feltham, assisted by the Rev. W. B. Rosborough, who gave a brief address. Among those present from out-of-town were — Mrs. E. A. Leslie, of Montreal West; Dr. and Mrs. W. A. Pitcairn and Mr. Keith Pitcairn, of Como; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. E. Boa, Mr. L. R. Boa and Mrs. H. Logan, of Chute à Blondeau; Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Kilgour, of Beauharnois; Mr. H. V. McLachlan, of Pointe Fortune; Miss A. F. Dewar, of Ottawa; Mrs. L. Roback, Miss Frances Roback, Miss Elizabeth Wales, of Montreal; and Mrs. C. Munroe and her daughter, of Rivière Beaudette.

Recent Bank Hold-up

The peaceful serenity of this village was rudely shaken last week by the robbery of the local bank. Fortunately no one in the community was injured in the fracas — for which we were thankful. It was a disturbing experience for the members of the bank staff, and for the community in general — one which we hope will never be repeated.

Oswald-Elder

The marriage took place Saturday afternoon, July 29, in the Lachute United Church, of Miss Eileen Mary Elder, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Silas Elder, of Lachute, to Mr. William Ross Oswald, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford W. Oswald, of Ste. Scholastique. The Rev. W. Bridge officiated and Mr. L. Hopkins was organist. Mrs. W. Bridge sang "O Perfect Love" during the signing of the register. The church was decorated with standards of white gladioli and pink carnations.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown of white organza fashioned with a V-neckline back and front, trimmed with lace appliqué. Her elbow-length veil was held in place by a crown of pearls, and she carried a Colonial-styled bouquet of white and red roses. Her only jewelry was a double-strand pearl necklace, a gift of the groom.

Mrs. Rexford Griffith was matron of honor and wore a street-length frock of Yellow organza with matching accessories. Miss Shirley MacGeorge, as bridesmaid, wore a similar-styled dress of green chiffon with accessories to match. Both attendants carried Colonial-styled bouquets of white and yellow mums.

Mr. John Oswald was best man for his brother, and the ushers were Mr. Lloyd Elder and Mr. Rexford Griffith.

Mrs. Elder, mother of the bride, wore a sheath dress of powder blue embroidered organza, with white accessories and a corsage of pink roses. Mrs. Oswald, mother of the groom, wore a sheath dress of Romance blue chiffon over satin, with a matching hat and white accessories. She wore a corsage of red roses.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the church hall, and later the couple left on a motor trip to points in the United States. The bride wore a powder blue linen dress and matching hat, with white accessories and a corsage of pink carnations. Upon their return, the couple will reside in Ste. Scholastique.

Gideons' convention recently at Toronto, largest on record

The 62nd International convention and the 50th Canadian convention of the Gideons, was held in the Royal York Hotel from July 19 to 24, inclusive. Delegates from 22 different countries were in attendance — 1800 delegates registered — making it the largest Gideon convention ever held.

On Sunday afternoon at a special service, a gold-covered Bible was presented to the manager of the Royal York Hotel — this being the three-millionth copy of the scriptures distributed in Canada.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Morrison attended from Lachute, representing the Laurentian Camp of the organization.

People's Church Summer Bible School completed another successful session

The closing program of the People's Church Daily Vacation Bible School was held Friday evening, July 14, when a splendid crowd heard the children in their songs and recitations.

Many of the parents were surprised that so much could be learned in two weeks, and expressed regret that the school had come to a close. It is reported that many of the children would have liked the school to continue a little longer. The teachers and their helpers heaved a sigh of relief when the last lesson was taught, although they secretly admitted they, as well as the children, had enjoyed the two busy weeks. The church wishes to thank all of them for giving so generously of their time and talent, which made the school such a success.

The lowest attendance was 70; the highest 81; the average 76; this revealed that most of the children never missed a day. The offering was $52, which will go a long way to defray the expenses of the project, as it is estimated that it costs about $1.00 for each child in attendance. The balance of the expense is met by the People's Church Sunday School.

Prizes were awarded for attendance, behaviour, effort, response, memory work and hand-craft. In the Nursery Department, under the direction of Mrs. Sorley, David Nixon and Pamela Pollock were the winners; in the Beginner's Department, in charge of Mrs. Elsie Stephens, assisted by Edythe Sorley, prize winners were Ann Pollock, Margaret Beginski and Richard McMahon. In the Primary Department, Miss Audrey Morrison in charge, assisted by Mrs. Alex Stewart, Mrs. E. Young and Sandra Stansfield, the successful students were Dick Hooker, Judy Lily and Lynn Nixon.

The Junior Department was in charge of Mrs. Wilfrid Morrison and Mrs. Ernie Rogers and the winners were Jenny-Lynn Ponech, col-McKenzie and Bobby Noble. The hand-work in this department was really outstanding.

In the Intermediate Department, which was the smallest in the school, Jimmie Noble was the prize student. The director of the school, the Rev. C. W. Sorley, taught this department.

Miss Grace Sorley handled the secretarial work of this undertaking.

The organizers would like to take this opportunity to thank the parents who passed so many kind and encouraging remarks about the value of the school, and to express their appreciation to those who although they could not be present at the closing program, sent along a donation to help with the expenses.

A sincere word of appreciation is also in order to Mr. LaChapelle, for the use of clocks to illustrate the theme of the school, "Living by God's Clock"; to Mr. R. Giles, of Giles Publishing House Ltd., for free publicity in The Watchman, and donation of materials; to Mr. Wm. Dawson, for the use of public address equipment; and to Mr. J. McGibbon, for the loan of lumber for seats. A word of thanks is also extended to Walker & Kingsbury and Kerr's Diner for displaying the posters, and to Mr. J. R. Desjardins, soft-drink distributor, for the use of cases.

A hearty "thank-you" is extended to the girls and boys for their splendid behaviour, which, according to the Rev. Sorley, made the task a comparatively easy one.

"May I say to all who helped with the problem of transportation and willingly used their cars at their own expense, also to all others who helped make our 1961 Summer School such a great success, the Lord bless you," stated the Rev. Sorley in concluding his report.

Student here visiting parents

Diana Rigby

Miss Diana Rigby has arrived in Canada from London as a passenger on the "Empress of Britain" to spend the summer with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. G. R. Rigby, in Lachute. While in this country she is planning a visit to Mexico.

Diana is at present a student at the Courtauld Institute, which is a branch of the University of London. There she is working for her degree in History of Art, under the direction of Sir Anthony Blunt, who is keeper of the Queen's Pictures.

Previous to residing in London, Diana has attended courses at the Sorbonne and the "Beaux Arts" in Paris and at the University of Perugia in Italy.

APPRECIATION

I would like to extend my sincere thanks to my many friends and relatives for cards, letters, flowers and good wishes during my recent visit to the Queen Elizabeth Hospital and since my return home.

SURVIVAL!

One of the most discussed subjects of modern times. Yet by far the bulk of these discussions ignore the only real catastrophe modern civilization faces. Not a threat of a third world war but the certainty of the war of the great day of God the Almighty — Armageddon. And yet . . .

You may survive Armageddon into God's New World

Learn how. Send for the comforting and revealing book of this title. It is only 50c.

Armageddon will be the worst thing ever to hit the earth within the history of man. God's New World will be the best thing ever to come to distressed mankind, and will never pass away. There is a little booklet entitled, "After Armageddon, God's New World". This you can get for 5c.

Public Notice

Canada
Province of Quebec
District of Terrebonne
Town of St. Jerome

Public notice is hereby given by the undersigned Octavien Tessier, City Clerk of the City of St. Jerome, in the County of Terrebonne, that the immoveables hereinafter described, with all buildings thereon erected and subject to all servitudes active or passive, apparent or unapparent which might affect them, will be sold by public auction, in the Council Chamber in the City Hall of St. Jerome, 280 Labelle Street, Wednesday, August 23rd, 1961 at 10 o'clock in the forenoon (daylight saving time) to satisfy payment of arrears of municipal taxes, general or special, with interests mentioned in the hereunder statement and also to meet payment of costs unless such taxes, interests and costs be paid before the above mentioned auction sale.

The adjudication price is payable immediately.

The purchaser will be bound to the payment of the adjudication price and to the payment of municipal taxes due or to become due for the year 1961 and for the years to come.

The sale will be, moreover, subject to the right of withdrawal and to the other provisions of the Quebec Municipal Commission Act.

(Ménard, Yvon — municipal taxes, $652.10; interest, $60.94; total $713.04.)

Lot No. 446 of the cadastre of the Town of St. Jerome, less and to be deducted the part of said lot sold to the City of St. Jerome on September 10, 1957, and registered under No. 219119, which part of lot is of irregular figure and indicated by letters "A,B,C,D,E,F,A" on a plan prepared by Mr. V. N. Guay, City Engineer, on June 10, 1957, and containing an area of 450 square feet. The said part of the lot measures forty-six feet (46') in its A,B, line; twenty-nine feet (29') in its B.C. line; forty-three feet and five-tenths (43' 5/10) in its F.E. line; eleven feet (11') in its B.E line and two feet seven inches (2'7") in its A.F line — English measures, and more or less.

Given at St. Jerome on July 18, 1961.

Back to normal

WE HAVE just enjoyed our annual vacation, and things are back to normal . . . If you know what we mean.

The Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association monthly bulletin recently published a list of what one must do on "one normal day" on a weekly newspaper. It's rather interesting — so you may care to read on:

Explain to Mrs. Strong why Aunt Weak's 85th birthday party was not on the front page.

Explain to an advertiser why it is impossible to get him on page three, or page seven, as the case may be.

Explain to an ex-subscriber why you had to cut off his unpaid subscription.

Explain deadlines 50 times a day and why you have to have them.

Soothe a lady who called in news of her party too late.

Explain why some weeks you have news running out of your ears and some weeks the paper reads like a report on Amalgamated Steel.

Apologize to an advertiser for an error in his ad, and smile sweetly when he tells you what an idiot you are.

Decipher scribbling that comes in on cheque pads, paper napkins, a corner of junior's arithmetic, or on the back of a letter from Cousin Frank.

Explain to a customer arriving late with copy that, if you get his stuff in, you will have to leave somebody else out; and then explain to the one you left out.

And these are only a few things one must do. Meetings must be attended; information must be supplied on a variety of subjects; pictures must be arranged for; and hundreds of other routine jobs which would take up too much space and too much of the reader's time here.

A recent editorial in the Gananoque Reporter stated: "We have explained at least three dozen times in the past few weeks that the size of a newspaper depends on the amount of advertising, and when advertising is light there are many things which are left out of the paper, simply because there is not room to put them in."

But the end of a normal day comes when Good Time Charlie walks up, pats you on the back and says, "Man, you really have it soft, eh!"

Tragic memory

ALMOST UNNOTICED, the 25th anniversary of the start of the Spanish Civil War on July 18, 1936, has come and gone.

This tragic conflict that continued for almost three years and that involved directly three of the world's great powers of the day — Russia, Germany and Italy — and indirectly a score of others, took an undetermined toll of lives, estimated anywhere from 600,000 to 1,000,000.

The lower figure has been made on assessments in the post-war years and places the number of violent deaths at 410,000 with nearly 200,000 dying from starvation and disease. The higher figure was the estimate at the war's end in 1939.

Russia, supporting the losing Republican or government side in the war, and Germany and Italy, supporting Franco's Nationalists poured money, material and men into the conflict in what was accepted as the training ground for these nations for the battles of the Second World War.

While non-intervention was the surface policy of most other nations, more than 40,000 foreign volunteers fought in the Republic's International Brigades, although it is believed no more than 18,000 men were involved at any one time.

The largest national group were the French with 10,000 men, of whom 3,000 were killed. The United States contributed about 2,800 men and Britain 2,000.

Canada's participation was through the Mackenzie Papineau Battalion of the International Brigade. This was formed in 1937 from a nucleus of 20 Canadians who had joined the United States' Lincoln Battalion.

For more than a year the Canadians fought for the government side, until late in 1938 when the International Brigades were demolished and their foreign volunteers sent home.

More than 1,200 Canadians served in the battalion at one time or another and 400 lost their lives. The late Dr. Norman Bethune of Montreal organized a blood transfusion service whose life-giving contribution was unparalleled.

Canadian volunteers in the Spanish War came from all parts of Canada and included a large number of men of European origin. Few of them are remembered today for there has been no attempt to perpetuate the mmory of the battalion.

"You don't set up veterans' organizations after you have lost a war," one of the volunteers said as the 25th anniversary came and passed. "Nor do you revisit the scenes of battles you have lost. They bring back too many sad memories."

The machine age

AUTOMATION has speeded the arrival of the push-button age so that now we are surrounded by gadgets that take a lot of work out of every-day existence.

It's unlikely anyone would want to go back to the days of the coal furnace after enjoying the kind that operate automatically. There are thousands of labor-saving devices now, such as power mowers and washing machines.

Modern science has taken much of the drudgery out of life. At the same time a swing away from the have-it-done-for-you school has developed.

On the one hand, scientists have been going all out to invent machines to simplify life. On the other hand, they are catering to those who like to feel they are operating a machine — not letting it do all the work for them. For instance, there's a steady market for sports cars, the kind in which you do the gear-shifting and steering is performed without benefit of automatic power.

Busy executives forget the tension of their jobs by taking fishing or camping holidays in the backwoods. Some of them get a real kick out of putting up tents, cooking their own meals and paddling and portaging themselves through wilderness country.

The energetic individual now can obtain do-it-yourself building, carpentry and other kits and experience the satisfaction of making or fixing something himself — instead of having it done by professionals. It may not be done as expertly — it may even be done badly — but the doer enjoys tackling the job himself.

Armchair existence for wage earner or housewife has its advantages. But some of us still find satisfaction in proving we can operate the way our grandparents and parents did — if the need should arise. Perhaps it's an instinctive reaction against charges that modern civilization is making us effete.

Whatever the reason, it is worth trying.

Those who find they really don't like it can always rely on the automation system. And those who do like it are finding it a handy way to forget about their day-to-day worries.

PROPERTY

I am now a property owner. A log cabin and a lot 60 by 180 feet, on the edge of a Manitoba lake, with precisely 27 birch, three blue spruce, four wild plum, nine poplar and several assorted wild fruit trees are all mine — my very own, where my family are now turning golden in the sun and my wife turning grey while trying to keep them from drowning themselves. We're all enjoying this sense of ownership, and there is only one fly in the ointment.

Last week-end I invited a couple with three youngsters. They rent a cottage each year and they love the water. I wanted to show them our place, but perhaps we were too show-offy in our pride.

"This is our boat . . . isn't it a dandy?" "Look at those birch trees . . . aren't they the best?" "Come look at the hammock, down by the beach." "No stones to stub your toes on . . . a good sand beach." We bragged quite a bit that day about this and that. And maybe we went too far.

That evening, around the fireplace (about which I said, smugly, "it draws like a dream . . . never smokes"), my friend's boy said, "Gee . . . you've got everything!" Then, after a quiet moment, he said, "The fireplace is smoking a little . . . " There was just a trace of delight in his voice.

It was the first time that darn fireplace had ever smoked, and I think the good Lord changed the wind and created a downdraft just to put us show-offs in our place.

My wife said, "It does smoke when the wind is from the west. We're going to save next to get the chimney built higher. But we can't afford to spend more on the place just yet."

I tossed a bit that night, thinking about private property. Why can't everybody have a cottage at the lake with their own chunk of sand and water?

Next day, our youngsters took the visitors hiking. My friend and I sat by the water's edge just loafing. Finally, he said, "You know — you've got me sold on a country place. We've always rented, but I guess we ought to buy. The wife has been wanting a place for a long time."

"We waited years," I said. "But I think it was worth it."

"I can get lots of overtime work these days," my friend said. "I think I could manage a lot next year, and a tent. Then we'd build, another year. In the long run, it'd be cheaper than renting."

I felt better. After all, I'd worked darn hard to find the money for a place where my kids could brown in the sun — a place we could keep clean and healthy and bright. Now my pal, with a similar goal in sight, would do the same. That's part of our freedom. Just the same, I'm glad that doggone fireplace smoked when it did, to remind me that I was being too proud in my new ownership; and that I was forgetting that property is only the fruit of your own labor and saving. You have to keep working at it or your fireplace smokes.

Resident's protest on causeway at Sir John Lake

R.R. 7, Lachute, Que.
July 20, 1961.

Editor, The Watchman

Dear Sir:

The eastern approach to the so-called Sir John Lake Club and Estates is a gravel causeway built across the southern end of the lake, either in ignorance or defiance of the elementary principles of hydraulic engineering.

The conduits built into the causeway to carry the flow of water from above are inadequate for anything but a summer flow, and in times of high water the lake level is apt to rise because of the restricted flow, and finally wash over the causeway, thereby breeching it and releasing the pent-up water.

This occurred in the spring, and again just recently. Installations such as boat-houses on the lake were in some cases flooded, and my own dam on the stream below the lake has sustained damage from the sudden release of water, even though several stop-logs had previously been removed.

My purpose in writing to you is to ascertain what regulatory body, if any, is empowered to control and supervise the construction of structures such as this causeway which can restrict the flow of water from a large drainage area.

The Town of Lachute presumably has some authority over the source of its water supply, but the causeway is situated in the Parish of St. Jerusalem. Some state that it is the Club that has the right to control the water levels.

It is clear that irresponsible construction can lead to extensive property damage both above and below the causeway, and I would like to see this possibility avoided if the causeway is to be replaced.

Yours very truly,

(Signed) Arthur O. Ponder

VACATION DAYS

During the summer season many of the television programs consist of "repeats". So, following this trend, I repeat the following poem that I wrote many years ago. It will be new to a generation that has grown up since it first appeared:

Vacation Days are here once more
Just as they were the year before,
When folks forsake the sizzling town
To seek some lake in which to drown —
When men forget their worldly cares
While ice-cream vendors shout their wares —
When married men frequent each beach
To feast each eye upon each peach —
When water in the kitchen sinks
Competes with sellers of soft drinks —
When railroad trains bound for the sands
Transport week-end excursion fans —
When wilting folks with sunburned faces
Return from hectic week-end places,
And all the daily papers say:
"Two hundred accidents today."

Still, after all, in lots of ways
I much prefer vacation days.
It's nice to travel and to roam
And write to those who stay at home.
They envy me my bulging purse
While they their secret grudges nurse.
They must endure the stuffy town
While I am happy, fat and brown.
I love to golf and swim and fish
And gratify each lazy wish.
I saunter through the woods and shirk
While other people have to work.
And furthermore, I'm never loath
To pluck each doubtful fungoid growth
And test it in my frying-pan
To see if it is fit for man.
My folks and I can pitch our camp
Down where it's nice and cool and damp
Or by a lake with sheltered bays.
Oh, how we love vacation days!
They give my scientific wife
A chance to study insect life,
And make an opportunity
For Insect Life to study ME!

Be seein' ya!

— Uncle Walt

Timely tips for vacation season

You'll have a happier, more relaxed vacation this summer if you leave home right. Before sailing off down the highway, here are a few reminders from Carol Lane, Women's travel advisor.

Stop the delivery of milk, newspapers; have a neighbor remove advertising circulars from your doorstep;

Leave window shades up, arrange to have your lawn mowed regularly;

Tell the post office to hold your mail, or forward it to you;

Lock all windows and doors; don't forget the basement windows;

Ask department stores not to deliver packages until you get home;

Leave an electric light burning in your house;

Arrange care for pets and potted plants;

Tell the police how long you'll be gone, where you can be reached, and which neighbor has a key to your home;

Have the car thoroughly serviced; brakes and tires need special attention;

Make sure you have a first aid kit and flashlight in the glove compartment;

Check your emergency repair tools and fill in where necessary; have the spare tire checked;

Leave trouble at home.

Have a happy vacation!

OLD STUFF

Radio announcer: "Tune in again next week — same station, same time, same jokes!"

All Aboard

with C. L. MORTIMORE

Should children be kept in the yard, or turned loose? I have noticed that parents are divided into two groups — the fence-builders and the disciples of the open range.

One kind of mother says: "Get out of the house, and don't let me see you again until bed-time."

The other kind says: "Yes, you can go out to play, but don't leave the yard unless you ask me."

A good western movie could be made about the conflict between these two groups.

On one side are the old-fashioned child-ranchers, fighting for the right to send their stock out to graze anywhere in the neighborhood.

Deployed against them are the private-land mothers who insist on building fences around each family-allowance farm.

On most days the story ends happily when the wandering children find their way to their fenced-in playmates, and stay for dinner.

Both factions are right, by their own standards. Children must leave home sooner or later. At what age, though? Some parents seem to think that two years is quite old enough. Others would draw the line at 18 or 21. Here and there you can find a parent holding out for age 40.

The trouble with letting toddlers roam freely is that they may damage themselves, or set someone's house on fire, in the process of learning by experience.

Oh Geography, where is thy sting?

One feature of being located next door to the affluent mass-distribution culture of the United States is that every now and then some Canadian can hitch a ride on the wealth waggon. Stage and TV actors have been the most obviously fortunate in this respect but with few exceptions, in the case of rare talent, they have had to move to the U.S. and adopt attitudes and mannerisms that look more genuinely Amurican.

Canadian writers occasionally get their books published in the States and this of course means the difference between a bread-and-water distribution at home and the gravy of best-or-next-best-seller lists. Thomas Raddall's novel The Governor's Lady, for example, recently got the boost of having a U.S. publisher. But these profits have their perils. Besides a U.S. publisher to issue the book, there is a U.S. ad-man to write the packet blurb. Of proud Nova Scotia he says "that sparsely settled island."

Cushing

Mr. and Mrs. Chester Gain have moved to the vicinity of Kingston, where Mr. Gain is presently employed on Brewer's Lock of the Rideau Canal. Mr. Gain, who previously had held a position on one of the Grece's Point locks on the Ottawa River, has been transferred there. Cushing as a community, deeply regrets the loss of this fine family; their son Robert and little Ward Raymond went with them. Their daughter, Bonnie, will reside in Brownsburg, where she is employed in the local bank.

Mrs. Jan Kaprusiak, of Westmount, and her small sons, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Graham of the Monalea Road on Wednesday.

Miss Elsie M. Graham spent Thursday in Knowlton, attending the funeral of the late Mr. Wm. Soles. Sincere sympathy is extended to his daughter, Mrs. Douglas Vickers, late of Ste. Adele en Haut, who with her husband and family spent one summer in the Raymond riverside cottage, and is well known in Cushing. Miss Graham spent Friday in Montreal before returning to Cushing.

Miss Cama Bailey returned from a happy two weeks' stay at Camp Farthing, Laurel.

Mrs. S. M. Beecher was in residence at "Lilac Lodge" for the week-end, having as her guests Mrs. J. L. Maw, of Montreal, and daughter, Mrs. K. A. Trickett, of La Jolla, California, who has been visiting her mother in Montreal. Cushing residents are pleased to welcome Helen, even for so short a period of time.

The beautiful flowers in St. Mungo's Church on Sunday were placed there as a tribute to the late Raymond Holmes, by the Beecher and Maw families.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Buzzell, of Montreal West, are in residence at "Woodbine Cottage" this week, having as their guests Mr. and Mrs. C. McMichael, of Montreal West.

Mrs. F. Wilkins, who has been spending the greater part of the summer with her sister, Mrs. A. Starnes, has returned to her home in St. Jerome.

Miss Doris Elliott spent a few days as the guest of Miss Margaret Bradford, of North River.

Recent guests of Miss Ruby O'Brien were Mrs. L. Nicholls, of Asbestos, Mrs. C. Cunningham, of Lachute, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Jones, of Lachine, Mr. and Mrs. B. Dixon, Mr. and Mrs. Nicholls and grandson, Jan Peterson, of Traverse City, Mich., Mrs. F. Mullen and family, of Montreal, and Mrs. J. Tooke, of St. Eustache.

Mrs. Robert Robinson, formerly of Lachute, now of Oshawa, Ont., and son Ashton and family, visited Mrs. L. Cooke at the home of Miss A. Davidson on Wednesday.

Mrs. A. Graham, Miss E. M. Graham and Mr. A. T. Graham were guests of Mr. and Mrs. D. Bradford, of North River, on Sunday, also visited Mrs. John Bradford at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. Morrow, Monalea Road, and Mr. Andrew R. Graham, at the home of his son, Mr. John R. Graham, also of the Monalea Road.

Mr. and Mrs. Jan Kaprusiak, of Montreal, and small sons, also Mr. Stanilus Kaprusiak, from Poland, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Graham.

Robillard-Titley

Two family gatherings took place recently when Margaret Lillian Titley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Titley, of Harrowsmith, Ont., was united in marriage to Paul Gordon Robillard, son of Mrs. O. Robillard and the late Ovila Robillard, of Verdun, Que. The Rev. B. Kirkham officiated at the ceremony, which took place at the Pentecostal Church in Verona, Ont., July 15, at 3 p.m. Miss Shirley Lee, of Harrowsmith, played the wedding music. During the signing of the register, Mr. David Dow, of Hartington, sang the Wedding Prayer.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a white ballerina-length gown of imported peau-de-soie with a sabrina neckline and long lilipoint sleeves. The gown was fashioned with a fitted bodice and appliqué designs of sequins and seed-pearl trim. Her nylon tulle veil, edged with scalloped lace, was crowned with a tiara adorned with simulated pearls and shimmering, iridescent sequins. She carried a white bible trimmed with streamers and red roses.

Mrs. Roy Dixon, of Dalesville, Que., who acted as matron of honor for her sister, wore a blue dress of rayon and nylon lace over taffeta. She wore a white simulated straw hat with a short veil and long white gloves, and carried a nosegay of pink carnations.

Mr. Laurier Robillard, of Greenfield Park, Que., acted as best man for his brother. The ushers were the Messrs. Merlin, Albert and Lorne Titley, brothers of the bride, and Mr. Fred Harrison, of Montreal, brother-in-law of the groom.

The bride's mother wore a navy blue silk dress with white accessories. The groom's mother was dressed in a flowered blue silk dress with matching accessories. Both mothers wore corsages of white and pink carnations.

After a bountiful supper in Murvale Hall, the happy couple left for Quebec City and the Maritime Provinces, the bride travelling in a blue dress with matching short coat, and white accessories. Upon their return they will reside in Verdun, Que.

Out-of-town guests were from Lachute, Dalesville and Montreal, Que., from Dundas and London, Ont., as well as from Oldbridge and East Brunswick, New Jersey, U.S.A.

Harrington

Mr. and Mrs. Eric Bates and son, Lorne, of Brownsburg, were week-end guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Bates.

Tan — Don't Burn!

(Copyright)

— By NANCY CLEAVER —

"Thou art long, and lank and brown;
As is the ribbed sea-son."

Thus Coleridge described his ancient mariner.

To become a golden brown like the sand is one of the desires of most holiday folk. Tan has become very popular with people of all ages. No boy or girl needs urging to get out in the sunshine! The difficulty for many mothers is to prevent their child from getting too much exposure. This can produce a severe case not of tan but of sun burn, which can spoil a holiday.

Nature's gifts, such as sunlight, fire or water, can be a friend or a foe. Children in hot countries go about with little on. The ultra-violet rays of the sun are not kept from direct contact with most of their body. Thus they rarely have that tragic bone disease, rickets.

In temperate countries, modern mothers are well aware of the value of sunshine in the warm months, and cod liver oil preparations in the winter. These give the body the power to utilize the food consumed to grow a strong, straight bone structure. But too much sun can result in a painful burn which may even be accompanied by chills and sickness. This is quite unnecessary if sensible precautions are taken. So is sunstroke which can be even more serious. Hats are scorned by the "small fry". But some head covering is necessary for most people if hours are spent in the blazing sun.

It is easy for a mother of a first baby to regulate carefully his sun bath. When he is around a month he usually has his first exposure of hands and forearms and lower limbs. His sun bath lasts around a quarter of an hour in a protected place with the sun not shining directly into his eyes. Each day the time of his sun bath is lengthened by about five minutes. More and more of his body is bare until he is kicking happily just in his diaper. His mother uses baby oil before he has his sun bath, particularly if he is fair skinned.

There is a great difference in individuals in the amount of sun which they can tolerate. Blondes and dry-skinned people burn usually much more readily than brunettes or oily skinned folk. It is the loss of too much of the natural oil of the skin which causes a burn. Thus the various protective lotions and creams should be applied by holiday folk before going out into the sunshine and also after coming out of the water.

Children at a cottage or near a beach often want to be out in the sun after their swim. Often they compete with each other to see who can get the darkest tan. Mother's supervision is not very popular but she can provide them with their own jar of sun tan oil and suggest that they change their positions fairly often.

Even a school age child can realize that with too much sun he will defeat his own goal. His skin will start to peel and he will lose the tan he has already acquired.

Sometimes a boy will be out in a boat for a trip or fishing for several hours. He may consider his mother "fussy" when she tells him to rub on some cream or put on his shirt. He may discover, to his sorrow, that night or the next day, if he has scorned any precautions because the sun was not shining brightly that his skin is a painful bright red! This is one mistake he won't make twice!

MacLeod chieftain, Lieut.-Governor at Glengarry Games

The 1961 Glengarry Highland Games will be graced not only by the presence of Dame Flora MacLeod of MacLeod, chief of the Clan MacLeod, but by the Lieut.-Governor of Ontario, as well.

The Hon. J. Keiller MacKay, Mrs. MacKay and their family will be in Maxville as guests of the MacLeod Clan chieftain, Mrs. MacKay has a MacLeod ancestry.

The vice-regal party will visit Upper Canada Village the previous day and will motor to Maxville on the morning of August 5 to enjoy the Games with other members of Clan MacLeod, whose Glengarry branch will be celebrating its silver anniversary.

Secretary John Jamieson reports some 16 of the finest will be marching in the massed array.

The pipes and drums of the 2nd Battalion, Canadian Guards, of Petawawa, will play for the Changing of the Guard on Parliament Hill at Ottawa, that morning, and immediately after embark for Maxville.

The 1961 Glengarry Highland Games will be a lively setting for the Clan MacLeod gathering and for all who have eyes with which to see and ears with which to hear the massed bands.

Of old chinaware and folk dances; TV ideas of 'typical' Canadians

"Sunnyacres Sketches"

By Margaret Cook

Once, many years ago, in the youth of this column, we reported that the daughter, then aged eight, said the weather was such that she was "in a pool of perforations". We should like to record that history repeats itself — we write from that state, again. In fact, there are just two kinds of Laurentian weather at the moment, wet and cold, semi-wet and hot. Doubtless you all know this, but we feel we must grumble a little. Having written that, I am at once ashamed, and remind myself of my luck, when compared with those who have only two weeks a year holiday. Those who have just that, and have already taken their sodden way back to the city, have our sympathy. We even feel a little apologetic, as if we were somehow to blame!

In one of the infrequent dry spells, which lasted all of two days, we got the place mowed out. It is getting increasingly difficult to find anyone who can wield a scythe. It would be just as sensible to expect my friends to be able to make quilts, or spin, as it is to think that all farmers can mow by hand; but somehow, we do, and are surprised when we find they are ignorant of that craft. However, we finally found someone who could do it. He was also willing to squander a day on us, so everybody was happy. One of the bits we gleaned from him was that, three years ago, he had eight or ten beaver on a little lake on his property. Now they have disappeared. A lady of the neighborhood says there are beaver on the lake on the road to St. Jerome, and that it is their industry that raises the level of the outlet so that that part of the road is nearly always flooded in the spring and autumn. If anyone else knows about the presence of these little animals, I should be interested to hear.

Speaking of beavers, we have just recently had a letter from England, which enables us to identify positively some old china which some of our readers may recognize, when we say that it has a motif of maple leaves around the margin of the dishes, and, in the centre, a beaver, industriously chewing on a maple branch. We have three pieces, and an acquaintance in Senneville has a dozen; also, from time to time, we have seen odd pieces in the Eastern Townships, but no one could ever tell us where or when they were made. Our letter from Stoke-on-Trent says that these dishes were last made fifty or sixty years ago. The copper-plate is still in the possession of the company. The writer adds that they could not possibly make any more. Evidently, he misunderstood the purpose of our inquiry, which was merely to satisfy a gnawing curiosity. . . . Now, if anyone who reads this column, can tell us about the dance called Sixes and Eights supposedly in vogue around here about eighty years ago, we should be very grateful. No one, not even Don Messer, or a School of Folk-Dancing in Boston, knows this one. Our information is that the dance came to these parts from Michigan.

Just why I bother to try to enquire about the past — when all the political signs seem to say that, for us all, there may soon be no past, or earthly future — I do not know! I think it is because we all feel in our subconscious that no one, least of all, the wily Mr. Krushchev, would be mad enough to start a nuclear war. We are reminded of the dear old lady, Mrs. Marple, whom Agatha Christie sometimes allows out for a run in her books. She always insists that all the things that occur, including murder, have their counterpart in her small village. From the knowledge of human nature she has gleaned there, she solves the complicated crimes of the swifter outside world. I am not yet a dear old lady — in fact, I doubt if I ever shall be — but I do think that one can understand international politics by thoughtful reference to the actions of people we have known. . . . .

Thus, the Americans remind me irresistibly of adolescents whom I used to teach. Their intentions are excellent, their execution often marred by their immaturity and animal spirits. The Russians, for me, are that family on the next street who were strictly brought up, a little pedantic perhaps, and lacking in the social graces, but whose separate members surprised everyone as they left the nest, by developing into steady, honest folk, with acceptable table manners. As for the French — well, you get the idea, and think it out for yourself. What it all boils down to is that I think, if we all have patience, and mind our own business (and judging by recent events, we have plenty to mind) everybody will in time settle down to comparative quiet. This, of course, just points up our British background, of which we are not ashamed. Britain, it seems to me, shows up very well in the political history of the world.

Which reminds me — since when is a training school for teachers a typical Canadian school? And is a girl who "goes steady" from the age of thirteen, and talks her companion into marriage at eighteen, really the average Canadian? The saints forbid! Yet these two situations were recently presented on TV as pictures of normal Canadian life. The latter show was supposed to present courting customs, etc., of different lands. It seemed to us that the Indian custom was infinitely preferable. The female member of the panel kept bleating, "But they do not know each other. They are never alone together," etc. She evidently missed the whole point, that maybe daughter did not know about the mole on the back of her fiancé — but you bet Father did, also the financial standing of the candidate, and whether daughter would be likely to be returning for a handout. This may be deplorably unromantic, but just plain living generally is! Why prepare our young for Disneyland, when life may well turn out to be more like Dismaland?

And don't think I do not practise what I preach — our daughter knows that small children are not angels, more often demons; that man cannot live on cake-mixes and instant potatoes alone, that he requires some home-baked food, and loving care. She can cook, and sew, and has done her own ironing since the age of ten. All young males form on the right! No, I am not the Spartan mother; we are the product of an Eastern Townships home, and a girl who could not bake, clean and sew by the time she was twelve is regarded there (or was until recently) as "poor white trash". . . . A little secret: I am half white trash. I still am a poor needlewoman!

Harrington mourns old resident

The late John A. Marshall

Friends, relatives and neighbors in Harrington community mourn the passing of a lifetime resident, the late John A. Marshall, whose death occurred July 8 in his 85th year, at the home of Mr. H. Todd, Lachute.

Son of the late John Marshall and his wife Margaret Shaw, he was born and educated in Harrington. He married Mary Jane Campbell, who predeceased him in April of this year.

The late Mr. Marshall was a member of Harrington L.O.L. 2839. The last rites of the Orange Order were conducted in the Desforges Funeral Home at Grenville. Members from Lachute, Louisa, Grenville, Harrington and Lost River lodges attended.

Left to mourn his loss are one son, Jim, and wife Barbara, two grandchildren, John and Erwin; two sisters, (Edna) Mrs. R. J. MacDonald, of Detroit, (Catherine) Mrs. C. Turner, of Montreal, and one brother, Leonard, of Montreal.

The funeral was held July 10 from the funeral home to Harrington United Church, where service was conducted by the Rev. Kirk Feltham, assisted by Mr. Brown. Interment was in Harrington Cemetery.

Pall-bearers were nephews of the deceased, Messrs. Clifford and Allen MacKay, Lawrence and Rory MacTavish, Ross Swail and Bert Graham. Honorary pall-bearers from the Harrington L.O.L. 2839 were Messrs. David Morrison, John Campbell, Scot MacLean and Reynald MacLean.

Mont'l resident was known here

The late Albert C. Mees

After a short illnes, Albert C. Mees passed away on July 18. Born in England, the late Mr. Mees was in his 63rd year; he was a veteran of the First World War, and had been employed for some 47 years by the Canadian National Railways, Montreal.

Left to mourn his passing are his wife, the former Margaret Roberts; his son, Albert, and daughter-in-law, Mrs. Albert Mees, Jr.; two grandchildren, Teddy and Bobby Mees; also a brother, John, and one sister (Marge) Mrs. Donald, several nieces and nephews.

The funeral was held in MacGillvray's Chapel, Verdun, on July 21, with the Rev. E. A. Kirker conducting the service. Burial took place at the Montreal Memorial Park.

Among those present at the MacGillvray Chapel were Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Tomalty, Mr. and Mrs. Everett McGibbon and Mrs. A. Goldup from this community.

Edward Beaton (Beaton Drugstore) died in Moncton

Funeral services for Wing Cmdr Edward Beaton, who died in Moncton, were held recently in Baddeck, N.S. Interment was in Greenwood Cemetery at Baddeck.

Born at Moose Creek, Ont., in 1901, he was the son of the late Rev. and Mrs. Laughlin Beaton. He was a graduate from the Maritime School of Pharmacy. Following graduation, Mr. Beaton owned and operated a drug store in Baddeck for seven years and later operated stores at Knowlton, Lachute and Montreal West. The Main Street establishment which he started here, now greatly expanded, still bears his name.

Mr. Beaton then joined the RCAF, in which he served for 21 years. He served overseas in World War II and following the war was commanding officer of No. 2 Supply Depot, Vancouver, B.C. Subsequently, he held posts in London, England, Moncton and Rockcliffe, Ont.

Mr. Beaton retired in 1956 after four years at Air Materiel Command in Rockcliffe. He lived in Moncton following his retirement.

Besides his wife, the former Margaret MacLeod, he is survived by one sister, Annie (Mrs. Murray Spaulding) of Toronto, one niece and two nephews.

Churchwoman, highly esteemed mourned at Grenv'l

Late Mrs. Russell Owens

Grenville — On June 29 last, Mrs. Russell Owens passed away at the Smith Clinic, Hawkesbury, in her 66th year, after a brief illness.

The former Ruth B. Bradshaw, she was born and educated in Grenville, a daughter of the late Wm. Bradshaw and his wife Elizabeth Cooke. Together with her devoted husband, who survives, she had been known throughout the district for the Christian cheer, open heart and hand, always found at the Owens'.

She was a devout and lifelong member of St. Matthew's Anglican Church, of which she was organist for many years, assisting at Kilmar and Holy Trinity, Calumet, also serving as organist for Grenville United Church until her illness.

At her funeral a multitude of old and young, of all denominations, gathered from far and near to express their gratitude, respect and love for an unselfish friend and neighbor.

Left to mourn her loss, besides her husband, are one son, Russell, Jr. (Sonny), one daughter, (Phyllis) Mrs. Roy Nixon, both residing in Grenville; seven grandchildren, Clifton, Nancy, Betty and Stephen Nixon, Joanne, Brian and Maureen Owens; two sisters, (Gladys) Mrs. Ernest Johnson, of Thetford Mines, (Kate) Mrs. Edmund Bennett, of Ottawa; one brother, William (Bill) Bradshaw, also of Ottawa; and several nieces and nephews.

An impressive service was conducted the following Saturday afternoon at St. Matthew's Church, by a former rector, the Rev. P. R. Stote, of Huntingdon. Hymns sung were "Unto the Hills" and "Fight the Good Fight", the latter a solo rendered by Mr. Ernest Johnson, of L'Orignal.

The floral tributes, both numerous and beautiful, testified to the high esteem of relatives and friends. Interment was in the family plot at Grenville Cemetery.

Pall-bearers were Messrs. Gordon Campbell, Gerald Johnson, Rupert Cooke, Norrie Owens, Thomas Cooke and Harold Moore.

Lifetime resident died recently in Montreal hospital

Late Mrs. Norman J. Boyd

After a lengthy illness, Emma Catherine Walker, wife of Norman J. Boyd, passed away at the Montreal General Hospital on July 21. Born in Lachute, the late Mrs. Boyd was in her 67th year.

She was a lifetime resident of the district, a member of the Margaret Rodger Memorial Presbyterian Church, and a lifelong member of the Jerusalem-Bethany Women's Institute.

She is survived by her husband, a son, Arnold, of Lachute, and two daughters, (Margaret) Mrs. John D. Dennis, of Simcoe, Ont., and (Leona) Mrs. Henry Bell, of Ottawa, and five grandchildren; also one sister, Mrs. W. S. MacKimmie, and a brother, Gordon Walker, both of Lachute. One brother, John, of London, Ont., predeceased her in 1951.

Funeral service was held at the Margaret Rodger Memorial Church on Monday, July 24, conducted by the Rev. Dr. Harold Reid.

Pall-bearers were — Messrs. Arnold Scott, Colin Copeland, Irving Cleland, Gerald Walker, Leslie Tomalty and Kenneth Riley. Interment was at Lachute Cemetery.

Masonic and Legion tributes for veteran of two wars

The late John Hawkins

A resident of Calumet for the past 50 years, in the person of Mr. John Hawkins, passed away after a lengthy illness July 18 at the Smith Clinic, Hawkesbury. He was in his 82nd year.

Left to mourn are his wife, the former Hannah McNeely; a half-brother, James Demerse, of Ottawa; two half-sisters, Mrs. K. Farrara, of Calumet, and Mrs. John McQuaig, of Port Arthur, Ont.

A Masonic service was held in the Grenville Funeral Home on Thursday evening, July 19, which was largely attended by his brethren of Grenville Lodge, and a number of members of Hawkesbury Lodge. The late Mr. Hawkins had held the office of Chaplain in his lodge for a number of years.

He was an elder of Calumet United Church. The funeral service was held at this church, conducted by the Rev. K. Feltham, assisted by the Rev. H. Hendry, of Hespeler, Ont. Favorite hymns of the deceased were sung, and a solo was rendered by Mrs. Fred Moore, of Kilmar.

The remains were laid to rest in Calumet Cemetery. Pall-bearers were — Frank Knights, Ken McHardy, Irvine Prophet, Clayton Bigelow, Dick Young and Fred Gauley.

Members of the Hawkesbury Branch of the Canadian Legion attended the funeral, and the Last Post was sounded at the conclusion of the committal service. . . . Mr. Hawkins was an old soldier, having served his country in the Boer War and in World War I.

Prior to his retirement several years ago, he had 35 years' service with Canadian International Paper Co., in charge of the steam power plant in the sawmill at Calumet.

A man of kindly and charitable disposition who led an active and useful life, he will be missed by his many friends in the community.

Funeral service was held at the Desforges Funeral Home in Grenville on July 15, the service being conducted by Evangelist Horace Cullwick. Burial was in the Avoca Anglican Cemetery, where the committal service was conducted by the Rev. Mark Beaufoy, of Montebello.

Pall-bearers were her six sons — Willie, Abel, Irving, Howard, Shoddie and John.

The beautiful floral offerings and large gathering in attendance, bore evidence of the high esteem in which the deceased was held.

Out-of-town friends and relatives who attended were from Toronto, Renfrew, Port Colborne, Port Robinson, Sherkston, Ottawa, Vankleek Hill, Winchester, Ont., and Montreal.

TREND IN PHONE SYSTEMS?

Bell Telephone will shortly begin installing a new system for big offices using 200 or more telephones, reports The Financial Post. This will give each local a separate number and enable people outside to dial right through to any local without the intervention of an operator. Called Centrex, it does away with most of the bulky private exchange equipment in a subscriber's premises.

Group of 'graduates' in first-aid St. John Ambulance instruction

The presentation of St. John Ambulance Association first-aid certificates and vouchers to Boyd's Express employees was made on Wednesday of last week by A. J. Whiteway, following examinations held in June by Drs. Marc Papineau and L. A. Middleton. Instruction was given by Mr. Whiteway and the class attained an average mark of 92%.

In the accompanying picture, under the familiar Boyd's slogan, are seen former Lachute Police Chief and instructor A. J. Whiteway, C. C. Robinson, general manager of the company, Don McRae, Art Gauley, Roger Guimond and George Cox. Others who passed their examinations but were not available for photos are former Lachute policemen Gilles Poirier, Gaetan Theriault, Felix L'Allier, Ken Fahey, Tom Williams and Charles Menard; Miss B. Trichard, A&P Store; Miss M. Richer, Richer Bakery; and Melvin Matthews, of Canadian Refractories Ltd.

Following the presentation of certificates and vouchers, Mr. Robinson presented his drivers with complete first-aid kits, including the "Brooks Airway" for use in direct-air artificial respiration. The kits are personal property of the drivers but will be carried in the trucks while the men are on duty.

Mr. Whiteway, who is now police chief at St. Andrews East, stated he would endeavour to conduct another first-aid course this fall.

Bank manager exonerated in killing of armed bandit

Charles Farran, manager of the Arundel branch of the Bank of Montreal, was exonerated of all blame in the death of a bank bandit he killed following a recent robbery in the bank. The bandit, whose body was found in an abandoned truck, was identified as that of Martial Trottier.

Mr. Farran stated he lived above the bank, and had access to his apartment by means of an inside stairway. On July 27, around 10.30 a.m., he heard a vehicle screech to a halt in front of the bank, and looking out the window, saw four masked men jumping from a truck He immediately headed for his upstairs apartment, the bandits firing several shots in his direction as he raced up the stairway. Mr. Farran stated he locked the door and loaded his shotgun, waiting at the window, where he fired at the first man to leave the bank (identified at the inquest as Martial Trottier, one of the men who held up the bank with revolvers and a submachine gun). The bank manager fired three shots — causing the bandit's death by what was reported to be lung hemorrhage.

The truck used for the hold-up, and in which the body of Trottier was discovered, was found on the Victor Craig farm several miles from Arundel by Provincial Police Lieut. Merril Lawton and Agent Silvano Tendi. The body was found in the truck, his mask pushed up on his head, forming a sort of cap.

Kenneth Ferry and Miss Lois Gray, employees in the bank, gave further testimony as to the hold-up. Maurice Trottier, father of the victim, stated he had identified his son, adding he had not seen him for two years.

Dr. A. R. Côté, joint district coroner who presided at the inquest, established that the man had been killed by 16-gauge pellets causing pulmonary perforations and hemorrhage.

Following the evidence, Dr. Côté asked the jury for their verdict, which was rendered without retiring for deliberation.

The crown was represented by Fernand Legault, Q.C.

Brownsburg pupil scores high marks

Among high-standing pupils in the province, making 90.2% in the Department of Education June examinations, was Brenda McGibbon, of Brownsburg High School.

Brenda, age 17, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth McGibbon, and has starred in scholastic and extra-curricular activities during her course at Brownsburg. Friends extend congratulations on her high marks.

Brenda McGibbon intends entering the Science course at McGill next semester.

Youth injured in boat collision at Lake Louisa

Bruce Crozier, 15-year-old Lake Louisa summer resident, escaped serious injury Monday evening when the plywood motorboat he was driving was involved in a collision with another boat in the middle of the lake. The accident occurred around 10 o'clock.

According to witnesses, there were a number of boats proceeding in a group when the mishap occurred, several of which did not have running lights. The second craft in the collision was equipped with lights, and both boats were overturned.

Young Crozier received a severe gash in his cheek, believed to have been caused by the propellor of his boat. He was rushed to Lachute by car and treated at the Providence Hospital. Suffering from shock, his condition was not reported to be serious.

Both craft were towed to land, the Crozier boat being severely damaged; both motors were saved. It is believed that the St. Jerome detachment of the R.C.M.P. are investigating the incident.

Woman mayor heard as speaker at Rotary Club

At the weekly meeting of the Brownsburg-Lachute Rotary Club on Thursday of last week, three guests — in the persons of A. W. J. Chacksfield, from Dalesville, Arthur McOuat, an ex-member of the Club, from Lachute, and Maurice Delorme, a visiting Rotarian from the Hawkesbury Club — were present.

It was announced that Children's Night would be held on August 17 at the Rotary Community Park, and on Wednesday, August 23, the Club is to visit the Harrington Tree Farm.

The guest speaker, Mrs. Franco Consiglio, of Piedmont, the only woman mayor in Quebec, gave an interesting talk on Fellowship. She pointed out that Canadians should be more boastful about their country and the famous persons in or from Canada. Mrs. Consiglio mentioned several Canadians after whom many U.S. cities and towns are named. Her talk proved most interesting and was thoroughly enjoyed by all in attendance.

Second week of contest for vacation trip

This is the second week of the "Win A Trip to New York" contest sponsored by The Watchman and L'Argenteuil in co-operation with Lachute Chamber of Commerce.

Prizes in this contest are an expense-paid trip to New York for two persons, and three other cash awards.

The idea is to procure a coupon with every purchase, at any of the merchants listed on page 10 of this issue — fill it out and deposit it at the store. . . . In addition, there is a coupon appearing in issues of The Watchman during the four weeks of the contest (page 7); this may be exchanged for five entry blanks, to be deposited at any listed store.

Place and time of the drawing will be announced. (No employee of Giles Publishing House or member of his family, is eligible to take part.)

There is no limit to number of entries for any contestant, and additional blanks may be obtained by buying extra copies of The Watchman or L'Argenteuil at news-stands. . . . Good luck; keep trying!

VOLUMINOUS CORRESPONDENCE AT CIVIC SESSION —

Council agreement with St. Andrews East on police radio communication service

At the regular Council session last week, with Mayor Fernand Legault presiding, only one member was absent, namely, Ald. Lauréat Laurin. . . . . An innovation in police matters was brought forward by Ald. Horace Lamarche, who proposed that the town police be commissioned to receive service calls pertaining to the St. Andrews police, and transmit them to the patrol car in that village. This collaboration should be chargeable at $10 a month for the first six months, then subject to revision, and the agreement should be effective for a one-year period. . . . The request had been directed to Lachute by Councillor E. W. Stephens of St. Andrews Village; and in supporting it, Ald. Lamarche felt it would be an added protection for Lachute to be linked with the neighboring municipality in this way.

A list of eight proprietors out of 10 with properties on Henry Street was presented by Horace Lafleur, in opposition to the laying of a sidewalk. Ald. Stanley Holt proposed that this sidewalk be built nevertheless; but Ald. R. Morrissette moved, in amendment, that the surveyor, Arthur Lafrance, be called upon to establish lines for the sidewalks and submit his report to Council, which would then take appropriate measures. Six aldermen voted in favor, giving passage to the amendment. Ald. Dr. J. P. Dorion withheld his vote.

A letter of resignation from Cst. Felix Lallier was accepted unanimously. In connection with the cheque for $350 remitted to the corporation by Yvon Larocque (proceeds of the party held in his honor), it was voted that this be returned to him.

Following a resolution by the Protestant School Commission to cede a 1-foot strip on Bellingham Street, it was moved to construct 170 feet of sidewalk, 3 feet wide, on this street. Also that the cost of repairing 20 feet of damaged sidewalk be assessed to the contractor on the High School building.

It was decided that Mr. W. Marshall be requested to cut down a dead tree on the corner of Main and Burroughs; also that the secretary should write certain property-holders on the north side of Henry, between Mary and Isabella Streets, asking for a strip of land to permit the extending of this street, conjointly with the Parish of St. Jerusalem.

A letter from the fire department anticipated certain dangers with the proposed laying of pipes for natural gas. The mayor replied that there is a provincial code governing this matter, and its clauses would be applied in any contract with the company.

Another letter, from the Department of Health, drew attention to the order prohibiting further use of the present dump site. It was decided to write the deputy minister, Dr. Jean Gregoire, informing him of the impossibility of procuring a new site in the town limits and of negotiations presently in hand with the Municipality of Chatham.

A communication from the Department of Transport stated that flasher signals being installed at the Main Street crossing (at the Park) would involve no cost to the municipality; while, in the case of Princess Street crossing, the municipality would be charged 12½% of the cost (of approximately $8,000) and 50% (of approximately $635) of the annual maintenance costs. Permission was granted to British American Oil to build a protective wall around its tanks on Lafleur Street.

Two letters were presented from the Chamber of Commerce, one protesting against the 2% municipal sales tax and the other complaining that the parking regulations have not been enforced on Main Street. This latter complaint was referred to the police commissioner, Ald. Linton Armstrong.

Slow-down signs will be painted on the pavement to safeguard children coming and going at the Richelieu pool.

Mr. David Campbell, present at the meeting, suggested that microphones and a loudspeaker be installed at the council table so that taxpayers attending could follow the discussions in detail.

Bills amounting to $13,479.66 were passed for payment, and Ald. Stanley Holt was appointed pro-mayor for the ensuing three months.

"Over Ninety" Birthday Club

Congratulations are extended to Mr. W. C. Stonard, of St. Andrews East, who on Thursday, August 17, will celebrate his 91st birthday. Mr. Stonard and his wife (who has just passed her 85th birthday) still keep their own home and continue to enjoy fairly good health. They have been residents of St. Andrews for almost 30 years.

Accident verdicts in highway deaths

Three inquests were held at the Lachute Auditorium last Saturday, occupying all morning. One of these concerned the death of a bank bandit at Arundel (reported on this page), with Dr. A. R. Côté of Brownsburg presiding; the other two inquests were cases of highway fatalities, which occurred almost simultaneously east and west of Lachute. Joint-Coroner Dr. John C. MacKimmie presided in these two cases.

KILLED AT UPPER LACHUTE

A coroner's jury, empanelled by Dr. J. C. MacKimmie, returned a verdict of accidental death, after hearing evidence on an accident July 23 on Route 41, which caused the death of Mrs. Della Elizabeth Mayock, 47.

Crown Attorney Fernand Legault questioned the six witnesses on details of the early-morning mishap, which occurred at the junction of the old and new sections of the St. Jerome highway, several miles east of Lachute. The vehicles were driven by Francis Mayock, husband of the victim, and Ronald Boyd, 18, of Lachute.

Francis Mayock, the first witness heard, stated he had left Montreal, and had driven north on the Autoroute. When he reached this section of the road, he met a car whose driver did not respond to the dimming of his lights. According to this witness, the car was being driven at an excessive speed, as he could hear the roar of the engine, and was taking a good portion of the left-hand side of the road, reserved for cars travelling in the opposite direction. Mr. Mayock stated he then slowed down and pulled over to the shoulder of the road, where the accident occurred. Mr. Mayock added that he was a non-drinker, that his car was in good condition, his wife was seated in front with him, and his son was sleeping in the rear seat.

Called upon to testify, his son, Howard Michael, 20, stated he was not injured in the accident, but could add no further information as he was asleep at the time.

The third witness was Ronald

DEATH AT PTE. AU CHENE

Conrad Simard, 20-year-old Alfred, Ont., resident, was cleared of all blame in the death of his cousin, René Pascal Simard, who died July 23 in an accident on the Avoca Road, north of Pointe au Chene. The victim was instantly killed when the car in which he was driving swerved out of control and rolled a considerable distance, ending up against a tree.

Conrad Simard gave the following evidence relative to the accident. . . .

Borrowing his brother's car, and accompanied by four companions, he left for Hawkesbury and later proceeded to Grenville, where they stopped at a hotel for a small bottle of beer. They then moved on to

Eight fire calls, month of July

For an off-season month, the fire brigade received a fair number of calls during July. Chief Don MacCulloch's report to Council listed a total of eight outbreaks to which the volunteer firemen were summoned for aid. Four of these were within the town limits, three in St. Jerusalem Parish and one in St. Andrews Village — this latter, originating in a garage, being the most disastrous incident; the Lachute unit could do little but help to avert danger to adjacent properties.

A regular meeting and two special practices were also held by the brigade in July.

Council agitates for better price on filtration engineering job

Town Council, at its regular August session chaired by Mayor Fernand Legault, gave study last week to a letter and explanations from the firm of Francis Hankin, engineers, relative to building of the filtration plant.

At a meeting on June 21 last, it is recalled that this firm's tender of $108,000 be accepted — with preference over a bid from Hydro-Dynamics for an amount of $102,000. Subsequently, on July 12, Hydro-Dynamics set before Council certain qualifications on this type of work, and on their offer, which placed the city fathers in a state of uncertainty, and it was decided to ask Francis Hankin to revise their estimate on the job, without reducing quality of material, so as to approach the competitive offer.

In re-introducing the question, Mayor Legault stressed that public feeling must be respected in the awarding of contracts and he asked the Hankin representatives to give earnest consideration to reducing their price.

On behalf of the contractors, their spokesmen now pointed out their enviable reputation over the past half-century, specializing for the past 40 years in work of this particular type; that certain contracts had been given this firm at prices higher than those of inexperienced competitors; and that Francis Hankin employs five professional engineers and several technicians expert in various aspects of water purification.

The spokesmen stated moreover that provisionary orders had been placed for equipment in the filtration system, entailing necessary expense reckoned in their tender; and that they had speeded-up their work since the municipality desired to get going on the job this fall and benefit from government aid on winter projects. The company's bid had also anticipated price changes in materials foreseeable six months ahead.

Finally, the engineers stated that, if the municipality saw fit to sign a contract within the next six months, the company would be glad to meet with the town engineers and re-negotiate on their estimate — provided, of course, that prices have not been increased in that time. . . .

Outcome of this discussion was the forming of a committee — with Mayor Legault, Aldermen S. Holt and H. Lamarche — to confer with town engineer Paul Laliberté, and others concerned, and with the company representatives, on August 9.

If the town authorities achieve their aim in these negotiations, it might mean a $6,000 saving to the taxpayers.

Police arrangements satisfactory, adjustments in interim agreement

Police department revenues for July were $1,723.05 — representing fines; bicycle, dog and taxi licenses; identification cards, etc. The month's report was given by acting-Chief René Labrosse at Council session last week.

Also listed were 436 calls for assistance, 20 car accidents, 23 persons accommodated in cells; 4 arrests, 208 tickets issued, 2 injuries, 4 cars stolen and recovered, and 14 robberies.

Council agreed to pay half cost of a hotel room occupied by police officers. Bill for the month of June was $160; it was agreed to carry this expense, as mentioned, until August 3.

Mr. Phillips, of the Phillips Investigation Bureau, was present at the meeting. He explained that, since first providing police service here in 1960, his men had generally slept off-duty in the guard room at headquarters. Since that time, one of the cots had disappeared, and the other is un-useable in its present state. . . . It was decided thereupon to re-furnish this room with two new cots; and on termination of the arrangement with Phillips Investigation Bureau, the room would be used for overnight accommodation of transients unable to pay for a hotel room.

A Word of Appreciation

A bouquet to the police service came from Mme Yvon Cadieux, who had been advised by an officer on patrol that she had left her store premises unlocked one night. The officer had gone out of his way to find the proprietress and notify her of this omission. . . . The mayor here added a word of commendation to the police, from a personal experience of this kind.

ECHO OF ELECTION —

Ayersville chief claims resignation asked in reprisal

The police chief of Ayersville, Marcel Therrien, was definitely relieved of his functions, at the municipal council meeting last Monday, chaired by Mayor Gaetan Paquette. The termination of duties actually preceded the date given in notice of expiry. In his letter of resignation Chief Therrien regretted relinquishing his post "through having done his duty during the last municipal elections".

It was on proposal of Coun. Plamondon, seconded by Coun. Cyr, that the chief's duties were terminated immediately, and he was asked to return effects belonging to the corporation, after which his salary would be paid for 30 days ahead.

Referring to the municipal election, Chief Therrien stated that, "after having been obliged to act against a certain councillor at that time, it was understandable they would no longer give him their support — and without the full support of Council, a police chief could not fill his obligation to the taxpayers."

Three-year assignment overseas

This little family — Raymond Bolevert, wife and child — left recently aboard the liner Empress of Britain for a three-and-a-half year assignment in England, Mr. Bolevert to be employed as teletype operator for the Department of External Affairs at Canada House, London. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Georges Bolevert, Ayersville.

Tentative dates for the opening of the Migratory Birds seasons have been submitted to the Department of Fish and Game by the Federation of Fish and Game Clubs. In their brief all the opening dates will be on a Saturday. This is a step in the right direction, as far as I am concerned; 95% of all shooters are working men, and in most cases cannot afford or get the time off necessary to get in the first day's shoot. Nothing drastic has been proposed in the brief except this one detail. It's about time the average shooters were thought of, as they are the boys who pay the freight. No trouble is expected in these dates being accepted.

Fishing has not been too good around the County, from all I have been able to gather. In a couple of cases though, limits were taken; these were the odd exception. In one case I know of, a couple had been out all day with nary a trout, and then just before going home they had a strike that netted them a 4-pounder. The limits heard of were not big fish by any means, the largest being in the neighborhood of a pound, but at least they managed to get them. One of the main reasons for fish not biting is the heavy rains we have been having. All a person has to do is examine the water and see the feed in it. After all, why should the fish go after artificials when all they have to do is wait and the food is washed right into their mouths.

Just so the trolling boys won't feel left out, try this trick next time you are out: About 5 feet above your lure put another one without the hooks. This is certainly good attractor and should bring results. For the spinning man, get the smallest lures you can for this time of year. The fish are not interested in anything big just now. The same applies to the fly man with one exception. Use a dropper and reverse your flies, big at the top and small at the bottom. Even use a nymph at the bottom.

Travelling up and down the North River this past week we have been amazed at the shore and marsh birds we have never seen before. One of the most fascinating to watch is still the Great Blue Heron. How they can stand in the water, with never a quiver of even a feather, waiting for some poor meal to come by, is a marvel. Numerous frogs are around, and to see these birds strike is a lesson in patience. They seem to be jet-propelled when they move toward a meal. There are other waders around also; these I do not know, and they certainly have not been around this district before. This applies also to different Canaries to be seen in the hedges. Some of the shades of yellow are truly beautiful and in a couple of cases the blacks along with the very bright yellows make a picture not easily forgotten. I also saw a Ring Neck pheasant right on the road going towards Lakefield. This was a male, so no doubt he has a harem around.

I almost forgot to tell you of a duck nest that we found right beside the river bank, with four young in it. They are about the size of a big sparrow right now, but they won't stay that way long. They are Mallards, and this is a very welcome addition to our wildlife in the area. Too bad there are not more of these birds. Not for the sake of the shooting, but only because of their value to water life. There may be a lot of them around, as naturally, I can't be all over the place at once.

We have read in the papers of attempts to be made to clean up the North River above St. Jerome. This is a start in the right direction. Now all that is needed is for the lower communities to get together and start something like this. When you think of things along these lines, it makes you wonder just what has to be done to get some of the higher officials to do anything.

This is not a very timely subject, but it's one that seems to have been given a lot of thought. . . . You may remember I mentioned sleeping bags and their value, while nylon ones did not live up to all the publicity given them. I am giving you my personal opinion only, but it was I that froze in one, so guess I'm entitled to give my views. Certainly they are good, but not for all that is claimed of them. Now don't get me wrong about all nylon bags; they can't be all the same, but the low-priced ones are sure a waste of money for anyone intending to use them in cold weather, dry cold. I mean temperatures around 10 to 20 above. They are waterproof, etc., and that is one very good thing about them. . . . However, in later experimentation the manufacturers will no doubt have them as good as the eiderdown and at much less the cost.

For the outdoors person — or for that matter the once-in-awhile camper — there are now on the market some very good dehydrated foods. The soups are especially good, and even for the home they would be worth trying. They are made by a Swiss firm, and from the text they put out, a lot of experimentation has been carried out with it. I know myself this is one item that has been very sorely needed for the outdoorsman. Certainly they will have a large following in this group, if they live up to their publicity. All the better Montreal outfitters are carrying these supplies.

As you know, we have a campsite in the district, and I was up the other night to see just how far work had progressed on clearing of the site. I was pleasantly surprised at the good job that has been done. Naturally a lot of work still has to be accomplished, but from the way everything has progressed, I don't think it will be too long before it is a real good camp. It's a good thing someone else thinks of our district and its possibilities.

Heard from some of the local fly men just tonight (Monday), and they say they have been having excellent luck with flies this past season. It also seems one of the best flies was the Crane. This is a good all-round fly at any time, and one that should be carried by everyone. Of course, I still go along with the nymphs, but I do use the Crane a lot. As a matter of fact, one of our local enthusiasts has had me tie up a dozen or so, all in different patterns. But I guess it would be impossible to say any one fly was the best.

Most of you no doubt have read the article by Mr. Ponder. This needs no comment, except I'm glad someone else has something to say about the causeway. I seem to remember, in one article, that the causeway could not hold any water back?

Bigger, better exhibition opens Aug. 18 at Ottawa

Ottawa — Central Canada Exhibition directors at Ottawa are setting their sights on new records at the Exhibition, which opens August 18.

With a break from the weatherman, there'll be higher attendance, and that's about all that's needed to make this year's show the greatest in the long history of the Exhibition.

There are record entries in most departments, so many in some that as soon as judging is completed, entries will have to be moved out so others can move in.

One of the greatest attractions is the tremendous Inter-City Parade arranged for Saturday, the second day of the Fair.

There'll be a score of floats, bands and majorette groups galore, ancient cars, giant balloons and a host of other interesting things. The gates will be open, free, until noon to allow viewers into the grounds to see the parade go by the grandstand and watch the presentation of awards.

Agriculture Minister Hamilton will officially open the Exhibition at a dinner Friday evening.

At the grandstand there'll be open air wrestling Saturday night. Then next Monday, Tennessee Ernie Ford, Anita Bryant and the June Taylor dancers take over to headline the nightly grandstand show that runs until the last night, Saturday, August 26.

There will be a car give-away each day of the Fair and a 25,000 silver dollars award on the final night of the show.

Back again this year will be the World of Mirth midway, one of America's greatest travelling shows. And among the other attractions will be three flower shows, a top flight horse show, outstanding livestock shows, a big Ladies' Day program on Tuesday, August 22, free band concerts, a dog show and obedience trials, and hundreds of interesting and educational exhibits, including those of the Women's Institutes and Ottawa Public Schools.

It will be a great Exhibition, bigger and better than ever before, say the officials.

YELLOW HUNTERS

Winnipeg (CP) — The provincial department of mines and natural resources this fall will conduct special studies to see how suitable yellow hunting clothes are for Manitoba deer hunters. Hunters are asked to send their comments and reactions to the game branch.

For hole-in-one golfers

This handsome trophy will be awarded by Dow Brewery, through its local distributor, René Laurin, to all golfers who succeed in scoring a hole-in-one on a regular golf course this season. Damien "Diamond" Gauthier, well-known professional at Montreal's Municipal Course, who has racked up three holes-in-one during his 30-year career, shows how the score-making ball is fitted into the trophy. It will make a fine addition to any golfer's trophy room. Details of Dow's hole-in-one trophy awards can be had from any local course, or from Mr. Laurin, Lachute.

Postal changes to speed delivery of newspapers

Sweeping changes in methods of handling newspapers and magazines are under study in an important experiment being carried out by the Post Office Department in co-operation with major Canadian publishers — according to Postmaster General William Hamilton.

The experiment, at present confined to major publishers in Montreal and Toronto, is expected to result in savings in mail handling costs estimated at up to a million dollars a year. It is also expected to produce improvements in the speed of handling newspapers by mail. Canadian publishers, Mr. Hamilton said, were enthusiastic about the test and were offering their fullest co-operation.

In the experimental operation, newspapers will no longer be weighed and rated at the post office before being sorted for onward transmission. Instead, postage rates will be calculated from the publishers' records which will be audited by the Post Office Financial Branch.

Cutting out the weighing operation will save hundreds of thousands of man-hours at major post office terminals, and will permit newspaper publishers to meet mail despatch deadlines which were formerly impossible. In addition, the post office will have a more accurate record of newspaper mailings and postal revenues will be more closely protected.

Mr. Hamilton said that the experiment could eventually be extended to all holders of second-class mailing privileges in Canada.

By-Law on sewers, for information of taxpayers

Following is a copy of the recently passed sewer by-law of the Town of Lachute, which was referred to in an earlier edition. The by-law is reproduced for the convenience of local taxpayers who may be concerned in the application of this measure.

1. All works and outlays connected with the building and repairing of sewers in the streets of the Town of Lachute shall be executed by the Corporation . . . through its duly authorized officers or through a contractor duly authorized to that effect;

2. Whenever it appears to the Lachute Town Council that a sewer is needed in a street or part of street . . . the cost of which does not warrant to float a loan repayable over an extended period, it may by resolution ordain the building of sewers in any street or part of street . . .

3. The cost of building such sewers is at the charge of the fronting immoveables according to the frontage of the respective properties. The cost of connection between a property fronting the sewer is also at the charge of the property so connected.

4. Whenever the Council decides on building of a sewer in a street or part of a street, notice of such decision shall be given to all interested property owners at least 10 days before the start of the works;

5. Upon completion of the works, the cost of same shall be established according to real expenses plus fair overhead expenses. The total so obtained is then levied on all properties facing such sewer according to the number of feet of frontage . . . account being taken of the length of connection built, the cost of which is at the charge of the property so connected.

Any person owing such charges shall pay the full amount of same cash within 60 days of the date of the invoice; after such delay an interest of 6% per annum shall be exigible until full payment.

Local four win Calcutta annual invitation golf

The annual Pro-Amateur Invitation Calcutta golf tournament was held here Sunday, in which 15% of the total proceeds will go to the Lachute Regional Hospital project.

Thirty-six teams participated. Lachute's No. 2 team won the event. Of this foursome, Ronald Going (pro) received $865.70; Roger Regimbal won $2,797.10; Kenneth Helal won $2,797.10; and Jacques Brasseur won $2,797.10 — for a total of $9,257.00.

The lowest score was 16 below par, giving the winners 56 net.

Champagne bowls were also presented to the winners, with other prizes to runner-up teams.

Local memberships in Camping Club

Indicating the growing popularity of camping in this province, there are now no fewer than 42 members from Lachute district linked up with the Camping Club of Canada. Any persons interested in joining this group are asked to communicate with Bob Parks, Lachute (LO 2-6366).

Industrialists named to promote Forest Products Week this area

Montreal — Léopold Carrière, of Lachute Lumber and Millwork Ltd., and Stan Dansereau, of Geo. Dansereau & Fils Ltée., Grenville, have been appointed for the organization of National Forest Products Week next fall in the Argenteuil district. Mr. Carrière is past-president of the Quebec Retail Lumber Dealers' Association and of the National Retail Lumbermen's Council. Mr. Dansereau is a director of the Quebec Lumber Manufacturers' Association.

The week of October 15-21 has already been designated by the Quebec Government through a special order-in-council as National Forest Products Week, and a similar proclamation will be forthcoming from the Federal Government as the event is being observed on a nation-wide scale combined with a similar observance in the United States.

L. Paul Bock, provincial chairman, is enlisting the co-operation of lumber interests from all sections of the province, and has set up regional committees to work in conjunction with the provincial organization in Montreal.

National Forest Products Week, Mr. Bock said, deserved the support and encouragement of all persons interested directly or indirectly in the country's forest and lumbering industries, so important to Canada's economic welfare.

Refreshments were served to all on conclusion of the events.

C.N.I.B. campaigns in district

In order to carry out an extensive program in sight conservation, and to look after blind people in the County of Argenteuil, a financial campaign will be held August 14 in the following areas:

Chatham, under the chairmanship of Reginald Morrow;

Arundel, under Mrs. Gordon Cooke;

Morin Heights under joint chairmanship of Gordon Allen and I. Allard.

All money contributed goes toward the work in this County and volunteer workers do not receive even one cent for their work; they do this to aid a worthy cause and to help their fellow men.

When the volunteer canvasser calls on you, please be generous with your donation. The sight that you help to save today, may be your own sight tomorrow!

Fatal mishap at Pte. au Chene

Lachute in another car, where he had two pints of beer. They left this establishment around midnight and headed for Grenville, where they once again transferred to the Simard car. Accompanied by the victim and Paul-Emile Lalonde, they went to another establishment and consumed another small bottle of beer; the three left the establishment around 2 a.m. A short time later, the driver stated he lost control of his car on a soft shoulder. He pulled at the wheel to attempt to return the car to the road, but the car rolled a considerable distance, coming to a stop against a tree. According to his evidence, he was driving at approximately 50 m.p.h. and all three occupants were in the front seat, the victim being in the centre. He had held a driving permit for four years. The driver was himself injured in the mishap.

The other witnesses were Gaetan Simard, brother of the driver, who had loaned his car; Léon Lamarche and Douglas Rattry, both of whom arrived at the accident scene; and Traffic Officer Ronald Massie. Mr. Lamarche reported he had summoned the ambulance and the police, when he saw the overturned automobile in the field. Mr. Rattry, whose summer home is about half a mile from the licensed establishment and whose mail box was severed by the car, stated he was of the opinion the car was travelling at a high rate of speed.

Traffic Officer Ronald Massie stated the road at the scene of the accident was 17'8" wide; tire marks could be established for 52 feet, but that there was evidence of damage to the asphalt paving for 204 feet, where the car had rolled.

The jury deliberated for several minutes, then returned a verdict of accidental death, with a recommendation that the road be kept under closer surveillance by the provincial police.

"Elmer, Safety Elephant" goes national

"Elmer the Safety Elephant", a primary school traffic safety program initially restricted to Toronto, more recently to Ontario, will be available next year to schools across Canada. "Elmer" has proven so acceptable and effective in Ontario schools that the Canadian Highway Safety Council was asked to take it on as one of its projects. The Council agreed, and "Elmer" officially will be launched in time for the 1962 fall term.

The Toronto Telegram originated "Elmer" and still holds the copyright. When "Elmer" (who never forgets) became popular in Toronto schools through the assistance of the Toronto (now Metropolitan) Traffic Safety Council, the Telegram asked the Ontario Safety League to administer the program province-wide. Now CHSC has "Elmer" under its nation-wide wing through the co-operation of the Telegram and OSL.

The likeness of the elephant appears on a six-foot pennant flown from the flagpole of a school until a pupil causes a traffic accident. Then a mournful assembly is held and the flag is lowered. If the school goes 30 days without a traffic mishap, a happier ceremony raises the pennant again. Police and local safety officials are prominent in these ceremonies and all "Elmer" activities.

CHSC will encourage provincial safety groups to promote "Elmer" in the provinces.

Resort operators see dollar premium 'biggest promotional weapon' in years

"The current premium on American money can help increase the Laurentian tourist business right now and keep it increasing in the months to come, if we take full advantage of it," stated the Laurentian Tourist and Economic Bureau last week in a letter addressed to all Laurentian area businessmen.

The letter urged all Laurentian businesses catering to the public to voluntarily accept all U.S. currency tendered in payment of merchandise or services at the full valid premium rate.

"The premium American dollar is the biggest promotional weapon we have had in years," stated Bureau President Jean Lalonde. "The lure of a premium dollar giving him more for his money is one few tourists can resist. The premium dollar plus the well known natural attractions of our Laurentians give a Laurentian vacation more value to Americans than at any time in the past."

Bureau Director George W. Powell, president of the Chantecler Hotel in Ste. Adele, stated that most leading hotels, restaurants and retail stores are already offering the premium on U.S. dollars. "It is hoped that all Laurentian businessmen will support the Bureau's efforts to make our area the first to unite to offer Americans the full extra value of their money in all its establishments," said Powell. "Once our members and other tourist operators have indicated their support, the Bureau is prepared to initiate a heavy publicity campaign to bring the new value of a Laurentian vacation to the attention of as many potential American visitors as possible."

Boyd, driver of the other car involved, who stated he had been at St. Canut, driving his father's 1955-model car. He was accompanied by Linda Mae Barrette and stated he left the establishment between 1.30 and 2 a.m. and had been driving since that time. He added he was driving at a speed of approximately 50 m.p.h. and noticed the oncoming car when it was around 200 to 300 feet from him, and he thought he remembered dimming his lights.

Prior to going to St. Canut, where he stated he had two bottles of beer, he had taken a bottle of beer in Lachute. He was at St. Canut from 11 p.m. until around 1.30 a.m. The young man stated he had had his driver's permit since 1959 and had never been involved in a serious accident.

Miss Barrette, 20, stated she remembered nothing from around 9 o'clock that evening until approximately a week later, as she suffered head injuries.

Traffic Officers Jean-Claude Legaré and Gerard Janri were the last two witnesses heard, the latter giving the width of the road as 37 feet and distance between the cars after the accident as 42 feet. The Boyd vehicle was located across the right-hand side of the road and the Mayock car was some two feet inside the white line, on the left-hand side of the road. The accident occurred about 110 feet from the fork, on the new section, and there were no brake marks on the dry pavement. In his opinion, both vehicles hit almost head-on.

After retiring for deliberation, the jury returned a verdict of accidental death with no recommendation.

IN MEMORIAM

BATES — In loving memory of a dear husband, George Leslie Bates, who passed away on Aug. 11, 1952. — Ever remembered by his wife, Nellie.

BATES — In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather, George Leslie Bates, who left us on Aug. 11, 1952. — Always remembered by Ruth, Pearl and Eileen.

HADLEY — In memory of a dear wife, mother and grandmother, Eva, who passed away Aug. 12, 1956. — Sadly missed and always remembered by her husband, John, and family.

"One precious to our home has gone,
The voice we loved is stilled,
The place made vacant in our hearts
Could never more be filled."

KENNEDY — In loving memory of a dear son, Dave, who passed away Aug. 13, 1959. — Always remembered by Mom and Dad.

"Two long and lonely years have passed
Since our great sorrow fell
The shock that we received that day
Will always with us dwell.
When we are sad and lonely
And everything goes wrong
We seem to hear him whisper
'Cheer up and carry on'.
Each time we see your photo
You seem to smile and say
'Don't cry, I am only sleeping,
We'll meet again some day'."

McPAUL — In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather, George Ira McPaul, who passed away Aug. 8, 1959. — Always remembered by his family.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Your lawn this summer

Grass grows better when it is cool. When the temperature stays at 85° or over, growth ceases and the plants gradually turn yellow, even though conditions are otherwise very favorable.

It may seem strange to be thinking of drought in a wet season. But think of an asphalt pavement. After a shower, the streets dry quickly. The same thing happens to a lawn if the ground is too hard, no matter how thick the underlying layer of good soil. Moreover, if water cannot soak into hard ground, air will scarcely penetrate it either, and the lawn will suffer not only from lack of moisture but also from the poisonous effect of almost complete lack of aeration at root level. The paths trodden by pedestrians across vacant lots are a typical example of packed soil where nothing will grow. Small lawns and parts of the lawn near the house are more likely to be trodden more often. Lastly, hard or clay soil becomes packed more readily than sandy land, but in the end the results are the same in both cases.

André Sauvé, of the Quebec Department of Agriculture, recommends the following measures for the prevention and correction of packed soil:

1. Reduce trampling to a minimum and give natural processes such as wetting and drying, freezing and thawing, a chance to act. Water the lawn very slowly;

2. Pierce or slit the surface of the lawn to a depth of 3 or 4 inches with special implements;

3. If the soil is clay, it may be removed and replaced to a depth of six inches with sandy loam;

4. Plow up the lawn and mix with the soil a generous amount of organic matter in the form of strawy manure, peat or muck soil, sawdust, etc.

Late J. Falconer was well known, esteemed citizen

A long-time resident of Lachute, in the person of John N. Falconer, passed away here on Wednesday, August 2. He was 77 years of age, and until recent years had always enjoyed good health.

Born in Scotland in 1884, Mr. Falconer served his apprenticeship there as an engineer, coming to Canada in 1905. He was employed in the paper mills at Mille Roches and Cornwall before coming to Lachute where he served the J. C. Wilson Co. for 37 years as master mechanic. He retired in 1947.

Married to Miss May Heath, of Mille Roches, in 1910, they had one son, Kenneth, J., presently with the R.C.A.F. at Ottawa.

Besides his wife and son, he is mourned by three brothers, Andrew, in Lachute, William, of Durham,, South Africa, and George, of Balarno, Scotland, also two sisters, the Misses Jessie and Nettie Falconer, of Balarno, Scotland.

A member and elder of Lachute United Church, Mr. Falconer also belonged to the local lodge of the Masonic Order, and in his day had been an active curler. He was well known throughout the district, always willing to lend a helping hand, and had many friends. For many years he was a regular summer resident at Lake Louisa.

The funeral service was held Saturday afternoon in the United Church, conducted by the Rev. W. B. Rosborough, who spoke highly of the deceased and gave comforting words to the bereaved.

Pall-bearers were — Messrs. G. Demerse, D. Beers, H. Graves, W. K. McArthur, W. J. Deacon, and R. A. Giles. Honorary pall-bearers were Messrs. A. A. McOuat and A. Taylor.

Expressions of sympathy, flowers and donations to organizations sent in silent testimony, were numerous.

Couple married at Fairmount-St. Giles in Montreal

McArthur-Elliott

The marriage took place, July 22 in Fairmont - St. Giles United Church, of Miss Edna Joan Elliott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Elliott, of Montreal, to Donald McArthur, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence McArthur, of Ayersville.

The bride, given away by her father, wore a floor-length gown of peau-de-soie trimmed with lace; her fingertip veil was held by a pearl coronet and she carried a cascade of white carnations with pink Sweetheart roses.

Miss Gwen Hodgins, schoolmate of the bride, was maid of honor and wore a cocktail-length dress of pale yellow. Miss Audrey Elliott, sister of the bride, attended as bridesmaid, dressed in pink silk fitted bodice and full skirt. Both carried bouquets of aqua carnations.

Miss Marian McKiernen, a cousin of the bride, was flower girl, in a full-skirted dress of green organdy, and carried a colonial nosegay of white carnations and pink Sweetheart roses.

Mr. Claude Croft, cousin of the groom, was best man, and the ushers were Mr. Denis McArthur, brother of the groom, and Mr. Ralph Elliott, brother of the bride.

The bride's mother wore a dress of pale blue lace with matching hat and white accessories. The groom's mother wore a pale green print with beige accessories.

Special guests from out of town were Mr. and Mrs. Albert Larose and their two daughters, Linda and Sandra, all of Glendale, Calif.; Mr. and Mrs. K. Kerr, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Kerr, all of Ottawa; and Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Elliott, of Napanee, Ont.

The bride was piped from the church by her mother's uncle, W. B. Kerr, of Ottawa.

The bride and groom are to reside in Lachute after their honeymoon in New York City.

Two mayors exchange notes

During a holiday with his family spent at Prince Edward Island, Mayor Fernand Legault, Q.C., was officially and cordially received by the Mayor of Charlottetown, who presented the visitor with a souvenir plaque.

Exchanging notes on civic affairs, Mayor Legault was informed that Charlottetown is confronted with one of Lachute's current problems, relative to garbage disposal. As regards fire protection, it was learned that the two municipalities operate along similar lines, with a volunteer force of firefighters.

Dr. Gilbert Mellon, from Haiti, has been in these parts recently, accompanying Col. Ernest Emmett in his duties as health inspector and observing procedures at the County Health Unit in charge of Dr. L. Turcotte. This is part of a study tour of public health centres in Canada and a bursary course at the University of Montreal.

New Canadian artist featured in A.A.A. exhibition

A collection of 20 paintings by a Montreal artist, Frank Nemeth, was on view last week at St. Andrews municipal hall under auspices of the Argenteuil Art Association — the first of this season's exhibitions for the public interest.

Mr. Nemeth, of Czechoslovakian birth, is a designer of display-layouts. He studied art at the Beaux Arts in Munich and in Paris before coming to Canada 10 years ago. He is a member of the Pen and Pencil Club in Montreal.

His works were introduced to a small but appreciative gathering at the St. Andrews opening. A colleague, Leslie Coppold, and Mr. Nemeth himself, informally discussed the pictures on exhibition — 20 in all.

To the A.A.A. members and art lovers who inspected this display during last week, the collection presented a delightful variety of subjects — landscapes, marines, portraits and still-lifes — with conventional and effective technique, and with clear-cut colors especially notable in the still-life subjects. The medium in most cases was oil, with one or two in tempera colors. Mr. Nemeth's scenes ranged all the way from Western Germany to the Jura Mountains, and in Canada from Prince Edward Island to the autumn-colored slopes of Mount Royal. This thoroughly pleasing display was a credit to the artist, and to the exhibitions committee of the Argenteuil Art Association which arranged for its presentation.

SEED ANALYSTS—E. J. Doyle of the Canada Department of Agriculture in Ottawa, was installed president of the Association of Official Seed Analysts at the annual meeting held in Richmond, Va., in mid-June. Chief of the laboratory section of Plant Products Division, Mr. Doyle now heads a group concerned with seed testing in all its phases, particularly in its application in commerce.

Recent nuptials of interest in Morin Heights

Rowland-Leitch

The marriage of Miss Anne Leitch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Archibald Frame Leitch, of Montreal, to Mr. William James Rowland, son of Mr. and Mrs. William James Rowland, of N.D.G. and Morin Heights, took place in Christ Church Cathedral at three o'clock Saturday, June 24, with the Rev. M. C. Major officiating. Mr. K. Meek played the wedding music, and during the signing of the register Mrs. Church sang. Standards of white gladioli with greenery, and candles in candelabras, were used to decorate the church.

The bride, given away by her father, wore a gown of white organza over silk with fitted bodice, having round neckline, long sleeves and skirt front detailed with floral appliqué, with bouffant skirt falling into a chapel train. Her waist length veil of tulle illusion was held in place by a coronet of seed pearls and she carried a bouquet of white roses.

Mrs. Gordon Kelly, as matron of honor, wore a dress by Vogue of white organza over gold taffeta, with white floral appliqué and matching headdress, and carried a bouquet of aqua carnations.

Miss Sharon Leitch was bridesmaid for her sister, wearing a dress by Vogue of olive green organza over green taffeta with matching headdress, and carried a cascade bouquet of yellow carnations.

Miss Sandra Venables, as junior bridesmaid, was gowned in olive green organza over green taffeta detailed with organza rosettes, and carried a basket of Shasta daisies and Sweetheart roses.

Mr. Andrew Venables acted as best man, and the ushers were Mr. Brian Locke, Mr. Rene Berube and Mr. Al Wilson.

Mrs. A. Leitch, the bride's mother, wore a dress of mink chiffon, trimmed in white, with mink accessories and a corsage of yellow roses. Mrs. W. J. Rowland, mother of the groom, chose a dress of floral chiffon in mauve and pink over matching silk, mauve accessories and a corsage of white carnations and sweet peas.

Following the reception, Mr. and Mrs. Rowland left by car for the U.S.A.; the bride travelled in an ensemble of honey-gold silk linen with pale green accessories and a corsage of green orchids.

Among out-of-town guests were Mrs. M. Kelly, from England; Mr. and Mrs. A. Wilson, New York; Mrs. M. Mist, Philadelphia; Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Bell, Miss Vera McCullough, and Mr. J. P. Gordon, of Morin Heights.

Three-day convention held here by district Jehovah Witnesses

"This modern world is as perplexed as a woodpecker in a petrified forest, and countless thousands of humans living in this 20th century madly flutter from one endeavor to another, only to experience frustration and disappointment. To such persons the future looks black," said Laurier Saumur in his address, "The 20th Century in Bible Prophecy", before an assembled crowd in the Masonic Temple in Lachute recently.

Mr. Saumur, District Minister for Jehovah's Witnesses, was delivering the feature public address of a three-day convention during which delegates from Lachute, St. Jerome, Valleyfield, Hull and other towns in the western part of the province were gathered to attend Bible instruction and teaching sessions, and which also included an ordination service for two new ministers.

In his address Mr. Saumur forcefully held out the Bible as the sole guide to security. "It is clear that science alone does not have the answer to our craving for true contentment and security," he said. "We must go to God, who foretold man's future." . . . "Enlightened by the Holy Spirit, true religion has been able to discern the second presence of Christ in this century."

Said Mr. H. Purucker, presiding minister of the Lachute congregation: "The many benefits received at this assembly, we want to pass on to our neighbors in this community."

Huberdeau votes C.N.I.B. donation

At a meeting of the municipal council in Huberdeau on August 7, Pro-Mayor Cyprien Brosseau and his councillors decided unanimously to permit an organized financial campaign for the C.N.I.B. on Monday, August 21. Objective for this campaign will be $200; the drive will be under the chairmanship of E. Sarrazin.

In order to launch the campaign, the municipality of Huberdeau voted $25 towards helping this humanitarian work.

GREATEST CAUSE

St. John's Nfld. (CP) — A special government team of forestry specialists, after a five-day inspection tour of the province announced that "public carelessness remains the greatest cause of forest fire losses."

Public Notice

Canada
Province of Quebec
District of Terrebonne
Town of St. Jerome

Public notice is hereby given by the undersigned Octavien Tessier, City Clerk of the City of St. Jerome, in the County of Terrebonne, that the immoveables hereinafter described, with all buildings thereon erected and subject to all servitudes active or passive, apparent or unapparent which might affect them, will be sold by public auction, in the Council Chamber in the City Hall of St. Jerome, 280 Labelle Street, Wednesday, August 23rd, 1961 at 10 o'clock in the forenoon (daylight saving time) to satisfy payment of arrears of municipal taxes, general or special, with interests mentioned in the hereunder statement and also to meet payment of costs unless such taxes, interests and costs be paid before the above mentioned auction sale.
The adjudication price is payable immediately.
The purchaser will be bound to the payment of the adjudication price and to the payment of municipal taxes due or to become due for the year 1961 and for the years to come.
The sale will be, moreover, subject to the right of withdrawal and to the other provisions of the Quebec Municipal Commission Act.
(Ménard, Yvon — municipal taxes, $652.10; interest, $60.94; total $713.04.)
Lot No. 446 of the cadastre of the Town of St. Jerome, less and to be deducted the part of said lot sold to the City of St. Jerome on September 10, 1957, and registered under No. 219119, which part of lot is of irregular figure and indicated by letters "A,B,C,D,E,F,A" on a plan prepared by Mr. V. N. Guay, City Engineer, on June 10, 1957, and containing an area of 450 square feet. The said part of the lot measures forty-six feet (46') in its A,B, line; twenty-nine feet (29') in its B.C. line; forty-three feet and five-tenths (43' 5/10) in its F.E. line; eleven feet (11') in its B.E line and two feet seven inches (2'7") in its A.F line — English measures, and more or less.
Given at St. Jerome on July 18, 1961.

— Oct. Tessier,
A9.2c City Clerk.

Young swimmers, beware snorkels!

IN A FORMER Lachute - St. Andrews family, tragedy struck recently when a young man, an only son, lost his life in Lake Huron. The youth (Robert Woods, 17) drowned while using a snorkel, a plastic underwater breathing tube with a mouthpiece at one end and a pingpong-ball valve at the surface end. The ball is meant to plug the air tube when under water; this type of snorkel is a familiar device at any bathing beach or pool. The youth was swimming in about 10 feet of water, 300 feet from shore in high waves.

It is the coroner's findings which highlight this case as an example to be more widely heeded, and as our reason for citing the fatality in this column (quite apart from our personal feeling for the family involved). Here are facts brought out at the inquest. . . .

A sales representative of Aqua Lung of Canada Limited testified that inexperienced swimmers who used the device were sometimes given a false sense of security if they thought water could not get into the tube. He said this type of snorkel should not be sold. The rubber-plastic face mask used by the boy was dangerous because it gave the swimmer a feeling of suffocation.

The jury was told the snorkle cost less than $4.

J. W. Freeborn, Bruce county crown attorney, said the type of snorkel used by Woods was a dangerous toy. At present there is no law governing the sale of snorkels. Four persons have been drowned in Ontario this summer wearing the devices.

Information was also given that the Canadian Standards Association is testing diving equipment and although it has no power to ban dangerous devices, it can refuse to approve them.

Please — the animals

THE BODIES OF small animals litter many Canadian roads during the summer months. The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals has termed the automobile "one of our most effective game predators."

It rivals, claims SPCA, the shrew, the weasel, the fox, the dog, the house cat and the coyote in its destruction of wild life. The hunter and his gun kill no more game during season than the automobile. In Pennsylvania, a 1958 survey revealed 8,393 deer killed by motor vehicles. In Ontario, no records have been kept but thousands of rabbits, possums, raccoons, porcupines and other small wild life meet death under vehicle wheels.

Besides the toll of life in traffic, hitting a small animal can spell disaster for a motorist. Should his front wheels strike a coon or porcupine, he could lose control of the car in seconds and end up in a deep gully or ditch. The least that can happen is severe fright or a damaged steering mechanism from the blow.

Larger animals are another problem. A horse or a cow, straying onto travelled roads, is not generally killed by automobiles, but there have been such incidents, and the motorist and his vehicle usually lose almost as much as the animal. Never try to rush a horse or cow off the highway. Slow to a minimum speed and "edge" it out of the way. It could happen that the animal will get into the spirit of the argument and lash out with flying hoofs. Usually both animal and vehicle need attention after such an occasion. Canada's criminal code requires the motorist to "take resonable steps to find and inform the owner of the animal". Failing that, get in touch with the nearest police or SPCA office.

Nobody expects a motorist to avoid striking a wandering animal at all costs, especially if human life would be endangered. But it would be wise to remember SPCA's advice: "Animals were never very smart pedestrians."

To urge use of seat belts

BASED ON THE established fact that seat belts, if used by motorists, can prevent more than one-third of the fatalities in traffic accidents, the Canadian Highway Safety Council is planning a nation-wide campaign to promote their use. Ira G. Needles, CHSC general chairman, said, "Reduction in prices of seat belts and the installation of belt anchorages in all 1962 models of Canadian cars, make it possible for the Council to begin a concentrated drive to save lives through seat belts."

Similar campaigns are already under way in Great Britain and the United States, said Mr. Needles. The Canadian Highway Safety Council has been assured of active participation, in its forthcoming campaign, by provincial, community and industrial safety organizations, coast to coast. The Council answered accusations of boosting seat belt sales by declaring the large-scale saving of human life that could result would far outweigh the business benefits it might bring to the handful of companies.

Billboards coming down

POSTER ADVERTISING signs are leaving the green fields along highways for the bustle of city and surburban locations — reports The Financial Post. This is a steady, long-term trend which likely will continue, the advertising spokesmen and sign-makers say.

That's one reason why the industry generally is only mildly upset over a Quebec government decision to enforce its anti-sign regulations along provincial roads. Most provinces permit billboards, except on controlled-access highways. But such permission is hedged with a variety of restrictions on the type of sign and distance from the highway.

Some companies in the industry say they have soured on highway signs in proportion to the steadily rising speed of road travel.

Viewpoints and perspectives

JOYS OF TRAVEL. — Whether it's scenery you seek or the stories of ancient cultures and bygone histories portrayed in old cities and old lands, the transportation and travel people are ready and anxious to get you there. . . . But there's one pleasure in travel that the agencies seldom mention. It's the simple joy of getting back home again.

POSSESSION of a municipal license by an itinerant pedlar simply means that he has contributed something to the cost of running the municipality and that there are no complaints recorded on him. It does not necessarily mean that his prices are fair or that his selling technique is free from psychological tricks.

— Salmon Arm (B.C.) Observer

CANADIAN FLAG. — You may or may not like the Maple Leaf design but if you call yourself a Canadian you should be in favor of the government making up its and our mind one way or the other. Nipigon's Chamber of Commerce may be a small voice. They may be wrong in taking a stand for the Maple Leaf flag. . . . But by taking a stand and helping publicize the issue they are helping draw the time nearer when Canada will fly its own flag proudly.

THE LACHUTE WATCHMAN

75 YEARS AGO

Friday, July 30, 1886 —

The present population of Ottawa is reckoned at 35,000.

Quite a number of tourists are sojourning in the village of Hawkesbury, which only needs a railroad to be complete.

Mr. J. W. McOuat, B.A., has been engaged as new headmaster for Lachute Academy.

Trotting matches are being held on the racing park of Mr. Duncan Paul, Bethany.

There will be a binder trial on Walter Paul's farm adjoining the race course.

Mr. Gladstone and his colleagues have sent in their resignation to the Queen. Lord Salisbury has been summoned to form a government in England.

55 YEARS AGO

Friday, July 27, 1906 —

Cushing — The C. & G. R. train carrying passengers from the lower boat, in passing over the switch at McCormick's Station to allow the train from the Ottawa boat to pass through, left the rails and for a short time confusion reigned supreme.

Credit is due to our enterprising C.P.R. ticket agent, Mr. W. J. Todd, who organized a successful excursion to the Ottawa Experimental Farm.

Mr. Jas. W. Gall, of Mont Tremblant, is visiting friends in town.

Dr. J. H. Mason has decided to practice in Lachute, and will open his office next week on Main Street.

25 YEARS AGO

Thursday, July 30, 1936 —

Mgr. J.-Conrad Chaumont, vicar-general of the Montreal Diocese, laid the cornerstone for the new parish church at Ste. Anastasie.

Permit was refused to Provincial Motor Club Inc. for erection of a service station at the corner of Bethany and Foundry. Council decided this spot was already too congested.

Edgar Church, 16, had four fingers taken off when his left hand became caught in a veneer cutting machine at Dominion Shuttle Company.

The Hon. "Bob" Rogers, born at Lakefield 72 years ago, died after a colorful political career. He represented constituencies in the West and held cabinet posts in several Conservative administrations.

The residence of Amedée Lemay on Lachute Road, not far from the Ayers power plant, was destroyed by fire.

The Province of Quebec Police and Fire Chiefs are holding their fourth annual field day at St. Andrews Golf Club.

Major and Mrs. G. G. Mitchell have left for an extended visit to Europe.

An annual saving of $2-million in government administration costs, and abolition of patronage and favoritism, is promised by Maurice Duplessis in his campaign against the Taschereau-Godbout regime.

wonder QUESTIONS?

ANSWERED BY THE RESEARCH SERVICE OF THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE

I WONDER . . . Curiosity is a priceless gift. A youngster's daily questions indicate a bright, inquiring mind. They should be answered intelligently. In this column The Watchman, in co-operation with The Book of Knowledge, will print questions — and their answers — most frequently asked by children of their parents.

Why Do the Telegraph Wires Hum?

Because telegraph and telephone wires are stretched from pole to pole, they often vibrate or tremble when the air is in motion. If the wires vibrate rapidly in the breeze or the wind, they produce sounds that our ears can hear, just as we can hear the humming of the bee's wings. Sometimes when we put our hands on the telegraph poles, we can feel the whole pole vibrating, too, from the movement of the wires.

We ourselves are able to hum because the column of air in our throats vibrates our tightly stretched vocal cords. In each case, something that is stretched from one support to another is set in vibration by air currents.

How Can a Soft Cloud Make Noise When it Thunders?

It is not the bumping of clouds that causes thunder. Clouds are too soft for that. Thunder is due to the disturbance of the air when electricity passes from one cloud to another, or from a cloud to the earth. As the electricity passes, it causes the air nearby to become heated and to expand violently. We hear the waves caused by this violent expansion of the air as a crash or roll of thunder. Usually thunder follows a flash of lightning.

Which Animals Are the Most Intelligent?

The question has been much discussed. Dr. William Hornaday, formerly with the New York Zoological Park, made a study of the intelligence of different animals. He said that the chimpanzee is most intelligent and also easiest to train and that the orangutan is not very far behind. The gorilla is much lower. The Indian elephant is next easiest to train; then come the horse and the dog. The beaver has great intelligence but cannot be trained at all. Lions are more intelligent than tigers or leopards and are also more easily trained. The grizzly is the most intelligent bear, but it cannot be trained so easily as the European brown bear. Wolves and foxes, though they have great intelligence, cannot be trained at all. The deer and the wild goats are intelligent, but they are hard to train.

Readers are invited to send their own questions to WONDER QUESTIONS, Grolier Society Research Service, 800 Bay St., Suite 104, Toronto 5. The more interesting questions and answers will be published in future columns.

There are three important reasons why people make a mess of their work: The common cold, the hangover, and love.

These factors have caused the loss of millions of man-hours. What can science do about them?

Ascorbic acid, otherwise known as vitamin C, is good medicine for a cold. Buy it from any drug store, take a massive dose at the first sniffle, and you may have your cold beaten. I won't guarantee this (I'm no doctor) but some pharmacists swear by the stuff, and I think it has worked for me.

I'll admit that people should not get hangovers. But some hangovers are built at cocktail parties that a man is forced to attend for business reasons. Couldn't his throbbing head and all-over weary feeling be regarded as a wound suffered in the course of duty?

No, I suppose not. Anyway, a hangover, once acquired, is a fact that must be faced. Reliable observers tell me that the pain can be soothed by vitamin B.

Vitamin B for a hangover, vitamin C for a cold. But there is no cure for love except time (vitamin T?) and sometimes even that reliable remedy has been known to fail.

I remember a preasman on a weekly newspaper who — woolgathering on the eve of his marriage — ruined about 2,000 copies by feeding the sheets in the wrong way around.

He wasn't fired, of course. The boss sympathized with the ailment. He had suffered from it himself, some years before.

Mrs. Ross Matthew spent the week-end in Montreal.

Miss Audrey Johnson, of Verdun, was the week-end guest of Miss Helen Welden.

Mr. John S. Smith, of Montreal, was guest speaker in St. Matthew's Church last Sunday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Reg Hickman, of Rawdon, Que., are guests of Miss Pearl Dawson and Messrs. Ray and Edgar Dawson.

Mr. David Riley, Jr., of Ville St. Michel, was the week-end guest of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Dewar.

Miss J. A. Mann, of St. Sauveur des Monts, was the guest of Miss Geraldean Owens on Tuesday.

Mrs. Russell Mead and children, of St. Catharines, Ont., are holiday guests of Mrs. John Welden.

Cushing

Mrs. Paul Ellard and three small daughters, of Toronto, who have been holidaying with Mrs. Ellard's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Heatlie, returned home Wednesday. Another daughter, Mrs. Olmsted, of Ottawa, is now on holiday at her home.

Mrs. Alan Hollingworth and children, of Montreal, are the guests of Mrs. L. R. McGain. Mr. Hollingworth, spent the week-end with them.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Taylor, of Senneville, have taken up permanent residence in Cushing — to the pleasure of their many friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Lemuel Watchorn, and Mrs. Wm. Logan, of the Brownsburg Road, visited Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Canning on Monday evening.

W.I. Picnic

A delightful picnic for grown-ups and children was held under auspices of Frontier W.I. on Tuesday afternoon, on Mr. Alvin Heatlie's lawn, with races of different kinds for the children and contests for the adults. Mrs. D. Swail and Mrs. A. Graham were the winners in the latter contests. Mrs. Vanstone and four small daughters, of Hawkesbury, attended, making it a day of reunion, as the three daughters of the Heatlie home were present that day.

Miss Margaret Stephen, of Moose Jaw, Sask., was a guest of the Grahams of Cushing for the greater part of a week, then going to the home of Mrs. Lilly, St. Andrews East.

Miss Freda Pemberton-Smith, of Montreal, is again the guest of Miss F. M. Douglas.

Mr. and Mrs. Innes Canning, who were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Keith Canning, have returned to their home in Sudbury, Ont.

The Rev. W. H. Heustin, of Beamsville, Ont., visited Mrs. John Bradford at the home of Mrs. Wesley Morrow, on Wednesday. Guests of Mrs. Morrow on Tuesday were Mrs. Ed. Barron and daughter, Dorothy, of St. Andrews, and her son, Gerald Barron, who is home on a visit to his mother from the West. Sunday guests of Mrs. Morrow were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Steere, of Brownsburg.

Mrs. L. C. Cooke, of Pakenham, Ont., and Miss A. Davidson, of Cushing, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Boa, of St. Philippe, on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. K. Weir, of Baie d'Urfé, occupied their Cushing home for the greater part of July.

Mrs. Beecher is in residence at "Lilac Lodge" this week, having her sister, Mrs. J. Maw, as her guest.

Appreciation

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Donaldson, of Chatboro, greatly appreciated the way in which the ladies of St. Mungo's Church catered for the wedding reception of their daughter, Grace (Mrs. Calvin Morrow, of Lachute).

Lakefield

Cemetery Fund

The members of Holy Trinity Church are building up a fund for the upkeep of the Lakefield Cemetery. All persons interested are asked to contact Herbert Kyle or Leslie Robinson, church wardens. All donations are to be made payable to Lakefield Cemetery Fund, and will be gratefully received.

Annual W.C.T.U. Meeting

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Argenteuil are holding their annual open meeting on the afternoon of August 16, in St. Mungo's Church hall. Guest speaker will be the provincial president, Mrs. Ford Crawford, of Montreal. (Tea will be served.)

NO SAVING FOR NON-SMOKERS

Don't expect a cut in your life insurance premiums because you don't smoke. Or in your auto rates, either — writes H. R. Suydam in The Financial Post. Recent request by a non-smoker group in Vancouver for a 15% premium reduction is not likely to get much support from Canadian life insurers, an industry spokesman says.

While medical statistics indicate a reasonable probability of a tie-in between heavy smoking and lung disease, there is still much doubt on the subject, an insurance doctor says. More people die from auto accidents than from lung cancer, yet no life company is giving premium reductions to the confirmed pedestrian.

"Castles in the Air"

— By NANCY CLEAVER —

If your child "builds castles in the air" perhaps you can recall when you used your imagination as a means of escape when you were young too. Perhaps you still run away from the hard realities of life by picturing how different things might be! This exercise in creative thought is often part of growing up.

"When I could not sleep for cold
I had fire enough in my brain
And builded with roofs of gold
My beautiful castles in Spain".

James Russell Lowell wrote these touching lines of his early youth. He also stated his conviction that, "Solitude is as needful to the imagination as society is wholesome for the character." Day dreaming has been an occupation of people of every age and every country.

Frequently, a child with a high I.Q., pretends he has an imaginary friend and to him that friend is almost as real as a flesh-and-blood person. He carries on long conversations with his "pal". Mother may hear him chattering in the dark after he has been tucked into bed. An only child, who is longing for companionship, often meets his desire for friendship in this way.

Some time ago a survey was made at Teachers' College, Columbia University, of several hundred preschool boys and girls. About a third of them had imaginary companions, while many of the smaller children had "pretend animals" as pets. This study should be re-assuring to a mother who may be slightly alarmed over her child's vivid imagination.

When a child starts to school and is caught up in a new and exciting world with other children and his teacher, what happens? With few exceptions these creatures of their fancy gradually are forgotten and disappear.

The school girl who is not very happy with her class mates may long for her family to move to another home. She can picture herself surrounded by a group of little girls in the new school who welcome her and ask her to join in their games.

It is quite natural for boys and girls to dream about what they will do when they are adults, and play games around these activities. They may change their choice of vocation from time to time. But it is fun to pretend to be grown up — to be earning one's own living!

The main character in Mary O'Hara's book, My Friend Flicka, is a very lovable younger brother Ken who was given to "building castles in Spain". Toward the end of the book, the old family doctor says "Day dreaming is as potent and seductive as morphine. Once you've got the habit, it has got you! . . . Making a practical thinker and performer out of a day dreamer is serious business."

This is rather a sombre warning. But it need not alarm parents unless a son or daughter day dreams so much that it interferes with play or school work.

Petite smorgasbord

A molded seafood salad, garnished with bright, crisp garden vegetables, is an ideal main dish to serve when the weather is hot.

Like to fix most of a summer supper early? Then plan the meal around hearty, make-ahead salads. Here are recipes for two molded seafood salads which can be prepared in the cool of the morning, or even the evening before. All three are hearty, attractive dishes which are easy to make and require little fuss. For the pretty-as-a-picture effect, mold them with bright garden relishes.

Some homemakers quake like jelly itself when it comes to unmolding a gelatin salad. Actually there is nothing to it if you observe these simple rules:

1. Lightly oil the inside surface of the mold before filling it.

2. On removal from the refrigerator, carefully run a thin knife around between the inside edge of the container and the outside edge of the salad.

3. Center a serving dish or platter over the mold. Hold dish and mold firmly together. Invert quickly, give a little shake, then carefully lift off the mold.

Tuna Turn-Out

This creamy mold is quick to make. The tuna gives it wonderful flavor. The celery and green pepper supply built-in crunch.

2 Cans (7 ounces each) solid pack tuna, 2 envelopes unflavored gelatin, ½ cup cold water, 2 cups dairy sour cream, ¼ cup catsup, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 cup chopped green pepper, 1 cup chopped celery.

Drain tuna; dice coarsely. Soften gelatin in cold water. Dissolve over boiling water. Combine sour cream, catsup, salt, green pepper, and celery. Stir in tuna and dissolved gelatin. Pour into a lightly oiled 4-cup mold. Chill until firm. Unmold and garnish to taste. Makes 8 servings.

Shrimp-Grapefruit Mold

Shrimp-Grapefruit Mold is a very cool, refreshing salad. As a hot-weather dish it is tops.

1 Cup de-veined cooked or canned shrimp, 1 envelope unflavored gelatin, 1 tablespoon sugar, ½ cup cold water, 1 can (15 ounces) grapefruit sections, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, ½ cup finely diced cucumber, salad greens.

If shrimp are large, chop coarsely. Mix gelatin and sugar in a small saucepan. Add water; allow gelatin to soak for several minutes. Dissolve over low direct heat, stirring constantly. Drain grapefruit sections, reserving juice. Combine grapefruit juice, lemon juice, and dissolved gelatin in a large bowl. Chill until the consistency of unbeaten egg white. Stir in shrimp, grapefruit sections, and cucumber. Mix well. Spoon into a lightly oiled, 4-cup mold. Chill until firm. Unmold and garnish with greens. Makes 6 servings.

1,000 Lunch box sandwiches

(Consumer Section)

We don't want to be spoil-sports but summer days are getting shorter. This can only mean the end of bachelor days for many husbands, back to school for the small fry and — as one good wife and mother reminds us — it's back to making sandwiches for her "lunch bag brigade".

This particular lady laughingly told the Consumer Section that she made 1,000 lunch box sandwiches last year and she was in no doubt of having to do the same this coming school year.

Her husband, who is a teacher, takes one full sandwich a day, five days a week, in his lunch box. Her sons carry two each in theirs. That is, five sandwiches a day, 25 a week for an average of 40 weeks a year — making 1,000 lunch box sandwiches! Does she find the preparation a tedious job? Not at all. The lucky lady has a freezer unit in her refrigerator which stays at a fairly constant zero degrees. So every two weeks she buys 5 (24 ounce) loaves of fresh bread sliced ¼-inch thick. This gives her approximately 100 slices of bread or enough for 50-full-sized sandwiches for freezing a two weeks supply.

To butter the bread she softens and creams a scant ½ pound of butter. She then prepares five different fillings, one for each loaf. She finds she uses about 2½ cups of prepared fillings made from meat, poultry and fish; about 5 or 6 ounces of fillings with cheese or peanut butter base. She varies the ingredients in these basic mixtures and has gotten a bevy of ideas from "The Art of Making Sandwiches", a free booklet available from Information Division, Canada Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

All five loaves of bread are made up and frozen the day they are bought to insure freshness. Once the butter and fillings are prepared it takes her less than an hour to complete the operation for she works on an assembly line basis — buttering and filling 10 slices at a time.

As each loaf is finished, she wraps the sandwiches in plastic bags — two of a kind to a bag for the boys, one of a kind for her husband. Each bag is labelled and tightly closed to prevent drying out. Incidentally, she leaves crusts on, does not cut the sandwiches, and places them in the freezer as soon as wrapped.

These lunch sandwiches are popped into the lunch boxes at the last minute before leaving the house. They are thawed but still cool and fresh come noon hour. Her "boys" fill in their own lunches with fruit and vegetables and a treat. They buy only their milk.

This then is the story of daily lunch boxes made easy. Has it a moral for you?

BEHIND TIME

Quebec (CP) — The Quebec Federation of Astronomy, grouping various astronomy clubs, says study of the science is 50 years behind time in Quebec. But it could catch up within two or three years if money was available, says the Federation secretary, Paul Nadeau.

Daughter of Baronet

Sarah Johnson, 19, from London, England, is tracing the steps of her forefathers on a summer job in Canada. She is the daughter of Sir John Johnson, sixth baronet, who officiated at the opening ceremonies of Upper Canada Village and then visited the County of Argenteuil. Sarah has a job at Old Fort York at Kingston, as a guide.

Specially Written for The Lachute Watchman

By Deirdre Mungovan, Canadian Press Staff Writer

While Marguerite Gillis was travelling through British Columbia she wrote to her son: "If my heart appears to be sunburnt when I get home it is because it has been sitting on the tip of my tongue for days."

Her descriptions of her travels across Canada during the past three years range from listening to radio messages from ocean vessels while staying in a Cape Breton lighthouse to the 193-mile B.C. Big Bend road which winds around unguarded 4,000 foot drops.

Mrs. Gillis chooses and trains field personnel for a market research organization. She has logged 25,000 miles by car and 11,000 by air during her stay with the company.

Her varied career, apart from raising two children and helping to raise three others, has taken her into such fields as organizing the first Ranger Company of Girl Guides in Northern Ontario, establishing the Business and Professional Women's Club at Kirkland Lake, heading women's ready-to-wear shops and a cosmetics firm. Fashion shows and public speaking ventures are also part of bilingual Mrs. Gillis' career.

Cheddar Cheese

Food specialists at Macdonald Institute, Guelph, say Ontario cheddar cheese supplies high quality protein at low cost. It is always a good buy because of its flavor and food value.

Cheese should be served at room temperature since it will have a better texture and more aroma than if chilled. When storing in the refrigerator, wrap the exposed area with transparent film or waxed paper.

Mold isn't dangerous. Just scrape it off and coninue to use the cheese. You can freeze pieces of cheese, not over one pound. Thaw slowly in the refrigerator before eating. Don't freeze cheese spreads.

High temperatures while cooking will toughen the cheese. Heat in a double broiler or oven poach for baking purposes.

Plant Confusion

The International Plant Index has a formidable task in standardizing the wide variety of names for the same plants. Because both amateurs and professionals are sometimes confused, an automatic compilation will establish one master index of the world's plants which are estimated at 1,700,000. It will be done by group, family, genus and species names.

When the coded facts are compiled on punched cards — so far 50,000 cards have been completed on the group level — the index will be published in some 50 volumes as a master reference.

Sydney W. Gould, IPI director, and his staff estimate that this indexing would take 50 persons 10 years to complete without the aid of automatic data processing equipment. Now it should be finished by a staff of six within five years.

The research is supported by a grant from the National Science Foundation in the U.S. and sponsored by the New York Botanical Garden and the Connecticut Agricultural Experiment Station in New Haven.

FUTURE MOTORISTS

The boys and girls riding bicycles now will be automobile drivers in the near future. We know of no better way of learning highway safety and observance of traffic rules than to start right now. Remember, these rules were made for the safety of everyone who uses the highways, motorist, cyclist and pedestrian. If everyone observed the rules we could avoid thousands of highway deaths every year.

After discussion on misuse of the garbage grounds, it was ruled that Lucien Bellefeuille be the only person allowed access to this dump; that anyone else desiring to use it must first obtain a permit from the town or police office; and that a record be kept of all permits so given.

Sidewalk Construction

It was agreed to have the school entry constructed, in accordance with a request from the Protestant School Commission (costs to be borne by the said body), and also to lay a sidewalk, 4 feet wide instead of 3 feet, on Bellingham Street.

Filtration Project

With regard to the filtration project, it was voted to sign a contract with Francis Hankin & Co. Ltd. (subject to proper financing and legal formalities) for the amount of their tender, $118,767.00, less a sum of $5,500 — or $113,267.00 net.

(This tender was understated as $108,000.00 in last week's issue. That of Hydro-Dynamics, $112,000.00, was also misreported as $102,000.00).

The town engineers were authorized, at this stage, to present plans of the proposed filtration plant tc the Department of Health for approval.

It was further agreed that all tenders for the filtration job be made by invitation, and by advertising in the two local papers and in the Daily Commercial News.

To Avert Disturbance

On motion of Ald. Nelson Lepage, seconded by Ald. Dr. J. P. Dorion, the Chief of Police was asked to communicate with the Bishop's See at St. Jerome with regard to the J.O.C. pilgrimage August 12, so as to avoid unnecessary noise and use of loudspeakers during the early hours in Lachute — and the police were instructed to see that these recommendations be observed.

Police Contract

Mr. Phillips, of the Phillips Investigation Bureau, was asked to submit a schedule and plan of police duty, and to prepare for the next meeting another contract employing fewer men.

The remainder of this adjourned meeting was occupied with minor matters.

Contract for land clearing, Hydro area Ontario side

A contract for clearing 1,500 acres of land which will be flooded by the Carillon power development, has been awarded to C. Castonguay and M. Philips of Hawkesbury.

Ontario Hydro announced last week that the contract calls for clearing of land along the Ontario bank of the Ottawa River from the Carillon dam up to and including parts of the Town of Hawkesbury.

Harry Hustler, Hydro's Director of Property, said that men from Hawkesbury and the immediate district will be employed to the greatest possible extent.

Castonguay and Philips submitted the low bid of less than $145,000. Next was $162,500 by Guibeault, Larocque and Company of Hawkesbury, which was followed by Arnold Farms Ltd., of Grenville, Que., with $191.000.

Work is scheduled to be completed by December 1.

Holiday drawing at Main St. store Saturday, Aug. 26

At 6 p.m. on Saturday of next week, August 26, the "Trip to New York" winner will be decided at the store of Bernard Florist, Main Street. This contest has been featured in The Watchman and L'Argenteuil, by co-operation of the Chamber of Commerce, over the past three weeks and will conclude at noon on Saturday, when merchants will turn in their boxes with entry coupons.

At Bernard Florist (the store selected for conclusion of this contest), the Mayor and Chamber of Commerce representatives will be guests of honor, and will draw coupons for the top award and two additional cash prizes.

There is still time for shoppers to increase their chances, with over a week remaining to get more coupons in the boxes. Regulations of the contest have been generally publicized. To conform with requirements, the winners will be asked to reply correctly to a simple question.

Pair apprehended after escapade of auto thefts

Two Mont Laurier men are scheduled to appear in St. Jerome court this week on charges of car theft. Arrested in Cap de la Madeleine were Jacques Goudreault and Jacques Matte, both 21.

According to Cpl. Aimé Bertrand, officer in charge of Provincial Police here, the two young men stole a car in Mont Laurier, abandoning it in Arundel, where they took a ¾-ton truck belonging to Miller Express. This vehicle was abandoned at La Lorraine Motel in Lachute, where they made off with a 1960-model $8,000 car belonging to an American tourist.

The two men were arrested in Cap de la Madeleine following an accident, in which some $2,000 damage was reported on the latter car.

Cottage blaze started by lightning

A frame summer cottage on the north side of the North River, near the farm of Dr. G. R. McCall, R.R. 3, was destroyed by fire over the week-end. The building was owned by Gerry Trudel and occupied by Albert Campeau, Lachute businessman. According to reports, the initial fire was started by lightning in the storm Saturday evening. Members of the volunteer fire department answered the call and, with the help of neighbors, set up the auxiliary fire pump by the river, extinguishing the flames with relatively little damage to the actual structure, although all contents were destroyed.

Leaving the scene after 11 p.m., four hours after their arrival, firemen received another call at 9.30 Sunday morning and arrived to find the building once more engulfed in flames. Chief Don McCulloch reports that, two hours prior to the morning call, two persons told him there was no evidence of fire — also that, contrary to his suggestion, no one was left on watch to prevent a further outbreak during the night.

The loss is believed to be covered by insurance.

Chief McCulloch would like to express appreciation to all who assisted the firemen on their arrival at the initial fire; without their efforts, nothing would have been saved.

LUCKIEST MAN IN P.E.I. —

Narrowly escaped electrocution, working in P.E.I.

Ronald Clark, 21-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Clark, Upper Lachute, suffered a burned hand and scorched feet on Wednesday afternoon of last week when he survived a 6,900-volt shock as the boom truck he was operating came in contact with a high-voltage line.

A lineman with F. A. Tucker Ltd., Ron was working on the construction of new power lines in Prince Edward Island for Maritime Electric Ltd. The accident occurred on the Sherwood Road, where the construction company is building the new Maritime Electric transmission line from Charlottetown to Searletown.

The electricity entered his body through the hand levers on the truck, and discharged through his feet. He received first-aid treatment at the scene, was taken to the Prince Edward Island Hospital in Charlottetown, and then later transferred by plane to the Montreal General Hospital, where he will undergo further treatment.

In reporting the accident to the Clark family, Mr. Cook, superintendent for F. A. Tucker Ltd., stated, "Ronald was the luckiest man in P.E.I." . . . Friends in this community extend wishes for his speedy recovery.

Pickpockets at highland games

At the Highland Games at Maxville recently, A. Jeffery, of Vankleek Hill, had his pocketbook containing valuable papers and money taken from his pocket.

Officials at the event announced over the loudspeakers that pickpockets were busy, after several had reported that their wallets were missing.

The empty pocketbooks are generally thrown along fences or outdoor houses on the grounds and some are found and returned to their owners — minus the money, of course.

Burg steps up speed control; buys garbage removal truck

(Our District Correspondent)

Brownsburg — The agenda for the August session of the Brownsburg Council was a short one, but a few of the problems posed by visitors in attendance caused some long faces and discussions.

Harry White returned to this meeting with a thorny problem which has confronted the town authorities for many months. Construction is well advanced on Mr. White's new home, McVicar Avenue, but he is still without water and sewerage because the town has not had the money to invest in a full-scale project on this street. The problem was partially solved by an agreement to run a water line some 50 feet from the nearest valve, behind the school. The sewerage question is still open and it remains for Mayor René Lafleur to come up with a solution.

Mr. White raised another interesting point (and some eyebrows) when he stated that the old McFaul Store property had been sold and that a survey showed that the town had encroached on the property by 5 feet on the front and 4 feet on the Maple Avenue side. This situation conjures up all sorts of humorous possibilities, but it will probably be settled as quickly and quietly as possible.

With Police Chief Boutet on leave for five days, Constable Rolland Lepine presented a report, which indicated that the members of the police department were on their toes once more. Thirty-eight traffic warnings were issued, along with 16 parking tickets and 48 speeding tickets. Since the radar speed-control equipment was installed, an improvement in traffic control has been observed. There remains much to be done to establish Brownsburg as a town where speeding is not tolerated, but the 48 fines issued this month have served to reduce the average speed of autos coming into and leaving town. Once the reputation is earned, all that is required is to catch those drivers who continue to defy the laws which were instituted to protect the citizens of this town. When individuals see that the town authorities are making an enthusiastic and honest effort to control the speed, yet choose to ignore the law and run the risk of maiming or killing someone, they must be hit, and hit hard.

The big financial event of the evening was the purchase of a $10,600 "Sani Van" garbage truck. This unit compresses the garbage as it is picked up, thereby increasing the capacity of the truck. Council hopes to save money in the long run by cutting down on the number of trips to the dump, and also by reducing the number of operators by one.

Exhibition of handicraft

Mme Ernest Villemaire, seen above with her loom, has an exhibition of handicrafts presently on display at the Art Centre, Main Street, Lachute (Rio Building). Mme Villemaire has a diploma in crafts from l'Institut Familial, Montebello. The exhibit remains on view each evening from 7.30 to 9.30 until Saturday, and also on Wednesday next from 2 to 4 p.m.

Caught with goods, jewellery valued at $3,900 stolen in Hawkesbury, Ont.

Léon Bédard, 31-year-old Hawkesbury resident, was arrested by Lachute police following a tip received from a district resident. The incident occurred on Wednesday afternoon of last week, when a phone call was received at police headquarters informing police the Grenville taxi was leaving a man at a Lachute taxi-stand, and that the man had a considerable amount of jewellery in a paper bag.

Two constables were sent to await arrival of the Montreal-bound man, and took him to the police station for questioning. There it was discovered he had possession of eight men's watches, ten ladies' watches, a total of 47 rings, including wedding bands, nine necklaces and 11 bracelets.

Hawkesbury police were notified of the arrest, as they had previously informed local headquarters of the robbery, and Hawkesbury Chief Villeneuve sent an officer to transfer the man to Hawkesbury. Chief Villeneuve reported that the haul, which was made several days before Bedard's arrest, amounted to $3,900 in jewellery.

Topic heard at Rotary Club

At the August 10 meeting of the Brownsburg-Lachute Rotary Club, Vice-President Jack MacKimmie occupied the chair in the absence of President Art Lapp. King Amos was awarded his seven-year perfect attendance pin, and Edgar Pollock was presented with his 11-year perfect attendance pin.

Guest speaker for the meeting was Ed Glocaw, of the Dale Carnegie Institute. His topic was "How to correctly introduce and thank a speaker". He stated that invariably most people do not know the proper procedure for introduction of a speaker, that people are shy, or haven't had sufficient practice in doing so. He then gave an example of how, with the help of enthusiasm, such things are done so much better, especially Public Speaking.

Mr. Glocaw then dealt with the matter of thanking a speaker. This was a more difficult task, he said, because the line of thought has to be developed while the guest is actually talking. Mr. Glocaw's remarks proved beneficial to many of his listeners and his talk was enjoyed by all present.

MUNICIPAL SURPLUS, YEAR'S OPERATIONS —

Chatham refuses land for dumpsite

Among matters of wider interest at the Chatham Council meeting, under chairmanship of Mayor Roméo Foucault, was a refusal to allow Lachute Town to use land for garbage disposal on the farm of Elvine Prophet. . . . Motion to this effect was given by Coun. Wm. Morrow, seconded by Coun. Adam Meyer.

Councillors gave notice of motion for by-laws concerning the Mountain Lakes Road (near Dalesville) and the Giroux-Hutt branch of the Robert water course.

It was resolved to write the Department of Roads requesting the widening and re-inforcing of the Centerville road at Burke's Gulley.

It was decided also to write Clément Caron, engineer of the Roads Department, to remake a ditch on the Bryerton montee; and the Minister of Public Works to request assistance with the repairing of the Patry bridge and the Morrison bridge in this municipality.

Municipality Reports Surplus

A financial statement for the year 1960, audited and verified by Roland A. Morin, C.A., shows a surplus of revenues over expenditures to the amount of $1,605.

Receipts for the 12-month period were $47,196.74; expenditures, $45,591.26.

Items notable in the year's expenditures are $10,211.69 for road maintenance; $18,449.63 for winter roads; $1,695 for fire protection services; $8,855.99 for public charity.

Items in the revenue account include $28,574.41 in general taxes; $850, business tax; $34.02, amusement tax; $10, fines. There is an amount of $15,322 received as a provincial grant.

Capital Account

The capital account shows capital assets of $15,730.70 and waterworks $294,000. Liabilities include $243,000 debentures for waterworks (by-law 85) and $51,000 debentures incurred on by-law 96.

Hawkesb'y marks arrival of gas

Hawkesbury celebrated the arrival of natural gas with gift pancakes, steaks and 10-gallon hats, reports the Eastern Ontario Review.

Munching on the Western-style pancakes and steaks, and outfitted in the Western hats, were members of the town council led by Reeve Victor Bruneau and assembled guests at a pre-ceremony breakfast.

At the opening ceremonies, the Consumers Gas Company president, Oakah L. Jones promised his company would seek new industries for Hawkesbury, and offered to pay expenses of council members on trips in search of industry. He said there are now 25,000 gas consumers in the Hawkesbury area.

Osie F. Villeneuve, M.P., and Louis Cecile, M.P.A., took part in the ceremonies.

To St. Johns, Que., for two weeks' training

Thirty-odd boys of the Ayersville Air Cadet Squadron 648 left Sunday morning for two weeks' summer training at the St. Johns, Que., R.C.A.F. base. The photo was taken on their departure. At the extreme right is Mr. Gabriel Downing, civilian instructor, who accompanied the group. Already at the camp are Paul-Emile Barbeau and Edouard Lajoie, officers of the squadron, who will greet the party on their arrival.

ANNUAL FIELD DAY —

Richelieu event, harness racing this Saturday

On the program this Saturday, weather permitting, is the annual racing event at the Exhibition Grounds, sponsored by the Richelieu Club. This is the club's seventh successive effort of its kind. Profits this year will be devoted to the park and swimming pool which represent the club's major project at this time.

Roger Martel, organizer of this afternoon attraction, states he has received entries from Morin Heights, Grenville, Curran, Vankleek Hill, St. Jerome, Hawkesbury, St. Paul l'Hermite, Valleyfield and stables in this immediate area. The first heat starts at 2 p.m., and keen rivalry is in evidence for the laurels and the prize money.

A highlight of the occasion will be the drawing for an automatic washer and dryer (supplied by courtesy of J. W. Lefebvre Ltée) and the awarding of two bicycles as door prizes.

Through co-operation of J. René Laurin and Dow Breweries Ltd., the celebrated sports commentator Michel Normandin will be on hand to liven the proceedings.

Former M.P. remanded for bribery hearing

Ottawa (CP) — Raymond Bruneau, 44, a former Liberal member of Parliament, was remanded to August 28 for preliminary hearing on a charge of corruption arising out of the Federal Government.

The former M.P., for Glengarry-Prescott appeared in court with Abbe Bergeron, 45, of Cornwall, Ont., a service station operator who is alleged to have given Mr. Bruneau a $10,000 bribe. Preliminary hearing will begin August 25 in the Bergeron case.

The crown alleges Mr. Bruneau accepted the money "to corruptly use his influence as a member of Parliament of Canada" when a Hawkesbury service station was purchased by the Government as a post-office site.

Mr. Bruneau was an M.P. between 1949 and 1957.

Mr. Bergeron was part owner of a service station that was bought by the Government for $18,000. The building was demolished and a $170,000 post-office building erected in 1957.

— By BOB ATCHISON —

Manitoba has passed a law that all big game hunters must wear white. For the past few years they have been experimenting with various combinations of colors including the red-and-white barber pole. They are continuing the search for safe garments for hunters, but in the meantime have decided on the white. This law has been worded in such a manner that, if some other combination comes up that may be better, then it can be switched to take care of these. With the numbers of fatalities in the bush among hunters in Quebec, AND the widest publicity given to this slaughter, you would think this province would have come up with a remedy. They may have, but maybe it's a secret.

Driving towards Sir John Lake this week, I was pleased at the number of Ring Neck pheasants to be seen on and along the road. Conditions must have been excellent for them last winter; I have never before seen more than a few at any time around this area. Let's hope they all have BIG families. It would be nice to have these birds around in numbers.

The partridge do not seem to be very profuse, but then they are exceptionally hard to spot in the summer. I have also noticed a good number of Mourning Doves, and maybe we are going to have them with us for a few more years. Ducks can be seen on the North River in good numbers, and along with their young, it seems the ducks are finally getting a break from Nature. Mallards are the most in evidence, but Blacks are not far behind. We also saw a couple of Blue Wing Teal.

You know I often talk of dogs running loose in the woods. It seems the State of Maine has this problem in a big way. Dogs have mated with coyotes and such, with the result, a breed of animal is now roaming the woods that is more vicious than even the wolf. A dog that has run wild is much more bloodthirsty than anything I know of. You see, the dog has been in contact with humans and is not afraid of them. . . . Let's hope we don't have this trouble for our game in the near future. It may seem strange to people, but even the house cat is wicked after it has run loose, worse than the wildcat, or bobcat.

Some of you may have noticed an ad in a Montreal paper for camp stoves that were almost the same as some of our famous brands. I know personally of one case where this same stove is going back for a credit on one of our Canadian stoves. This particular one has no air vent in the handle, making it very hard to pump air into the chamber; thus the flame is very slow. On top of this, the amount of naptha gas used is just about double of the Coleman stoves. These stoves on sale were Japanese, and it sure looks as though any article being sent onto the Canadian market is just about the same. We all know how they copied the Mitchel reels almost to the detail, BUT NOT the materials. Maybe we think of bargains too much, and seem to forget the workmanship and quality. This applies to almost everything being bought today.

Fishing has not been very good. I have not heard of any good catches being taken this past week. The weather has been blamed, but more to be blamed than this has been the heavy rains washing all kinds of food into the lakes and streams. Even the streams have not produced to any degree.

The moose that we have had in the district this past couple of years are still here, according to reports I have heard. There was one young one sighted too, so before too long we may have a number of them around our county. All kinds of deer can be seen, if people take time and trouble to look for them. Even our lynx are multiplying, but I don't think enough to make them a menace. I was told of a couple seeing a family playing right beside their summer cottage, above Long Lake.

Now a little story of a couple of HARDY sports who went camping for a few days this past week. They had just got themselves a new tent (along with a stove mentioned previously). They started out with just a trace of rain in the air, but before they got to their site, it was raining cats and dogs. Getting the tent up would be no picnic and they were wet, cold, and miserable too. At any rate they had a feed of cold beans before going to bed without sleeping bags. Travelling light, it's called. But for this couple — travelling heavy is the order now. At any rate around 4 a.m. they woke up very cold and damp. Starting the stove (or trying to) warmed them up a lot, but just as soon as they quit pumping the stove went out. This kept up even to breakfast. What they had for breakfast I don't know, but I've a sneaky idea it was cold beans again. Anyway they came home at noon the next day, and from the looks of things, a lot of care and equipment is going to be taken along the next time. Incidentally, one of them is just a shade worried about bears.

Canaries are in the news again. A reader phoned Saturday to tell me there must be around 100 of these little birds around his home. He hangs his pet canary outdoors when it is warm, and its singing seems to attract the wild ones. He was telling me some of them are about the size of a very small wren, and the most beautiful shades of yellow he has ever seen. There are also a couple that have orange alongside the wing, with a black stripe alongside this. I haven't any idea of what this could be, so maybe our readers could tell us — if so, give me a call. I haven't noticed too many Red Wings so far — none comparable to the numbers of last year.

The starlings are as usual making pests of themselves. I almost forgot this story. It seems while we were in Labrador my brother and his family used the house on the odd week-end. On one of these occasions a lot of noise was heard; the brother blamed the two boys for making it, but on investigation they were asleep. At any rate, the noise kept up all night. The next morning bright and early they started looking; finally, going up into the attic, they found starlings by the hundreds up there. Now, you can imagine catching these birds and heaving them out into the air! I sure got a laugh; his wife said he looked as though he had been white-washed!

My brother and family spent their vacation around Vermont, and he was telling me of the wonderful camping sites all over the state. There are also fishing right-of-ways for all fishermen. It seems the State purchases an area of land fronting on water, and makes it available to all boating and camping enthusiasts at no charge. Even the water's edge is cleared of rocks, and car ports erected for cars. . . . This sure makes you wonder just what THIS province had been doing for the past twenty years!

Bourgoing wins tennis singles consolation event

Jacques Bourgoing, local tennis star who lost to Jan Nordstrom in the recent provincial singles championship, won the men's consolation singles last Saturday at Monkland courts.

Bourgoing defeated J. C. Brodeur 6-0, 1-6, 6-3; then defeated V. Mizrahi 6-4, 0-6, 6-4 in the first rounds.

In the semi-finals Bourgoing took the honors 6-4, 6-3 against D. Robertson.

I LOVE AIRLINE STEWARDESSES

Girls who get turned down when they apply for jobs with CPA or TCA as air stewardesses speak of having been given their "ugly papers." There is an idea abroad that a "broad" must be a broad and also curvy, to land these cherished jobs.

I am now an expert on the subject. I don't travel by air too often, but I have made a special point of studying the airline hostess situation. (I had an aisle seat last trip, and I recommend that location to any gent planning similar research.)

I grant you there are no ugly stewardesses, but they are not raving beauties, either. I have known a few real peaches who were turned down; I have known some medium-attractive girls who were hired.

The point I am trying to get to is that I have never yet run across an airline hostess who wasn't bright, friendly, courteous and capable. It seems to me that whoever handles personnel selection for Canada's two great airlines ought to get a medal. They do a superb job. It would be interesting to know how they manage to select so many fine, even-tempered girls, who are so completely impartial in the manner in which they serve passengers.

It doesn't matter whether you are a homely old coot or an attractive young bachelor type — the girls treat you as if you were Lothario himself. Women travelling with a couple of youngsters find that the air hostesses are ministering angels. All this courtesy is provided without benefit of tips — and the fact that there is no tipping may even have a good deal to do with the consistent quality of the service.

In short, I love airline stewardesses. I don't mind them being quite good looking, but I don't think looks have much to do with their popularity. It is more a question of attitude and character and courtesy. I confess that I am a rather attractive male, in spite of thinning hair, receding chin, a rather prominent Adam's apple, and a few other minor flaws, but I get no special treatment. Everybody gets the same deal . . . warmth, courtesy, attention, helpfulness.

I'd better stop now. I am starting to get really excited about this subject, and my wife always reads this column. So I think I'll just wind up by saying that my wife would certainly make a fine airline stewardess!

Scored high in smallbore rifle matches

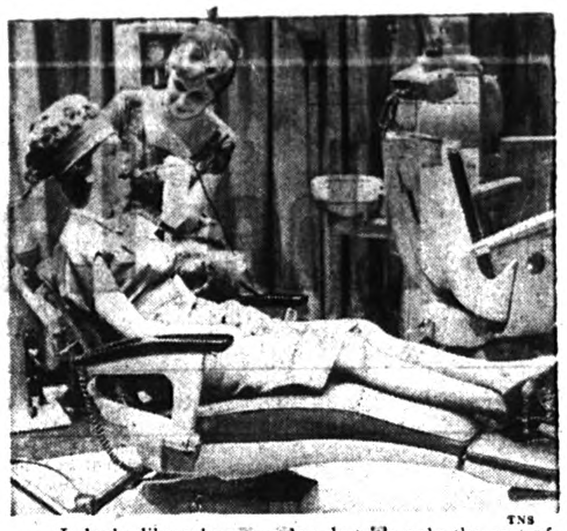

A former Lachute boy, A. R. (Bob) Todd, now local sales manager for Ammunition Division of the C-I-L at Winnipeg, starred in the National Smallbore Rifle Matches, conducted by the Canadian Civilian Association of Marksmen at Connaught Ranges, Ottawa, August 4 to 6 inclusive. Shooters from all provinces attended, to a total of 75.

In these matches shooters compete in classes, Master, Expert, Sharpshooter, and Marksman, according to their recorded ability. Matches are fired half at 50 yards, half at 100 yards, with one half of the total open to telescopic sights and the remainder open to peep sights only.

The top 20 Canadian shooters, selected from the aggregate score of the peep sight matches, form the Canadian International Dewar team, which competes in a pistol match consisting of 20 shots at 100 yards and 20 shots at 50 yards entered into by all the English-speaking nations of the world.

Bob Todd placed third in two of the regular matches, was runner-up in Canadian Closed Championship (by 2 points), and came second high on the Dewar team.

The champion is Olympic and Bisley team member Edson Warner, of Lennoxville, Que., and high scorer on the Dewar team was Gilmour S. Boa, world champion and also a member of Canadian Olympic and Bisley teams.

Fishing Assocn. directors meet

The executive of the Argenteuil Fishing Association met last week to discuss their program for the remainder of the season.

Two fishing derbies have been held so far this year, and other activities are in view.

The third fishing contest is planned for September 17 at Lac Commandant.

All interested in linking up with this sporting group are asked to call LO 2-2256 or LO 2-5356, or contact any active member.

Bent rim or wheel can ruin a tire

The life of an automobile tire can be considerably shortened and danger to the car and its occupants increased by a bent or dented wheel or rim. Adding to this peril is the fact that rim and wheel damage is not easily noticed. The Canadian Highway Safety Council joins with the Rubber Association of Canada to urge motorists to make regular inspections of rims and wheels. It takes but a few minutes and could save a life.

The vital importance of a car wheel, the contact between car and road, is evident. A bent wheel wobbles as it turns, twists and wrings the rubber and wears the tire unevenly. This will destroy the tire. Wheels can be bent by driving in ruts, swerving heavily against curbs, or in accidents.

Driving against a curb can bend a rim. The tire's bead moves a little at every turn of the wheel and in time the tire will chafe through and fail at that point. Rust can pit a rim where the tire fits on it, causing leaks with tubeless tires. Rusted rims should be cleaned and polished to remove the scale and restore a smooth surface.

Reunion held by Northward baseballers

Gordie Perry came down from Ottawa, while Freddie Gibson and Owen Griffith were here from Hartford, Conn.

Max Statkoff, who organized the motorcade which started at Rockland Shopping Centre, led Evan Cass, Jack Griffin, Honore Sosa, Norman Ellard, Alfie Heffernan and Eddie Doray up from Montreal. Most of the players brought their wives along. A special and surprise guest was Reg Thomas, former Physical Director at North Branch Y.M.C.A.

The boys tendered a gift of luggage to Mr. and Mrs. Watson to mark the occasion.

Carol Lee Chapman of New Westminster, B.C., was awarded $125,000 damages in a suit launched after she suffered critical burns three years ago when a grass skirt exploded in flames in Honolulu. She is shown with the telegram notifying her that her suit against the operators of a gift shop was successful.

Quebec education allowance to aid 75,000 16-17-year-old school students

Quebec (CP) — Emilien Lafrance, Minister of Social and Family Welfare, said last Thursday, that the $10 monthly allowance to mothers of 16-17-year-old students will not be taxable in any way, and will be paid on the first of each month from September through June.

He said the allowance will probably increase school attendance by about 20 percent in that age bracket. Parents of children 15 years and eight months old will be able to apply for coverage by the allowance.

However, to collect the allocations, students will have to attend school at least 80 percent of the time.

Students will be permitted to absent themselves for reasons of sickness, death of a member of the family, temporary closing of the school by competent authorities, and moving.

Mr. Lafrance said that schools included under this legislation — passed during the last session — are educational institutions established under the laws of the province, or recognized by school commissions. The schools must operate at least six months a year, offer 20 hours of classes a week, and have at least 12 days of classes each month.

Mr. Lafrance added that the government plans to slowly take over from the Federal Government the task of distributing some kinds of social welfare allowances.

Speaking at a press conference, Mr. Lafrance said the government's plan to make the $10 monthly allowance is one step in the direction of provincial autonomy in Social Welfare matters. This allowance would entail additional expenditures of about $7,500,000, and will help about 75,000 students.

High productivity and low production costs are essential to profitable farming. Neither can be attained by using old-fashioned methods and obsolete machinery. The only way they can be achieved is by utilizing modern methods and up-to-date farm machinery.
Massey-Ferguson machines and implements are helping farmers the world over to make their particular farming operation more profitable by doing more work at less cost.

Mr. Merchant, does this mean YOU?

Merchants who do not advertise are invited to read the following from the American Bankers' Magazine, as it might give them a new slant on business, your own business, as well as the matter of building up your town:

- "No business man in any town should allow a newspaper published in in its columns.
- "The life of a town depends on the live, wide-awake and liberal his town to go without his name and business being mentioned somewhere
- "This does not mean you should have a whole, half, or even a quarter page ad, in each issue of the paper, but your name and business should be mentioned.
- "A stranger picking up a newspaper should be able to tell what business is represented in a town by looking at the paper. This is the best possible town advertiser.
- "The man who does not advertise does an injustice to himself and the town. The man who insists on sharing the business that comes to town, but refuses to advertise his own is not a valuable addition to any town. advertising business men."

CARPENTER — In loving memory of a dear wife, mother and grandmother, Margaret Leith, who passed away Aug. 15, 1960. — Ever loved and remembered by husband Russell, daughters Elsie, Edna, and son Harry.

"One lonely year has passed away
Since our great sorrow fell;
The shock that we received that day
We still remember well.
We never knew what pain you bore,
We did not see you die;
We only know you passed away
And could not say Goodbye."

MacTAVISH — In loving memory of a dear son and brother, William Richard MacTavish, accidentally drowned Aug. 17, 1958. — Sadly missed by Mother and brothers, Duncan and Carlyle.

"It is three long years ago today
Since our loved one was called home to stay,
It is hard to part with those you love,
With one so kind and true.
It was hard to part with many a one,
But is was harder to part with you,
dear son."

MacTAVISH — In loving memory of a dear brother and brother-in-law, Richard, who passed away Aug. 17, 1958. — Always remembered by Elsie and Coral.

"Gone is the face we loved so dear,
Silent is the voice we loved to hear,
Too far away for sight or speech,
But not too far for thought to reach.
Sweet to remember him who once was here,
Who, though absent, is just as dear."

MacTAVISH — In loving memory of our dear Uncle Pat, who passed away Aug. 17, 1958. — Always remembered by Grant and Gilbert.

Power Failure — but Church Social Continues

The ice cream social and sale of home-cooking, held in St. Mungo's Church Hall on Saturday night, could well be classed as a candlelight social, due to the fact that candles had to be used for lighting during the greater part of the evening. An electric storm accompanied by high wind put the lighting system for the vicinity out of operation, as well as some telephones. This is the third similar experience in recent years at St. Mungo's Church summer social.

Mr. and Mrs. D. Neafssey are visiting friends in Toronto this week.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Thom left Friday for Collingwood, Ont., to visit friends.

Mr. Jonathan Wood and Mr. Leslie Kerr returned recently from a motor trip to Portland, Me., and Boston, Mass.

The Rev. F. Swackhammer, of Oshawa, Ont., will conduct next Sunday's service in the Rivington Baptist Church.

Quite a quantity of pulpwood has floated down the Rouge River these last few days.

CNIB campaigns in district this month

The annual campaigns for the Canadian National Institute for the Blind have commenced in the following areas: Chatham, under the chairmanship of Reg Morrow; Morin Heights, under the joint chairmanship of Gordon Allen and I. Allard; and Arundel, in charge of Mrs. Gordon Cooke.

On Monday, August 21, a campaign will be held in Huberdeau under chairmanship of Ernest Sarrazin; and on August 28, Wentworth (chairman, Clarence Neill) and Wentworth North (J. Edmond Laramée).

Your contribution will help many children in the County who are suffering with eye defects. Some may have their vision completely restored through your generosity to the C.N.I.B. Others whose vision is below par will enter special schools, where Home Teachers will give instruction in Braille and in handicrafts.

In view of the heavy financial demand made upon the Institute, it is sincerely hoped that readers will be as generous as possible when the volunteer canvassers call in their community.

Vows pledged recently at St. Simeon's Anglican Church

Girling-Collins

A double-ring ceremony was solemnized Saturday, July 15, at 3 p.m. in St. Simeon's Anglican Church, when the Rev. Cyrus R. Lang united in marriage Miss Beverley Ann Collins, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Collins, and Mr. Bryan David Girling, only son of Mr. and Mrs. James Girling, all of Lachute. The organist was Mrs W. C. LeCras and Mrs. Arnold Parker, as soloist, sang "O Perfect Love" during the signing of the register. The church was decorated with baskets of pink gladioli and white chrysanthemums, with white satin bows on the pews. The altar flowers were vases of white and pink carnations.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length portrait gown of lace over satin, the full bouffant skirt having a front panel of pleated nylon tulle ornamented with floral clusters of seed pearls and iridescent sequins. The fitted bodice and scalloped neckline were similarly trimmed. The long fitted sleeves ended in lily points over the hands. Her veil of imported silk illusion was held in place by a double crown tiara of seed pearls and iridescent sequins. She carried a cascade bouquet of red roses, stephanotis and baby's breath, and her single strand of cultured pearls was a gift from the groom.

Miss Gwen Collins, sister of the bride, as maid of honor, Miss Ruth Silverson, of Lachute, and Miss Edna Gay, of Buckingham, as bridesmaids, wore identical gowns of silk organza over taffeta with matching-colored shoes and picture hats of imported silk illusion, Miss Collins being in mint green and the bridesmaids in lilac. They wore white gloves and carried Colonial bouquets of white carnations and pink Delight roses.

Miss Kathi Milnes, as flower girl, wore a mint green nylon dress, a white flowered headband, shoes and gloves. She carried a Colonial bouquet of white pompoms and pink Delight roses.

Mr. Gerald Tomalty, of Brownsburg, acted as best man, and the ushers were Mr. Angus Cleary, of Louisa, and Mr. Ted Smalley, of Verdun.

Mrs. Collins, mother of the bride, wore a gown of brocaded satin in a pale green shade, with beige accessories, and a corsage of pink roses. Mrs. Girling, mother of the groom, wore a figured crepe gown in a plum shade, with lilac and white accessories and a corsage of red carnations.

After the ceremony, a reception was held at the Masonic Hall, Brownsburg Road. Following the reception, Mr. and Mrs. Girling left by train for Lake Louise and Banff. For travelling the bride wore a light blue embossed bengaline sheath with beige accessories and a corsage of white mums.

Out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hughes, of Grimsby, Ont., Mr. and Mrs. Ted Smalley, of Verdun, Que., Mrs. M. Melvin, of Valois, Que., Mr. and Mrs. Keith Dawson, of Montreal, Mrs. Mary Goddard, of Ottawa, Mr. and Mrs. Orlanda Bourgeault, of Cyrville, Ont.

Showers for the bride were given by Miss Florence McGill and Miss Ruth Silverson.

Mr. Daniel Carrière, son of Mr. and Mrs. Léopold Carrière, arrived home last Wednesday from Ghana, where he has spent the past year in the employ of R. T. Briscoe Ghana Ltd., timber exporters, at Sekondi. Daniel, in fine health and fettle, is visiting his parents in Lachute and at their summer home at Lake Louisa, before making further plans.

Other guests of Mr. and Mrs. Carrière at Lake Louisa last week were their daughter (Diane), Mrs. Jacques Ouellette, with her husband and two young sons, of Shawinigan, Que.

Young businessman and bride on extended trip to Europe

Deslauriers-Graham

The marriage of Lynn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Graham, of Toronto, to Mr. Paul Deslauriers, son of Mrs. E. Deslauriers and the late Mr. Deslauriers, of Lachute, took place recently in St. Raphael's Church, Outremont, the Rev. Father John O'Rourke officiating.

The bride, given away by her father, was in a gown of white silk organza over taffeta with a fitted bodice of Chantilly lace and a bouffant skirt. Her shoulder-length veil of tulle illusion was held by a coronet of seed pearls, and she carried a bouquet of white carnations and stephanotis.

Miss Elizabeth Collins, as maid of honor, and Miss Susan Graham, as junior bridesmaid, were in frocks of green poult-de-soie with matching headdresses, and carried Colonial bouquets of yellow roses and white carnations.

Mr. Richard Laplante acted as the best man for Mr. Deslauriers, and the ushers were Mr. Philip Ayers and Mr. David Graham.

Following the reception, which was held at the Mount Stephen Club, Mr. and Mrs. Deslauriers left for an extended trip to Europe.

Among the out-of-town guests were — Mr. and Mrs. Donald Japp, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Hull, and Mr. and Mrs. P. Vellinga, of Toronto; Mr. Sidney Farley, Mr. A. E. Farley, and Mrs. Wallace Crockett, of Ottawa; Mr. and Mrs. R. Ayers, Mr. and Mrs. L. Ayers, Mr. and Mrs. T. Ayers, Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Ayers, and Mr. and Mrs. R. Marcil, of Lachute.

APPRECIATION

My sincere thanks and appreciation to all those who visited me and sent flowers, cards, etc., while I was confined to my home.

Payment-Hay wedding recent ceremony in Lachute

The marriage of Eleanor Elizabeth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Hay, of Lachute, to Arnold J. Payment, son of Mrs. A. J. Payment and the late Mr. Payment, of Cornwall, Ont., took place on Saturday, July 22, at four o'clock in the Margaret Rodger Memorial Presbyterian Church, Lachute. The Rev. James Armour officiated at the double-ring ceremony. Mrs. Wm. Cottingham played the wedding music and the soloist, Mr. Robert Haydon, sang, "The Lord's Prayer" before the ceremony and "All Joy Be Thine" during the signing of the register.

The floral decorations in the church were carried out in standards of white gladioli and pink carnations. White gladioli were used to mark the guest pews.

The bride, given away by her father, wore a floor-length gown of white silk organza with embroidered appliqués on the skirt and around the neckline. The long sleeves ended in points over the hands. Her veil was held in place by a crown of seed pearls and sequins and she carried a bouquet of red roses and white carnations.

Mrs. F. Robert Dance, sister of the bride, as matron of honor, wore a sheath dress of blue embroidered silk organza with organza overskirt of the same color. Her headdress was a small crown covered with matching blue tulle and veil over the face, and she carried a bouquet of white and yellow carnations.

Miss Carol Parker and Miss Dianne Carleton, as bridesmaids, wore identical gowns and headdresses, and carried bouquets of white and yellow Shasta daisies.

Mr. Rodney Fowler acted as best man, and the ushers were Mr. Bruce Hay and Mr. Ronald Payment.

The bride's mother wore a gown of dusty rose silk organza over poult-de-soie, with matching hat of the same material, and a corsage of white roses. Mrs. Payment, mother of the groom, wore a gown of blue lace with white accessories, and a corsage of pink carnations.

The reception was held at the Masonic Hall, where the floral decorations were carried out in pink and white.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Payment left on a motor trip to Detroit, the bride travelling in a navy blue linen suit with white trim, a white hat and accessories, and a white orchid corsage.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Geo. C. Hay, of Kamloops, B.C., Mr. and Mrs. Ken Hay, of Vancouver; a number of friends and relatives from Cornwall and Montreal also attended.

The couple will reside in Renfrew, Ont.

BELL LINES

by Bob Bell, your telephone plant foreman

You probably aren't conscious of it — but chances are you're using your telephone more than you were, say, 10 years ago. How can we tell? Because we're a lot busier here at the telephone company handling your calls. For example, 10 years ago Bell customers made an average of 11,180,000 calls a day. In 1960, we were handling an average of 21,688,000 calls a day throughout our territory — 93% increase! Much of this results from new customers, of course. But quite a bit comes from the fact that you're picking up your phone more often because you can call more people, and more people can call you.

This week I would like you to meet Mrs. R. Barlow and Miss C. Portelance. They handle the clerical operations in the Plant Department, and are now the only remaining women on the Lachute staff.

Mrs. R. Barlow

Miss C. Portelance

The major portion of their work day is spent keeping our subscriber location records up to date. Every time someone moves, a new subscriber wants service, or an old subscriber gives up his service, the Central Office equipment records as well as the outside plant records have to be made up or changed. . . . Regular office duties complete their work days.

Both these local employees have considerable experience in the telephone business and would be happy to discuss telephone matters with you.

While anyone in Lachute and surrounding territory can have a white telephone simply by ordering it from the telephone business office, in Poland it seems a white telephone is a special mark of prestige and honor. We heard a story recently about a director of communications in an unidentified Polish town who received 40 white phones for distribution. Everybody wanted one. The whole town was in an uproar and the director a target for protest. He finally set up a special committee to decide who would get the telephones. All but one of the telephones were placed, and a heated argument is still going on as to who gets the last one.

THE PERFECT SQUELCH

A big-city newspaper sent a reporter and a photographer to cover a banquet given to a retiring Admiral. Only the top-brass of the Navy were invited. Their job completed, the two newsmen retired to the men's room to wash up before leaving for their next assignment. They removed their coats and were using the only two washbasins, when in walked two Admirals replete with medals and gold braid. One said to the other, "I was under the impression that this room was set aside for the use of officers only," giving a dirty look at the two intruders in civilian clothes. "You are quite right, Sir," replied the other. "I was also of the same impression."

The reporter and photographer continued their ablutions without haste, leisurely put on their coats, picked up their equipment and moved towards the door. Just before making their exit, one said to the other: "Snappy looking uniforms they're putting on the washroom attendants nowadays!"

Be seein' ya!

Have You A Question on UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE OR EMPLOYMENT?

In this column we publish questions about unemployment insurance and employment, together with answers received from the Unemployment Insurance Commission.

If you are uncertain about any point do not hesitate to send us your question. We will obtain an answer and publish it in this column.

Q. I did not have much schooling and I find it hard to understand some of the instructions in the booklet "Information for claimants" about declaring my earnings. What can I do?

A. The Unemployment Insurance Commission employees at your local office will be pleased to give you whatever help you need in following the correct procedures. Never hesitate to contact your local office about any point in connection with your claim that is not clear to you.

Q. Is a pregnant woman who has been laid off because of lack of work entitled to unemployment insurance benefit?

A. Women are generally not considered available for work during pregnancy and for some time after confinement. If you are pregnant when filing your application for benefit, or if you become pregnant while claiming benefit, you must advise your local office at once, giving the expected date of confinement. Such information is, of course, kept strictly confidential.

EDITORIAL NOTES...

"In this Parliament are three Estates, the Lords Spiritual, the Lords Temporal and the Commons, but in the Reporters' Gallery yonder sits a Fourth Estate more important far than all."
— Edmund Burke

Punctual and pernicious

SNIFFLING SUSAN, one of the less-prepossessing members of our staff these days, avows that Ragweed, the perennial bane of her existence, comes into bloom without fail on August 15 every year. From then on, in her vicinity and among her immediate associates, misery reigns supreme.

On the chance that Susan may be one day premature in her forecast this year (this is the 16th), we hasten to plead with our readers for the extermination of this weed wherever it flourishes in their surroundings. If they cannot, or dare not, slash the monster with a well-whetted sickle, they might at least intercede with their neighbors, their civic authorities, vacant lot owners, or any whose domain harbours this distressing weed.

Being personally exempt and unaffected by the pollen of Ragweed, it is reasonable to assume we know not of what we write — thank goodness. But in the interests of our fellow creatures, we did recently send a request to the neighboring Council of Chatham, asking them to crop some prolific weeds beside a travelled route in that township. The fact that these were not all of the offending type, is beside the point: the response was electrifying, the weeds were mowed down within a day or two — and we here make public acknowledgment of this service to humanity.

If readers (property holders in particular) would follow this good example, and wage immediate war on the scourge of Ragweed, we are sure that many hayfever sufferers in this district would benefit substantially. . . . Do it now!

Idleness comes easy

CANADA is not the only country where too much welfarism is giving rise to serious social problems. From England, for example, comes word that unemployment insurance, in certain cases, is leading to large-scale loafing and idleness on the part of those who prefer to draw state benefits rather than seek another job when out of work — states the Fort Erie Letter-Review.

The problem is especially acute among fathers of large families, whose scale of earnings when they are employed hardly exceeds benefits available from unemployment insurance when they are jobless. According to Britain's National Assistance Board, in such cases, "if of an idle disposition, the few shillings which employment offers may not outweigh the disadvantages, as he sees it, of giving up a life of comparative freedom for the discipline of regular employment." Worse still, the Board believes, is the fact that a large number of children in Britain "are growing up to regard idleness as a normal state of affairs."

Cases aplenty may be found in this country. The problem is noted by the Commons Public Accounts committee, which, in its report to Parliament, noted that "married woman may draw benefits without having to show too much interest in the world of work." The Committee rightly recommends that steps be taken by the Government and Parliament to re-establish the Unemployment Insurance Fund on sound insurance principles and to overhaul the legislation and regulations so that the fund will not be abused by those who prefer idleness to work — concludes the Letter-Review.

Lesson of the recovered nations

MORE AND MORE Canadians are asking themselves how it is that countries like Germany and Japan have recovered so rapidly and spectacularly from the defeat and devastation of 15 years ago. Why is it that unemployment in these countries is virtually non-existent, that the shortage is one of workers to fill available jobs, instead of the other way around as in Canada and the United States, and that their living standards are rising at an unprecedented rate? — asks the bulletin "Industry".

Post-war financing of the rebuilding of their shattered industries by U.S. and other allied capital, unquestionably helped put both countries on their feet and save them from communism. But the value of capital investment, new plant and equipment is in direct proportion to the determination of the people of a nation to make the most of them. Individually and nationally the Germans and Japanese, among other peoples, have demonstrated this determination to lift themselves up by their boot straps. Above all they have worked hard.

Is there a lesson for us in all this? As we say, a growing body of opinion is reaching the conclusion that there very definitely is. The view is particularly well-expressed in the recent comments of two ordinary Canadians, neither of them employers.

Mr. Charles Luna, of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, addressed unionists thus: "If you ever did a day's work for your employer, do it now. . . . Do your work so that no one else does it. . . . If the individual had always performed his duties, we would all be in better shape. . . . "

Underlining these blunt words is a columnist of the Ontario daily newspaper, the Kitchener-Waterloo Record, who recently addressed himself to his fellow countrymen as follows:

"All of us are workers, whether we tote a briefcase or build tires. And all of us bear a share of the guilt for the goof-off complex that is crippling the Canadian economy.

"Ask any employer. The automatic pay increase has become a plague, but most employers would be willing to live with that if there was just the occasional sign that employees were interested in doing a full day's work for a day's pay.

"Instead, Canada's factories, stores, mines, mills and offices have been semi-crippled by the marathon coffee break, the half-hearted, half-speed effort, the come-late, leave-early attitude.

"Somebody has to pay, and the loafing becomes part of the price of every product and every service. And it is a millstone about the neck of Canadian products fighting for foreign markets.

"The problem, of course, is that it doesn't take many goof-offs to gum up a plant or office. A couple of clowns start dogging it, and sooner or later a couple of colleagues start wondering why they should be fracturing themselves. And a chain-reaction sets in.

"Translate that into trans-Canada terms and you've got a good part of the answer on what's wrong with the economy.

"It's time we Canadians awoke to the fact that there is no platinum-paved path to prosperity. It's rocky and uphill all the way. And, alas, it involves work."

Plain speaking this, from a union leader and a newspaperman. Have we the sense to heed it?

Don't worry about the British

EDUCATION in Canada is on the move. There is evidence on every hand, from community schools to the university level, that accommodation is bursting at the seams.

In this connection it is interesting to note, from a U.K. information bulletin, the strides taken by government in Britain to promote university education and encourage the advance of science and technology.

Announcement by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Selwyn Lloyd, that a further four universities are to be established in England, is the latest step in the rapid expansion which has been taking place in British universities during the last decade. Such expansion has been necessary in order to meet the increased demand for university education in a modern democracy, and the particular need for more scientists and technologists. Demands for university places will be particularly heavy during the next decade because of the high birthrate at the end of the second world war.

At present there are over 106,000 full time students attending the 23 independent university institutions in the United Kingdom. This is already double the pre-war student population. The increase in numbers has been achieved with the help of a government-sponsored program of building. . . .

This sort of progress gives weight to a quotation we read this past week from U.S. Secretary of State Dean Rusk: "I would not, if I were you, worry about the British".

THE LACHUTE WATCHMAN

75 YEARS AGO

Friday, Aug. 13, 1886 —

Mr. P. Lane, one of our town fathers, left here for Winnipeg and the Northwest with a carload of fine horses.

Lachute Town Council has purchased a new $20 seal, beautiful in design, showing a factory, maple leaf, and rapids.

Dominion Cartridge Company will commence operations in their new factory at Brownsburg next week.

Mr. William Hay, of Matapedia, will accept our thanks for a very fine salmon he sent us.

Messrs. James Forlong and George Clunie have left for British Columbia to start business there.

We ought to have cheap tea now, due to cheapness of its transportation by the C.P.R. from Yokohama to Montreal. The first tea train arrived in Montreal last Friday.

A new dam is being erected on the North River just below the paper mills.

55 YEARS AGO

Friday, Aug. 10, 1906 —

From the Montreal Gazette: Mr. George H. Perley, popular M.P. for Argenteuil, began a series of 14 addresses to his constituents on questions discussed in the late session.

A popular townsman, A. D. Kennedy, who is shortly leaving for the West, will be tendered a farewell banquet Tuesday next in the Victoria Hall.

Mr. Clarence Raitt has left for Milestone, Assiniboine.

Dalesville — Mr. A. Murdoch and family, who leave shortly for Western Canada, were honored at a farewell social by their community friends.

Calumet Mining Company has struck some large veins of graphite in the tunnel. There is every prospect of a rich deposit developing on this property.

Side attractions at the D.C. Co. picnic in Brownsburg were the African Dodger, the Baby Gallery, and a dancing pavilion.

25 YEARS AGO

Thursday, Aug. 13, 1936 —

In the Province of Quebec school leaving results, announced this week, one Lachute scholar, George Owen, took 1st Class standing with 807 marks.

A Montreal taxi driver was held up by his passenger 15 miles north of here on the St. Jovite highway. Left standing on the highway, he was picked up by Donald MacRae who was driving from Harrington to Lachute.

The Governor - General, Lord Tweedsmuir, has consented to unveil a memorial to Sir John Abbott, at a dedication ceremony this October at Christ Church, St. Andrews.

The Quebec Safety League will press the government to enact compulsory insurance for automobiles.

Duncan R. McGibbon, born 1856, passed away at his home in Chatham.

Dr. McClure, just returned from Honan, China, was here visiting his relatives.

Miss Edna Aitkin, a pupil of Miss J. Rodrigue, has obtained the Highest Grade Degree in pianoforte from McGill University.

Workmen have been busy tearing down the old stone Court House in Ste. Scholastique. In 1925 the district judicial seat was transferred to St. Jerome. . . . The original building was destroyed by fire in 1864, and two women awaiting trial for infanticide lost their lives. In the yard of the jail there were four persons hanged during the time this jail and Court House were in use.

DOGS FOR HUMANS

We believe that the Ontario Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals is barking up the wrong tree when it devotes even a little of its time and effort to the issue of Aurora's dog-catcher's selling unclaimed dogs for research work. . . . Man's best friend serves man in many ways, but certainly the most sentimental dog lover would agree that one human life saved by tests on dogs is worth the saving.

wonder QUESTIONS

ANSWERED BY THE RESEARCH SERVICE OF THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE

I WONDER . . . Curiosity is a priceless gift. A youngster's daily questions indicate a bright, inquiring mind. They should be answered intelligently. In this column The Watchman, in cooperation with The Book of Knowledge, will print questions — and their answers — most frequently asked by children of their parents.

Why Does it not Hurt when We Cut our Hair?

We feel pain when we suffer from any kind of injury because almost every part of the body has many small nerves in it that carry to the brain the sensation of pain. If there were no nerves there would be no pain. Our hair and our nails have no nerves and can be cut off without causing pain.

How Does a Cow Make its Milk?

There are certain parts of the body, that exist to produce substances the body needs. These are called glands and they are the chemical factories of the body. Some glands exist in order to filter out from the blood materials that it does not want. Many glands in the skin do this. Other glands — like the one just below and in front of the ear, which gets swollen in case of mumps — make the saliva that pours into our mouths when we eat, and helps us to soften and digest our food, even before we swallow it.

But there are a thousand glands that are a thousand times more beautiful and wonderful than any others, because they do not exist to serve the body to which they belong, but in order to provide nourishment for the bodies of entirely different individuals.

When the cow has a calf, the gland called the udder, which makes milk, becomes active and has the wonderful power of transforming the blood that passes through it into milk for the young calf. The calf's mother eats grass and turns it into blood. Then the udder turns the blood into milk, which is the best food for calves, as it is also the best food for us. If we could see the udder under a microscope we would see the cells near the blood stream taking out of the blood everything that they need in order to make milk — pure, warm and containing everything the calf needs for its growth.

How Did the Sand Get on The Seashore?

Sand, wherever it is found, is ground-up rocks. Most of this rock material is sandstone, which is a compound of two elements, oxygen and silicon. You know that in the world of living things carbon is a very common element. Silicon is one of the most common elements in the non-living world. Both silicon and carbon combine very readily with oxygen.

Ages ago, when the earth was cooling down and forming a crust, a great deal of silicon combined with oxygen in a compound that we call silica. Tiny grains of silica become glued together by means of softer substances to form stone, which we call sandstone. This is not a very hard stone. Wind and water grind it down into grains of various sizes. Then we call it sand. Some sand comes from the breaking down of other rocks, but most of it is silica.

Readers are invited to send their own questions to WONDER QUESTIONS, Grolier Society Research Service, 800 Bay St., Suite 104, Toronto 5. The more interesting questions and answers will be published in future columns.

NETS DAMAGED

St. John's, Nfld. (CP) — Salmon nets in Freshwater Bay are being seriously damaged by debris dumped into the ocean by contractors working on a harbor redevelopment scheme here. Ray Riche, president of St. John's local of the Newfoundland Federation of Fishermen (Ind.) said authorities are not doing anything about it.

"What's the difference between life in Italy and in Canada?" I asked an Italian-Canadian.

"Italians pay cash — not credit," he observed.

"I hope you aren't trying to talk them out of that habit," I said. (He puts in spare time helping his fellow-immigrants understand their new country.)

"In Italy, that's beginning to change," he said. "But some Italian men came to Canada without their wives, and in five years some of them saved enough money to buy a house and put furniture in it — all paid for. Then they sent for their wives. Couldn't save like that in Italy."

I asked what sort of guidance he gave his fellow-countrymen about behavior in Canada.

"Everybody sing in my country," he said. "I tried to sing one time in Canada, on the street coming home from a show. A policeman stopped me, asked if I'm crazy, maybe drunk."

"So you tell the new arrivals that they musn't sing on the street?"

"Yes. And the Sunday. Here everybody relaxes, don't do anything. In my country everybody dance on Sunday, the same as any other day."

"What else?"

"Italian people speak rapidly. They seem excitable."

"You have to tell them to slow down?"

"Yes."

"You think it's better here."

"In many ways it's better. But everybody here is chasing the dollar. In Italy, more enjoying themselves. But I think that may be changing too."

"People friendly here, or not?"

"Not so friendly always. I'm walking down the street with a friend of mine, a Canadian, and somebody passing says 'Good morning'. He looks around, and it's almost as if he's angry, and he says, 'Who's that? I don't know him'. In Italy you say, what's the difference? Somebody says good morning, you say good morning back, don't care who it is."

Family reunion is happy affair at Mabel, Que.

(Our District Correspondent)

Mabel — The home of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Clark was the scene of a happy event on Sunday when the latter's mother, Mrs. Margaret McKenzie, was honored at a family gathering.

Mrs. McKenzie, who is looking forward to her 80th birthday on September 9, was united with her three sisters, Mrs. Elizabeth Rodenhizer, of West Newton, Mass., Mrs. Walter Morrison, of Montreal, Mrs. Leslie Golden, of Brownsburg, and four brothers, William Creswell, of Carleton Place, Ont., Archie Creswell, of Shelbyville, Ill., George Creswell, of Brownsburg, and Rueben Creswell, of Louisa, who range in ages from 66 to 80. This family had not been together for approximately 50 years, and realized it is a rare occasion when an entire family are privileged to celebrate such a function.

The eight "youngsters", with their spouses, sat down to dinner together and later were guests of honor at "open house", when several sons, daughters, grandchildren, a few great-grandchildren, nephews nieces and cousins were present.

St. Andrews East

Miss Violet Duguid, of Montreal, visited the Misses Wales on Wednesday. Miss Irene Maclure, who accompanied her, is spending some time at the Wales home.

Miss Janet Wallace is visiting her sister, Mrs. Gregorsen, at Hamilton, Ont. She will also visit in Toronto with her friend, Miss England, who is oh furlough from India.

Mrs. Jas. Burwash spent the week at South Bolton, with Mr. and Mrs. Dawson Burwash and family.

Mr. J. W. Jeffrey, of Ottawa, spent Saturday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Jeffrey.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Green and family, of London, Ont., were guests of the former's mother, Mrs. Green.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Burger and two children, of Montreal, spent the week-end at "Journey's End", with the Rev. and Mrs. J. R. Heyworth.

Mr. Donald Regan, of Montreal, spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Eaton.

Mr. and Mrs. Ronnie de la Ronde and family spent the week-end with Mr. K. de la Ronde.

Miss Bessie Rodger, of Montreal, has been visiting Mrs. Lillian Calder, of the Town of Mount Royal, at 16 Island Lake.

Music Centre scholarships to district residents

A grant from the Quebec Department of Youth and Social Welfare, as well as donations from Les Amis de L'Art and from business firms and private individuals, made it possible to award a number of scholarships to students and amateur musicians wishing to attend the CAMMAC Music Centre this summer.

Among the private donors are Peate Musical Supplies Ltd. of Montreal and Casavant Frères Ltée. of St. Hyacinthe, whose generosity in each case has permitted a student to spend one week at the Music Centre.

The scholarship offered by Les Amis de L'Art was awarded to Mlle Caroline Guay, a young music student from Quebec City.

Other awards were made to the following: The Rev. Russell Alcorn and family, Nashwaaksis, N.B.; Louise Castonguay, Juliette Vaudry, Jacques Legroulx and Myrtle Ellis, of Montreal; Fernand Asselin and Marise Cloutier, of Quebec City; Yves and Bergere Lafleur, of Brownsburg, Que.; Hermel Bruneau, of St. Felix de Valois, Que.; Louise Dumas, of Trois-Pistoles, Que.; Roger Cantin of Three Rivers, Que.; Allana Diver, of Weir, Que.; and Donna Graham and Trine Macaulay, of Arundel, Que.

Adopt new rules for provincial plowing match

Advances in land cultivation and plowing techniques will be demonstrated at the annual Quebec Provincial Plowing Match. The match this year will be a two-day event, September 14-15, on the farm of Robert Simpson, near Melbourne, in Richmond County.

The Provincial Plowing Match is held each year in a different part of the province, and the two winning plowmen compete at the Canadian Championship contest, which will be held this year at Belleville in October. The Canadian match chooses a team of two to represent Canada at the World Plowing Contest in 1962.

The Executive of the Quebec Provincial Plowmen's Association in Montreal recently laid plans for the forthcoming event in co-ordination with Robert Simpson, chairman of the St. Francis Valley Match. Because Canada's plowing teams must use World Plowing Organization rules in their contests, it was decided that the provincial plowing classes would be run and judged under world rules.

This means that these classes will be for tractors using two-furrow plows; the minimum depth of plowing will be six inches, and the minimum width of furrow must be 10 inches.

The Provincial Match this year is being staged on a 40-acre field on the Nyamakid Farm of Robert Simpson, whose herd of Jersey cattle is well-known in the Eastern Townships.

TIPS ON PASTURE MANAGEMENT THAT WILL PAY DIVIDENDS

1. Rotate pastures. Even though you may be on the short side of pasture, it will pay you to divide fields to "rest" the plants. This will help avoid killing-out your valuable pasture.
2. Mow pastures, as soon as they begin to get rank, so the tender milk-producing shoots can come on.
3. Plant or build shade in pasture to give your cows an opportunity to reduce body temperature on hot days.
4. Pipe water to your cows, if no natural springs or sources are near. Tests have shown that plenty of conveniently-located, pure water will help your cows give lots more milk.
5. Spray cows weekly with Purina Dairy Spray Concentrate mixed with water. This will give your cows relief from flies and permit better use of pasture.
6. Supplement your pasture. Your pasture does contain nutrients, but it also contains a high percentage of water and bulk. Your cows can't eat all the pasture they need to obtain the nutrients they require for top milk production. Why not give me a call, or drop in at my Store with the Checkerboard Sign, I'd like to tell you how you can supplement your pasture with a little Purina High-Efficiency Milking Ration. This is one good way to make your milk profits grow.

"Let's be friends!"

— By NANCY CLEAVER —

Rosemary and Connie were six-year-old inseparables. But one day Connie in sudden anger, with a yell, descended on her chum and pushed her off their own verandah steps. Rosemary fell on the grass. She wasn't hurt very much — except her feelings. How could Connie act so mean?

After she had run home crying, she changed out of her new dress. Mother comforted her and told her to wash her face and run outside to play and she'd call her in to dinner in a few minutes. Rosemary saw Connie looking wistfully over to her place. Quickly Rosemary ran, threw her arms around Connie and kissed her.

"I just can't stand your being cross at me", she said eagerly. "Oh, Connie, let's be friends again," and Connie, looking surprised and relieved said, "Yes, let's!"

What mother is there who has not been amazed how quickly her child can "make up" and apparently forget all about a disagreement? Adults can learn something from most children in the art of not holding grudges.

Interfering in a child's squabble, many a mother discovers from sad experience, is seldom any use. Often it does harm. Long after the details of the quarrel are forgotten by the children, the mothers are apt to be very cool towards each other.

Adult supervision of the play of small children is necessary. But it should not be the type of watching in which a mother rushes in at any small provocation to settle matters. Unless one child is hitting or harming another or a bully is frightening younger children, usually it is best not to interfere.

If a mother susnects that tempers are getting short or that two children are becoming exasperated with each other it is often a good plan to suggest a new activity. Play equipment, space indoors and outside for fun, and a little help from a mother in beginning a new activity, all help children to continue on a friendly level.

Play is a child's work and during play children learn many skills, including the important ways of getting along happily with all kinds of people. Teachers at a nursery school observe that little children appear free from racial prejudice. The color of another child's skin is of little importance to a small boy or girl seeking a companion.

Parents help their children in their relationships with other people if they welcome their children's friends. Other people's youngsters are noisy, they make a clutter and they expect to be given an apple or a peanut butter sandwich snack at the same time that food appears for a son or daughter of the family. This hospitality is an investment in a child's adventures in friendship.

How is it as individuals grow older they often lose their interest in other people and their desire to get to know them? Not long ago a psychiatrist suggested that one way adults could avoid getting into a rut and becoming bored or lonely, was to enlarge their circle of friends each year.

Friendship is a thing of the spirit. It takes time for two individuals, of any age, to not only enjoy each other's company but to share ideas and trust each other. Perhaps as parents we can learn something from our children in their eagerness to say to one another "Let's be friends!"

CRAMMED LIBRARY

Moncton, N.B. (CP) — Mayor Sherwood Rideout says city council is afraid the present public library will collapse if any more books are crammed into it. Plans for a new one are nearing completion.

Back-to-school wear

Fashion focuses on easy shape for back-to-school wear. Canadian wool is used here for a softly pleated skirt and sleeveless overblouse. Large checks in the overblouse fabric coordinate with the smaller checks of the skirt — all in bright blue and olive.

Regulations on margarine

Quebec — In connection with the Act Concerning Dairy Substitutes (Bill 74) which came into force on the first of August, the Hon. Alcide Courcy feels called upon to inform the public about certain of the clauses in the regulations now in effect.

For the protection of the consumer, it is required that margarine shall be made of edible and wholesome ingredients of which at least 80% by weight must be fatty materials.

For the same reason, on the two principal surfaces of every package or container of margarine which is offered for sale in the retail trade, must appear legibly the word "Margarine" in letters not less than half the height of the largest lettering on the package.

For the complete information of the consumer, on the two principal surfaces of the container must also be indicated separately, in letters at least one eighth of an inch — the percentage of vegetable oils and the percentage of oils of animal or marine origin. In the case of a mixture of animal and marine oils, the ingredient which predominates must be mentioned first.

Every container must also bear a complete list of the ingredients in conformity with the Canadian Food and Drugs Act, and the names and addresses of the maker or wholesaler.

On the retail market, margarine must be offered for sale in pieces weighing not more than two pounds, contained in a hygienic cardboard carton. (Sample of any container intended for the retail marketing of margarine in the Province must be submitted to the Quebec Department of Agriculture for approval.)

Now — the long lean look

Stretch slims, the latest in slacks, are a leisure-wear version of the skier's tapered stretchies. Lighter in weight, and cut to elongate the figure, they are available in a range of gay, bright colors. Stretch nylon in the fabric achieves the long, lean look.

Greek mountain girls are hard workers

Mountain girls in Greek villages never lack husbands. When a boy from the valley thinks of taking a wife, he looks to the mountains for his future mate. The "girls up there" are hard workers and can make every cent count for two. Though she has little to offer in the way of a dowry, the mountain girl is a well-sought prize. Agencies like the Unitarian Service Committee of Canada do much to make mountain village life more tolerable, but life is difficult, and girls must be strong to overcome the many obstacles. Knowledge in homemaking, and USC gifts of clothing and sewing kits, are attributes to any young girl with an eye to marriage. Headquarters of this help from Canada is 78 Sparks Street, Ottawa.

The shape of things

It's often one little special touch that gives a simple dish that certain something to elevate it from the ordinary. Sometimes it is the colorful garnish, another time, a new twist on the standard shape. Often a totally different cooking method creates the desired effect. All three are utilized in Baked Salmon Croquettes. A crispy crumb coating encases a succulent blend of salmon and rice, suitably spiced. Commercial salad dressing is the secret to its moist and piquant character. The cooking method is one change in routine and the second deviation from the norm is in the way they're shaped. Just fashion them any way your fancy dictates. And the third special touch for Baked Salmon Croquettes is in the way they're garnished. — You can use bright bits of pimento, green pepper rings, a smooth and colorful sauce or anything else you might choose which is compatible in color, flavor and appearance.

Baked Salmon Croquettes

1½ Teaspoons of Worcestershire sauce, 1 tablespoon grated onion, 1 tablespoon chopped parsley, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, ½ teaspoon salt, dash of pepper, ⅔ cup commercial salad dressing, 2 cups cooked rice, 2 cups flaked, drained canned salmon, fine dry bread crumbs.

Blend Worcestershire sauce, onion, parsley, lemon juice, salt and pepper into salad dressing. Add rice and salmon; mix thoroughly. Chill in refrigerator at least one hour until firm enough to shape. Meanwhile, preheat oven to 450 degrees F. (very hot). With hands shape salmon mixture into croquettes — rounds, cylinders, cones, etc. — then coat thoroughly with crumbs. Place on ungreased baking sheet and bake in preheated hot oven about twenty minutes or until thoroughly heated and golden brown. Makes 4 to 5 servings.

Fitness begins in the cradle

Concern about physical fitness should begin when your child is still in the cradle, according to Dr. C. K. Rowan-Legg, of Ottawa.

Few mothers will give their infants a chance to exercise naturally, Dr. Rowan Legg writes in a special physical-fitness issue of Health Magazine, published by the Health League of Canada.

"For example, the young infant is dressed in a nightgown so long he can't possibly move his legs freely when awake, and many of them are wrapped up in a shawl so they can't lift their hands from their sides!

The best idea is to take the child out of his crib, take off all unnecessary clothing, and allow him to exercise naturally with complete freedom of arms and legs.

Later when it is unsafe to leave him on a bed, he can be moved to a playpen where he has a chance to "struggle, strain, roll and pivot to his heart's content."

Unsuitable outdoor clothing also limits the physical activity of a pre-school child, especially snowsuits that are "at least two sizes too big, so that it will last two or three years, and likewise the snowboots which he can hardly lift."

"In this regalia," Dr. Rowan-Legg says, "he might just as well be in splints."

Pre-schoolers are great copycats and the example the parents set in physical activity is important.

"The problem of the father who is an ardent Saturday and Sunday golfer during the summer months and just as ardent a curler during the winter months is setting a very poor example to his pre-school child.

"Many of the fathers would benefit greatly by showing the young son how to do a chin-up. Many fathers no doubt would be able to tell the child how to do it but unable to give an adequate demonstration."

Hot snack on cool porch

Salmon Burgers are a popular hot snack to serve on a cool porch. With a big crisp tossed salad and mugs of coffee, they make a simple summer meal.

The burger, like baseball, has become a familiar part of the summer scene. Served indoors or out, it is a menu favorite for casual dining, and can be the answer to the lunch or supper problem on a busy day.

Some of the best burgers are made with seafoods. For porch or patio lunching, try these Salmon Burgers. Cook them over an outdoor grill, if you wish, and allow willing helpers to fill the buns.

Salmon Burgers

Keep these burgers in mind when a quick, hearty snack is called for. The salmon patties cook in a jiffy and can be prepared in advance, then refrigerated until needed.

1 Can (15 ounces) salmon, ¼ cup chopped onion, ¼ cup butter (melted), ¼ cup dry bread crumbs, 2 eggs (beaten), ¼ cup chopped parsley, 1 teaspoon dry mustard, ¼ teaspoon salt, ¼ cup dry bread crumbs, 6 heated buttered hamburger buns.

Drain and flake salmon, reserving salmon liquid. Cook onion in butter until tender. Add salmon liquid, ¼ cup dry bread crumbs, egg, parsley, mustard, salt, and salmon. Mix well. Shape into 6 patties the size of the buns and about ½ inch thick. Roll in crumbs. Pan fry in fat which is very hot but not smoking. When patties are brown on one side, turn and brown on other side. Drain on absorbent paper. Place in buns. Makes 6 burgers.

Have you ever had a neighbor tell you the name of one of your plants, then looked it up in a botany book and found the plant has another name?

To end such confusion the International Plant Index is compiling a master index of the world's 1,700,000 plants.

For years, botanists have identified and named plants but scientists working in different times and places have often attached different names to the same plant.

At the Connecticut agricultural experimental station in New Haven, Conn., a roomful of equipment is cataloguing the work.

The cards, which will index the plants by group, family, genus and species names, will include the author who first identified the plant and pertinent details about publications where he first classified it.

The results will be published in some 50 volumes for researchers throughout the world.

To Wash Greens

To wash dandelion greens, young spinach or leaf lettuce, cut off the roots and bruised leaves and swish up and down in the sink or in a pan of lukewarm water. Lift out and shake them instead of draining off the water. Keep using fresh water until they are thoroughly clean.

New Product

Polytetrafluoroethylene is a fat name for a product which can replace cooking fats in frying pans.

It's the generic name for a plastic which is sprayed on aluminum frying pans and baked at a temperature of 750 degrees.

The coating enables one to fry eggs, steaks and other foods without the use of grease or shortening and the food won't stick to the pan.

The producers say the plastic-coated pan can be cleaned with a wipe of a dish cloth or sponge.

They're also expected to be a boon to people whose diet forbids fat-fried foods.

Tasty Dressings

It's salad season and, of course, the season for dressings too. Here are four dressings which can be made in just a few minutes.

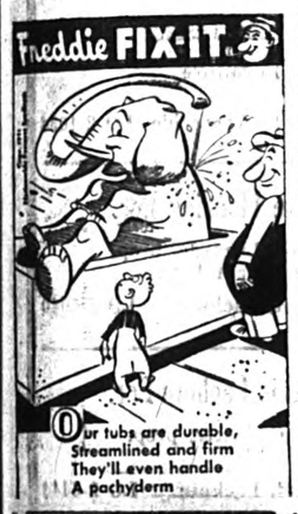

For hot or cold fish try tarragon dressing. Combine 1 cup mayonnaise; 1 tbsp. catsup; 1 tsp. lemon juice; 1 tsp. chopped, fresh tarragon. Stir all ingredients to make a pale, rosy dressing.

For Andalouse dressing for cold asparagus tip salad, mixed green salad, egg salad or cold meat, combine 1 cup mayonnaise; ¼ cup catsup; 1 small tin pimentos, drained and chopped; ¼ tsp. paprika.

Russian dressing, good with seafood or tossed green salads, can be made by combining 2 cups mayonnaise; ¼ cup catsup; 1 tbsp. chopped, canned pimento; 1 tbsp. chopped chives.

Avocado dressing can be made from 1 cup French dressing; 1 tbsp. catsup; and 1 tbsp. grated horseradish. Shake well and pour over avocado halves on crisp salad greens.

Labor agreement signed between Ayers Limited and Textile Union

Ayers Limited and the United Textile Workers of America (Local 348) have signed a labor agreement for a period of two years, as of June 1, 1961.

In June 1960 the Labor Relations Board of Quebec granted a certificate as bargaining agents for the workers of Ayers Ltd. A few weeks later, negotiations began between the Company and the Union. Both parties had to write a whole labor agreement — a hard and difficult task. The Company and the Union undertook that task with good faith, and finally an agreement was arrived at. Economic matters only remained unsettled. After having required the services of a Conciliator and of a Conciliation Board as prescribed by law, both parties, conscious of the fact that so little kept them apart, decided to settle their own problem themselves. A final settlement was reached in early July. A few days later, on July 14, a labor agreement was signed.

In the course of the two years from June 1, 1961, all workers will receive a 10 cent increase. Eight holidays will be paid. As a compensation for vacation, those who have been in the employ of the Company for less than five years will be granted 2%, from 5 to 10 years, 4%; from 10 to 15 years, 4.5%; from 15 to 20 years 5%; 20 years or more 6%.

The contract provides for a well-defined grievance procedure and also an established procedure for all changes introduced by the Company concerning work load and methods of work.

When the agreement was signed Roger Regimbal, who directed the negotiations for the Company, and Roger Provost, main negotiator for the Union, expressed their satisfaction on the agreement being concluded in harmony. In the name of their respective parties both made clear their firm intention to apply this agreement in good faith and in the best interest of Ayers Limited and its employees.

The negotiations committee of the Union was composed of the president of Local 348, Gaetan Proulx, and the following local officers: Donat Guertin, Réal St. Jean, Fernand Gibeault, Doris Champagne and Miss Colombe Trudel. Also Georges Payette, Provincial Director; François Gagné, International Representative; Roger Provost, Canadian Director, United Textile Workers of America.

The Company was represented by its director of Industrial Relations, Mr. Roger Régimbal, and Me. J. Massicotte.

On behalf of Ayers Limited, Mr. Roger Régimbal and Mr. Thomas Ayers signed the agreement.

Holiday trip contest ends on Saturday

The current contest for a two-person, expense-paid trip to New York ends at noon this Saturday, and the winner of the drawing will be decided at the Bernard Florist store on Main Street, that same evening at 6.15 o'clock.

There has been much enthusiasm in this contest, and with ready approval of the storekeepers, Lachute Watchman and L'Argenteuil will feature another such venture in the near future. Merchants desiring to take part are advised accordingly, as the number of participants is necessarily limited.

Construct sewage pumping station at Hawkesbury

Hawkesbury — Construction of a sewage pumping station was scheduled to begin here this week. Part of the Hawkesbury relocation program, the new station will cost approximately $500,000.

This is the third phase of Hawkesbury's relocation program. Contracts for the first two phases, construction of a combined trunk sewer and storm sewer, have already been let.

The station will handle storm drainage and sewage from the town's system. It will be a necessary component of any sewage treatment system which may be built by the town in the future. The site, at Phillip and Main Street East, is to be donated to the town by Ontario Hydro.

A total of eight pumps will be installed. Two electrical pumps, with a capacity of 1,300 gallons a minute each, will be adequate to cope with outflow during dry weather. Six larger units, each capable of pumping 16,000 gallons a minute, will be used during high flow conditions. Four of these six will be diesel operated as protection against emergency failure. Any four of the six will be adequate to pump the maximum capacity of the system, with two acting as standby units in case of emergency.

Successful dance and drawing held for District C.N.I.B.

The annual C.N.I.B. dance, in aid of the Argenteuil District building fund, drew a comfortable crowd of approximately 120 couples, at the Golf Club chalet last Saturday evening. Dancing was enjoyed to the music of Roger Parent's orchestra, and the event was voted an entire success.

During the proceedings Mr. Léopold Carrière announced a drawing, arranged by the Women's Auxiliary of the Argenteuil group. Mr. L. A. McClintock, supervisor of C.N.I.B. field services, was on hand to draw the lucky tickets, which were held by the following subscribers:

1st — Miss Louise Phaneuf, Montreal; $50 bond.

2nd — Lucien Millette, Fassett, Que.; $25.

Consolation — Roy McCrea, R.R. 1, Lachute; $10.

Mr. Carriere thanked the people who had supported this effort, those who had attended the dance, and all others who had encouraged the work of the organization.

Proceeds of the drawing, to be devoted jointly to the building fund and to social work among the sightless, amounted to $700 net.

1962 Licenses white on black

Quebec — Quebec's 1962 licenseplates will have white numerals on a black background and will carry the word "Quebec" above the numerals instead of below, the Transport Department announced.

Jacques Verrault, deputy-minister of transport, showed reporters the first of 2,640,000 plates being manufactured for 1962. The plate will continue to bear the fleur-de-lys. Plates for Quebec Government vehicles will be marked "GP" for "Gouvernement Provincial" instead of just "G".

Second art show opens Saturday at St. Andrews

An exhibition sponsored by the Argenteuil Art Association will open this Saturday afternoon at the St. Andrews municipal hall, remaining open (afternoons) until the Labor Day holiday, September 4.

This exhibition, by co-operation of the National Gallery, will feature 22 color reproductions from Canada's official collection in the national capital — lithographs and silk-screen prints of all-Canadian artists, including several of Quebec's best-known painters.

In the collection also will be official state portraits commissioned by the King and Queen, reproductions of originals hanging in Government House, Ottawa.

The Argenteuil Art Association, in presenting this second exhibition of the season, anticipates the approval of all art lovers who share a consciousness of Canada's individuality in creative expression. The public are cordially invited to this show.

Riverfront houses on the move

(Our District Correspondent)

Cushing — The former home of B. Noyes, and also of the older generation of that name, previously situated on the edge of Monalea district, was moved on Wednesday to Cushing and is now being set up on the lot previously owned by Mrs. Roy Dobbie. This house was moved under the supervision of the James Pollock, contractor, Lachute.

Preparations for moving Mr. M. R. Wilson's house from the rivershore back a safe distance from the onrush of water, once the dam is complete, are now underway. This will mean that it will be situated much closer to the main road.

Friends in the community are happy to know that Mr. and Mrs. Wilson are not being compelled to move away a great distance, as several others have had to do, due to the Hydro construction.

Children's Night staged by Club at Rotary Park

The August 17 meeting of Brownsburg-Lachute Rotary Club was the annual Children's Night, held at the Rotary Park in Brownsburg. With the weather near perfect, a good turn-out of Rotarians and their children provided a very enjoyable outing. A portable stove and barbecue were used to cook the weiners for the hot-dogs, which were served along with soft drinks, ice cream and cookies. The Rotarians did all the catering, and after the "eats" the kiddies enjoyed themselves with the many pieces of park equipment that are on the grounds.

This week the Club journeys up to Harrington on Wednesday, for a visit to the C.I.P. Forest Farm. It is hoped the weather will be as favorable again, and that as many Rotarians as possible will be able to make this interesting trip.

Search directed here for child missing from Buckingham, Que.

Searchers numbering some 50 men from the Buckingham area converged on Whisseltown Sunday evening, following a report that a two-year-old child, answering the description of a missing Buckingham youngster, had been seen walking on the highway near that community. The search was organized by local Traffic Officers Ronald Massie, Richard Dubé and Gérard Janri, but following a fruitless night's work, the search was called-off around 6.30 a.m. Monday.

A $1,000 reward was offered for information about two-year-old Frank Gingras, missing from his grandmother's home in Buckingham since last Thursday morning.

The lad disappeared 10 minutes after his grandmother and aunt put him out in their garden to play, tethering him to a verandah post with a rope and closing a four-foot-high plywood gate to bar his way from the yard.

"He could not have opened the gate," said Mayor Reginald Cameron of Buckingham. "I feel sure someone had to take him out of there. That is why Police Commissioner Coun. Aimé Nadon and I are voting the reward for information leading to the return of the child alive."

Mayor Cameron said there would not have been time, in the interval between the child being placed in the garden and the discovery of his disappearance, for him to have reached the Lièvre River 1,000 feet away; but it was dragged in any case.

"We have had the co-operation of everyone concerned. The power people shut off the dam. We dragged the river, sent down skin divers and set off dynamite. We even found another body (that of 25-

Accident victim was member of local family

Georges-Henri Scarborough, 40-year-old Lachute resident, died last Friday from injuries sustained in a car accident August 14 on the Dawson montee between Carillon and Grenville.

Mr. Scarborough was injured in an accident which occurred at 7 p.m. on Monday of last week. He was taken to the Smith Clinic, Hawkesbury, where he succumbed to internal injuries. The other driver involved was Janor Leblanc, of Grenville R.R. 1. The Scarborough car was demolished in the accident, which was investigated by Traffic Officer Richard Dubé. No date for the inquest has been set.

Funeral rites were held Monday morning from the Menard Funeral Home to Ste. Anastasie Parish Church, followed by interment at the St. Philippe Cemetery.

The victim is mourned by his wife, the former Jeannette Pharand, and two young sons; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Georges Scarborough, Lachute; a brother, Antonio Scarborough, local businessman; and two sisters, Mme Roland Raymond (Margot), of Lachute, and Mme Jerôme Larose (Antonia), of St. Philippe.

Department orders election for vacancy in Ayersville

Ayersville taxpayers will go to the polls the first week in September, to elect a councillor for seat No. 3 made vacant by the resignation of Maurice Dumas. . . . This procedure has been prescribed by the Department of Municipal Affairs. The councillor-elect will hold office for about nine months, to termination of the mandate for this seat, in May, 1962.

Order-in-Council for the holding of this election was given August 9. It calls for nominations to be filed next Wednesday, August 30, and voting if necessary on the following Wednesday, September 6. Jacques Poitras, town secretary, will act as election officer.

The seat in question was vacated by Councillor Dumas in order to enter the mayoralty contest. Mayor Gaetan Paquette, retiring, was his opponent and won the election by a 29-vote majority. . . . Subsequently, the name of Laurent Brasseur was suggested as councillor to fill the vacancy, but it appears contrary influences were exerted and the Department ordered a public election rather than a nomination, which would be the normal procedure if opinion had been unanimous.

The Ayersville Council now comprises — Mayor Gaetan Paquette, Councillors Gérard Gauthier, Edgar Cyr, Douglas Simon, Gaston Plamondon and Wilfrid Durocher.

Five generations going strong

H'wksby buildings treated against possibility of flood and seepage

Hawkesbury — The basements of 17 houses and commercial buildings in the expropriated Main Street East area of Hawkesbury will be waterproofed as protection against the new Ottawa River water levels resulting from the Carillon power development.

Harry Hustler, Ontario Hydro director of property, said the work is being done by Canada Gunite Ltd., of Pointe Claire.

Floors and inside walls of basements are sprayed with concrete to provide a seal against water seepage. New concrete floors will be laid if necessary.

Protective measures will also be taken to safeguard a number of properties outside the expropriated area, mainly in the area north of Main Street between John St. and the Bridge Inn.

Mr. Hustler said engineering studies have confirmed that approximately 30 buildings in the area will have to be protected against seepage, either by waterproofing or other methods. Seepage causes wet basements in many of the buildings at the present time, and the new river levels may increase the problem.

Chest X-ray clinics announced by Health Unit

Two units of the Montreal Anti-Tuberculosis League will be operating in this County next week, to offer free chest X-rays. This precaution is recommended for every person over 15 years of age. The examination takes less than one minute, and involves the minimum inconvenience.

Times and places of these clinics (with future arrangements to be announced next week) are as follows:

Huberdeau (Municipal Hall) — Aug. 28 — 2-5 p.m., 7-9 p.m.

Arundel (English School) — Aug. 28 — 2-5 p.m., 7-9 p.m.

Justice of Peace threatens no lenience for rowdies assaulting police officers

At the last sitting of the Justice of the Peace in court here, August 16, a Brownsburg resident was fined $40, or 30 days in jail, for assaulting a Lachute constable.

This is the third instance in the past year of local police officers being attacked, and it was in view of this fact that the judge imposed the maximum penalty. In his remarks to the accused, he asserted that intoxication is no excuse for this sort of offence, that the police force represents the authority of the law, and as such must be respected.

"The police cannot be regarded as a target for belligerence by rowdies looking for a fight," said the magistrate. "I warn such offenders that this court will show no lenience; in future any appearing before me on similar charges will be turned over to the provincial police and taken to jail at St. Jerome."

Fine weather favors large attendance at Richelieu field day

At the seventh annual harness racing event sponsored by the Richelieu Club, enthusiasts of this sport found full satisfaction at the Exhibition Grounds last Saturday afternoon. Fine weather favored the occasion, and the competition measured up to full expectations of the committee.

Among those on the grounds were Mayor Fernand Legault, Q.C.; Michel Normandin, popular sports commentator; Donald M. Hay, president of the Argenteuil Agricultural Society, and others of note.

Besides the program of eight races, a highlight of the proceedings was the annual drawing — in which an automatic washer and dryer, were won by Mme Richard Ranger, of Bradford Street. The two bicycles given as door prizes were won by Mme Nelson Lepage and young André Blais, both of Lachute.

Proceeds of the event this year are earmarked for improvements to the Richelieu Park and maintenance of the swimming pool. Thanks to all who supported this field day are extended by President Yvanhoe Chevrier and his committeemen, Roland Ménard, Jean-Louis Blais, Eugene Rochon and Roger Martel.

G'vt roads truck goes over culvert

(Our District Correspondent)

Rivington — The government is quite convinced now that a culvert on the road near Donald McCabe's is too short for passing traffic. One of the government trucks, gravelling that particular stretch of the road, went over the edge last Friday, and landed in the gully with its four wheels up. No one was hurt. A larger and longer culvert has since been ordered.

Killed by hayload and farm tractor

Montreal — A Ste. Scholastique farmer met his death while haying last week. Omer Renault, 54, of R.R. 2, Ste. Scholastique, was carrying hay on a tractor-pulled wagon on his farm when the bales of hay shifted forward and knocked him from the tractor. He was crushed between the tractor, the wagon and its load. Police said the wagon axle struck Renaud on the head.

The wagon tipped as it crossed a furrow in a field.

Premier J. Lesage on sales tax and separatism

QUEBEC THIS WEEK

By Roger Tetreault, Canadian Press Staff Writer

Quebec — Premier Jean Lesage of Quebec spent most of the week in the Maritime Provinces — to attend the provincial premiers' conference in Charlottetown, and to take part in a three-day study on French-speaking Canada at Mount Allison University in Sackville, N.B.

On his return to Quebec City, Mr. Lesage said he was happy with the results of this year's conference.

He reported he spoke with Premier Joey Smallwood of Newfoundland on the possibilities of settling the Quebec-Labrador border dis-

'Welcome Wagon' bilingual hostess trained for role

The "Welcome Wagon", a community service successfully adopted in many Canadian centres, has gained popularity in Quebec Province and is now organized to operate in Lachute and Brownsburg. "Welcome Wagon" authorities have accredited Mrs. Janet Wilson as "hostess" in this area. Bilingual, and well known in the district, Mrs. Wilson has been trained for her role, which will consist of welcoming and extending courtesies to new families, newly-weds, and newly established householders in these two communities — in co-operation with storekeepers and business men. The Watchman and L'Argenteuil will give support to the venture, which should prove beneficial and acceptable to many in this area.

The "Welcome Wagon" idea was started in 1928 by an American publicist, Thomas Briggs, at Memphis. It has now become widely adopted in progressive centres.

A column for the sportsman

— By BOB ATCHISON —

The latest legislation on wildfowl has just been passed out; while not official as yet, I'm sure it will be enacted. Five ducks will now be allowed per day, with the total possession of two days' bag, or 10 ducks.

More and more concern is being shown over the decrease in the duck population. The point has been reached where cutting the limit by one duck is not going to do one bit of good. For years ducks have been overshot, and with the fight for survival against Nature, there hasn't been much to cheer about. The whole situation is very serious and all interested wildlife men know it. The ironical part of all this, is that the late Jack Miner told our governments the ducks would eventually become so scarce, unless help was given them. I think one of the big reasons for lack of concern is that most of our so-called government experts don't know too much about wildlife. It's true some of them are well informed and enthusiastic, but they are not in a position to do much about it.

I think after you read all about this operation there will be a few chuckles. It happened to one of our locals during his vacation. It seems the family headed for Lake Louisa, along with all kinds of toys for the youngster. One of the best, though, was a parachute that is shot into the air and drifts slowly back again. Anyway, the first couple of times it was shot into the air, things did not go too well. Tarzan finally gets a hold of the outfit and it goes up; it seems it was as good as some of the shots at Cape Canaveral. Things were going fine until a little puff of wind steered the parachute into a small tree. Naturally the youngster wanted his old man to go get it; and who can blame him? After all, he shot it into the tree.

After much thought up goes Old-Timer, making like a chimp. The only difference, Timer has shorts on. Boy, was that a field day for the black-flies, chiggers and mosquitoes. To top it all off, the parachute is right up in the very top of the tree. So make like a timber-topper — only with a penknife! I hope you can get this picture — a grown man hanging by his toe-nails in a tree, hacking away with a penknife to cut the top off. . . . Just to make it a happy ending, they did get the parachute; but it was grounded right there and then. Oh yes, there were a few scratches and millions of fly-bites too.

An unhappy incident occurred this past week — for me, that is. I have been working down on the St. Andrews Road, and had made friends with a Collie, a farm dog, that was just about tops as far as I was concerned — along with his owners. The other morning he was hit by a car that did not stop. Maybe I should try and give you the picture.

This dog was on the side of the road, and anyone coming along had plenty of room to steer out of its way. I heard a couple of blasts on a horn and was just in time to see the dog fly into the ditch. Running over to it as it tried to crawl out of the hollow, I could see there wasn't much that could be done for it. The only comfort was to talk to it and stroke it. A feeble attempt to lick my hand, and it died. . . .

You know I still can't get over the callous nature of some people. There was not a brake mark on the road, and the only thing I was certain of was the speed of the car after it hit the dog. When you consider the devotion, love and affection that an animal gives us — to see it die like this is a pretty hard thing to take.

We humans are called animals of the higher class. — Says who!

Fishing has been good and bad, depending just where you were. I know we had some good fun with perch, even though the North River was very dirty. The creeks were much too high for wading, so I didn't have any luck with trout. Some of the fishermen did though, and I heard of one case where nine of the nicest Speckled were taken. These were all hooked on warms; nothing on spinning and flies. I also heard of a Grey being taken, a 4-pounder; this was on a Dare Devil troll. Outside of these, nothing much has been reported. Just as soon as the weather cools off, the Northerns will be hitting in the North River, so I know there will be action there. From all reports around the province, it has not been too good for anyone.

I had the good fortune to watch about 20 partridge along the roadside near Dunany — four grown birds, the others all this year's hatchings. What with the pheasants and now the partridge, upland shooters should have a lot of fun. There are also a lot of Doves around. Some good feeds are in prospect for someone.

I was told about the increase in the moose in our district. An observer was telling me of seeing two cows with young, and I have also heard of this species being sighted around the County. From reports there must also be a good number of deer around. Of course, this is only guess work — maybe they are the same ones being counted all over again.

You may remember I wrote of the supposed "floating" fly lines that never needed dressing of any kind. I should have known better, but I bought one this past week. I gave it a workout today (Sunday) — and the same old story: After about an hour of steady fishing it started to sink. Not too much at first, but after continued use it made a good wet fly line. . . . These lines may be good for the person who does not fish too hard, but for the avid enthusiast they sure leave a lot to be desired. I was given a spool of mono line (just a shade over a mile and a quarter) to try out. This is a limp mono, and I must say one of the best I have had the pleasure of using. (It was free — so why not!) The company puts it up in these big spools so that fishermen can save money. Believe me, the cost of this was only about the price of a couple of the other spools.

Just so I can get back into the swing of things, there are minnows being used in Lake Louisa. A couple of men I saw were netting them in one of the small creeks around Dunany for this purpose. I don't know if they are being sold, but I would imagine so. Let's hope we are not going to have this all over again. Just a few minnows dumped into any lake and, within a year or so, the game fish will be cleaned out and the coarse species will have taken over.

I noticed a number of tents around the district — not belonging to local residents. Stopping to talk to one of these groups, I was surprised to hear they did not know of our campsite up at Hill Head. Maybe a little advertising in this paper would help people a little. It's also not too well known to our own residents. So for those who don't know where it is — go to Hill Head, and it's right up at the top by the stream.

A new duck sanctuary is being opened in Ontario. It will be 1,700 acres and shooters will be allowed on the property, but only for one day. A fee will be charged, and the limit will be lower than our present ones. This seems kind of a dirty trick, feeding the ducks during the off-season and then letting in the hunters to take a crack at them. Thank goodness, the bag limit is small.

League executives entertained at Bolodrome

This photo, taken last Wednesday evening at the Bolodrome, shows a re-union of league committee members, preparatory to laying plans for the coming season. The bowling alleys were officially re-opened the following evening — with improvements to bring the establishment in line with modern trends.

Canada's recent speedboat triumph

SPORTS CAMERA

By Bruce Levett, Canadian Press Staff Writer

A dull bronze trophy, fastened to a weathered wooden base, proclaims that Canada holds a world championship.

It's the Harmsworth Trophy, won for world supremacy in the noisy, wet world of unlimited-class power-boating. But strangely, in a land where the Stanley Cup and Grey Cup are national symbols, this rust-colored tablet is almost unknown.

And it isn't for lack of a colorful history.

The trophy — formally the British International Trophy — was donated by Alfred Harmsworth who later became Lord Northcliffe of the famous British newspaper chain.

England won it first when it was put up for competition in 1903. The next year it went to France, then back to England for two years. The United States held it for four years, then England regained it for two.

Then Gar Wood came along and the trophy went to the United States for 36 years.

First Triple Win

Canada's Miss Supertest III has won it the last three years — the first time a single boat has ever scored a triple win.

Millions have been spent to possess this trophy.

Harry Esders of Paris spent $100,000 to build Excelsior in 1925. She was destroyed by fire in a trial run.

In 1926 he built another, at greater expense. This one actually started in a Harmsworth race on the Detroit River. She dived to the bottom after running only a few minutes.

Canada first got interested in 1930 when Marion Carstairs of England entered two boats — one built at Gravenhurst, Ont., and designed by Bert Hawker, a Canadian boatmaker.

Hawker drove his own creation — Estelle V — in the race, but a gas tank seam opened and dumped gallons of volatile fuel into the cockpit.

Estelle IV, driven by Miss Carstairs, hit a log in the first race.

Famous Series

The famed Kaye Don of England came over in 1931 with Miss England II and won the first of the best-of-three heats from the U.S. Gar Wood, in the second heat, drove Miss America IX across the starting line ahead of the gun, drawing Don over off-side also. This left Wood's second boat — Miss America VIII — the only fair boat in the race. But it didn't matter. Don turned over his craft on the first turn.

The boats have come in all sizes. Miss Supertest weighs more than 7,000 pounds — much of it in her 2,000-horsepower engine.

Wood packed 6,500 horsepower into Miss America X.

But despite its colorful past few boats can be found suitable to enter the Harmsworth these days.

The ugly bronze tablet has fallen victim to the jet age — nobody is doing research on the big reciprocal engines any more. For that matter, few countries are building them.

It seems the Harmsworth has gone just about as far as it can go.

Patient-list exceeds 1,000 alcoholics at "Domremy"

Domremy St. Jerome Inc. is a non-profit organization administered by some 30 volunteer businessmen of the region. With a few meagre subsidies and the tireless and devoted work of its volunteers, it has been successful in treating and rehabilitating over 1,000 alcoholics since its foundation barely four years ago. It has an enviable record in the field of rehabilitation. Records show that less than 4% of patients treated over a period of 1½ years have returned to their old habits.

Presently located in a converted farmhouse, which is not fireproof and has no cellar, Domremy cannot cope with the many demands for its services. It is always overcrowded and many times has to turn away men in dire need of help.

Proceeds from the Domremy Building Fund will go to erect a new, strictly functional hospital which will contain 20 rooms to accommodate over 40 patients, plus at least two private rooms for the gravely ill. The hospital will have a large utilitarian living room and cafeteria. Also, since it has been found that physical therapy is as important as medical and psychiatric treatment of alcoholics, a farm will be located adjacent to the building. This will provide patients with the type of outlet they need to tranquilize their harassed minds and bodies.

The minimum objective of the Domremy Building Fund is $150,000. This is needed to rehabilitate patients who are often considered hopeless and beyond help — to repair their broken lives and homes — to make them respectable, self-supporting members of the community. . . . Please help this vital work. Be generous when volunteer canvassers call on you.

Search for child missing from Buckingham, Que.

year-old Leo Bisson of Buckingham who disappeared last November)."

Informant who directed the search towards Lachute was a passer-by, Mrs. Jean Cadieux, and her two daughters.

"It's him, I'm sure of it," said Mrs. Cadieux (as reported in The Ottawa Journal), identifying a picture of the missing boy first feared drowned, but who may have been the victim of a kidnapping plot.

"I was so surprised to see such a small child — really only a baby — coming down the side of the highway near Lachute," said Mrs. Cadieux, on arriving in Buckingham Sunday night. "He wasn't crying but his little feet seemed sore ... he was limping a bit as he walked over the stones on the side of the road."

It's possible the boy was kidnapped and then abandoned by the abductors when publicity about the missing boy intensified, said Mayor Cameron.

A few hours before the boy was sighted, a farmer reported a panel truck on his land about two miles or so from where the boy was sighted by the Cadieux.

"His dog's howling drew the farmer's attention," said the mayor.

The boy's father, Frank Gingras, holds a responsible position with the J. H. MacLaren Pulp and Paper Company at Masson, Que.

Have You A Question on UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE OR EMPLOYMENT?

In this column we publish questions about unemployment insurance and employment, together with answers received from the Unemployment Insurance Commission.

If you are uncertain about any point do not hesitate to send us your question. We will obtain an answer and publish it in this column.

Q. — My wife has been unemployed for five months, during which time no employment was obtainable in her home town. If a job is offered to her away from her home town, will she be disqualified if she refuses to accept it?

A. — Although a wife has a legal and moral obligation to live with her husband, this principle may be outweighed in considering her availability for work by the length of her period of unemployment and the lack of local employment opportunities. If after five months your wife has been unable to find work in her home town she may be referred to suitable work elsewhere. She may be disqualified from unemployment insurance benefit if she refuses to apply for the employment of which she is notified.

Q. — I am drawing unemployment insurance benefits from the local office in this city. I have a prospect of employment in another city, but I am not sure whether or not I will land the job. Can I go away, and if unsuccessful, continue to receive my benefit?

A. — If you have to leave your local office area for the purpose of applying for work be sure that you inform your local office before you go, giving the purpose of your absence and the arrangements you have made so that you can be notified of any suitable employment opportunities which may turn up. A short absence for this purpose should not affect your entitlement to benefit if you report to your local office immediately upon your return.

AIR SAFETY

Montreal (CP) — A group of McGill scientists have completed a series of experiments with air cushions to curb the speed of jet aircraft at landing and take-off.

'Farmers Abroad' overseas tour in October

Montreal — For the third time in a year, a group of Canadian farmers will sail out of Montreal to visit the farmlands and countryside of Scotland and England.

The autumn tour of "Canadian Farmers Abroad", as the series is called, moves out of Montreal on Thursday, October 5 on the C.P. Empress of England, for a daylight run to Quebec along the St. Lawrence River, and on Wednesday, October 11, lands in the Clydeside port of Greenock for a motor coach run to Glasgow.

From then on, until they board Canadian Pacific's new Empress of Canada at Liverpool for the return journey, farmers from all parts of Canada will visit the Scottish breeding grounds of such well known cattle breeds as Shorthorns, Aberdeen Angus and Ayrshires, tour the Yorkshire moors and the Fen district of Lincolnshire, view the beauties of Norfolk, Cambridgeshire and Sussex.

The medieval city of Chester, Aberystwyth in Wales, Hereford, the ancient Roman City of Bath, Stonehenge, Salisbury and Winchester are also on the itinerary, and in visits to actual farms the visitors will see prize-winning herds of Herefords, Holsteins, Lincoln Reds, Large Whites and poultry.

The Canadian Farmers Abroad tours are organized and conducted on an all-inclusive cost basis by the Canadian Pacific in co-operation with "The Scottish Farmer", a leading farm publication in Scotland, and are endorsed by the Canadian Federation of Agriculture.

The autumn tour party will visit the London Dairy Show, and spend four days seeing the sights of the Commonwealth's metropolis.

The Canadian farmers may be surprised when they visit the 1,000-acre farm of Dick Joice, agricultural representative of Anglia Television and editor of "About Anglia", a daily TV program of the area. Not only is this a farm large by even Canadian standards, but he has devoted one-third to sugar beets, the remainder to grains. In addition he has evolved a hybrid chicken now selling in all parts of the world.

The British, with whom the Christmas goose has become traditional, also raise turkeys. One of the visits will be to an English turkey farm.

So popular are the Canadian Farmers' tours becoming that British farmers are planning to reciprocate, by organizing tours of British agriculturists to Canada.

MELVILLE FARMER'S OVERSIZED TRACTOR

Melville, Sask. (CP) — It was almost bound to happen. Following the trend to giantism which has produced bigger cars, a district farmer has built a bigger farm tractor.

Some of his neighbors might think Bill Bucholz' love of working with machinery got a bit out of hand. From an idea conceived in 1950, he moulded available materials and parts into a 150-horsepower farm tractor that looks more like an earth mover.

Of course a super-tractor, complete with four-wheel drive and power-steering, needs matching super implements and Mr. Bucholz took this in stride by building a 39-foot-wide cultivator.

Actual building time for the two projects was two years and the result is a $30,000 means of seeding 15 acres an hour — about three times the rate for standard equipment.

But now that he has solved the problem of seeding crops on the 2,000 acres he farms with his two brothers, Bill wonders what good is a mammoth tractor with standard harvesting machinery?

So he plans to have a 36-foot swather built for grain cutting.

Sales tax and separatism . . .

pute. "However," he added, "it is not in the interest of Quebec or Labrador to bring the matter up at the moment."

Mr. Lesage added that he thinks an agreement will be reached between the provinces and the federal government on subjects relating to sales taxes.

Seven of the 10 provinces now have their own sales taxes and Ontario is to join the fold with a three-per-cent levy, September 1.

One loophole in sales tax legislation allows a person to buy taxable items in one province and ship them to another, under certain circumstances, without paying tax in either province. Premier Lesage backed a plan to seal this escape hatch. He suggested that a province collect its own tax on such items or collect on behalf of the province where delivery is made.

At Mount Allison University, Mr. Lesage delivered a speech on the separatist movement in Quebec.

Mr. Lesage said recognition of the French language and culture is progressing rapidly in all provinces.

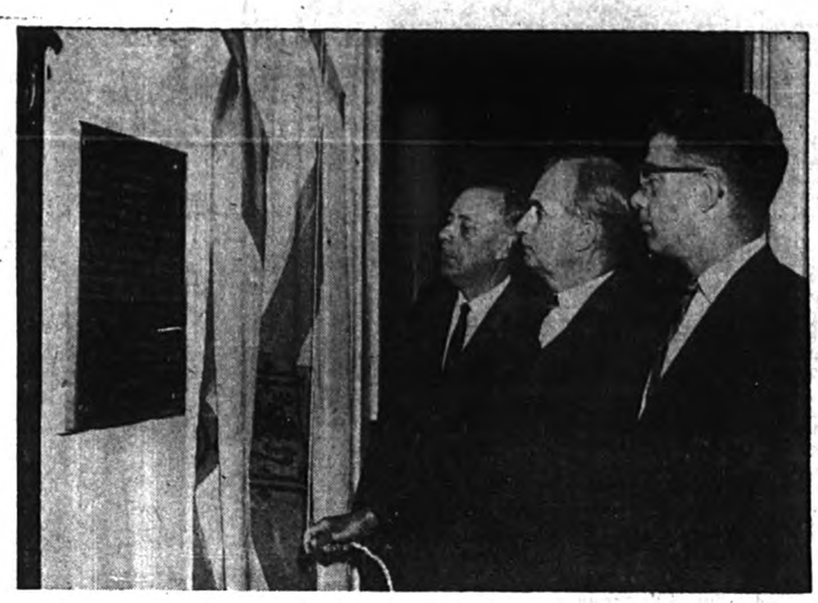

Mr. Lesage said Quebec separatists do not exercise influence over the majority of people, who are "more interested in reaping the benefits of rights given them in the Canadian constitution."

Mr. Lesage said Quebecers are learning to appreciate themselves and are forging the instruments needed to live as an "adult people" in a world of sovereign nations.

"They are conscious of the fact that the world they live in belongs to them, and it is up to them to develop its resources."

"They believe it will insure their survival if they make over their own economy."

Mr. Lesage said his government will make efforts to spread the French culture outside Quebec.

Newspaper pioneer honored

A plaque honoring Joseph Howe's accomplishment in establishing the freedom of the press in Canada was unveiled at Province House in Halifax last week by Hon. E. C. Plow, Lieutenant-Governor of Nova Scotia, in the presence of members of the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association. The Association held its 1961 annual meeting in the port city, site of Howe's rise to fame in both political and newspaper worlds. From left to right are Werden Leavens, past-president of the Association, from Bolton, Ont., His Honor the Lieutenant Governor, and the Hon. W. S. K. Jones, Provincial Secretary.

WHERE ARE THE KOOTENAY PASSES?

There are three Kootenay Passes through the Rocky Mountains on the British Columbia-Alberta border, all within 30 miles of the international boundary — the South, Middle and North Kootenay passes. The South Kootenay Pass, eight miles north of the border, was one of the chief routes used by Indians in prehistoric times and it continued to be used by the Kutenai Indians in the 19th century as their route to the annual buffalo hunt on the plains. As far as is known the first European to cross the South and North Kootenay passes was Blackiston of the Palliser Expedition in 1858.

INTRODUCING THE NEW CONSUL 315

Consul 315 Deluxe—Whitewall tires optional extra.

It's not quite a sports car, but quite a family sedan

For many months now, there have been rumours about the all new automobile recently introduced in Britain and The Continent by Ford of England. "Sports car turned family sedan" they said. Well—we know that the Consul 315 is a full size, five-passenger, low cost family sedan. We designed it that way. We know, too, that it incorporates many features found only on sports cars and high priced luxury cars. DISC BRAKES for example: '315' stops on a dime (sales tax included). 4-SPEED BOX as smooth as anything this side of Le Mans. BUCKET SEATS add to the sports car similarity. A 56 hp. (and a bit) short stroke engine delivers expressway acceleration and needs gas about as often as a camel needs water. Unlike a sports car (and many family size cars) '315' is practical about trunk space. In fact it's downright extravagant—swallows 21 cubic feet of anything you want to throw in there. And has this car been tested! 100,000 punishing test miles ... through the blazing sun of Africa. In the arctic cold of Scandinavia. Hammered for thousands of miles in central Europe. It clocked a further 50,000 miles right here in North America. As for looks—from sparkling grille to saucy raked-back roof, Consul 315 is every inch a family car ... your family's car. Try it soon. Any one of the Consul dealers shown below will be happy to let you do a few laps in a '315'. If it happens to act like a sports car, don't spoil the fun—enjoy it.

Mr. Willard MacLean, of Montreal, spent the week-end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Howard MacLean.

Those who spent the week-end at their respective cottages were — Mr. and Mrs. Carruthers, Mr. and Mrs. Verdier, Mr. and Mrs. Rayson, Mr. and Mrs. Rodrigue, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce, and Mr. and Mrs. Forest.

Mrs. Amison, who has been spending the past month visiting with Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Warren, returned to her home in Pointe Claire last Sunday.

Adverse propaganda

The British press was in a tizzy because members of the Leningrad Kirov Ballet took the opportunity provided by their visit to London to have quite a spate of dental work done at the U.K. taxpayers' expense under the national health plan. One young Soviet dancer, it seems, had 14 extractions, 11 fillings, two teeth crowned, and a couple of dentures as well, all at public expense as a guest of the United Kingdom. The Kremlin's reaction to this incident is not clear. What is clear, however, is that dental care in the U.S.S.R. must be of a pretty low order if members of so important a Soviet cultural propaganda group have to have their teeth fixed at the taxpayers' expense in Britain.

British irritation about the episode is understandable. However, rarely has any Western country acquired such a propaganda bargain, or unwittingly dealt such a blow at little cost to Soviet claims of progress on the health and welfare front.

Young couple pledged vows at Maple Ave. Church

Neill-Bennett

Standards of white and yellow gladioli formed the setting in Maple Avenue Baptist Church last Saturday afternoon, when Miss Violet Mae Bennett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Reginald Bennett, of Grenvill, exchanged vows with Mr. John Allan Neill, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert B. Neill, of Lachute and Dunany, in a double-ring ceremony conducted by the Rev. Richard McPhee. Mrs. Hugh Morrison, of Brownsburg, played the wedding music and Mrs. Robert Blakely, of Brownsburg, sang "O Perfect Love" and "The Wedding Prayer".

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown of white nylon net with a fitted bodice of Chantilly lace appliqued with sequins, having a scalloped bateau neckline and lace sleeves tapering to points over the hands. Lace appliqués trimmed the bouffant skirt, which ended in a chapel train. A coronet of sequins and seed pearls secured the bride's shoulder-length veil of tulle illusion, and she carred a cascade of red roses and white stephanotis.

The maid of honor, Miss Olive Kennedy, and bridesmaid, Miss Jean Berry, wore dresses of white and blue embroidered nylon net over taffeta, with matching hats, and carried cascades of yellow roses and gypsophelia. Miss Eileen Bennett, sister of the bride, was junior bridesmaid, and the flower girl was Miss Heather Neill, sister of the groom. Their dresses were of blue and white nylon; they wore matching hats and carried baskets of yellow roses and gypsophelia.

The bride's mother wore a Dior blue ensemble of silk organza and lace, toning accessories, and a corsage of pink carnations. The mother of the groom wore a gown of lace in moss green, with matching accessories. Her corsage was of tiny gold roses.

Wayne Neill acted as best man for his brother. Ushers were Murray Bennett, brother of the bride, and Wayne McRae.

Following the reception at the Brownsburg Legion Hall, Mr. and Mrs. Neill left on a motor trip to the Eastern States. For travelling, the bride chose a sheath dress of beige linen with matching jacket, green and brown accessories, and a corsage of Cymbodium orchids.

On their return they will reside in Hudson, Que.

A natural gas processing plant owned jointly by 27 companies that has been opened near Rimbey, 90 miles southwest of Edmonton, is the biggest of its kind in western Canada. The plant cost $12.5 million and is operated by British Amercian Oil Co. on behalf of other owners. It will feed gas to Alberta Gas Trunk Line for distribution to points as far as Montreal and San Francisco. Operator is seen checking valve on tower.

Of Many Things

MAGNIFICENT OBSESSION

Several years ago a book was published whose theme was the notion that if you do good in secret, the returns will be substantial.

I believe it. If I ever doubted it, I have good reason now for renewed faith.

This morning I came to work very early because I planned to make up for yesterday's dull performance. When I reached the building, I saw that a young man was standing by the small sign which bears my name. He was giving it a vigorous polish.

I knew that he was not a workman for the building, because he was dressed more like a clerk. There is a larger sign above mine, very much in need of polishing, but he did not polish it. He was just tucking his rags away when I greeted him.

"Nice job," I said, grinning, "but I can't quite understand . . . ?"

"You don't remember me?"

"You do look familiar," I said, "but I can't put a name on you . . ."

He told me that I had met him only once, about a year ago. He had come to my office looking for a job. He was from a small town, and he knew the editor of one of the papers that carry this column. The editor had suggested to him that he drop in to see me because I might help him get located.

I had written a letter for the young lad, outlining his age, qualifications and ambitions, and we ran it off on our mimeograph machine and sent it out to firms where we thought there might be an opening. I hadn't heard from him since. In fact, when weeks went by without a word, I had thought that he wasn't too smart a young fellow or he would have kept me posted on the results of the mailing.

"I should have called in to thank you," he said, "but you are a busy man and I guess I was a bit shy. So when I go by this way, I sometimes polish your sign — it sure gets dusty! Makes you look old-fashioned, a dusty sign."

Maybe I am old-fashioned, and the sign ought to be dusty, but I'm feeling pretty good today, a shine in my eyes and a lot of faith in humanity. What I did for that boy was peanuts, and partly prompted by a desire to please an editor who used my stuff, at that. But, no matter how poor my motive, the results were good. One young man thinks enough of me to stop and clean my sign. I don't deserve it, but I sure like it!

Diary of a Vagabond

BY DOROTHY BARKER

Tribute to Royalty

A group of around 100 Ontario weekly newspaper editors and their families, gathered recently in the capital city for their annual convention.

The only thing that threw them slightly off balance was the announcement by a uniformed aide-de-camp as we entered Rideau Hall for a reception that the ladies in the party must curtsy and the men bow when being presented to Their Excellencies, the Governor General and Madame Vanier.

There have been admittedly few occasions in the lives of these grass-roots members of the fourth estate to meet Royalty, or representatives of the Crown. This small matter of protocol sent a flutter of consternation rippling among the women, who asked each other whether one bent the right knee or the left, how far down they dip and what did one do if an arthritic knee protested in the process.

Groups gathered beneath the fabulous paintings of former Governors General. "How'm I doing?" they asked one another as they wobbled on spike heels and laughed at their awkwardness.

It has been some years since I made my first curtsy. This was during my teens when Edward, Prince of Wales, traveled across Canada by train on the first extensive Royal Tour, fluttering the hearts of every female on this side of the Atlantic.

Those of us who were chosen to meet this august person were given hours of instruction regarding our social demeanor while in the presence of the future King of England. It took considerable practice to accomplish a slowly bent knee, stiff back and gracefully extended right hand. We were told to say only, "Your Highness" as the handshake was accepted by the Royal Prince.

Princely Support

The most romantic figure in the world at that time was a small man with sandy hair and blue eyes, bleary from too much activity and too little sleep. But as my turn came to be presented, he suddenly seemed to tower over me like the Rock of Gibraltar. I clutched his hand and started folding like an accordion. I felt his grip tighten when my knees turned to water and I discovered I was standing on one foot like a stork with no idea as to what I had done with my other pedal extremity. Edward was a lad with a sense of humor. Undoubtedly he had experienced this kind of panic before among his female subjects. I remember hearing him murmur, "Steady, old girl", as he gave me some reassuring support until I had regained my equilibrium.

My second curtsy was a less painful and embarrassing experience. This was during the second World War when I was stationed with the WRENS in Ottawa. Princess Alice who, with the Duke of Connaught, represented the Crown in Canada at that time, requested a visit at a secret station where two members of the YMCA's Special Services, including myself, taught crafts to the enlisted girls.

There was little or no time to practise a curtsy. After the inspection of service personnel, the civilian staff was presented. I am sure Princess Alice did not notice my curtsy was only a bob. She was much more interested in the contribution the Y's branch of the service was providing than in making any mental criticism of my jerky tribute to her Royal station in life.

Tulips and Red Coats

Considerable thought has been given to the planting and colorful arrangement of Ottawa's famous tulips. Impressive was a huge bed of scarlet blooms that matched the red coats of the Mounties standing at the entrance to Rideau Hall's portico as our car drew up to the curb. I am an emotional person and my national pride is quickly stimulated. The avenue of maples along which one must drive after passing through the stately gates on Sussex Street to the home where our Sovereign's representatives are in residence is spectacular. Within Rideau Hall is one room entirely furnished with pine primitives. Pomp and elegance mellowed by the evidence of the country's pioneers!

Perhaps it is because I was steeped in the gracious hospitality of Queen Elizabeth's Canadian representatives that I rather resented an occurrence that took place while the convention was in session. As I walked in Confederation Square one evening I was told by an excited citizen that a flag had just been removed from the holder on the south-east side of the National War Memorial. Not the Red Ensign, but "a distinctive flag" attributed to the Evolutionary Movement of Canada. Spokesmen for this movement claim they will "go to any lengths" to use any masts in the city for the purpose of unfurling their flag. It is half red, half white with a green maple leaf in the centre.

There was a large group of school children on the train as I traveled to Ottawa. They were slated to attend a session of Parliament, meet their member, make a tour of the city and become thoroughly steeped in Canadian lore. Youth is impressionistic; pride in citizenship is a precious possession. I like to believe that this pride cannot be disturbed by any such whacky demonstration of illicit flag waving.

EDITORIAL NOTES...

"In this Parliament are three Estates, the Lords Spiritual, the Lords Temporal and the Commons, but in the Reporters' Gallery yonder sits a Fourth Estate more important far than all."

"Living History" for Canada centennial

CANADA'S CAPITAL has many attractions this summer for the visitor. . . . In the morning you can watch the traditional pomp and pageantry of the changing-of-the-guard on Parliament Hill, and in the afternoon ramble through the National Museum, Art Gallery and Mint. In the evening you can saunter along one of Canada's most scenic drives above the high banks of the Ottawa River.

Now the capital has given advance billing for an $8,000,000 "Mile of Living History." The federal government has approved a historic redevelopment of Sussex Drive — the capital's handsome ceremonial route from Confederation Square to the Governor-General's residence at Rideau Hall. Along the street are also located the Prime Minister's House, Ottawa's new city hall, the home of the United Kingdom High Commissioner in Canada, the French Embassy, the big Roman Catholic basilica and the National Research Council.

The new project to be carried out by the National Capital Commission — a federal agency responsible for the long-range development of the capital — calls for restoration of a stretch of historic buildings as "one of the few remaining links with Ottawa's past". The N.C.C. hopes to make the area look like a typical street of the Confederation period, and that this page out of Canada's past will be ready for the nation's centennial in 1967.

New food sources

THE PROBLEM of how the world can produce enough food to sustain its rapidly-expanding population has gained urgency with every new population forecast.

Considerable work is going on all the time, in many parts of the world, in trying to solve this food production problem. Here and there, worthwhile results are being achieved.

The Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations has just come up with two reports on typical projects.

A rice expert of the FAO after investigations in West Africa suggests that rice production there could be vastly increased by reclaiming millions of acres of tidal mangrove swamps along the coast and river banks. This has been started on a small scale, but many obstacles remain to be overcome — lack of large-scale mechanization, lack of storage and marketing facilities, lack of population in the growing areas, etc.

A second report tells how a Danish dairy production expert, Ejnar Faber, was sent to Brazil in connection with a project of the UN International Children's Emergency Fund to produce protein-rich skimmed milk for the poverty-stricken regions of northeast Brazil.

This expert worked three years in Brazil, showing farmers how they could grow five times more grass on their pasture land and quadruple the milk production of their cows. He introduced a number of new legumes, including clover, and brought in grass seeds (tall fescues) from the United States. With these, and phosphate fertilizer, range production was increased up to five times.

He also helped train farmers in practical methods of dairy production and extension services. Milk hygiene and herd sanitary problems were studied. The milk produced was shipped to a new dehydration plant managed by a co-operative society, which so far has been processing up to 3,500 gallons of milk daily. This yields perhaps 3,300 pounds of skimmed milk powder and 1,320 pounds of butter.

What happens with this new production? The co-op society can sell the butter through commercial channels, but the Brazilian government purchases all the skimmed milk powder at cost price, for free distribution to the undernourished children of the region.

For this continent, where farm problems in recent years have tended to become problems of surpluses, such international experiments are of more than casual interest.

Relax — and live longer

HURRY AND WORRY can do more to speed the human ageing process than any other factor. Pressure and tension mean stress, and stress is more fatiguing and consumes more energy than the hardest kind of physical labor.

That's the gist of the stress theories developed by Dr. Hans Selye of Montreal. His findings, with particular relation to heart disease, have been put into plain language in a new book "Stress and Your Heart" (McClelland and Stewart).

Writer of the book is Fred Kerner, Montreal-born former newspaper man now working in New York. An introduction by Dr. Selye says the author has succeeded in both objectives desired, in the public demand for books that explain medical research and at the same time translate its lessons into everyday terms.

"Each of us can learn to do much more to protect his heart against becoming sick than the physician can do after the trouble has gone too far," Dr. Selye says.

There are probably more than 50 categories of heart disease, with many subcategories. Most common are coronary thrombosis and angina pectoris. In looking for the cause of heart disease medical men are more and more pointing to three factors: heredity, high-fat diet and emotional strain. The dangers of stress have been increasingly emphasized.

High-fat diets, overweight, lack of exercise, certainly are factors since they lead to the condition known as atherosclerosis, or fatty deposits in the arteries, a prime cause of thrombosis.

But Gerner writes, a fat-rich diet cannot be the only cause of heart ailments. All people are different, and some arteries are able to handle fatty substances better than others.

Stress is a vital factor, apart from its fatiguing effect. It can disrupt the body's system so that proper blood circulation is impaired with the result the heart can easily be damaged.

To say "stop worrying and take things easier" may sound obvious, and may be difficult for the individual. But there is no simpler or more effective way of adding years to your life.

Unwilling tax collectors

ABOUT 350,000 Canadian businesses, from the biggest chain to the smallest corner store in eight provinces, will spend at least $14-million of their own money this year to carry out an unwilling, but compulsory, role as collectors of provincial retail sales taxes — writes Norton Anderson in The Financial Post. Ontario becomes the eighth province, on September 1, to go after consumers to raise $150 million a year. Seven other provinces (Manitoba and Alberta haven't touched this field yet) garner in $200 million from sales taxes.

In all cases, the governments' tax agents are businessmen. Many of them have become alarmed at the expenses involved in the job. They figure it costs the average clothing dealer $120 in out-of-pocket expenses every year to collect the taxes. The bill for a small cigar or service store might come to $166 a year. One company, doing business in all provinces estimates it spends $7,000-$10,000 a year to collect $1,500 in sales taxes, because of the "curse of exemptions creating mountains of internal paperwork." Another firm spends $98,000 to collect a little more than twice that amount in taxes.

Viewpoints and perspectives

ABLE WORKERS. — It is high time that science and industry alike take a new look at the process of ageing and the problems which will certainly arise in a growing community of people who are old in terms of years but young in terms of capacity for both mental and physical work.

THE LACHUTE WATCHMAN

75 YEARS AGO

Friday, Aug. 13, 1886 —

His Excellency General the Rt. Hon. Lord Alexander Russell has been appointed Administrator of the Government of Canada during the absence of Lord Lansdowne.

H. B. Lafleur Esq., mayor of Ste. Adele, spent a few days visiting his brother here.

Surveyors have marked the rocky itinerary of the proposed C.P.R. Laurentian line from St. Jerome to St. Jovite. The expedition was marked by the death of one of the engineers, who succumbed to typhoid before the end of the exploration.

During the month of July, 3,379 persons emigrated from Gt. Britain to Canada.

55 YEARS AGO

Friday, Aug. 10, 1906 —

Carillon — Mr. Robin Sheppard arrived this week to take a position as fireman on the Carillon and Grenville Railway.

A meeting was held in the Argenteuil Hotel to make arrangements for a grand picnic, to be held in Barron's Grove.

Cushing — Owing to the intense heat last Sunday, St. Mungo's Church service was held in the open air. During the offertory, Miss Roberta Wilson of Grenville sang a solo, "No Room in the Inn".

Lakefield — The Rev. Mr. Mount has left for Cacouna for two weeks' rest.

25 YEARS AGO

Thursday, Aug. 13, 1936 —

Rev. D. H. McVicar, of Buckingham, will address the Louisa Beach gathering, next Sunday morning, at Mr. R. Hamilton's summer home.

Scores of provincial and traffic police were on the scene when Premier A. Godbout addressed a rally in Lachute Auditorium in support of the Liberal candidate, Georges E. Dansereau. . . . Again this afternoon, Maurice Duplessis, Opposition leader, is here to speak in support of the National Union candidate, Albani Lamarche. . . . Meanwhile, Notary J. F. Lavigne is campaigning as the choice of the (U.N.) central organization in Montreal. Both claim they are "official candidates", and there are strong County factions in support of both.

Jos. Dumais, 18-year-old son of Mr. L. E. Dumais (Main Garage), suffered injuries in falling from a tree near Dalesville. Young Dumais is employed in the accountant's office of the D.C. Company at Brownsburg.

Georges Dansereau, M.L.A., stated in a Nomination Day speech that grants have been procured from Quebec for the Rouge River Bridge, $50,000; White's Bridge, St. Jerusalem, $30,000; for 17 miles of Lachute-Hawkesbury highway, $116,150; and for the Morin-Montfort highway, $25,000.

Mr. Gerald Walker is spending this week in Avoca as the guest of Mr. Lester McCallum.

Things 'n Stuff

By Walter Henry Jackson

'BOUT WASPS

J. Henri Fabvre, the great French naturalist, was a poor man all his life because he preferred the study of insects more than his job as schoolmaster. One of the many things he found out about insects was that they are unable to do anything except that which they are supposed to do. They cannot reason. They cannot adapt themselves to strange or unusual situations. I have on several occasions verified these observations by watching a nest of wasps. Right now there is a nest just overhead in my garage in Lost River. When the doors are closed the wasps enter by a certain crack between the boards of the door. When the doors are open, this crack is about four feet from the nest. But do the wasps fly direct to the nest? No indeed. They make for the wrong side of the crack that they always use, and expect to find the nest on the other side. They haven't sense enough to go to the nest, although it is there is plain view.

On another occasion a few years ago, they built a nest inside the shutter protecting the front door of my house when it is closed up. The nest was actually joined to the shutter, so after dark I unscrewed the hinges and a friend and I carried the shutter and nest about 75 feet from the house and stood it up against a birch tree. Next morning there wasn't a single wasp at the nest. They were all around the front door looking for it. I spent the whole morning with a fly swatter killing wasps, which is a thing I don't normally do. Live and let live is my motto.

Unless annoyed, wasps will never bother anyone. When making raspberry jam out of doors they have been attracted by the smell and go for the scum skimmed off the top during the process which I flicked off the spoon onto the rocks. I have had many of them crawling on my bare arms at the same time. I knew they would not sting me, because all they were interested in was the jam, and their nest, wherever it was, was in no danger.

So I have signed a non-aggression pact with those in my garage. They can stay as long as they want. I pass back and forth frequently right under the nest. But if one smart-alec decides to use his secret weapon on any part of my anatomy, I will retaliate after dark with a paper bag and a breadknife. And they seem to know that. So far we are good neighbors.

Be seein' ya!

— Uncle Walt

WILL BE MISSED

Moncton (CP) — John H. Brown, a watchmaker who for 47 years has been keeping the watches of railway men in running order, has retired. So deft were his fingers that in the days of coal-burning locomotives, engineers would have him remove cinders from their eyes.

All Aboard

with G. E. MORTIMORE

The door-to-door salesman put down his case and sat in the chair under the willow trees.

"People are much more friendly in the places where there is some shade," he said. "They sure are cranky in hot weather, along those streets that have no trees.

"The best-tempered people are the ones who live by the lake or the sea," he said.

Sales resistance, he observed, seems to go up with temperature.

Door-to-door salesmen might be wise to give away young trees to their customers who live on barren streets. In this way they would build long-term goodwill.

However, some customers are too hospitable. Another door-to-door man, who picks up and delivers dry cleaning, told me that if he accepted all the glasses of beer that were offered to him along his route on a hot day he would soon be in jail for impaired driving.

So he thanks the people, and turns all the offers down.

Everybody knows about birthday cards, "get well" cards and Christmas cards. A less familiar kind, which is coming into greater and greater use, is the "We're going on holiday" card.

Beginning in the month of May, industrial and government purchasing agents receive cards announcing that their suppliers are going to shut down for vacation. A purchasing office of any size will accumulate a package of a dozen or more cards, from factories and wholesale houses.

Some cards are inscribed with cute messages like "Goin' Fishin'" and cartoons of people disporting themselves on beaches.

Certain of the suppliers announce that they are operating with skeleton staffs. Others declare that they are going to shut up shop altogether for a week or two.

The custom of closing for part of the summer appears to be on the increase — to such an extent that in some lines of work it becomes nearly impossible to reach anyone or get anything done.

We might save time and effort if we surrendered to this trend, declared a summer festival, and shut down the offices and factories for a month, and awarded a holiday to everyone — except the people who work for stores, hotels, gas stations and transportation companies.

DISTRICT NEWS

FROM OUR COUNTY CORRESPONDENTS

Cushing

Mrs. Geo. Drew, of Verdun, visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Canning, on Tuesday.

Mr. J. C. Dougall and son, Graham, paid a brief visit to "Millbank Cottage" on Monday.

Mrs. J. L. Maw, who has been spending much time in Cushing this summer, left Tuesday to visit her daughter, Mrs. K. Trickett, of La Jolla, California.

Mrs. L. C. Cook, who recently spent several weeks with Miss A. Davidson, attended a reunion of the O'Brien family in Michigan, where 70 members of the clan were gathered.

The Misses Annie and Betty McDowell have been spending the past week with their brother, Mr. Jack McDowell, at "Glenifer". Miss Annie returned to Montreal on Sunday night.

Miss Margaret Bradford, of the North River Road, was a week-end guest of Miss Doris Elliott.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Bailey, of Montreal West, were overnight guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. Bailey last week. Mrs. Florence Holmes, of Montreal, was their week-end guest, and Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Bailey were guests on Saturday.

Guests at the Graham home on Sunday were Mrs. Wm. Griffiths and daughter, Jean, of Toronto, also Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Dougall and son, Graham, of Cote St. Luc. Master Graham is spending this week with his uncle, Mr. A. T. Graham.

Mrs. I. H. Fuller, accompanied by Mrs. J. A. Bradley, of St. Andrews, visited Mr. Bryerton, Sr., of Brownsburg Road, on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. D. Massey and six children, of Three Rivers, will occupy "Inglecleft", in Cushing, for the school months; Mr. Massey has been engaged as French specialist at Grenville Consolidated School.

Mr. and Mrs. Little, of Safe Harbour, N'fld, are visiting their daughter, Mrs. A. G. Moore, at her summer home in Cushing.

Farewell Party

St. Mungo's Church W.A. regret the loss of their treasurer, Mrs. Raymond Holmes, who has returned to her old home in St. Thomas, Ont., to the regret of many friends in Cushing. Mrs. Holmes taught in St. Mungo's Sunday School and quite frequently used her car to bring children, too far away to walk, to Sunday School. Her car, too, was at the disposal of her friends whenever possible. . . . Mrs. Holmes was also a vice-president of Frontier Branch Women's Institute, and was a prominent actor in the play that Institute performed in several places ("Here Comes Charlie").

Members of both organizations and other interested friends tendered a surprise farewell party in St. Mungo's Church Hall, on Friday night. Frontier W.I. presented her with a beautiful plate. . . . Cushing friends presented a pen and pencil set, also a sum of money. Her little son, Richard, was not forgotten; he too was presented by Mrs. King with a mug upon which the word Cushing was printed, also with a copy of the book, "The Enchanted Wood", by a local author.

In a short speech, Mrs. King praised Mrs. Holmes' fine qualities, and all who attended were in full agreement, as Mrs. Holmes' departure from Cushing is a distinct loss to the community.

Avoca

The Rev. and Mrs. Wm. Toller and children are on a trip to Rochester, N.Y., to visit the former's sister and their parents, who are coming from Edmonton.

Dr. and Mrs. Lester McCallum and son David, accompanied by the former's mother, Mrs. Neill McCallum, called on his brother and grandmother, Mrs. James Arthurs, and a few friends in this community.

Mr. J. M. Doherty spent the week-end at his summer home.

Mr. Evan Bates is improving, after a sick spell last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Doan, of Port Colborne, were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Evan Bates.

Mrs. Cecil Young entertained the young people of the United Church on Thursday evening last. A pleasant time was spent.

Miss Lindy Brown is visiting friends at Smiths Falls, Ont. Her brother is spending a holiday at the McCauley Camp.

There will be service in St. Mary's Anglican Church on Sunday, August 27, at 2.30 p.m. The new rector, the Rev. Mr. Reid, will conduct this service.

Rivington

Best wishes for the future are extended to Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Ward on the occasion of their marriage, Saturday, August 19.

There will be no service next Sunday, August 27, in the Rivington Baptist Church; the Rev. Wm. Toller is away on a well deserved holiday. Regular services will be resumed on Sunday, September 3.

That nasty, gravelled bump on the Gauley hill has been smoothed and covered with asphalt.

The catch of fish this summer, between the Dam and the "Marble", has been very small. The river has been unusually high.

Beavers Active

The beavers are staging a comeback. A colony of them has built a dam on Elmer Ward's property. Jim Trineer also reports that beavers have cut small trees on his property.

Meditation on tradesmen — light in dark places — and the weather

"Sunnyacres Sketches"

By Margaret Cook

Did you ever exclaim, "So THAT'S what it means!"? The inward meaning of a saying suddenly dawns on you, and you are amazed. This is always happening to the writer, we are happy to say. This could be indicative of extraordinary ignorance, or of an extraordinary intelligence — take your pick. Anyway, we were reading recently, one of those military stories which so cunningly extol the valor of American troops, when we came across an interpretation of the words, "And the Word was made Flesh." The word, in this case, was "courage", which, of course, was a virtue often mentioned in military courses, but the true significance of it did not penetrate the mind of a certain officer, until he saw a perfectly ordinary private rush out to rescue a fallen comrade, although he knew that the enemy (in this case, Chinese) often used the groans of the wounded to entice others, so they, too, could be shot. But it was not until the officer saw the word courage made flesh by the private, that he understood the meaning of the scriptural text.

The other moment of illumination came when the electricity was turned on at Sunnyacres just recently. . . . Of which, more later. . . . We have always thought that the text, "The light shineth in darkness, and the darkness comprehendeth it not", meant that the light of spirituality shines in the worldliness, and the worldliness does not understand. Instead, the world "comprehendeth" is used in the Elizabethan meaning of covering, or swallowing up. So — "The light shineth in darkness, and the darkness is not able to smother it" is a free translation of the thought hidden to our modern eyes in the saying. The first meaning is pessimistic; the second, optimistic. . . . Wonderful!

Yes, we have electricity at Sunnyacres. For years we had a generator in the shed, which functioned through batteries. Once or twice a week, we let the thing go put-put for a couple of hours, then the batteries took over until the charge was expended. The resultant lights were rather feeble, but they had the virtue of turning on instantly, and there was no washing of chimneys or fussing with oil. Then, one day, when the motor was on, a piece (the size of a small platter) flew out of the casing, narrowly missing the head of the "head", if you grasp what I mean. Since then, we have depended on an Aladdin lamp, supplemented by the feeble rays of ordinary ones. The Aladdin gives an excellent light, but is as temperamental as a prima donna. A slight draft causes it to shiver violently, and the flame shoots up. If there is no draft, a little cone-shaped thing called the "mantle" blackens or breaks. As a janitor in one of the big city buildings says of his oil furnace, "You have to treat it pradically like a baby."

When the power company finally put the electric line through our parts, only three years ago, we were busy educating the daughter, and that seemed more important than putting in lights; and anyway, the old house did not seem to care for powerful lights. It was not built for such, and they seemed an anachronism. But the daughter is educated (or so various scrolls testify), and we are writing a book — and suddenly, romance lost its attraction; we wanted light. . . .

What a moment when we flicked the first switch, and the lights bloomed over the dining-room table. People, like ourselves, who have always had electricity, have no idea of the joy of having it suddenly. Our joy was made greater by the memory of the dark days that preceded the light. The days when the work was being done, and the men wrestled with the hundred-years-old walls; days when they tracked plaster dust all over the painted floors; days when they mysteriously disappeared, leaving one to wonder when they would return. Finally, one cleaned up the mess, and settled back to endure — when lo, they reappeared, and the thing repeated itself like a bad movie. We are told this is normal conduct by electricians, and it is true that we have noted a tendency that way among decorators. But we HAVE had dealings with men who set a date and kept it. (We are not talking socially.) One was a Scot, who, when he said "I'll be there at nine-thirty", WAS. He was a former lightweight champion of something or other. Does wrestling foster punctuality? That was several years ago, but this very last winter a man from a well-known electronics company arrived at ten-thirty, as he had promised; and one, just one, of the big Montreal departmental stores, has consistently kept its word about service. I am also happy to be able to record that the power company were both prompt and courteous. . . .

Anyway, we have lights; and at night the old house, from the outside, reminds me of those endearing little churches lighted inside, that are sold at Christmas time.

All this about light — now for animals. We have seen a fox crossing our back yard, so they are recovering from the recent decimation by rabies. Perhaps now the mice will not be quite so gay. The Sunnyacres mice are having a bad time, as not only Peter, the Persian, is here, but Evie, the daughter's black and white alley-cat. The latter spent last night on the miniature brass doll's bed in the daughter's room, while she slumbered on the king-sized one.

A skunk, partly grown, habitually ambles out into the road, as we return from dinner at the local hotel. We wait politely until he turns back, then edge warily past. A woodchuck lives under the shed, and ventures out to eat in the evening. The porcupine that for years lived in that same spot, has not been seen this summer. We have seen one deer, and several partridge, and the wood-pile has a colony of snakes. We hear what we suppose are raccoons at night, but are too lazy to get up and look. . . . All these animals are much more active when there is a full moon. Even Peter is rather rebellious about staying in on a moonlight night. Is it the simple fact that there is light, or has Lady Moon some mysterious influence, as the ancients thought?

For the rest, August wanes, and here and there a few leaves are turning a dull red. Everything, except the leaves, is behind schedule. Some of the phlox, generally at their best at this date, are just in bud; the apples are mostly small and green yet; the Joe Piweed, the jewel weed, are bright and gay, instead of beginning to look bedraggled. . . . A peculiar season. . . . And how it rains! Electric storms are a commonplace, and we hope the ground-wire is well and truly grounded. — This seems to bring us back just about where we came in, so we take our exit.

A Weekly Feature of Helpful Hints on Child Training.

Goals for Pre-School Child

— By NANCY CLEAVER —

September approaches and in thousands of homes, mothers are concentrating on clothes for school age boys and girls. The long vacation is over and soon the children will be off to school. Suitable, durable apparel, similar to what other children are wearing, is part of a pupil's equipment. But the training a little child has received at home prepares him for the school world too.

In this day when there is so much emphasis on education, it is of great importance that a child beginning school should enjoy it. Sometimes a scholar is unhappy and unsuccessful at school because he has not learned skills which will help him adjust to school life. Maybe his mother has been busy with other children, perhaps she has been employed outside the home and Junior, like Topsy "just growed" with little direction.

Recently, ten positive suggestions of definite goals for the pre-school child were made, based on study on this problem by specialists at a Psychological School Clinic of a large city. Read over the questions, based on these suggestions, and decide whether or not you think they are reasonable and helpful. If you have a child starting school, see how you rate in the preparation you have given him or her.

Can your child put on his own coat, outer clothing, rubbers or overshoes? Is he able to tell his clothes from another child's? Has he had practice in the use of zippers, buttons and other fasteners?

Can he get a drink alone? Does he, not only not wet nor soil his clothes, but can he look after himself at the toilet, both unfastening and fastening his clothes? Do you send him to school with a handkerchief and does he realize when he needs to use it, and do so without help?

Can he talk in short easy sentences which the teacher and his playmates will be able to understand? If his baby "talk" has been amusing to the adults at home, and he has not been encouraged to speak plainly, this is an unnecessary handicap.

Has he been left from time to time for half a day in the care of an adult with whom he is happy? Has he been taught to say "Goodbye" and part without tears from his mother? After a little chance to become acquainted with "teacher" and school chums, will he not cry too easily nor be too disturbed because he cannot run to his mother?

Has he been playing reasonably well with other children his own age so that he is not afraid of them? Does he not hurt another child nor let others tease him constantly?

In his play, has he learned to roll a ball on the floor back and forth to another person? Can he walk up and downstairs unassisted? Can he grasp simple ideas about space and motion?

Can he pay attention while a short story is read aloud or while an activity or a game are explained? Is he able to sit reasonably quiet for short periods.

Has he had the opportunity to draw and use large crayons on big sheets of paper? Has he used chalk on a child's blackboard? Is he happy "making pictures"?

Has he had fun cutting out pictures with blunt scissors? Does he know, and can he name correctly, the familiar colors? Has he had a chance to mould objects with plasticene? With a little help, will he put away play material willingly in its proper place?

Has he some concept of number and form — the difference between big and little, near and far, high and low? Does he notice objects which are also somewhat alike but not identical, such as a teaspoon and a tablespoon? Does he know that a table has four corners, a cup is round, and similar ideas? Can he go and get two forks, three oranges and perform other simple chores involving counting?

Few children starting to school will be able to do all of these things, but they should be able to do most of them. These are simple skills which a pre-school child should acquire at home. They are goals worth aiming at and so it is useful to clip out this information and keep for future reference.

SMARTENING UP

Women are smartennig up. Little by little they are getting a better deal for themselves from our various governments, and from employers. And they are achieving all this without going on the rampage the way their grandmothers did in the days of the suffragettes.

Joke of the Week

"From now on I'll get my own paper and slippers, thank you!"

Peach treats for now — and later

(Consumer Section)

There are many varieties of peaches, but tops are the juicy, yellow-fleshed, freestone type, that grow principally in the orchards of British Columbia and the Niagara Peninsula. Freestone peaches have always been popular because of their ease of handling, for freestone means that the flesh pulls away readily from the stone.

Peaches are sold generally by the basket containing from 2 to 8 quarts, by the quart box or by the pound. British Columbia peaches may also be packed according to a specific number or count in standard size boxes. Whether you are planning to preserve the fruit in some way, or use it for desserts and snacks, will determine the amount to buy. To buy more than can be used in a short time is not practical, for peaches are quite perishable.

Peaches are graded for quality when packed and the container is stamped accordingly. The grades are Canada No. 1, and Canada No. 2. Select top quality peaches, especially for canning and freezing, as they are less wasteful. These will be free from bruises and blemishes and have a somewhat creamy complexion with overlying blush. Peaches with a slight greenish tinge should be kept at room temperature until they ripen, rather than being stored in the refrigerator.

Here are some peach treats for now and later. These recipes were tested at the Consumer Section, Canada Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Glazed Peach Tarts

6 Large baked tart shells, 3 medium large peaches, ½ cup water, ½-⅔ cup sugar, few grains salt, 1 cup thinly sliced peaches, 4 teaspoons cornstarch, 2 tablespoons cold water.

Blanch and peel peaches, cut in half and remove pits. Heat water, sugar and salt, drop in peach halves, cover and simmer for 1 to 2 minutes depending on firmness of flesh. Lift peaches from syrup and drain, cut side down, on cake rack. Reserve syrup.

To make peach glaze: Add sliced peaches to reserved syrup. Cover and boil gently until slices are very tender, about 5 minutes. Press this syrup-peach mixture through a sieve. Measure and if necessary add water to make 1¼ cups. In a saucepan mix cornstarch and cold water; add syrup mixture; cook until clear and thickened, 3 to 4 minutes. Cool slightly.

To fill tarts: Spoon 1 tablespoon of peach glaze into each tart shell; top with a peach half, cut side down. Cover with 1 to 2 tablespoons of peach glaze. Chill thoroughly. 6 servings.

Pickled Peaches

8 Cups sugar, 4 cups vinegar (cider or blended), 1 cup water, 1 ounce stick cinnamon, ½ ounce whole cloves, 4 quarts small peaches (8 lb.).

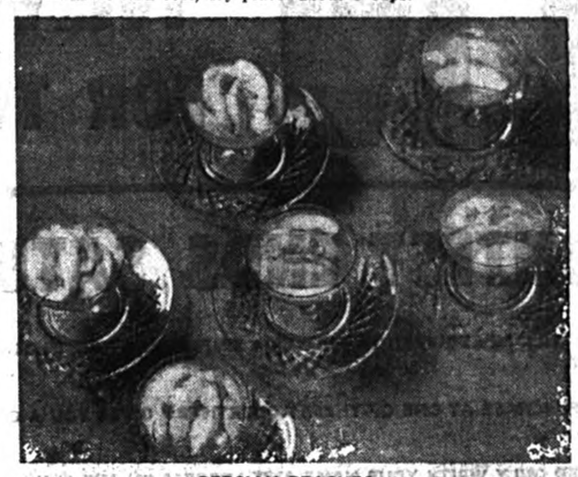

Boil sugar, vinegar, water and stick cinnamon, uncovered, for 10 minutes. Peel peaches. Stick 2 whole cloves in each peach. Add peaches to syrup and cook slowly until tender, about 5 to 8 minutes. Let stand in syrup 10 to 12 hours. Then remove peaches and strain syrup to remove cinnamon. Bring syrup to boil and boil rapidly, uncovered, for 5 minutes. Pack the peaches in hot sterilized sealers, cover completely with hot syrup and seal. Store in a cool, dry place for several weeks before using. Makes about 8 pint sealers.

Note: If peaches are very juicy, omit the water.

Peach Chutney

6 Cups peeled, chopped peaches, 4 cups peeled, chopped apples, 2 cups raisins, 4 cups brown sugar, 2 teaspoons cinnamon, 1 teaspoon cloves, 1 teaspoon allspice, 2 teaspoons salt, ½ teaspoon black pepper, 1½ cup cider or malt vinegar.

Combine all ingredients and cook slowly, stirring frequently until thick, about 1 hour. Pour into hot sterilized jars and seal. Makes about 6 cups.

PERSIAN PEACHES

Persian Peaches are a delicious and different treat, and there's nothing at all to the making. Just combine 4 cups sliced peaches in a bowl with ½ cup orange juice; 3 tablespoons honey; 1 to 2 tablespoons thinly sliced ginger, and a few grains of salt. Mix gently, cover and chill for about 1 hour. Spoon into 6 sherbet glasses and serve.

APPEARS USELESS

Montreal (CP) — Stuck away in the corner of the Montreal Transportation Commission's Youville shop is an ornate old carriage. Nobody knows what it is, or who it belongs to.

The carriage has wreaths and garlands carved on its gilt panels. The coachman's perch is decorated with a length of faded velvet, and the leather upholstery, now cracked, is turquoise.

It was found six or seven years ago in one of the MTC's old power houses and was transferred to the Youville shop when the power house was closed.

MTC officials think it was built early in the century for a royal visit, a St. Jean Baptiste Day parade, or some other ceremonial function.

wonder QUESTIONS ?

ANSWERED BY THE RESEARCH SERVICE OF THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE

I WONDER . . . Curiosity is a priceless gift. A youngster's daily questions indicate a bright, inquiring mind. They should be answered intelligently. In this column The Watchman, in co-operation with The Book of Knowledge, will print questions — and their answers — most frequently asked by children of their parents.

What Do We Mean by Humidity?

"The temperature is 80, the humidity is 75." Perhaps you have been puzzled by a statement of this sort in the paper. What is meant by humidity?

The air is not composed of a simple substance. It is made up of a number of gases. Nitrogen is one; oxygen is another; carbon dioxide is a third. Another is water vapor, or evaporated water.

There is always a certain amount of this vapor in the air. The amount that the air can hold at any one time is determined by the temperature. The higher the temperature, the more water vapor the air can contain. When it can take up no more, we say that it has reached the saturation point. If any more is added, the vapor collects in the form of dew, mist, rain, hail or snow.

Now by humidity we simply mean the amount of water vapor in the air. Absolute humidity is the weight of the water vapor per cubic foot of air. Generally, however, when we refer to humidity, we mean relative humidity. This is percentage of water vapor in the air with respect to the total amount of vapor that the air can hold. When we say that the temperature is 80 and that the humidity is 75, we mean that the air has 75 per cent of the water vapor that it can contain at a temperature of 80.

When the temperature is high the air can hold a good deal of water vapor. When both temperature and humidity are high, we say the weather is heavy. We feel uncomfortable. Yet our bodies need some water vapor. Where the air is hot and very dry, human beings cannot maintain health for long. We are most comfortable when the humidity is neither too high nor too low.

Do Animals Talk to One Another?

No other creatures can talk a thousandth part as well as we do. But certainly many kinds of animals can talk to each other in their own way. You have heard a dog bark to warn of danger or to express joy, or anger or loneliness. You have heard a mother robin coaxing her young to try their wings and a calf telling its mother that it is hungry. Monkeys can make many different sounds that have different meanings.

The squeal of a pig, the neigh of a horse, the baa of a lamb, the trumpeting of an elephant, the moo of a cow, the bray of a donkey — all the sounds that animals make seem to express feeling to our ears. We know too that fear can spread very quickly among a group of animals and certainly the fear must be communicated, at least in part, by their cries.

Many insects can talk in their own way. This is especially true of those we call social insects — the ants and bees and wasps. We call them social because they live together in groups, or societies. This they could not do if they had no way of talking. These insects have long feelers with which they can touch each other and make certain things understood.

Taste as you go. That's the advice of the experts when it comes to making sandwich fillings.

August is sandwich month and the federal agriculture department has preparation tips for homemakers. First: try the filling with the bread to make sure it has sufficient seasoning and flavor interest.

Make certain that the filling is sufficiently moist to prevent dryness in the sandwich but not so moist that it seeps into the bread. Complement the flavor of the filling with the ingredient used for moisture — such as salad dressing, mayonnaise, milk, cream, catsup, chili sauce or fruit juice.

Flat fillings can be pepped up with salt and pepper, a few drops of lemon juice, vinegar, pepper sauce or Worcestershire sauce, prepared or dry mustard, chopped pickles or olives, horseradish or whatever seems most suitable. But be sure to add only a little at a time.

Something crisp or crunchy is suggested for the filling. You might try adding lettuce, cucumber, pickle, nuts, celery, green pepper, carrot or cabbage.

And for a touch of originality add a trace of a suitable herb or spice. Mustard goes well with cheese, basil with tomatoes, curry or savory with chicken, oregano with lamb or pork, celery seed with cole slaw, marjoram with onion and cayenne with egg.

For meat sandwiches, use several thin slices of meat rather than one thick one.

Gay Garnishes

Here are some garnishes that are both gay and good to eat.

For dill pickle or cucumber circles remove the centre with an apple corer and stuff with pimento cheese. Chill and slice.

Stuffed apple rings: Core small red apples and fill centre with soft Roquefort-type cream cheese. Chill and serve.

Celery pinwheels: Fill hearts of celery, still attached to root end with softened processed cheddar cheese. Wrap tightly. Chill and slice.

Prepared meat stacks. Spread slices of prepared meat with cream cheese seasoned with horseradish or mustard. Stack five or six slices, chill and cut in wedges.

Color plays an important part in making a sandwich tray attractive. Here are garnishes listed under their color to mix or match on a tray.

Red: beets, cherries, cranberries, jelly, pimento, radishes, strawberries and tomatoes. Green: asparagus, celery, chives, gherkins, green pepper, lettuce, mint jelly, olives, parsley, peas, pepper grass, pickles and watercress. Yellow: cheese corn, egg yolk, lemon slice or grated rind, unpeeled pears, string beans, turnip.

Orange: apricots, carrot curls, sticks or slices, orange or grated rind, peaches, pimento cheese. Black: prunes, pickled walnuts, ripe olives. White: cottage or cream cheese, cucumbers, hard cooked egg whites, white cabbage. Brown: dates, figs, nuts, potato chips and raisins.

Police agency on permanent basis, one-year service contract signed

At an adjourned Council session on Monday, the services of Phillips Investigation Bureau as police protection for this town were retained for a one-year period. . . . It is recalled this agency was engaged on a temporary basis on the resignation of Lachute's regular police force last June, and the record of Phillips service in the meantime has been considered excellent. It is also indicated this engagement of an outside agency effects a saving to the municipality.

The contract outlined by Mr. Phillips, head of the organization, involves $36,000 expense for the year — providing a staff of seven officers on rotating schedule, with an additional constable for peak traffic hours — Friday evening and during Sunday religious services — making a total of 528 man-hours weekly.

The $36,000 will include an automobile supplied by the agency, uniforms, insurance, maintenance and all necessities for an adequate patrol staff. Equipment in the present police emergency vehicle will be transferred to the Phillips car.

When it is considered that regular police service has cost $600 a week in salaries alone, plus the car and maintenance, outfitting and other expenses — it is understood why the Council has decided readily in favor of this plan.

Before concluding the agreement, the mayor made it clearly understood that the police system was primarily for public protection, not to exploit motorists or capitalize on minor offences. "We do not expect the police to produce big revenues, but we look for every protection required for our residents."

Mr. Phillips was gratified to remark that Lachute was the first community in Quebec to eptrust its police department to an agency specializing in this service, and forecast that 20 years from now this would be a general procedure. "You are the first municipality to adopt such a contract, and rest assured, we will see that we merit your satisfaction and that of population of Lachute."

The contract will be of one year's duration from September 1, with 30 days' notice from either party to terminate the agreement. Mr. Phillips further assured the Council that, in employing new staff, preference would be shown to local citizens provided they were adequately qualified.

Aldermanic vacancy to be filled; civic elections due in November

Réal Morrissette, alderman for West Ward, tendered a letter of resignation which was read and accepted at the adjourned Council meeting last Monday. Mr. Morrissette has changed his place of residence to Calumet, where he acquired a hotel business some weeks ago.

Ald. Réal Morrissette

Mayor Fernand Legault expressed regret at the resignation; Ald. Morrissette had given loyal service in his civic office, and had displayed fine public spirit.

Mr. Morrissette also served as Mayor of Ayersville for a period of several months.

The mayor declared a nomination Monday, September 11, to fill the vacancy, with contest if necessary on the following Monday, September 18.

The appointee for this seat will hold office only until expiry of the term, in November this year.

Election day in Lachute will be Wednesday, November 1 — nominations closing a week previously, on October 25.

Aldermen vacating seats this November would normally continue their term of office until February. However, the date of elections was changed by Council following last winter's contests.

Seats being vacated are those presently occupied by Ald. Réal Morrissette, West Ward; Ald. Horace Lamarche, Centre Ward; and Aldermen Stanley Holt and Alphonse Thibodeau, East Ward.

Calumet man drowning victim in Grenville Canal

Lucien Dinel, a 64-year-old Calumet resident, was drowned in the Grenville Canal around 5.30 p.m. on Sunday, the body being recovered a short time after the drowning. According to Georges Dubord, a canal employee on duty at the time of the accident, the victim took off his hat and coat while walking along the canal and then toppled into the water.

Dubord informed Q.P.P. Officer Gilles Lavigne that he rushed for a life-belt to throw into the water and then, remembering the stairs close-by, ran down the steps to the water, where he saw the victim disappear.

The body was recovered from 30 feet of water by Jean Bell and Réal Ranger, both of Grenville, and Maurice Beauregarde, of Ste. Therese, some two hours after the incident. A member of the family informed police that Mr. Dinel has suffered from attacks of bronchial asthma for some 25 years. An air pump used to relieve these attacks was found floating in the canal.

Joint district coroner Dr. Roger Lavigne declared the death "accidental, due to drowning".

Awaiting word on contract for W. River bridge

The Department of Roads will proceed with the building of a bridge over the West River, for the continuation of Hamford Street in Ayersville Municipality, and the government will also build the approaches to this bridge, and defray cost of expropriations if necessary.

Word to this effect was communicated in a letter from the Hon. Bernard Pinard to the Council of Ayersville, which indicated also that the only expense accruing to the municipality will be that of lighting the bridge.

Tenders for construction were advertised by the Department some time ago. Date for opening of the tenders was July 27 last, but so far the Department of Works has not announced the successful bidder, nor the date for commencement or conclusion of the job. The tenders were eligible only to contractors established in Deux Montagnes, Labelle, Terrebonne, Argenteuil or Ile Jésus.

At a recent meeting of Ayersville Council, it was agreed to meet costs of lighting the proposed bridge, and to pay for the electrical installations and their maintenance.

Reproductions show works of notable Canadian painters

The second 1961 exhibition of the Argenteuil Art Association was opened Saturday by the president Mrs. L. T. Porter, in the council room at St. Andrews East, where it will continue on display to the public until Sunday, September 3.

During the past six years, exhibitions have been either those of Argenteuil hobby painters or loans by Montreal professional artists. This however, marks an important step in the Association's development, being the first direct contact and loan exhibition from this most important source, the National Gallery at Ottawa. Gratitude was expressed by the president for their cooperation and recognition.

The prints and silk screen reproductions are of that important group of Canadian paintings presently housed in the first and second floors of the Lorne Building in Ottawa, so named to honor the creator of the National Gallery of Canada, then Governor General the Marquis of Lorne, and his wife, Princess Louise, daughter of Queen Victoria.

It is a privilege open to everyone to view the originals in Ottawa. For those who have not done so, this exhibition serves as an introduction; to those who have, it serves as a delightful refresher.

In a place of honor appear portraits of Queen Elizabeth II and her Consort, Philip Duke of Edinburgh, by Lillias Torrance Newton, one of that distinguished group who were privileged to study under William Brymner at the Montreal Beaux Arts.

By Arthur Lismer, presently Director of Education at Montreal Museum of Fine Arts, are "October on the North Shore" in the brilliant autumn colors of our province, together with an interesting free ink sketch "Tree Formations". Dr. Lismer and his friend, Frank Varley, were students together at the School of Fine Art at Sheffield, England, and at the Royal Academy at Antwerp. Masters of their craft, only close examination of their paintings reveals the various means by which they attain their objectives.

By Tom Thomson — the magnificent colorist whose few painting years left a great number of sketches made while he travelled as canoeist, hunter and fisherman in Algonquin Park and relatively few large completed paintings. . . . His colors are a delight to all, and the simplicity of his method makes any viewer feel that that is the way he would have viewed the original subject himself. His fame was established when he exhibited his first large painting, "Northern Lake", which was purchased by the National Gallery. On view are "Spring Ice": the few surviving white chunks of ice, the expanse of violet blue water, and spring sunshine which illuminates the rocky foreground. "Sunset": blazing red clouds of sunset seen through the clear air of the North Country. "Bateaux": a river scene giving full scope to his pallette, the double-ended red logger boats, blue water, the light green of the trees at the season of the "drive".

By A. Y. Jackson, well known through his writings as well as his paintings. In his bouyant spirit he has painted summer and winter, travelling by canoe or railroad caboose from southern Quebec to the Arctic; painting adventure has been his lifeblood. Shown are "Alaska Highway near Kluane Lake", depicting the struggle to establish this great road past the white mountain range which seems determined to overawe the efforts of man. "Road to St. Simon", a winterscape of a Quebec village. "Early Spring, Quebec", recording the annual break-through of the rich furrows through the snow-drifts of the past winter.

By J. E. H. MacDonald—"Tangled Garden" with a dominating sunflower. It is most interesting, at Ottawa, to compare the sketch made of this tangled garden and to compare it with the enlargement. The tangle has been preserved but the artist has subtly rearranged the curves to guide the viewer's eye, and complimenting colors added to balance the composition, without the composition overtaking the tangle. "Stream in the Bush", a delightful contrast of shades; light vegetation and dark water of the stream. "Mist Fantasy", in which reflections become the picture, of red lumber boats, shoreline and tree forms, in the waters of a lake. (One is tempted to turn this upside down to see if it is reversible!)

A single Kreighoff is included, "Winter Landscape, Laval", of his typical figures and log dwellings.

By James Watson Morrice — "Bathers with Woods", a silk screen

Ayersville mother wins contest

A young mother of six children who avowedly "never won a thing in her life", was the surprised winner of a two-person expense-paid trip to New York — last Saturday evening on conclusion of the contest sponsored by Lachute Watchman and L'Argenteuil. . . . Mme Jean-Paul Perreault, of Ayersville, procured her entry form at one of the participating stores — Fernando Carriere's, Lafleur Street — and it was Mayor Fernand Legault who graciously drew the ticket from the drum, at an informal soiree at Bernard Florist's.

Judging by the enthusiastic participation, this contest amply rewarded the support of district merchants, who accumulated thousands of entry forms filled out by customers and deposited in boxes placed for this purpose.

Besides the major award there were three other prizes — $25 cash going to Gaetan Malaket, Bedard Blvd.; $15 to Jean-Paul Gratton, Main Street; and $10 to Claude Labelle, Lafleur Street. . . . Mr. Tessier, host to the gathering (see picture), drew the first of these additional lucky tickets; Gaetan Leclair, C. of C. president, drew the second; and R. A. Giles, vice-president and general manager of Giles Publishing House, drew the third.

Invited to join the gathering immediately on the drawing of her entry, Mme Perreault appeared on the scene, happy and excited. She later decided, due to children returning to school and other responsibilities at this time, that she would forego the trip to New York. A sum of $250 was handed over, and Mme Perreault intends to save part of this for a future holiday trip. Her husband is employed at the J. C. Wilson Co. mill.

The Watchman and L'Argenteuil wish to acknowledge the willing support of businessmen in Lachute, Brownsburg, Ayersville, St. Philippe, Whisseltown and St. Andrews, who contributed to the success of this venture.

Rotary visit to experimental C.I.P. tree farm

Last week's meeting of the Brownsburg-Lachute Rotary Club was held at the experimental tree farm at Harrington. For those who were able to make it early in the afternoon, a tour of the farm was conducted by Yap Salm, the resident forester, after which dinner was served at the farm centre. Manny Wilson, manager for the Grenville branch of the C.I.P., then gave an interesting talk on the reforestation movement. He said that the club could be justly proud in originally sponsoring the movement in Argenteuil, the first club to do so in Canada. The aims of the movement are to promote good forestry practice, to ensure adequate safeguards against fire and insects, and to permit inspection by qualified foresters. Since its inception, the movement has grown rapidly, so that today there are 853 tree farms in all the provinces except Albert and Newfoundland, covering some 533,700 acres.

The experimental tree farm, which was laid down primarily as a demonstration area for sound forest practice, also does research projects on the uses of fertilizers and the testing of tree strains, equipment development, and a study of fish and game management.

The meeting proved most interesting, and was thoroughly enjoyed.

DISCUSS "METROPOLITAN" IDEA —

Meeting Friday on scheme for regional police system

An informal meeting of regional police commissioners, and other persons interested in the formation of a Regional Police and Public Safety system, will be held at the St. Andrews Golf and Country Club this Friday, September 1, at 8 p.m., under the chairmanship of Antoine Paré, mayor of St. Andrews Village.

The meeting, to which all interested persons are invited, is called to discuss the possibility of establishing a co-ordinated police service for the areas of Cushing, Carillon, St. Andrews East, St. Jerusalem, Ayersville, Brownsburg and Lachute.

The idea behind the meeting is to try and create one police department for the entire area, under one director of police, with officers located in each participating community. In the event the plan receives public support, the committee which will be formed at the meeting Friday evening will go into details of cost, etc.

Lachute would logically be the hub of any regional police system for this area.

All sub-stations of the "metropolitan police system" would be linked by radio communication, and would operate on a basis similar to the Provincial Police or the RCMP, with all calls being received by a central office and relayed to the area concerned. The organization could also be adapted as a main factor in any civil defence or disaster effort, and in this activity, could work hand-in-hand with the militia and other similar units.

An established system of this kind is presently working successfully in Chomedy. This, and other successful ventures, will be explained at the meeting Friday evening, at which it is hoped to hear free expression of public opinion on this idea.

Rotary Park closing Sunday

The Rotary Club's community park will be officially closed to the public effective this Sunday evening, September 3, at six o'clock. After this time there will be no attendant on duty.

Members of the Club sponsoring the park and swimming area report an excellent year, and would like to take this opportunity to thank all who assisted in the park's operation.

Bookings, dates announced for season's concerts

Dates have been set, and bookings confirmed, for the 1961-62 Community Concerts series. Following are the three recitals, as selected by the Association executive to provide interest, quality and variety for the district membership:

November 7, 1961 — Ronald Turini, pianist.

February 21, 1962 — Mary McMurray, soprano.

March 13, 1962 — Max Jaffa Trio (English chamber group; piano, violin and cello).

The first of these attractions should set the season off to a good pace. Turini's engagement here had to be advanced somewhat as this pianist has been chosen to represent Canada as accompanist with the Montreal Symphony, playing in Moscow and continuing on a European tour this coming winter.

All three programs are anticipated with interest by music lovers and Community Concert subscribers. Members will be notified of these engagements by the secretary, Jacques Bedard, when sending out the seasonal membership cards.

Hawkesbury child crushed by machine

Hawkesbury — A five-year-old boy was crushed to death by a 10-top payloader machine here recently, across the street from his home.

Alain Lalonde, son of Mr. and Mrs. Rolland Lalonde, was playing in the street when the huge machine, operated by Borrome Juneau, of Spino Construction, Montreal, backed over the boy. He died instantly.

Work was being done on the new sewer construction project in Hawkesbury.

Dr. Arcade Perrier, district coroner, said an inquest would be held. The accident was investigated by Hawkesbury police.

Local Toastmasters entertain at Pruuli Lake, Dalesville

Impromptu speaking featured a summer meeting of Toastmasters and their families, gathered at Pruuli's Lake, Dalesville, on Saturday, August 19.

A "smorgasbord" set the atmosphere for the indoor speeches, in which Toastmasters took part from Valleyfield, Cornwall, St. Eustache, as well as Brownsburg, Lachute, Hawkesbury, Kilmar and a visiting member from Halifax — Russ Hammond.

It was a special summer meeting in which families took part, starting with a swim. Many partook of an Esthonian steam bath or "sauna", dinner and speeches, followed by dancing to a peppy young orchestra.

Raoul Merits, president of the local club, was in the chair, and introduced Don Hart of Kilmar, Governor of Area No. 2 International. His brief remarks indicated an active season for Toastmasters. (The local Club meetings start at the Grenville High School, Monday 6.45 p.m., September 11.)

Stan Clendenning, Lt.-Gov. of the Area, and Lloyd Taylor, past-District Governor, both of Valleyfield, spoke of much enthusiasm in the various clubs.

The speech subjects, selected by Vice-President Victor Fahri of Hawkesbury, were chiefly topics in the news. For example, Bernie Marsh, of St. Eustache, was supposed to be the defecting Russian scientist explaining why he chose the West. Charles Payne, of Cornwall, was supposed to be Khruschev giving his case for Berlin. Jim Childs, of Valleyfield, took Mayor Brandt's side for his city.

Corruption in Montreal was discussed, as well as noise around the cities, particularly as at Dorval. Free speech, economics and unemployment were other subjects.

A recent trade fair, displaying the latest in women's shoe designs, was treated in a very humorous manner by a husband who had attended (supposedly).

Other subjects rounded out the program, which was then evaluated by Lloyd Thomas of Kilmar, Earl Myers of Cornwall, and Stan Clendenning of Valleyfield.

Everyone agreed that the meeting was a complete success, with district fellowship and contacts being emphasized. "It should be repeated", was remarked several times. The educational aspect of the speeches and the businesslike handling of the dinner-meeting, where some young people attended, was felt to be worthwhile.

If the world could only communicate better, most of our international — and many national and local problems — would disappear. The young people must learn to do a better job than their parents. Speech, face-to-face, is our most powerful means of communication, whether among members of a family, a community, or nations. We must speak more clearly, more convincingly, and more diplomatically.

Building inspector may be consulted at City Hall

At the Council meeting on Monday, attention was given to property changes affecting valuation during the year. Richard Blais, building inspector, gave all information required, together with the other evaluators, Dave Campbell and Henri Trichard.

It was ruled that all owners who had proceeded with repairs or changes without a permit, must pay the cost of a permit nevertheless, and will be billed accordingly.

Richard Blais, inspector, stated that he will be at the town hall every Monday, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. to give information on building matters, or he may be contacted at his home other days of the week.

Police investigate two auto mishaps west of Lachute

Yet another casualty occurred at the ill-famed railway crossing at Simon's, west of Lachute, early Monday morning when a recent-model car owned and driven by Raymond Tremblay, of Pte. Fortune, swerved out of control and was demolished.

The driver, unaccompanied and proceeding towards Lachute, was treated by Dr. Roger Lavigne for a severe laceration to the jaw. The accident was investigated by Q.P.P. Officer Richard Dubé.

On Saturday evening, two Rigaud men were taken to the Smith Clinic, Hawkesbury, where they were reported in critical condition following an accident near St. Philippe.

Q.P.P. Officer Gilles Lavigne reported the car was headed towards Lachute on Route 8 when it veered out of control; the vehicle was demolished.

Driver of the car was Jean Chartrand, who was accompanied by Marcel Daoust. Taken to hospital, both were treated for assorted injuries and shock and were considered in serious condition for some time. Police now report the pair are well on their way to recovery.

Roland Labonté chairman for 1961 Charities appeal

At the last assembly of the executive of Greater Lachute Charities Federation, the retiring president, Notary Richard Valois, announced that Roland Labonté would fill the role of campaign chairman.

Mr. Labonté is a member of one of Lachute's pioneer families. He has served in a senior capacity with the National Employment Service; as director of personnel for Dominion Shuttle Company (now Dominion Ayers Wood Products); then as secretary to the Hon. W. M. Cottingham, former Minister of Mines. Last September he returned to his earlier profession of teaching, with the Lachute Catholic School Commission. Mr. Labonté is well known in parish, school and municipal affairs.

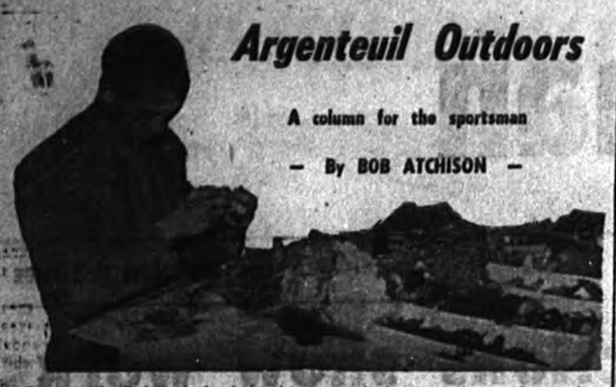

Roland Labonté

The Charities campaign takes place in October — the definite dates to be announced later.

A column for the sportsman

— By BOB ATCHISON —

Once again Rabies is back in the district. I have been told of a couple of cases from local folk, and from the veterinarians, who state it is serious. I don't know if this outbreak can be classed as epidemic; it is certainly not like the one of a few years back. But it could be, if care is not taken now. Maybe it is just the natural course of events that seem to crop up every once in awhile. However, it is not anything to treat lightly, so care should be taken with any animal that shows unusual symptoms. If in doubt at all, get in touch with the authorities, or your vet. They are certainly the ones to know about this.

I wonder how many of you have noticed, and heard, all the crows around. I know for awhile it seemed as though they were getting ready to head south. (Thank goodness they aren't.) But there are a large group of them around, more than I have ever seen in this district. It looks as though the shooters forgot all about them this year.

The number of canaries is a cheery sight. We know these birds like warm climates and don't as a rule get this far north; maybe we are going to get warmer weather in years to come. . . .

The wife watched six Wilson Sap Suckers, for about two hours this morning. Most of the time these birds are mistaken for woodpeckers. They do act like the woodpecker, except that they are not after grubs when they peck into the trees. They get below the bark and drink the sap. Most of the time, little holes girdling the trees show where they have been.

A visitor not seen too often is the Kingbird, and we have a few of these also. It seems we are getting more and more different birds every year. There are also a lot of Loons, and Kingfishers. These are very dirty birds and pollute any water with their droppings. In a lot of cases they can be blamed for some of the diseases of fish; but nevertheless they are nice to see and watch. The black spot on bass, and the worms in Perch, can be blamed on these birds. They can also be blamed for a lot of the lakes being filled with minnows. Rather strange about this, but in some cases spawn of some fish can hatch after the adult fish has been eaten or killed. I know humans are largely responsible for minnows being put into lakes, but they connot be blamed for everything.

Fishing is starting to pick up a little. This is no doubt due to the cool weather. One of MY creeks that I fish a lot, has had visitors of the worst kind. I think they were after minnows and not trout, but the unfortunate part is they would get small trout along with the minnows. It would seem that the ban on minnows is a farce around certain parts of this County, and the wardens can't be blamed for this. After all, a token fine is no deterrent to any offence, and until there are TEETH put in our game laws, things will continue to be just as they are. The Province of Quebec has always been noted for its disregard of game laws, and it continues to live up to this reputation.

A lot of talk has been shuttled around about tenting and camping. This sport has rapidly come into the spotlight as one of our top recreations.

There has been a lot of guff written about the type of tent that should be used, and the materials it should be made of. But from all reliable reports, the best materials are still the old canvas or silk. Nylon is not too good for tents, even though most people are of that opinion. You see, for a tent to be any good it must be able to breathe. This may seem strange, but by breathing the canvas allows air to circulate through the interior. Don't be scared of this; it won't allow water to penetrate. If you doubt this, then try it yourself. Nylon is wonderful for a lot of things, but for tents, ground sheets, etc., it is out.

Here is a tip that may save you a little trouble with tent pegs. Carrying tent pegs is always a rough job, and most of the time you are short of a couple! If you forget these and, instead, cut yourself a couple of poles as long as the tent, place this alongside the tent just where the pegs would be. Tie some rope around these poles then stake at the ends. This, you will find, serves the purpose much better than the pegs.

If your tent has a floor in it, make sure the ground is clear of rocks. A lot of trouble can be saved by this; walking over even small stones does cut your canvas.

If you use the tents very much, it will pay you to get a fly. This is a protective covering for the tent roof itself. It can be made of almost any weight in canvas, and believe me, it pays. One of the important things it does is to stop a driving rain onto the roof of your tent, and this will save any leaks that may develop in the canvas. As a matter of fact, this is a must for any tent, even if you use it only a couple of times a year.

We watched a brood of young ducks paddling around the North River the other day. They were Blacks and there are five of them. About the size of a small puddle-jumper right now, we were not able to watch them too long, as the hen made sure they stayed hidden. We were drifting down in the boat, and they did not spot us for some time, so we quietly watched their antics. Observing wildlife like this provides a great thrill. Seeing the mother teaching them to dive under water for their feed, was a real laugh. Most water birds can do this with no trouble just as soon as they are born; these too had the elementary idea, but lacked the finesse of the old lady. You could almost hear them breathe when they came up for air. One of them instisted on getting into really shallow water, and the old lady didn't like this one bit. She took out after this one and gave it the works with her wings. . . .

Then the little flock spotted us in the boat, and believe me, they were in the reeds in a matter of seconds. The old one took off like a streak down the river, not flying but swimming. This was done to attract us away from the young — and it makes you realize the intense protective instincts in these parents of the wild.

Every once in awhile something is published about fishing that makes a lot of sense. I have just read a column by Brian Cahill on "Science Shatters the Fishing Myth". Only one thing I disagree with, it doesn't take a scientist to know that only a certain percentage of all fishermen get their fish. As you know, I have often written about our (fished-out) streams in this area. The article asserts that too many of the Isaac Walton boosters don't take enough time to fish the water. I agree with that, 100 percent. This can be seen right around here, most people won't take the time or trouble to try — they just pronounce the spot "no good". It is surprising the fish that can be taken from water that has supposedly been well fished-over. It takes time and patience to fish any water, this is a quality we moderns seem to lack.

Fewer trail riders

Calgary (CP) — For 37 consecutive summers, the Trail Riders of the Canadian Rockies have been jogging along the mountain trails, soaking up atmosphere instead of city dust.

And while the group — whose members come from all parts of the world and all walks of life — were checking gear for the 38th season this year, there were indications there might be some empty saddles left behind in the old corral.

For the first time in years, the rides were not all booked well in advance. The society usually takes 50 persons on each five or six day excursion.

Everyone is eligible to join the Trail Riders for a small fee and cost of excursions — including horses, saddle, teepee accommodation, meals and guide service. Prices range from $85 to $100.

Base headquarters this year are nestled near the junction of Goodsir and McArthur creeks and the Ottertail River, far from the heart of Banff and several miles from the Lake Louise resort area.

Canadian Olympic swim coach Jim Thompson makes an appeal for a ban on cheaper-type snorkels and masks like this one after finding the body of an 11-year-old boy in the bottom of the Hamilton, Ont., pool he runs. Mr. Thompson said Gordon Histed was wearing one like it and when his body was found, the mask was full of water.

LEGION NOTES

Branch 70 Correspondent

"ACTIVE SERVICE YESTERDAY COMMUNITY SERVICE TODAY"

Summer is nearly gone. Holidays for most of us are over for another year, and Branch 70's activities will be getting back into high gear. At present November shapes up to a big month. The 25th anniversary celebrations and, of course, our annual Armistice Day supper.

Even though Branch 70 has been quiet this summer, a lot of branches throughout the country have been very active in track and field events.

On August 17 the Royal Canadian Legion held its annual track and field clinic in Toronto, with 130 athletes and coaches from across Canada attending. With this year's clinic the Legion has brought over 800 athletes and coaches to Toronto, at a cost of over $80,000.

Through the clinic have come dozens of athletes who today rank among the country's best. Bruce Kidd, Harry Jerome, Joe Mullins, Bob Fisher-Smith and Doug Kyle are among the alumni. At the last Olympics, 11 of the 15 members of Canada's track and field team had been through the plan.

The national plan is only one phase of the widespread Legion track and field interest. British Columbia, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia all are involved in branch or local meets. The St. Lambert branch recently staged the Canadian senior championships. In addition the branch runs a twilight meet every week, at which over 200 youngsters turn up. In Ottawa the Legion is associated with the rebirth of a track club which has been dormant for over 30 years. The Windsor Legion has a new track club with 70 active members.

Comrade President Joe Martell requests a good turn out for our September meeting. There will be a number of interesting reports to be heard, and plans to be made for our fall events.

School will be starting shortly and once again the streets will be busy with youngsters on their way to and from school. Besides driving with care, we should remember that safety begins at home, and that our children should be taught to exercise caution while they are crossing the streets or chasing that errant football.

First tournament (golf) planned for bowling league membership

Bowling enthusiasts are pretty well aware of the local stars in this sport — but it is to spotlight the golfers among the bowling fraternity that a tournament is planned under Bolodrome sponsorship.

This event will be staged around the end of September, probably at the St. Andrews Golf and Country Club, with Guy Ledoux as organizer. Guy is helms-man of the Long Sault bowling league, and also captain at the St. Andrews Golf Club — so he is doubly qualified to ensure the success of this tournament.

Hubert Viau, Bud Langille and Jim Duncan have signified their willingness to serve on a committee to arrange this competition, and the Bolodrome will play a large part in financing the banquet and the prizes.

Those eligible are the members of any regular Bolodrome league. An enrolment coupon is appended, for any desiring to take part. This should be filled out and forwarded to: Marcel Brunette, 53 Charles Street, Lachute. . . .

More Ayrshires shipped to Cuba

The especially equipped cattle boat, M. V. Athene, set sail August 18 for Cuba. The cargo was 232 head of registered Ayrshires sold to Banco Para El Comercio, a Cuban Government Agency.

There have now been over 1,500 head of registered Ayrshires shipped to Cuba since the first order left Canada on December 1, 1960.

The exporter was Dunlea Farms, Jerseyville, Ont. This firm has exported approximately 800 head to Cuba. Most of the cattle exported have been 2-year-old-heifers and a few have been 3-year-olds.

The Ayrshire heifers were selected by R. O. Biggs, Dundas, with assistance from Alex Wallace, Smith Falls, Donald Cumming, Lancaster, and Oscar Vaillancourt, St. Chrysostome, Que. Fifty head were selected in Western Quebec, 102 in Eastern Ontario and 80 in Western Ontario.

The cattle were assembled in the C.N.R. Stock Yards, Montreal, August 16-17. In order to feed the heifers during the voyage they required 45 tons of hay and 12 tons of meal.

It is learned that a number of these Ayrshires were assembled from local herds. Five head came from Don Bradley's Brookview Farm; one from W. Erskine Rodger's Woodlea herd; two from Douglas Rodger's, Lachute Road; one from Allan Walker's farm, Bethany; and three from Forbes McOuat, Brownsburg.

Further shipments to Cuba are expected to be made shortly.

DRINKING AND DRIVING DO NOT MIX

Fine whisky is a luxury and should be treated as such. And, knowing when to say "no" plays a great part in the art of sensible living.

Neither whisky nor any other alcoholic beverage has any place at the wheel of an automobile. Drinking and driving do not mix.

This conviction must be shared by every thinking person who drives a car, particularly this Labour Day week-end when many holidaying families will be travelling on Québec highways.

If you expect to be at the wheel of a car this week-end, we say to you: Think before you drink. Don't drink before you drive.

The Printed Word — no serious substitute

WHEN WE THINK upon the cordial letters we receive from old residents now removed from these parts — when we consider the link this newspaper provides between local governments and their taxpayers — and the news, views and opinions interchanged through our columns — we know full well that the local newspaper cannot be replaced, in the foreseeable future, by radio, television or any robot version of the old town crier.

Not that we harbour this conviction with complacency. Publishers are conscious of their shortcomings. They are too aware of the competition they must meet, and the fact that newspapers must maintain high standards and continually adopt improvements, in their bid for popular interest and the advertiser's dollar which keeps them going.

There were some illuminating viewpoints on this conflict in a speech by Werden Leavens, retiring president, at the recent convention of the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association in Halifax. We could add much from local experience, but for brevity, we reproduce only a few pertinent extracts from Mr. Leavens' remarks. . . .

"The Printed Word is something in which we all have a vital interest. Perhaps it would be well for us to try to restore to it the respect it had in former years. It has occurred to me, that, in this day of singing commercials and cartooned TV advertising, we could well pause and reflect upon the marvels of our product — the printed word.

"Perhaps we feel a little inferior standing beside our brethren of radio and TV who almost effortlessly, it seems, launch their faces into the vastness of the skies and end up intimately chatting with the people of our communities in their own living rooms.

"Before we let the printed word abdicate from its position as the world's most revered form of communication, let's review some of its own unsurpassed merits.

"Of course, our critics might concede that you cannot successfully wrap a fresh fish in a TV cabinet or swat flies with a transistor radio. But neither can you sit quietly in your study with either of these instruments and drink in at your own rate of comprehension the wondrous knowledge of the great thinkers of any and every age.

"Only the printed word is so completely transportable, so ever available, as to be the absolute servant of man. By means of it, mankind is able to review man's greatness and his weakness, and by it man enriches his mind and feeds his soul.

"Now, I don't suggest for a moment that a weekly newspaper, simply by virtue of being a weekly newspaper, automatically qualifies for the wholehearted respect of the reader and the advertiser. Respect, as we all know, does not come just for the asking. It must be earned. And to earn it, demands hard work, sound thought and the courage to set forth our convictions for all to see.

"Our newspapers are the only economic medium by which the people of our communities can study the comparative values offered by the stores in which they do their shopping. They should be, too, the most effective means by which the national advertiser can get his message to the rural and urban community audience without wasting circulation, in many cases, on a disinterested city audience. Electric fences, for example, are hardly of interest to the residents of Vancouver's posh British Properties, or Toronto's Forest Hill Village.

"We are dipping our pens too often into the sugar bowl. We must have strong editorial pages and the kind of thinking that will add the editorial support to our papers.

"A community without a paper is a community without a heart. And I think none of us, if we do our jobs, need have any fear of a disastrous fate for the printed word. The printed word as found in the Bible has withstood the march of progress of other oral and visual methods of communication for centuries."

Tragedy coming up!

ANOTHER holiday week-end coming up. And across the land a spate of pleas, warnings and horror stories, aimed to reduce the highway deaths that write a ghastly toll after every public holiday.

It would be safe to say that the Canadian Highway Safety Council's terse predictions (of death and injury) over the last holiday week-end caused no more interest than a passing glance as the average reader thumbed through his newspaper. Safety campaigners, publishers and radio announcers might well be pardoned for throwing up their hands and exclaiming, "What's the use." But still they'll go on pleading — in the hope that one potential killer, one potential victim, may learn through easier ways than grim experience.

Three of the world's greatest disasters — the Johnstown flood, the Galveston tidal wave and the sinking of the Titanic — resulted in 9,726 deaths. Exactly the same number of people were killed on the highways of North America during the months of June, July and August of 1958.

Speed and traffic have increased in three short years. As more people drive cars which are now more powerful than ever before, the road accident hazard grows greater each day.

There is no quick, easy solution to this horror. The only defence against it lies in the ability and caution of the driver himself. Careful driving and constant observation of the rules of the road can prevent deaths and injury in 95 per cent of the cases.

The onus therefore is on the driver — let him accept it, lest he becomes yet another unit in the impersonal statistics of death on the road.

A quick kick

THERE MUST BE a fear of mass hysteria, or of dire punitive consequences, which keeps people from sometimes kicking over the traces.

On the one hand, the public disgrace of abused authority and mulcted funds — the kickbacks, the graft, the parasites on humanity revealed, for instance, in current inquiries on the defunct Quebec Liquor Police. . . The abuse of Unemployment Insurance funds. . . The increasing leviés for public welfare, such as the retail sales tax which spreads a dragnet to catch everybody even in the merest transaction. . . So on down the line, taxation — to the humblest citizen — and up, to the biggest corporation.

On the other hand, so much still is lacking for the elementary safety and convenience of those who pay. The growing crime rate, inadequate law enforcement, evasive justice, unapprehended killers and unprotected citizens. . . Closer to home, the antiquated bridges in Lachute, the makeshift patchwork pavements — the St. Andrews road, the St. Jerome highway. One need not look very far for the postponed necessities, already paid for, over and over.

Authorities may point to the grandiose generosity of the state — socialized welfare, education, security on every hand. But what sort of society is this, one may ask, to continuously neglect so many minor essentials that affect the taxpayers every day?

Viewpoints and perspectives

WELCOME TOURISTS. — Volumes have been written about how to attract the tourists, and especially how to get them back for a second visit. . . . It is well to remember that when we overcharge or are rude to a visitor from a foreign country, we create an impression that is going to return with him. His opinions, good or bad, are going to spread like an epidemic of measles when he gets home. — Stanstead (Que.) Journal

BACK TO SCHOOL. — School bells will be ringing again shortly. This means that bicycle traffic will increase sharply. It behooves motorists, too, of course, to be wary in their driving when they come upon children on bicycles. But perhaps the biggest single factor of all is that parents should stress upon their children the need to ride safely and to abide by the traffic laws.

Of Many Things

— By Ambrose Hills —

THE INNER LIFE

One of the most difficult but important tasks in business is the selection of top executives. A sales force headed by the right man may do very well, but flop badly when led by the wrong one.

The same applies to production. A good executive is likely to improve production even with exactly the same men and machines which produced poorly under a mediocre executive.

Men may look alike, talk the same language, claim similar education and experience, yet be quite different in executive ability. Those who possess or develop keen executive skill command high salaries — and earn them many times over for the company alert enough to recognize and employ them.

There's the rub. How to develop executive skill. It isn't easy, yet it can be done.

In his book, The Men From the Boys, Perrin Stryker, a Fortune Magazine editor, considered the matter in detail. He concluded that while there are many subtle differences in the qualities that distinguish ordinary managers from those who have reached full executive stature, the road to the top is fairly direct. The secret of becoming executive material has been known since the time of Socrates.

Some of Socrates' advice might well be taken by any man or woman hoping to reach the status of a top executive.

Socrates said, "For the just man does not permit several elements within him to interfere with one another — he sets in order his inner life and is his own master and his own law, and is at peace with himself."

Needless to say, few men manage to set their inner life in such good order. It is worth a try, however, and if each in his own way made a stab at it, we would become a very great nation. It is advice sorely needed today, when men seem spun about so easily, bewildered and confused by the fast pace of science and the multitude of changes in our pattern of living.

STRAWBERRY SHORTCAKE

Everything runs in cycles. Doors are made out of Wood. Wood comes from Trees. And Trees grow out of Doors. Nothing stands still. Everything either goes forward or backward. The only thing that remains stationery is notepaper. . . .

Stories of Pat and Mike come and go. Tales about Indians crop up frequently. Like this one, for instance:

There was once an Indian Chief known to the tribe as Big Chief Shortcake. One day he djed, and the other elders of the tribe began preparations for a great ceremonial funeral to take place the following morning. But the Big Chief's wife had other ideas. She wanted just a simple burial without any unnecessary pomp and ceremony. So she got up in the night, dug a grave, and herself buried her dear departed.

Next morning the elders of the tribe and a crowd of lesser braves showed up at the widow's wigwam.

"We come to bury Shortcake," said their spokesman.

"Too late," replied the widow. "Squaw berry Shortcake!"

WANDERING-EYE report: A berry-picking couple by the roadside — she, sitting in the grass, he scaling a high bank in pursuit of berries.

Luckily there still are places where you can pick berries by the roadside. As for the man who first thought of spraying a weed-killing chemical along the roads — a blight on him. I hope his lawn is eaten by beetles.

A teen-age girl in the back of one of those family-sized buses, trying to find a comfortable position for herself as the vehicle rolls along.

She can be observed from the car following. Her legs (clad in beach slacks) twirl and flex in a horizontal ballet. She resembles one of those cartoon teen-agers talking to a boy friend on the telephone.

She pedals the air with small feet, then does a quick turn and lands on her stomach; boosts herself sideways, arches into a loop and settles on her back again with legs flailing.

As the family bus vanishes behind a gravel truck, she seems to be winding up for a somersault.

Two little boys (eight and seven) painting a verandah. They balance themselves on elaborate structures of tables, boxes and ladders, at much danger to their bones.

They splash on the paint in great blobs and spots, but in some areas quite neatly, and the verandah walls look better in blotchy white than in the smeared yellow that they used to be.

The boys work away for hours. When they tire of it, and go off to play, the mother of the house beckons her son and the visiting boy to come and be cleaned.

They have been working in swimming trunks, and now are blotched with white from hair to feet. The housewife rubs them with lard — a paint-removing trick that she has just learned.

Most of the paint comes off this way, but some remains. The sun-browned, painty little boys, their bodies glistening with fat, whoop away to play on the lawn. They look like Iroquois braves on the warpath.

The University Women's Conference and an illustrious woman scientist

(Impressions of a Lachute Academy graduate)

The Canadian Federation of University Women held their triennial conference in London, Ontario, just recently. Some 400 university women from every region of Canada attended, and the City of London deserves great credit for the splendid way they were welcomed. Some of the social events arranged for them were — a civic banquet in the Hotel London; a dinner given by the Board of Governors of the University of Western Ontario, on whose campus the meetings were held; a supper given by the University Women's Club of London, in Spencer Hall, a reception and dinner at the London Hunt and Country Club; and a trip to Stratford to see the play, "Love's Labour Lost", at the Shakespearean Theatre.

Miss Irene Caron, formerly a graduate of Lachute Academy, was one of the delegates from the Ottawa University Women's Club, and she was reminded of the last University conference that she attended in Stockholm, Sweden, when Lise Meitner attended. She was the German Jewess whose research work in science proved that the uranium atom could be split. When the Jews were being oppressed in Germany, she fled to Sweden, where she was given the opportunity to continue her research work. She got her information about the uranium atom out of the British scientists who developed it, but did not have the equipment to make the bombs, so President Roosevelt and his enterprising Americans agreed to make the bombs.

In 1880 a French scientist had noticed that uranium was giving off rays of an unknown type, and then, when the two young French-Canadian brothers discovered large quantities of uranium near Great Bear Lake in the Northwest Territories, it was possible to proceed with the manufacture of the atomic bombs, using the element uranium and the knowledge discovered about its atom gained by Lise Meitner in her research work.

Marriage vows at United Church in Brownsburg

Hazel-O'Brien

A double-ring ceremony was solemnized in Brownsburg United Church on Saturday, August 26, when Glenrose Cecelia Hazel, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Hazel, of Brownsburg, was united in marriage to Winston Albert O'Brien, eldest son of Mrs. D. O'Brien and the late Davis O'Brien, of St. Andrews East, Que. The Rev. G. W. Bruce officiated and the wedding music was played by Mrs. Cedric Wheeler.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a full-skirted dress of Midnight blue pure silk organza over taffeta, with fitted bodice. Her matching shoulder veil was held in place by a circle of organza and tiny bows. She carried a bouquet of red roses and white mums.

Miss Amelia Hazel, cousin of the bride, as maid of honor, was gowned in a short bouffant dress of yellow embroidered and plain organza over taffeta, and carried a bouquet of yellow and white mums.

Mr. Gordon McCambridge acted as best man, and the ushers were Mr. Mervin O'Brien and Mr. Keith Hazel.

A reception for the immediate families was held at the bride's home following the ceremony, after which the couple left on their wedding trip. The bride wore a champagne-colored sheath dress with matching jacket, brown feather hat and brown accessories, and a corsage of yellow roses.

Out-of-town guests were from Lachine, Verdun, Montreal, St. Jerome, Halifax and Windsor.

Jehovah's Witnesses largest French-speaking convention, Sept. 7-10

MR. L SAUMUR,

Director for the District Convention to be held September 7 to 10 at the Ottawa Coliseum, which will draw more than 2,000 Jehovah's Witnesses from Quebec, Ontario, the Maritimes and the United States.

Jehovah's Witnesses in the Lachute area are preparing now to attend their largest French-speaking convention to date, which will be held in Ottawa, September 7-10. They expect more than 2,000 delegates to attend from all parts of Quebec, Ontario and the United States.

"This gathering" said Mr. Henry Puruker, presiding minister of the local congregation, "will be the last of a series of 14 international conventions which were held across Europe and the American continent, having a total attendance of more than 370,000 persons. This series of conventions began in New York, and continued on to many other cities of the United States and Canada, as well as Copenhagen, Hamburg, Turin, London, Amsterdam and Paris."

Hundreds of Jehovah's Witnesses have already offered their services for the preparation of this convention. The convention administration functions with 22 different departments all under the direction of Mr. Laurier Saumur.

"Previous conventions," said Mr. Puruker, "have shown that Christian love and consideration existing among the Witnesses enables them to live together in peace, worshipping God in unity with no racial, national, religious or political prejudices existing among them."

The climax of this four-day convention will be the public address delivered by Mr. Laurier Saumur, district supervisor of Jehovah's Witnesses for Quebec and the Maritime provinces. The subject he will speak on is: When All Nations Unite Under God's Kingdom.

Mr. Wayne Riddell, of Montreal, spent the week-end here and was guest organist at the United Church last Sunday morning.

Recent week-end guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Neal Moore were Mr. and Mrs. John Harrington, from San Diego, Calif., and Major Walter Harrington, wife and family, of Ottawa; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gray and Mr. and Mrs. Russell Gray, from Detroit, Mich., and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Thomas, from Arlington, Va.

Home from Extended Trip

Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Dawson have returned home after spending two months on a trip to the West Coast — proceeding via the Trans-Canada Highway and returning home through the U.S.A. They stopped off to visit friends en route at Winnipeg, Brandon, Dauphin, Ochre River, North Battleford, Edmonton, Calgary, Cardston, Gem, Kelowna, Vancouver, Victoria, and Detroit, Mich. Among many other places and sights they visited were Brandon Provincial Fair, Banff, Watertown National Park, the Calgary Stampede, Coulee Dam, Wash., and Yellowstone National Park, Wyoming.

62 Years Married

Congratulations are extended to Mr. and Mrs. John Gain, now residents of Montreal, who today (August 30) celebrate their 62nd wedding anniversary. Both in relatively good health, they are spending the summer with their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Evans, at Long Lake.

To wed in September

Miss Monique Lamarche, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Félicien Lamarche, of Lachute, and Mr. Charles Moseley, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Moseley, of Brownsburg, whose marriage is announced to take place at the Sacred Heart Chapel of the Notre-Dame Church in Montreal, on September 23, at 11 o'clock.

Couple married in New Brunswick

Noble-Bradshaw

The marriage of Geraldine Elden Elizabeth, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Noble, of Lachute, to Frank Llewellyn Bradshaw, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bradshaw, of St. Martin's, N.B., took place in Holy Trinity Church, St. Martin's, on Saturday, August 12. The rector, the Rev. R. B. Barry, officiated.

Mrs. Gordon Bradshaw attended the bride, and Mr. Gordon Bradshaw was best man for his brother.

reproduction which seems suitable for the soft but modernistic record of green trees, the bathers being incidental. "The Market Place, Concarneau" shows the flower sellers' stalls in the French city, painted during the many years in which he studied in France and Italy.

By Lawren Harris. This group of four is best seen from across the room. "Algoma Woods", "House in the Woods, Toronto", "Isolation Peak", "Northern Lake". Closely observed these are four unassociated objects, from the old ward of a city with broken plaster, to the gold and blue of a northern lake surrounded by woods. But if one regards them from a suitable distance, it is realized that there is a kinship, the wonderful ability of this artist to depict reflected light.

These prints were selected by the staff of the National Gallery from those which are on sale at all times, from a few dollars to a few cents, varying with size and mounting. They are a treat to see again.

Educators discussed Workshop topic, "Changing Role of School Principal"

Protestant educators from various parts of the province, including Lachute and Brownsburg, attended the Sixth Annual Workshop organized by the Quebec Association of Protestant School Administrators. Held recently on the campus of Bishop's University, Lennoxville, the week-long discussions centred around the theme "The Changing Role of the School Principal".

CNIB needs help, appeal promoted in district centres

The CNIB is in desperate need of funds to carry on its work in the County of Argenteuil. The current campaigns in Chatham, under Mr. Reg. Morrow; Wentworth (Mr. Clarence Neill); Huberdeau (Mr. Ernest Sarrazin); and Morin Heights (Messrs. Gordon Allen and I. Allard), are endeavoring to supply the Institute with the necessary funds. Contributors are being called upon by volunteer workers, and it is hoped all residents will be as generous as possible.

Blindness and poverty are bad enough, but the Institute has two cases in the County where the children are also mentally retarded. It requires every effort to assist these cases so that, if possible, the youngsters may be trained in handicraft that may be useful in later years.

If perchance the volunteer worker has called in your absence and you would like to support this humanitarian work, please contact your local chairman or mail your contribution to the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, 145 Drew Street, Lachute.

Sidelights on Convention of the Canadian Weekly Newspapers

— By R. A. Giles —

It is really surprising how much business and pleasure can be packed into little more than a week, when a set program has been arranged and kept to schedule. Such was the experience of four delegates representing The Watchman at the 42nd Annual Convention of the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association, held recently at the Nova Scotian Hotel in Halifax.

Leaving Lachute on the afternoon train on Saturday we connected on train 42 for Saint John, N.B., arriving in time Sunday a.m. for the crossing to Digby on the "Princess Helene", a most enjoyable trip of three hours, with sea-gulls following practically all the way. Unfortunately the train to Halifax does not run on Sunday and we had a long, tedious drive by bus of some seven hours, arriving at our hotel about 9.30 p.m. in time for the tail-end of the reception which we had been looking forward to so much.

Business sessions started promptly on Monday morning following a hearty breakfast, with the president Werden Leavens giving his opening address, extracts of which may be found in our editorial columns.

During the next three days much business was conducted relative to problems confronting publishers of weekly papers and a great deal of helpful information was given by various speakers. Gatherings such as this also give the opportunity of talking things over, man to man, thus ironing out many common troubles.

There were complimentary breakfasts, luncheons and dinners with a special meal by the City of Halifax, followed by CBC Live Entertainment. At Government House we were guests of Lieutenant Governor and Mrs. Plow, and at the closing dinner, the Province of Nova Scotia was our host.

Following a cruise of Halifax Harbour, buses conveyed the party to Hubbard's Cove where a shore dinner was greatly enjoyed. As may be expected this took the form of a "Lobster Feed", and to see the table set with hundreds of this appetizing fish and everyone really tucking in, was something to be remembered.

Highlight of the convention was a visit of Prime Minister John Diefenbaker, who was guest speaker at Tuesday night's dinner. In part he said "The weekly newspaper, which saw its beginning in Canada in 1752 has made and is continuing to make a significant and important contribution to the knowledge, progress and welfare of our country.

"It is my good fortune to know many editors and publishers of weekly newspapers and I consider it a privilege to pay my tribute to the contribution that the weekly newspaper makes to this country, coupled with my best wishes to each and all in attendance at the convention."

The following evening Premier Robert L. Stanfield was in the chair to further welcome the delegates and officiate at the Order of Good Time Banquet with the waiters all attired in Champlain costume and the large dining room decorated accordingly.

At Government House on Wednesday a plaque was unveiled in the presence of our Association members to Joseph Howe, a journalist, orator and politician, who sought independence for Nova Scotia and was a long opponent of Confederation. During his lifetime, he fought many battles, but one accomplishment stands out prominently — one which we have to be most thankful for — his defence of the press and the assurance of its freedom.

Wednesday night saw the close of another very successful convention and once again we were "on our own", but not for long as two of our newspaper friends from Oxford, Mr. and Mrs. V. Marchant kindly invited Mrs. Giles and myself to tour the Cabot Trail with them. This offer we gladly accepted and packing our bags started out with them in their Oldsmobile on a most enjoyable trip. Following the coast line we passed through Sheet Harbour, bearing north at Liscomb on to Antigonish, then east crossing over to Cape Breton Island and proceeding north to Port Hood where we stayed overnight. On Friday up to Inverness, on to Pleasant Bay proceeding to Cape North through the highlands and National Park. On Friday night our stay was at Baddeck. Here we visited the Alexander Graham Bell Museum, erected in 1954-55 in honor of the inventor of the telephone. Born in Scotland in 1847 Dr. Bell came to Canada in his early years, and later went to the United States to pursue his career as a teacher and scientist. It was not long before he returned to Canada and amid the rugged beauty of Cape Breton, so reminiscent of his Scottish homeland, he built and developed the estate known as "Beinn Bhreagh" on a headland across the bay from Baddeck. This became his second home, and here he built the famous laboratory and workshops which produced so many of the items now displayed in the museum.

While the name of Alexander Graham Bell is linked foremost with the telephone, yet he was connected with and worked on many other inventions and these are displayed in this memorial museum.

He died at Beinn Bhreagh on August 2, 1922, and was buried in ground of his own choice high on the side of the "beautiful mountain" that he loved so well.

Following the coast line, amid gorgeous and fascinating scenery, we arrived at Pugwash, the home of Cyrus Eaton and viewed the lawn on which he had recently entertained the Russian Spaceman, Bulgarin.

Sunday saw us on our homeward journey being motored to Amherst by our friends, to whom we were indebted for a most delightful trip, and may we say to them and all our other kind friends of Nova Scotia — Thanks for your kind hospitality.

Our other two representatives spent several days at Hubbard's Cove and report having enjoyed themselves immensely, just relaxing and doing some successful sea fishing.

All are back to work again appreciative of a most successful convention and a well earned holiday.

Is Your Home Safe?

— By NANCY CLEAVER —

Is your child safe at home? Perhaps you resent this question and consider it a silly one. But research shows that far too many people, including children, lose their lives or are seriously injured, not in some public place, but right at home.

Each autumn Canadians are educated in fire prevention. Surely one of the most horrible ways to die is to be burned. Fire accounts for 23 percent of accidental home fatalities in Canada.

In age distribution, five percent were babies, 22 percent were under five years, 19 percent under 15 years.

These statistics underline the importance of children never being left unattended and also the importance of fire protection. A homemaker cannot be too careful in checking on possible sources of fire such as faulty electric cords and wiring, inadequate guard against over-heated stovepipes and inflammable rubbish.

Over 2,000 Canadians die from home accidents each year. The Dominion Bureau of Statistics in a recent publication "Mortality from Home Accidents," showed that apart from transport accidents, home was a dangerous place to live. In 10 years 22,000 persons lost their lives in accidents at home. This number should startle parents into learning more about home mishaps.

Food suffocation, or accidental inhalation or ingestion of food into the larynx and respiratory passages, is fatal to many children under one year. Infant deaths from this cause 84 percent of the total mortality. Most of these deaths take place in a cot, carriage or cradle. Smothering is not nearly so great a danger as this food suffocation.

These are statistics which warn parents to take special precautions to prevent food or mechanical suffocation. In other accidents such as drowning, it is surprising to learn that 51 percent of drownings occurred at home.

The pre-school child (1 to 5 years) made up no less than 60 percent of the total home drownings, babies about four percent. Some of these accidents took place in bath tubs, others in ponds or wells or deep ditches on the home grounds.

Accidental falls account for 39 percent of home fatalities. After the age of 50 this is an increasing threat, but under the age of five it is also a very real danger. Victims of about two percent of the fatal falls were babies, three percent were small children under five years. Contrary to the general trend of sex in accidents, more girls and women die from falls than boys and men.

One of the most important tasks of parents is to provide a safe environment for their children, and a second task is to teach safety by example and by instruction. When you read in the newspaper of a child losing his life or being injured in home accidents, do you ask yourself: "How did this happen? Could it have occurred in our home?"

In the excellent book "The Canadian Mother and Child," published by the Department of National Health and Welfare, Ottawa, is this sound advice: "The attitude towards accidents is to be constantly on guard to prevent them. Take risks, then keep an eye on your child without creating tensions."

SOMETHING FOR EVERYONE

The Napanee, Ont., Beaver, carried this message to its readers:

"You may notice some typographical errors in this paper. They were put there intentionally. This paper tries to print something for everyone and some people are always looking for errors."

Budgets approved for hospitals under prov'l insurance

Quebec public hospitals under contract with the Provincial Hospital Insurance Service have received their approved budgets for 1961. The amount allocated this year to the 155 hospitals involved totals $115 millions, an increase of $12 millions over their actual expenses in 1960.

Premier Jean Lesage on June 21 pointed out that the budgets submitted by provincial hospitals called for an unjustifiable increase in the cost of operations. Although the province expected requests for an average increase of 13 percent, the demands of the hospitals were 57 percent higher than their costs last year.

Hospital Insurance Service authorities therefore were forced to slash by approximately $47 millions the total amount of $162 millions requested by the hospitals to cover their expected expenditures for 1961.

The Premier had stated that the financial resources of the government were not unlimited and, if hospital expenditures were not kept at a reasonable level, other programs would have to be curtailed to the detriment of the province.

Dr. Jules Gilbert, director of the Hospital Insurance Service, said he recognized that many of the additional amounts sought by the hospitals were intended to improve standards of services. He regretted that, because of the overall budget, many of these demands could not be met this year. H.I.S. authorities would have to proceed gradually.

He emphasized that every effort was made to ensure a fair distribution to the hospitals. "Basically, it was a question of allotting available funds, as equitably as possible to the 155 institutions who were asking for much more than we could afford", he said.

Dr. Gilbert indicated that hospitals could seek reconsideration in exceptional cases but warned that these requests would be studied in the light of the entire budget and not on the merits of one or two isolated items.

"Hospital administrators should examine carefully all approved expenses before seeking reconsideration," he stated.

Burgerwiches . . . Newest Version of the Hamburger

Sandwiches in new version

Newest of the many versions of the popular hamburger sandwiches is the Burgerwich. This is a sandwich-type burger, with cheese, onion, tomato or other favoured fillings tucked between meat patties before baking. The important ingredient is evaporated milk. It keeps the beef moist and firm-textured.

Cheddar-Chive Burgerwiches
(Makes 6 servings)

½ Cup (small can) undiluted evaporated milk, 1½ pounds ground beef, ½ cup fine cracker crumbs, ½ teaspoon seasoned salt, ½ teaspoon celery salt, ½ cup grated process Cheddar cheese, 2 teaspoons chopped chives, 6 hamburger buns, split and toasted, 6 slices tomato.

Combine evaporated milk, beef, cracker crumbs, seasoned salt and celery salt; mix well. Divide mixture into 12 parts. Press out 12 patties between pieces of waxed paper to about 4 to 4½ inches. Sprinkle 6 patties with cheese and chives. Place other 6 patties on top of cheese-chive mixture. Press edges together. Place on broiling rack on broiler pan. Place pan in a moderate oven (350°). Bake 20 to 25 minutes. Do not turn patties. Arrange burgerwiches on bottoms of buns. Arrange tomatoes on tops of buns.

wonder QUESTIONS ?

ANSWERED BY THE RESEARCH SERVICE OF THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE

I WONDER . . . Curiosity is a priceless gift. A youngster's daily questions indicate a bright, inquiring mind. They should be answered intelligently. In this column The Watchman, in co-operation with The Book of Knowledge, will print questions — and their answers — most frequently asked by children of their parents.

How Does a Bird Know how To Build its Nest?

All living things perform certain important acts in their lives without ever having been taught how to do them. A pair of young birds builds its first nest without any difficulty, although the birds have never been taught how to do it. A force of nature, perhaps inherited knowledge, shows them how to build. This force we call instinct. Through instinct the spider weaves its web and the young chick pecks its way through the egg shell. None of these creatures have ever been taught how to do these things, and yet they do them perfectly. Human beings also do certain things by insinct. A newborn baby, for instance, sucks upon its bottle by instinct.

Why Does a Dog go 'Round and 'Round before it Lies Down?

This action represents a habit that has been handed down for countless generations. It goes back to the days when dogs were wild and lived in the jungle grass. If they wanted a comfortable bed, they had to turn round and round a few times so as to level the grass. Since that time many species of dogs have been domesticated, or tamed. These dogs now sleep on a mat or on the floor or even, if they are great favorites, upon a couch or bed. Yet, like their ancestors, they still go round and round before they lie down, even though there is no longer any need for the act. They are following the urging of instinct, which does not take into account the fact that circumstances have changed.

How Can a Plant Grow On a Bare Wall?

One of the most important parts of the food of green plants is found in the air. This part is the carbon dioxide that provides the plant with its carbon. But this is not all that the plant needs. It must have water and it must have salts. When we examine a bare wall we find that it is not so bare as it seems at a passing glance. In the first place, rain falls on it and so the plant on the wall gets its water. Rain itself contains small quantities of salts that are valuable to the plant. As the rain trickles down the wall it gains more. The water has the power of melting out of the wall, for instance, salts that may be contained in the mortar. We know that lime is very valuable for plants and mortar is really a kind of lime. So we find that certain plants can obtain, even on a bare wall, those things that are necessary for their life. But the supplies are scanty and the plants are small.

Teatime Topics

Specially Written for The Lachute Watchman

By Deirdre Mungovan, Canadian Press Staff Writer

The next time you have a yen for a turkey dinner on a day when it's just too hot to turn on the oven, try simmering the bird.

It not only helps to keep the kitchen cool but cuts down on cooking time. A 20-pound bird can be simmered tender in 2 to 2½ hours.

Cut the turkey as you would a stewing chicken — separate the legs and wings from the body at hip and shoulder and cut at the joints to separate thigh and drumstick and upper and lower wing. The body may be left whole or split in half down the back and breast bones.

Place the turkey pieces in a large kettle, suggests the Poultry Products Institute of Canada, and add three to four inches of water, salt, pepper, a sliced onion, carrot and some celery leaves, bay leaf and any spices or herbs usually added when stewing chicken.

Cover the kettle and bring to a boil, then reduce heat to keep water just simmering. Cook covered for 2 to 2½ hours until fork-tender. Cool meat and broth rapidly and refrigerate until used.

Coin-operated Cleaning

Women have been doing their family washings at coin-operated automats for some time but a Toronto establishment now has come up with a coin-operated dry-cleaning automat.

The firm says it doesn't expect the machines to replace the conventional dry cleaning service because many people will still want the skilled work of the professional dry cleaner. The machines are expected to appeal to housewives with large dry-cleaning bills.

One load takes about 50 minutes and costs about $1.50 to $2, for an eight to 12-pound load.

Stretch Slacks are Slimming

Stretch slacks, an off-shoot of the skier's tapered pants, are available in many Canadian stores now. Some manufacturers offer short, average and tall heights and some have a stirrup strap to anchor under the foot to provide a lean look rather than a glove-like fit.

The slacks are cut deliberately a trifle short and they may give a pulling-down sensation for a few minutes after they are donned but this disappears as the slacks adjust to the body. The slacks should be purchased in the buyer's regular size for the most flattering results.

Since they stretch when worn and relax when removed, the slacks should not be hung by the ankles. It's best to fold and store them flat in a drawer or hang them from the waistband.

To determine whether the seams are sewn with nylon thread, hold the leg horizontally in both hands and stretch the fabrics at the seams. If you don't hear thread cracking, the slacks have been properly sewn.

Outdoor Art

A recent Toronto outdoor art exhibit proved so successful its chairman, Alan Jarvis, said it will become an annual event. The four-day event was held on two week-ends and more than 9,500 people visited the show. It rained, but artists and friends grabbed the works on display and carried them inside until the sun burst through.

Let's Eat

IDA BAILEY ALLEN

"It makes me feel sad when I hear of many ladies who spend so much time cooking in the summer," sighed the Chef. "If they will only learn how to make a variety of tossed salads, this one dish alone can save hours of time.

"I'm frequently asked, too, how to make a 'Chef's Salad,' Madame. It does not seem to be commonly known that tossed salads take their name from the garnish used, or from the ingredients added when tossing an otherwise plain salad."

The Chef's Rules for Tossed Salads

Use only fresh crisp salad greens, carefully washed, drained and refrigerated until crisp in the hydrator, or in polyethelene bags tightly closed and placed in the refrigerator.

Tear or shred the greens into bite-sized pieces.

Select a dressing that not only tastes good in itself, but that will complement the other salad ingredients and the various foods in the meal. French dressing or one of its deratives harmonizes with any menu.

Tossed Bowl Salads

To mix this salad, select a bowl that is very large, so the greens will not spill out while being tossed. Turn into bowl one heaping quart of mixed lettuce, young spinach and tender chicory, all cut in bite-sized pieces. Measure into a big salad spoon ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon dry mustard, ¼ teaspoon pepper and ¼ teaspoon monosodium glutamate. Almost fill the spoon with olive oil and stir in the seasonings. Pour over the greens. Add two more tablespoons olive oil and toss gently with salad fork and spoon. Slowly add one tablespoon vinegar, wine vinegar preferred. Toss gently again, until the oil and vinegar have been completely absorbed and blended. No dressing should be left in the bowl.

Seashore Fish and Clam Stew

Dice 2 oz. fat salt pork; place in a heavy three-quart saucepan and slowly fry until the fat begins to run. Then add ½ cup chopped onions; saute one minute. Add two cups small-diced white potatoes, one cup medium-diced celery, ¾ cup small-diced carrots and ¼ cup small-diced green pepper. Slow-saute three minutes. Stir in 1½ cups canned tomato, 5 cups boiling water, 1½ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon monosodium glutamate, ⅛ teaspoon pepper and ¼ teaspoon thyme or tarragon. Cover and boil 25 minutes.

Then add 1 lb. fresh or frozen fish fillets cut into one-inch cubes. Turn in (10½-oz. can) chopped clams with the liquid. Simmer 15 minutes, or until the fish flakes and is fork-tender. Then stir in one tablespoon enriched flour blended with two tablespoons tomato juice or tomato ketchup, and boil three minutes. Serve in bowls. Garnish with minced parsley.

Trick of the Chef

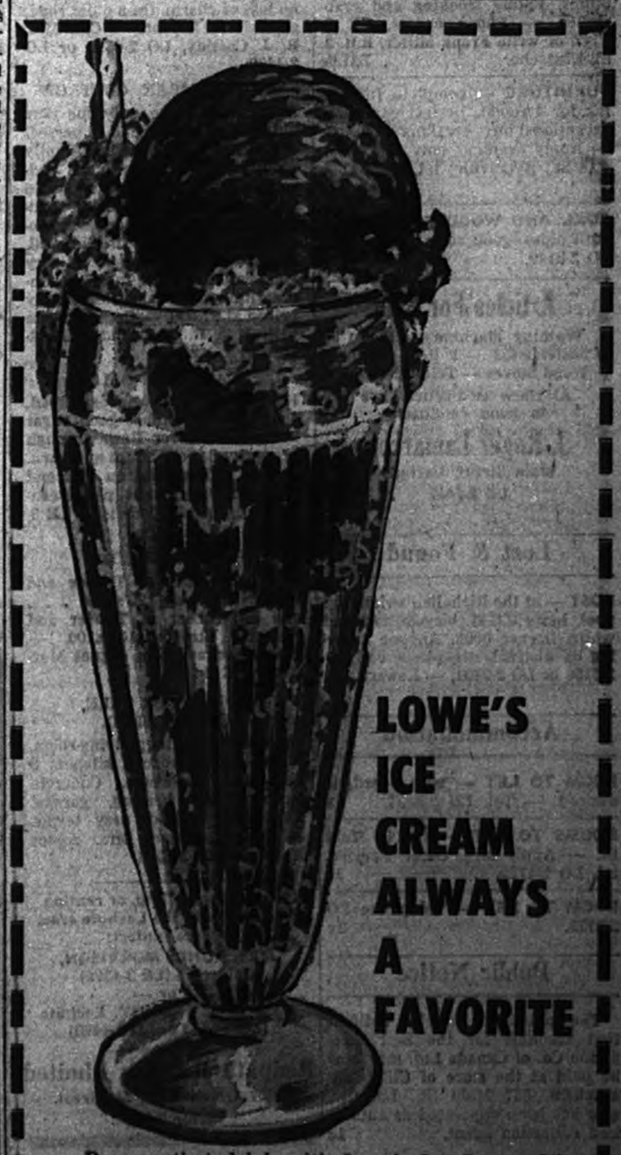

When preparing cucumber salad, make the French dressing with a little tarragon vinegar.

Girls, the best way I know to keep your family on the road to success, is through a good healthy savings account. When you've got money in the bank you can pay cash for the things you want, and take advantage of opportunity. Know where my husband and I saved the money to buy this new car?

'Shoplifting' in the countryside

It is high time that a stop was put to the "shop-lifting" which goes on in the countryside every summer. If we are to do this successfully, we must find the culprits. The first on whom well-founded suspicion will fall must surely be those robbers — the weeds.

By their misdeeds, direct and indirect, these pests deprive our farmers of considerable income. Paul Paquin, of the Quebec Department of Agriculture, puts the average value of losses due to weeds at over $300 per farm every year in this province.

Weeds take up land which should be occupied by useful plants, such as grains, grasses, and legumes. They cover the surface of the soil and prevent or delay the germination of good seed.

They rob the soil of some of the moisture and nutrients needed by the crop plants, and they also deprive the crop of part of its market value, and greatly detract from its appearance.

Weeds involve the farmer in the extra trouble and expense of carrying out suitable cultural practices for their control, and they likewise make haying and harvesting more difficult.

The presence of weed seeds in seed grain entails more careful (and therefore more expensive) cleaning and, of course, reduces the amount of grain available for sowing.

Weeds harbour overwintering pests in their stems or in their seeds. These pass the winter in a dormant state and are ready and waiting in spring to start infesting the coming season's crops.

Nor should we forget the harmful and even deadly effects of certain poisonous weeds on cattle.

Furthermore, these intruding weeds do nothing to increase the value of a farm, gay and colorful though they may be.

So, let's all take a hand in ridding our fields of the pests; and in town, let us make sure our vacant lots may cease to be nurseries for the propagation of weed seeds.

LED THE WAY

Charlottetown CP — Deputy provincial fisheries minister Eugene Gorman, a practical man as far as fishing is concerned, recently was dispatched by the minister's office to inspect a dragger in Souris for possible underwater damage. Mr. Gorman put on a diving suit and helped with the inspection himself, before making a report.

STUDENTS HELP ERECT MUSEUM

Yellowknife, N.W.T. CP — Young in years but long on the history of the Territories, this northern community is shaping a home for reminders of the Northwest Territories' colorful past.

The thumping of hammers and screech of saws signal steady progress on the Museum of the North being built largely by students under the sponsorship of the Yellowknife Museum Society, scheduled for official opening about July, 1962.

High school students did the excavation and started work on the building last September. A Yellowknife contractor put in the basement and students resumed work last spring.

When students return to school next month, interior finishing and construction of display cases to house records of the Territories' early history will be undertaken.

Five-stage construction plans call for extensions to be built in future. The society decided to construct the musuem when it found suitable quarters could not be economically rented.

Cost of the museum is estimated at $25,000.
