C-I-L Ammunition Divn. museum gets firing-piece 300 years old

A Japanese match-lock pistol believed to be more than 300 years old is latest addition to C-I-L ammunition collection. Donor, E. J. Johnson of Montreal, was with the company for 35 years.

The latest addition to the C-I-L ammunition collection is possibly the oldest piece it has yet acquired — reports the current issue of C-I-L Contact.

It's a muzzle-loading, hand-fired, match-lock pistol of Japanese manufacture and is believed to be more than 300 years old.

Some of the detailed craftsmanship which went into the making of this firearm can be seen in the photo. Holding the weapon is its donor, E. J. Johnson of Montreal, one-time resident of Brownsburg (still favorably remembered by the older residents in that community).

A former ammunition production manager, and manager of mechanical efficiency in the company, Mr. Johnson was with C-I-L for more than 35 years before being loaned to the federal government as director-general of industrial security, Department of Munitions and Supply, in 1941. His son, E. L. Johnson, was Brownsburg works manager during the Second World War.

Mr. Johnson, Sr., has been a collector of arms and ammunition for some years and had acquired a small but choice collection of early ammunition samples, which he also donated to the museum.

Police patrol — Easter week-end

Cpl. J. P. Dallaire, officer-in-charge of the local Provincial Police detachment, reported a quiet week-end, there being only four minor automobile accidents and two persons arrested, charged with impaired driving.

The most serious accident occurred at the railway crossing entering the C.I.P. mill at Calumet, where a truck overturned and delayed four trains.

Cpl. Dallaire stated all members of the detachment worked over the week-end, and all cars were patrolling the various highways in the County continuously.

Reading difficulties discussed by consultant, former teacher here

Dr. Jane Catterson of the Quebec Department of Education spoke to a representative group of teachers and Home & School Association members of the Shateauguay Valley at the Huntingdon High School recently. Miss Catterson is well known here as a former Lachute High School teacher. Following is a report of her address, for which we are indebted to The Huntingdon Gleaner. . .

Mrs. Donald Fraser, of Dundee, in introducing her lifelong friend said that Dr. Catterson was eminently qualified to speak on the topic "Modern Reading Programs and What Can Be Done about from the McGill Institute of Education and Bishop's University, cation and Bishop's University she taught at La Tuque, Howick and Lachute. During this period she became disturbed at the number of children in the elementary and high school grades who were being hampered in their studies by their inability to read properly. She decided that she wanted to learn the reasons for these difficulties and how to cope with them. As there was no university in Canada offering a suitable course she enrolled at Boston University, where she obtained her Ed.M. and Ph.D. degrees. For the three years prior to September 1963 she was Consultant in Reading for the Macdonald Central School Board and was in charge of the Remedial Reading Course at Macdonald College this past summer.

During her address Dr. Catterson explained why so much importance is placed on reading in our schools today. Fifty to 100 years ago children had just as many reading difficulties as they do today, the only difference being that these pupils left school at an early age and went to work. There was no stigma attached as it was thought that some were good at school work while others were not. However, in the technical era of the past few years jobs for unskilled workers are becoming fewer and fewer. As a result children are remaining in school longer and something must be done to solve the difficulties so many of them have with reading.

Dr. Catterson said there had been some controversy about whether the phonetic or visual method was the better way to teach reading. She revealed a surprising discovery. In tests at the reading research clinic at Boston University it has been found that the percentage of failures in classes taught by the phonetic method differ very little from those taught by the visual method. The speaker was of the opinion that a combination of the two methods was probably the better approach to the teaching of reading. Boys appear to have the most difficulty in learning to read. In remedial classes nine out of ten students are boys.

Dr. Catterson here stressed the importance of a thorough reading readiness testing program in Grade One. She is now preparing an elaborate set of these tests for the Department of Education and it is expected these will be in use next September. It was the opinion of the speaker that many of the difficulties can be eliminated by the careful use of these tests. Some children are ready to learn to read as soon as they enter Grade One, while it may be several months before others are ready. Classes should be thus grouped and the resultant groups taught at the rate they are able to grasp the material. During the year some children in the class may be able to complete the assigned course and start Grade Two work while others may not finish the Grade One texts. This is quite all right provided these children begin where they left off when they begin school again the following September. It has been found that the slower children usually reach grade level by the end of Grade Three.

Many of the reading problems arise because children are often made to read before they are ready. Soon they find the work too difficult, become discouraged and give up trying. It is far better to proceed slowly in the beginning, if necessary, because poor reading habits once established are very difficult to correct. Many factors enter into the teaching of reading and only a few have been mentioned in this resumé. It takes an alert and well-qualified teacher to successfully cope with the complex task of teaching young people to read well and to get enjoyment from it.

Dr. Catterson in her present position as inspector of English Protestant Schools in the province has been travelling extensively and has already visited a number of schools. She feels that teachers know there is a problem and are anxious to develop a sound reading program. However to accomplish their goal they must have more materials. These Dr. Catterson hoped would be forthcoming when the parents and the community as a whole realized how beneficial these materials can be.

An interesting question and answer period followed the address. One of the questions asked was — "Do you think it is a good idea to teach a child to read before he begins school?" Dr. Catterson answered that she didn't see anything wrong with so doing provided the correct method was used, but cautioned all to remember that poor reading habits are difficult to correct.

Book Fair and gymnastic display at recent Brownsburg Home-School

Brownsburg — Highlights of the March 24 meeting of the Brownsburg Home and School Association were a "Book Fair" and a gymnastic display.

Organized by Mr. John G. Leggitt, principal of Brownsburg High School, the book fair was aimed at enlarging the volume of the school library. Many books were obtained directly from the publishers and displayed on the tables of the school cafeteria. Prior to the business meeting the members were asked to buy books at the fair. All the books sold were donated by the purchasers to the school library. Thanks to the contributions made by many of the local organizations, and the splendid support given by members of the Association, more than 200 new books were added to the library, story books for children of all ages.

Following the brief business meeting, approximately 100 parents and teachers gathered in the school gymnasium to watch an exciting display of gymnastics and tumbling. Under the direction of Mr. Kent Tompkins, Physical Education instructor, 40 boys and girls from Grades III to VII exhibited their skill on the mats and with boxhorse and parallel bars. The group was divided into three teams — boys and girls of Grades III to VI, girls of Grades VII to IX, and boys of Grades VII to IX. The precision with which the three teams carried out the various exercises in their program, was a compliment to the coaching and efforts put into the preparation of this performance by Mr. Tompkins. Certainly the gymnastic ability displayed by the children is made even more remarkable by the fact that this is only the second year in which a program in gymnastics has been carried out.

Mr. Jack Partridge, president of the Association, expressed the thanks of the Home and School for the fine performance. The members then moved to the cafeteria, where refreshments were served by members of the social committee.

Easter season in Quebec; fiscal conference re-opens

QUEBEC THIS WEEK

By Gerry McNeil, Canadian Press Staff Writer

Quebec (CP) — There was a lenten — and penitent — air about all those poor souls who took off their winter tires or their storm windows before Easter week-end! For March 26 brought a howling nor'wester to the province that was unmatched by any of the puny winter storms of this season.

The snow came in horizontally, filling the cavities of any pedestrians who were out. Gale-force winds piled the snow time and again as ploughs tried to cope with it.

One to 10 inches fell in various parts of the province, but drifts went up to 10 feet.

There was hardly a car in Quebec City that didn't have to be shovelled out Good Friday.

Yet it wasn't cold enough to stop the sap from dripping steadily into the aluminum buckets nailed to maples throughout Eastern Quebec.

And the grey St. Lawrence was flowing free, with only an occasional white floe. The first ship was to move into the Saguenay River during the week-end for the earliest navigation start ever.

There was consolation in the fact that one sunny day would wipe away the snow. So it wasn't really too bad — except for the fellows without snow tires, the early birds with the screen windows, and the ladies with the bright new Easter shoes, coats and bonnets.

Easter week saw little political activity here. Reporters were briefed about agendas at the federal-provincial fiscal conference scheduled to resume here Tuesday, March 31.

Dispatches from Laval University students said 5,000 from Laval and other universities across Quebec would parade as the Conference began. Disorder wasn't expected. The students themselves were taking steps to prevent disturbances.

Premier Lesage at a press conference told reporters the steel mill report is still under study. The optimistic had expected it to be made public late in January.

He refused to comment on Newfoundland Premier Joey Smallwood's provocative comments about the Hamilton Falls, Labrador, hydro-electric development. Mr. Smallwood had said Newfoundland had first call on power developed there and would stop exports "with reasonable notice" if it needed the electricity.

Meanwhile, Gustave E. Tremblay, a chartered accountant, was named Provincial Auditor to succeed the late J.-A. Vezina, a hard-working, conscientious man who was given high tribute by the Legislative Assembly following his sudden death recently.

Mr. Tremblay became provincial Superintendent of Insurance in 1960.

Charities appeal at 56% of target

Liguori Chevrier, zone chairman

Latest report on the Charities Federation appeal, issued Thursday of last week, indicated returns of $75,926.85 — 56.3% of the $135,000 objective.

The organizers are asking all donors to reconsider and, if possible, increase their givings. It is urged upon those not so far approached by the canvassers, to volunteer their contributions to this cause.

Also, those uncontacted belonging to the industries, business and the professions, are requested to give generous support, addressing their donations direct to the "Federation of Charities, Diocese of St. Jerome, Box 484, St. Jerome, Que.", or to Liguori Chevrier, the district chairman, at 617 College Street, Lachute.

Sentiments and Sidelights

Editor's luck. It happens every time we mention the weather. Our chic little paragraph last week about Easter and a balmy spring was followed by one of the season's most blustering snowstorms — and before The Watchman even reached your mailbox!

"The Tree and the Young Canadian" is the subject for an essay contest set by the Quebec Federation of Fish and Game Associations. According to the panel now judging entries from this district, it's surprising the number of teen-agers who believe one of the important uses of a tree is "for climbing in". Even the tomboys.

Peverted humor behind false alarm to B'burg firemen

An individual with a distorted sense of humor sent a crew of Brownsburg firemen scurrying to Lachute early Tuesday afternoon, to assist in a fire of major proportions at 192 Main Street.

The Brownsburg brigade, led by Fire Chief Fern Brisson, were in Lachute minutes later — much to the surprise of local Fire Chief Don MacCulloch. . . Meanwhile, it appears the same prankster notified the police department here in Lachute or some of the personnel, that there was a major fire at the C-I-L plant, and while no call for assistance was received, extra hose and equipment was made ready for an immediate departure.

The calls were received shortly after one o'clock. The two municipalities have always worked on a mutual agreement basis, and there was no time-consuming checking — just prompt action, when the unauthorized call for assistance was received in Brownsburg and an alert phoned in at Lachute.

Cancer appeal this month

Weapons against cancer are a Checkup and a Cheque. . . It's time again for cheques.

All too often during the year we are reminded of the need for continued medical research to help conquer cancer. During the month of April we have our opportunity to assist in this vital work.

Soon a canvasser, taking valuable time to work on the campaign, will call on our readers. It is urged upon residents to make their contributions as generous as possible and to remind others to support the Canadian Cancer Society.

"ARGENTEUIL OUTDOORS"

By BOB ATCHISON

Once more the bush is starting to wake up. Wandering around Sunday (before the pre-Easter snowfall) I could hear the trickle of water, peeping of birds, and feel the warm winds; it certainly was great. There was lots of water to be ploughed through, but it was worth it. It was out of the question to discern tracks — at the time there was very little snow. I visited the lynx' den I had found some time ago, but there was nothing except water. I guess the animal knew it would be flooded before too long, and made a change. A fawn was spotted, close enough to know just what it was. And from the condition of trees in the area this must have been used as a small yard during the winter.

Redwing blackbirds are really with us, along with untold numbers of crows. As I mentioned before, some of the shooters have been out after them, but to no avail. I also was given a woodchuck the other day for a meal, but this was not in prime condition for eating. They must have had a very easy winter though, for there was plenty of fat and considering his long hibernation, his condition was remarkable. Skunks are getting clobbered on the roads again, and it won't be long before many more are run down. I've often wondered how these animals can be so stupid at times. Of course, all animals are stupid in the glare of a light, but the skunk takes the cake.

I had the occasion to see a tent the other night that had been stored in a hot, humid place; boy, was it messed up! Full of small holes from the humidity, and some of the gromets were rotted out. This is really bad, when you consider that just a little care would have saved this. However, it's too late now to do anything about the storing; in fact, this tent may be finished for anything. However a waterproofing can be put on, either by the cold method or the warm types. Some of this waterproofing is applied in spray-cans; this is expensive especially for a whole tent, so I would suggest if any of your canvas goods are the worse for wear, use the cold method and a brush. It takes a lot longer to do, but it's sure a lot cheaper. The best way to do this is to put up the tent and work on it that way. You can also leave it up to dry, and what is more important, to find out any spots you have missed. It's not much fun fixing a tent then finding out, just when you are using it, that it leaks like a sieve.

While on this business of equipment, you should check over your life jackets. These of course can be fixed, but once they are repaired they no longer have the government approval. Anything in this line that looks below-par should not be used; far better to buy new ones, than try and buy a life. Your gas cans should be checked over, too — and don't try and check these with a match, unless you want to go into orbit. As you know, these things can be fixed, but really it is not worth the time, trouble and hazard to do so. Check the paddles, oars, etc.; you could need them one day. Another sore point, especially on fibre boats — those that have float compartments built into them, should be checked very carefully. I don't have to tell you what to do if any small holes are found in them. Try all the fittings, this might seem an unimportant item, but it's not. Your bow bollards should be given a going over. It's great to anchor your boat in fast water only to find your bollards pulling out!

Some of the new meals on the market for the sportsman are pretty good. The Armour Star Lite people, of Chicago, have come up with their latest — they have nine different meals that need no refrigeration whatever; now all we have to do is get them in Canada. Up to the present, I don't know where they can be obtained, but as soon as I find out I will give you the word. I have not tried all these dinners, only the Swiss Steak, and believe me, they are worth taking on any trip you may be contemplating. There are some Canadian companies that could go into this line, and turn out very good meals; the only thing about all this outdoors equipment, however — no one is really interested in starting. This to me is too bad, since the huge influx of neo-sportsmen now taking to the bush should be a gold mine for a good product.

Briefs being presented to the government are, I hope, going to be acted upon. One in particular I like, advocates the licensing of all guides, and prohibiting them from carying a gun while guiding. This is a long awaited law; let's hope the Department of Wildlife takes note and acts upon it. This brief was presented by the Quebec Federation of Fish and Game Associations. As you may recall, all clubs got a questionnaire from the Federation, and this was one of the questions asked. It appears that most clubs were in favor of the licensing too. The moose situation is once again to be studied. It seems there are numerous moose that should be killed in this province. I would presume this is going to be a shocker, just as our deer are in this County. Of course I am only speaking for this County; moose are really no concern of ours (at least, certain people say so); but isn't it just possible we are in grave danger of losing all our wildlife, from some of this wild talk going on by groups who want the moose killed? Certainly I agree, some form of kill must be allowed, but not to the point of extinction. Denials of this will naturally be forthcoming, but it seems to me this has been said of a good many animals that are now caput. With more and more hunters on the loose, then something is going to give; and I'm afraid it will be the game population.

The latest snowstorm in the district certainly did a lot of damage to the birds. Hundreds of them seem to have been overcome by the fury of the winds and cold. It's funny how these things happen — a long spell of nice weather, with the resultant influx of summer and spring birds; then wham! Maybe this is one way of Nature's ways of killing off the surplus.

Some of you sportsmen have been enquiring about bargains advertised in the American magazines. They could be bargains, but when you consider how much they will cost you with the discount on the dollar, plus postage, then customs — it hardly would pay you. On top of all this, you have no guarantee of getting just what you wanted. Maybe you'd better stick to nationally advertised outfits; they're cheaper in the long run.

One of the ways in which Indians solved the sky-busting problem of its goose hunting areas, was to limit shooters to six shells apiece. Boy, this sure would play havoc with some of our duck shooters; me too. I think I do a very good job for the national employment level when the duck season shows up. But this looks like a wonderful idea; at least any shots taken will be of the sure type, thus making for better kills; not too many cripples would be around, either.

The Spring Bonspiel winds up next Saturday, with eight rinks competing for the Quent Millar Trophy. Mr. Quentin Millar, of the Caledonian Curling Club of Montreal, was a participant in our bonspiel for many years, making a host of friends in this district. Sixteen years ago he presented the Quent Millar cup to the club for annual competition play in our Spring Bonspiel. Mr. Millar hasn't been able to enter a team for the last couple of years due to ill health, but we hope he will be on hand Saturday night to present the cup and to renew old friendships.

At the time of writing five of the eight sections have been completed, with the winners as follows:

Jim Grant — Baie d'Urfé Curling Club.

Art Wilson — Vankleek Hill Curling Club.

Irwin Martin — Brownsburg Curling Club.

G. Lalande — Maxville Curling Club.

Bill Ott — Outremont Curling Club.

The names of these winners and three others yet to be declared will be drawn from a hat in order to make the draw for Saturday's playdowns, with games scheduled for 10 a.m., 1 p.m., 4 p.m. and 8 p.m.

Linton Armstrong reports that this is probably the best of all bonspiels to date. There are 154 entries, very few cancellations, and all teams arriving on time. What could be better?

Visiting teams are welcomed at the door — entry fees arranged — names of the teams listed and players shown to the locker rooms by an efficient reception committee, who deserve special mention for their faithful and friendly services — Dick Richardson (chairman), Frank Brennian, Bill Haldimand, Gavin Walker, and Stanley Cockhill. — Gentlemen, many thanks!

As reported last week Dr. Maurice Campbell, president of the Canadian Branch of the Royal Caledonian Curling Club, and three of his branch officers, played against the local president, Keith Rutherford, and some past presidents of our Club. The visitors won their game, to prove they are good curlers as well as good officers of the branch. Bob Cairns, a past-president participating on President Keith's rink, expressed the appreciation of our club for the honor conferred upon us by Dr. Campbell's visit; he congratulated him and his team of Henry Craig, William Raeside and Linton Armstrong on their excellent play. Dr. Campbell thanked our club for the warm hospitality given to him, his wife and the team, and promised that, all being well, he would enter a team of curlers from Cap de la Madeleine in next year's bonspiel.

If you want to see some fine exhibitions of curling you should turn out on Friday night, April 3, when some particularly strong rinks from Ottawa, Buckingham, Montreal and other points are to be on hand. . . Then, of course, Saturday's finals are a must.

The members of the Lachute Ladies' Curling Club continue to serve delicious meals night after night, and it would do their hearts good to hear all the exclamations of delight and satisfaction expressed by the visitors and our own club members. What would we do without our very capable and gracious ladies!

Crabtree takes 2-1 lead in third game of finals

The Crabtree Beavers took a 2-1 lead in the final series of the Senior Laurentian Hockey League, when they defeated the Lachute-Brownsburg Maroons by a score of 8-3.

This game was played last Sunday at the Brownsburg Arena, before a crowd of over 1,000 spectators — who once again left the rink asking themselves what had happened to the vaunted scoring power of the Maroons. This was the second game in a row that the Maroons disappointed their fans with a lack-lustre performance. The first game of the series, also played in Brownsburg, saw the locals suffer a 8-0 trouncing. However, in Joliette, the Maroons had avenged this loss with a superb 9-2 victory. So far, this series has certainly not been one for goalkeepers. This is in direct opposition to what happened during the regular season, when all games between these two teams proved low scoring, tight checking encounters.

In this game, the Maroons never threatened. They were always behind on the scoreboard, and their attacks really never got started. Forechecking by the forwards was practically non-existent and time and again the defence were caught up the ice leaving the goal-tender alone to face the sharpshooting Beavers. Altogether, it was an undistinguished performance, giving false indication of the real calibre of this team. The scorers for the Maroons were Jean Guy Prévost, Maurice Desrosiers and Fernand Spénard.

The team now travels to Joliette for the fourth game of the series, and the fifth game will be played in Brownsburg Arena, Sunday, April 5, at 2 p.m. You will note the new earlier starting time, for this game only.

Ladies' curling at Brownsburg

Finals in the Business Girls' Challenge were played last Thursday at the Brownsburg Curling Club. This competition was won by the afternoon ladies — Mrs. J. Humphrys (skip), Mrs. B. Richardson, Mrs. G. Pasco, Mrs. J. Murdoch.

The Ladder competition was won by — Mrs. J. Humphrys (skip), Mrs. W. Dimock, Mrs. A. Hay, Mrs. D. Graham.

Two rinks entered the Jackson Trophy bonspiel — Mrs. J. Humphrys (skip), Mrs. R. Keatley, Mrs. A. McCulloch, Mrs. W. Dimock; and Mrs. S. Rose (skip), Mrs. P. Villard, Mrs. J. Finlayson, Mrs. C. Low.

Teams in Minor hockey tourney from wide area

The Argenteuil Hockey tournament, to be held at Brownsburg Arena this week-end, April 3-4-5, is sponsored by a group of Lachute enthusiasts whose purpose is to promote minor hockey in the area and thus provide organized and supervised recreation for our youth. Much effort and detail has been involved in the organizing and timing of this tournament schedule.

Approximately 35 teams have made application and have been accepted to participate in the tournament. This involves about 560 boys, ranging in ages from 12 to 16.

In most cases these teams are the champions of their respective leagues. Some of the teams are from Montreal, St. Lambert, N.D.G., Ottawa, Gatineau, Anger, Buckingham, Thurso, Hawkesbury, Grenville, and Brownsburg. There are three Lachute teams entered, and the New York State Midget champions from Massena, N.Y., will also compete.

The games get under way at 6 p.m. this Friday, April 3; information as to the schedule may be obtained from Lowe Bros., Lachute, or from the rink authorities.

SKI TRAILS

By ROSS COLE, Director, Ayers Ski Centre

Ram Ski Club News

On March 21 the trophies for Junior racing were presented. These were awarded on the basis of total points achieved throughout the year on the various races. The rating was set up as follows — 10 points for a first, 5 points for a second, and 2 points for a third. If there was a tie, both contestants would receive points as noted above, depending on their placing. As you can see, in order to be a contender for one of the trophies, it would be necessary to compete in all the races throughout the season.

The winners of the trophies were as follows:

Boys —

The Ross Cole Trophy, Junior "A" champion — Vernon Thompson.

Desrosiers Automobile Trophy, Junior "B" champion — Jeffrey Arnold, Jr.

Girls —

Carling Lake Club Trophy, Junior "A" champion — Susan Sugden.

Hus-Ski Trophy, (Farmers' Supply), Junior "B" champion — Debbie McCaffrey.

K. & W. Assaly Trophy, Junior "C" champion — Sarah Ellwood.

On Sunday, March 22, a Senior race was held, open to all members of the club 18 years and over. The race consisted of a Giant Slalom, or controlled downhill as some people prefer to call it. It was held on the Pasture Trail, with five control gates set at strategic positions to make the course interesting. The winners of this race were as follows:

Ladies —

Harden Trophy, Senior "B" championship — Mrs. Kathy Cole.

Dow Trophy, Senior "A" championship — Janet Miller.

Men —

Molson Trophy, Senior "A" championship — Don Barbour.

This concluded the trophy presentations for the year, and I think the competition will be even greater next year, now that these awards have been set up. A vote of thanks should go to all the donors of these magnificent awards, which will be on show at all times at the Ayers Ski Centre, with a small replica being awarded to the winners to take home.

Next Week —
Storage of Equipment

Skiing until next Sunday

Ross Cole, the Ayers Ski Centre director, reports skiing at the Centre is excellent, and that all facilities of the organization will be in full operation until Sunday, April 5.

Members are requested to remove all equipment from their lockers no later than Sunday. Mr. Cole adds that the usual Spring Sale specials are available at the Ski Shop until the week-end closing. (Advt.)

Gentlemen:

For years I have used Chevrolet trucks for my city and country deliveries. I have always had really good service from them, with very little trouble. I recently traded a 1954 cab-over-engine model which had cost only $200.00 in repairs since new. A 1957 truck which I bought new is still running well with original parts throughout. From engine to rear axle, everything is original.

This kind of long service has convinced me that I buy the right trucks when I buy Chevrolet. Gas mileage is better than on any other make of truck I have owned, and my drivers tell me that there's lots of power there for their heaviest loads.

A multi-stop operation such as mine is hard on all parts of a truck but from my previous experience, I know my new Chevrolets will stand up to the job.

Yours very truly,
Mel Hill
President

Cars rust from inside, out

No matter how beautiful your car's finish, it is backed up by raw metal surfaces constantly exposed to road salt and water. Costly body damage usually starts here, where you cannot see until it is too late.

A new kind of coating — Goodyear Underframe Coating — applied by carefully-trained specialists — gives protection at these vital spots to avoid costly replacement later. This product is not a messy asphalt or grease, but a free-flowing coating of plastic applied in thin spray to penetrate into the tiniest cracks. It is loaded with powerful rust inhibitors which fight back and neutralize the corrosive effects of water, salt, calcium and other harmful agents, to give cars complete protection the year 'round.

Goodyear Underframe Coating is expertly applied by — Lacasse Automobile Ltée. (Advt.)

The Bible Today

Figures issued in March by the United Bible Societies show that the whole Bible now appears in 231 languages, an increase of three over last year. The number of languages which have the New Testament, but not the whole Bible, now stand at 290, as against 282 at the end of 1962.

There are 695 languages of the world which have at least one Gospel published, but as yet do not have the New Testament or the whole Bible.

"In all, there are 1,216 languages into which at least one book of the Bible is published," stated Dr. Olivier Beguin, the General Secretary of the United Bible Societies, in Toronto recently. This compares to 1,202 last year.

The three new Bibles were produced for language groups in Africa — two for Angola and one for Northern Rhodesia. The new additions in the New Testament list are for Africa, India, South America, Taiwan, Sarawak and New Guinea.

The United Bible Societies gathers the translation figures from the 27 national Bible Societies of the world. The Canadian Bible Society is a member of the United Bible Societies.

There Is No Fire in Hell

What will you do when you are shown from the Scriptures that many popular creeds and teachings of Christendom are false? How will you react when you learn that the human soul is not immortal, that hell is not a place of fire, and that the Bible does not teach a trinity? Will you prefer to go along with the popular misconceptions, or will you stand alone for what you know to be right? Your decision involves your life.

Dobbie-Blake ceremony in suburban Toronto

The marriage of Lesley Joan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eric V. Blake, of Toronto, and Hugh de Lancey, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon P. Dobbie, of Lachute, took place on March 21 in the Presteign United Church, East York, Toronto, the Rev. Archibald Gillies officiating. White gladioli and shasta daisies were used to decorate the church.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of peau-de-soie, the bodice appliquéd with lace and the skirt falling into a slight train. Her shoulder-length veil was held by a small band of velvet leaves and seed pearls, and she carried a bouquet of cream-colored rosebuds, pink carnations, and freesias.

Miss Maeva Gillespie, as maid of honor, and the two bridesmaids, Mrs. Peter Blake and Miss Nancy Dobbie, were all gowned alike in peacock blue brocade with headdress and shoes to match, and they carried bouquets of large single white mums.

Mr. Robert R. Dobbie acted as best man for his cousin, and the ushers were Mr. Peter Blake and Mr. Bruce Dobbie.

The reception was held at The Lodge, Maple Creek Farm, West Hill, and later the bride and groom left by motor for their wedding trip, the bride travelling in a burgundy wool suit, white Milan straw hat, and her corsage was a white orchid.

Among the out-of-town guests were — Mr. and Mrs. John MacGregor and children, of Brampton; Mr. and Mrs. Walker Archer and children, of Cooksville; Mrs. Bert Gillespie, of Brantford; Mr. James Gillespie, of North Bay; Miss Margaret Archibald, Miss M. Joy Oswald and Miss Marjorie Graham, of Montreal; Mr. and Mrs. John Dobbie, and Mrs. John Prophet, of Calumet; Mrs. Robert Dobbie, of Harrington; Mrs. Ross Swail, of Lachute; Mr. and Mrs. Bruce A. Lancey, of Hudson Heights.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Dobbie will reside in Lachute.

Film 'The Soul of Quebec'

In these days of unrest educationally, politically, socially and religiously, Quebecers owe it to themselves and others to be well informed on the matters agitating the great province in which we live.

This coming Sunday evening, April 5, the Rev. Wilson Ewin, missionary and pastor of the French-speaking Baptist Church of Compton, Que., will present the new film in color and sound, entitled "The Soul of Quebec," in the Lachute Baptist Church at 7.30 p.m. This film is most informative and enlightening on the conditions that disturb so many of our Canadian people in these days.

The people and pastor of the Lachute church will most heartily welcome all who can possibly be present on this occasion.

Drawing for stereo set

APPRECIATION

I would like to express my sincere thanks to all kind relatives and friends for visits, get-well cards and flowers, received during my recent stay in hospital.

— Mrs. Thomas J. Anderson, Brownsburg

The late Mrs. Neal Moore

The death of Mrs. Neal Moore, who was stricken with a heart attack Saturday afternoon while shopping at the I.G.A. Store, came as a shock to the community. Rushed to the Argenteuil Hospital, she passed away within an hour of her arrival, despite medical assistance.

Mrs. Moore was the former Mabel Irene De Forest and was born in the precincts of New York, where she received her early education, graduating in 1917. The First World War being then in progress, she went to Washington, D.C., as a government employee, and later served as secretary in the Internal Revenue Department. In 1927 she married Mr. Moore, and the following year they took up residence in San Diego, Mr. Moore being then a member of the Marine Corps. During their stay there Mrs. Moore was employed by the Water Development of the city of San Diego, where she was highly rated for her knowledge of details of this big organization, and where she made many friends.

A yearning to return to the scene of his childhood days brought Mr. and Mrs. Moore back to Argenteuil in 1949, to occupy the old homestead and farm at Hill Head.

Mrs. Moore was keenly interested in the work of the Argenteuil Women's Institute and of the Upper Lachute - East End branch, one of whose projects is the building of a Senior Citizens' Home — and on this sad occasion numerous donations are being made for this purpose, in lieu of flowers as a token of respect.

Besides her devoted husband, there remain one sister, Mrs. Luella Voorhiss, a nephew, Norman Voorhiss, with his wife and children, and many friends far and near.

Service was held Tuesday afternoon in the MacKimmie Funeral Chapel, conducted by the Rev. W. B. Rosborough, interment taking place in Lachute Cemetery.

Pall-bearers were — Messrs. Arnold Scott, Stuart Hume, George Connelly, Emerson Noble, Murray Lyster and Keith Pollock.

APPRECIATION

I sincerely thank friends, relatives and neighbors for their great encouragement, for visits, and for the many cards and gifts I received throughout my stay in the Royal Victoria Hospital and the Montreal Convalescent Hospital. Special mention to the Rev. C. W. P. Baugh, for his frequent trips to see me.

— Austin F. Kyle

What is a Volkswagen, really?

A Volkswagen is a car.

A different kind of car.

It has its engine in the rear instead of the front.

We do it that way to put extra weight over the drive wheels and improve the traction. That's why a Volkswagen keeps going on sand, mud, snow and ice.

And the engine is cooled with air instead of water. So there's no radiator to boil over in summer or freeze in winter. Or anti-freeze to buy. Or water pumps to fix. Or hose to replace.

A new kind of VW. (Even though it has all the features just mentioned.)

It has a great new engine that will take you from a standing start to 50 miles per hour in twelve seconds. It's like driving a sports car. Or an expensive touring car.

There's no secret to the outstanding road holding qualities of the 1500. We use independent torsion-bar suspension. And an anti-sway bar. And an engine that is mounted low.

A Volkswagen is one more thing. Economical.

And that's not a phrase with us. We're ready to prove it. Anytime.

The Easter Season

Despite icy roads and inclement weather, quite a few of the summer visitors were occupying their cottages or visiting here. Easter services were held in both churches, United and Anglican — Rockway Valley joining with Grace Church for the Communion services. In the traditional manner both churches were decorated with spring flowers, and there were full congregations to enjoy the Easter hymns and join in the devotions.

The Easter supper under auspices of the United Church Women was not as well attended as in former years, owing to bad roads, but it was enough of a success to reward the effort which the convener, Mrs. S. Swail and her committee, put into it.

Mr. Wesley Scott, of Red Deer, Alta., spent the week-end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Scott, his brother.

Week-end visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. Swail were Mr. and Mrs. H. Thornicroft, Mr. Ted Thornicroft, Mr. and Mrs. E. Woods, of Montreal, Mrs. G. Kilpatrick, of Morin Heights. Miss N. Wood and Mr. Keith Thornicroft are remaining as visitors this week.

Mrs. G. Barrie spent the Easter holiday with her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Graham.

Mrs. Alvin Graham entertained Mr. and Mrs. Earl Graham, Miss Beverley Graham, Mr. S. Bates, of Montreal, Mr. and Mrs. R. Poeppner, of Dollard des Ormeaux, over the Easter week-end.

Easter visitors at the home of Mrs. F. Davis were Mr. and Mrs. E. Davis, of Rosemere. Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Carslaw and family, Mr. and Mrs. G. Kitts and family, of Ste. Rose, Que.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Cooke are at their cottage for the Easter holidays. Their son-in-law, Mr. Trevor Sevigny, who recently underwent surgery, is now out of hospital and convalescing nicely; friends wish him a complete recovery.

Mr. and Mrs. S. James and family spent the holiday with Mr. and Mrs. Roy Staniforth.

Mr. and Mrs. Bethume and family, of Montreal, and Miss Jean Dubeau, of Ottawa, were holiday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Dave Dubeau.

Additional week-end callers at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. Swail were Mr. Russel Lister, Mr. and Mrs. D. Kilpatrick and daughter, Lori Ann, of Morin Heights.

Women's Institute

The monthly meeting of the Women's Institute will take place on Tuesday evening, April 7. The program will consist of a showing of the Arundel Centenary films, by Mr. Denis Staniforth. All members are urged to attend and see this interesting film.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Gray, and Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Eaton, are motoring to Florida next week for a vacation trip.

Wildlife Week, April 5-12 —

Checking on wildlife resources

WHEN YOU SAY "free as a bird" these days, you have to attach some reservations. . . For there are pheasants in the Ontario skies, and wolves, foxes and other animals roaming the woods, whose exact locations is known to wildlife officials miles distant.

That's because these birds and animals are carrying tiny radio transistors that continually tell the location of their wearer. The three-ounce transistors have been strapped around the necks of all sorts of animals in Ontario, and a lands and forest department crew in a truck map their routes with few problems.

Moose are being tracked the same way in Newfoundland. Small transistor radios were to be attached to six trapped moose that will be set free this spring. These radios, about the size of a thumbnail, will be a big help to the Newfoundland resources department in its extensive research into the movements of moose.

Since the bird or animal is not disturbed by the presence of humans, the latter can get a more accurate picture of their movements and habits.

This wireless tracking is among new scientific measures being used by federal and provincial wildlife departments in gaining more accurate knowledge of the country's wildlife resources.

And these resources are of increasing importance, for many reasons. Ducks and caribou, Arctic char and Quebec's landlocked salmon, game fish all over the country, deer and other hunters' targets, are important assets. In some areas they are vital for food, in many they are helpful in maintaining the tourist flow.

This year, National Wildlife Week is being observed from April 5 to April 12, and the national theme for the special week is, "Canadians Need Outdoor Recreation — Act Now to Provide for the Future."

Dr. David A. Munro, the new chief of the Canadian Wildlife Service at Ottawa, said recently one of the biggest jobs his department has is to convince Canadians of the value of the natural resources they have in wildlife.

He named two other important tasks: "There must be a development and improvement program for maintaining the wetlands for ducks, and we have to work out some scheme to try to arrest the decline in caribou herds."

One instance of the importance of wildlife is the fact that Ducks Unlimited, a private organization, is spending $1,000,000 in northern Saskatchewan and Manitoba to encourage wildfowl breeding by building dams and dikes to retain water in marshy areas.

Rural residents well know the necessity of wildlife in the natural scheme of things. And the most city-bound dweller, even if not a hunter or fisherman, should be aware of it.

Home on the range

THE TELEVISION and movie star cowboys such as Roy Rogers and Gene Autry, and even the top professional rodeo performers, are far removed from the unglamorous, hard-working cowpoke who actually rides herd.

When he's through with the day's work he may not have any breath left to croon those Western songs, and he probably doesn't know one end of a guitar from another. Actually, the working cowboy is a man doing a vital job in an industry of great importance to Canada's economy — the livestock and meat-packing industry.

On a gross value basis the meat-slaughtering and packing business normally is among the four largest manufacturing industries in Canada. Where it's different is that it owes its importance to the value of raw products obtained from the rancher and farmer, rather than to the value added by the manufacturing process.

A sample of the livestock industry's importance is that in 1961, the value of all Canadian field crops was $1,438,000,000. But in that same year the total of livestock on farms was valued at $1,880,000,000.

And in 1963, in Alberta, the total income for Alberta grain farmers was estimated as $183,293,000. In the same year, Alberta cattle income reached $220,266,000.

To show the importance of the cattle trade, the biggest livestock show ever held in Canada is planned as part of the 1967 centennial celebrations. The show will be an all-Canadian effort, says T. M. McLeod, president of the Regina Exhibition Association. Cost of the show to be held during the annual Regina exhibition will be more than $1,000,000.

At this time of year preparations are being made for one of the big annual efforts by the cowboys — the moving of cattle herds from the winter ranges to the higher summer grounds.

So the next time you see the cowboy star singing and strumming the guitar, remember that the real cowpoke is out in the open spaces doing a vital job of work in a valuable — and essential — part of the Canadian economy.

Foreign students favor Canada

CANADA IS shaping up as one of the world's top training grounds for foreign students, says Beatrice Riddell in The Financial Post. As a proportion of total university enrolment, Canada has considerably more foreign students than the U.S. (6.1% vs 1.5%) in 1961-62.

This year, an estimated 9,500 foreign students from more than 100 countries, islands, colonies and former colonies are studying a broad range of subjects at almost every Canadian campus. The increase in foreign students is about 20% in two years — approximately the same as the climb in over-all university enrolment in the same period. In addition, at least 2,000 foreign students and trainees are studying at institutes of technology, hospitals, research centres, or working in government departments and industry.

This increase in foreign students is expected to expand rapidly. Some reasons are Commonwealth ties, availability of English and French-language universities, increasing federal government external aid, and the high academic reputation of Canadian universities.

Viewpoints and perspectives

SHOULD START EARLY. — The most effective campaign (to curb cigarette smokers) would be education in the schools starting with Grade I. By continual pounding home that smoking and cancer go hand-in-hand, youngsters could be discouraged from starting to smoke. Adults should have the intelligence to stop. If they don't choose to, it's their funeral.
— North Vancouver Citizen

CLYDESIDE shipyards are reported to be looking forward to a profitable year, having to look back on a year of disappointment. The problem of British shipyards is the problem of all enterprises where costs have been allowed to rise too rapidly and where the ca'canny system has a strong hold. . .

"Ca'canny" is an old-fashioned expression for swinging the lead. It was invented on the Clyde but seems to have been spread throughout the working world.
— Fort Erie Letter-Review

STRIKES AGAINST HOSPITALS are strikes that should not be permitted. Essential services of all kinds should involve compulsory arbitration. No union or union leader should have such power that there could be a strike against a hospital that involves the care of the sick and maimed. Under modern conditions there are undoubtedly many people in hospital who do not really need to be there, but it is not for unions, or even non-union staffs, to decide. The strike weapon is used in these times altogether too often.

THIS WEEK & NEXT

The Split Grows Wider

By RAY ARGYLE

The past week brought new signs of deepening mistrust between English and French-speaking Canada. There was one bright spot, however, and that was the CBC's third bilingual television production, "A Show From Two Cities."

The program was important because it provided more than fine entertainment. It probably created a greater potential for increased understanding and goodwill than all the pious pronouncements of well-meaning politicians heard in the past year.

Ray Argyle

But it was a lone bright spot in a week of distress.

And as is always the case, neither side was without fault.

In one of the most stupid and ill-conceived declarations ever to emerge from Quebec, the powerful St. Jean Baptiste Society (representing 250,000 French Canadians), called for a campaign to make Montreal a unilingual city — a solely French speaking community.

That there is absolutely no chance of any such divisive campaign succeeding, is beside the point.

At a time when French-speaking Canadians are struggling to win wider recognition for their language and culture, efforts of this nature will have just the opposite result.

English-speaking Canadians will not tolerate any loss of their rights in Quebec. And challenges such as the one issued by the St. Jean Baptiste Society will only stiffen the resolve of some English Canadians to resist all effort by French Canada to work out new concepts for the future of the Canadian Confederation.

But French Canada has no monopoly on stupidity.

There is a rising tide of anti-French feeling across Canada, especially in the west.

This is due in part to western remoteness from Quebec. The geographical gap between the regions is immense, and great also is the gap in understanding between Quebec and the west.

While traveling in B.C. last week, I encountered many examples of the mistrust and fear which has fastened on the people of this province toward French Canada.

There are two great obstacles now facing Canada in what is becoming nothing less than a struggle for our very national survival.

One is factionalism, in which a multitude of ethnic groups, including our two dominant races, are still devoted to hyphenated Canadianism. The other is regionalism, which is breeding four or five separate Canadas, depending in what part of the country one happens to live.

These are twin curses which Canada must come to terms with if the country is to survive.

SUGAR AND SPICE

And Bring Your Friends

By BILL SMILEY

I was warned by my family not to write a column about this; however, no fearless columnist has ever been deterred by threats. I can always get a room at the YMCA for a few days, if worst comes to worst.

Bill Smiley

My son Hugh is going to present a piano recital in a couple of weeks at the Conservatory, in the city. The announcement has created a flurry of excitement, alarm and despondency that will likely be unequalled until the day my daughter declares that she is going to be married.

Needless to say, the one who is excited, alarmed and despondent is not I. Nor is it my daughter. Nor is it the star of the evening, himself.

In fact, he is quite cool about it. So cool, indeed, that he isn't quite sure of the date, the place, the time, or how much it will cost his old man.

No, it's his mother who is panicking. First of all, she demands to know, in the name of all that is ridiculous, how he hopes to have his pieces ready in such a short time. "It's impossible!" she wails. "It's out of the question. You are a mutt!"

The next minute, she's dolefully predicting that nobody will come to the recital, and that we'll be disgraced, shamed forever in the eyes of . . . uh . . . I don't know whom, exactly.

We fight back, of course. Hugh goes into a vague, involved explanation of how he can get his pieces in shape. It has to do with turning over new leaves, letting no grass grow underfoot, nose to grindstone, shoulder to wheel and stitches in time.

"Hah!" snorts his mum. "The only thing that will save your bacon is divine intervention," or something of the sort, she intimates.

I step in to pour oil on the fiery waters, or tears of rage, as some call them. I assure her that the hall will be filled, the applause will lift the roof, the critics will proclaim a new Paderewski, and we'll all be proud, rich and happy ever after.

"There'll be nobody there but the family," she says flatly. She hadn't even heard me. "Not a soul will come."

We proceed to prove her wrong. We count up the aunts and cousins who HAVE to come. We count up the friends and students who MIGHT come. Total is about 23.

"You see?", triumphantly. "You people aren't realistic. We'll be a laughing-stock. It's going to be a big flop. Everybody we invite will say they'd love to come, but they just can't make it that night." Bitterly.

Then I have a bright idea. I'll probably have to do it when Kim is married, so I might as well give Hugh a send-off. I explain to the Old Battle Axe. It's the only way to assemble a crowd in these troubled times. She agrees, feels better, even grins.

At the bottom of the invitations we will have printed: "Refreshments afterwards at the Blank Hotel, Room So-and-So."

They may not know Tschaikovsky from Khrushchev, Beethoven from beet soup, a Bach score from a sore back, but our friends will be there, even if they have to drive 300 miles. Won't you, chaps?

A challenge to parents

— By NANCY CLEAVER —

"I haven't been to church since I was married and hardly any of my friends have (although for some reason we all send our children to Sunday School). On the church's own admission we represent a fast-growing class." — An outstanding Canadian writer, Robert Thomas Allen, made this comment.

What is your reaction to this? At least it is honest. But is this the best atmosphere in which to bring up children? Who does this father think he is fooling? Certainly not any bright youngster!

If, by any chance, you belong in this "fast-growing class" of disinterested church folk, what does your non-attendance say to your child? Does your example not shout to him, much louder than any words, "Religion is 'kid stuff,' and we have no time for it. You run along to Sunday School. We know where you are — safe and not into mischief or bothering us!"

When all goes well, many people seem to get along fairly happily and successfully without the church. But what happens when trouble, real sorrow strikes? If the life of that son or daughter of yours was to be snuffed out today by some horrible accident or sudden illness, to whom would you turn? No matter how casual you had been about your church, would you not want a religious funeral service?

The church's teaching about immortality, about life after death, might fall on ears deafened by grief. But what parent would choose to have the little body buried with no prayer said over the grave? Is it not rather shabby to use the church in the hour of darkness but ignore it in the days of sunshine?

How much an adult misses who has not time for church. Realization of the value of a church connection to a home, is not made by gathering around as a family and looking at the church from the outside (and criticized its weaknesses with clever phrases and half-truths!)

Many a mother or dad who has drifted away from the church, has started to attend church again regularly because a son or daughter wants to go to Junior congregation. Then, almost to their surprise, mother and dad may discover some way in which the church answers some special need of their own!

One parent who loves music finds peace and serenity in the hymns and a quiet worship service. A father in listening to the sermon has his ideas for daily living re-inforced. A fearful mother has her weight of anxiety lifted during the prayer as communion with God becomes more real to her.

Another parent who is lonely, seeks the warm companionship in a church group. A mother in a missionary society feels she is doing something constructive to further peace and the Kingdom of God on earth. A man whose own boy is entering adolescence finds a satisfaction in wholeheartedly backing the Scoutmaster and in becoming a Sunday School teacher. Still another thoughtful parent supports the Christian church because he sees in it the greatest force opposing the growth of Communism which threatens our democratic way of life today.

The founder of Christianity, "As his custom was, he went into the synagogue on the Sabbath Day." Jesus knew the uselessness of half-hearted allegiance. He said bluntly, "He who is not for me, is against me." Fathers and mothers can you answer that challenge?

Where do you stand, as a parent, for or against the church, the body of Christ on earth? The future of your country, of your children and your children's children may well depend on your answer. You will never regret giving your time and energy and money to the church of your choice. It is not just a place to send your youngsters to Sunday School! You need the church and the church needs you!

New and tested honey recipes

Honey is a food both prepared and packed by nature. Its delicate flavor and aroma have been enjoyed for centuries. In fact the poet Virgil in ancient times sang the praises of honey, describing it as "celestial dew" and the "gift of the gods".

Today honey is still available in the cells just as the bees stored and sealed it, and it is sold as comb honey. It is also sold in the liquid or crystallized form. Consumers may ask what the difference is between liquid and crystallized honey and whether one product is purer than the other. Both products, of course, are pure honey. Liquid honey is heated or pasteurized, filtered, then immediately cooled. In the case of crystallized honey, the honey is heated, filtered and partly cooled. Then it is "seeded" with fine crystals which are thoroughly blended into the honey under controlled temperature and is then carefully cooled. The resulting "creamed" honey is of a uniform, smooth consistency.

Most of the honey we see on the store shelves is No. 1 grade. It comes in four colors — White, Golden, Amber and Dark.

The home economists of the Consumer Section say that honey should be stored at room temperature in a dry place, preferably in the kitchen. If it is left in a damp place, it will absorb moisture, ferment and become thin.

Liquid honey should stay liquid for six months or more. If it does crystallize, it may be reliquified by slowly heating the jar in a pan of warm water until it becomes clear. The flavor and appearance of the honey will be affected if the water is too hot. It should then remain liquid for quite a long time, as long as the jar is tightly sealed.

Honey is a special treat for breakfast with toast or muffins but is good anytime as a snack to satisfy the "sweet tooth". It provides a quick topping for ice cream or puddings and adds flavor as well as sweetness to a fresh fruit cup. It can be substituted for sugar in some cake, bread or cookie recipes, where it gives a richer flavor and keeps them fresh longer.

The Consumer Section recommends these new tested honey recipes which they think you will enjoy.

Honey Butter Sauce

— Delicious with pancakes or waffles.

¼ Cup liquid honey, 2 tablespoons butter, ¼ to 1 teaspoon lemon juice, ¼ teaspoon vanilla.

Mix honey and butter in a small saucepan. Heat slowly until well blended. Cool slightly and add flavorings. Serve warm with pancakes or waffles. Makes ¾ cup sauce.

Honey Coffee Mousse

— "A smooth, velvety dessert with an unusual combination of flavors."

½ Teaspoon gelatin, 2 tablespoons cold water, ¼ cup strong coffee (or 2 teaspoons instant coffee dissolved in ¼ cup boiling water), ¼ cup liquid honey, 1 cup whipping cream, dash of nutmeg.

Soak gelatin in cold water for 5 minutes. Dissolve it in hot coffee and add honey. Chill, stirring occasionally until mixture has thickened, then beat until foamy. Fold in the stiffly beaten cream. Turn into freezer trays and freeze until firm, about 2 hours. 6 to 8 servings.

Note: To make a richer pastry use ¼ cup butter in place of ¼ cup of the shortening.

(See other honey recipes on this page.)

Hatmaking, drapery cotton

Remember when Scarlet O'Hara tore down the curtains to make a ball gown?

Well, Peggy Olmstead of "Peggy Claire Hats", Hamilton, hasn't done exactly that, but she has been making a large part of her spring hat collection in an all-cotton drapery fabric. And her customers love it.

"And why not?" asks Mrs. Olmstead. "It's an excellent millinery material. It has a linen-like look, is pre-shrunk, comes in 33 beautiful colors, and makes wonderful packable travelling hats."

Milliners everywhere are expecting a big hat business this spring, and Mrs. Olmstead is no exception. The Gentlewoman-look (lady-like and correct) demands a hat and should revive to some extent the old rule, "A lady is never seen without her hat and gloves."

The Gentlewoman-look which brings in its wake a great resurgence of pale shades influenced Mrs. Olmstead in her choice of the washable drapery fabric. She is predicting that the pastel pinks and light lilac will be especially popular and is pleased that with the fabric she has chosen her customers have no worries about upkeep.

The fabric is also particularly suited to the styles — softer, lower and wider with face framing brims often turned up in front.

Mrs. Olmstead, who was trained at the Toronto School of Design, originally intended to become a dress designer, but became more fascinated with millinery and opened a hat shop of her own in Hamilton.

She met her partner, Miss Claire Bath, while she was conducting a millinery course for the Community Programs Branch of the Department of Recreation at the O.A.C. in Guelph. Miss Bath, a trained nurse, was one of her brightest students, and they later opened the Peggy Claire Hat shop together.

Mrs. Olmstead and Miss Bath hold fashion therapy courses for the Ontario Hospital in Hamilton and for the Hamilton Branch of the Canadian Mental Health Association.

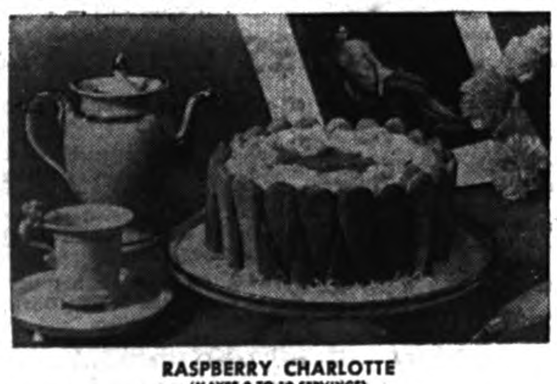

"The money to finance our work has been raised by fashion shows run through the co-operation of

A very large part of the Spring '64 collection of Peggy Claire Hats of Hamilton, was of very feminine and packable all-cotton drapery fabric in pastel shades.

Liberty Women's Wear, Jordan Livingstone Furs and Peggy Claire Hats. The models taking part in these shows all volunteer their time and are members of the Fashion Therapy Group", Mrs. Olmstead said.

Teatime Topics

Specially Written for The Lachute Watchman

By Jean Sharp, Canadian Press Staff Writer

There is probably less imagination used on breakfast than any other meal. Most ingenuity at breakfast time goes into getting it into the family to get them out on time.

Breakfast doesn't have to be the little meal no one loves.

Even the basic juice, cereal, toast and eggs menu need not be monotonous. There are any number of variations and trimmings that take no extra work. They are just a question of remembering to buy something different instead of picking up the same old foods, and of keeping a small variety on hand.

Most people enjoy breakfast when there is time. On rush mornings they still can, without anyone getting up an hour early to organize things.

Variety the Clue

First thing that is easy enough to do is rotate the kind of juice which starts the day, and blend them for new tastes. Grapefruit, melons or chunks of citrus fruit are a bit more effort to serve and eat, but only a bit.

Cereals mixed provide a taste change, as do cereal toppings besides cream and sugar. Try syrups, honey or jam or a spoonful of syrupy canned fruit. Use brown sugar, nutmeg and cinnamon on cereal as well as toast.

Dried fruit perks up cereal when fresh isn't available.

Muffins, especially cereal muffins, are easy to make and as quick to heat as toast. Honey and syrup go well with them. Sweet rolls, croissants, crumpets, raisin bread toast or English muffins can give breakfast a real lift.

To make toasts taste best, it is worth making preserves or spending a little extra money on the better brands.

Cook Slowly

Boiled eggs won't get tough if they are put in water after it has been brought to a boil. The gentlest way to cook them is to bring the water to a boil, put the egg in, cover the pot, remove it from the heat and let it stand 5 to 8 minutes.

An omelet is as easy to make as scrambled eggs, and with cheese, jam, sauce or mushroom, is a touch more exciting. A puffy omelet, which looks like a special effort, isn't.

French toast is almost as quick and simple to cook as a fried egg.

Whatever way eggs are cooked they cook best slowly and over a low heat.

On a morning when everyone has time, waffles, silver dollar-sized pancakes or corn or fruit fritters will probably delight the family. A dazzlingly light if somewhat extravagant waffle can be made by adding extra egg whites. Fruit syrups and cottage and cream cheese are as tasty with waffles as the traditional maple syrup and butter.

Instead of plain bacon, try a mixed grill with sausages, mushrooms, kidneys, side and plain or peameal back bacon. For a complete switch, serve traditional English kippers.

If You're TIRED ALL THE TIME

Now and then everybody gets a "tired-out" feeling, and may be bothered by backaches. Perhaps nothing seriously wrong, just a temporary condition caused by urinary irritation or bladder discomfort. That's the time to take Dodd's Kidney Pills. Dodd's help stimulate the kidneys to relieve this condition which may often cause backache and tired feeling. Then you feel better, rest better, work better. Get Dodd's Kidney Pills now. Look for the blue box with the red band at all drug counters. You can depend on Dodd's. 60

Cereals are good 'sustainers' and recipe ingredients

(Consumer Section)

Cereals have had top rating since ancient times, since they are so easily grown and stored, and have high food value. Whole grain cereals which you cook yourself are the most nourishing and economical. A bowl of cooked whole grain cereal served with milk or cream is a wonderful way to start the day, and keeps "early morning risers" satisfied until lunch time.

The home economists of the Consumer Section suggest a few tips for increasing the children's interest in cooked breakfast cereal:

— Sweeten cooked cereal with honey or maple syrup; for an extra special treat top the cereal with shaved pieces of maple sugar.

— Use apple juice as part or all of the liquid for cooking the cereal.

— For extra flavor add chopped fruits such as apples, prunes or raisins.

— For extra food value, add 2 tablespoons of wheat germ to each cup of cereal.

— Add ¼ to ½ cup bran to one cup uncooked cereal. It not only improves the flavor but has laxative quality.

One of the most popular ways in which children like to eat cereals is from the cookie jar. The Consumer Section gives two newly tested cookie recipes using rolled oats combined with honey. They have a particularly good flavor and keep well — that is, if one can keep them out of the reach of the youngsters!

For other recipes for cookies, breads, rolls, supper dishes, etc., write for the free "Cereal" booklet (Information Division, Canada Department of Agriculture, Ottawa).

Honey Fruit Bars

2 Eggs, ¾ cup honey, ½ teaspoon vanilla, ½ cup rolled oats, 2 tablespoons flour, 1 teaspoon baking powder, ¼ teaspoon salt, 1 cup chopped dates, ¼ cup chopped nuts.

Beat eggs. Add honey, vanilla and rolled oats. Sift flour, baking powder and salt. Stir into first mixture. Add dates and nuts and spread into a 9-inch square pan. Bake in a moderately slow oven (325° F.) for 25 to 30 minutes. Cool and cut into bars. Makes about 3 dozen bars.

Honey Rocks

½ Cup butter, ½ cup shortening, 1 cup liquid honey, 2 cups rolled oats, 1½ cups raisins, 2 cups sifted all-purpose flour, 1 teaspoon baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon soda, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, 2 tablespoons milk.

Cream butter and shortening. Gradually blend in honey. Add rolled oats and raisins. Sift dry ingredients together and add to first mixture alternately with milk. When thoroughly blended, drop rounded teaspoonful about two inches apart on lightly greased cookie sheet. Bake in a moderately hot oven (375° F.) for 10 to 12 minutes. Makes about 5 dozen cookies.

Teaching the teacher

EXPERTS TELL US that almost 90% of all automobile accidents are directly attributable to human failures of one kind or another.

Modern technology has succeeded in making todays cars and roads about as safe as can be. It is time for drivers to catch up—through driver safety training. (Only this type of training will teach young drivers the kind of "safety-thinking" so essential to safe driving.) But training requires teachers, and teachers themselves must first be taught.

That's why the automobile insurance business, as a part of its national program of promoting safety education for the young drivers, pays the costs of the annual Driver Training Education Program conducted by the Canadian Highway Safety Council for teachers in many parts of Canada.

Country Notebook

By WALKER RILEY,
Macdonald College

We didn't take the "Friendly Radiation" exhibit to the Ottawa Valley Farm Show, after all. Too much delicate and expensive equipment. Instead, we made up a display illustrating the 58-year history of plant breeding at Macdonald College.

The centre of the exhibit was the three newest varieties developed — Champlain barley (1962), Leo trefoil (1963) and Dorval oats, licensed only two weeks ago. On either side were samples of 27 other varieties which have made their contribution over the years. A chart traced the growth of the Canadian Seed Growers Association from its founding in 1907 by Dr. James Robertson, first principal of Macdonald.

We were pleased with the number of visitors to the booth, especially former students at Mac who recognized the familiar green and gold colors. Among these were Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ritchie, now retired and living near Aylmer in Gatineau County. Mr. Ritchie was on the staff of Lennoxville Research Station before moving on to Ottawa to become assistant Dominion Horticulturist.

The growth of this three-day Farm Show in recent years is remarkable. Besides the championship seed and forage show, there was a full display of farm equipment, a beef bull sale, a dairy heifer sale, and a junior judging competition and a program of educational talks.

The first day's topic, "Maximum Use of Forages in Livestock Production", seemed to reflect a renewed interest in hay and pasture crops. When you hear of alfalfa fields regularly producing 10,000 lbs. dry matter to the acre, and of trefoil producing 8,000 lbs., you realize that forages, when handled right, can give corn a real run for it.

Not that interest in corn is waning — far from it. Rather, the theme was that corn plus good legume hay makes an unbeatable combination for low cost milk or beef. The hay supplies the protein; the corn provides carbohydrate energy. Vary the ratio one way or the other and you have a balanced feed for dairy or beef.

But we still haven't beaten the problems of harvesting and storing a heavy crop of hay. Nor have we been able to "automate" its feeding as we have with corn. Perhaps the answer will prove to be either pelleting or storing as haylage, but I feel the real break through in forage handling is yet to come.

When that time comes, we will be able to take full advantage of the very high yields possible with increased fertility, new varieties, and new management practices.

The bull sale was in the evening of the first day of the Show. Twenty-eight good young Herefords brought an average of $395 each. Top price of $1,500 was paid for a polled bull with an average daily gain on test of 2.76, consigned by W. T. James, Almonte, Ontario.

Quebec buyers were very active, several very good animals came across the River. Don Robertson, fieldman for the Canada Department of Agriculture, took three. Others were bought by W. C. Hanna, Shawville; Keith Horner, Charteris; Glen Merridith, Quyon; H. I. Hobbs, Shawville; Howard Holmestead, Aylmer.

It was encouraging to note that the 16 Performance Tested bulls brought an average of $476 each, while the untested bulls sold for $295. It has been shown that bulls which themselves have made rapid gain in weight are likely to sire fast-growing calves. That the buyers value this characteristic is reflected in the extra price they are willing to pay.

The Holstein calves sold on the second day of the Show. Average price was $153, with a high of $350. Several heifers were consigned by Pontiac County breeders — Robinson Hodgins, Walter Kilgour, J. Arthur Kilgour, C. T. Brownlee and Son.

Both these sales were well attended; they drew much interest, not only from farmers but also from urban people who had come in to look around. Bidding was brisk for a calf which had been donated to raise funds for Albert Menard, who had lost barn and livestock in a fire the previous night.

My assistant at the College exhibit was a Chinese student, who left Formosa only four weeks ago to study plant breeding here. It was interesting to watch his reactions to our way of life. He was most impressed with the size of our meals; to him an orange and a glass of milk is a large breakfast. It seems to me that we could learn much from a people who feed ten million people on an island only 225 miles long.

"Exile from Sunnyacres"

By Margaret Cook

Chronicled in slower but discerning pace

Since this will appear during Easter Week, it should be in order to wish all my readers a Happy Easter. This is quite noble of me, since our Easter has been spoiled by a horrid attack of influenza. Many will be delighted to know that I have been rendered almost speechless. Even the thought of putting together words on the typewriter repelled me, but today, I can put a few together — although I suspect they will be dull ones.

Once more I have been furnished proof of how wise it is to have a well-stocked mind, for all my adventures for two weeks have been mental ones. There is a certain amount of sadistic pleasure to be got from seeing the head of the house manfully struggling with trays, bells, the cat, shopping, etc. Some men glory in this kind of thing, but not ours; it is purely a work of love, or perhaps wisdom. Housekeepers cost a great deal of money, and seeking a new wife would be tiresome. Then, too, it is rather fun to baffle the doctor, who is new to us (ours having died last summer) by erratic blood pressure and temperature. Finally, I said to the young, earnest medic, "Why don't you just listen to me, and save yourself so much work? I'm not stupid; I know when I am ill, and when I am not. Now, I am not ill."... "Perhaps I shall," sighed he, and left, I hope for a long, long time. But, aside from these minor diversions, it has been up to me to amuse me, so to speak.

I have read anything and everything, even advertisements for new cars. The only bit of wisdom I have garnered was from a book by Aldous Huxley. It has been a source of curiosity to me for years, as to why our old men no longer see visions, and so few of our young men dream dreams. Oh, I know a certain well-known politician had a vision a few years ago, but it dissipated without making much impression on the nation. Well, anyway, the answer, according to Huxley, is adequate diet. Those visions, according to him, nearly always occurred in the spring, and were the result of a restricted diet on the enzymes, and from there on the blood, and finally on the brain. It is difficult to paraphrase a whole book into a nutshell (nut-shell is good) but take it from me, that's the gist of what he wrote. Moreover, according to the same writer and scientist, the brain is just a transformer which brings the divine, all-pervading electric current into manageable proportions, so that one can survive on this earth. Other things, pertaining to the universe, are screened out. Huxley did not pursue the thesis further, but I did. When the brain dies, does the original electric current return to its universal river and we shall, as St. Paul says, then know, "even as I am known"?... Could be ... and that, dear reader, is Margaret Cook's Easter message. Not perhaps, as good a one as the orange and the blue crocuses ablaze against a warm stone wall downtown. That was two weeks ago. We do not know if they have survived the present return of winter.

Oh, yes, I learned one other thing — about Lot's wife. She really did become a "pillar of salt". The long explanation would bore you, but it has to do with the presence of oil in the soil about Sodom and Gomorrah, and the proximity of the very salty Dead Sea. A sudden hurricane-like wind also figured in the catastrophe. In today's paper, I see a bit about the presence of oil in that neighborhood, and the fact that some scientist has suspicions that the wall he glimpsed in the depths of the Dead Sea once surrounded one of those two cities. A story like that of Lot's wife can become a kind of exercise in detection. It is amazing how authentic the "tall" stories of the Bible turn out to be. Just written in language different in both style and syntax from ours. The last time I made a public appearance, I heard a lecturer deride the story of Lazarus' death and resurrection. He urged us to take it as an allegory. Almost in the same breath he ridiculed some of our hymns. I remember he particularly mentioned the bit "above the bright, blue sky". He intimated that up there one would more likely meet an astronaut going 2,000 miles per hour. But, I ask you, why is it right to take the Lazarus story as allegory, but wrong to take hymns that way? Maybe heaven is not "above the bright blue sky", but where else could one put it, in poetical language? Phooey to him!... And that's all the theology for this time.

From theology to cuisine. A neighbor and I met in the local grocery shop. I was buying a beef tongue, to boil and jelly, when I saw a package of ox-tails. I observed to my friend (male) that I had been told that these could become a gourmet dish, but that I had never had the nerve or the recipe to try. So he did. He sent over a casserole with a most delectable stew in it — the tails, and carrots, and various herbs that I did not inquire about. He had found the recipe in a gourmet cook-book. We loved it. Obviously, he had first stewed the tails, but from there on, I could only guess. But if anybody wants to try this, they might be pleasantly surprised by the result. Now, there's a man that would not be dismayed by the illness of his wife! Having written that, I realize that it has various meanings. Well, let it stand. Somewhere, someone wrote that many men "lead lives of quiet desperation". I am sure our neighbor is not desperate but merely a good cook... Perhaps I should add that he is also one of the foremost parisitologists on the North American continent.

One last word on an old, old theme — cruelty to animals. Our fellow-columnist has seen plenty of this, and we have seen some. Personally, we would rather meet with a person who is cruel to people, for people, at least, can generally fight back. But cruelty to an animal is disgusting, the expression of brute force on a weaker body. Of course, it is also a betrayal of the ignorance of the person; they assume that no one but a human can feel anything. It is true that the nervous system of animals differs from ours, but there is one. I know a man who no longer hunts deer because, having wounded one, he had to dispatch it, and coming close for that purpose, discovered it was weeping great tears of shock and agony... On which horrible note, I close.

Report on building activity; routine affairs at Council

A report on building for the year 1963 was presented at last week's Council sitting by Ald. Laurier Carrière. The report, prepared by Richard Blais, the building inspector, showed 64 permits had been issued, for construction amounting to $346,890 — of which, $241,000 was in new properties and $105,890 in repairs and renovations.

Forty-six of these permits were for projects of $5,000 or less, and 18 for jobs over $5,200.

Varied Business

Ald. François Charlebois gave notice of motion for amendments to the business tax by-law, to be presented at an early sitting of the Council.

Ald. Charlebois also stated that a reduction in water tax was under consideration; but, the budget having been adopted, the rate of $40 would remain for the current year.

It was decided to lay an eight-inch water main a distance of around 500 feet from St. Jacques Street to Princess Street, in order to afford better fire protection at the J. C. Wilson paper mill. The outlay would not be excessive, since the town already has the pipe.

Accounts for the month, amounting to $22,680.77, were approved for payment, and it was agreed to increase the building caretaker's salary to $65 weekly.

Council resolved to invest in a copying machine for $1,145 less 10-percent cash discount.

Permission was granted to Murphy Oil Company to construct entries and islands at the site acquired for a gasoline station near Barron's Bridge.

Council also took over from J. C. Wilson Company, for a nominal sum of $1, a strip of land for laying a sidewalk.

Correspondence

Representations to the Council brought forth a request from Jean Laforest, of the Centre d'Art, for a grant of $2,000 for this enterprise — a statement of finances and activities being presented to each councillor for study.

Acknowledgment came from the Department of Public Works, for the Council's urgent request for the rebuilding of Barron's Bridge. (The stock reply was forthcoming, that the road engineers were studying the re-laying of the thoroughfare, and the bridge must await decision on this plan.)

The Department of Municipal Affairs approved winter works for an outlay of $1,000, and agreed to a grant amounting to $720.

A request for a donation to the Red Cross was referred to the committee on civic grants.

It is possible the merchants may seek an amendment to Lachute's store-closing by-law, to permit general business on Thursday evenings. Antoine Malaket stated this desire on behalf of "a majority of the merchants" before Town Council. The law, enacted seven years ago, is not consistently observed, he said. "If that is the general opinion of the merchants," said Mayor Campbell, "submit their formal petition, and we'll see that they get satisfaction."

Following are winners of the drawing of wool blankets, organized on behalf of the Ayers hockey teams, Pee-Wee and Bantam:

1st Prize — Miss Claudette Bilodeau, 238 Main St., Lachute.

Jacques Paul, the manager of the two teams, wishes to thank everyone who supported this effort. The funds raised will be used by the management of the teams to buy a jacket for each young player.

Fire Dept. asks for aerial ladder

The Halline aerial ladder, which in early February was suggested as a necessary addition to Lachute's fire-fighting equipment, appears below. This ladder can be mounted on the town's present Bickle pump truck, at a cost of $4,778, and meets Canadian Underwriters' Association requirements. It is expected that the Police and Fire Committee's recommendation on this, and other requested equipment, will be forthcoming in the near future.

Body and blood-stained car set police on murder trail

The body of Tony Ladansky, a Montreal taxi-driver, was discovered a short distance from Rte. 8, near St. Hermas, around 10.05 Monday morning. The grim discovery was made by a farmer of that community. Provincial Police officers from St. Eustache and Lachute were called to the scene for the initial investigation, which was turned over to the homicide squad from Montreal headquarters.

Information is scarce, but it is believed that the farmer was awakened by a noise around two a.m., and on looking out of the window, saw a taxi leaving the yard. Nothing seemed out of order, and the man returned to bed. While working in front of his house the following morning, however, he noticed a trail of blood and footprints, and following this some 300 feet to the highway, he discovered the body. He immediately notified the authorities.

In the early afternoon, local Q.P.P. officers left for St. Andrews East, where it was reported a blood-spattered taxi had been located near the Ottawa River in the vicinity of the CNR sand pit. It is believed the knife-murder took place in the rear of the vehicle, as it appears a fight had taken place in the taxi; the victim was dumped in the St. Hermas area and the car then abandoned near St. Andrews. Ladansky was 42 years of age, and a bachelor.

The victim is reported to have told his employer that "a crook will have a hard time taking my money from me." He was killed successfully defending $158 in his wallet, which was found intact.

An autopsy revealed Ladansky had been stabbed 21 times, twice in the region of the heart. Five of the wounds could have been fatal.

It is believed that police have uncovered several leads which, it is hoped, will produce results in the murder investigation, and several persons have been questioned.

Action taken for defamation of character

A union organizer, Lucien Giroux, of Brownsburg, is plaintiff in an action for defamatory libel which came before the court at St. Jerome last Thursday.

Mr. Giroux is representative for the "Confédération des Syndicats Nationaux" and the defendants are members of a rival union, Luc Labonne, of Montreal, Maurice Therrien, of St. Antoine des Laurentides, both of the Quebec chapter of the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Cabinet Makers of America, also Doris Champagne, of Lachute, president of Local 348, United Textile Workers of America, and François Gagné, of St. Hermas, representative of the same group.

Attorney for the plaintiff is Mtre. Robert Dulude, of Montreal, and the case arises out of circulars distributed to employees at Dominion Ayers Wood Products last fall. The first of these circulars appeared in October and the second in December. In the first Mr. Giroux was named a dictator, incompetent, and a trouble maker; as a consequence of this Mr. Giroux called upon François Gagné and his union for a retraction — which, apparently, was not forthcoming.

In the second leaflet, bearing no signature but under auspices of the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Cabinet Makers (Quebec Council) he was similarly maligned as "dirty", a traitor, and in other unflattering terms.

Differences between Lucien Giroux and the American Union started with his resignation as organizer for that body. Mr. Giroux then urged the Ayers wood division workers to affiliate with the Confederation, a rival group, and the letters were circulated to counteract his campaign.

24 Accidents, 11 fire calls, month of March

The police department report for March, prepared by Sgt. J. R. Chartrand and presented by Commissioner L. W. Armstrong, showed 295 service calls and, among other items, $1,174 collected in traffic fines.

There were 24 accidents investigated, one with personal injury, and 24 individuals arrested on various charges. There were also six robberies.

A policeman, Durand, on temporary probation, was accepted as constable on a permanent basis.

Fire Chief Don MacCulloch's report indicated 11 fire calls during the month, of which four were in Lachute and the remainder outside — in St. Philippe, St. Jerusalem and Ayersville.

Firemen's services represented 100 manhours, payroll expenses were $445, and revenue from outside calls $1,575.

Fourth term for B'burg Social Club president and vice Brownsburg — The annual general meeting of the Brownsburg Social and Athletic Club took place March 23.

Messrs. Ken Stewart and Tom Goldthorpe were re-elected president and vice-president, respectively, for a fourth term. Elected as directors for the 1964-65 term were — Miss Jean Elliott, Miss Elaine Leclair, Bob McGuire, Bill Dimock, Donald Duncan, Hedley Dyer, George MacDonald, Lucien Parent, Guy Talbot, Marc Diotte and Ronald Cousineau.

From the review of activities it was noted there had been a tremendous upsurge of interest in trap and skeet shooting over the past year, and it is anticipated that the facilities will be taxed to the utmost again this forthcoming season.

Another section which also expanded during the winter season was the Junior Hockey League. Under the capable direction of Bill Dimock, 12 junior teams were organized, three in each of the age groups designated as Midget, Bantam, Pee-Wee, and Misquito.

Young thespians in festival of drama - April 11 at B'burg

By Laval West School players

The Student Council of Brownsburg High School is sponsoring a drama festival featuring the Laval West Elementary School Players, to be presented Saturday afternoon, April 11.

Laval West Elementary School is one of the few schools attempting to present serious drama. Since last October, twice a week after school, Mrs. J. Krupski has been holding rehearsals. She and her assistants, Mrs. P. Gupta and Mr. K. Smyth, aided by the school principal, Mr. Alan Young, have made drama the main extra-curricular activity at the school.

The terrifying secret of Winthrop Hall is suddenly and dramatically revealed in "High Window", an enthralling mystery by Verne Powers. In this play, the audience will discover that elementary school pupils, under flawless direction, can ably handle adult roles.

As an introduction to Shakespeare, "Midsummer Night's Dream" has no equal as a means of convincing young people that great drama can be enjoyed as first-class entertainment, not as a dreary classroom chore. The thread of the play's plot has been kept, although the scenes with the Athenian lovers were omitted, owing to the time element and the age of the actors. This left them with the hearty comedy of the rustic's plight and play, and with the poetic fairy tale about the domestic squabble in the royal fairy household of Titania and Oberon. The theme of the wedding of Duke Theseus to Hippolyta, the Amazon, holds together the two story lines. As in Shakespeare's time, all the props are carried from the stage by the actors.

"H.M.S. Pinafore", an operetta in two acts, with text and lyrics by W. S. Gilbert and music by Sir A. Sullivan, is a production in itself. Mrs. Krupski used the abridged version for schools. She is ably assisted by Mrs. M. Manning, music specialist for the Lake of Two Mountains schools. Sir Joseph Porter, First Lord of the Admiralty, Captain Corcoran, Buttercup, Josephine, and Dick Deadeye, are all vividly portrayed in song and dialogue by the young thespians.

Costumes for all three productions were made by two mothers from the community. These add much color and authenticity to the plays.

Canadian Television Studios in Montreal will film a one-hour program of the drama festival on April 8. The studio plans to use the film next September as the opening program in a series on drama, music, debating and other extra-curricular work being done in the schools of this province.

The Students' Council of Brownsburg High School gives promise of a rewarding afternoon's entertainment on Saturday, April 11.

Impatient over delay in annexation measure

Two residents lodged protest at the Council meeting over delays in the annexation of part of St. Jerusalem.

The referendum on this measure was taken in September 1963, the taxpayers concerned having voted a majority in favor. Messrs. Arthur Lafrance, surveyor, and Antoine Malaket, merchant, now criticized the Council for apparent lack of concern in completion of the project.

Mr. Lafrance claimed the town had no one at Quebec acting to consummate the measure, whereas its opponents were making themselves heard to block the proceedings. "This should have gone through by the beginning of January, and if Lachute is content to stand by, there is a good chance it will be rejected altogether. . . I am blaming no one in particular, either the mayor or the council, but I think we should exert more effort in our own interest."

According to Mr. Lafrance the annexation should have materialized within three months after the vote, but it is now seven months after, and the provincial authorities have not yet given their sanction.

Mayor Campbell was the only one to defend the Council's position. He said representations had been made repeatedly at Quebec, but he had been told to wait, and was assured each time that the matter would be settled shortly.

St. Canut hotel razed by fire

A resort hotel in the village of St. Canut was destroyed by fire last Wednesday night.

Provincial police in St. Eustache said the outbreak occurred about 6 p.m. inside the Hotel Tabu and raged out of control for more than two hours. There were no guests in the hotel.

Organized for Cancer campaign, blitz canvass set for April 27

The Canadian Cancer Society Campaign (through the Argenteuil Section in this community) will be promoted with a blitz on the evening of Monday, April 27, under the joint chairmanship of Daniel Carrière and James Hayman. Business establishments have already been approached, and Argenteuil's objective of $4,800.00, it is hoped, will be reached.

Where Do Cancer-Fighting Dollars Go?

To answer this question National Headquarters of the Canadian Cancer Society have issued their budget for each dollar you give. Through the three-fold program of Research, Education and Welfare, the dollar is broken up as follows:

Research (45c) — It is only through this research that better cures and preventatives for cancer may be found. This money is used to finance the national program organized and supervised by the National Cancer Institute of Canada. The Canadian Cancer Society and its associate the National Cancer Institute of Canada is the second largest fund-raising body for medical research, being second only to the Federal Government. This year approximately $1,800,000 has been earmarked for research.

Education (18c) — The Canadian Medical Association assures us that education as to cancer's danger signals is of vital importance in order that lives may be saved by early detection. This

To confer on annexation of Ayersville

At the regular Ayersville Council meeting this week Councillor Arthur Lanthier was authorized to meet the Lachute authorities to discuss the subject of annexation. Date of such discussion will be determined after an agreement with the town fathers.

Two of the Ayersville councillors, Laurent Brasseur and Raymond Champagne, were in favor of this move to confer with Lachute. Councillors Edgar Cyr and Ernest Champagne voted against. Mayor Gaston Plamondon presided.

Ambulance from H'wksby involved in fatal smashup

A 50-year-old St. Laurent man was killed Tuesday night of last week, and five other persons injured, in a spectacular collision involving an ambulance and two cars at the intersection of Sherbrooke Street and Grosvenor Avenue in Westmount. The ambulance involved was from Hawkesbury, Ont.

Malcolm Lemieux, of St. Laurent, Que., died minutes after his car collided with the east-bound ambulance rushing a patient from Hawkesbury to a city hospital.

The third vehicle involved was driven by Miss Lynn Gascoigne, of Pierrefonds, who was accompanied by five passengers.

Works exhibited by instructor at Beaux Arts

At 3 o'clock next Sunday at the Centre d'Art, 360 Main Street, the season's fourth art exhibition will be opened, featuring for two weeks the works of André Jasmin, a dedicated Montreal painter of some repute who is presently on the teaching staff at l'Ecole des Beaux Arts. There will be 30-odd canvases on view.

Born 1922 in Montreal, André Jasmin during his apprenticeship to the craft has worked under the late Paul-Emile Borduas, the noted painter; Maurice Gagnon, art historian and critic; and Marcel Parizeau, architect. His work reflects the influence of Alfred Pellan, Braque and Rouault, but emerges in his later products with a distinctly individual character. His paintings have appeared in numerous exhibitions in Montreal, and in others across Canada and in Europe. He directs a painting class and teaches the History of Art to senior students at the Beaux Arts.

The display will be on view until April 26, from 2 to 5 p.m. daily, with additional hours 7 to 9 p.m. on Sundays. The public — including especially students and teachers of the area — are cordially invited.

Grenville has Ch. of Commerce

A Chamber of Commerce was organized at Grenville on Monday night. President Bertrand L'Heureux and a few Lachute members were present to give support, and Gabriel Valois addressed the gathering of 35-odd business men. Interim president is Gaetan Desforges.

By BOB ATCHISON

Catching trout on opening day is one of the great challenges of fishing! First of all we keep trying baits we used late in the last season, with no results. Most of the time it is a hit-and-miss affair, as there doesn't seem to be any tried and true method. Even the bait and minnow man is out of luck at times. . . However, if a little thought is given to the reason, then you might come up with some sort of catch. Water's high and turbulent — plenty of free food floating down — cold, etc.; then, the fish are more or less dormant. Since they are not too anxious to move, it's up to us to get them — easier said than done, with a lot of fishermen. To begin with, some enthusiasts think they must have heavy sinkers, sash cord for lines, and so on — all necessary because of the fast water. But this is not the case. Use a small sinker or split shot, light lines, and let your lures or bait drift free. You are now going to where the fish are. As to what they are feeding on, this you have to find out for yourself. However, even as humans who have been eating well, we get tired of the same dish over and over again; so maybe a grub from under that log would do the trick. A nice fat worm; they haven't been able to get these for a few months. Some bacon fat or liver may be what they want. One thing is sure though, you won't get anything unless you try.

Spinning gives you more headaches. We seem to forget all about those rocks and logs that we used to get caught on last year. They are still there, believe me. All that can be said about spinning is — try every lure you have in the box; when they don't work, buy more. But seriously, this is the time to try out some of those doozers you acquired last year. How to work the bait is, I believe, the most important detail in this type of fishing. All baits must be worked, but especially so in the early spring. Smaller swivels, and so on, help to increase the action, so this may be another point to remember. One of the most frequent causes of poor action is the size of the gang hooks put on these lures. I have found the smaller sizes are much better, and certainly less liable to be hung up in weeds. As you all know, early fishing has one cardinal rule — fish slow, deep, and take your time; fish every unlikely spot you come upon, and let the fish make up their minds.

I know a lot of your equipment has not been checked, so how about it. Starting with your waders — are they bent and cracked? Try putting some newspaper in them; pack it very tight. And if you have any repairs to make to them, the paper will help hold the shape and allow you to put a little pressure on the patch. Your net — did you leave it just as it was used last fall? You'd better try the weave in the net; this could have rotted, so you will either need a new weave or you can try and repair it yourself. Use a good nylon casting line to do this; one way that allows you to weave the net, is to push something into the bag and weave it this way. Try out the handle too, this could be cracked. Get a new net if this is the case; it's cheaper to get a new one than try and fix it. Your kit bags should be given a good going-over. Many a time I have lost some piece of equipment because of the canvas being rotted and weak. Be sure and try the straps; these can be a real spoiler. At any rate, give them a good wash; you probably haven't washed them since last spring, so it won't hurt them. They'll smell a lot sweeter, too.

I don't know how many of you heard over Ottawa Radio CFRA on Sunday, March 26, of the young girl dying from a skunk bite. The animal was rabid, and it appears not too much attention was paid to the scratches or bite. The reason I am mentioning this — we have skunks around right now that appear to be in this state. To say they are in this condition, would be merely guessing, but from the appearances of these animals, they are sick. The only way that this could be confirmed, of course, is to have the head of one of these animals sent for analysis. If this is done, then great care must be taken, do not use bare hands at any time. Bury any remains; and cover with rocks, this will keep other animals from coming in contact with the carcass. I know this might appear to be a "cry wolf" paragraph, but believe me, rabies cannot be over-rated or under-estimated in its effects.

Many people think rabies cannot be caught from cats and other pets. This is very false; all fur-bearing animals can carry it, at all times. All it seems to take is that extra push to get it operational. Squirrels, mice, bats, rats, rabbits, dogs, cats, horses, cows, all carry this disease. So take it easy if you happen to see any animal acting strangely. You don't need to ask, how can you tell if they are acting funny? Any wild animal voluntarily approaching a human is certainly sick. No wild animal as a rule will have anything to do with man, and any behaviour to the contrary should arouse suspicion.

An appeal to all you bird lovers. Right now (as I write), with the cold weather we are having, the birds are really taking a beating. Give them plenty of seed, and if you happen to have some suet or fat around, please put that out. The other morning I was attracted to a small group of song sparows huddled in the brush around the house. These little creatures sure looked cold and miserable. Even when I got really close, they were not too anxious to desert the protection of the bush for the cold outside. I put a tin with some feed in it, and some suet and grease right beside it, and during the day they cleaned up this whole mess. It was a kind of mess too, since we had nothing tasty in readiness for this kind of emergency. At least, I think it helped them in some small way. So please give the birds a helping hand. You have had many hours of pleasure watching them during the winter, so try and repay them in this way. (Incidentally, they still have plenty of scratch feed at Farmers' Supply Co.)

I don't know how many of you read the stories on seal hunting down in the Gulf. If you missed them, you won't feel so bad. But those who did read them, will be stung with the conviction that we humans are a great bunch. I hope you are not squeamish in the stomach — but did you ever think a supposed human being could skin an animal while it was still alive? In some cases these creatures were not even clubbed to kill them; instead, the time that would have been spent in the killing was used to skin them. Now don't get this wrong either; these killers are Canadians — supposedly civilized. What we will do for money! It makes me heave. How I would like to be able to punish anything like this — in my OWN WAY!

Maybe I am wrong in a lot of things — I'll readily admit this — but to think of a country allowing this type of cruelty, is not for me to understand. Isn't it funny how we yelled and screamed at some of the mutilation we witnessed when overseas, and how we swore we would never kill or hurt again. Yet all this is forgotten. Maybe some humans think animals don't count. Know what? To me, animals count a lot more than a lot of our own species running around. This type of thing is carried on with full approval and understanding of the governments; what a hope for us in the future! I guess I really don't know how to express my indignation about things like this.

Maybe I'm writing about our blind canary too much, but I guess I can't help that either. You may recall, we were having a tough time directing him to his feeding dish. This is all ironed out, with happy results. Also, for the past 17 years I have been feeding him sugar on my finger every morning; well, now this isn't only in the morning. Since he cannot tell day from night, he just sleeps any time at all. And the same goes for eating; so when he awakens he just naturally cackles for his sugar. Boy, does he get threatened when this happens about 4 a.m.! It's no use trying to ignore him either; the noise he makes would waken anything.

Maroons win thrilling game 2-1, final series now stands at 3-2

The Lachute-Brownsburg Maroons narrowed the margin in games to 3-2 in the final series of the Senior Laurentian Hockey League, when they defeated the Crabtree Beavers 2-1 last Sunday in the Brownsburg Arena.

This game was one of the most interesting and thrilling seen around here in a long time. Both teams displayed polish in their attack, fast skating by the forwards, outstanding work by the goalkeepers, and some rugged and neat checking. The game was very well handled by the referees. For the first time in the series, the teams concentrated on close checking. Both teams had wonderful opportunities to score, but always, there was a forward or a defenceman to thwart the attempt.

A crowd of over 1,200 people witnessed this fine exhibition of hockey and all agreed by their constant cheering that they were enjoying it to the utmost.

The first period was scoreless. The checking by the Maroons was especially tight in this period. They had in mind the four goals the Beavers scored in the first period of the last game, that provided Crabtree with the winning edge.

The second period started on a bad foot for the locals, when after 2.17 minutes, the Beavers scored their first and only goal of the game. However, this seemed to increase the local determination to work harder. Not long after, the Beavers were penalized for rough play. Seconds later, André Payer had tied the game on a pass from Maurice Desrosiers. This tie remained until the last two minutes of the game. The Maroons were pressing hard in the enemy zone when finally their efforts were rewarded. Maurice Desrosiers set up Roy Cruise from behind the net. Cruise, standing about 20 feet from the net, but at an impossible angle, blasted a sizzling slapshot that caught the upper right-hand corner of the net before the goaltender could make a move. It took a few seconds to realize that the puck had actually gone in the nets. This was to be the margin of victory. For the remaining seconds of the game, the Beavers put six attackers, but without scoring. The Maroon defenders time and again broke up the plays, and finally Ouellette cleared the puck into the opposing zone but missed the net by a few inches. . . The victory was attained and everybody left the rink convinced that they had seen some high-calibre hockey.

The next game will be played in Joliette, next Sunday only. This new ruling by the league president again results from pressure by outside interests. It is to be hoped that something can be done to put out a schedule and adhere to it. The Maroons' executive are powerless to do anything about the scheduling this year, but changes will be made next year to ensure the local fans better dates and times for the games.

Storage of Equipment

That time of year has once again rolled around, when most of us are beginning to think of putting away our equipment for the hot, damp season ahead. Following are a few hints which I hope will help you in storing your equipment.

Boots — should be given a good coat of boot polish or leather preservative designated especially for ski boots, then laced and placed in a boot press. This would be a good time to check those boot laces for wear, before putting them away in a damp-free location. Do not use oil, grease or other leather softeners on your boots, as they will tend to soften the leather too much, and the boots will not offer the proper support when you are ready to use them next year.

Skis — should also be stored in a dry spot, but not too hot, as you would find in an attic. Most skis sold today, such as wood skis with a good plastic covering, or metal skis, do not afford any additional storage problems. All wood skis of more ancient vintage, without these plastic protective coverings to keep the spring snows and dampness out, should be clamped together at the tip and tail, and a tennis ball or other soft material placed at the centre of the ski to allow approximately 2½" of camber between them. The tennis ball will allow the skis to work independently without carrying any possible warp between them. . . This spring is a good time to tighten the edge screws and refinish your base if need be; it will offer a long curing period for the plastic to harden properly. For those of you who are fortunate enough to have metal skis, this would be a good time to check over your skis and see whether they require refinishing. Most manufacturers have rebuilding services, returning your skis looking like new, for a nominal fee. The shop where you purchased your skis would be happy to give you further information.

Bindings — require very little maintenance except for a little grease or vaseline on the working parts. Any leather parts can be given a good soaking in linseed

This concludes my articles for this year. I hope I have been of some help in passing along information and hints on skiing. If there are any additional storage problems you might have, feel free to give me a call at Ayers Ski Centre, LE 3-4413.

'Argenteuil Minor hockey tournament

Thirty-two minor hockey teams participated in the tournament at the Brownsburg Arena last weekend, April 3-4-5, and displayed spirited competition combined with good sportsmanship in their games.

In the minor Bantam division, Alta Vista, Ottawa, took all the honors and was awarded the trophy emblematic of the best minor Bantam team of the tournament.

Because of the large number of entries, it was necessary to extend the elimination finals for the Midget class to April 11, at which time it is hoped that Dickie Moore or another former star of the Montreal Canadiens will be present to referee the final game and present the trophy to the winner. Information concerning starting time of the various games may be obtained by telephoning the Brownsburg Arena on April 11.

The Midget teams to compete in the finals are Hawkesbury, Buckingham, Montreal (Immaculate Conception), Verdun Red Wings, the N.D.G. Monarchs, Chateau Guay and Lachute Shamrocks.

The organizers, administrators and referees are very well satisfied with the tournament proceedings to date. They are very happy to donate their time to promoting organized sports activity for our youth, and hope that many other parents and community-spirited people will join them in future undertakings of this nature.

United Church bowling playoffs

The first games of the Lachute United Church bowling league play-offs were staged on Monday, and there were a few upsets during the evening.

In the "A" series, the teams ran to form, with close games by all four top teams. The St. George's team (Owen Todd) claimed a lead of 8-6 over St. David's foursome (Marjory Armstrong), while the league champion team, St. Pat's, skipped by Gladys Davis, won against Bluebirds (Mrs. O. Riddell) 9-6. These four teams will conclude their two-game total-scores next week.

In the "B" series, the lowly Thistles and St. Andrews upset the Red Wings and Maple Leafs, respectively, by scores of 9-8 and 8-5. In the other games, Young People's defeated East Settlement 8-5, and the Beavers won 8-4 against the All Stars.

Next Monday evening, the games will be as follows:

Series "B", Sudden Death —
7.15, Beavers vs Thistles
St. Andrews vs Young People's

Series "A", Total Scores —
8.15, St. George's vs St. David's
St. Pat's vs Bluebirds.

Bowling gains popularity in Japan

Nearly six hundred bowling lanes have been opened in Japanese cities in the past few months, increasing the country's bowling "capacity" by better than 50 per cent and giving the population a better chance to participate in the sport.

Bowling has suddenly caught on in Japan and reservations are necessary for several days in advance at most alleys. It is estimated that the bowling population now exceeds 1,000,000 after starting from scratch in 1952 when the first small bowling alley was opened.

Newest addition to the bowling scene is a 120-lane alley — claimed to be the world's biggest bowling alley — in a section of Tokyo. This alley features escalators, shower rooms, locker rooms and other recreational facilities.

Thirty-nine new alleys are scheduled to open before July of this year.

St. Eustache beats LHS Midgets at basketball

In midget basketball games played here last Thursday, St. Eustache Elementary School defeated the boys and girls of Lachute High School.

St. Eustache sneaked out a 29-20 win in the girls' game, that was close and exciting throughout. The visitors, coached by Tom Rogers, a local boy, opened the scoring early but were held to a two-point lead for most of the first quarter. The half-time score was 21-12 for the visitors.

Lachute, coached by Chubby Painter, came back strong in the second half but ran out of time. High scorer of the game was Lachute's Robyn Painter, who parted the twines for 12 points. Nancy Kettyle and Janice Noble collected 6 and 2 points, respectively. St. Eustache were led by June White, with 10 points.

The second game of the day was another victory for St. Eustache, with a 31-18 score over the Lachute boys. The contest was closely played until the final three minutes, when the Lachute defence weakened and allowed the visitors to score at will. Half-time score was 11-10 for St. Eustache.

High scorer of the game was Ross Paterson of St. Eustache, who swished 12 points. Scoring for Lachute were George Black and Danny Hodge, with 6 points each, followed by Jeffrey Gordon and Bob Davis, with 4 and 2 points, respectively.

This ends a very successful basketball season at Lachute High School.

The big bonspiel is over, and a very successful one it was indeed — more entries — bigger crowds — more meals served (over 1,000) — more people satisfied. All those concerned with operating the bonspiel can now heave a sigh of relief and look forward to a well-earned rest, knowing that they did their respective tasks to the best of their ability. This is the teamwork that has built the Annual Spring Bonspiel to what it is today.

We are very pleased to announce that the winners again this year are from our neighboring rink, Brownsburg. Andy Hardie (skip) Sylvester Hall, Bob McGuire and Irwin Martin took them all in their stride. Sylvester Hall was on the winning rink last year too. Hearty congratulations! The only consolation Lachute can take in their win, is that the first three players all started their curling in the Lachute club, and Bob McGuire is still an active curling member of our club.

The runners-up were from Vankleek Hill, with Geo. Watson skip. The Consolations were won by our old friend Monty Parisien, from Hawkesbury Curling Club, with runners-up Bill Ott (skip). Garth Boyd, Stuart Gordon and Gordie McGibbon. All players of this last team are out-of-town members of the Lachute Club, but were curling under Outremont's banner.

The Vice-President's Bonspiel, which was unfinished when the Spring Bonspiel started, is now under way, and this could well be the last of the season — unless the Match Committee cooks up some further contest.

Art Lobel skipped his Lachute rink to an 8-7 win over the RCAF La Macaza rink, in Ste. Agathe Curling Club's first annual men's invitation bonspiel a week ago Saturday night, to take the main consolation event and the Manor House Trophy that went along with the victory. With Art Lobel (skip) were L. Rendell (third), Carl Rodger (second) and Doug MacKenzie (lead). — Congratulations again!

Organized for Cancer campaign

money is spent in Quebec Province on free literature, films and lectures.

Welfare (21c) — This includes free dressings to all cancer sufferers, and help to cancer patients. In the Welfare field the Canadian Cancer Society helps more than 20,500 cancer patients annually. Over five million dressings were made and distributed free of charge last year. Welfare is perhaps our most personal and "humane" service, bringing us in daily touch with those who suffer from cancer, and keeping local groups of women working together for others. Many patients do not know they have the disease — so the service is often anonymous.

— This leaves 16 cents left over from the dollar we give. This goes for fund-raising and general overhead. The constant aim of the Society is to keep these figures as low as possible.

Although the campaign comes only once a year, thousands of volunteers give their services daily throughout the year. Won't you — help fight cancer with a check-up and a cheque?

Any wishing to contribute to the cause and who may not be contacted personally, may kindly mail donations to: Cancer Fund, Box 95, Lachute, Que.

Pioneer resident died at Weir, Que.

The late Mrs. Jas. Thompson

Weir, Que. — This community was shocked on Tuesday morning of last week to hear of the sudden passing of Mrs. James Thompson.

The late Mrs. Thompson, formerly Sarah Edith Hutton, was born in Dalesville November 17, 1872, and moved with her parents to Harrington (Lakeview) in 1880. At about the age of 13, she was employed in Lachute for a few years, then went to Boston, where she spent about 10 years. Shortly after her return home she was married (April 24, 1902, at Lachute, by the Rev. R. Creswell) to Mr. James Thompson, of Weir. Soon afterwards they settled on the farm, where she resided until her death.

She was pre-deceased by Mr. Thompson on April 12, 1947.

Mrs. Thompson had enjoyed good health until the past couple of years, when she had been stricken with the 'flu a few times, but on each occasion she rallied promptly. She took a keen interest in all around her; on the Saturday prior to her death, she was visited by Brown Owl Thelma Owen, together with two of her Brownies, Brenda Labrosse and Elaine Colquhoun, who presented her with an Easter basket of fruit, packed specially by the Brownies to be presented to a "senior citizen". Mrs. Thompson was highly pleased with this gesture, and after thanking them, sat and chatted with them for some time.

Left to mourn her passing are two daughters, (Thelma) Mrs. Edward Thompson, of the Glen of Harrington, (Ruby) Mrs. C. Hinves, of Montreal, and one son, Cyrus, who remained on the homestead; with him, his wife, Joyce, and granddaughter Adele, the late Mrs. Thompson made her home. There were also seven grandchildren and 12 great-grandchildren.

The funeral was held from her late residence on Thursday afternoon, with the Rev. James Armour of Lachute officiating. The pall-bearers were Messrs. Gordon, Lorne and Grant Thompson, Harold Hutton, William Owen and Fred Parnell. Interment took place in The Glen cemetery.

Veterans to visit Normandy, 20 yrs. after D-Day

Ottawa — Canadian veterans will return to Normandy for "D-Day plus 20 years". An official ceremony is scheduled for June 6 in the cemetery at Beny-Sur-Mer, a few miles from where Canadian troops landed in 1944.

The observance of D-Day will be part of a tour of the liberation route followed by Canadian troops. The veterans on the 18-day tour will retrace the historic Maple Leaf Up route.

The tour, organized by the Royal Canadian Legion, leaves Montreal by air on June 1, returning on June 18. After four days in England, the group visits Dieppe, and then proceeds to Normandy for June 6. From Normandy, the veterans and families will visit Vimy, Brussels, Arnhem and Amsterdam. En route they will visit several Canadian war cemeteries and be guests at several official functions.

Any veteran wishing further information on the tour should write to Dominion Command, Royal Canadian Legion, 465 Gilmour St., Ottawa.

L.H.S. teacher was bride in recent ceremony

Maxwell - Soule

The marriage of Shirley Eloise, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. R. F. P. Soule, of Mystic, Que., to Mr. Roland E. Maxwell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold S. Maxwell, of Lachute, took place on Saturday, March 28, at the Mystic United Church, the Rev. Peter Macaskill officiating. Mrs. K. Smith played the wedding music. Baskets of spring flowers were used to decorate the church.

The bride, who was given away by her brother, Mr. Winston Soule, was in a sheath gown of imported white silk brocade. She wore a hat of self material with a small veil and a corsage of pink roses.

Mrs. T. R. Robertson of Brownsburg, as matron of honor, was in a sheath frock of pink silk organza lined with taffeta. She wore a matching bandeau and a corsage of white carnations and hyacinths.

Mr. T. R. Robertson acted as best man, and the usher was Mr. Gordon Tabrett.

Mrs. Stanley Soule, the bride's sister-in-law, was in an ensemble of beige ribbon lace and wore a green and white hat, a corsage bouquet of bronze mums, and brown accessories. Mrs. Maxwell, mother of the bridegroom, wore a green printed silk gown, a white hat and a corsage of pink carnations.

Following a reception at the home of the bride's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Soule, Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell left for the southern United States, the bride travelling in a suit of pink silk and wool with matching hat and a Royal blue bouclé coat. . . The couple will reside in Lachute.

Witnesses attend district assembly

Residents of Lachute were among the 1,220 persons who jammed the Rosemount High School auditorium last Saturday night to see the widely advertised film, "Proclaiming Everlasting Good News' Around the World."

Mr. Miller, spokesman for the group in the Lachute area, said: "The film showed how Jehovah's Witnesses carry on their preaching activities in 22 countries of the world, from Sweden's modern suburbia to the bullock driver in the rice paddies of the Philippines."

Of special interest were vivid pictures of the ruins of Babylon. The moderator, Mr. Laurier Saumur, Quebec supervisor for the group, commented, "Jehovah's Witnesses believe that the scripture in Revelation 18 which reads 'Babylon the great has fallen', contains a very strong warning for this present generation and for this present evil world."

Delegates from 13 congregations applauded 10 new Witnesses newly dedicated to God by water baptism, a step taken only after many months of intensive study and ministerial training. During the around-the-world assemblies held last summer 16,267 persons were baptized with a total attendance of 570,932 at 24 assembly cities.

On Sunday afternoon, Mr. Saumur gave a talk entitled, "Facing up to the Urgency of Our Times". He urged, "Resist the pressures of this world that tend to prevent us from following in the footsteps of Christ Jesus. To do this," he added, "we must fortify our minds with the steel of God's Word."

Mr. Miller also mentioned that all congregations of Jehovah's Witnesses in the Montreal area are planning special bible talks for next Sunday, April 12, to which all interested persons are invited.

Red Cross Soc'y April meeting

At the April meeting of the local branch of the Red Cross, which meets the first Wednesday of every month in the basement of Lachute United Church, a statement of the result of the "blitz" drive was noted; $2,400 had been collected that night (including a few outside areas), which was an increase over last year. The target for the year was $4,000 but it was expected that the goal will be much nearer to completion when collections from outlying districts have been turned in.

Mrs. B. McGibbon reported that a large shipment of clothing was sent to the Montreal Red Cross in March, including 4 quilts, 32 pairs children's socks (all donated by one woman), 20 girls' blouses, underclothing, T-shirts, sweaters, bootees, and diapers. Mrs. G. Mitchell had made and donated 3,500 swabs.

Religious tests for adoptions

More Canadian boys and girls would enjoy the benefits of permanent adoption if all religious tests for adoptive parents were abolished, J. B. McGeachy writes in The Financial Post. In Ontario and elsewhere in Canada, he points out, Children's Aid Societies operate on the principle that all infants are Catholic, Protestant or Jewish and must be "placed" accordingly. Arguing that babies cannot properly be classified by religion and that religious belief has no necessary bearing on the fitness of any man and wife to be parents, McGeachy says the present system has caused hardship. Persons with no religious opinions are often denied the right to adopt. Few Jewish children come up for adoption. Available Catholic children have in the past far outnumbered applicant Catholic couples. Demand exceeds supply at present, McGeachy writes, but this position may soon be reversed because of declining infant mortality, the population boom, and medical progress in coping with infertility. Removal of all mandatory religious tests, he argues, would help to solve the problem of an over-supply of adoptable children in the future.

The Moving Season

The annual moving season is just around the corner and there are few communities that will not be affected. Lachute is no exception.

Each year the surge of moving causes problems for the families who are changing homes and increased work for the various public services, including the telephone.

A person can avoid an annoying interruption of service if he advises us of his decision to move as soon as he makes it even if he is not sure of the date. With this information we shall be better prepared to spread among our employees the numerous tasks that such a change of service involves according to the specific needs of the users.

In addition to this, a person moving should take good care of his telephone directory. It should be placed where it can be easily located not only when you are moving but also when you are unpacking in your new home. For those who are moving, the directory can be very useful. When it is placed on arrival next to your new telephone, no one will have to search for it in order to look up a new number.

If you are moving, we should appreciate it if you would fill out the following questionnaire as soon as possible and send it to us. This will help us to give our customers better service and to avoid the inconveniences that are unavoidable when we are not given advance warning.

Jehovah's Witnesses
There Is No Fire in Hell
What will you do when you are shown from the Scriptures that many popular creeds and teachings of Christendom are false? How will you react when you learn that the human soul is not immortal, that hell is not a place of fire, and that the Bible does not teach a trinity? Will you prefer to go along with the popular misconceptions, or will you stand alone for what you know to be right? Your decision involves your life.

Eastern Breeders review successful year of operation

At the annual meeting of Eastern Breeders Incorporated held recently at Kemptville, Ont., an all-time high for A.I. service usage was reported for 1963. A total of 124,068 first service cows were bred, an increase of 8,740 over the previous year. Membership increase for the year was 833.

Guest speakers at the event were Roy G. Snyder, secretary-manager for the Ontario Association of Artificial Breeders, of Guelph, and John Powell, Chief of Extension, Holstein-Friesian Association of Canada, of Brantford.

Mr. Snyder spoke on "The Development and Future Goals of A.I. in Canada", stressing the necessity of proving bulls to be superior transmitters of desirable characteristics before their use became widespread. He complimented Eastern Breeders on their efforts in this regard. Mr. Powell discussed "The A.I. Unit and the Breed Associations", pointing out the fine relationship between the A.I. industry as a whole, the various breed Associations, the Joint Dairy Breeds Committee and the various Government departments working in animal husbandry. This co-operation he felt had contributed greatly to the advancement of cattle improvement, a common objective, and placed the Canadian farmer-breeder in an enviable position with regard to cattle export.

Despite the extremely inclement weather an excellent representation of the membership by the directorate and voting delegates attended.

APPRECIATION

I would like to express my sincere thanks to all kind relatives and friends for the flowers, gifts, visits and get-well cards I received during my recent stay in hospital. I also wish to thank the staff at the Smith Clinic, Hawkesbury.

— Mrs. Evan Young,
R.R. 2, Calumet, Que.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT

I wish to thank the Rev. Gerald and Mrs. Hunt of the Maple Avenue Baptist Church, and my many friends in Brownsburg, for their kindness and sympathy during my bereavement.

Middleville, Ont.

Glad To Be 50!

The other night as I lay a-bed,
I thought, "Why good to be fifty?
'Stead of being dead". . .
There're many reasons why
it's so nifty.

There's the smile of a stranger
When life may be blue,
Which wipes out all fears
Imagined or true.

And friendship's love, quite understanding,
Offered pure and free —
Mistakes notwithstanding,
For you to see.

A baby's hand straining, strong in trust —
What a wondrous thing, indeed,
Making a must
That you'll have to succeed.

Nature's spring symphonies
aflower —
Angel-scented, God-inspired —
Life's loftiest tower
When all else is tired.

The frigid dawn of a winter's morn;
Virgin-draped, in pure, white
garb —
A startling stillness to adorn
For party, poet or forgotten bard.

And love, the noblest of all good things;
Free as birds, or mountain springs —
And Jesus! — Kittens, puppies and foals —
Noblest, most wondrous, exquisite of goals!

Good to be fifty?
— I should say!
Love makes life nifty —
For many a day!

Council members paid modestly

Saint John, N.B. (CP) — Salaries and remunerations received by members of city and town councils in New Brunswick are modest.

Saint John leads the list, with the mayor getting $3,500 and each councillor $2,000. In addition, the mayor can draw on a $1,200 annual expense allowance and all council members receive $500 for serving on the municipal council (including the county), plus $25 for each committee-of-the-whole meeting they attend.

Figures elsewhere in the province for mayors and aldermen respectively range from nothing at St. Stephen, where the council serves without remuneration, to nearly $3,000 and $1,000 at Fredericton, where the payment is based on population.

The Monction salaries are $2,000 and $1,000 An adopted motion to double these for the next council was rescinded.

Canadian Library Week, April 4-11 —

Ancient and contemporary

SO MUCH PRESTIGE was attached to libraries in the ancient world, that the people of one city tried to sabotage the library of another city when it threatened to outstrip their own!

The Alexandrian Library was long renowned as a centre of learning when the library at Pergamum began to show signs of overshadowing it. World Book Encyclopedia reports that the Alexandrians promptly cut off the supply of papyrus to Pergamum. The people of Pergamum, looking around for something to write on, hit on animal skins — and went on to develop a better writing material. It came to be called "pergamentum", from which our word "parchment" is derived.

Writes the Prime Minister, the Rt. Hon. Lester Pearson, in his endorsation of National Library Week: "The complete education has been likened to a banquet, with formal schooling the appetizer, experience the main course, and books the dessert. I like the analogy, but its weakness is that unlike a banquet, education never ends. The dessert — the world of books — can never be consumed, for, the more one partakes of it, the greater one's appetite, and the supply for practical purposes is infinite.

"Library Week is to remind Canadians of this vast world of books, to focus attention especially on the wealth we possess in our libraries, to nudge us — particularly adults — towards greater realization that, as long as we can read, the excitement of new discovery remains vibrantly ours to enjoy."

Memorial to great conservationist

WHEN THE LATE Jack Miner, naturalist, author and lecturer, died in 1944, within a year three delegations from the Canadian House of Commons and the Canadian Senate approached his family with three ideas of a memorial.

One suggestion was to erect a large tower 100 feet high at the Jack Miner Bird Sanctuary so the thousands of visitors could go up in the tower and with field glasses watch the flight of bird life from this elevated position. The Miner family realized this would call for an extravagant expenditure, so they did not approve.

Another suggestion was to create a large national park in the Northwest Territories where the caribou has been in danger of extermination, and name it for the late Jack Miner. The family did not approve of this either, because it was nearly 3,000 miles from Jack Miner's home and Bird Sanctuary.

The other suggestion was that during the week of April 10, which was Jack Miner's birthday, the week be known as National Wildlife Week. This was appropriate, because it was the spring of the year (April 10) when Canada was bursting with wild life returning to Canada to spend the summer and nest and raise their young.

This thought met with the full approval of the Miner family because it was to be strictly an educational week, of no cost to anyone, and would be a perpetual memorial to the late Jack Miner who pioneered in the field of conservation in not only Canada but the entire Continent.

To carry this thought into action the late Hon. John R. MacNicol (Conservative) introduced a bill, seconded by Hon. Joseph Bradette (Liberal). This was unique for a Conservative M.P. to introduce a bill when the Mackenzie King Government (Liberal) was in power; and when the bill was voted upon it was the first act of Parliament to ever pass the Commons and Senate without one dissenting voice.

— So this, too, is National Wildlife Week.

About cancer

APRIL IS the month during which Canada directs public attention to the subject of cancer and what is being done to develop a cure for this most serious disease. Through public health education, the layman is informed as to progress by medical science in cancer research. The cause and cure of cancer are still a mystery but the occasional break-through has brought optimism to medical science and helped in the diagnosis and treatment of certain forms of the disease. All scientists are agreed that time is the essential factor in every case; the earlier the patient receives medical attention, the greater the chance for success. The patient who fears that he has symptoms of the disease should consult his doctor or the cancer clinic as early as possible. In many cases, he is mistaken about the condition and is relieved of long periods of worry and brooding when he has authoritative opinion. If his suspicions are justified, the early diagnosis and treatment may arrest the cancer.

In many parts of this country, there are cancer clinics where the public may receive help; local health units will supply information to those who request it. No suspicion of a cancer symptom should be neglected. Long periods of worrying about the possible condition will not help — it's better to know for certain and to have the benefit of modern medical science.

Higher standard for school commissioners

JUNIOR MATRICULATION should be required as the minimum acceptable standard for the position of a school commissioner, according to a resolution to be put to the vote at a provincial conclave of Catholic Parent-Teacher Associations. At present, a school commissioner need only be able to read and write, in order to qualify.

The convention, taking place this weekend in Montreal, will ask parents and teachers from all parts of Quebec to consider proposals aimed at achieving better parent-teacher co-operation, overcoming the shortage of schools, and reorganizing school commissions throughout the province.

The call for higher standards for school commissioners comes from St. Patrick's P.T.A., at St. Jean, Que. . . A second resolution from the same association urges enactment of legislation to prevent all conflict of interest in school commissions. A desire to serve the cause of education, rather than the chance to make an easy sale, should be the motive for joining the commission, president Joe Somers believes.

Delegates will also participate in panel discussions on the teaching of French, on education after high school, and the basic differences among Quebec's three distinct approaches to education: the French Catholic, the English Catholic and the Protestant.

Holiday In The Kitchen

By BILL SMILEY

I'm going to punch right on the nose the next person, be it man, woman, child or nice old lady whose bones are as brittle as soda crackers, who asks me, "Did you have a nice Easter holiday?"

Bill Smiley

Some school teachers have a nice Easter holiday, and good luck to them. But English teachers are not among them.

English teachers have the same sort of holiday a bus driver would have if he were given a week off and told he was to drive a bus from Hailfax to Vancouver in the next seven days.

When the holidays began, I had examination papers to mark which represented a total of about 480 student writing hours. (They could have produced the works of Shakespeare in the same time.) This, in turn, means that I have about 100 hours of marking time.

No complaints. It's part of the job. But things were a little more complicated this year. The women of the house came down with 'flu, just as the "holidays" began.

The result was that, instead of sitting quietly in my study, and having countless cups of tea and coffee, innumerable beers and sandwiches brought me, to keep me going, I found myself trotting up and down stairs about six hours of each day, bearing up tempting little things on trays, bearing down dirty dishes. While my pillars of papers sat and gathered dust.

Results of turning the old man loose with the grub for a few days was interesting. My wife has almost decided to become a permanent invalid. My kids realize that their father has another brilliant, unsuspected dimension.

The Old Lady was feeling horrible with the flu, but there didn't seem much wrong with her appetite. She gained about eight pounds. Of course, she's not used to my lunches. Instead of the soup-and-sandwich routine she's accustomed to, they consisted of something like this: glass of sherry; grilled sausage with butter-fried mushrooms and cheese omelette; tossed salad; blueberry pie and ice cream; coffee; brandy; cherry-centred chocolates.

The kids were a bit shaken by some of my casseroles. Perhaps the most successful was the lasagna. Basis, a can of lasagna — egg noodles in tomato and meat sauce. Simmer in oven for ten minutes. Add layer of mushrooms, layer of strong cheese, layer of thin-sliced salami, layer of onion rings, layer of mild cheese. Bake in oven. Sprinkle with paprika, parsley, chives, cinnamon, nutmeg, wild oats, or anything else that will sprinkle. Serve with hot, crusty rolls, and stand back

The reason there are no great women chefs? They've no imagination. My wife hacks up some lettuce, tomato and celery, and calls it a salad. If she's feeling particularly exotic, she might throw in some sliced green pepper. My salads, besides these basics, contained great chunks of cheese, all colors; whole green onions, peeled grapes, shredded lemon, raw carrots, quartered dill pickle, jelly beans left behind by the Easter bunny. The whole doused in a dressing made of four raw eggs mixed with tartar sauce, ketchup, mayonnaise, mustard and vinegar.

I have only two things to say about the grand culinary adventure: (a) the food budget is shot for the next six weeks; (b) where can I buy a good, second-hand, automatic dishwasher?

This Is Not Morality

By RAY ARGYLE

The Supreme Court of Canada has once again rejected complaints of obscenity against certain magazines widely sold throughout Canada. This latest decision keeps intact the court's record of turning down every single complaint of this nature since Canada's new obscenity law went into effect four years ago.

Ray Argyle

The decisions, however, have not deterred local authorities from continuing their efforts to deprive the public of publications or motion pictures which they think should be suppressed.

In Alberta and Saskatchewan, for instance, the entire adult population has been deprived of the privilege of enjoying what is probably the finest motion picture of the year, Tom Jones.

In Toronto, a local magistrate has ruled the 18th-century classic, Fanny Hill to be obscene.

Censorship of another sort has been threatened from Parliament as a result of complaints against anti-Jewish hate sheets distributed by a misguided 19-year-old Ontario youth.

In the case of the Tom Jones movie, the distributing company refused to cut sections which provincial authorities had regarded as obscene and decided just not to show the movie in either Saskatchewan or Alberta.

In view of the Supreme Court's consistent refusal to accept obscenity charges under our exisiting laws, one must wonder why various local authorities across the country continue to press for convictions of this type.

Seldom, if ever, do such authorities enjoy any general public support in their efforts to decide on their own what is best for the public.

Laws relating to morality and censorship are probably among the most difficult to enact and enforce in present-day society. This is because Western society in general is going through a revolutionary change in attitudes toward traditional morality.

It is not that morality, as some charge, is breaking down. It is that attitudes and standards, based on a more realistic outlook to life in general, are changing accordingly.

Literary and movie censorship is not the only storm centre of the forces now buffeting our traditional moral attitudes.

It is still illegal in Canada, for instance, to sell birth control devices for the express purpose of birth control. Instead, they must be sold in the guise of health protection, which is a good example of the hypocrisy still prevailing in our sexual attitudes.

Canada's divorce and abortion laws still remain as relics of a puritan age. They would be modified tomorrow if the public were allowed to make a democratic choice in the matter.

There is probably no single law, however, which is more stupid or self-defeating than Canada's law concerning drug addiction.

The law as it now stands serves only one purpose— it permits immense profiteering by underworld drug traffickers just as prohibition laws served only the interests of bootleggers.

This is the kind of "morality" we can do without.

The late Arthur Wright

The funeral of the late Arthur J. D. Wright, a well known Montreal businessman associated with these parts, was held Tuesday at St. Andrew's United Church, Westmount. (The late Mr. Wright was the husband of the former Hope Cushing, niece of Mrs. W. Y. King and well known in the riverfront community of Cushing.)

He was born in Colombo, Ceylon, in 1902. His early education in Ceylon and England led him to Canada, where he settled in Toronto, working on aircraft for the Royal Flying Corps during World War I. He then joined the Toronto office of the CNR, later moving to Montreal, where for the last 15 years he was secretary-treasurer of John Gordon & Son Ltd., sales agents.

An enthusiastic golfer and curler, Mr. Wright was a former captain of Kanawaki Golf Club and president of the St. George Curling Club.

He is survived by his wife; two sons, David and Ronnie, of Westmount; and a daughter, Mrs. Anthony (Tony) van Blokland (Wendy), of Gemert, Netherlands.

Lady resident laid to rest

The late Mrs. F. W. Graham

Friends and relatives regret the passing of Mrs. Frank W. Graham on Tuesday, March 24, after a lengthy illness.

The late Mrs. Graham was formerly Elizabeth Miller, of Superior, Wis. She was married to Mr. Graham in January 1916, and they lived in Lachute for most of their married life. She was a member of Margaret Rodger Memorial Presbyterian Church.

Besides her husband she leaves to mourn her loss several nieces, nephews, brothers-in-law and sisters-in-law.

Service was held Thursday, March 26, from the MacKimmie Funeral Chapel, conducted by the Rev. Jas. Armour, with interment in Lachute Cemetery.

Pall-bearers were — Messrs. Edgar Pollock, Stewart MacAdam, Kenneth Clark and Ross Muir.

The late Mrs. E. M. Fawcett

Word has been received of the death of Mrs. E. M. Fawcett, the former Eleanor McRae, who was born in Lachute in 1895, the youngest daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John McRae.

In 1903 she went with the family to Innisfail, Alta., moving to the Huxley district in 1908. She was married at Huxley in 1916. In 1931 Mrs. Fawcett moved with her husband and family to the town of Blackie, Alta., where she resided until her husband's retirement from the United Grain Growers Co. in 1959.

Left to mourn her passing are her beloved husband, two sons, Lyle Fawcett, of Elnora, Alta., and Hershel, at home; a sister, Annie (Mrs. A. Campbell of Calgary, the last of a large family), and a niece, Miss Arlene Fawcett, of Elnora.

The funeral service was held at Foster's Garden Chapel, the Rev. D. G. Littlejohn officiating; interment was at Queen's Park Cemetery.

Older members of this community will remember that Mr. John McRae was a partner in the foundry business of McOuat and McRae here. The building in which they operated, near the Wilson dam, is still standing and in use.

'64 Jet-smooth Luxury Chevrolet

A hill is just something to admire the view from when you're driving a '64 Chevrolet. With engines up to a 425-hp V8*, getting from one side to the other wouldn't be much easier if somebody had put a tunnel there.

And if Chevrolet can go over a whole mountain so you hardly feel it, you can imagine how it goes over plain old bumps. Jet-smooth, of course. We put a big coil spring at all four wheels to soak up the bumps just as fast as they come.

As you'd expect, Chevrolet matches performance with outstanding luxury, inside that big beautiful Body by Fisher. All kinds of stretch-out room, wide thick-cushioned seats, yards of deep-twist carpeting and elegant fabric and vinyl upholstery — all make you feel good just being there.

With all its looks and luxury, you can see how anyone might get the idea that this great highway performer is a high-priced car. Unless, of course, they happened to look first at its reasonable Chevrolet price.

A Weekly Feature of Helpful Hints on Child Training.

National Library Week

— By NANCY CLEAVER —

"Reading is to the mind, what exercise is to the body."

— Addison

Do your children find in books exercise for their minds? Do you appreciate the library facilities available in your town, not only for yourself, but for your children? Public libraries are not just for city and town families — many country people visit the W.I. libraries or travelling bookmobiles, and richly benefit from their services. A borrowed book is no substitute for a child owning his own books. But a library serves boys and girls in a very special way.

To the school age boy or girl, a trained librarian gives direction in the choice of books. A child discovers new and interesting volumes which are just right for his age and interests. A librarian is a great help in encouraging a real love for reading. What a marvellous thing is this zest for books! A child who tastes the fun of reading at an early age need never know the loneliness, the sense of having nothing to do, the boredom of idleness which a person with no love for books often experiences.

Humor is rare enough and books with a little nonsense in them are "relished by the best of men." Younger boys and girls chuckle over the adventures of Alice in Wonderland, Winnie the Pooh, and Babar, the Elephant. Booth Tarkington's tales of Penrod are in a class of their own. Stephen Leacock's "Nonsense Novels" lend themselves to dramatization.

Books of poetry appeal to the imagination and the sense of rhythm. A parent does well occasionally to include such a book as "When We Were Very Young" by A. A. Milne to read aloud to a little child. An older boy or girl will enjoy an anthology such as "Silver Pennies" chosen especially for children who are reading for themselves.

A library is also a source of reference books. A child should receive encouragement at home to discover any special topic which appeals to him. Often this is in the field of leisure-time interests or hobbies. Books on "How to Make" are popular with all ages. There are many such non-fiction books written especially for young readers.

Three other interesting divisions in reading are books about other lands, books of other days and biography. Travel and history are both dealt with in a fascinating way with beautiful illustrations in modern children's volumes. Booth Tarkington wrote to his mother that he remembered with "infinite gratefulness" her reading aloud to him, and he added, "You made history attractive and human to me in that reading."

But whatever kind of good book a child reads — his life is enriched by the new doors opened to him in the pages of a book. Someone has said "To be young without poetry is to be indoors in Spring," and to go through life without a love for books would be to be poor indeed. Encourage your child in his literary adventures! Radio, TV, movies — no other leisure-time activity can take the place of reading in a child's education.

Honey recipe

A spicy, fruit-filled pastry roll adapted from an old Italian recipe is "Honey Apple Roll".

Pastry for a 2-crust pie, ¼ cup liquid honey, 1½ cups peeled, chopped apple, ½ cup chopped dates, 3 tablespoons chopped walnuts, ½ teaspoon cinnamon, ¼ teaspoon cloves, 2 tablespoons liquid honey.

Roll pastry out in two rectangles about 10 inches by 7 inches. Spread each with honey to about ½-inch from edges of pastry. Sprinkle with remaining ingredients. Roll pastry up like a jelly roll and seal edges firmly to prevent honey bubbling out during cooking. Place rolls on a cookie sheet and bake in a hot (425° F.) oven until golden brown, 25 to 30 minutes. Spread remaining 2 tablespoons of honey over top of cooked rolls. Serve warm topped with whipped cream or ice cream. It makes 6 servings.

Spring calls for balanced diet

Now that spring is on the way, the wise housewife makes sure that she provides a balanced diet for her family.

Children, especially, are susceptible to the influences of changing weather conditions. If meals are irregular and food preparation is careless, ill health is invited.

Lack of variety, too, can mean a deficiency in one or more essential nutrients — according to the Montreal Bakers Association.

Support for this statement comes from Jeannine Champoux, dietician of the Quebec Ministry of Health. Speaking at a food conference in Montreal, she declared: "Despite the abundance in which we live, a great number of Canadians suffer from certain deficiencies. There is proof in the large number of cavities, chronic infections of the nose and throat and retarded growth of many of our school children."

If the rules laid down by the Canadian Food Guide were followed, and if our menus were balanced, everyone would consume sufficient vitamins for physical well-being, she said.

One of the foods that best help to meet the recommended standards, is enriched bread. This bread supplies important B vitamins and the iron and calcium required by young and old alike.

Thanks to the enrichment program, which was instituted in Canada 10 years ago, the consumption of four slices of bread daily satisfies approximately 25 percent of the body's needs in the form of thiamin, riboflavin and niacin.

Other essential foods which should be included in the spring diet are milk, cheese, eggs, meat, fish and poultry; yellow and green vegetables; citrus and other fruits; and well cooked cereals.

A light dessert in spring mood

Here's a puffy, light dessert that satisfies the desire for something in keeping with the springtime mood and atmosphere. . .

The recipe makes four to six servings of ever-so-lightly tangy baked Lemon Soufflé. Brown ½ cup fine bread crumbs in 3 tbsps. butter or margarine. Blend in ½ cup milk and ¼ tsp. salt; heat to boiling, stirring constantly. Mixture will thicken. Remove from heat. Beat 4 egg yolks until thick. Gradually beat in ¼ cup granulated sugar, then blend in the milk mixture. Let cool. Meantime, preheat the oven to 325 deg. F. (moderately slow). Grease a 6-cup round baking dish. Blend 2 teaspoons grated lemon rind and ½ tsp. vanilla into cooled milk mixture. Beat 4 egg whites until stiff but not dry; fold them into the mixture. Pour carefully into the baking dish. Bake in the preheated oven about 1 hour, until puffed and firm on top. Serve at once, plain, or with stewed fruit or whipped cream.

Storing pork cuts

Here's some tips from the Meat Packers Council of Canada when storing pork cuts in the refrigerator or freezer.

If you don't wish to freeze the pork, it can be kept satisfactorily for a few days in the refrigerator. If it's a roast of fresh pork, however, the package should be stored uncovered or loosely covered in the coldest part of the refrigerator, preferably in the compartment designed for meat storage. Pre-packaged frozen pork should have the wrapper loosened before being placed in the refrigerator, unless it is to be used that same day.

Cured and smoked pork can be stored in the original wrapper in the refrigerator for one to two weeks. Canned hams should be stored according to the directions on the label, but if the directions are not clear, then keep the canned hams (in the unopened can) in the refrigerator until ready to serve.

For freezing, pork should be held at a temperature of 0° F. or lower. Fresh pork can be kept frozen for three to six months, while ground pork should be frozen for only one to three months. Cured and smoked pork products should not be kept frozen any longer than two or three weeks.

The secret to successful freezing of fresh pork is to rewrap the pork cuts tightly with a moisture-proof and vapor-proof wrapping material. It helps to freeze any cuts of meat in convenient meal sizes so you don't have to thaw a large quantity just to get enough for one meal.

Dear Doris

Canadian social worker Doris Clark invites you to write her about your problem. She answers letters of general interest in this column but can't undertake personal replies.

DEAR DORIS — My restricted diet prohibits eggs, milk, cheese, starches, fats. I can have beef, fresh fruits, salad greens, principally. Not too hard to follow at home, where I do the cooking.

But how do I handle dinner at restaurants, club luncheons or friends' homes, without making a big fuss? Relatives insist that (a) a little cheating won't hurt, (b) the caloric restrictions are pure nonsense, (c) "she can diet when she is at home, and when she is here she can very well eat what I have prepared."

It is considered the height of bad form to take your own food with you when you go out. The thought of my doing it horrifies my husband and his relatives. So that's out.

ALLERGY AUNTIE

DEAR AUNTIE—It's not out. It's in. You have achieved a diet to stay well on. Now you need sufficient sense of your own worth to follow through. People don't want to see you for what you eat of their food, but because they enjoy your personality.

Husband and family should egg you on; giving moral support to the extent of carrying your substitute offerings to the cook. Add a light touch with good-natured laughter at your singular dilemma.

DEAR DORIS—I am 17 and haven't as yet had a date. The problem is that all the boys around here expect too much of you. They think they can pet and "everything else" on a date.

I believe that a date should be one of conversation (things that are of interest to either date) and an occasional goodnight kiss. Maybe I've read too many stories about this. My friends are snubbing me because of my not being "nicer to boys". What should I do?

UNCERTAIN

DEAR UNCERTAIN — Have you been declaring far and wide your intention of keeping your distance when you do get that first date? Your idea is fine, but there are gentler ways of keeping things within bounds. And you should never sound like a prude.

DEAR DORIS—I received an invitation to a shower for a girl getting married shortly. Her mother and another lady are giving it and I thought a mother wasn't supposed to give her daughter a shower.

At the bottom of the card it said "Cash" and I know she said she had lots of linens, etc., so wanted money. What do you think of this? I had worked a pair of pillow cases with crocheted lace on them.

DILEMMA

DEAR DILEMMA — No close relative should give a shower. Whether cash is acceptable depends on circumstances; in some European-influenced communities it's just the thing.

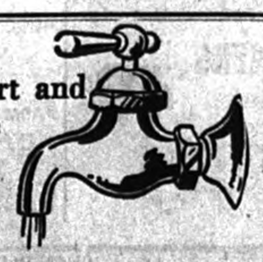

It's your privilege to decide what you take. Put a note with your handiwork expressing pleasure in making something special for your friend. It's my bet she'll love it!

Change of routine — for historians and food lovers

For those interested in tracing the historical origins of the foods we eat today, Prunus armeniaca — the common apricot — can provide a strange mixture of enigma and seemingly conflicting fact. Now thought to have originated in China and to have been introduced to Caucasians through Marco Polo and those who followed in his steps, it is fairly certain that the apricot was brought to North American society — such as it was at the time — by Spanish mission fathers arriving in California.

For those not so interested in historical speculation but more in culinary adventure, the following recipe will provide a tender, rich bread loaf set off with the tang and color of Prunus armeniaca. Include crunchy chopped nuts and you have something new for those mid-morning coffee breaks — a welcome change of routine, even for historians.

Apricot Swirl Loaf

(Yield, 1 loaf 9 x 5 inches)

¼ Cup milk, ¼ cup granulated sugar, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ cup margarine or butter, ¼ cup lukewarm water, 1 teaspoon granulated sugar, 1 envelope fast-rising active dry yeast, 1 egg, well-beaten, 2¾ cups (about) pre-sifted all-purpose flour, melted margarine or butter, ¾ cup cut-up or chopped dried apricots, ¼ cup granulated sugar, 2 tablespoons brown sugar, 1 cup water, ½ teaspoon orange extract, 2 tablespoons orange juice, ½ cup chopped filberts or hazelnuts.

Scald milk. Stir in ¼ cup sugar, the salt and the ¼ cup margarine or butter. Let cool to lukewarm.

Meantime, measure lukewarm water into large mixing bowl. Stir in the teaspoon of sugar. Sprinkle yeast on top. Let stand 10 minutes. Then stir well. Stir in lukewarm milk mixture and egg. Add 1½ cups of the flour. Beat until smooth. Work in enough additional flour to make a soft dough, about 1½ cups.

Turn out onto lightly floured board or canvas. Knead until smooth and elastic. Place in greased bowl. Brush with melted margarine or butter. Cover. Let rise in a warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk, about 1 hour.

Meantime, prepare apricot filling.

In small saucepan, combine apricots, remaining ¼ cup granulated sugar, brown sugar, and water. Boil, uncovered, stirring occasionally, until apricots are tender, about 10 minutes. Remove from heat. Purée mixture or buzz in food blender. Add orange extract and juice. Cool.

Punch down risen dough. Turn out onto lightly floured board or canvas. Roll out to a 13 x 9-inch rectangle. Spread with apricot filling; sprinkle with filberts or hazelnuts. Roll up from short side; pinch to seal seams. Place in greased loaf pan, 9 x 5-inches. Brush with melted margarine or butter. Cover. Let rise in a warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk, about 1 hour.

Bake in moderate oven preheated to 350 deg. F., about 30-35 minutes. Turn out onto cooling rack. Cool away from draft.

If You're TIRED

Now and then everybody gets a "tired-out" feeling and may be bothered by backaches. Perhaps nothing seriously wrong, just a temporary condition caused by urinary irritation or bladder discomfort. That's the time to take Dodd's Kidney Pills. Dodd's help stimulate the kidneys to relieve this condition which may often cause backache and tired feeling. Then you feel better, rest better, work better. 81

Cancer Month

Information on this disease is available from local or provincial health departments, or from local branches of the Canadian Cancer Society.

By Jean Sharp, Canadian Press Staff Writer

The schoolboy's despairing joke that you have to know how to spell a word before you can look it up in the dictionary applies to a lot of adult experiences.

If you don't know where to find something, it often follows that you don't know where to turn to find someone who can tell you either. Or you feel shy about asking.

There are any number of people who are used to being asked for information or help and who will try hard to answer a courteous question.

One of the most useful places to start should be a library. If they don't have the actual information, they do have directories, catalogues and periodicals which will tell you where to find it. It is a good idea to call a librarian before there is any urgency about getting an answer. If she knows she can't help, she may suggest someone else right away. If your question needs researching, a call gives her time to look things up without keeping you and other people in the library waiting.

Ask a Specialist

There are groups which specialize in information. There is, for instance, an Ontario Camping Association in Toronto which has information on children's camps.

There are trade associations which a local retailer or serviceman may belong to. Many of them offer booklets on how to take care of rugs or shoes or how to choose paint or handle tools, or who manufactures a hard-to-find product. Local merchants should know or be able to find out if their business has an association and what services it offers.

Most libraries have city directories which list occupations and list people by street address and phone number as well as name.

The information branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture is a mine of data about cooking, special dietary foods, housekeeping methods, plant care, almost anything which would be considered homemaking or, of course, agriculture.

Ask the Government

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics in Ottawa has facts by the thousand about Canada and Canadians. They know how many of them there are, what they produce and where and how many.

Both the province of Ontario and the federal government have women's bureaus in their departments of labor. They can supply information on legislation affecting women and their work, and can point the way to help with a job problem.

Local public welfare and public health departments can be sources of information on where to find help in their fields.

If you are dubious about a business deal or a company you can check with the Better Business Bureau, the Chamber of Commerce, the Board of Trade, whichever your community has. If it has none of them, town or county offices may answer questions.

Such organizations will not recommend firms, but may help you locate a type of service or business near you.

Your local newspaper office should know sources of information.

It may take several phone calls or letters but patience and politeness should turn up someone who knows someone who can answer your question.

Country Notebook

By WALKER RILEY, Macdonald College

The other day, I saw the great mine at Asbestos for the first time in my life. How well I remember our geography teacher drilling us, "Ninety percent of the world's asbestos is produced in Quebec. . ." Now, suddenly this text-book exercise became reality.

It was almost dark when we arrived there; the night shift was already at work. It was an unforgettable experience to stand on the edge of that great open pit, watching the trucks crawl around the bottom like beetles under the floodlights.

But our job concerns farming, not mining. I found the rolling hills not unlike those of Central Ontario where we lived and farmed until two years ago. The granite rocks, the white pines, the fast-flowing streams all seemed warmly familiar.

And I suspect that the problems also are similar — farms that have become too small in these changing times, low natural soil fertility, lack of lime. In spite of these handicaps, the number of neat, well-painted, prosperous farmsteads catches the eye. And Galen Driver and I both noticed the large number of young farmers in the audience that evening.

We had gone out to take part in a discussion on hay and pasture improvement. Galen, for his share, talked of the importance of soil fertility.

He feels quite strongly that, before much money is spent on comercial fertilizer, drainage and soil acidity must be considered. With generous government subsidies on agricultural limestone, no one can afford to miss this opportunity to correct a common cause of poor crops. Then when the p.H. approaches 6.0 by soil test, you can expect a good return on your annual fertilizer investment.

He doesn't think it matters what time of year the lime goes on, provided the fields are sufficiently firm to carry the truck. But it is most effective disced or ploughed in six months before seeding down. He estimates a quarter ton of lime is used up or lost per acre each year; that means a fresh application every four to six years.

Galen is convinced, too, that farmyard manure is an underrated asset. He figures that each ton is equal to a bag of 10-5-10 fertilizer.

He points out, though, that the middle member of that formula — the phosphorous — is low. And that limits the usefulness of manure unless extra phosphorous is added. This can be done by scattering 20% superphosphate on the walk behind the cows in the stable — one pound per cow per day.

"Stablephos" used this way has an important second benefit. It saves nitrogen. Chemically, it combines with the ammonia that would usually be lost into the air. Anyone who has used it will tell you that you can really see the difference on the hayfields.

Galen feels that reinforced manure, as it is called, will take care of most of the fertilizer needs on many farms. And it is a painless way to buy fertilizer — you can bring home a few bags each month along with the mill feed.

On dairy farms, manure is worth most for corn or other row crops, Galen said. After that, older meadows benefit most. That is because manure is high in nitrogen, supplying that which was contributed by clover or alfalfa in the first years. And Galen suggests spreading it light to cover as much of the farm as possible each year.

I know we all appreciated Galen Driver taking time to be on this program. Many of us have heard his voice all winter on Farm Radio Forum, but few realize that he is also a full-time student at Macdonald College. Thanks, Galen.

It was the first time many of those present had met Richmond County's new assistant agronome, Mr. Martin. He outlined the new policies of the Department of Agriculture. Two farm management clubs are being formed in the County; members will receive help to draw up long-term plans for their farms and receive assistance in management problems.

Contract approved for construction of municipal building at B'burg

Richard Bell, re-appointed Chief of Police

Taxpayers' O.K. sought for loan on sewers, water

(Our District Correspondent)

Brownsburg — At one of the liveliest sessions on record, the Brownsburg Council was confronted with a program covering such unscheduled subjects as "How to conduct a meeting in total darkness."

The minutes of a previous meeting were read and adopted without too much difficulty, since the only item of consequence dealt with the hiring of Richard Bell as chief of police. (This is the same Mr. Bell previously employed by the municipality a few years ago.)

Property owners from the new Woodbine Avenue extension attended the meeting, as has been their practice for some time now, to push their request for water and sewerage. The problem was not solved, but steps were taken to determine whether the town would or would not help the situation. By-law 117, which covers the borrowing of money for the project, was adopted by Council, and taxpayers will be given the opportunity to express their opinions at a public meeting to be held on Monday, April 27, between 7 and 10 p.m. If more than 10 property owners show up to voice objection to the by-law, a referendum will be held to determine the wishes of the entire taxpaying public of the town. When questioned later, Councilor Georges Therrien said that the amount of money required for the project would not increase the taxes — a point on which a lot of the local citizens may well base their decisions.

Council also adopted By-law 118, which would authorize the town to borrow $60,000 for the building of a new town office building. No one was heard to say that this item would not mean a tax increase, but the opinion was expressed that "certainly the town needs a building in which to conduct its affairs". The town secretary and chief of police are presently located in an old house owned by C-I-L.

Just when Council began to warm to the subjects under discussion, the power failure occurred and a few humorous comments resulted. However, the tension was not eased by the interruption, and began to build once more when the lights came on again. A discussion on new streets and their acceptance as town property, led to stern comments regarding the installation of sewerage systems on streets before the municipality had taken them over. Mayor Donaldson's views differed sharply from those of the other council members, and it was probably this difference which set the stage for the "drama" which unfolded subsequently.

Among the items of correspondence in the secretary's files were three tenders submitted by contractors for the construction of a town hall. When the subject was mentioned by Secretary Vincent Charbonneau, Councillor Georges Therrien asked that the tenders be examined and discussed. Mayor James Donaldson objected to the request, stating that they were not complete, in that they did not all comply with the conditions decided upon by Council. A verbal battle ensued between Mr. Donaldson and Mr. Therrien, with the mayor declaring that he was terminating the meeting and Councillor Therrien maintaining that this could not be done. While Councillor Gerald Vowles searched the municipal code for this information, Mr. Therrien left the council room to phone the town's legal advisor. He returned in a few minutes and stated that he had been advised that the mayor could not adjourn the meeting. Mayor Donaldson wanted to be sure of this point, so he subsequently departed for a telephone call to the legal advisor. Since he was absent for some time, Mr. Therrien as pro-mayor continued as chairman of the assembly. After some few minutes, Mayor Donaldson returned and agreed that he could not end the session, but stated that he was not returning to the table, and promptly pulled up another chair and sat down among the visitors.

Mr. Therrien, a bit nervous but determined to proceed with the business as efficiently as possible, asked the councillors to examine the tenders and voice their wishes regarding the need for further discussion before accepting the bids. With the desire for further study it was decided to put off a decision until the following Wednesday. . . This decision was duly reached, and the tender submitted by Hilaire

District official pays visit to Lions Club

At a well attended meeting last week in "La Lorraine", the Lachute Lions Club was visited by Deputy District Governor Bill Adams, from Greenfield Park.

In the Lions International calendar, April is designated "Identification Month" — a time to assess the club's role in the community, the performance of its membership, and the application of its ideals. The visitor spoke upon this theme, emphasizing the requirements of a clubman, and especially of those nominated to office, where "popularity is less important than a willingness to roll up the sleeves," he said. President Keith Clarke (who chaired the meeting) and Secretary Jos. Santini were both complimented as fully meriting the qualifications in this club.

The speaker was introduced by Leopold Carriere and thanked by Dr. Eric Mongeon, who tendered a gift in recognition of the Deputy Governor's interest in this area of Lionism.

During the evening one of this year's newcomers, Florent Proulx, was commended on his success with the Minor Hockey program, which he had taken over in mid-season on short notice.

The Lachute group is sponsoring a new Lions Club at Mont Laurier, Que., and attendance at the charter night on April 26 was solicited by Jos. Dumais, dean of the project — who is also organizing an educational visit to the Ste. Therese Seminary for members and their wives on April 20.

A song session was led by Lion Hal Joyce.

Shoe plant closed at Hawkesbury

Hawkesbury — The Marc V Footwear Co. at Hawkesbury has ceased production, leaving 64 persons jobless. The factory had been in full operation for only three months.

The announcement was made by Marc Petreault, president, after a meeting with officials of the Hawkesbury industrial investment association. The association, by selling shares to local people, built the factory last year at a cost of $110,000.

Mr. Petreault said high cost of operations and training unskilled operators were the financial reasons the factory failed.

He said his parent company, La Diva Shoe Co. Ltd., St. Jerome, Que., would continue paying rent. The company signed a buy-rent contract with the association to pay for the building over a 20-year term.

Reeve Marc Geline, chairman of the investment group, said shareholders should not worry about their money since the company has guaranteed the rent. The group foresees the possibility of sub-leasing the building to another industry.

Another hold-up Ste. Scholastique bank branch

Montreal — A $2,000 bank hold-up occurred last Wednesday in Ste. Scholastique, at the same bank office where three holdup men were killed in a gun battle with police in May, 1962. This is the fourth time in less than 10 years that the bank has been robbed.

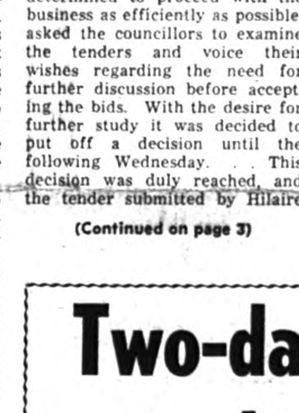

The holdup took place about 10 a.m., when four hooded men entered the Banque Canadienne Nationale, forcing the employees and a customer into a washroom and absconding with the cash. Police said one of the bandits fired a shot into the floor before leaving.

According to the manager, Gaetan Gervais, the haul would not exceed $2,000. A customer, Clément Legault, described the bandits as between 17 and 20 years of age. Only one was wearing a mask.

At the same bank in 1962, three robbers were shot down on the steps of the building. Two died there, the third in hospital. Det.-Capt. Marc Maurice of the Montreal Police Department, one of the ambush squad tipped off to the holdup, was wounded. He recovered and is back on duty.

Car drivers have no difficulty determining when spring has arrived. Young cyclists, weaving perilously in the traffic, and sometimes with two aboard, have added to the hazards of town thoroughfares. We recommend — supervision on the part of police and parents — added care on the part of motorists.

Two-day commission inquiry held on dismissal of police chief

A hearing was held at the Council hall last Wednesday and Thursday by Justice John F. Sheehan, of the Quebec Department of Municipal Affairs, in which Jean-Louis Hébert, ex-police chief, was plaintiff against the municipality, over his dismissal from office.

In the judicial inquiry, Lachute Town was represented by Roger Lagarde, QC, and the attorney for Mr. Hébert was Gérard Lévesque, QC, of Quebec City. Twenty witnesses were heard.

Mr. Hébert was discharged on a 7-out-of-9 vote of the councillors last February, by reason of complaints within the police department. Mayor Dave Campbell and Ald. Linton Armstrong were principal witnesses for the Town. Their testimony showed that (1) the chief had refused to wear his uniform; (2) police reports were inadequately recorded and incomplete; (3) there was lack of discipline in the police force; (4) there was ill feeling between the chief and his staff. Also, according to Ald. Laurier Carrière, who had proposed the chief's dismissal, the latter had himself stated he would prefer to serve as sergeant rather than as chief of the force.

The witnesses admitted, on a question from Mr. Hébert's lawyer, that no organization, society, charitable or religious group had ever complained of Chief Hébert's services. Pressing his argument further, Lawyer Lévesque pinned the trouble on a three-man conflict, with the Mayor and Ald. Armstrong on one side and Chief Hebert on the other. He even suggested that Mayor Campbell had stated he would like to replace Hebert with another chief, of English language — which the Mayor vigorously denied.

Previously, William Phillips, of the Phillips Investigation Bureau, stated that he had thought of replacing Mr. Hébert in his office as chief, but during the latter months of the Bureau's jurisdiction he had felt satisfied with the chief even though he had the impression the police reports were made out by someone else.

Mme Yvette Raymond, the town secretary, Ald. Laurier Carrière, Yvon Larocque, the police clerk, and Cst. Jean-Marie Beauregard were all heard in the first day of the hearing, testifying to differences between themselves and the chief on matters of police service.

Second Day's Proceedings

Meeting again on Thursday morning, the inquiry continued with evidence of police personnel, indicating personal jobs delegated to them which were not regular police duties, involving also use of the police car, and the chief's lack of interest in cases requiring attention. Also, being asked by the chief to punch his time-card when he was not there.

Ald. François Charlebois was the first witness heard on behalf of the plaintiff, Mr. Hébert. According to him, this was the first police chief who had not been subject to public criticism; the Council had even received letters commending his good service.

Former Lachute Police Chief Jean-Louis Hébert

At a caucus in December 1963, Ald. Charlebois had voted for dismissal of the chief because, according to Mayor Campbell, his impaired health prevented the normal fulfillment of his job. However, at a subsequent meeting, this was not the reason given; according to the Mayor and the police commissioner, it was a case of incompetence. Also, according to the Mayor (this witness stated), if the chief did not go, the police committee were going to hand in their resignation. . . Considering these reasons not sufficient, Ald. Charlebois then voted against the chief's dismissal. Ald. J. O. Desjardins had also voted with him, opposing the measure.

A former councillor, Alphonse Thibodeau, also asserted that the population, and himself as a member of the commission for one year, had found nothing to complain of, either in the attitude or the services of Chief Hébert.

Ald. Desjardins corroborated these opinions on behalf of the deposed chief, adding that Mr. Hébert had complained of having to work up to 72 hours a week. Ald. Desjardins claimed there were not enough policemen, their work hours were too long, and they received no encouragement whatever. He felt that there had been no personal animosity between the chief and members of the Council.

Here, Gabriel Valois, treasurer and a director of the Chamber of Commerce, asked to be heard as an authorized spokesman of the Chamber's executive. . . The populace, he said, seemed to be well satisfied with Mr. Hébert's services while he was at the head of the police department; there was an improvement in traffic at peak hours; the school crossing patrols were initiated; there was ready co-operation with the church authorities on special occasions. Mr. Hebert was always affable with the public, and everyone had the impression he was efficient, honest and devoted to his job.

Ald. Nelson Lepage admitted there had been no meeting of the police committee for a year past with exception of last December, when Mr. Hébert's dismissal came up.

Chief Testifies

Called to testify on his own behalf, ex-Chief Hébert stated he had been a hospital patient for three periods in the past year; altogether he had been absent about a month. He had never attended police committee meetings because he had never been invited; he had never refused orders of the mayor, of Mr. Armstrong, or of the secretary. He had requested several items, including copies of the Criminal Code, but had never been able to get them.

Mayor Campbell and Mr. Armstrong (he said) had asked him to tender his resignation the day after his first return from hospital, on the grounds that he was sick too often. He asked for a week's delay, then finally, feeling

Ayersville referendum today on water tax

Today (Wednesday) the tax payers of Ayersville are voting on a proposed water tax of $30 a year.

As regards water consumption in the municipality, it was decided at the last Council session to have the meters checked at the intakes from the Lachute system. According to Councillor Laurent Brasseur, the rate of usage reaches 560 gallons daily per household, or 17,000 gallons monthly — which is a fantastic figure. At this rate of consumption it would cost the municipality over $30,000 a year.

Council Affairs

At the same Council sitting for April, with Mayor Gaston Plamondon presiding, it was decided to request the Lieutenant-Governor of the Province to appoint a new councillor, to fill a vacancy caused by the resignation of Albert Richer. . . Nomination for the seat was supposed to have been made at a special meeting held recently, but in the lack of a quorum, the prescribed time had elapsed, and it was now necessary to take this procedure.

Messrs. Chas. E. Gauthier, Allan Hay and Georges Champagne were appointed as valuators. The proposal to establish a valuation role on a scientific basis was shelved for this year, since it would involve a cost of $8,000 to $10,000.

An account of $1,403 from A. D. Whissell was referred to the legal advisor, Roger Lagarde, Q.C.

Mtre. Lagarde was also to be consulted on a proposed by-law for Duvernay Street, together with residents of that street. Terms of the by-law and incidental questions will be discussed.

Councillor Edgar Cyr was appointed pro-mayor for a three-month period, and a building permit was granted to Léo Cyr.

Witness held for inquest in taxi murder

Dr. Louis Paradis, district coroner for Deux Montagnes, will hold inquest on the death of Tony Ladansky, taximan, whose body was found in a ditch near St. Hermas last week. Ladansky, 42 years of age, was the victim of a knifing assault, and his blood-stained taxi was subsequently found in the CNR gravel pit at St. Andrews. The inquest will be held Friday evening in St. Eustache.

On Thursday last, April 9, at 8.30 p.m., police are reported to have received a telephone call from a 19-year-old Montrealer, who reported he was hiding in a vacant cottage belonging to his family, not too far distant from the location of the blood-stained taxi.

Local Q.P.P. officers, who had been searching the area for several days with three police cars, rushed to the spot, and after the young man had made a statement, he was taken into custody. It is believed that blood-stained clothing and a knife the police had been searching for, were also found in that vicinity, in a hidden club-bag.

The youth was questioned locally and later transferred to Montreal, where (it is believed) he is being held without bail.

No charges have been laid, pending results of the inquest.

C.P. Express truck service to Brownsburg

Brownsburg — Chamber of Commerce authorities here have been informed by Vincent Drouin, M.P. for Argenteuil-Deux Montagnes, that the C.P.R. truck service has been extended to Brownsburg Village — following lenthy representations over the past two years initiated by Robt. Matte, president of the local Chamber. From now on, the express truck will make the trip daily from Lachute, to pick up and deliver shipments, without charge for this extension of service.

This improvement is seen as a great convenience and business incentive, which will benefit the people of Brownsburg and district considerably.

Three Lions Club student speakers win eliminations

The Lions Club protegés who entered regional eliminations of the students' oratory contest last Saturday, featuring 18 competitors at St. Lambert, excelled themselves — taking three first-place awards. Successes were scored by the following students:

1st, French-speaking girls — Hélène Desforges, of St. Alexandre School.

1st, French-speaking boys — Paul Lamarche, of l'Ecole Supérieure.

The local entrants were accompanied by President Keith Clarke and Lion Paul Deslauriers, committeeman on the public speaking contest here this year.

The three successful speakers will try their luck again this Saturday in broader competition for the District honors, and if successful, will proceed May 2 to the eastern Lions Clubs finals at Port Hope, Ont.

Drama program is enjoyed by audience at Brownsburg

Brownsburg — This past Saturday afternoon, an audience of school pupils and adults were thrilled by the performance of the Laval West Elementary School players, at the High School in Brownsburg.

The drama festival began with the play "High Windows", an enthralling mystery dealing with the suicide (or murder) of a wealthy tycoon. His wife had not yet collected his insurance as the company suspected he had not fallen from the high window. Linda Beauchamp playing the widow, now confined to a wheel-chair, gave a flawless performance. The audience was kept guessing until the end of the play as to whether or not her nephew Peter Kalms would be accused of the murder. The play ends dramatically with the crippled widow walking stiffly toward the high window calling her husband's name.

"Midsummer Night's Dream" set a different tempo. The scenery was moved on and off the stage by the players as it was in Shakespeare's time. The audience laughed hilariously at the comedy of the four players and their leader as they tried to entertain the duke and his duchess with their homespun play. This writer's impression was that James Hicks who played "Bottom" stole the show with his fluent quoting of Shakespeare's lines and his comedy acting.

The last of the three items presented, "H.M.S. Pinafore", made the best impression on the audience. Last week this part of the program was filmed, to be shown on television this fall. The colorful costumes of the sailors, the captain, the admiral and his retinue of ladies combined well with the giant hand-painted backdrop of a ship and the ocean. Mrs. M. Manning, music specialist of the Lake of Two Mountains schools, had the soloists blending well with the large chorus of sailors. Trevor Whitehead as the captain, Michael Edwards as the admiral, Cheryl Crossman as "Buttercup", and Sharon Bradford as the sailor who loved the captain's daughter, sang their solos with volume not expected of so young performers.

The actors of all three plays gave such energetic performances that the audience appeared to be held spellbound until it could burst forth with applause at the end of each play. Mr. Young, the principal, Mrs. J. Krupski and Mrs. P. Gupta, the drama coaches, Mrs. M. Manning, the music teacher, and all others who helped produce such a creditable performance are to be congratulated for their efforts.

Argenteuil Outdoors

A column for the sportsman

— By BOB ATCHISON —

Just when things looked optimistic for our ducks and their nesting, the prospects receive a real jolt. Most of you duck men know of the sanctuary in the Ottawa River, on Carillon or Decarie Island. This has been sold for the purposes of housing developments and a golf course. Carillon is the largest of a group, and was heavily used by migrant birds both in the spring and fall. On top of this, thousands of them nested in the area. Why all this is happening I don't know, but I'm sure going to try and find out.

The Federal Government is the authority in this area, and I wonder just how much they know of this transaction. Certainly Dr. Munro, of the Canadian Wildlife Services, should know of this, so maybe I can get some information from him on why this has been allowed. With a development like this every waterbird will be chased, either by boats or by shooters living on the island. With some 500 houses on the place, it won't take long for this particular spot to be cleared out. On top of this, the draining of marshes, building of roads, a ferry and so on — nothing will stay around, for sure.

If this property had been sold to someone interested in the safekeeping of game, then it could be understood. However, with a strictly commercial outfit I'm afraid not too much thought will be given to conservation. The promoters are interested in money, so they cannot be expected to think of much else. I don't suppose much interest has been shown either by the politicians who must have known of this deal. I wonder, have we become so callous in the making of money that we can forget our natural heritages in the quest of it? Somehow or other I don't think we, the majority, have. . . Certainly Dr. Munro should be able to give some answers.

Last Monday morning walking the road towards town, I was entertained all the way by the birds. The noise of their singing was something to hear. Maybe I've a lively imagination, but after I've listened to sounds like this, I begin to hear things. At times, it seemed these sounds were almost deafening, as if some huge choir was sounding off. It was one of my gladdest experiences in a long time. I could just imagine some of our great composers used this kind of melody to score some of their immortal works.

O.K. boys, don't get hot under the collar, fishing is not too far away, even though this past month has been the slowest in a long time. I am not alone in this either; judging by the numbers of rods brought in to be repaired, a great many people are feeling this way. An enthusiast who ice-fishes around the Memphremagog area during the winter, informed me he has the best catches from these pickled or dehydrated grubs, every time out. I have heard this before, but cannot say I have had too much luck with them, except early in the trout season with a small hook. He also told me of a small rubber or plastic bait used, that imitated the newt; this also seemed to be very good, but it was hard to obtain from any of the stores.

The new Remington carbine is now on the market. I was looking it over the other day — a real nice gun, 2 inches shorter than any other carbine; certainly a lot lighter; easily sighted, with the rib along the barrel (this also helps dissipate the heat if you are going in for rapid fire). The bolt does not seem to have the long drag-back of some other models, and I think this will allow a lot faster loading. Made in the 222, 35 and 308 calibers, this should just about cover all types of shooting. I had been asked about other calibers, but have been given to understand these are the only ones going to be made, unless of course you want a custom-made outfit, which will cost plenty.

While on the subject of guns, I think I should give the parents a little advice. There have been a number of questions about the 177 calibers, and should parents buy them for their children? From what I know of some of these rifles, no youngster should be allowed to have one. Believe me, these things are killers. The unfortunate thing is they can be bought almost anywhere. I had never paid much attention to them until just recently, when an acquaintance bought one, and talking later of the damage one of these things could do, I became very interested. Everything he told me was very true. In one case at 30 feet, shots were fired right through a ¾-inch piece of plywood. Any firearm that can do this would most certainly kill a person at 75 feet. Almost noiseless, they sure are a wicked weapon in the hands of a careless user.

This also applies to the bows on the market. A youngster should never be allowed to have these things — yet, to keep the kids happy, parents have allowed them. When you consider a 40-pound-pull bow is not too difficult for a lad to handle — then take a broadhead arrow and let him out in a field with it — and death to someone or something, is imminent.

Most of the rivers and lakes are beginning to show signs of breaking up; black slushy ice is evident all over the place. So no smart person will try and use this type of ice. The Ottawa River has broken in a number of places, likewise the North River, so it won't be too long now.

I have been told of geese seen in some of the fields this past week. Could it be the ones that were spotted weeks ago heading north, which have been staying around without being seen? This sounds logical; two weeks ago, at least two flocks were seen, and at that time I would presume all the water up north would be well iced, so there would be no place for them to set down. True, they can do this on land; but as a rule this bird does not like to roost during the night on land and will do almost anything to avoid this. I can remember the swamps on Main Duck Island being covered with them, even though there was no space left for anything else. Some of them did roost on land, I'll admit, but they knew they were protected in this area.

P.S. — During the current week, several large flocks of geese have been seen in passage northward. On Monday a number estimated around 50 settled down overnight at Hill Foot, taking off again next day.

A lot of black squirrels may be seen around, and they must have had a very good winter. Fat and sassy they look. Not too many reds are in evidence. A raccoon, too, was spotted the other evening during the snow storm; I guess he was mixed up in a big way.

I mentioned rabies last week, and I want to repeat the subject. I have been asked if birds are subject to this infection. The answer to this is no, a bird is not a fur-bearing animal. But (remember this) a bat can carry rabies. Only fur-bearing types are capable of carrying this disease, according to biologists, and they should know. The smallest fur-bearing animal in the country is capable of giving it; so keep this in mind too, when you go after a rat. If in doubt about anything like this, get in touch with your doctor or veterinarian, and he'll know just what to do.

One last word. I'm still being asked how do you learn to fly-cast. The best thing to do in this case is to come on down and take a couple of lessons; won't cost you anything, and you could have a lot of fun. (Incidentally, you won't need equipment; I have plenty.)

LACHUTE 1884 CURLING CLUB

Curling is over at the Lachute Curling Club for this season. The Vice-President's bonspiel wound up the activities, with Ian Gordon (skip), Ed McFaul, Leonard Gain and Don Maxwell winning in the finals from Dick MacLean (skip), Bill White, Jim Hay and Lester Cheslock.

During last week a team from Lachute was busy in the Montreal West bonspiel. Five games were played, and Lachute won the consolation event. The team started out with Linton Armstrong (skip), Bert Rigg, Dee Graham and Jack MacKimmie. However, Linton Armstrong had to attend the semi-annual meeting of District No. 2 at Ottawa on Saturday, and Art Lobel filled in as skip. The final game was an exceptionally tight contest, with our boys winning 4 to 3 (with three dead ends) in a 10-end game. This was a wonderful game to win.

Linton Armstrong, vice-president of District No. 2, chaired the meeting at Ottawa on Saturday, April 11. This meeting was followed by a meeting of the Ottawa Valley Curling Association, which has been in operation now for one year. In certain competitions it was found necessary to have an association act as a go-between looking after the interests of Ottawa Valley curling clubs with respect to the Canadian Branch and the Ontario Curling Association. Linton reports that it appears the newly-formed Ottawa Valley Curling Association has been successful in carrying out the role for which it was formed.

Don Bradley entered a team in the Outremont open bonspiel but lost both games. Art Lobel and Don McFaul each have teams entered to play this week. Win or lose, Outremont is a very fine club to visit. The ties between the Outremont and the Lachute clubs are many, and they treat us, like fond brothers.

There will be a shareholders' meeting of the Lachute Curling Club on Monday, April 27, to transact such business as may be brought forward at the meeting. Then on Wednesday, April 29, the semi-annual meeting of the men's club will be held. Dinner will be served by the women of the Lachute Ladies' Curling Club, followed by the business meeting and the presentation of prizes for the various bonspiels competed for during the winter.

We feel this has been a really good curling season — be sure to attend the closing meeting to say "Au-Revoir" to your curling friends, because in many instances your paths don't cross until the next curling season rolls around.

New look in the sugar bush

Various methods of collecting maple sap are being studied this spring in the Morgan Arboretum at Macdonald College, Ste. Anne de Bellevue. Woodlot specialists are checking results gained with the traditional sap buckets and with different systems of plastic piping. The transportation is just the latest wrinkle in modernizing the old sugar bush.

Maroons downed in finals

The Lachute-Brownsburg Maroons have failed in their bid to win their first playoff championship in the Senior Laurentian League, when they were defeated by the Crabtree Beavers 6-5, last Sunday in Joliette. By this loss, they ended the series, winning two games and losing four. However, they left the ice in Joliette with their heads held high. With a little bit of luck, they might have won this sixth game and force another encounter in Brownsburg. . . But, this was not to be.

The Maroons held a lead of two points throughout most of the game, but could not hang on to it after they were penalized somewhat indiscriminately for a fight in the second period. Leading 4-2 at that time, Roch LaSalle, the burly Beaver defenceman, rammed the goal-keeper, Marcel Paul, heavily to the ice in an unwarranted attack. This action, to no surprise, brought quick reprisal from the Maroons, and in the ensuing fight the locals were assessed three majors and a minor penalty. It was during this interval that the Beavers scored and generally changed the pattern of the game.

Scorers for the Maroons were Maurice Desrosiers with three goals and another sparkling game, Butch Bourgeois and Ken McGibbon with one apiece.

The season is now over for the Maroons. This was a long season. It started October 14 in Ste. Therese and the team played 42 league and playoff games. It was also a rewarding season, for it proved that a combined team of players from Brownsburg, Lachute, St. Andrews and the region, could provide excellent hockey for the Argenteuil fans. It would not be surprising to see such a team challenging for the Allan Cup in the near future. With the growth of minor hockey in the region, the flow of excellent hockey players is assured. Their skill and enthusiasm will undoubtedly improve even more the calibre of hockey in the area. It is hoped that such undertakings as the minor leagues in both Lachute and Brownsburg will not be scuttled for lack of facilities or dedicated people. In this way, senior hockey will flourish, to bring pride to our towns and entertainment for their citizens.

FAMOUS CANADIAN ARMY BADGES

Royal 22e Regiment
(The Van Doos)

A beaver with superimposed wording, "Régiment Canadien-Français" surmounted by the Crown are the main components of the cap badge of the Royal 22e Regiment.

Others are the coat of arms of Quebec province, the figure 22 and a log inscribed with the regimental motto "Je Me Souviens".

The beaver, commonly known for its tenacity and perseverance, was formerly one of Canada's emblems, while the Crown attests to the fact that Her Majesty the Queen is Colonel-in-Chief of the Camp Valcartier, Que., based regiment.

Angl. bowling now concluded

The final play-off game of the Anglican Bowling League was held on Monday, winners being the Swallows (skip, W. Y. Shearsmith) with total points 15, against Sparks, skipped by Mrs. G. Silverson, 12 points.

League games during the year show results as follows: 1st place, Comets (skip, Mrs. C. Lang); 2nd place, Meteors (skip, J. Sewell). These two teams will compete for cup against United and Presbyterian teams at the Anglican Church hall at a later date.

To wind up the league for this season, an enjoyable social evening was spent, prizes awarded and refreshments served.

Enthusiasm displayed at Fishing-Hunting re-opener

The re-opening meeting of Argenteuil Fishing and Hunting Association drew an attendance of around 150 last Friday evening at the K. of C. Hall, Lafleur Street.

Hector Lepage, the president, introduced as guest speaker Germain Serve, of the Molson's Fishing Club, Montreal, who outlined the Molson fishing contest for the coming season and urged all local members to register their catches and enter for the prizes. The required procedure is to fill out a form provided for this purpose, swear to the veracity of the catch before a J.P., and return it to the local club for verification. The new Molson fishing booklets are available on application to the secretary of the local group. . .

Mr. Serve assured the Association directors of full co-operation in the giant fish derby planned for May 16-17.

The year's program was discussed. Following the above-mentioned event, there will be three other fishing contests, a drawing for an aluminum boat, a special program of interest to hunters in the fall, and the final closing soiree.

In the May 16-17 contest, fishermen may register at the Association's bureau set up on J. J. Dupré's property between St. Andrews and Carillon. Registration will continue from 4 a.m. Saturday to 4 p.m. Sunday, with a $1 fee. Entrants may fish on the Ottawa from the southern limit of Argenteuil to the Carillon Dam, also on the North River from St. Andrews to the junction of these two waterways. There will be prizes and trophies valued to at least $1,000.

The treasurer reviewed the financial affairs of the Association, a film was shown, and thanks were extended for the co-operation of Germain Serve, Leonard Bedard and Guy Besner of Molson's, also Roger Lascelles and other supporters.

United bowlers enter semi-finals

Next Monday evening will see the semi-finals of the play-off bowling games, in the United Church league. In the Series A, the league champion St. Pat's led by Gladys Davis won the two-game contest by scores of 9-6 and 9-5, against Mrs. O. Riddell's Bluebirds. The St. David's team (Mrs. Marjorie Armstrong) came from behind to defeat Owen Todd's St. George's 6-8 and 11-6. Series B continued by St. Andrews winning against Young People's 8-7, and the Beavers defeating the Thistles, 10-7.

The semi-finals will start at 7.30 p.m. next Monday, with St. Pat's playing St. David's, and the Beavers versus St. Andrews.

Due to the Community Concert program being held on April 27, the annual banquet of the church bowling league will be held on Tuesday, April 28; the finals will be played on this occasion.

Next Community Concert presents glamorous 20th Century troubadour

The last recital in the Community Concert series this season — Monday evening, April 27, at l'Ecole Secondaire, Lachute — presents something unusual for music lovers of this area, a one-woman show by a "glamorous 20th Century troubadour".

Nina Dova was born in England and raised in the United States. Her father was an actor, and at a tender age she was enrolled as a scholarship student of the famed Neighborhood Playhouse School of Theatre Arts. Gifted with unusual versatility, she started her professional career as actress, dancer and, eventually, singer.

It was during a visit to South Africa that Nina Dova became interested in the guitar and the colorful regional songs of that land. Continuing her travels around the world, she collected songs from their native sources and developed an extensive repertoire of songs in six languages. In 1950, she settled for a stay in Paris, where she studied singing with one of Europe's outstanding teachers. Upon her return to America, she continued her work in the theatre and on radio and television, but had already begun to fascinate her friends with her unique collection of songs. Eventually, the concert stage proved the perfect medium for her voice and guitar. To quote from a recent review, "At once an accomplished singer with a lovely voice, a superb diseuse, and a skilled guitarist, the handsome and magnificently gowned Nina Dova had organized all of her talents into a remarkably diversified one-woman show."

Nina Dova has starred on television in Montreal for several seasons and is a great favorite with Canadians.

W. Institute branch meeting

The Jerusalem-Bethany Women's Institute met April 2 at the home of Mrs. T. Murdoch, joint hostess with Mrs. Foster Campbell.

The president, Mrs. Allan Walker, was in charge and the roll-call, "Say something nice about the person on your right," was answered by 18 members, with two guests present.

The installation of new officers was conducted by the County president, Mrs. C. Stephens, who also gave a report on the semi-annual and board meetings.

Mrs. F. Campbell introduced the guest speaker, Mr. Norman MacGeorge, who gave an interesting talk on the organization of Lachute Fair, which is now 139 years old. He also gave interesting items about various fairs across Canada. Mr. MacGeorge was thanked by Mrs. D. J. Rodgers.

The next meeting will be at Mrs. G. Davidson's on April 30 at 2 p.m., instead of on May 7. Lunch was served in conclusion.

Welcome Centre helps alcoholics

In order to spread the executive work in connection with the anti-alcoholic Welcome Centre in Lachute, the directorate has been enlarged. Those who have accepted duties on the directorate are Paul-Emile Richer and J.-J. Cyr, for the Lachute section; Laurent Brasseur and Leon Cauchon, in Ayersville; and Lucien Durocher and J. B. Ladouceur, in St. Andrews.

With the directors lies the task of approaching those in need of aid. They also are responsible for publicizing the work of the Centre and its needs, so that it may enlist support while also reaching the cases whom its services may benefit.

The movement is in close touch with medical advisors and with broader enterprises like the Dormémy at St. Jerome. Through these means it adopts a psychological approach based on experience and on individual circumstances.

The Welcome Centre is open daily from 1 p.m. to 11 p.m., situated at 165-A Main Street West, Lachute. Information is available by telephone, at LO 2-2291.

APPRECIATION

I wish to extend my sincere thanks to relatives, friends and neighbors for cards, visits and gifts during my stay in hospital as result of a fractured ankle, and after my return home.

Late Mrs. Norman Holland was lady of many accomplishments and interests

Mrs. Normand Holland (Ermina Carpenter), the eldest daughter of the late James Carpenter and his wife Elizabeth Robinson, died suddenly at her residence in Westmount on April 4, in her 83rd year. Funeral service was held in Christ Church Cathedral, Montreal, on Monday, April 6, and interment was in the Lachute Cemetery.

The late Mrs. Holland was well known to many of the older generation hereabouts. Her summer residence was built on the site of the old Carpenter home in Dalesville, where she was born. She was keenly interested in her birthplace, the Dalesville district, and purchased the old Carpenter place some 30 years ago. Her brother Roy owns the adjoining property, once owned by Thomas McFaul.

She took a prominent part in the improvement of the Edina Cemetery, where her great-grandfather and great-grandmother are buried, making a substantial financial contribution to assist in this work. She was a past-president of the Argenteuil Historical Society.

Mrs. Holland was a graduate of the Lachute Academy, and later from the old Normal School in Montreal. In her younger days she was active in the Art Association of Montreal, and in 1920 achieved her goal of having all the paintings she submitted that year shown in the Spring Exhibition, and was also awarded an art scholarship to Europe.

She later took up the writing of poetry, and her work was published in newspapers and poetry magazines across Canada. One of her poems has found a permanent place in the Anthology of Canadian Verse.

An ardent gardener for more than 40 years, she specialized in the growing of roses, and contributed articles on this subject to the Canadian Rose Annual. Some years ago an illustrated article describing her garden at South Lancaster, Ontario, was published in Canadian Homes and Gardens.

Mrs. Holland was keenly active in the I.O.D.E.; she was associated with that organization for 45 years, as a member, and for a time as Regent of the Franklin Hall Chapter. She was also Educational Secretary of the Provincial Chapter I.O.D.E. for 10 years prior to World War II, and from 1939 to 1946 was president of the Provincial Chapter. She had much to do with developing the educational work of the I.O.D.E., which now includes, among other things, a number of $2,000-a-year annual overseas scholarships from each of Canada's 10 provinces.

She was active for a number of years in the Antiquarian and Numismatic Society, which owns and administers the historic Chateau de Ramezay in Montreal, and at the time of her death was vice-president of the women's branch.

Her husband, who predeceased her eight years ago, was widely known as a business leader and philanthropist. She leaves one son, Trevor Holland, in Montreal, and six brothers — Roy, Russell and Theron Carpenter, of Lachute, Thayer, of Halifax, Percy and Ivan, of Montreal.

Contract approved — council affairs at Brownsburg

Binette was approved. Estimated cost of the building — $49,758.38. Other tenders submitted were as follows — Cedar Crest Homes, $55,962.27; O. Laurin and Fils $51,467.00; G. Reddell, $49,758.60.

Secretary Vincent Charbonneau read a letter from a taxpayer who complained that there had been no action taken to rid the streets of wandering canines. The three-page letter cited many instances where the writer (and others) could have been justifiably angry at the dogs (or their owners.) Council was still uncertain as to the proper course to follow, but at the subsequent Wednesday session it was decided that responsibility for the apprehension of dogs would fall to the new chief of police, Richard Bell. In addition, a motion was passed to have public notices printed, covering regulations for dog owners, and distributed to all homes in the town. Chief Bell will also carry out this chore.

Widening rift seen between Quebec and federal Liberals

Quebec (CP) — Relations between the Quebec and federal Liberal parties appeared to reach the crisis stage during last week. There was a widening rift between the two groups.

One of the main differences, it was believed, was Premier Lesage's threat of double taxation when he brings down his budget. He was generally believed preparing to deliver it this Friday, but put it off until a later, unspecified date.

There were reports that the minority Liberal government in Ottawa is worried over the political effect if Mr. Lesage goes ahead with double taxation and puts the blame on Ottawa.

The federal Liberals hold 49 of Quebec's 75 seats and, like any minority government, must have the possibility of snap elections constantly on its mind.

Mr. Lesage met for 90 minutes with J. W. Pickersgill, the federal Transport Minister, during the week. The premier said they discussed "matters of common interest". But it was considered likely Mr. Pickersgill wanted to discuss the double taxation possibility and perhaps offer a solution to the issue.

Mr. Lesage brought up the possibility after the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Conference, saying double taxation may be necessary since Ottawa hadn't turned over any additional taxation powers to the province.

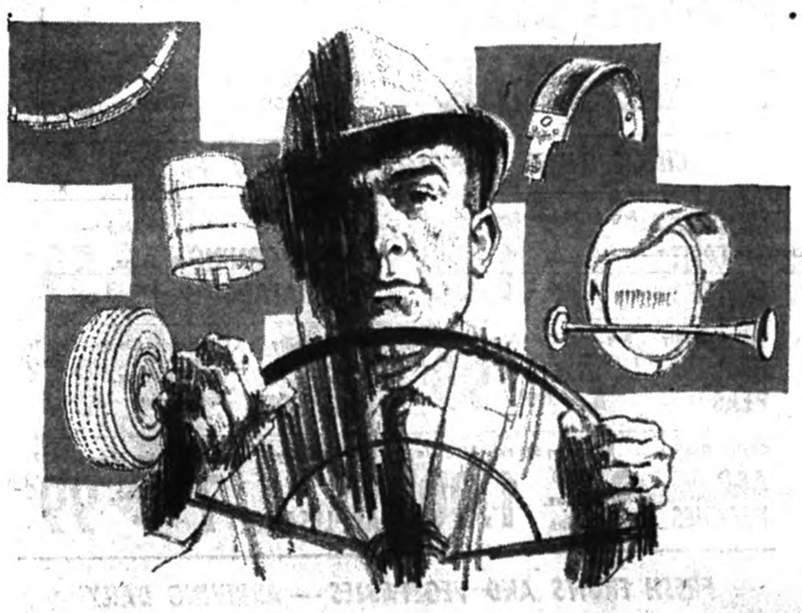

At the same time, the Liberal members of the legislature met in caucus. It is believed, the discussion centred around taxes and the possibility of a final rupture between the federal and provincial wings of the party.

Sections within the Quebec Liberal Federation have been pressing for such a break for at least a year, saying that Quebec and Ottawa's interests are often different and that one political party can't represent both sides of an issue.

Rumors ran rife late in the week when the general council of the Quebec Liberal Federation held a snap meeting in Quebec with only 24 hours notice; about 50 of the 142 members showed up.

Again, it is believed the political ramifications of double taxation and the possibility of a split were discussed. But a four-paragraph communique after the meeting made no mention of this. It merely expressed support for Mr. Lesage's stand at the conference on the matter of pensions, tax-sharing and the federal government's pair of plans to aid education.

Two federal members of parliament said they abstained from voting on the education issue. Mr. Lesage said the plans — one to provide interest-free loans to university students, the other to extend family allowances to students aged 16 and 17 — are unconstitutional. . . Prime Minister Pearson says they aren't and the two federal members — Marcel Prud'homme of Montreal-St. Denis, and Rosaire Gendron of Rivière-du-Loup — were caught between two fires.

The most dangerous part of an automobile

...IS THE DRIVER. Today's modern automobiles are soundly engineered, safe, and remarkably reliable. Modern roads, too, are designed to present the minimum of hazards. Driving only becomes dangerous when fallible human beings come into the picture and, through their human failings, cause accidents.

In a determined effort to cut down the nation's accident toll, the automobile insurance business has dedicated itself to the promotion of highway safety programs and driver training education.

As a part of this extensive program of safety promotion, which includes several nation-wide projects, All Canada Insurance Federation sponsors the Alfred Campbell Memorial Awards, presented annually to Junior Chambers of Commerce conducting the best year-round safety program in their communities throughout Canada.

Mayors support water metering

More and more progressive Quebec municipalities are converting to water metering as a means of paying for water consumption. Interviews were conducted with mayors representing some of the 12 municipalities in the province where water services are fully metered.

"Metering water distribution is the most economical for the community and the fairest for the consumer. This is why we adopted it without hesitation in St. Laurent", says Marcel Laurin, mayor of that booming Montreal suburb. "When water consumption is measured by meter and billed according to the amount consumed, each taxpayer pays only for the amount consumed. He doesn't have to pay for other people's waste.

"By keeping water wastage at a minimum level, meters help to conserve water. When you think that a city such as New York is faced with a serious problem of water shortage, nothing should be neglected in our efforts to conserve our water supply". Mr. Laurin adds that in all municipalities where water meters have been installed, water costs the taxpayers less than under a flat yearly water tax system.

Georges Henri Brossard, mayor of Brossard, where water metering has been in successful operation for the past three years, says it is the best way of charging for, and paying for, water services. "It is fair because you pay only for what you consume, and I can say that Brossard taxpayers are very satisfied with it", says Mr. Brossard.

Fully metered municipalities in Quebec include Brossard; Ville d'Anjou; Ville LaSalle; Pointe aux Trembles; Pointe Claire; Arvida; St. Vincent de Paul; Montreal West; Mount Royal; Preville, Rouyn; Ville St. Laurent.

able to continue his job, decided not to resign. With regard to his time spent in hospital, the two gentlemen had not refused permission, and he never quarreled or argued with any member of the Council.

The time-clock system had been installed by the Mayor, he claimed — while admitting that on a few occasions he had called the office to punch his time-card when driving on his way home after normal working hours.

Decision Pending

Altogether, the hearing lasted 10 hours, and 20 witnesses were called to give evidence. Judge John F. Sheehan, perfectly bilingual, proved an impartial but sympathetic jurist, helping the witnesses on several occasions to express their thoughts. . . The whole case, he declared, was somewhat involved. He thanked the witnesses for their frankness and objectivity. It was now up to the Commission of Municipal Affairs to render judgment. Their decision should be forthcoming within a month.

HOW TO SAVE MONEY

About a week ago my wife remarked, "When you're dressed up you look very nice." I was forced to admit that she was quite right. . . Then she continued, "But the rest of the time you look like a bum!" Again I had to admit the truth of her assertion.

She went on to say that I had to get some new clothes now that spring was just around the corner. I said I would. I could certainly afford it, having saved a great amount of money since the first of the year. Here's how I did it. For example, we attended the Sportsmen's Show in Montreal. I was interested in the exhibits of motor boats, particularly one priced $350. But I didn't buy it. Another one I liked bore a $700 price tag. I didn't buy that one either. That made a saving of $1,050. Passing on to the living trailers, I examined one worth $600 but abstained from buying it, then realizing that another one marked $1,800 would represent a saving of three times the first one, provided I didn't buy it. So with very little effort I figured that I had saved $2,400 by passing up the purchase of both of them.

Then we went downstairs to see the animals from the Granby Zoo. They bore no price tags, but I wondered what the living rhinoceros was worth. Probably much more than both motor boats and both living trailers combined. So I made no effort to buy him. I have an empty wicker basket at home large enough to hold all the money I am likely to save. The amount is growing daily. I love expensive jewelry, but why save a mere $500 by not buying a diamond ring when I can save $1,500 by not buying a diamond neck[illegible]e?

So, to get back to the subject, I agreed to buy some clothes. I made a special trip downtown and came back with a pair of felt inner soles and a pair of shoe laces. I like to look nice when I'm dressed.

Employer's rights

A citizen who took the advice of the Minister of Labor and gave winter work to three men reports that she was considerably annoyed to find them having a coffee-and-cigarette break forty-five minutes after arrival on the premises. She stood up for her rights and ticked them off in a nice way. For the balance of the time they did a day's work for a day's pay.

Virtue, they say, is rewarded: she plied them with a pot of tea from time to time. No one in this day and age wants to act the slave driver, but, by the same token, no one enjoys being put upon and paying for the privilege.

U.C.W. speaker brings inspiration in pictures and talk on Holy Land

An interesting evening was spent by members of the Lachute U.C.W. and their friends, when they held their Easter thankoffering meeting on April 11.

Mrs. Rexford Griffith, vice-president, welcomed visitors and the Rev. Roy Stafford, guest speaker, and Mrs. Stafford, who led the worship service, taking as her theme, "The First Easter Day". Mrs. Stafford said that, after the resurrection, Jesus left his disciples with a task, a message and two promises — "Lo, I am with you alway" and "Ye shall receive power." The task, "Go yet into all the world and preach the gospel," is being fulfilled, as the message is being preached in all but two nations of the world. To prove the fulfillment of this, Mrs. Stafford told of a conference being held in Lebanon, the country which has the most Protestants in the East. In the largest Baptist church in Beirut, they attended a service, where the preacher was from the Baptist church in Moscow and where at first they felt as if they did not belong; but when people from 70 different nations of the world, "all shades from blackest black to white," sang "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name", each in his own language — they felt that they were all part of Christ's Church on earth.

This conference in Lebanon was part of "The Observer Holy-Land Tour," in which the Staffords were members of a party of 40, leaving New York City by jet plane. By means of beautiful slides and Mr. Stafford's word pictures, the gathering became a part of that tour, admiring Hans Christian Andersen's Little Mermaid in Copenhagen harbour and the unusual architecture in a church built of 6,000,000 bricks and made to resemble organ pipes. Stopping at Rome, St. Peter's Church, elaborate monuments, many fountains, and the ruins of Ancient Rome were the attractions. From Cairo, Egypt, the final stop before the Holy Land, the pictures were of the Nile River, the Sphinx and Pyramids, flowering trees and a camel ride for the Staffords.

From Beirut on the Arab side of the Holy Land, the visitors had to cross "No Man's Land", into Israeli, under guard. Before leaving Lebanon, which along with Syria and Jordan is on the Arab side, they visited the up-to-date camps, with clinics and schools, where the U.N. is taking care of Arab refugees who moved out of Israeli. About 25 training schools, where the young people may learn trades, have been built on both the Arab and Israeli sides.

Palestine is now a land of contrasts. The Jews are building up the State of Israel. The city of Tel Aviv is very new and modern. The hillsides are being terraced and planted with fruit trees to stop erosion caused by cutting all the trees in the past; but many pictures were shown which took the audience back to the land where Jesus lived. Most of the Christian churches are Roman Catholic and they have built shrines and churches to commemorate events in the life of Jesus.

Fishermen on the Sea of Galilee, sheep on the shores, the market place in Jerusalem, the Mount of Olives, the Garden of Gethsemane, a garden tomb, fields where the shepherds watched, the town of Bethlehem and the city of Jerusalem — all these pictures made the New Testament seem very real, and most of them do not change much, except the city of Jerusalem, which is now more outside the city wall than inside. The last Sunday morning in the Holy Land was spent at a service, at the garden tomb.

In thanking the Rev. and Mrs. Stafford, Mrs. Edgar Pollock expressed the general feeling when she said, "I almost feel as if I have been there myself." Refreshments were served by Unit 2 of the U.C.W.

APPRECIATION

I would like to express my sincere thanks to all kind relatives for visits, get-well cards and flowers received during my stay in the Argenteuil Hospital.

Tudor Singers heard on CBC

On Monday evening of this week, the Canadian finalists in the Leslie Bell Memorial choir contest were heard in a trans-Canada broadcast over CBC. Five choirs were competing in the final — the far-west represented by a choir from Vancouver, the mid-west from Winnipeg, a church group from Toronto, the Tudor Singers representing Quebec, and the far-east represented by an established choir from Saint John, N.B.

The winner will be announced shortly, and will be featured in an hour's broadcast on CBC, on Monday, May 11.

Local listeners were keyed to hear the various choirs, and competition of these high-calibre vocalists was keen. The Tudor Singers, led by their founder and director, Wayne Riddell, will no doubt receive high rating, since their repertoire included French, Italian and English renditions, while all other choirs confined their selections to one language.

Jehovah's Witnesses

"ALL SCRIPTURE IS INSPIRED OF GOD AND BENEFICIAL"

Is that what you believe? Can you present persuasive evidence that the Bible is indeed the inspired Word of God? Are you able to point to passages in every book of the Bible that are truly beneficial to us in this day?

When the apostle Paul wrote to the young man Timothy and said, "All Scripture is inspired of God and beneficial," he did so with complete confidence. He had no doubt whatsoever that the Holy Scriptures are inspired of God and beneficial in every way for leading the Christian in the way of life. He used those Scriptures freely in teaching. Yet today many have found it difficult to have a firm faith in the Bible. Its sound counsel is often ignored. Why? Not because the Bible has been proved wrong, but because few people really know much of what it contains.

It is vital that all who love life and want to serve Jehovah God know his Word and have unshakable faith in it. To enable you to do just that, we heartily recommend the 352-page book "ALL SCRIPTURE IS INSPIRED OF GOD AND BENEFICIAL." In it you will find valuable background information and evidence in confirmation of the authenticity of each Bible book. One at a time, the books of the Bible are epitomized and principal ideas are highlighted, particular attention being directed to the practical value of these inspired Scriptures. Forcefully it demonstrates that the Bible is truly one harmonious Book, each part related to the whole. Reading this study aid will vastly enlarge your knowledge of the Scriptures and strengthen your conviction that they are inspired of God.

Obtain your copy by sending just $1, or ask any one of Jehovah's Witnesses you may meet, anywhere.

EDITORIAL NOTES...

"In this Parliament are three Estates, the Lords Spiritual, the Lords Temporal and the Commons, but in the Reporters' Gallery yonder sits a Fourth Estate more important far than all."
— Edmund Burke

Fish and fowl and living creatures

AS PRESIDENT of the Quebec Federation of Fish and Game Associations, Manny R. Wilson, a leading conservationist and familiar figure in this County, issued a message in support of National Wildlife Week, as follows:

"We can all help in this important task to provide for the future. The natural living places of birds, fish and animals can be destroyed by forest fires, soil erosion and water pollution. Such abuses ruin the beauty of outdoor areas, which become places to avoid, rather than to visit. This needless waste is inflicted on us by people who do not know, or do not care, how to manage our renewable natural resources properly. . . Each year there are more people using those resources. If the public domain of the province, soil, water, forests and wildlife, are to meet the demands of people, there must be properly balanced conservation management for the future."

Further publicity on this annual theme (received late for mention in our editorial message last week) includes opinions from another well known authority in this province, Dr. Gustave Prevost, fish biologist and chairman of the Quebec Water Purification Board. To quote extracts:

"Pure water enhances the other beauties of nature which gratify every man, especially the city man toiling very often in a strenuous atmosphere. . . Because rivers are the property of no one in particular, some people have not objected to their use as sewers, with the result that pollution has kept increasing. Fish, birds and game animals have been killed or driven away. Certain rivers became, in fact, the property of polluters alone, since they could no longer be used for other purposes. . . Too many people fail to recognize that hunting and fishing are of great value in the recreational field, that these activities represent, every year, a turn-over of many millions of dollars. And, even if it were of no monetary value, outdoor recreation has such an influence on the morale of the people that every means must be taken to protect the purity of our waters."

— The protection of our natural resources is a theme for year-round consideration. Our Argenteuil Outdoors column is evidence of our belief that it cannot be stressed too frequently.

Problems of the older segment

THE PROGRESS of medicine has prolonged the duration of human life by about 15 years. But a considerable lag exists between the increase in aged persons and provisions for the welfare of this segment of society.

Speaking on behalf of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of the Province of Quebec, Dr. Armand Rioux says the medical profession is deeply worried about the situation that aged persons must face today.

In 1961, our province had 306,300 persons aged 65 or older (5.8% of the total population). In 17 years, their number will have reached more than 508,000. However, our provincial institutions at present contain only 13,646 beds — instead of the 45,945 immediately needed, considering that 15% of the elderly need help other than financial. "We congratulate the provincial authorities," he stated, "for having grasped the problem and worked actively in the establishment and execution of a master plan. But the fact remains that the situation is tragic and the entire public must become aware of it."

It is of no avail to prolong human life, nor to put individuals in a position to work longer, if society leaves the elderly to themselves, after having condemned them too early to inactivity. It is the opinion of the physicians that Quebec is considerably behind what is being done for the elderly in Ontario, United States and Europe.

In Sweden, for example, the laws assure aged persons of the resources and services needed to live for the longest possible time in their own house, or in hostelries or small dwellings especially outfitted for them. They have housekeeping assistants, visiting nurses, night attendants, hot meals, etc. They defray the costs themselves, thanks to a system of adequate pensions.

Dr. Rioux states that we are not even using the facilities at our disposal to come to the help of the elderly. The Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation can lend up to 90% of the sum of money required to construct dwelling units and hostelries for aged persons. But, for 17 years, no Quebec municipality has wanted to benefit from these facilities — while 59 municipalities in the rest of the country have used them to accommodate 7,268 elderly persons. Only one Quebec society (non-profit) has carried out a dwelling project, while those of other provinces have constructed 146 of them.

It is time for a public realization of this problem, so that opinion may clearly support the quest for a solution.

Confronted by a life expectancy that today is 75 years, we should also ask ourselves whether it is not appropriate to change the present idea of stopping work abruptly, a stop too often harmful. The individual suffers because, by preventing him from working, we deprive him of indispensable means of continuing to lead a healthy life. Society is also a loser here, in skill and experienced labor.

Bicephalous strategies

"A BICEPHALOUS department" was the colorful description applied to the federal Department of Agriculture in the budget debate by Remi Paul, M.P. The rarely used word means two-headed, and it was Mr. Paul's contention that the government has one farm policy for the East and another for the West, and that the two often operate at odds to one another.

Somewhat the same line of criticism was applied by the Quebec member to the government's policy on unemployment. Despite the fact that 9.2 per cent of Quebec's workers are jobless, said Mr. Paul, the government is contributing to unemployment there by permitting an increase in imports of clothing and textiles from Asia.

There is no doubt that Ottawa is under extreme pressure, particularly from Japan and Red China, to give foreign textile producers an even larger share of the Canadian market. But Ottawa cannot separate its policy on imports from its problems with unemployment. The Asian manufacturers should be satisfied with the concessions they have received to date.

Viewpoints and perspectives

THE OSWALD CASE still is a subject of comment. "Editor & Publisher", a journal interested particularly because of the reportorial aspect of the aftermath of the assassination of the President of the United States, reports that the Dallas police decided to take the risk of exposing Oswald to view because they wanted the reporters to see that Oswald did not have fresh bruises or cuts. Oswald should have been kept away from curiosity seekers. His attempted transfer to a better jail than the police station was probably due, as much as anything else, to the vanity of the chief police officer or sheriff in Dallas.

METRIC MEASURE MOOTED. — It could be in Canada's interest as an exporting nation to think seriously about changing to the metric system of measurement, writes Jack Schreiner in The Financial Post. Reason is that in the last 40 years, according to a National Research Council study, many countries have adopted the metric system but none has switched to the inch-pound or English system used in Canada, U.S. and Britain. Many Canadian professional engineers already favor the metric system, if only because it is easy to work with. At its recent annual meeting, the Association of Professional Engineers of Ontario organized a panel discussion on metrics to stir additional interest in the subject.

Country Notebook

By WALKER RILEY,

The other day, I found myself in the middle of a discussion on grinding hay. A feed mill operator was trying to convince one of his customers that he was wasting time, energy and money putting hay through a hammermill. The customer was just as sure that hay ground finely, mixed with the dairy ration, would save on concentrates. I couldn't give an answer then, but I have been digging up information since. This is what I find.

When hay is ground, cows eat more, but less of it is digested. It may result in increased milk production if they are on an all-roughage diet, but the butterfat test goes down. On complete rations, grinding makes little difference to milk flow.

In practice, it seems to me that a few hundred pounds of ground hay isn't going to make much difference one way or another. But certainly, it won't replace grain pound for pound. And no one is likely to put a whole mow of hay through the hammermill at present machinery and power costs.

But perhaps the day of automation is ahead. We may be feeding our cows little wafers of ground hay complete with added concentrates, molasses, minerals and everything else. It sounds almost like a breakfast cereal.

Do you grow a few raspberries and find the weeds discouraging. "Simazine controls weeds well in raspberries if the soil is moist at the time of application and free of established weeds. It kills weeds as they emerge, and two applications can keep the planting clean for the entire season. Apply 1 to 2 pounds of the active ingredient per acre in about 30 gallons of water. Direct the spray at the bases of the canes. Uniform coverage of the soil is essential. Cultivate just before the second application.

"To control couch grass and other grasses, use dalapon at 1 pound of product per 15 gallons of water but no more than 3 pounds of the product should be applied per acre of area treated each season. Apply it in the spring when the grass is growing vigorously. Spray only the grassed areas and keep the spray off the raspberry foliage and young canes."

This is some of the very useful information given in a new bulletin "Growing Red Raspberries in Eastern Canada". If you would like a copy, we would be pleased to send you one, or write directly to the Information Branch, Canada Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

The recommended varieties are listed in a separate leaflet. Latham is still the standard for a late crop, and Trent for early season in Quebec. Tweed and Newbury are listed for special areas, and Comet, Willamette and Carnival for trial only.

It seems to me that berries could be an excellent sideline on a farm. It would give the youngsters a chance to earn more for themselves during the holiday, too.

If you are on organic soil, this release from the Canada Department of Agriculture station at St. Jean will interest you. They found that the wireworm population was high in grass fields in Southwest Quebec last fall, which could mean trouble ahead for vegetable growers.

Early June and the fall are the critical periods. Both Departments of Agriculture publish plant protection guides for vegetable crops.

Although this release didn't mention it, wireworms can cause havoc in grain and corn fields, too, especially those ploughed out of sod. Treating seed with an insecticide such as aldrin is cheap insurance.

(Letter to the Editor)

"I MIGHT BE WRONG"

As I seldom read syndicated columns, finding them often only a rehash of general news followed by an opinion that sounds so absolute, I have to admit that the title "The Split Grows Wider" intrigued me very much and confirmed my above expressed feelings. Bi-culturalism, linguism or whatever you call it, interests me very much, yet I can watch it with the most detached feelings, as I am a bi-lingual continental immigrant from way back, that always saw a clash between English and French, at periods a little more evident and really most blatant at the top of our so-called elite. The average workingman has accepted the fact that we have French, English and other ethnic groups trying hard to make a living, always seeking to improve the lot for their children.

English Canadians, especially in Quebec, have to wake up and take notice that this turmoil in Quebec is really a self-assertion of the French Canadians of their way of life right at home, and that a lot of this separatist noise is made and generated by a very intellectual group of young people, that want to be recognized by the rest of Canada without having to use another language than their own to communicate their thoughts. I have to admit that it is high time they let us know in a more logical form what their aims are, as even our politicians don't seem to remember from one year to another what they stumped the country for. All is so hazy.

Now, when the St. Jean Baptiste Society wants to turn Montreal into a French Metropolis, we have to take such aims with a grain of salt; furthermore, I think that the unilingual endeavor was misunderstood by your writer, as, at the time, I read the dispatch mentioning only French atmosphere. Unfortunately French Canadians fall today for the same gag as our English Canadians did until recently. Do you remember that anything "old country" English, Scottish or Irish was always considered better than the home-grown variety and how we aped them in a silly colonial way? Today our French Canadians are doing the same thing, falling back on France, in many ways a country alien to them. Surely I hope that that lovely idyllic "image" of our French Canadian way of life, as we lived with it until only too recently, has disappeared, but the newer form of French Canadian culture is more home-bred than most of our English Canadians want to understand. Just look at their achievements in the visual arts, that don't need a translator — whereas oral art demands that one speaks the language of its origin, not just the kitchen variety.

Now as to regionalism, I would think that such a mentality is always existing in every country. Even that great monolith to the south has different ways of life from coast to coast, and different political as well as economical aspirations. Up here in Canada we were too long asleep and let us dull into a mediocre feeling of uniformity. Let's have a little competition, culturally, between East and West, yet never forget that coincidence made us all Canadians, some English and some French-speaking.

Medicare Is The Issue

By RAY ARGYLE

Ray Argyle

Next week's general election in Saskatchewan is of national importance because of the effect it will have on government medical care insurance throughout Canada.

The New Democratic Party, which still prefers to use the old CCF label in Saskatchewan, believes it has made a success of medicare and that it will comfortably win re-election in the April 22 voting.

As every other provincial government has been returned to power in the past 18 months, Premier Woodrow Lloyd is banking that the country's general prosperity will prove a big assist to his regime, too.

In a brief swing I made through Saskatchewan at the start of the campaign, I saw little sign of the bitterness that enveloped the province when the CCF-NDP government launched its medicare program in the summer of 1961.

The medical profession remains divided. But even such an astute politician as former Federal Agriculture Minister Alvin Hamilton predicts re-election of the Lloyd government.

The CCF-NDP will benefit from a split opposition, with Liberals running a full slate of 59 candidates and the Conservatives almost as many. There is no Liberal Conservative "saw-off," as some anti-government sources had hoped for. There also is a sprinkling of Social Credit candidates.

The fight is between the CCF-NDP and Liberals. The government had 34 supporters in the old 55-seat legislature facing a line-up of 21 Liberals. The legislature has been expanded to 59 seats with new seats in Regina and Saskatoon.

If Saskatchewan voters return the government to a sixth term in office — and the odds seem to favor this — there is no doubt that Saskatchewan's lead in medicare will be followed by other provinces.

Such a result also would hasten the arrival of a national medicare program operated from Ottawa in co-operation with the provinces. This has been the story of government-sponsored hospital insurance — also pioneered by Saskatchewan.

In fact, if the federal Liberals are able to get the Canada Pension Plan in operation by the next federal election, medicare will probably be a main plank in the platforms of all parties.

What is the record of medicare in Saskatchewan?

In 1963, more than 95 per cent. of the population was covered, at an average cost of $22.05 per beneficiary. This was less than expected, and as a result premiums have been cut in half. About two-thirds of the population actually received medical care under the plan, and doctors' incomes rose to a record level.

These are facts which medicare opponents are having great difficulty overcoming in the present Saskatchewan campaign.

Teach your child to share

— By NANCY CLEAVER —

Have you ever heard of a mother who suggested the older sister take a knife and divide a particularly large red apple in two pieces so that the two sisters could both enjoy it? When the mother noticed one part of the apple much larger than the other she added, "You have had the fun of cutting it. Now give your sister first choice of the piece she wants."

Sharing generously with others is difficult enough for grown-ups, and for children, dividing up fairly is usually hard. It is not an inherited social grace, but one which is acquired gradually.

There is a discipline in living with others. An only child has a much harder time learning to share than the boy or girl with brothers and sisters. In a family, children quickly see that better times are enjoyed by everyone if there is fair play and dividing up.

A child of three or four should have the opportunity to play with other children his own age. It is not so hard for him to begin to learn to take turns at this stage in a small, intimate Nursery School. The kindergarten or First Grade child who has led a very solitary life in the company of adults, finds it extremely difficult to substitute "ours" for "my" or take turns gracefully with play equipment.

The young child two years or younger is a real individualist. He doesn't care about another child's feelings. If he is not watched, in a moment of anger in his play, if the other youngster should snatch a toy from him, he will likely hit the other child.

Parents are setting too high a standard if they expect their two-year-old gladly to share his toys. He is quite happy playing by himself. Engaging in "parallel" play alongside the other child he does not need any give and take.

Only as he gets to be three or four does he enjoy playing with other children so much that he can see the point of co-operating by taking turns. Sharing is learned very slowly. It is harder for some children than others — and even some adults never master this lesson.

Many mothers are inclined to watch their child's play too closely. Unless a child is being hurt or in real need of adult assistance, better leave the small ones alone if they are around the same age. They will work out their own way of understanding.

If mother insists too often that Junior share his favorite plaything such as a tricycle at too early an age, what happens? Junior is confused and resentful. He may become the sort of child who does not know how to stand up for his own rights, a "Cry-baby" or "Mother's Boy."

If there is quite an age difference between youngsters who are sharing a plaything, then the stronger, older child is tempted to take advantage of the younger.

A father took his two boys in the car to a hill so they could try out the new sleigh. He stayed in the warm car while the boys ran up the hill. In a little while he decided he had better see how they were getting along. After watching them for a few minutes he called out to the bigger boy, "Johnnie, you must play fair. Share that sleigh with your little brother, half the time."

"But I am, father," Johnny protested, "I have it going down the hill and he has it pulling it up."

As children get older their own sense of what is fair begins to assert itself. Playing games teaches the necessity of taking turns and sharing play material. Watch a group of junior or intermediate youngsters on a playground. Usually they recognize what is fair, and insist on everyone sticking by a bargain.

Maple syrup recipes

(Consumer Section)

It's the season to enjoy maple products. It's also the time to store in a good supply of maple syrup so you'll have plenty on hand for the year ahead. Nothing is nicer than maple syrup or a good maple dessert to top off a meal.

Make sure that you buy pure maple products. Buy those with labels bearing the words "maple syrup" or "maple sugar" and the name and address of the producer. Imitation products will be labelled "artificially maple-flavored."

When possible, buy graded maple syrup. The sale of maple products by grade is not compulsory in Canada except within the Province of Quebec. The established government grades for maple syrup range from Canada Fancy, which is a very light amber color with a mild characteristic flavor, through Canada Light and Canada Medium to Canada Dark. The latter is stronger in flavor and darker in color. Quebec regulations have an additional grade, Canada Amber, which is between Medium and Dark. Classification is based on the following factors: color, flavor, freedom from fermentation. Regardless of grade, maple syrup must be of a specified weight (13 lbs. 2 ozs. per gallon).

These delicious maple recipes were tested and approved by home economists of the Consumer Section at Ottawa. They're sure to be a hit with your family or guests.

Maple Cream Pie

"A velvety pie, pleasantly flavored with pure maple syrup and with a delightful aroma."

1 Baked pie shell (8-inch), 1 cup milk, ¼ cup flour, ¼ teaspoon salt, 1 cup maple syrup, 2 egg yolks, 1 tablespoon butter, 2 egg whites, dash of salt, ¼ cup sugar.

Heat milk. Mix flour and salt, then gradually blend in maple syrup and pour it into hot milk. Cook over boiling water, stirring constantly until mixture thickens, about 6 minutes. Stir a little of the hot mixture into beaten egg yolks, then add to remaining mixture in the double boiler and stir while cooking 3 to 4 minutes longer. Remove from heat. Beat in the butter. Cool slightly and pour into baked pie shell.

Top with meringue made from egg whites, salt and sugar. Bake in a moderate oven (350°F.) about 15 minutes or in a hot oven (425° F.) until meringue is lightly browned.

Maple Syrup Baba

A Polish king is thought to have invented this cake naming it after one of the heroes of the tale, "Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves". The cake, introduced to Paris at the beginning of the 19th century, was later simply called "Baba". A true Baba is made with rum — this is a Canadian version:

1 Teaspoon sugar, ½ cup water (lukewarm), 1 package fast-rising yeast, 1½ cups sifted all-purpose flour, ½ cup butter, ¼ cup sugar, 4 eggs (beaten), ½ teaspoon salt.

Syrup — 1½ cups maple syrup, ¼ cup water, 1 tablespoon rum flavoring.

Dissolve the 1 teaspoon sugar in the ¼ cup lukewarm water. Sprinkle yeast over top and let stand 10 minutes. Stir well and beat in ½ cup of the flour thoroughly. Cover and let rise out of draft at 85° F. until doubled in bulk, about ½ hour.

Cream butter and sugar. Beat in eggs alternately with remaining flour and salt until batter is smooth. Then beat into yeast mixture. Turn into greased medium (7" or 8") tube cake pan, filling it about ½ full. Cover and let rise until doubled in bulk, ½ to 1 hour. Bake in moderate oven (350° F.) until nicely browned, 35 to 40 minutes. Cool in pan, then turn into pie plate.

Bring maple syrup and water just to the boil. Cool until lukewarm and add rum flavoring. Prick baba all over with a skewer and pour syrup over it. Let stand, basting occasionally, until most of syrup has been absorbed. Decorate with whipped cream. 6 to 8 servings.

Pointers — a wife's guide to a well dressed husband

When is a man well-dressed?

"Any man who cares enough to know and observe the rules currently indicative of good taste is well dressed," says Rick Putman, a Montreal men's wear specialist with Du Pont of Canada. "He can always break the rules to express his own individuality, but he must do so knowingly."

Unlike the breadth of scope in women's fashions, the margin for error in men's business clothes is often very narrow, Mr. Putman points out.

There is a spit and polish discipline still clinging to men's clothing which Mr. Putman believes is partly due to the influence the militia have long had on basic design and detail. Sleeve buttons, for instance, were introduced by Napoleon to keep his men from using their sleeves as handkerchiefs.

Mr. Putman feels that it is much easier for a business man to dress knowingly if his wife is also in the know about matters sartorial. "After all," he points out, "it is the wife who is usually responsible for those telling accessories — our shirts, socks, handkerchiefs and often, our ties. If she buys the wrong sleeve length, her husband's shirts won't show that all-important half-inch. On the other hand, the suit coat's sleeve could be too long.

"If a man is fond of stripes in shirts and ties, and also owns a striped suit, his wife should make sure he's equipped to tie two of them together properly.

"Striped shirts can be worn with striped ties, providing both stripes are in the same basic color but markedly different in color intensity and width. This rule also applies to combining stripes in suits and shirts. A navy suit with a pin or chalk stripe can team up handsomely with a bold blue striped shirt. However, the tie, in this instance, should be in a solid shade.

Men had a chance to speak their minds about socks several years ago during a consumer survey. In no uncertain terms they declared themselves in favor of (1) socks which were in dark, conservative shades; and (2) socks that stayed up.

Partly as a result of this information, there has been an evolution in men's socks. Except for casual wear, blinding diamonds and argyles, so dear to the heart of many women, have been replaced by socks which take their color cue from the suit but are in a shade or two deeper in tone. The hairy ape leg, so dear to the heart of nobody except (perhaps) a real ape, is being banished to the zoo.

"The high-cut or executive length in socks is becoming an integral part of the new executive look in men's business clothes," says Mr. Putman. These shin-concealers are available in two lengths: the 17-18 inch over-the-calf height and the 11-12 inch "press conference" height.

Mr. Putman's executive look, which is actually an etiquette of dressing for the workaday business world, is made up of a number of practices he considers vital and others that are optional.

In his vital category, in addition to the pointers on shirts, socks and the mixing of patterns, are pocket handkerchiefs and hats.

He feels that a man who neglects to tuck in a clean pocket handkerchief every morning is like a woman who goes to a social function without gloves. He personally prefers the unstudied puff style in handkerchief arrangement, to the formal line-up of four carefully formed points or the square fold.

He believes a hat is as essential to a man who wants to look an executive, as a shoe-shine. The hat, however, should have an urban air like the new bachelor style with its curved brim and pinched crown. For winter wear, he admires the fur wedge, but that's optional. He's in favor of vests for business, providing they match, and looks askance at sports jackets in an office.

He's also in favor of narrow ties, three or two-button suits with matching vests, iridescent and multi-colored suitings, cuffless, trimmer trousers.

To him the well-dressed man is neither far out nor a nonentity, in the way he chooses and wears his clothes.

By Jean Sharp, Canadian Press Staff Writer

Women's clubs have always been interested in education. Some of them were founded for the purpose of helping women to educate themselves in health and housekeeping and law, in the days when it was not easy to spread information.

The emphasis has shifted now, though much of the work they do is little known, but their interest goes on. Hundreds of young men and women have been able to stay in high school or go on to college because of money and encouragement given them by women's clubs.

Now, too, the work the clubs once did buying school supplies and aiding adult education has moved to new places, in the far north and in developing countries.

Some of their effort is in special areas, even outside the areas of the special interest of the club. Some groups have instituted study projects which may help to change or improve education in their fields.

To name all of the clubs whose branches and provincial and national units have helped individual students, would be to name almost every women's club in Canada. A few of the current projects offer some idea of the range of the work is being done in the specialized areas.

Assess and Assist

The Canadian Nurses' Association is doing a nationwide study of nursing education, a school improvement program, and an evaluation of nursing service, with polls, lectures and panel sessions among its members.

A correspondence course in business is operated through the University of Toronto Department of Extension Studies by the Association of Administrative Assistance or Private Secretaries. They also run annual hard-working study seminars for business women.

Many of the professional groups work with school systems on career programs. Members go into schools to talk about their work, to try to interest girls in their field. They work with guidance counsellors, supply literature on the field, and encourage students to come and see them at work. The Canadian Dietetic Association and the Canadian Home Economics Association both have active recruiting policies.

Help Specialists

Specialist scholarships in the arts and music are given by the Canadian Daughters' League, a relatively small group. The league is also currently sponsoring a speech arts festival in British Columbia, and has set up an education fund as its Centennial project.

Graduate social workers who want to specialize in medical social work can get a bursary from the National Council of Hospital Auxiliaries of Canada.

Schools in Canada's far north have been getting various kinds of help from the IODE for several years. The IODE is one of the groups which brings students from overseas to study in Canada, and helps Canadians to go overseas for graduate work.

The Federated Women's Institutes of Canada has long helped to send home economists to new countries to teach women there the basics of hygiene and nutrition, as the Institute once taught Canadian women.

These are only a handful of the clubs which spend a considerable amount of the money they raise on education, in one form or another.

ELECTROCUTE DOGS

Scarborough, Ont. (CP) — Scarborough Township license committee has decided that stray dogs in the municipality will be killed by electrocution in future. Manager T. L. Hughes of the Ontario Humane Society protested the current method of killing them by exhaust fumes as cruel.

Memorial trophy won by Tudor Singers

Wayne Riddell and his Tudor Singers, who were heard in a successful concert in Lachute this past season.

Directed by a Lachute musician, Wayne Riddell

The Dominion-wide choral contest held recently by the Canadian Broadcasting Company has been won by the Montreal Tudor Singers, and the Leslie Bell Memorial Trophy will be awarded to its founder and director, Wayne Riddell, on Monday, May 11, at a special broadcast.

Mr. Riddell is the son of Mrs. H. Riddell, and is a graduate of Lachute High School. His early musical education was received from Miss Juliette Rodrigue, of this town, and he then studied at McGill Faculty of Music, graduating with a B.Mus. degree.

The Tudor Singers were founded only a little over a year ago, and in the CBC contest they were competing with many long-established choirs. Congratulations from friends in this community are extended to Wayne Riddell and his Tudor Singers, and no doubt in future, additional honors will be theirs.

Daylight Saving in effect Sunday

Lachute and neighboring communities will adopt Daylight Saving Time next Sunday. Residents are advised to advance their clocks and watches one hour at midnight Saturday, April 25. Those using railway service are also advised to acquaint themselves with new train times. (Schedule for local CPR service on page 5.)

Press retracts mis-report on W. M. Cottingham

Quebec (CP) — A Canadian Press story Thursday, April 2, dealing with the trial of Gerald Martineau on fraud charges, reported that letters from two cabinet ministers were entered into the evidence.

Referring to a letter written November 24, 1955, by William Cottingham, then Quebec Mines Minister, Canadian Press erroneously reported this letter had recomended names for payment of commissions.

The letter filed in evidence merely recommended that certain materials manufactured within the Province of Quebec be given equal opportunity with similar materials produced in other provinces.

There never was any recommendation for the payment of any commission of any nature, to anyone at any time, by Mr. Cottingham.

The Canadian Press regrets its error and apologizes for any embarrassment or inconvenience caused to Mr. Cottingham.

Cross-country auto rallyists thro' here Friday

Red Deer (CP) — Five cars were knocked out of the Shell 4,000 mile cross-Canada auto rally Monday when the field tackled snow-slicked roads at a river crossing 100 miles south-west of Red Deer, Alberta.

Four competitors, including the famed Bo Ljungfeldt of Sweden, were forced out of the rally Sunday during a special 30-mile speed section through a mountainous area of the Cascade mountains in southern British Columbia.

Sixty cars left Vancouver Saturday night on the 830-mile first leg of the six-day test of skill and endurance that ends in Montreal this Friday.

The finalists are due to pass through Lachute early Friday evening.

Depredation in summer homes, Youths caught on vandal spree

A series of break-ins have been reported to police since cottagers started returning to their summer spots.

One more-exciting incident is reported in a Montreal Gazette column this week. Says Fitz (On-and-Off the Record):

An Argenteuil County cottager arrived at his summer home on Saturday morning to find that it had been looted and vandalized by a pair of juveniles who had also invaded a number of other cottages in the area, in what looked like a week-long burglary spree. They had "switched" firearms between cottages, changing one antique heirloom rifle for a later model; made off with stocks of ammunition; broken windows; ransacked the drawers and cupboards; and narrowly missed setting fire to the place in searching with matches for non-existent valuables. They had slept in one of the beds. When accosted by a neighbor the younger of the pair had levelled a .22 calibre rifle at him, but didn't fire. They were trapped when two men arrived at a cottage owned by one, spotted someone inside, and blocked front and back entrances. They are in provincial police hands, and will face a number of charges. One is 14, the other 17.

Second program of art films — public invited

The Centre d'Art, at its quarters (360 Main Street), initiated a film program last Thursday evening which was enjoyed by a small but highly appreciative group of art lovers — mostly pupils or past-pupils at the Centre's art classes.

Another such program, featuring art in Germany, will be shown Thursday evening of this week following the regular class session, soon after 9 p.m. There is no admission charge, and all interested are invited to attend.

Five subjects in this program are — children's paintings in Berlin; art lessons in Hambourg; marionettes; religious art; ancient European art. The first three of these films will be shown again at 2 p.m. Saturday, especially for children accompanied by their parents.

These attractions are made available through the Canadian Museum of Art Films.

Grass-fires are numerous

A crew of volunteer firemen were kept busy over the week-end, as a result of numerous calls for grass-fires.

The most serious was an outbreak in Ayersville, where a shed had caught fire ignited by the burning grass; this blaze, on Sunday afternoon, was quickly extinguished.

Other calls were received from St. Jerusalem, St. Philippe, as well as sections within Lachute town limits.

Vandals at work

The Beaton's Pharmacy delivery car was an object for the venom of vandals last week, when they shattered the windshield with the aid of a cement block. The block was left on the hood of the car.

Donat Saulnier, proprietor, would appreciate information from anyone who may have witnessed this unprovoked destruction.

Cancer service

Over 100 workers are available to the Lachute Branch Ladies' Dressing Service, Canadian Cancer Society, for making dressings both at home and at club headquarters. The public would be amazed at the devotion and work being done in this community.

Conservationist was guest at Rotary Club

Mansiel (Manny) Wilson, resident manager of C.I.P. Grenville Woodlands Division, was guest at the last regular meeting of the Brownsburg-Lachute Rotary Club.

His work with C.I.P. involves many woodland travels and, having always had a keen interest in wildlife, Mr. Wilson now records pictures for his personal pleasure. It was with keen appreciation that the Rotary Club viewed his interesting series of slides. These included wild birds and fowl, game birds, predatory birds and animals, along with some beautiful scenic pictures, all taken within a radius of 100 miles of this area.

Mr. Wilson was thanked on behalf of the club by Jack MacKimmie.

RODOLPHE CARREAU

Gatineau mg'r given promotion; to head office

Mr. Rodolphe (Rod) Carreau, who has served as Gatineau Power Co. Lachute divisional manager for the past 15 years, has been promoted to head office of the company at Hull, Que., as district manager for Papineauville, Lachute and Vaudreuil.

Mr. Carreau is well and favorably known here, not only for his business role but for his activities in community affairs. He is on the administrative board of the Caisse Populaire de Lachute, a loyal and active member of the Lions Club, a member of the K. of C., and active in the Chamber of Commerce in past years.

His promotion, although effective from April 1, was announced only last week.

Paper salvage in Brownsburg

The Brownsburg Boy Scouts' spring paper salvage drive will be held on Saturday, April 25, or on May 2 in case of rain. Papers and magazines should be tied securely in bundles, or placed in cartons, and set out at the roadside before 1 p.m.

Concerts Assocn. sets date for member campaign

Mr. Leo Bernache, of Ottawa, district representative for Columbia Artists, was here Monday evening to meet with Community Concerts Association workers. Business was discussed at an informal session held in the cafeteria of l'Ecole Secondaire.

Opening date for the 1964-65 membership campaign was set for May 19, when directors and campaigners will gather for an inaugural rally at the Golf Club chalet.

The principal officers are unchanged, all of whom agreed to continue in their respective roles — Mrs. Fernand Legault as president; Mrs. Jacques Bedard, vice-president; Miss Juliette Rodrigue and Mrs. G. R. Rigby, campaign co-chairmen; Jacques Bedard, secretary; Donald M. Hay, treasurer.

Mac E. Walker accepted the duties of concert chairman, while Mrs. C. L. Duncan, Gabriel Valois, Marcel Brunette and Jack F. Gorman were added to the slate of directors.

Nearing the conclusion of another successful season, there was high optimism for the success of the coming membership campaign.

Missing boys went visiting

Two boys — object of a wide search since disappearing from their Chomedey home — were discovered two or three days later at the home of relatives in Buckingham, Que.

The boys, Michel Biziel, 12, and Guy Garry, 14, left their home on Sunday morning, April 12, and cycled as far as Lachute, and from there they hitch-hiked to Buckingham.

After their disappearance, Chomedey police and firemen dragged the waters of Rivière-des-Prairies, aided by two privately-owned helicopters and an amphibian car.

$30 Water tax levy defeated in Ayersville

The Ayersville referendum on a $30 annual water tax levy resulted in a rejection of this measure by a strong majority.

The two-day vote in Ayersville Municipality was held last week. Only a small proportion of the taxpayers, 122 out of 494 eligible, turned out to vote. And of this number, all but 8 voted against the by-law. The count was as follows:

For - 8 Against - 114

Mayor Gaston Plamondon was chairman of the referendum which took the form of an open vote at the Clement School.

Singer-guitarist is colorful figure in a colorful program

Miss Nina Dova, who will appear next Monday in the Community Concert at l'Ecole Secondaire, Lachute, is a performer who for charm and talent is practically unrivaled in her field. She is a versatile singer of international songs, which she accompanies on the guitar, enhancing her performances by changing costumes and moods.

Now a citizen of the United States, she was born in London, and has lived in Canada, France and South America. This accounts for her wide selection of ballads and for the ease with which she trills her way in five languages.

Nina Dova finds her audiences most receptive; in the past year she has sung in Dallas, Los Angeles and New York, as well as Canada and London. Her rhythms of Spanish and South American music are contagious.

Not long ago, however, there was another kind of audience that she tells of with amusement — a group of gypsies in the caves of Granada. She and some friends were touring Spain and went to visit the famous gypsy caves. There they engaged a troupe of dancers and musicians to perform for them. When Nina Dova's friends indicated that she was a performer, the gypsies put a guitar in her hands and cast off castanets in gay abandon to dance the samba "Tico-Tico".

The fact that Nina Dova has studied voice in the U.S. and abroad for six years contributes much to the genuineness of her artistry; but part of her success is due to her feeling for the presentation of language songs. Her concert gowns, made to order, are bouffant and striking in color. Generally they are white or turquoise. She feels that as many concert halls are somewhat drab, the artist should create a vivid impression.

She has been much in demand on both the Ed Sullivan and Arthur Godfrey television shows, and her own. While in Canada she starred on a weekly TV show called "Nitecap," which played ten months. She has also appeared in a number of musical productions, such as the New York production of the "Three Penny Opera," and in summer playhouses. Last season she received glowing reviews from the London critics.

Nina Dova's home on Riverside Drive in New York City is a complete expression of her moods and talent. She prefers period furniture and modern paintings and odd fabrics, such as are common to Mexico or Guatemala. As her husband is a musician too, the house is filled with instruments, many of which hang on the walls. She is fond of cooking and prefers Spanish or Italian dishes, as well as recipes of her own invention.

Youth held criminally responsible in slaying of taxi man at St. Hermas

On the evening of April 9 at Provincial Police headquarters in Lachute, radio operator André Descoeurs, on regular duty, received a dramatic phone call when a young man's voice said, in effect, that he was the one involved in the taxi-driver case at St. Hermas. He was at the "Ti-Nest David" at St. Andrews (the caller stated). "Come and get me", he told the police.

This was according to the police officer's evidence at a coroner's inquest on the death of taxi-driver Tony Ladansky, 39, whose mutilated body was found Friday morning, April 6, on the Haut St. Pierre range of St. Hermas by Gerard Beauchamp, of Lachute.

Cpl. Jean-Paul Dallaire, chief of the QPP bureau here, had gone to Ernest David's camp on the Ottawa River at St. Andrews to pick up the young man, 19-year-old Ronald McCullough of Montreal, and according to Cpl. Dallaire's evidence, he too had received the same confession. In a bag belonging to McCullough the officer had found bloodstained trousers, a hunting knife with red blotches, a set of car keys, gloves and other items. An analysis by Dr. Jean-Marie Roussel, medico-legal expert, confirmed that the stains on the said articles were blood.

Coroner's jury deliberates for only 10 minutes

Ronald McCullough, 19, was found by the jury to be criminally responsible. The jurors deliberated only about 10 minutes after the lengthy testimonies, and on recommendation of the coroner, the Montrealer was placed under arrest. . . A slight, fairish-haired youth wearing dark-rimmed glasses, it taxed the belief of spectators that McCullough could have stabbed the taxi-man 19 times — Ladansky, the victim, being a burly man of 5'7" weighing 220 pounds. Tony Ladansky's death had been attributed to internal and external haemorrhage, with knife wounds in the heart and lungs.

McCullough, with a police officer on each side of him, appeared unmoved throughout the inquest, his face betraying no emotion.

Among the 13 witnesses testifying was Henri Ladansky, brother of the taxi driver, who had identified the victim's body at the morgue. André Menard, photographer for the Provincial Police, produced several photographs. Dr. Claude Lachance, who had performed an autopsy on the body, gave his report; and evidence was heard from Julius Levine, owner of the taxi vehicle driven by the victim.

Mr. and Mrs. Florian Franche, of St. Hermas, told of having heard the noise of a car outside their dwelling house on the night of April 5-6, and looking out, had seen the car, while Mrs. Franche declared she had heard two cries. It was Gérard Beauchamp, of Lachute, who testified that next morning he had seen the victim's body in the ditch; and Agent Denis Charbonneau, who went to investigate, found traces of blood from the Franche place to where the body was lying.

Ovila Desbiens, of Ayersville, then told of finding the abandoned taxi, on the lot where his camp is situated at St. Andrews. It was around 3 o'clock in the afternoon of April 6; and Sgt. Frank Wilmot, of the Provincial Police, went to verify the presence of the taxi on Desbiens' property.

Ernest David, owner of a camp near the cabin owned by the McCullough family at St. Andrews, then told of receiving a visit from young McCullough while he was watching hockey on the television.

The visitor asked him to call the Provincial Police at Lachute on the telephone. He had not heard the ensuing conversation, but the police arrived about 20 minutes later and took the young man away.

The essay subjects were (1) "The Tree and the Young Canadian" for competitors 14 years and under, and (2) "Hunting Safety" for those 15 years and over.

A column for the sportsman

— By BOB ATCHISON —

It's been a long time since people were so much in agreement, but the cruelty to the seals seems to have sparked a fireball. Plenty of abuse has been heaped upon officials and the governments for allowing this. However, I have been receiving plenty of blasts myself, and all about cruelty. It seems I was forgetting all about our Auction Market, and should have been writing of cruelty in this district instead of the seals. In a couple of cases the callers were very vehement about happenings such as this in our own district. One of them complained I had given the impression that the only cruelty towards animals was outside this County.

The first caller sure gave me an earful on this inhuman treatment of animals. It appeared a gentleman had bought a pony, and, having been tied up for some time, the animal was naturally skittish. It appeared the buyer was a little afraid of it and enlisted the help of a couple of brave inebriates, who literally beat the animal into submission. From appearances this animal was in foal, but regardless, the men are reported to have kicked and beat the animal with a board. How long this beating had been going on my caller did not know, but for some time, according to the condition of the animal.

Another caller, this time a lady, told me of terrible conditions in a crate of chickens, piled so close that some of them had died from suffocation. Another cage had pigeons, and these were in much the same state, filthy, with no sign of life in some of them; and they appeared to have been in the cage for a couple of days. Cats placed in bags, that were so starved they were chewing the bags in search of food. Now I did not want to write about cruelty again, but with the number of people perturbed by what they've seen, I am trying to bring this to attention of the proper authorities.

Now for the outdoors. Huge flocks of geese have been seen and heard. I watched a small flock of about 50 birds that had landed down in the flats near home. I also heard of a flock estimated at 1,000, not too far from this area. Large flocks of ducks are tagging along with the geese too, and this is very unusual; they do at times fly near them, but certainly not with the flocks. Why this should be, I do not know. We have a number of the Great Blue herons with us too; to see them wading around in a field, is some sight. Some of them can be seen right here in Lake Emily, that is, if you can spot them — which is not easy, believe me. Red Wing blackbirds are, of course, making an awful noise, but being what they are, their noise is one of the sweetest to be heard this time of the year. Isn't it funny how so many people will take notice of them; their bright scarlet wing-bat and blueish black body makes them a colorama on the wing.

Only a few hawks have shown up as yet. But I believe I watched an osprey wheeling over the field the other night. Even though the field is covered with water, this was no true indication it was an osprey, and since it was too far away, I may have just hoped it was. There are plenty of gulls around too; maybe we don't think of this as a lovable bird (I don't), but right now they are treated with a little kindness (bread thrown on the water, like a welcome mat).

You may remember some time ago, I wrote of insufficient money assigned for our Wardens, in fact for the whole protective branch. This seems to have been remedied for the time being; let's hope this will continue. After all, the protection of wildlife is just as important as human protection — more so, as far as I am concerned. It seems strange this vital service should have to beg for any monies they get, while all kinds of commissions are formed to study this and that, regardless of expense, all for the benefit of some lazy politician. However, as I have said before, the Hon. Lionel Bertrand is a sportsman who knows just what he got into when he accepted the job of Wildlife, and one of these days he will manage to convince the meat-heads what's what. I hope I'm alive to see this.

None of the lakes I have visited show much sign of breaking up; even though the ice in patches looks very dark, they still appear to be a long way from breaking. All the creeks are open and boiling down toward the rivers. Strange as it may seem, those I visited appeared quite clean. It seems not too much pulp-cutting went on in these areas, so the creeks are free of brush, stumps, logs and gas cans. Boy, this is a change. . . So I beef and complain too much; it sometimes works, though.

Reading lately of a gun accident in the U.S. — it seems a youngster was shot by a 30.06 by his brother, four years of age. The baby had managed to get his dad's gun out of the cupboard, then shooting his brother, aged 6. . . The gun had been left in this cupboard since last fall, loaded. It's pretty hard to speak calmly about a thing like this, isn't it? Stupidity is about the only word to describe it.

As usual, the license bureau have their own way of passing out their authorized dealerships. It appears to be a strictly political system. However, with all the red tape to go through, it doesn't appear to be worthwhile handling them.

As most of you saw in the papers the other day, there was a terrific sale of fishing tackle, some 411 pieces in all, for a very low price. Maybe I shouldn't say this, but save your money! I didn't go into it too seriously, but another gent who figured it out, brought the cost to 8 cents per piece. When you consider you got three reels and three rods plus all the extra equipment, it looks as though you have something. I'll bet this is not equipment of Canadian manufacture.

Once again a certain make of reel is being pushed. And as most of you know who bought them in the last big promotion, they sure left a lot to be desired. There is not too much change in them, and it could be these are the same ones that were being plugged a couple of years ago. After all, they must have had a huge stock of them to sell them the way they did.

A new reel is on the market, the Intrepid, made in England with a written guarantee; for the money it's a real good type. The company making them have been at the fishing tackle game for years and years, so they do know what it's all about. This is the first of the fly reels I've seen here — the company being better known for the spinning types; but if the fly ones are as good as the spinning, then there never will be any trouble. Reasonable, too.

Some new plastic boxes are also with us, unbreakable. I k[illegible] you have heard this before, but in this case they sure are. I [illegible] standing, hammering, bending, dropping, everything I could think of, and they stood up. We sure have needed this for a long time. Many a box has been broken by sitting on it, but not with these. Incidentally, they are made right in Canada. Remember the rod I told you of with a filler in the shaft? Certainly a lot of publicity is being given to them. They may be O.K. for someone who likes to fish with a pole instead of a rod — you know, the yank-and-heave types.

SOMETIMES I'M ALWAYS RIGHT

"The science of deduction through observation is an interesting study," said my friend Al, as I seated myself beside him on a bus last week. "I owe my success in the investigation bureau to the power of observation that I have developed over the years. I have reached a point where I can nearly always tell a man's occupation just by studying him for a few minutes. Take, for instance, that man across the aisle a little to my right — the one with the Vandyke beard. What do you make of him?"

"Possibly a rabbi," I answered "He has a little black bag."

"Now you're just jumping at conclusions without enough premeditation. He is very evidently not a rabbi. He is wearing a grey business suit, not a long frock coat. His beard is well trimmed, not growing all over his face like a bramble-bush. I would say he is a doctor, not a specialist but a family practitioner. A foreigner, but he has been in this country for some years."

"Why don't you ask him?" I suggested.

"Why don't you?" said Al, aggressively.

I don't know what got into me, but I saw a possible opportunity to deflate Al's ego if it should turn out that he was wrong. I got up and approached the bearded stranger. "Pardon me, sir," I began, "But are you a professional man?"

"But certainly!" he replied. "Do I look like an amateur?"

"Oh, no. My friend said — he just wondered if —"

"My card. Keep it in case you are ever in need of my services. Same address for twenty-seven years."

I thanked him and resumed my seat, showing the card to Al. We read it together: "Sig Carl Bossi, Pianos and Organs Tuned and Repaired. Phone 213-476."

Al gave a hollow laugh. "Oh, well. You can't win every time," he said. "Let's take another example. See that guy with the newspaper who got on at the last transfer point. What do you make of him?"

"An Italian," I replied. "Most likely a landscape gardener. You know the type. Lawns in summer, furnaces in winter."

"I think you're absolutely right," said Al, to my surprise. "But there's more to him than that. He is a self-educated foreigner who has worked hard, saved his money, has several investments, and is probably putting a son or daughter through college. Do not judge by his shabby coat and muddy boots. He is reading a paper. It is this morning's paper. Ever since he sat down he has stared at the financial page. Only the financial page. He is probably worth more than you and me combined."

"Why don't you ask him?" I suggested.

"Why don't you?" said Al.

The bus had stopped in a traffic jam. I rose and approached the financial wizard. "Excuse me sir. That paper you are reading — I just —. My friend and I —"

In the ensuing silence of the stopped bus, several passengers turned their heads to stare at me.

"The paper! You take, Mistaire. You take. I no steal." He put the paper into my hand.

"No' I don't want the paper. I just wanted to ask —"

"You take. I no steal. I find paper on other bus."

"Of course you didn't steal it," I stammered. "You were reading the financial page and we thought —"

"No can read Hanglish. I find on bus. Take him home to light cookstove. You take. I no steal."

The bus moved on. The next stop was mine. I said to Al: "I'm getting off here. Do me a favor, will you. See that man in the olive-green uniform with a cap to match, sitting up in front with both hands on the steering-wheel? When you get a chance, ask him what he does for a living. I'm not placing any bets, but my humble guess is — he's a bus driver. Just observation, you know."

Al has not spoken to me since.

Be seein' ya!

Resided in Lachute for many years — funeral held here

Late Herman Stansfield

Following a lingering illness Mr. Herman Stansfield passed away in Burlington, Ont., last Thursday, April 16. He was in his 72nd year.

Coming to Lachute from England with his wife and family in 1925, Mr. Stansfield was employed at Ayers Limited as foreman of the weaving department. He remained with the firm until 1942, when he entered the Civil Service as a textile supervisor, which position entailed extensive travelling. On retiring from active work he spent some time in eastern Canada and Montreal and later took up residence in Burlington.

A veteran of World War I, Mr Stansfield was a loyal member of the local Legion Branch, a member of the Anglican Church, and also of Argenteuil Masonic Lodge, No. 67, here in Lachute.

Left to mourn his passing are his loving and devoted wife, a sister, Edna (Mrs. Geo. Holland) of Gravenhurst; one son, Fred, of Lachute, and two daughters, Ethel (Mrs. Reg. Warren) of Hamilton, and Margaret (Mrs. Walter Hall), of Burlington. There are also eight grandchildren, and two great-grandchildren. He was predeceased by one daughter, Joan.

The remains rested at the MacKimmie Funeral Home prior to service in the Anglican Church, which was conducted by the Rev. C. R. Lang, assisted by the Rev. W. C. LeCras and the Rev. Mr. Smith — the latter his minister during his stay in Montreal.

Pall-bearers were Messrs. Sam Milnes, Fred Sanford, Thomas Iddon, Geo. Leggett, Melvin Scott and Harold Maidens. Interment took place in the family plot at Lachute Protestant Cemetery.

Jones - Kille

Miss Barbara Kille, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Kille, Brownsburg, Que., became the bride of Richard Bennett Jones, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Jones, of Thurso, Que., on April 18 in Lachute United Church. The Rev. Harold Thompson B.A., B.D., officiated and Mr. L. B. Hopkins was organist.

Mr. Leo Desaulniers, of Belleville, Ont., gave his niece in marriage. The bride wore a gown of peau-de-soie with lily point sleeves, a fitted bodice and full skirt, cathedral-length train, satin tiara headdress and shoulder-length veil, and she carried pink and white carnations. The guests were ushered by Messrs. Brian Jones, brother of the groom, and Jackie Barnes, the groom's cousin.

After a reception at Lachute Colonial Restaurant, the couple left by motor for Niagara Falls and different parts of Ontario. For travelling the bride chose a rose pink mohair suit with matching hat and veil and black accessories. She wore a pearl necklace, the gift of the groom.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Jones will reside in Thurso, Que.

New organ gift to Trinity Church, Lakefield

Lakefield — Holy Trinity Church has received the gift of a beautiful new Hammond organ, which was played for the first time on Easter Day, Mrs. Jas. Pollock, of Lachute, being organist for that occasion.

This organ was presented to the church by Mr. and Mrs. Percy Williamson, of Kelowna, B.C., and is dedicated in loving memory of Mr. Thos. McCambly. Mrs. Williamson's father. Mr. McCambly was a devoted church worker and served as warden for many years. This is a fitting and beautiful memorial to him, and the rector and congregation are deeply grateful for this gift.

"Diary of a Vagabond"

By Dorothy Barker

A GREAT WHITE FATHER

My first and, to date, only meeting with Dr. Ivan Crowell, was last summer after we had tracked him down from his workshop in Fredericton, New Brunswick, to craft rooms housed in attractive bungalows atop a craggy promontory in Fundy National Park.

Dr. Crowell is a fortunate human being because he has seen his dreams come true, which is more than most of us can boast about. With a thatch of snowy hair and keen humorous eyes, it is not hard to picture him as a white father to the Indians. Certainly one of his attributes is his faith in the scattered tribes of the once proud Indian race and their potential artistic and industrious ability.

But I am ahead of my story. Dr. Crowell started out on his adult career with the ambition to be a manual training teacher. Then he decided to be a plant pathologist and obtained his degree in science at Harvard University.

He had to work his way through college by many times accepting manual labor at menial wages. When he became a professor at McGill University he saw many students slugging their way through to their educational goal as he had done. He conceived the idea of having them work in his basement to produce wooden ware articles, which were sold in a Montreal department store.

Recognition of a Need

The dean of agriculture heard about the project and suggested Dr. Crowell organize a hobby club, with McGill contributing equipment for ten persons. There were 88 members the first year. It grew in membership so fast it was considered necessary to engage a teacher capable of instructing in leather and woodwork. Dr. Crowell's hobby club turned into a full-fledged university department and he was invited to forsake his scientific career and take charge.

Under his guidance literally hundreds of young people were trained at Macdonald College in Ste. Anne de Bellevue, Que., during the war and many to teach handicrafts to service personnel of the three armed forces.

In 1946 Dr. Crowell was offered the position of provincial handicraft director for New Brunswick. Since then, he has developed his dream of making handicraft instruction available to any interested persons at a reasonable fee. His craft program at Fundy Park is known from coast to coast and in many of the United States of America. Whole families learn to create at the classes he has planned and provided with the very best instructors. For a dollar a day plus the price of materials, father can make a salad bowl, mother can learn to weave a place mat and the children lace leather wallets, key cases or slippers.

The success of this program and the one he heads in Fredericton in an old army barracks, proved a gratifying experience for this man of vision. He never comes to the end of his ambition, however, to provide not only pleasure in crafts for his fellow man, but the training required to earn.

The Bible Today

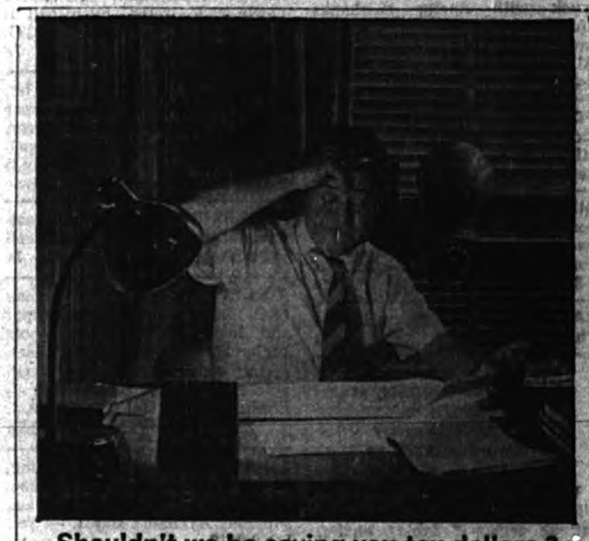

Bible Society work is being carried on in 152 countries of the world, according to a statement of Dr. Olivier Beguin, General Secretary of the United Bible Societies, who spoke in Toronto recently.

In 75 countries there is paid personnel who care for the translation, production and distribution of the Christian scriptures. Twenty-three countries have National Bible Societies which are members of the United Bible Societies. Canada is one of these. There are four associate members in other countries.

Only four Societies are of the "outreach" type, Dr. Beguin explained. He referred to the British and Foreign, the American, the Dutch and the National Bible Society of Scotland as those traditionally known for their missionary enterprise. The Canadian Bible Society serves world needs through the B.& F.B.S.

There is a strong movement around the world to set up self-governing Bible Societies, especially among the newer nations. This is being encouraged by the older societies.

The purpose of the United Bible Societies is to bring together all these independent groups to avoid duplication and undue expense. Most of the newer societies will need financial assistance for many years, counselled Dr. Beguin.

How much of a sportscar should a family car be?

About as much as the Volkswagen 1500 TS, if you want your driving to be enjoyable.

Some cars look like sportscars, but they don't act like sportscars. The VW 1500 TS does. Independent torsion bar suspension on all four wheels and low centre of gravity help it hold firmly to any kind of road.

Like a sportscar should.

It has a floor-mounted stick with 4 synchromesh gears to shift. Which gives you the satisfying feeling of being in complete control in all driving conditions.

Like you should in a sportscar.

And this year we added more horsepower and a second carburetor.

Now you can accelerate to 50 mph in just 12 seconds.

Yet, this more powerful engine is so efficient you can expect around 35 miles to a gallon of gas. So it saves you money.

Like a family car should.

In front: adjustable bucket seats for you and your wife. In back: room for 3 more adults (or equivalent in children).

So it's comfortable for long trips.

As a family car should be. That's one reason we called it Touring Sport (TS).

Track and Traffic Magazine recognized the TS for "its engineering superiority, quality of construction, aesthetics, total comfort, safety and performance". They've just given it their Golden Wheel Award.

You might say the Volkswagen 1500 TS got what's coming to it, because it's got so much going for it.

Cancer "blitz" appeal, April 27 —

A co-operative effort

FEATURED IN this issue is a full-page advertisement announcing the annual Cancer appeal, which reaches its climax with a door-to-door canvass next Monday evening, April 27. This announcement is paid for by a dozen-or-so business firms all sympathetic to the cause, and it is our hope that the same spirit of generosity will be accorded to the canvassers in this campaign — for they, too, are giving voluntarily of their time and energy.

The Canadian Cancer Society appeal is a two-fold approach to the public. . . Firstly, it is of an educational nature — making people aware that all and sundry must meet this common threat; there is no discrimination. Making them aware of the symptoms and the chances of combatting it, which, of course, are immensely promising if detected in its early stages. The educational campaign explains also the well-organized plan of attack — the intensive research, the clinics, surgery and treatment, and volunteer work in such communities as Lachute, where a ladies' committee gives valuable hours of service for the welfare of cancer sufferers.

But secondly, and equally important, this appeal is of a financial nature. To average citizens in the full enjoyment of their health, it extends the privilege of participating in this all-out effort — to help in the alleviation of suffering, and in the medical research which will ultimately break through with a momentous answer, for prevention or for cure.

The Canadian Cancer Society has come a long way. Memory need reach back only a decade or two, to recall the reticence, the silence, the bated breath which kept this malady in concealment, and impeded a forthright battle to overcome it. Times have changed. . . With continued and concerted effort we can meet the challenge, and eventually win.

Another election?

WHEN LESTER PEARSON'S Liberal government took office a year ago, the prime minister declared it would operate as if it had a majority.

This wasn't as daring as it sounds. For while the combined opposition in the Commons could have upset the government by uniting, it was generally felt that Canadians didn't want another election.

The assumption was that the electorate might deal rather harshly with any party or parties that forced a vote before the people were ready for one.

In any case, the Liberals proceeded much as they promised. They have increased taxes — the sort of thing a government doesn't do when it senses an impending election — and they have generally proceeded with their program on a broad front.

The wheels turn rather slowly on putting various proposals into operation — the national pension plan, for example, is not yet a reality; unification of the armed forces will take many years; and efforts to stimulate development in backward regions and encourage greater Canadian ownership of industry won't be felt for some time.

But there may be significance in the fact that so many things have been started, even if they are still a long way from completion.

One possible interpretation is that the government is simply going ahead and actually hopes to be given the time to complete the implementation of its schemes.

Another is that it merely wanted to get as many things started as possible so that, if the Opposition were to force an election, the government could go to the people and ask for a clear mandate to finish the job.

Still another is that the Liberals, if faced with stiffening opposition, will call an election themselves, accusing the other parties of obstruction.

The big question now is whether the Opposition parties will get together and defeat the government before Prime Minister Pearson decides the time is right.

There are indications of a greater degree of unity in Opposition ranks and an election in the near future is becoming more of a possibility.

Then the final pronouncement on all the strategy will be up to the voters.

Some action on Glassco Report

A PILOT PROJECT is underway in Ottawa, taxpayers should be delighted to know, to determine how fast and how far the federal government can go in implementing the money-saving, efficiency-improving recommendations of the Glassco Commission report — writes C. J. Harris, commentator on economic affairs.

Finance Minister Gordon disclosed that tests are being run on four government departments to study practical application of the principles set out in the report of the three-year, $3-million royal commission inquiry into government organization. The four departments — agriculture, transport, veterans' affairs, northern affairs and natural resources — have a combined staff of some 40,000 or about one-fifth of the total of employees of government departments. The pilot study is to be completed in June, Mr. Gordon said, and if a blueprint for reshaping government departments can be drawn up from it, the individual departments of the civil service will have the job of putting it into operation.

Though it will be a formidable task, the reorganization of the government establishment is absolutely essential, both for economy and for better service to the public. The government's system induces an absurd waste of manpower. Because government departments must justify additional staff requirements from nine months to 2½ years in advance, most departments are always overstaffed. "Some department managers," said the Glassco report, "estimate overstaffing as high as 50 per cent." Inevitably, the public payroll is enormous, and increasing.

The paperwork waste is equally extravagant and absurd. The unnecessary shuffling of papers, said the Glassco report, costs more than $50 million a year.

It is hardly possible that government organization will match the efficiency of well-managed private business. But the taxpaying public has the right to demand that, within its limitations, government organization should both permit and require the efficient management of public business and the responsible administration of public funds.

Labor-saving methods

DAVID J. MacDONALD, president of United Steelworkers of America, in an address at Detroit recently, said that large industries that stand to benefit most from the application of labor-saving methods and machinery have not done enough to take care of the people who are put out of jobs by automation.

This is not generally the case — says the Fort Erie Letter-Review. Most industries are careful that people who have been employed for even a short time are not thrown out on the street without recourse. They have provided that jobs will be maintained and that the saving will come only when other useful places are found for these employees or when jobs become vacant due to natural attrition, retirements or deaths.

An example of this in Canada (continues the Review) was when the Canadian Pacific Railway, after great difficulty, won the right to operate yard and road engines (not passenger diesels) without a fireman in the cab. In the case of a freight train there also is a front-end brakeman. In the case of a yard engine there are several people serving the engine on the ground. Only employees who had their jobs for only a few months were let out. All others were provided for with other jobs.

Friday, April 26, 1889 —

Our member of parliament, Mr. Wilson, has secured a re-vote of $3,200 per mile for seven miles, for a railway from St. Andrews to any point east of the town of Lachute. The government has given notice of motion to ask for a total of $22,400 for this railway. Together with the bonus voted by the Parish, this should induce Mr. Armstrong and his company to commence operations at once.

SUGAR AND SPICE

Right In The Eye!

By BILL SMILEY

Bill Smiley

If ever you decide to do some research on the lower forms of wit, I can tell you how to go about it. Just get yourself a black eye.

I had a doozer recently. My wife gave it to me. All right. Not that way. She was sitting in the car, waiting for me to carry the groceries into the house, through the rain. Just as I bent and reached for the car door to open it and ask her if that was all, she opened it smartly from the inside to ask me why I hadn't brought out an umbrella.

When the door nailed me in the eye, I thought I was a goner. My wife shrieked and ran straight into the house to see whether my "loss of limb or eye" accident policy was paid up.

Within a few minutes, the eye was the size and color of a bartender's beezer. But by the time we'd finished arguing about whose fault it had been, it was obvious that I'd live.

We didn't have a piece of steak, and if we'd had, I doubt that it would have been sacrificed. But the Old Girl, bless her, dug out some hamburg that was going a bit blue, and made me lie down with a big hamburg poultice on the injured optic.

Right off the ice, it felt pretty good at that, and I dropped off to sleep, moaning but brave. During the night, the bandage worked loose, and when I woke in the dark, I thought the eye had fallen out. But it was only hamburg, all over the pillow.

Next morning, the orb looked like a purple golf ball. We patched it up as best we could, and I set off to face the wits.

The comments were hilarious. They ranged from the simple, dry brilliance of "Hoo hitcha?" and "Forget to duck, eh?" to the coy, insinuating, "I knew she'd catch up with ya some day." They ran the scintillating gamut from the inevitable, "I suppose ya ran into a door" to the ineffably humorous sally, "Meet the former welterweight champ of the Smiley household."

I came back with some real funnies myself. "My wife," I replied. "Footwork isn't what it used to be." I admitted. "Yotta see the other guy," I quipped. I can go along with a joke as well as the next bird.

But after a while, in fact if I remember rightly, it was just after the fourteenth "Hoo hitcha?", I began getting a little sore. I mean, fun's fun, you know, but, after all.

So, when the next joker made his move, I told him, dolefully, that a maiden lady who didn't like my column had thrown acid in my face, and that I'd never have the sight of it again. He turned green.

My next customer was a woman, who tittered, "That'll teach you to write things about your wife in that column of yours." I gave her a gentle, sad look from my good eye, and suggested that she not let the divorce alienate her from my wife. I left her with her mouth open.

I quickly disposed of an elderly lady, strong in the temperance movement, by informing her the injury had been received from my young daughter, when she clubbed me on the eye with a half-empty whiskey bottle. It's good sport. Next time the old trouble-and-strife hangs one on you, Jack, you'll know what to do.

Oka park gains in popularity, sees busy season

The Oka Provincial Park, on terrain formerly owned by the Sulpician Fathers, is proving increasingly popular. This past winter it was frequented by 13,000 visitors and ice-fishing enthusiasts. During the summer season of 1963 there were 100,438 visitors, compared with 88,617 in 1962.

These figures are recorded by the Department of Tourism, Fish and Game, which administers the park. Entrance fees are 25c for each pedestrian; $1 per car and occupants; $5 per bus and occupants. These rates are in effect from May 1. For the privilege of fishing the usual permit is also required; the cost to Quebec residents is $1.10.

The park has a mile-long sandy beach on Lake of Two Mountains; woodland cleared of underbrush, providing shady walks; pure drinking water, and the usual sanitary facilities.

Entrance to the park is about one mile west of the Trappist monastery.

Our Hungry World

By RAY ARGYLE

The latest world population forecast from the United Nations is that the globe's population will double by the year 2,000, reaching the six billion mark.

Ray Argyle

Already, according to the report, 500 million of the world's people are suffering actual hunger and another one billion suffer from malnutrition.

How can Canada square its conscience with these overwhelming contrasts between its wealth and others' poverty, between its under-population and others' over-population?

The answer is that we can't.

In efforts made so far to grapple with the problem of starvation and over-population, there is as yet no sign of a break-through toward a final solution.

The spectre of a world over-run with hungry people, of one vast city covering the entire globe, is already a familiar nightmare.

The so-called population explosion is being held out by many authorities as being a greater threat to the future of humanity than any ever posed by nuclear bombs.

But humanitarian efforts to supply foodstuffs to backward nations often worsens the basic problem because of the tendency for population to rise as additional food supplies become available.

And it is here that the critical juncture is reached in the population puzzle. Just as birth rates increase as food supplies and industrial capacities grow in backward countries, so is the population level held down by the available supply of food.

The determining factor in such areas as Latin America and India therefore is food. For this reason, it may well be physically impossible for the population explosion to ever reach the blow-up point because population cannot exceed the level at which human beings can subsist on minimum diets.

This accounts for the endless cycle which has been running through such nations ever since Western industrial assistance and food shipments were first made available to them.

As health standards have improved, the death rate has declined. As industrial capacity has grown, families have multiplied. As more food has been shipped in, more children have survived into adulthood, in turn bringing more children into the world.

Food has always been the controlling factor, either limiting the population when it was not available, or increasing it when it was available.

Recent demographic studies now show conclusively that the cycle will continue without significant change unless the countries struggling with these problems adopt aggressive policies of birth control.

This has been done in Japan, and the result is the highest standard of living in Asia.

The world will not explode from over-population, but half of the globe's humanity is forever condemned to near-starvation until birth control becomes the rule instead of the exception in the family of man.

Ralph Bunche and Education

— By NANCY CLEAVER —

"There are many opportunities for boys and girls in the world today if they are trained, but they can only take advantage of these vocational openings if they have the necessary education," says Dr. Ralph J. Bunche.

Dr. Bunche, Nobel prize winner of 1950, the first Negro in American history to take over a desk in the State Department of the U.S. Government, serving now as the Director of the Department of Trusteeship and Information for Non-Self Governing Territories of the United Nations Secretariat, can speak with authority on the importance of education.

His grandfather was a slave and he grew up in the poverty-stricken Negro section of Detroit. When he was twelve both his parents died. Then his indomitable little grandmother, now the head of the family, was determined that Ralph, who had done well at school, should stay there. At this point the Bunches made their way in 1916 to Los Angeles.

Many another boy with his handicaps would have dropped out of school. Not only was he a member of the minority colored group, but he had great difficulty obtaining the record of his marks in his former schools. He had missed almost a year of schooling in the family's trek across the southwest, and in Los Angeles he started in a class where no one knew him.

Nevertheless, with his own eager curiosity for knowledge, his native ability and the backing of his grandmother, he applied himself to his lessons. In June, 1918 Ralph J. Bunche graduated with honors from the elementary school at Los Angeles and as well as his diploma, he received a medal for history and one for English composition.

By the age of 15 he was earning his way with a summer job as a messenger boy with the Los Angeles Times, at eight dollars a week.

When autumn came he asked, "Had I better keep on working?" Few Negro boys would be entering Jefferson High School. But his grandmother was convinced that he should continue his schooling.

She pointed out that poor people, either white or colored, have a hard time getting ahead, the Negro even harder than the white man. A boy's future chance in life depended to a great degree on his schooling.

How good a scholar he was and how he enjoyed pursuing higher education, until, helped by fellowships and scholarships, he was qualified to become a professor, a co-director of the Institute of Race Relations at Swarthmore College — is told in his biography, Ralph J. Bunche, Fighter for Peace, by J. Alvin Kugelmass.

You may protest, "Ralph Bunche was an exceptional student, endowed with a high IQ. Of course, it made sense for him to stay in school!"

But the tragic fact is that in Canada there are boys and girls of high intelligence, who become bored, restless, or for some other reason are among the annual crop of drop-outs. Our country thus loses many potential doctors, lawyers, teachers, members of the professions.

In today's world, when economic life is complex and automation is growing, a good education is necessary for the boys or girls who go into business, industry or agriculture.

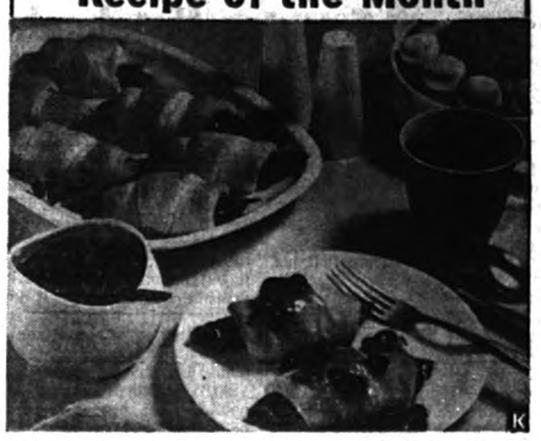

Special training is also required by those entering a trade. The carpenter, plumber, electrician or welder needs special skills, gained by practice under expert supervision. The individuals who get ahead are those who have received an education.

The great majority of unemployed are unskilled, with little schooling. Each year of high school adds well over $200 to yearly income and, it has been estimated, matriculation adds almost twice this amount.

Recipe of the Month

If winter's end has brought with it an end to your ideas of what to serve for dinner, read on! Here's a new recipe certain to spark your interest in meal preparation and perk up your family's appetite, too. Refrigerated crescent rolls wrapped 'round slices of ham, baked and sauced with spicy raisin pie filling is the dish we speak of. The flaky rolls, the same ones you often serve as a dinner accompaniment, this time take honors as the main dish. The ham slices can debut in a second act from Sunday's roast, or, if you wish, you can try the ready-to-eat boiled ham slices. Serve the crescents and their raisin sauce topping piping hot — with whipped sweet potatoes studded with puffs of marshmallows, peas and a bright citrus salad. There's no nicer or easier way of greeting Spring, than with a new supper dish like this!

HAM CRESCENTS WITH RAISIN SAUCE

2 cans refrigerated crescent dinner rolls
16 slices ready-to-eat ham
1 can (2½ cups) raisin pie filling

Separate and unroll crescent dough into 16 triangles. Place a ham slice, folded in half, on each triangle. Roll up as for crescents. Bake at 375° for 10 to 15 minutes, until golden brown. Heat pie filling; serve with crescents. Serves 8.

IT'S TIME FOR A RENDEZ-VOUS AT

LOWE'S DAIRY BAR

Some of our favorite Canadian wash and wear fabrics are being tested for space stations. Space explorers will have to take their housing with them and literally pitch their tents in the atmosphere, there being no motels up there.

Scientists are working on inflatable fabric shelters which can be packed into small containers and shot into orbit where they will blow up like balloons. Similar expandable shelters may also be the first dwellings on the moon and other planets.

Polyester fabrics, familiar to us in many clothing uses, are the basis of the experiments with fabric structures for space. The fabrics will be coated with a quick-setting plastic substance which will "rigidize" the inflated structure, but the fabrics themselves will be able to withstand high temperatures, extreme cold and the hard vacuum of space.

The space stations envisioned will be enormous earth-circling balloons situated hundreds of miles above the earth, where people will be able to work and live in comfort. Pre-fabricated sections may be joined together by fabric tunnels and exits and entries will be through airlock sections.

If all this sounds like so much science fiction so far, note that the space technologists even now declare that self-contained heat and power can also be provided in the fabric space stations.

Other huge solar heat balloons made from fabrics coated with thin metallic film will collect and concentrate the thermal energy of the sun for the operation of a power plant within the space station.

By the time we are able to fly "economy" to these cozy floating islands in the air, the fabric scientists will have to come up with some more of their miracles adapted to the serious business of fashion.

Pressurized space suits and helmets, as well as space housing, will have to do a lot more than just keep us from being boiled alive. They will have to have chic lines and be available in a wide choice of attractive colors and patterns.

Functional gadgets like clothing air-conditioning motors will have to be ingeniously situated to flatter the female form and decorated to make smart accessories. Once we get into the pressurized space stations, women will probably be able to wear something more feminine. Clothes will certainly have to be packable and easy to keep, in fabrics that will keep warm or cool and suit the decor of the space station; they will also have to be chic.

Fashions will have to compete with some pretty dazzling scenery "out there" and when the time comes, they very likely will.

HISTORIC

There is preserved in the British Museum an almanac which dates back 1200 years before the birth of Christ.

Canned vegetables with variation; try these different ways to serve

(Consumer Section)

Canned vegetables, the standby for so many winter meals, are still available on store shelves in colorful array. These easily prepared and economical foods can save the housewife both time and energy during the spring cleaning days.

Home economists of the Consumer Section remind us that canned vegetables are already cooked and need only be heated just before serving. Since top-quality vegetables fresh from the fields at the peak of their perfection are used in canning, we can be assured that canned vegetables will be both nutritious and palatable. Use the liquid in sauces, soups or gravies.

Some of our most popular canned vegetables lend themselves to gourmet cooking; tender wax beans, golden whole kernel corn, verdant peas and beans, make wonderful accompaniments for party fare or every day meals.

The home economists of the Consumer Section, Canada Department of Agriculture, suggest a few ways to perk-up these old friends.

Ways to Serve Beans With a Gourmet Touch

Beans heated in fresh cream and a little prepared mustard (optional).

Beans heated and served with sour cream and chopped parsley.

Beans au gratin — creamed beans sprinkled with grated cheese and browned in the oven.

Beans with cheese sauce — add a mixture of cream and grated cheddar cheese. Heat just enough to melt the cheese.

Beans seasoned with butter and the following seasonings: tarragon, basil, savory or garlic salt.

Beans seasoned with French dressing to which prepared mustard and lemon juice have been added. Serve hot or cold.

Beans with sautéed mushrooms or onions and toasted almonds.

Ways to Serve Whole Kernel Corn With a Difference

Corn heated in butter and seasoned to taste with any of the following: Chili powder, garlic salt, curry powder, horseradish, prepared mustard, nutmeg, cinnamon or celery seed.

Corn can be spruced up by topping with chopped parsley, pimento or paprika and, of course, a pat of butter.

Corn and Potato Salad. — Combine corn, diced cooked potatoes, chopped onions and celery. Add your favorite cooked dressing or mayonnaise. Season to taste.

Ways to Serve Peas With Imagination

Peas served with butter and seasoned to taste with any of the following: garlic powder, nutmeg, savory, minced sweet basil, thyme or mustard.

Peas served family style in a pretty bowl and topped with: finely chopped sautéed onions and a sprig of parsley, chopped olives and pimento.

Peas teamed with mushrooms and heated in thick cream, made extra special by crumbling crisp bacon over the top.

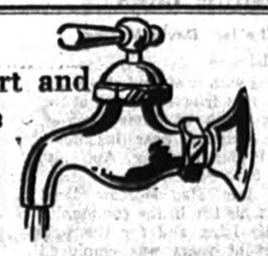

Cold peas added to a jellied salad or tossed into a fresh vegetable salad.

Cold peas lightly coated with salad oil seasoned with thyme or mint, used as a garnish on a dinner plate.

Teatime Topics

By Jean Sharp, Canadian Press Staff Writer

Much has been said and written about the perils of dealing with shady businessmen and fly-by-night salesmen. They do exist — because they find victims.

The honest businessman has his people problems too. He must deal with difficult customers within limits of trust and good will on which business must be founded to thrive.

At the Better Business Bureau in Toronto, some of the irate calls are from cranks or are unjustified complaints.

The bureau's Thomas Rimmer described some of the habitual attitudes of what they call an irresponsible customer.

One big headache, Mr. Rimmer says, is the customer who believes a contract to buy is a one-way street, binding on the merchant, elastic for him. This customer thinks he has the right to change his mind and that a business firm must then refund his money.

Not a Right

The customer who thinks he can return anything he buys is at least confused, Mr. Rimmer says.

"He believes a money back guarantee is a right, not a courtesy. All sales final is the normal way of doing business. Any other operation is offered strictly for good will."

The practice has become common, but it is still only a favor to the customer.

Some customers lie to dry cleaners about the age and value of a garment which has been damaged.

Some expect extensive and expensive appraisals and estimates to be done for nothing.

Apart from the bureau, any store owner who does have a money-back policy has met the customer who tells a clerk she is buying a hat to go to a wedding. The next Monday, the hat is returned. There is, of course, no way to prove that she has worn it.

Customers will try to return obviously worn merchandise, or return it incomplete — a dress without its belt.

They return merchandise from another store, especially small, not easily identifiable items.

Abuse Accounts

Every store has a list of charge accounts which are not to be honored. In some cases it is because a card or charge plate has been reported stolen. In others there has been no payment made for a long time and the merchant cannot extend any more credit.

Some instances of irresponsibility gain the customer nothing and cost the merchant some of his investment.

Every clothing store suffers from customers who soil clothes with lipstick or by trying them on with shoes on. Even when they don't try them on, they handle them carelessly, knocking them off a hanger or picking up light dresses when their hands are dirty.

She leaves to mourn her loss, her husband, John; three daughters, Mrs. Delmar Lee (Carol), of Toronto, Mrs. Grant Arthurs (Jean) and Mrs. Lawrence Higginson (Elizabeth), of Chute à Blondeau; and one son, John Meade, of Vankleek Hill. She is also survived by two sisters, Mrs. Thomas Bradford and Miss Emma C. Wyman, and one brother, Beardsley Wyman, all of Chute à Blondeau, and 15 grandchildren. She was predeceased by one sister, Caro Elmina, in 1941.

The remains rested at D. A. McRae's Funeral Home, Vankleek Hill, until Monday, where service was conducted by the Rev. Joseph H. Lynn, pastor of the Hawkesbury United Church, assisted by the Rev. D. B. Clark of Holy Trinity Anglican Church, Hawkesbury. Burial was in Chute à Blondeau cemetery.

The pall-bearers were Trafford Little and nephews, Allister and Daniel Wyman, John and Robert Kirby, and Wyman Bradford.

Floral tributes were numerous, while the messages of sympathy and acts of kindness received from many relatives and friends, expressed the deep loss felt in her sudden passing.

STILL PAYS

One of the first English-printed advertisements was a handbill produced by William Caxton in 1480.

Served 26 years as mayor of Mille Isles

The late Arthur Dawson

Morin Heights — Mr. Arthur Dawson, mayor of Mille Isles for 26½ years, and who occupied that office until four years ago, passed away at the Montreal General Hospital on April 14. A former councillor, and for many years a member of the local school board, he died in his 79th year.

Funeral service was held Saturday afternoon at Christ Church, Mille Isles, by the Rev. H. G. Baugh, assisted by Canon C. W. P. Baugh. The rector spoke on the words, "How firm a foundation", paying tribute to the community work of the late Mr. Dawson, and to his devotion to the interests of Mille Isles.

One brother, Jack, of Island Brook, survives.

Late D. Morrow was old resident of Mille Isles

The late David Morrow

Mille Isles —

It was with profound shock and sorrow that friends learned of the sudden death of Davie Morrow, which occurred near his home early Friday morning, April 10, in his 59th year.

The late Mr. Morrow lived most of his life in the community of Mille Isles, and for the past number of years was employed by the Boy Scouts Association.

He leaves to mourn, his wife, the former Myrtle McCullough; his son, Mervin; five brothers — Leslie, of Mille Isles, Edgar, of Lachute, Austin, of Beaconsfield, Que., Victor and Herbie, of Mille Isles; and three sisters, (Jean) Mrs. Dave Dawson, Mille Isles, (May) Mrs. Gordon Doig, Lachute, and (Anne) Mrs. Clifford Larose, of Montreal.

The funeral was held from his home on Monday, April 13, and thence to the Presbyterian Church at Mille Isles, where service was conducted by the Rev. James Armour. Interment took place in the church cemetery.

The pall-bearers were — Messrs. Russell Riddell, of Rutherglen, Ont., Ivan Watson, of North Bay, Ont., Leslie Hauldsworth, of the Boy Scouts Association, Ottawa, Donald Maxwell, Johnny Ward and Mat Noble, of Mille Isles.

44 Projects will boost Que. areas under ARDA plan

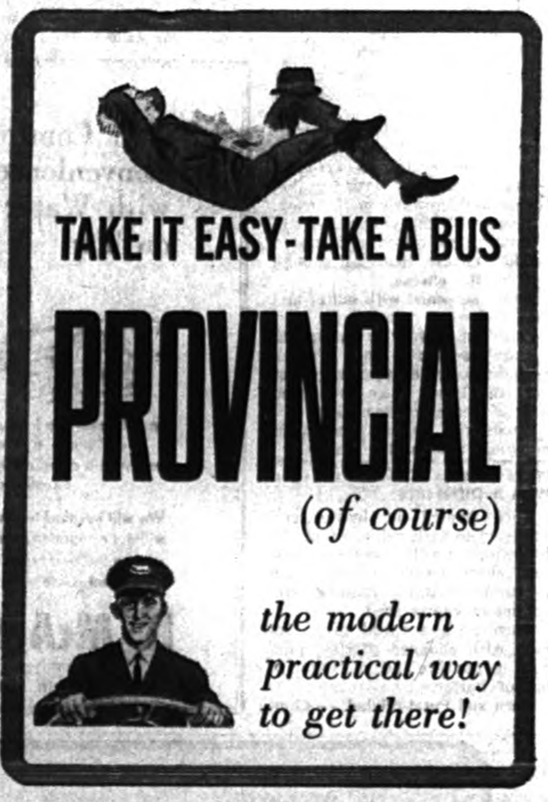

Ottawa — Forty-four new soil and water conservation projects have been approved for Quebec under the Agricultural Rehabilitation and Development Act, according to a joint announcement made recently by federal Forestry Minister Maurice Sauvé and Quebec Agriculture and Colonization Minister Alcide Courcy. Total cost will be $1,595,000, to be shared equally by the federal and provincial governments.

About two and a quarter million cubic yards of earth will be moved — most of it by dredging to clear stream channels. Nearly 33,300 acres of land will be reclaimed, protected or rehabilitated for the benefit of more than 1,300 farmers.

The largest of the projects embraces some 28 miles of the Sauvage River in the County of Abitibi East, resulting in the reclamation or protection of about 17,740 acres of agricultural land for nearly 90 farmers. The Moulanges River in Lotbinière and Levis counties, will be the scene for reclamation of 2,110 acres of land, and 140 farmers will benefit.

The projects were proposed by Quebec under the general terms of the ARDA legislation, which includes soil and water conservation measures, and is generally aimed at improving income and employment opportunities in rural areas of Canada.

Country Notebook

By WALKER RILEY, Macdonald College

From all reports, it has been a very erratic maple sugar season. There has been a good run in some areas, but others have had a poor year.

Galen Driver tells me that his father, near Richmond, made only half as much syrup as last year. In the Lachute area, Cliff Oswald reports that they are down a third. Farther north, it hasn't been too good, either.

But in Missisquoi County, Clifford Rhicard was almost up to last year's level the day we called. And in the Huntingdon area, Charles Reid finished the season well ahead of average.

We ourselves didn't have much luck, though. We tapped a few trees for the fun of it on Easter Monday, but, you remember, the weather turned bitterly cold. Five days later, we collected the icicles and boiled them down in the house. Total yield: one and one-half cups but no syrup ever tasted better.

Nitrogen fertilizer on hayfields: this is the time of year to get it on if you are going to do it. It is not a common practice, but used in the right place, it can pay off well.

Bernard de Warnaffe in Vaudreuil County used Ammonium Nitrate last year on a timothy hay field. The legumes had gone, but the sod was still strong. His clay soil is naturally rich in potash and fairly well supplied with phosphorous. He tells me he had three times the yield off the section fertilized with nitrogen.

You can't always expect results as good as that. In his case, nitrogen must have been the only limiting factor. But this is a good example of the profitable use of nitrogen.

If that field had been half legumes or more, he probably would not have seen any difference; legumes (clover, alfalfa, trefoil) are able to collect enough nitrogen from the air for themselves and for the grass besides.

If phosphorous and potash had been short in the soil, he would not have seen much effect from the added nitrogen either. The three work together as a team. And if the field had been run out, it wouldn't have paid; June grass, for instance, doesn't respond profitably to nitrogen.

But if you think you might be short of hay, and have a good field of timothy or brome, then a booster of nitrogen may be well worth while. Fifty pounds per acre seems to be the least effective amount. You find that much in 150 pounds Ammonium Nitrate or in 110 pounds Urea. It doesn't matter too much for spring application what kind you use. Buy whatever form gives you a pound of nitrogen the cheapest.

At somewhere around 12c a pound, your nitrogen bill will be about $6.00 an acre. If you value your standing hay at $6.00 a ton, you will need a yield increase of one ton per acre to pay for it.

The time to put it on is the first day you can get on the field with the drill. Some men have been known to go out early in the morning while the ground is frozen. The important thing is to have it available for the plants as soon as growth starts.

If you haven't a fertilizer drill or a broadcast spreader, use the seed drill. But be sure to wash it out with the hose the minute you are finished. The water won't hurt the drill if you leave it open in the sun to dry.

Perhaps you have all the nitrogen you need piled in the barnyard. There is 50 pounds hidden in every ten loads of manure. Actually, there is twice that much — ten pounds in each load — but only half is released in the first year.

Recently, I had the privilege of hearing one of England's top researchers in animal nutrition speak at the College. He paid high tribute to farmers as research workers. He mentioned, for example, that grass silage was strictly a farm development. After that came slatted floors for livestock.

And now, Dr. Blaxter stated that British farmers were experimenting with beef-dairy crosses for market animals. It seems that, in Britain, a Friesian steer makes an acceptable beef carcass. But Ayrshires are too light. Of all the crosses tried, it is the Charolais-Ayrshire that is attracting attention at the present.

When pressed to give reasons for favoring the Charolais, Dr. Blaxter made this surprising statement, "Because it is a great, coarse, ugly animal which has not been mucked by purebred breeders. Genes exist in the Charolais that have been lost elsewhere." His remarks brought laughter, but they made sense. Oddly, it seems that Charolais-Ayrshire calves are very slow to drink out of a pail.

Perhaps British farm research has little application here, but it is always interesting to hear of new developments elsewhere. There is plenty of room for fresh ideas and a need for the courage to try them out. And at no time in the history of agriculture, has tradition been valued less.

Case for retarded children told in film and narrative to service clubs

Three local service groups — the Lions, Rotary and Richelieu Clubs — have been informed in the past week on the affairs of the school operated here by the Lachute Association for Retarded Children.

The team presenting this story, in visual and narrative form, comprised Mr. Wesley Younkie, the president, the Rev. Sister Damien Bernard, Mrs. Rita Fillingham and Robt. F. Giles, directors of the Association. The latter presented a color film which he had photographed, showing classes, methods of training and other aspects of the school sessions; and a lucid commentary was given by Mrs. Fillingham, who is chairman of the Education Committee and principal of the school. The other member of its devoted staff is Mrs. Amy Ponech.

The pupils of this school are both French and English. The teaching program as described by Mrs. Fillingham is aimed at simple, elementary achievements — to instill self-confidence in these handicapped children, and self-dependence in such essentials as dressing, sanitation and safety; the use of money; social adjustment; physical co-ordination and speech; manual crafts and skill, and development to the mental potentiality of each child. . . This is a very tall order, but the film record showed it to be a rewarding mission, and one which also brings joy to the lives of its young subjects.

Sister Damien Bernard spoke feelingly of the humanitarian aspects of this training. She and her associates were visiting the service clubs to speak on behalf of unfortunate children who could not speak for themselves. She pleaded for love, patience, understanding, and material aid. She lauded the devotion of the two teachers, of whom this work requires God-given patience.

Wesley Younkie, the president, spoke on the financial affairs of this enterprise. With an annual budget of $10,000 and no government contribution, the Association faces a formidable challenge to carry on. It is appealing to the various school commissions to assist, and also promoting an idea to designate the month of May as "Service Club Month", in which the groups now being contacted would foot the bill of operation. (Mr. Younkie's thoughts were ably conveyed to the Richelieu Club by one of its members, Gabriel Valois. A similar appeal will also be given at a future meeting of Legion Branch 70, Lachute.)

The program was cordially received at each of the three assemblies, and sympathetic audiences gave promise of careful consideration to these community obligations. Mr. Younkie and his fellow workers are to be commended on their very practical approach, which deserves a favorable response.

Lions from Laval visit local club

Six members of the Laval Lions Club (among whom was Gilles Poirier of Ste. Dorothee police, formerly on the local force) were welcomed as guests at the club meeting here last week. They extended an invitation to the Laval Lions' golf tournament on June 10.

Paul Deslauriers, reporting on further successes for Lachute's young public speakers, informed the clubmen these three high-schoolers would be competing May 2 in the finals at Port Hope, Ont.

A film and talk (reported on this page. was given on behalf of the Retarded Children's School. Mr. Wes Younkie, the Rev. Sister Damien Bernard and Mrs. Rita Fillingham, the speakers, were introduced by Gabriel Valois and thanked by Harold Joyce. Bob Giles, Jr., presented his film version of the school's program and activities.

Mozart Carriere reported on the big annual fund-raiser, the $1,000 drawing, to take place at Lachute Spring Fair; and plans were made for a strong delegation to attend the charter night of Mont Laurier Lions, a new group sponsored by this club.

President Keith Clarke chaired this successful meeting at La Lorraine Motel, with around 50 in attendance. Ray Desormeaux was tail twister for the evening, and Hal Joyce led a lively song session.

Recent changes in C-I-L personnel

The current issue of C-I-L Contact affirms the appointment of Mr. A. Orde Anderson, assistant works manager at Brownsburg, to a position in the same capacity at Beloeil Works. He is succeeded at Brownsburg by Mr. W. A. Allan, formerly of Beloeil. The changes have been effective since April 1.

Mr. Anderson, who has resided in Lachute and served in Brownsburg plant of the C-I-L Ammunition Division since 1941, was feted by his fellow workers at Brownsburg recently prior to assuming his new post.

Rules imposed for operation of camping grounds

Newly-adopted regulations governing private camping grounds in this province were described in detail by Lionel Bertrand, Minister of Tourism, Fish and Game, as he officially opened the annual "Camping et Famille" exhibition in Montreal.

Meanwhile, a brochure listing camping grounds and trailer parks throughout the province and their facilities was distributed, as well as a map showing their location.

Mr. Bertrand said that under a new article in the Hotels Act, operators of private grounds will be required to meet various standards and to get annual permits.

Camping grounds cannot be built, enlarged or changed without prior approval of plans by the department. Such grounds must be at least 10,000 square feet in size, dry and well-drained, well away from stagnant water, and equipped with good drinking water.

Grounds, roads, signs and buildings have to be well kept and operators would be required to remove un-hygienic conditions.

A two-year record must be kept of all campers using facilities. Rates have to be submitted when the application for a permit is made, and these rates would have to be displayed in "the office used as a reception centre for campers."

Youth held criminally responsible in Ste. Scholastique truck mishap

Ste. Scholastique — A 17-year-old youth, Serge Nadon, was held criminally responsible last week at a coroner's inquest into the death of Robert Joannette and Pierre St. Georges, companions driving in a truck with Nadon, which was involved in a fatal collision on a curve not far from Ste. Scholastique village last autumn.

Young Nadon, severely injured and still under medical care, was brought in on a stretcher to testify at the inquest, which was held under direction of Dr. Louis Paradis, coroner, of St. Eustache.

The dual fatality occurred when the truck driven by Nadon which was carrying seven young men, struck a vehicle (owned by Clément Legault, a Ste. Scholastique storekeeper) driven by Paul-Emile Barbe. Another car, owned by Jean-Paul L'Allier of Ste. Scholastique, proceeding ahead of the other two vehicles, was also hit by Nadon.

Witnesses, including an Imperial Frontiersman on guard duty at Ste. Scholastique Fair, who had seen the Nadon truck leaving the exhibition grounds, testified there were seven youths in the cab, thus creating a dangerous situation. Four of these passengers, all from Laval West, were on hand to give evidence — one of them still in a wheelchair as result of the accident. One other, due to his condition of health, was unable to appear.

There were several other witnesses at the inquest.

Two of family killed, freak mishap on Rte. 8

A Hawkesbury father and daughter were killed and the mother seriously injured in a car accident on Route 8 one mile west of St. Philippe last Sunday afternoon.

Dead are 54-year-old Eugene Leroux and his 17-year-old daughter, Gabrielle. Mrs. Jeanne Leroux is in critical condition suffering from multiple injuries, while Claude Trottier, 21, of Vankleek Hill, was also taken to the St. Coeur de Marie Hospital in Hawkesbury.

Miss Leroux died instantly when the car hurtled into a roadside pole. Mr. Leroux, taken to the Smith Clinic, succumbed three hours later, from a fractured skull. His body was brought to the Menard morgue in Lachute.

According to the police report, the one-car mishap occurred when the hood on Mr. Leroux' car suddenly flew open, and, losing control, the driver swerved from the road and hit the pole. The four occupants were thrown out and the car was completely demolished by the impact.

The victims are survived by the injured Mrs. Leroux and four sons — Maurice, Gaetan, Roger, of Hawkesbury, and Georges, of Montreal, also two daughters, Mme Claudette Nolan, of De Repentigny, and Mireille, at home.

Estimates adopted for Ayersv'l Municipality

The municipality of Ayersville budgeted for a small surplus of $1,041.74 in its estimates prepared for 1964 operations. The budget was adopted last week, with estimated revenues of $134,088.07 and expenditures of $133,046.33.

Taxable property valuation is around $4,839,345, and the tax rate is 87c on the $100, producing $42,102.30. Estimated from the business tax is a revenue of $2,000, and from the amusement tax a similar amount.

A main single item in expenditures is $21,277.05 estimated for water supply. Police and fire expenses, all told, are reckoned at $5,525, and public works at $24,600.

The water and sewer account shows estimated receipts of $56,985.77 from special taxes, grants, etc., and a slightly lower figure, $56,496.08, in expenditures, a considerable part of which is in the cost of debt-servicing.

Concert-goers enjoyed sparkling performance

The concert presented by Nina Dova, talented folksinger and guitarist, at l'Ecole Secondaire on Monday evening, was enjoyed by a large audience of Community Concerts members, who found the program varied and colorful throughout.

On this last concert of the current season the Association president, Mrs. Fernand Legault, welcomed the artist and the gathering. The campaign directors, Miss Juliette Rodrigue and Mrs. G. R. Rigby, bespoke the continuing interest of all subscribers, and their re-enrolment in the 1964-65 membership campaign, to take place this month. A star attraction has been booked as one of the program items, namely, the Golden Curtain Quartet. . . Appreciation was expressed for flowers on the stage by courtesy of Bernard Tessier, Florist.

Nina Dova delighted her audience, in a performance which completely fulfilled the reputation which preceded her appearance here. A vivacious entertainer, she revealed herself not only as a talented singer and self-accompanist, but also as a sympathetic interpreter of emotion and national characteristic — which varied all the way from long-suffering devotion of the negro slave to the frivolity of Paris, from the rhythm of Cuban carnival to the tramp of a desert camel.

The singer announced her selections with a brief, scintillating introduction, charming the audience with her humor and vivacity, in a manner which added greatly to the appeal of this program. Her themes and motifs presented a virtual panorama of interest, and her costumes added to the generally colorful impression.

Her selections were in varied languages, including traditional ballads and folk themes from England, Iceland, France, Canada, United States and South American countries — in a tempo, lilt or staccato, peculiar to these national airs. In response to the generous applause she sang four encores, in the last of which, "C'est l'aviron", the audience joined their voices.

Young motorist found dead in early hours

André Cloutier, of Champagne Street, Ayersville, made the discovery around 3.10 a.m. on the road from St. Andrews about three miles from Lachute, where the Smith car had apparently left the road and crashed into a tree.

The body was brought to the Menard mortuary, where Dr. J. C. MacKimmie, joint district coroner, made the formal inquiry. Cst. Gérard Jeanrie of the Provincial Police conducted the investigation. It appeared the victim was employed in Montreal but his parents' home is at Buckingham, Que.

Driver charged after accident

Damage estimated in excess of $2,000 resulted from an accident on Main Street East, early Saturday evening. According to J. Réal Chartrand, officer-in-charge of the Lachute municipal police, a 20-year-old Lachute man was reported as the driver of a car which had hit and damaged three parked automobiles, then left the scene of the accident. He was driven to investigating police by a local taxi driver, whom the motorist had called after caching his car.

The car in question had been followed by citizens, who also reported the incident to the police. Officer Chartrand stated he received the accident report at 7.28 p.m. and the man was in the cells at 7.43 p.m.

Charged with impaired driving at St. Jerome court on Monday morning, the young man was released on bail. The car was found hidden in a private garage in town.

Delegation asks new Route 8, Hull to Mont'l

The Hon. Bernard Pinard, Minister of Roads, receiving a delegation at Quebec which had the endorsement of several Argenteuil municipalities, told the Hull Junior Chamber of Commerce spokesmen that a reconstruction project for the Hull-Montreal highway (Route 8) would cost around $50-million — too formidable a venture to be considered at the present time.

Mr. Pinard said, however, the Quebec Government would study the possibilities of improving the road from Hull to Montreal and of providing a four-lane route from Hull to St. Jerome.

In a brief presented to Premier Jean Lesage, the group stated that Route 8 linking the two cities is definitely outdated and

By BOB ATCHISON

Another trout opening started as usual — with wet feet, wet clothes and general discomfort. I suppose sane people would think the average fisherman was really out of this world; they could be right, too. I certainly doubted my sanity a little, getting up at daybreak to go fishing in a torrential rain! But believe it or not, just the thrill of casting into a stream made it all worth while. Of course, any thoughts of catching a fish were incidental.

Seriously, it is too much to expect fish on the opening day; and it will be a few days before anything is caught. The odd one will maybe; but until the lakes are all free of ice, not too much action can be expected. But rain beating down on the ice, and maybe a little sun with some fair winds, should do the trick, as soon as the North River goes down, I will be out after one of those finny logs — no ifs, ands or buts, this time.

C-I-L are once more showing the reason for the great interest shown in their ammunition. A release states that three new lines will shortly be on the market for sport shooters. A plastic shotshell — this I believe will be similar to the Remington; a new hunting bullet; and a long range shot shell for the trapshooters. The new bullet is to be known as the sabre tip, it is a thick-jacketed bullet with a nylon tip. This should be a wow. As most of us know, the lead bullets are very easily damaged and scored, making a good hit sometimes very difficult. With the nylon tip this should all be eliminated. The C-I-L have also announced different weights in some very popular calibres, and these should more than fill the bill for most shooters, especially the 7 mm. man, who had to be content with the 139-grain soft point for all his shooting; now a 160-grain is being made available. This all sounds very good for the shooting enthusiasts.

I think most of you heard the case of the missing bed sheets. The thing is though, when those sheets were stained with the leaking chemical used in making pesticides, they became great killers. So much so, that just two minutes exposure to these sheets on the skin, would mean death. What is very apparent — the government must know of the chemicals used in the manufacturing of these sprays, yet the public is given to believe by some manufacturers that they are safe to handle. Take the sprays we use in our homes; supposedly non-toxic to humans, yet they are dangerous to birds and pets. Strange that they have to be kept away from this spray if it is so harmless. . . Experimentally, we know that a bird is taken into a gas-filled chamber to find out if it is safe for humans to enter. If not, the bird will die almost instantly, and no human enters. . . In the matter of these sprays, how stupid can we get in our appraisal of human safety?

Anyone thinking the moose in our area had gone (including myself) is wrong. They were spotted this past week or so on the golf course; from there they headed down toward St. Andrews, Carillon and Cushing. It was a pleasure to have so many calls telling me about them. Deer seem to be trying to make a comeback; a number of them are around, and with a bit of luck they may get through the spring. This will depend on our local poachers; maybe they think the trout have first call on their attention. I know, from some of the talk, that these gents were out long before the season opened. Unless we do something about them, we are going to be out of luck with the fishing this year. Strange how so many beef about poor fishing conditions, yet would not think of calling the game wardens when they see infractions of the laws. I even have fishermen boasting to me of the great catches they have had, completely ignoring the limits. When I mention this, the attitude seems to be, "Well everyone else is doing it; why shouldn't I?" Too bad that someone couldn't get accross to them that, if we continue this way, then within our lifetime we are going to be minus all types of game.

I have had no reply on Carillon Island development up to now; maybe my letter to Dr. Munroe got sidetracked. (Strange things do happen.) But no matter how long this takes, I think we should pursue this enquiry on the sanctuary, who authorized a residential development, and so on. We ordinary people have the power to right our wrongs at election time — even if we sit by and let the politicians tell us what's best for us, including the destruction of natural resources. To me, the conserving of wildlife is a major issue.

Mono lines have been much in the news. Some new types have been put out on the market. One in particular is claimed to be un-kinkable. How this could be worked, I certainly don't know; but just as soon as I get a chance to try it out, I will be pleased to report the result. As far as I can see, this is a condition that cannot be overcome with our present types of spinning, especially with a spinner lure. A keel-hart sinker is almost the thing, but this does not always work. However, until this line is in use, nothing much can be said of it. Another detail on which information is asked — how do you get a fly line clean? Wash it in lukewarm water, with a non-detergent soap; dry it well after a few rinses, then dress the whole line with a good line dresser. Don't worry about how much you use at times like this, the more you put on and work in, the better the floating qualities of the line later on. You still have to wipe off the whole line, but enough will have penetrated to the interior to leave some on. After this is done a couple of times, the line should be tops.

More of the birds are showing up, from day to day. I have seen martins around; not too many of them, but give them time. Horned larks have been keeping us company too, with their raids on the feeders; they won't go right into the feeders, but they do scrounge on the ground; I have been scattering seed all over, so we have a regular colony just now. Plenty of hawks are also showing up; I have seen at least a dozen circling around, all within sight at the same time. I don't know just how they are being fed, with few field mice or moles about, and rabbits very scarce — these, I guess, are now at the low stage of the cycle.

The groundhogs are all in very good condition. The same seems to apply to a bear that was reported close by. A couple of families of lynx have also been seen, so I guess we are not doing too badly in the County. It's better to see these animals in their natural state than on top of some sports car — at least, that's my view.

Church bowlers held finals

The annual dinner and final game of the Lachute United Church bowling league was held on Tuesday evening. The social committee had prepared a buffet-style meal, in a variety of salads and casserole dishes, pies and cookies.

The president of the league, Miss Gladys Davis, extended a warm welcome to those present, and then called upon the Rev. W. Harold Thompson, the Rev. C. R. Lang and the Rev. Jas. Armour to say a few words.

The final game was between the league champion St. Pat's, skipped by Gladys Davis, and the Beavers (Ed Armstrong). The first few ends were fairly close, but the game finished with a commanding lead for St. Pat's. Mrs. W. Harold Thompson presented the winners — Mrs. Wm. Brass, Mrs. Lawson Taylor, Mrs. Bert McGibbon and Miss Gladys Davis — with the championship prizes. The runners-up — Mrs. R. Robinson, Allan Rodger, Simon Wilson and Ed Armstrong — also received prizes.

Ladies' Section, Lachute Golf Club

The Lachute Women's Section of the Golf Club was represented at the spring meeting of the Quebec Branch, Canadian Golf Union, at the Y.W.C.A. in Montreal recently by Mrs. Gilbert Ayers, honorary president; Mrs. Richard Stephens, president; Mrs. Howard Watson, past-president; and Mrs. Roger Regimbal, 1st vice-president.

The ladies' golf group were briefed on the new C.L.G.U. rules, regarding the flag stick, and the unplayable ball.

This year the opening luncheon meeting is to be held on Saturday, May 2.

Best of luck on the golf course, and may Lachute boast a few winners this season!

Criticism for Que. farm policy

Quebec (CP) — The government's agricultural policy was attacked last week as one that encourages desertion of the soil and the disappearance of the family farm.

A motion of non-confidence proposed by Eloi Guillemette, Union Nationale member for Frontenac, and seconded by Claude Gosselin, the member for Compton, was defeated by a vote of 50-22.

Mr. Guillemette chiefly criticized the Liberal government's policy of encouraging the grouping of small farms into more economic units. This was destroying the family farm, he said.

The government hadn't lived up to its promise of taking steps to raise living standards in rural areas, he said.

Premier Jean Lesage agreed with Mr. Guillemette that a broad long-term policy is necessary in agriculture. He added that because of industrialization and farm mechanization, agricultural problems like those in Quebec have appeared in every country.

MIXED EXPERIENCES

Winnipeg (CP) — Ducks Unlimited (Canada) says its fieldmen find work in the North a mixture of humor and danger. In 1963, one survey party found a cinnamon bear swimming the Waskwei River. He retreated up a dead tree. Another party was almost ambushed by a herd of wild horses along the Carrot River. The men climbed to safety until the horses went away.

Uniform 6 per cent Sales Tax aimed to benefit Quebec rural municipalities

QUEBEC THIS WEEK

By Cy Fox, Canadian Press Staff Writer

Quebec (CP) — Premier Lesage gave farmers a special place in his budget this week, stressing their interest, in unveiling two of his major fiscal policies for 1964-65.

In announcing that sales taxes will become a standard six per cent across the province, Mr. Lesage said the step would provide a partial solution to taxation problems in rural regions. He said making the sales taxes uniform will help rural municipalities meet their pressing financial needs.

He recalled that the Catholic Farmers' Union had asked for a better tax deal in rural areas. The Union had said farmers are paying more than their share of real estate taxes, since their land as well as their buildings is subject to taxation.

Mr. Lesage, also Quebec's finance minister, announced a second program which he said would benefit farmers. This took the form of an increase in the basic exemption on succession duties in the province. The exemption would be increased to $20,000 from $10,000 on estates of less than $50,000 in value, retroactive to April 1.

On the question of taxes paid by farmers, Mr. Lesage said the standard sales tax by itself will not ease the situation. But it will "permit a substantial easing of real estate taxes" because many municipalities will have their revenues increased from 25 to 50 per cent.

The money will be collected by the province and redistributed, Mr. Lesage said. Each municipality will get a minimum of $2.50 a resident, based on the federal government's census.

The sales tax field now is occupied by both the province and the municipalities. The province imposes a basic tax of two per cent, while some municipalities collect an additional two per cent. Others, like Montreal and Quebec City, collect an additional four per cent.

Opposition leader Daniel Johnson said the farmers will be the hardest hit of all Quebec groups as a result of the sales tax provision. He said rural regions often have no sales tax. These regions, he went on, are "anaemic", and the government's remedy for their ills is to bleed them.

Delegation asks new Route 8

resembles a "country road". It claimed also that western Quebec in the Hull area is the most neglected section and most isolated from the rest of the province. It urges the construction of a modern highway to link Montreal and Ottawa via Quebec Province, and to increase the attractions of Quebec in view of the World Fair in 1967.

According to the plan suggested, the new Route 8 would link Hull and Montreal via Lachute, St. Jerome and the Laurentian Autoroute, a distance of 112 miles. From Ottawa to Montreal by the south shore (Route 17) is 119 miles.

UNDERWATER CAPERS

IT ALL started 14 years ago when a fellow named Newt Perry, who had been in the Navy, did some air-hose exploring of Weeki Wachee spring.

Now the 165-million gallons a day spring, 50 miles north of Tampa, Florida, is the watery home of America's only mermaids.

A bevy of 30 lithe beauties cavort in the 137-foot-deep clear water. They are seen by tourists from all over the world, through the 19 huge laminated safety-glass picture windows of Weeki Wachee's million-dollar underwater theater.

The girls dive and soar, leap and lunge through the water — they even eat bananas and drink soda. Their secret is that each underwater performer has her own air hose. There's also a big Queen Conch shell, which is really an "air shelter."

And the mermaids aren't the only attraction at Weeki Wachee — which, incidentally, means "winding waters." There's also a riverboat ride, a covered wagon ride into the past, an orchid garden and a motel and restaurant.

Electrical industry in closer liaison with unversities

A significant step in the field of education was taken by the Canadian Electrical Association during its Eastern Zone annual meeting held recently in Montreal. This was the establishment of an "Engineering Education Committee" designed to foster cooperation between the electrical industry, both utilities and manufacturers, and the universities of Canada. The committee will include representatives of the utilities and manufacturers (25% each) who are members of the Association, and the remaining 50%, members of the Engineering faculties of the universities.

A number of sub-committees will deal with special subjects such as research, graduate education and training, recruiting, subjects of interest to faculty members, and so on. Other subcommittees will be added as may from time to time be found necessary. It was planned to establish a similar committee in the Western Zone of the Association, at the annual meeting of the Zone held in Calgary this spring.

The objective will be to promote a closer association between the electrical industry and the university authorities by keeping the university Engineering faculty informed of new developments, new techniques and problems in electrical engineering; also, to assure that engineering students are kept fully aware of career opportunities in the electric power industry. It is hoped, by this means, there will always be available a sufficient number of qualified electrical engineering graduates to fill the industry's needs.

Peace pipes as souvenir tokens

Because few Canadians have seen them and even fewer have used them, the City of Saskatoon will give away authentic Indian peace pipes as official gifts to visiting dignitaries, says The Financial Post's Saskatoon representative. It was thought the peace pipe would be a natural symbol for Saskatoon because the name of this city is Indian, as is the South Saskatchewan river that splits the city.

S. L. (Sid) Buckwold, the pipe-smoking voluntarily retired mayor, said he had been looking continually for an authentic Saskatoon token during his six years in office. Last summer on a goodwill tour to northern Saskatchewan he noticed a peace pipe in an Indian Museum at Battleford. The city council previously had given him permission to make a choice. So, he says, this was to be the souvenir.

United Church summer camp program planned

The Upward Trail Camp for Boys, sponsored by the Montreal Presbytery of the United Church of Canada, has announced the three camp dates for the 1964 season, June 29 to July 11; July 13 to July 25; July 27 to August 8.

This will be the camp's fifth season, and will again be under the direction of Mr. Bill Osterman, Director of Physical Education for Lachine High School. The camp program is designed to give Christian leadership to boys between the ages of nine and 15 years.

The camp, which is partially dependent upon the financial support of various organizations and individuals in the Montreal Presbytery, will also make available its facilities to the Girls' Committee for two junior girls' camping periods, from August 11 to 19, and August 21 to 29.

R. Flumerfelt, chairman of the Camp Board, announces that the year's activities will begin Sunday, June 21, with "open house" at the camp, on Lake Memphremagog in the Eastern Townships, for parents and friends.

Presbyt'n W.M.S. 3-day observance

Presbyterian women of Canada are celebrating (May 8-9-10, at the Church of St. Andrew and St. Paul in Montreal) one hundred years of organized women's work in Canada, and the fiftieth anniversary of the Women's Missionary Society (Western Division).

Miss Margaret Kennedy, a Montreal missionary to India since 1939, will give three studies on the theme "The World for Christ" — the motto of the Society. Some others taking part will be the Rev. H. Lennox, Moderator of the 89th General Assembly, the Rev. K. G. McMillan of the Canadian Bible Society, Miss Louise Reith, Miss Laura Pelton, Miss Mary Whale and Miss Giollo Kelly.

Different phases of the work will be demonstrated. Young people of the Indian Residential Schools of Kenora, Ont., and Birtle, Man., will provide music.

A special Communion service will be conducted at 9 a.m. on Sunday, May 10, by the Rev. Dr. R. J. Berlis.

Workers from Formosa, Nigeria, British Guiana and India will be present. All sessions will be presided over by Mrs. A. S. Curr, national president of the Society.

Spring

There's a song in my heart! The sun is new,
The starlings surprised me today;
How know they 'tis an early Spring?
Time to come back, making me sing!

I ponder the glorious wonders of God,
Faithful, unfailing, to us who are blind.
The sun comes up, the birds return!
Fulfilling His promise, hoping we'll learn.

"I'll never leave thee, nor forsake" —
Born out by facts; so daring, US we pride.
Excuse us Lord — our wonders, like TV,
Make us forget that, in reality, 'tis Thee.

Someday, the voice of Jesus may come back
To human ears. — Who knows? His words still make a satellite.
Why not? — The starlings know they're right.

How know they in Georgia that grass waits in Quebec?
Proved by geometry, calculus — or what?
Faith is unprovable, 'cept by love;
Unbuyable, unique, as Heaven above.

Methinks that faith makes birds return —
The reason, too, they fly.
As lack of droplets, fountains dry,
Flows Perfect Faith, so you can fly!

God seeth the little sparrow fall;
Please help us to remember
His faith, which makes our souls to soar,
Unfettered, His wards, for evermore!

— Gerald King Cushing, Cushing, Que., 1964

Many Canadians suffer arthritis

Arthritis is a major national health problem because it totally or severely disables 63,000 Canadians and partially disables another 285,000 Canadians every year.

This year an estimated 9,000,000 days of work and $75,000,000 in wages will be lost because of arthritis, for 68% of those disabled are of working age — 18 to 64.

So far, the causes of the common and serious forms of arthritis remain unknown, and no single drug or remedy has been found which will wipe out the symptoms of arthritis completely and permanently. But there are effective treatment measures available.

The Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society urges anyone who fears he may have arthritis to see his physician, for early diagnosis and prompt treatment can prevent serious disability in about four out of five cases — and the earlier treatment is begun, the better the results.

The CARS, a national voluntary organization with divisions in every province except Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland, itself provides treatment only upon a doctor's prescription. But it helps fight arthritis in many other ways:

— It promotes research through grants.

— It fosters professional education by furnishing fellowships for Canadian doctors for advanced training in arthritis.

— It provides factual information about arthritis to the public.

— It assists general hospitals to establish arthritis clinics.

— It establishes physiotherapy treatment centres in communities without physiotherapy facilities and provides such treatment for others in their own homes.

— It co-ordinates its services with other community agencies to meet the needs of individual patients.

Everyone in Canada benefits directly or indirectly from the Society's research, professional education and public information programs. The services of arthritis clinics, physiotherapy treatment centres and home care physiotherapy programs are usually available only in communities served by local branches of CARS.

While CARS branches now serve well over 100 Canadian communities, many more need to be served. Expansion and maintenance of CARS services can only be achieved with continued and expanded public support, for the Society is financed largely by voluntary donations which are received through United Funds, Community Chests and independent appeals.

The Bible Today

Speaking to a group of interested people in Simpson's Arcadian Court, Toronto, at a luncheon, the Rev. W. H. Armstrong of Jamaica stated that the people of the Caribbean are of "one book". He noted how deeply the Bible had influenced the life of the West Indies.

When slavery was abolished in the British Colonies of the West Indies in 1833, the British and Foreign Bible Society despatched from London, special editions of the New Testament to all liberated slaves. Today, the Bible Society is distributing New Testaments and Psalms to the students of the University of the West Indies, as well as providing thousands of Cuban refugees who have come to Jamaica, with Scriptures in Spanish and English.

The Canadian Bible Society now has the responsibility for administering Bible Society work in the Caribbean, including Cuba and British Guiana. Visiting Canada for the first time, the Rev. W. A. Armstrong, Agency Secretary for the West Indies, was conferring with officials of the Canadian Bible Society.

The West Indies is populated with many national, racial and religious strains. Hinduism and Islam are militant in both British Guiana and Trinidad.

wonder QUESTIONS?

ANSWERED BY THE RESEARCH SERVICE OF THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE

What Are Zoning Laws?

Many towns and cities set off areas, called zones, where all new buildings must be a certain type. In some zones only homes may be built; other zones are for business. A residential zone sometimes has very rigid rules concerning the kind of building that will be permitted. Perhaps the building must cost a certain figure — no lower; or apartment houses may be forbidden. It may also be forbidden to keep chickens or other livestock. A rule is often made that all houses must be a certain distance from the street or must be on a lot of a certain size. Zoning laws protect home owners, as is easily seen. If a boiler factory were allowed on a residential street, the noise would disturb those who dwell there and the property might soon fall in value.

HAS NEW MEANING

With the modern trend toward city and suburban living, Scouting is taking on a new and more important meaning. Without the hikes and summer camps of Scouting, a good many boys would miss the beauties of nature.

— Stanstead (Que.) Journal

To address UCW presb'tl executive

Miss Stella Burry, the lay representative from Newfoundland on the executive of the United Church of Canada from 1962-1966, will speak to the Montreal Presbyterial U.C.W. executive and local congregational presidents at the regular monthly meeting, in St. James United Church this Friday morning, May 1, at 10 o'clock.

Miss Burry was born in a sealing and fishing village in Newfoundland. Encouraged to study by her mother and her minister, she became a teacher in a local school. She saved her money until she could meet the expense of attending the Methodist National Training School, then in Toronto.

After serving for several years in two city churches in Toronto she returned to Newfoundland. There was much poverty in St. John's due to the depression. Relief, 6 cents per person per day, given by the commission government, was inadequate. Miss Burry helped the women to budget their money, to prepare meals, to sew for their families, and secured clothing they were unable to make or finance themselves.

When Emmanuel Church in Montreal was sold, the Women's Missionary Society gave their portion of the proceeds to complete the payment of a home in St. John's. Emmanuel House, a community centre and a residence for young girls from the outports, has been superintended from its beginning by Miss Burry.

Following the meeting Miss Burry will be a guest at a luncheon arranged in her honor.

Meteor owners use their garages for storing tools, ladders, baby buggies, bicycles, toboggans, etc.

(Well, you wouldn't hide a beautiful car like this in a garage, would you?)

Beautiful—yet every inch is practical. For instance, push that button on the dash. Look in the rear view mirror. Meteor's Breezeway rear window is gliding down. Lower it just a little to counteract misting. Lower it the whole way for lots of fresh air—without that wind-tunnel effect. And because the rear window slants inward, weather can't get at it . . . can't obscure your rear vision, summer or winter.

Meteor's size is beautifully right, too. It's a full 215.5 inches long (take six giant steps.) It's wide (two giant steps). You enjoy a smoother, more stable ride, and far easier handling. And the interior is as big as the feeling you get when you drive a Meteor.

Think of this long, beautiful car in your driveway. (And think of all the stuff you'll be able to store in your garage!) Now go and see your Mercury dealer.

EDITORIAL NOTES...

"In this Parliament are three Estates, the Lords Spiritual, the Lords Temporal and the Commons, but in the Reporters' Gallery yonder sits a Fourth Estate more important far than all."
— Edmund Burke

The town we live in COMMUNITY PRIDE makes itself apparent in simple, inexpensive manifestations — like a tidy yard, a fence in good repair, and a coat of fresh paint. But essentially, true pride must show itself in action; lip service is not enough. It's a matter of personal participation, just as personal pride requires not only a self-respecting attitude but a little action — the head held high, the stature erect, a suit well pressed, and shining shoes.

Lachute town crews are busy repairing damaged sidewalks. Next they will be patching roads; then there will be seedlings in the park, activity around the flowerbeds, . .

Have you passed through a "crummy" town, with a feeling of relief when you emerged again into the green countryside? Boiled down, the unsavory impression may be due to individual cases of neglect. Homes, factories and institutions are the core of the community. No amount of road-sweeping can compensate for littered premises and untidy properties.

With the snowbanks long since vanished from these parts, we note with displeasure many unraked lots around town, some of them owned by proprietors who should know better.

To conclude with a quote from one of our western weeklies: It never hurts residents of a community to reflect occasionally on the pride they take in their own homes, their own businesses and their community as a whole. No town is perfect but can we honestly say we are doing everything in our power to make ours appealing to visitors, tourists, out-of-town shoppers and, most important, to ourselves?

Salute to an old showman

OUR CHERISHED columnist Walter Jackson (Uncle Walt) was the subject of a nostalgic flashback to the good old days of showbiz, in Al Palmer's Ourtown column of The Montreal Gazette one day last week. Harking back to the earlier decades of this century, many older readers rejoiced again in names, places and recollections in the glamorous aura of Montreal's entertainment circuit.

Those recollections reminded one, for instance, that the mandolin, a once-popular instrument, is obsolete. (We have one, so we're dated.) That Westmount in 1897 was 'way out in the country. That the Hawaiian craze in 1917 was probably as influential in popular tastes as the Beatle bug in 1964.

We are proud to have Uncle Walt among our associate writers. He and his kind are the symbol of an era more stable and sincere, when crackpots and fanatics assumed only their minimal proportions, and sanity seemed pre-eminent. . . That was some years ago.

A one-day crusade

"NO MORE important endeavor can be found than the protection of our children from suffering and death," said John Atkinson of Toronto, general chairman of the Canadian Highway Safety Council. Mr. Atkinson annouced the Council's active participation in Canada's nation-wide Child Safety Day, set for coast-to-coast observance on Sunday, May 3. The one-day campaign of awareness is being sponsored jointly by the Canadian Highway Safety Council and the National Safety League of Canada.

Mr. Atkinson emphasized the need for constant vigilance as youngsters play, go to school, and move around the home. Child Safety Day, he declared, was designed to alert everyone to the need for watchfulness every day of the year. "Teach the kiddies safety; make it a habit, then learn, yourself, to be watchful of them at all times," he urged.

An invisible killer

TRAFFIC SAFETY experts have discovered many reasons for the mounting death toll on Canada's highways. Speed and alcohol are, perhaps, foremost. But how often does the motorist consider the "invisible killer" — exhaust fumes?

Many motorists probably think of the danger of carbon monoxide poisoning, if at all, when warming up the car in the garage on a cold morning. But is the driver fully aware of the fume danger while driving? . .

The British Columbia Automobile Association says 165,000 non-fatal traffic accidents each year result from the driver "blacking out" for no apparent medical reason, and not from lack of sleep. The cause may well be carbon monoxide poisoning, says the BCAA.

Every motorist, whether he knows it or not, breathes in some of these deadly fumes. They seep into the car through the grille or any crack in the car body. And they flow thickest in bumper-to-bumper traffic from the car ahead.

When the carbon monoxide count in the blood reaches five per cent — and that is achieved quickly in some conditions, experts say — the first sign of poisoning is blurred vision. A headache, nausea and unnatural sweating are following symptoms. The blackout is the final step on the way to death, unless the situation is relieved.

The potency of automobile exhaust fumes was tragically illustrated in Toronto recently, when fumes from a running car parked in a garage killed children sleeping in a bedroom above.

The B.C. Automobile Association lists some common-sense precautions all motorists should observe, in addition to the obvious safeguards against running a car motor in an enclosed space:

— Have the car's exhaust system checked thoroughly at intervals for leaks.

— Always drive, summer or winter, with at least one front vent window open.

— At the first sign of poor co-ordination, drowsiness or headache, pull over, get out of the car and breathe some fresh air.

In short, stay on guard against the invisible killer.

"O Canada" not quite unanimous

"O CANADA" will be adopted as the country's national anthem in a few months, says a member of the Pearson government. If a majority of Canadians want a new anthem "of their own," which may be true, "O Canada would be a poor choice, comments The Financial Post in an editorial. In its original version, which is French, it is unmistakably a patrotic hymn for "les Canadiens" in their St. Lawrence valley homeland. It speaks of them living by their mighty river (fleuve géant) among foreign peoples (parmi les races étrangères).

There could be of course not the slightest objection to an anthem on the ground of the author's ethnic origin. But what is the use of a "national anthem" that means one thing in Quebec and something quite different in the rest of the country? It would make very little sense if the British had an anthem in which the Scots sang about the Battle of Bannockburn and the English about the Battle of London; or if the U.S. anthem had verses in honor of Robert E. Lee and Old Black Joe for Southern singers and verses about Honest Abe for the North.

To be any use at all, a Canadian national hymn should unify, not divide. It should say and mean the same thing in both languages. Probably it should say something about the unity, fraternity and common loyalty of the two founding peoples, not neglecting the Canadians who belong to neither by descent. "O Canada" does not fill the bill in any respect. Instead of hastily "adopting" it merely to satisfy popular clamor, Ottawa would do better to offer a prize for the best anthem, with a 1967 deadline for entries. And incidentally, when Canadians do acquire an official new anthem, there is no reason why they should not keep "God Save the Queen" as an official old one. The U.S. had two anthems for more than 100 years. Switzerland has 22, one for each canton.

The Pearson Pattern

By RAY ARGYLE

It is now quite clear that Ottawa's latest pension and tax-sharing offer to the provinces marks, as Premier Jean Lesage has said, the birth of a "new type of Confederation" for Canada.

What is still far from clear is the long-term effect which the new policy will have on the strength and vitality of the Federal Government.

Prime Minister Pearson's bold action in reaching a settlement with Quebec on a national contributory pension plan more than makes up for the dismal failure of the recent federal-provincial fiscal conference at Quebec City.

Equally, the Prime Minister's decision to increase by one-third rebates paid to the province out of income tax revenues will go far toward putting the provincial governments on a more sound financial basis. There is a very real likelihood, however, that taxes will have to be boosted by more than $200 million per year to make up for Federal Government losses.

There is a danger, too, that these fast-moving actions could signal a series of retreats by Ottawa ending in the virtual elimination of a strong federal government in Canada.

It is to be hoped that coming events will not bear out such a gloomy interpretation. I do not share the opinion that we are going along with a "sell-out" to Quebec, but I am concerned about further weakening the Federal Government in the face of increasing demands from the provinces.

As far as the Canada Pension Plan is concerned, the new deal reached to accommodate Quebec and Ontario is welcome news. The plan is not as good as the one proposed by Quebec, but it is an improvement over Ottawa's most recent offering. By ensuring pensions up to $104 monthly in addition to the $75 universal old age pension, it will bring at least minimum security to hundreds of thousands of Canadians who would never have been covered by private pension plans.

It can be expected that the nation's insurance companies will continue to oppose the plan, but they will be able to count on very little political assistance from opposition parties in Parliament.

The pension plan will also be used by opponents of Government-sponsored medical insurance in their attempts to further delay a national medicare program for all Canadians. It will be argued that the pension plan is all Canada can afford for the time being—that we can't possible undertake the costs of federal medicare at the same time.

This argument should be disposed of promptly, because it is totally false. Government-sponsored medicare, as we now know from the experience of Saskatchewan, actually costs nothing that Canadians are not already spending privately to meet doctor's bills. But by sharing the cost equally among everyone, it is both the most sensible and most humanitarian way of protecting the nation's most valuable asset — the good health of its citizens.

SUGAR AND SPICE

It Would Be Heavenly!

By BILL SMILEY

Bill Smiley

What would you like to find, most, when you go to heaven? Let's assume, for one wild, exhilarated moment, that we're all going to get there.

Some people would plump for a meeting with loved ones. This I can never understand. It's like a fellow who has served a life sentence waiting to be greeted by the warden when he hits the pearly gates.

Others, sad souls, would be overjoyed if they could "just be happy." Not me. Being happy all the time would be a real drag. I thoroughly enjoy being miserable on this orb, so that when something good happens, my pleasure is intensified.

Quite a few, who suffer from physical ailments, would be satisfied with peace and comfort. The insomniac imagines days and nights of solid slumber. The arthritic dreams of being able to scratch his opposite ear without feeling as though his arm was being severed at the shoulder by a red-hot iron.

Flat-chested girls would settle for a mammoth bosom. They forget that none of the rest of us would be interested.

Some chaps I know would be perfectly happy to leave anytime if they could count on a golf course with emerald fairways and velvet greens, 18 holes a day in which they sliced not, nor did they hook, and a good game of poker at the 19th, with the bar handy.

Many sober citizens I know would be happy in heaven for ever afterwards, if they could be guaranteed (and get it in writing) that their wives (or husbands) would be in the other place, permanently.

Alcoholics would not only be in heaven, but the seventh of the same name, if their crock ranneth over, perpetually, and somebody else was looking after things.

A few millionaires, once they had admitted they couldn't take it with them, would be serene in a place where there were no taxes, no labor movements, no wages to pay, and nobody asking them to donate to something every 12 minutes.

My personal fantasy is a simple one. I'd go like a shot if someone would promise me, unconditionally, a dark, swirling trout stream, impregnable to invasion by women, telephones and other nuisances.

I can see it now. Swift, deep, crooked, ending in a vast, silent, mysterious beaver pond, loaded with lunkers. I can hear it: the exciting mutter of a small dam just around the bend; the splosh of a startled frog; the sudden, heart-stopping takeoff of a disturbed partridge, the whack of a beaver tail.

However, since my chances of getting to heaven are just about as slim as my chances of a personal trout stream if I did get there, I guess I'll settle, on Opening Day, for my old haunt, the Secret Place Where The Big Ones Are. Not a soul knows about it, except me. And the 900 noisy characters who have heard about it since last year.

Heaven, thou art distant, yet,
I would work like heck to get
There, if thou could condone
A stream for me—and me alone.

Diary of a Vagabond

LEGENDS SPELL DOLLARS

Michael Francis is an Indian, a North American Indian, with a broad smile, a mop of black Beatle-like hair and an ambition. In 1953 after an itinerant existence cooking in restaurants, fishing for lobster and lumbering in Maine he discovered he could paint.

Born on Big Cove reservation near Moncton, New Brunswick, of Micmac parentage, he grew up in the poverty of his surroundings with little hope of ever surmounting these conditions.

Then Michael Francis learned he did have a heritage. He tried expressing himself in pictures. The deer of the forest were his early models and when he sold his first picture for $5.00, he knew the exhilaration of creativity and longed to interpret the legends of his people.

There was a reason for his choice of subject. Michael's chief purpose in life he told me as I watched him work last summer, is to earn enough to help his people (meaning his race) out of the darkness of inertia.

When Dr. Ivan Crowell, director of handicrafts for the province of New Brunswick, saw Michael's early efforts he recognized his refreshing and unusual talent. He set him up at a work bench in the craft buildings in Fredericton, listened to the tales of Glooscap and the Summer Queen. He heard how Michael's grandfather used to tell him tales of the "little people" while he carved wooden dolls and kept the children amused.

Inspired by his new-found ability to paint, Michael created designs for correspondence cards which are sold in series contained in handwoven packets. The demand for these legends from gift and souvenir shops was way beyond the supply last summer.

Inspired by this success, Michael, encouraged by Dr. Crowell, expanded his talent by designing "Tatler The Loon", a modernistic bird to embellish sports shirts and drapery fabric.

Michael's dream for his people takes shape in the small hut on Big Cove Reserve where hand looms click, operated by both children and adults. They are temperamental workers. Often they resent the discipline of the government employed supervisor who tries to set a pattern of work hours and leisure time. In spite of temporary lapses, the results of their endeavor, Michael Francis' genius, and of Dr. Crowell's enthusiasm have established a typically Canadian souvenir industry.

Pall-bearers were Messrs. Willis McAdam, Lorne McAdam, Bothwell McAdam, John Briscoe, Stanley Baldwin, and Percy O'Brien. Burial took place in Papineauville Protestant Cemetery.

Many beautiful floral pieces bore testimony of the love and respect in which she was held.

What a garden means to a child

— By NANCY CLEAVER —

"Daddy, let me buy some seed packages all my very own!" Tommy asked eagerly. His dad was making plans for his garden and drawing up a list of seeds and other supplies which he needed.

"Aren't you a bit young to be planting things all yourself?" his father asked.

Tommy's eyes shone happily: "I'd like to try. I've helped you and Mummy several years, and last spring Mummy promised that maybe I could have my own little corner in the garden this year. I know what I want to grow . . . carrots, because they are good to eat raw, and nasturtiums, because they are pretty and easy to grow too, and their leaves taste nippy."

"Be sure you don't go chewing up little black insects that sometimes are on the under-side of their leaves!" Tommy's Dad warned him quickly.

"I'll ask your mother about you having a garden after you go to bed. If you plant the seeds you will have to take care of them. We don't want to be ashamed of your part of the backyard when Grandad comes to inspect the vegetables and flowers!"

When Tommy's parents talked over their son's garden they decided to let him go ahead.

"He's so keen about it, it would be horrid to say 'No!' if we can say 'Yes'. There are lots of things Tommy has learned about growing things from helping us. And after all it's more important that he should "grow," than that we should have a very grand garden, where he has no small spot of his own," his mother observed.

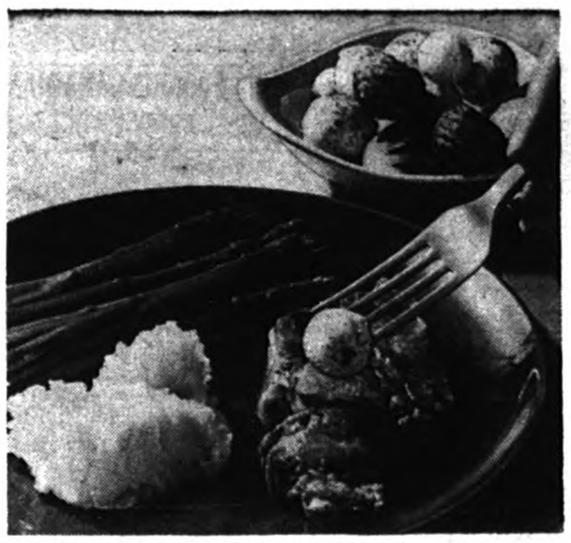

"I remember an old woman with a large family in the village where I grew up. They had a marvellous family garden . . . each child had two rows of his own. She used to say proudly, "We grow children, too, in our garden!" and it was quite true. "They had a lot of fun, it kept them out of mischief, and it was really astounding the quantities of flowers and vegetables they produced," Tommy's Dad added.

Enthusiasm for gardening is as catching as measles. If Mother or Dad, or both of them, get a lot of satisfaction from a garden hobby, of course their child is going to want to dig and plant and water and watch the small green sprouts appear. Adults can see quite plainly that a bud appearing or a bud opening is a real miracle in a child's eyes — and in this prosiac world are there not far too few "miracles?"

Children comprehend a great many things before they go to school and parents can make a gardening venture a real "learning situation". A child becomes skilled and acquires knowledge by actually doing things himself. He does have to have guidance and some help, but these should be kept to the very minimum.

Here is a chance for him to make choices, and to let them be his own decisions within limits. Your child is the most important "crop" in your whole garden.

This is the time for fresh veal on Eastern markets. By a happy coincidence it is approaching the fresh asparagus season. The home economists of the Consumer Section suggest serving delicately flavored veal chops with fork-tender asparagus. Veal is enhanced when served with paprika butter balls.

— Canada Department of Agriculture

Spring veal a welcome change

(Consumer Section)

Fresh veal is a welcome change for springtime meals. At this time of year veal is most plentiful in the East, Quebec and Ontario supplying most of the market. Veal compares favorably with beef in food value. It provides high quality protein, important B vitamins and iron. Weight watchers will appreciate its low fat content.

There are two types of veal. The spring veal offered in Eastern markets is the young, lightweight veal from dairy herds and is pale, greyish-pink in color with very little surface fat and no fat marbling. The fall veal offered in Western markets is the heavier veal from beef type cattle or more mature veal and is dark pinkish-brown in color with a good covering of fat and a small amount of marbling.

Local markets are now offering cuts of veal to suit every purse. Good buys for spring veal this year are: leg, loin (bone-in) and rolled shoulder roasts, shoulder chops, and minced veal.

Although veal comes from young animals and is therefore tender, its flavor is best if given long slow cooking. Veal should be cooked to the well done stage, 180° F. on a meat thermometer or until the cooked meat is greyish in color with no trace of pink. A moderately slow oven temperature, 325° F. is recommended.

Most veal cuts are tender enough to be roasted, however, because of the mild flavor of veal, there is an advantage in cooking it in seasoned liquids. Chops, steaks or cutlets may be panfried or baked, but for added flavor they are delicious braised in a well-seasoned gravy.

Any one of the following seasonings goes well — thyme, savory, marjoram, paprika, curry, mustard, or garlic.

Apple juice, tomato juice, beef broth, consommé or white wine can turn any veal dish into a gourmet's delight.

Just before serving, add a decorative touch with parsley, watercress, or lemon slices.

The home economists offer these delicious recipes for veal. You will notice that pork which goes so well with veal and adds extra juiciness, has been used in the stuffing for the roast and bacon with the veal patties.

Festive Veal Patties

1½ Pounds minced veal, ½ cup chopped onion (1 small onion), ¾ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, ¼ teaspoon nutmeg, 2 tablespoons butter (melted), 4 tablespoons light cream, ¼ cup seasoned flour (¼ cup flour, ½ teaspoon salt, dash of pepper), 2 tablespoons water, 1 egg, beaten, ¾ cup fine, dry breadcrumbs, 12 strips bacon, 1 tablespoon butter.

Mix meat with onion, seasonings, butter and cream. Make 12 patties (¼-inch thick) sprinkle with seasoned flour. Add water to beaten egg, dip patties in egg mixture and coat with breadcrumbs. Put one strip of bacon around each patty and fasten with toothpicks.

Fry patties in the 1 tablespoon butter over moderate heat 10 to 12 minutes each side. 6 servings.

Stuffed Veal Shoulder

Four to 6 pounds boned veal shoulder, 2 to 3 tablespoons fat, pork stuffing, ½ cup apple juice (or white wine).

Sprinkle the veal with salt and pepper, then spread the pork stuffing evenly over meat. Roll up tightly and sew and fasten with skewers.

Brown meat over moderate heat, about 10 minutes. Season with salt and pepper. Place in roasting pan, add apple juice or wine and cook covered in a moderately slow oven (325° F.), or simmer on top of stove about 45 minutes per pound or until meat thermometer registers 180° F.

If a thickened gravy is desired, blend one tablespoon of flour with a little apple juice or wine and stir into gravy in pan. Bring to boil on top of stove, stirring constantly until smooth and thickened slightly.

Pork Stuffing — 1½ cups finely chopped onion, ¼ cup butter, ¼ cup chopped parsley, 1 teaspoon basil, 1 pound ground pork, 1½ cups soft, stale bread crumbs, ½ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, 1 egg.

Sauté onion in butter until soft and transparent, about 5 minutes. Add parsley, basil and ground pork and cook gently for 10 minutes. Mix bread crumbs, salt and pepper and toss together with the lightly beaten egg. Add the pork mixture and combine thoroughly.

Child safety, a major concern

By Eve Gilstorf,
Director of Women's Activities,
Cdn. Highway Safety Council

Baby-sitting has become part of the modern way of life. Many mothers help support their families by working full or part-time. Many current activities take mothers away from their homes for short periods. There is less full-time help in homes. As a result, babies and small children are spending a great deal of time with sitters.

This makes baby-sitting and the safety of both child and sitter a subject of major concern to parents, who could do much to encourage this type of safety education.

In employing a sitter, parents have one basic motive — their children's safety. Their absence from home can be neither enjoyable nor productive unless there is complete confidence in the sitter's ability to protect the children's health and happiness in virtually any situation.

Baby-sitting is a job to be taken seriously, to be learned, practiced and improved. It is a business arrangement in which the sitter gives the employer definite services in return for compensation.

Sitting is often a teenager's first remunerative employment. It affords an opportunity to develop high standards of service and responsibility applicable to future full-time employment. It is also preparation for parenthood and other areas of family living.

Child Safety Day, May 3, is a good time to give some thought to this area of family life and perhaps to take a look at the baby-sitting course offered by the National Safety League of Canada. Any organization looking for a project, can benefit the community by sponsoring a baby-sitters' course.

Japanese women in medical role

Almost 10 percent of Japan's doctors are women; and more than 10 percent of the dentists are women.

All of Japan's 46 university medical school and eight dental schools are open to women. About half of the women doctors, however, take their training at the Tokyo Women's Medical College. The college was established in 1900 by Mrs. Yayoi Yoshioka and has an annual graduation class of about 60. Graduates serve their internship in three hospitals attached to the school.

There are more than 121,000 full-fledged nurses and another 80,500 assistant nurses in Japan. There are about 560 preparatory schools in Japan, training girls to be assistant nurses, and another 250 higher schools graduating full-fledged nurses.

Specially Written for The Lachute Watchman

By Jean Sharp,
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A century ago in Montreal, women of the Church of Scotland formed an auxiliary association to assist missionary work among the French.

That was the beginning of the Women's Missionary Society (WD) of the Presbyterian Church in Canada.

This year, May 8 to 10, members of the WMS will gather in Montreal to mark a double anniversary. It is the centenary of the formation of that first group. It is the 50th anniversary of the amalgamation of the three groups which make up the WMS.

For the first dozen years they concentrated on supporting a missionary at Côte St. Paul, on personal help and teaching. In 1875, after the union of the Presbyterian Churches in Canada, the Montreal group became the Ladies' French Evangelization Society. They set up a school in Montreal which had Bible, religious and sewing classes, where clothes were made for the poor and the needy were fed.

Took New Name

In 1882 they became the Montreal Women's Missionary Society. They continued their former work and began to send money and supplies to Indians in the northwest and to western mission stations.

Letters they wrote to missionaries in the New Hebrides, the Caribbean and India were their first overseas work. They began sending money and supplies to India, and in 1892 they paid the salary of their first foreign missionary, Dr. Lucinda Graham, in Honan.

Join Gold Rush

The third part of the WMS grew out of the Atlin Nurse Committee formed in 1899 to send two nurses to the Klondike. They worked for $25 a month in a makeshift mud-roofed cabin and tent the first year. The community pitched in and the following spring built the first Presbyterian hospital in Canada in Atlin. As the work of the initial committee expanded they were recognized in 1903 as the Women's Home Missionary Society.

In 1910 the three groups realized they were sometimes overlapping in membership, work and organization and began amalgamation negotiations. They were formally constituted the Women's Missionary Society of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, Western Division, on May 15, 1914, in Knox Church, Toronto.

To mark the dual anniversary, the 45,000 member group has raised $38,000. It has started a fellowship house in Winnipeg; built a nurses' residence in Jobat, India, a Christian education building in Taipei, Formosa, and a Bible school in Formosa.

GLOVE-EQUETTE For Good Grooming

Proper gloving means good grooming. So Aris, creators of fine leather and fabric gloves, suggests some fashion operating procedures on what gloves to wear and when to wear them.

Since all outside occasions require the hand to be gloved, the style of the glove is determined by the occasion. So if one glove is removed to pay a fare or for a purchase, it should immediately be put on again. Indoors, both gloves are always removed except for such formal occasions as wedding receptions and similar social affairs. At such events, the right glove is removed to permit eating, drinking or smoking, none of which should ever be done with the glove on the hand. In the case of the shoulder-high glove with its inside-the-wrist vent, the hand of either or both gloves can be slipped off and tucked back neatly on the wrist.

Also of importance to the woman who wishes to look well-dressed at all times is the length of her gloves which should be selected in relation to the sleeve. Currently riding high in popularity because of its versatility is the fore-arm or 8-button glove which looks proper with elbow to bracelet-length sleeves. Generally, whether in leather or fabric, this length is considered a daytime fashion, to be worn with suits, ensembles and coats. Another daytime glove is the four-button or mid-arm glove. This complements a full-length slender sleeve, as it can be worn over or under, can also be worn with a three-quarter sleeve to show off a bit of bare arm between. And if it is completely tailored, the short or wristbone length glove can go out by day, particularly in warm weather and warm climes when it complements a short-sleeved or sleeveless day dress or costume.

For five and later, glove lengths take two directions. Generally, the very short glove is worn with a short and sleeved dinner dress or suit, although in the case of teen-agers, it can also accompany a full-length ball gown. Twelve-button or above-the-elbow gloves look smartest with a cocktail dress, usually crushed to just the elbow. Sixteen and twenty button gloves are worn only for the most formal of occasions.

Choice of leather or fabric is optional, since Aris tailors its fabric gloves with the same attention to detail as its finest kidskin. Sure to keep every hand in fashion, therefore, would be a wardrobe of fabric and leather gloves in varying lengths and styles.

Ourselves as others see us — a jolt to the Canadian ego

"Exile from Sunnyacres"

By Margaret Cook

Not for long now — I mean the "exile" bit. With increasing impatience, we think each day of the little road winding around the three white birches, and over the hill, along the part that is always moist, and there, seen dimly through the encroaching trees, the yellow house. — Hasten the day!

Meanwhile, restored to our usual irritating self, we try to do a bit of housecleaning. We read an article recently on the annual madness that seizes women and makes them tear things up, wash blankets, air drapes, and all the other destructive and constructive acts of spring. Not an ardent housekeeper, we are yet afflicted somewhat by this malady. The man of the house has the same urge; only his is directed outdoors. Fertilizer on the lawns, and on rose-bushes, shrubs pruned, limbs sawed off trees, roof made water-resistant — he's just as bad as the lady of the house. But come June, and we shall walk in the garden of an evening, sniffing the fragrance of well-kept plants; and going to bed, breathe in that subtle odor of fresh curtains and coverings. It takes, in case you are interested, forty-five minutes to iron one of those floral, quilted bedspreads with ruffled frill. The price of gracious living! . . . Did you see, by the way, the story of a placard in a washroom which asked, "Why take two, when one will do?" Somebody had scrawled underneath the answer, "For the sake of gracious living!"

Before all this flurry, we had had St. David's Day, for the Welsh, St. Patrick's for the Irish, and now St. George's for the English is upon us. One should keep up with the saints. Everybody knows about St. Patrick's snakes, and St. George's dragon; but St. David seems not to have consorted with any particular animal. Indeed, information regarding him is scant. His shrine is still to be seen at St. David's in western Wales, in a little town called after him. Its ancient name was Minevia. The Book of Common Prayer says crisply (opposite March 1): "Saint David of Wales, Archbishop of Minevia, c. 544." The c stands for circa, Latin for "about", so the compilers of the Prayer Book were not very well informed about him either. The dictionary adds that David was supposed to be a relative of the legendary King Arthur. We have always had a special interest in St. David, because our father was born on his day. In these days of waterfront lords, and noisy separatists, it is nice to think of the saints!

Nice, too, are the bits of native custom that come our way, like the recent annual sugaring-off which is held in the Arboretum near the town. As we ate the delicious golden stuff, picking it off the snow with a maple twig, we reflected that sugaring-off is one of the few customs that are definitely Canadian. Down the street from us is a family from Oklahoma, here for a year, which is nearly over, and full of kind curiosity about things Canadian. It is rather fun to hear about us as other people see us. Like most Americans, these people had preconceived ideas about Canada, which they have found disconcertingly wrong. Quebec, they thought, was a quiet backwater, where two different nationalities lived cosily together. Instead, they found a province in ferment, separatists letting off bombs and raiding armories, while the few French-speaking people on the street hardly know their English-speaking neighbors. And Montreal, not so much French as cosmopolitan. Very puzzling. Also, they had always thought that we were their good neighbors, fond of our American cousins. Imagine their dismay to find that there is a good deal of cynicism about the American way of life in general. Well, when June comes round, there will be one repatriated American family which will never again be able to think complacently of their little old, unsophisticated, ice-chilled neighbors to the north.

As chance would have it, the same day we were talking with the puzzled American, we had an errand to another neighbor, this one from Scotland. I was telling the lady of the house about our Americans' disillusionment, and she commented that Canada does not seem to have a national image in people's minds. At least not in Europe. Europeans tend to say, "You're American, aren't you?" Or more bluntly, "Where are you from?" The daughter of our house had this experience abroad two years ago; she was often taken for French, or Scandinavian, seldom identified as Canadian. Years ago, a woman in Scotland said to me, "What are you? You can't be American, for you are not chewing gum, and I have yet to hear you say, 'I guess'." Evidently, there is no picture in the mind, of a Canadian. I think the image that most often comes to mind is that of the wide hat and tight breeches of the R.C.M.P. Since obviously all Canadians cannot go about thus attired, the average foreigner is at a loss. I think this absence of image is a clue to our national character. We are a quiet, rather dull people, not inclined to panic, and averse to loud talk or hasty action. . . . Well, it could be worse!

It has just occurred to me that this article is an example of the dullness! Before we get further involved, we hasten to say that there are colorful Canadians. Our dear friend, Amos, was one; the head of the Progressive-Conservatives may irritate us, but he does not lack color. Cardinal Leger seems never to say a dull thing, and the late, lamented Camillien Houde was a delight. But by and large, we are, I fear, a dull people. . . . To counteract some of this, we go in a few days to see a cousin living in Vermont, an ex-officer of the R.C.M.P. Returning from the first World War, he was given three years to live. He is now over eighty, and incidentally, still a Canadian citizen. He is not dull, but he is stubborn. (A family trait, murmurs the head of the house.)

Next time we write, we hope to head it "Sunnyacres Sketches".

Mediation role filled by College of Physicians

The College of Physicians reports that its committee on conciliation has met on three days since the beginning of the year. It has studied 63 complaints laid by the public against particular physicians.

Among these complaints, six had concerned excessive fees and 16 fees that were justifiable but that the patients could not pay. The College intervened to obtain reductions in the bills.

In six other cases, minor shortcomings in professional ethics were taken up. In addition, the cases of nine physicians have been referred to the executive of the College, while two physicians have been invited to present themselves at the next meeting of the committee on conciliation.

Besides, the College has received 277 complaints since January 1964. The most important were automatically referred to the committee on conciliation. But in the majority of cases it happened that the disputes were settled without the intervention of the committee becoming necessary.

The committee on conciliation was created in June 1961 and it has met 25 times since then. Made up of three governors of the College, its role is to try to find an area of understanding between the physician and his patient, when a difference occurs. It is thus not a tribunal. It merely suggests to the parties involved a method of settlement satisfactory to each. However, when the case is particularly serious, it refers it to the executive of the College, which can cite the physician involved before the committee on discipline.

Country Notebook

By WALKER RILEY, Macdonald College

All around the country, seed drills are out and ready to go. A few early fields are already in, but it looks as if seeding will not be general in Quebec for a week or two yet.

If you haven't bought your seed yet, and feel you have to cut costs somehow this spring, don't sacrifice quality. Save, instead, on quantity.

Certainly, premium seed will cost you more — perhaps two or three dollars an acre. But it is worth it. Just balance the added cost against the saving of an extra year before you have to plough that field again, or against the value of an extra half ton of hay in the second, third and fourth years.

If money is short, cut back on seeding rates, instead. We usually sow far more seed than ever has a hope of surviving. Take timothy, for example. My little book says there are 1,230,000 seeds in a pound. At eight pounds per acre, that is over 200 seeds on every square foot. Not more than one in ten will survive to produce a crop. Isn't that a surprising waste ?

The recommended rates are for average conditions. If you want to take a little extra care, you can quite safely cut back. A well prepared seed bed, of course, and a little extra phosphorous and potash, a thin nurse crop which won't smother the seedlings, good weed control, will more than compensate for a lower seeding rate.

Here's a quick run-down of some of the varieties recommended by the Quebec Seed Board:

Timothy: The variety Climax is leafier and later maturing than common timothy. Yields have averaged 10-15% higher, and it has good aftermath production. Drummond is available this year; it is one week later than Climax and therefore useful for late hay making.

Alfalfa: For short rotations, Dupuis or Alfa are tops. They are vigorous and produce good aftermath particularly when first crop is cut early. For longer rotations, and in areas where bacterial wilt is a problem, sow Vernal. It is fine stemmed, hardy, a few days later. Rhizoma performs well in Northern areas. All alfalfa varieties need lime, good drainage, and fertility.

Red Clover: Dollard, LaSalle and Ottawa varieties out-perform common; they are a few days later in maturity and more likely to survive into the second year.

Brome Grass: Saratoga is early, very vigorous, high yielding. Seed is scarce, as is Fischer. If you mix Brome with oats in the box, drill as shallow as possible.

Ladino Clover: A giant type of white clover and a valuable pasture legume when well managed. Requires high fertility, especially potash, and mid-summer moisture. In hay-pasture mixtures, it gives increased aftermath. Pilgrim variety is outstanding if you can get it. Certified Ladino of U.S. origin is performing very well.

Birdsfoot Trefoil: Gaining popularity for special seedings, it survives in soils too poorly drained and too acid for alfalfa. It is very long-lived, but slow to establish; has never been known to cause bloat. Seed with a single grass such as timothy; keep nurse crop competition to a minimum. Inoculation of the seed is essential. Viking variety is suited to long term hay or pasture fields where winter survival and drainage are not severe problems. Empire is hardier, but is later with less aftermath. Seed of Leo, a very new variety, is not yet available.

Oats: Glen and Shefford are the recommended early varieties, Garry medium, and Roxton, a long-strawed, leafy variety, for late.

Barley: The new variety Champlain is at the top of the list, but there is enough seed for only 5,000 acres. For malting, it is Montcalm and Parkland. Others for feed are Nord (early) and York. The Quebec Department of Agriculture is encouraging barley growing; on good land, it out-yields oats in true feeding value per acre.

Mixtures for Hay and Pasture: The handbook of the Quebec Seed Board lists several proven alternatives.

Generally, simple mixtures are recommended. They are cheaper, easier to manage, and after the first year usually give higher yields. Alfalfa plus one or two grasses can't be beat where drainage is good and excess acidity has been corrected with lime. Trefoil plus one grass is proving itself for long-term fields not suited to alfalfa. Red clover and timothy is the traditional standby for a short term hay mixture. Alsike is not popular because of low yields. On the other hand Ladino, where adapted, is hard to beat for a good pasture legume.

Shotgun mixtures — something of everything hoping some of it will grow — can rarely be justified. For any field, two or three species will prove to be best. These are the ones to plant; to sow others is to waste seed and to reduce yield. In most cases, rye grasses and fescues must be classed as fillers.

And don't forget that no seed can be any better than the treatment it gets. The improved varieties have the ability to make superior use of the soil fertility, but they can't grow on what isn't there.

CAN ANYONE TELL ME ?

Some time during the late 1880's my father had a live eagle. As I was not yet born, I have no first-hand information, but he told me years later that the eagle was captured by a farmer at a spot known as Slavery Mountain about three miles south of Lost River. Even today it is an uninhabited spot with a sort of glen and a rocky precipice that can be seen from Route 31. He kept this eagle in a shed behind his drugstore, but it would not eat anything dead, and my father got tired of having to supply it with live rabbits and pigeons, so he swapped it for a stuffed snowy owl in a glass cage, owned by a taxidermist. There was considerably less upkeep on the stuffed owl, and we had it in the hall on an iron-legged table, right up to my mother's death in 1941.

One day when I was quite a small boy, I came in from school and the owl was missing — glass case and all. My parents and sisters could not explain the disappearance, so they notified the police. Three weeks later they notified us that the culprit was caught, and my sisters had to appear in court. The accused was a man who made a specialty of stealing rugs from hallways, and was arrested while trying to sell an expensive rug for a couple of dollars in a pawnshop. The pawnbroker called the police. The accused admitted pinching our owl. He had carried it — case and all — in his arms for nearly two miles and sold it to a meatmarket for three dollars! But we got it back.

I have never heard any oldtimer mention eagles in Argenteuil, and would be glad to hear of any such reports from historians or old-time residents with good memories.

Be seein' ya!

Of Many Things

By Ambrose Hills

THE BOOM IS HERE

A leading financial newspaper writes this headline: "Yes — call it a boom: upturn is that strong."

Never one to refuse to say I told you so, I point out that in this column many weeks ago the present boom was predicted. Employment, consumer spending, and higher incomes are following like a tail on the end of the business-expansion kite. Only stormcloud on the horizon is the threat of inflatation.

Why the boom ?

Many factors are involved, but I'd give the nod to the restraint of Canadians during the vital period when everybody was crying blue ruin.

When will the boom become a bust ?

Never, let us hope; but it could be ended promptly if Canadians start to dump all the restraint that brought the boom right into the wide-mouthed ash-can of greed.

Canadian industries have proved that they can operate efficiently and invade other markets effectively, given half a chance. Here in Canada, however, we have a habit of cutting them down every time they show signs of real vigor. In some minds, the only time business is popular is when it is in deep trouble. Then they rush in to help it. When it is succeeding, they do everything in their power to check its growth . . . and then condemn it for not providing jobs.

If, during the next year or two, Canadian business is allowed to keep costs down, we can win and hold markets that will be ours for the next decade. However, if costs spiral through unreasonably high taxes or labor policies, the surge that has brought the boom will stop.

I am betting the boom will last. I believe Canadians in large numbers have learned that when business is good, times are good, and they'll want to keep it that way. In spite of automation, or even perhaps because of its adoption by Canadian firms, the next three or four years could see us with more jobs than suitable applicants. At any rate, let's give the job-makers every incentive to create that situation.

Spring fashions for men, '64

When it's too hot for a jacket, and a shirt alone gives you a feeling of incompleteness, what does a man do ? He gets a cool, cotton jac-shirt, that's what.

At least that's what designers are betting thousands of men will do this summer. They're showing the jac-shirt, a shirt built onto a hip band, in many different versions. It will be available fashioned with front panels or detailed with contrast bands and embroidery. It will also have adjustable side tabs or side laces.

The cotton shirt-jacket is still going strong in America, but it is longer than last year.

In California where the climate lets them get to these things faster than us, seersucker is the rage. For some men striped seersucker has never been out of fashion — now they have a choice of glen plaids, tiny checks and a pattern which imitates madras.

The big fashion news for golfers is give — the kind you get from stretch denim and gabardine jackets and slacks. Airy cotton knits are also being shown for golfers in shirts and cardigans.

Suedine windbreakers are fashionable (new) and so is the embroidered shirt pocket and the Italian roll collar. Look for belts to reappear on pants (they've been absent for some time) and for Jamaica shorts to replace the longer Bermuda type.

Top colors for spring and summer are bone and egg-shell accessorized with bottle green, bark and brown prints. But you won't be far wrong with blue or grey accented with cranberry and wine. In any event, the trend is away from black and navy.

If you want to bring out the beast that lurks within, you'll be interested in the fur print terry cloths. You'll see these printed in leopard, ocelot and zebra patterns.

Montreal (CP) — St. Lawrence River pilots feel the captain of the first ship to reach an inland harbor in the new year shouldn't get all the credit. At a meeting, they decided the pilot of the first ship should be awarded a prize equivalent to the traditional gold cane. They've yet to decide what the prize will be.
