Relic of old Lachute

Remnants of an old cedar bridge came to light again on Main Street, when a town work crew excavating at the Bellingham Street corner uncovered this log road three or four feet below the paving. Old-timers here can remember when a stream crossed from the direction of the present Lacasse Autos to the Bank of Nova Scotia site. (It is even believed that underground seeping may account for periodic cave-ins which occur in the Bank's parking lot.) At the time of the cedar crossway in Lachute's earlier years, this section of Main Street was at a considerably lower level.

LACHUTE, AYERSVILLE APPROVE AMALGAMATION

Measure awaits Quebec sanction and six-man council election in November

At a special meeting of Lachute Town Council on July 28, and the adjourned meeting of Ayersville Council on August 3, the two corporate bodies adopted a by-law paving the way for voluntary amalgamation of the two municipalities.

The technical description of the territory had been drawn up by J. Arthur Lafrance, surveyor for this town, while the text of the by-law was prepared by Armand Poupart, a Montreal legal consultant.

As previously mentioned, the enlarged municipality would be called the City of Lachute and would embrace a total population of 10,240 in an area of about 2,600 acres. The land coverage is made up of 1,900 acres in Ayersville and about 700 acres constituting the present Town of Lachute.

The City of Lachute will be divided into three electoral wards, namely, the North or Ward 1, the Southeast or Ward 2, and the Southwest or Ward 3. Each ward would be represented by two aldermen, for a total of six representatives. (Lachute at present has nine councillors, and Ayersville six.)

The present administrations will remain in office until November 7 next, the date set by Bill 13 of the provincial government as the time when general elections are held. From that date, the new Lachute will be represented by a mayor and six aldermen elected for a three-year mandate. In other words, all terms will expire at the same time and will be subject to public election at three-year periods.

Next Steps to Amalgamation

From this point of progress, the two municipal councils will jointly petition the lieutenant governor in council to grant letters-patent amalgamating Lachute and Ayersville.

At a meeting of the two councils last Wednesday, July 28, Lachute was represented by Mayor Dr. Z. L. Saindon, Aldermen François Charlebois, Dr. R. Dumais, Philippe Masson, Bruno Bélanger, Ludger Gibeault and L. W. Armstrong. Representing the municipality of Ayersville were Mayor Rodolphe Moreau, Councillors Laurent Brasseur, Ernest Champagne, Raymond Champagne, Jacques Poitras and Hubert Mayotte.

Citizen drowned in rescue attempt near Pembroke

A Lachute resident, William Baginski, 37, drowned in the Ottawa River 10 miles west of Pembroke, Ont., on Tuesday of last week, after he went to his daughter's rescue and sank in exhaustion.

The daughter, Margot, 10, slipped in a deep hole in the river bottom while swimming with her father and her sister Rosemarie, 11. The girls were rescued by Arthur Annand of Petawawa Point, who was cruising nearby in his motor boat. When it was realized that the girls' father was missing and the body recovered, it was too late. Mr. Annand and others at the beach tried vainly to revive him by artificial respiration for more than two hours.

William (Wilhelm) Baginski, born in Steinberg, East Prussia, came here several years ago. A draughtsman by trade, he was formerly with Lachute Lumber & Millwork, but had since been in the employ of C-I-L at Brownsburg. Friends, neighbors and fellow-workers attended the funeral last Thursday at the United Church, where the family attend regularly and are favorably known; Mr. Baginski was also a steward of the church. Burial was in the local cemetery.

The late Mr. Baginski is mourned by his wife and three daughters, Rosemarie, 11, Margot, 10, and Bridgette, one year old.

For Seat No. 5, Councillor Lloyd Hume was re-elected.

For Seat No. 6, Conrad Gagné was elected to replace J. E. Bourbonnière, retiring.

Department of Education statistics show that 68.7 per cent of those writing the complete set of examinations for the first time this year have been successful in earning certificates, as compared with 67.8 per cent in 1964.

Seek information on hit-run case at St. Adolphe

Quebec Provincial Police Cpl. Jean-Paul Dallaire has appealed for assistance of any persons able to provide information on a hit-and-run accident which occurred at 2.15 a.m. on Thursday of last week, July 29, in St. Adolphe d'Howard — an accident in which Robert Davis, a 23-year-old Lucan (Ont.) resident, was critically injured. Davis, a member of the RCAF, was stationed at Lac St. Denis and was walking along the highway accompanied by a fellow airman, Norman Desjardins, 24, of Montreal, when the incident occurred.

The men heard the car approaching at a high rate of speed. The auto hit Davis, narrowly missing the other airman. The victim was taken to the Queen Mary Veterans' Hospital by RCAF ambulance, and was reported suffering from a skull fracture, a broken leg and various other injuries.

Any information concerning the incident should be given to Cpl. Jean-Paul Dallaire, officer-in-charge of the Q.P.P. detachment, Lachute, by phoning 562-5234, or to Agent Yvon Faucheon, the investigating police officer.

House burning has sequel in more serious criminal charge

A charge of attempted murder has been laid against a Grece's Point resident, 56-year-old Russell Laughren, in connection with a recent fire in that community. The charge was laid following an intensive investigation by local officers of the Quebec Provincial Police and Cst. Maurice Miousse, of the Q.P.P. Arson Squad, Montreal.

Laughren, who has reportedly made a statement concerning the incident, is being held without bail in St. Jerome, pending his arraignment on Friday of this week.

The incident occurred on the night of July 18-19 following a disagreement between Laughren and Adelard Jean-Louis, 59, who had been residing together in a small building in Grece's Point. Police report that, following the argument, Laughren left the building and some time later he is alleged to have returned, tied the door with wire and set fire to the structure. The occupant of the building, Mr. Jean-Louis, was awakened by the smoke and managed to escape by means of a window.

Two injured on motorcycle

Two young men from Renfrew were treated in the Argenteuil Hospital on Sunday following a mishap in which their motorcycle missed a curve on Route 31, a short distance past Lakeview. The motorcycle and two occupants tumbled down a drop of 45 feet onto a pile of rocks.

Driver of the vehicle was Stephen Flower, 18, who was treated for minor injuries and shock. His passenger was Dave Troke, also 18, who suffered a broken arm and severe cuts and bruises. The two were headed for the automobile races at Mont Tremblant when the mishap occurred, according to investigating Q.P.P. constable Raymond Hetu.

Grave injury in another mishap, Simon's Crossing

A Montreal resident, 19-year-old Laurier Paridis, was treated in the Argenteuil Hospital and transferred to Notre Dame Hospital in Montreal, following a mishap early Saturday morning at Simon's Crossing.

The incident occurred around 1 a.m. when a car owned and driven by Benoit Fillion, 22, of Montreal, apparently missed the curve and travelled up the C.P.R. tracks approximately 150 feet, before overturning when it hit an embankment. Both occupants were apparently thrown from the car while it was in the air.

It appeared that the driver of the vehicle was not too seriously injured; however, Mr. Paridis was treated for skull and chest fractures, and at last report, he still remained unconscious. The mishap was investigated by Q.P.P. agent Raymond Hetu.

Sentiments and Sidelights

(Comments on the Local Scene)

In the case of a one-year-old child driving a car without a license — no charge was laid by the police. It happened in Ville St. Michel, where baby Christine Laurin, alone in her father's auto, set the car in motion and it ran into a fireplug, sustaining $250 damage. . . The child is a granddaughter of Mme Françoise Cattelen, Lachute, who narrated the incident.

11 Years as travelling demonstrator —

Miss Janet McOuat leaves QWI for Montreal position

The Sherbrooke Daily Record carries the following story concerning Miss Janet McOuat's retirement from Quebec Women's Institute duties, and the new position she has accepted in Montreal:

East Clifton — The East Clifton Women's Institute bade farewell recently to Miss Janet McOuat, who has, after eleven years of being a dietician-demonstrator to the Quebec Women's Institute, left her post.

Miss McOuat left for Montreal where she has accepted the position of dietician at the United Church's McConnell-Griffith Home for Elderly People.

At native of Lachute, Miss McOuat's duties of teaching, cooking, millinery and tile setting have taken her from her office at Macdonald College to widely dispersed regions in Canada.

From the head waters of the Ottawa River and Labrador to Howick and the Gaspé, Miss McOuat conducted her classes teaching English, French, Indians and New Canadians.

Due to her efforts the women of Quebec's Institutes are nutrition and style conscious. She is a strong advocate of oatmeal porridge, milk, cheese and eggs used in balanced meals.

Miss McOuat said that she was sad to leave her work with the W.I. and stated that she will miss the many friends she has made.

Rev. Léopold Godbout mourned by Ste. Anastasie parishioners

The Rev. Leopold Godbout, curé of Ste. Anastasie Parish, was accorded the last respects of his parishioners and the obsequies of the Catholic faith at an impressive funeral last week at Ste. Anastasie. Fellow clergy, citizens from a wide area, and representatives from all spheres of life in this community attended the rites. The remains had rested in the chapel of the church until Monday, day of the funeral. The funeral mass was celebrated by Bishop Emilien Frenette assisted by Canon Roland Guindon, and several notables of the district clergy took part. The interment took place at St. Damien de Bellechasse, his native village.

Late Rev. Leopold Godbout

Father Godbout, who had served as priest here for less than a year replacing Canon Chas. Wm. Lacourse, died July 22 at the Hôtel Dieu in Montreal, where he had been taken a week previously. He had spent several weeks in ill health at a cottage in St. Andrews East. In hospital he underwent surgery for a brain tumor, and later complications proved fatal.

He was inducted priest of this parish August 30, 1964, on the resignation of Mgr. Lacourse due to ill health. He was favorably disposed towards the Protestant adherents of this community and was invited to speak at various functions, even on one occasion preaching in the United Church. He was beloved of his parishioners and appreciated by all with whom he came in contact.

Biography

Born in 1904 at St. Damien de Bellechasse, the late Father Godbout was 61 years of age. After his elementary studies, he worked for a few years, then entered the St. Victor de Beauce seminary for classical and clerical study. He was ordained in the Marie Immaculée order at Ottawa in 1932, but ministered as a cleric in Quebec province during his priesthood. He was priest at Sherbrooke before coming to the diocese of St. Jerome, being assigned to the parish of Ste. Sophie de Lacorne for 14 months, then coming to Lachute.

Intriguing examples on view at Art Association photo exhibition

The photographic display this week at St. Andrews municipal hall (above the fire station) is the second of this season's exhibitions sponsored by the Argenteuil Art Association Inc. A limited but highly interesting array of photographic studies is on view to the public, each afternoon from 2.30 to 5 o'clock, and on Thursday evening, when there will be a showing of over 60 color slides.

The exhibition was opened Saturday afternoon with an official send-off by the Rev. Dr. W. H. Reid, who was introduced by Mr. Mansiel Wilson, chairman of the three-man committee in charge. Listeners found Dr. Reid's brief discourse highly interesting. A photographic enthusiast of long standing, he spoke of the origins and development of this craft, comparing early daguerrotypes of 100 years ago with the fine color productions and transparencies of today, thanks to advanced development of the industry. As a "retirement plan" for senior citizens, he recommended this hobby for its rewarding satisfaction. . . Mr. Wilson thanked Dr. Reid, and also paid passing tribute to the A.A.A. president, Mrs. L. T. Porter, Sr., for her energetic leadership in the organization.

The 50-odd photographs, tastefully arranged under headings of General Interest, Human Interest, Landscapes, Portraits and Nature, show a remarkable appreciation of the unusual. Amateurs, and a minimal entry of professionals, have captured scenic effects, human moods and occupations, in various countries and surroundings. Added to their story-telling qualities, the technical standard of these prints is outstanding, and they are well worth seeing.

Judge of the exhibits is Mr. Arch Hardy, of Vankleek Hill, a qualified arts and crafts instructor for the Regional School of that area. His decision on prize-winning entries was delayed for late arrivals due to the postal strike, and for the viewing of transparencies Thursday evening, to which the public are invited, commencing at 8.30 or shortly thereafter. The show continues each afternoon until Sunday.

Army manoeuvres in this vicinity

In exercises similar to those carried out last year, RCOC army personnel from Montreal will be on manoeuvres in Argenteuil County on Thursday and Friday of this week, August 5-6, and on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of next week, August 12-14.

The army exercises will take place throughout the County, and while various types of small arms and machine guns will be utilized, only blank ammunition will be fired.

The late Pierre Castonguay

He had been swimming under water, with a diving mask but just around 5.30, he was seen by a Hydro-Quebec employee to remove his mask and disappear beneath the surface. It was five days later, last Wednesday, that his body was finally recovered, by an uncle of the victim, Aldège Castonguay. The drowning occurred in swift water at the foot of the Carillon dam.

Pierre was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ovide Castonguay, and is survived also by his sister, Jeannine Castonguay, employed at the Argenteuil Hospital. He had completed his 11th grade studies at l'Ecole Secondaire, Lachute, and had a summer job on the Carillon canal. He was in swimming after his day's work when he lost his life.

Funeral rites were held last Friday afternoon in the Carillon parish church. Burial was in the Catholic cemetery at St. Andrews.

Car overturned on Rte. 41 curve

Two Montreal residents were treated for minor injuries in the Argenteuil Hospital last Sunday morning and later released, following a mishap on Route 41, near Bourbonnière Camps. The incident occurred when a car driven by Miss Paule Cardreis, 23, swerved out of control and overturned on a curve, while headed towards Lachute.

The driver and a passenger in the sports car, Kenneth Conabree, 22, were trapped in the vehicle and released by nearby residents. The car was damaged to the extent of some $500.

St. Hermas boy killed by tractor

A seven-year-old child, Richard Leduc, suffered fatal injuries beneath the wheels of a tractor last Thursday evening. He was riding with his father when he fell beneath the machine. He was rushed from St. Hermas to the St. Eustache hospital, but died on the way, only 15 minutes after the mishap.

The boy was the son of Mr. and Mrs. René Leduc — his mother being proprietress of the Cecile Leduc fur and hat salon, Lachute. He is mourned also by a brother and three sisters, grandparents and other relatives.

Funeral rites were held Sunday afternoon in the parish church at St. Hermas.

Current business, Grenville Council

Grenville municipal council, under chairmanship of Mayor Gilbert E. Arnold, voted to purchase a diesel pump of 600 gallons-a-minute capacity from the firm of Blackwood Hodge, Dorval. Cost of the pump is $3,552 less 10 percent discount if paid within three months. The unit, to be used in the town water system, will be housed in a building 12x15, height 8 ft., the whole installation to be supervised by the town foreman, Laurent Davidson, and to cost not more than $6,000 inclusive.

The meeting, held July 7, decided also to seek necessary authorization to establish a $100,000 industrial loan fund.

At a subsequent sitting, council passed payments of $3,871 on account, for works executed by Thomas & Fils under by-law 75 and contracted for November 7, 1964.

L'Abbé Yvon Mailloux

Successor named

The Rev. Yvon Mailloux, priest of the Immaculate Conception Parish, Ayersville, has been appointed to succeed the late Rev. Leopold Godbout in Ste. Anastasie. Before going to Ayersville, he was assistant in this parish for nine years, and will be a popular successor to the Lachute pastorate. His induction takes place August 15.

Fire in dwelling at Whisseltown

Damage exceeding $1,000 was caused to a building owned by Mme D. Faubert and occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Albert Laverne, in a fire which was believed to have started from overloaded extension-cord wiring on Thursday of last week. The fire was in Whisseltown and was reported to the Lachute fire department at 11.55 noon. Firemen were on the scene for less than an hour.

Chief Don MacCulloch reported only the booster hose was used in combatting the fire, and the fog nozzle extinguished the flames with a minimum of water damage to the contents, but extensive damage was caused by heat and smoke.

Damage to the building was covered by insurance; however, the loss of the contents was not covered.

By BOB ATCHISON

The duck situation in this area seems to be very encouraging. On the North River numerous wood duck can be seen with their families. We have counted 11 such groups. In a couple of cases there were only three ducklings, while in another there were seven Most of them seem to have stopped at five though — doubtless trying to curb this population explosion. Also more Fish or Meganser ducks can be counted than in the last couple of years. This certainly applies to the blacks also. We spotted four flights coming in to the North River the other evening; the smallest had eight birds while the largest had 20. I have been told that the ducks up north are already rafting; if this is true, then I guess we can expect a very early winter. However, this is really nothing to worry about; at certain times these birds want company, so they start to raft, then break up once more, only to come back in the fall.

Already the swallows have started congregating on the telephone lines; this rates as a sure sign of colder weather. Another thing worth noting — the jays are back patronizing our feeders. Thinking of the colder weather already, gives us the willies. After all, we haven't had summer yet!

As can be expected, the hunting fraternity are in gear. New guns are being looked at, and the old ones being refurbished. This is a very good thing; giving any firearm a going over before the season's open is a good way to stay out of trouble. Sighting-in once more is a must. After your guns being kicked around all winter, the sights are going to be out; so while you are checking them, get out and try a couple of shots. Another good point is to check the action and make sure.

As we know, this province is far behind in the way of conservation. The latest hunting laws indicate this in no uncertain terms, with longer seasons, or no change to diminish the kill in wildlife. With the thousands of killers in the bush or on the waterways, it is not possible that our wildlife can survive for any length of time. In addition, with the cutting into our forests, which drives game from their habitat, and the pollution in our waterways — we are approaching the point of becoming a have-not nation.

The fishing has been exceptional this past week or so. Good catches of greys are being taken via the trolling method. With Syd Drew hooking a 10-pounder, and Garth Boyd latching on to a couple of big ones (the largest in the 13-pound class), this seems to indicate that our lakes are still good. The thing most of us forget is that fish won't just come up to be taken, you have to work for them, most of the time getting nothing; but it's that once-in-a-while that keeps most of us going back. The fly lures have been tops; Peter Denker is doing alright; and a new devotee to this type of fishing (and I do mean new, he got his outfit only last Saturday morning) came in to show me two fish he had taken, one a red trout of fair size, the other a small rainbow. So now Dave Fletcher has got the bug. Incidentally, these latter fish were taken in the West River.

Spinning is not being practiced too much, and this is surprising, as fish do come to the surface at all times, and can be taken on spinning lures. Up at one of the lakes last week-end, the abundance of bass could be caught with almost any type of lure, they weren't fussy or discriminating in the least. It was fun, and with a bass bug-popper you will be whopped when you least expect it. I tried this lure, the Crazy Crawler, but had to quit as the bass really loved this, and it got monotonous taking fish off the hook and putting them back. As a matter of fact any of the surface lures were productive, but this crawler is deadly when used right.

It is now too apparent that Quebec's prestige has suffered, through stupid acts committed by certain groups of people. Some friends who visited the States this past couple of weeks, were much surprised at the cold discourtesy shown to them by people below the border. We cannot expect anything else, can we? After all, if we go out of our way to be unpleasant to visitors, then we can expect the same sort of treatment. The unfortunate part is that those doing the insulting in this country, have never travelled any farther from their homes than the border; this can only hurt us, more than it can hurt them. I think we should wake up, before it is too late.

Just got the word on pike in the North River. They have started to hit — a little early, but who cares. I was told of nine of them being taken between White's Bridge and the Bourbonniere Camps, with very good results at the mouth of Sir John Creek. Go and get them; but you'll need a boat. Large red-and-white lures were the best.

I just can't believe this — there have been no complaints about outboard motors on any of the lakes in weeks. Either we are starting to act decently, or the weather has been responsible for keeping us off the waters. Anyway, this is great; let's hope it continues.

There have been a couple of reports on an eagle seen in this area. I have not personally seen this bird, but from what has been told, I think it is possibly an osprey (fish hawk). These birds have a similar look about them especially when in flight; they also have the drive of power when after their prey. Fish are their principal diet, and only extreme hunger will induce them to take anything else. So if the bird seen was after a woodland animal, it would most probably be an eagle.

Lachute Motor Sport Club promotes tours and events

The last meeting of L.M.S.C. was held July 22 at the Legion Hall. Items on the agenda were the club crest, July tour results, stock car, incorporation, and the August rally.

Dave Bradley reported that 15 persons participated in the July Tour to Upper Canada Village. The L.M.S.C. crest is now official, and will be on sale for club members at the next meeting. Pending more information, incorporation of the club will be further discussed in the near future. Upon completion of all business, three movies on motor sport and racing were viewed and enjoyed by all present.

The possibility of obtaining a clubhouse had been discussed by several members. Unfortunately, this will have to be a project for the future, as the cost of rental would be too great.

Stock Car

Within the last month L.M.S.C. has branched into another phase of motor sport. The president, David Pollock, has donated a car to the club to be converted into a stock car. Many interested members have spent the last three weeks preparing the car for its debut. On Sunday, August 1, nine members and as many friends were on hand to see the "L.M.S.C. stock car", driven by David Pollock, take the checkered flag in the first race. Later on in the afternoon, this car placed third and eighth in two other races. All members who wish to drive will be given the opportunity, but winnings go to the club.

August Rally

A 140-mile car rally will be held on Sunday, August 22. This rally incorporates most types of navigation and average speed problems. Duration of the rally is approximately 5½ hours, which includes a 1½-hour stop-over at the midway point for a picnic lunch and soft drinks, which will be provided by the Club. A limit of 25 cars has been set. Application forms and all general information will be available at the next club meeting, to be held Thursday, August 5, at the Legion Hall, Lachute. Movies also will be shown. Guests are welcome. Come along; bring your wife or girl friend!

Club families entertained at Rotary Park

Local Rotarians used their park to advantage recently to entertain their wives and families at swimming, games and a barbecue. The younger generation frolicked in the water and on the sandy beach, then were organized into a game of softball. Meanwhile the Rotarians assembled tables and set up barbecue stoves.

Supper was not ready by the time the softball was ended so the youngsters engaged in a sand sculpturing contest. But it was not long before the smoky air wafted an aroma of cooking hot dogs and hamburgers. President Tom Johnston managed to get all but the Rotarian waiters seated at the tables, and lunch was served in short order.

Rotarian Ross Cole later auctioned all the remaining edibles to the Rotarians, and bidding was vigorous.

Following dinner the sand sculpturing contest was judged, and a great bonfire warmed the chill evening air.

President Johnston would like to thank all who helped make the event a success, particularly Ross Cole, Bill Morrow, George Paul, Alex Kerr, S. Jones and K. Tompkins.

This past week the Club held one of its In-Service Training programs for the members. Linton Armstrong, past-District Governor, and this year's Business Relations committee chairman, gave an informative talk on Classifications. He discussed the importance of the Classifications principle in Rotary, giving various reasons why it was necessary to every Rotary Club to have an up-to-date list of classifications, if it was to continue to be successful each year. A question period followed; all members left the meeting with a better understanding of the founding principles of Rotary, which guarantees that its members are a cross-section of the business and professional community of every town.

Water Skiing WITH CLINT WARD

Care of Bindings

Water ski bindings are available in a variety of materials, the best of which is pure gum rubber.

Rubber is more pliable than plastic bindings and therefore will fit the feet better and more snugly. It is all but impossible to get some of the plastic bindings tight without incurring extreme discomfort.

If you do your skiing in sandy areas then be careful that you select an adjustable binding that will not clog up with sand particles. Bindings that move back and forth on three points and are not flat against the ski are best for this purpose. They can easily be "flushed" out and will not jam up.

In salt water conditions some aluminum binding parts will seize up in a short time through corrosion. A little oil on the bolts and regular washings in fresh water will protect these binding parts.

Direct sunlight will deteriorate rubber bindings, so when they are not in use, turn the ski over so that the sun is not shining on the bindings.

I find it is a wise idea to keep a binding repair kit handy. This would include one or two spare toes and heels, some spare metal parts, spare screws, spare nuts and bolts and a screwdriver.

Bindings on water skis should be worn as snugly as possible. It is hard to get them on too tight but in any case they will come off in a fall.

To make it easier to slip the binding on, dip the skis up to the bindings in the water and then wet your foot. Push your foot as far under the toe piece as you can, then reach down and, using your hand as a shoe horn, press your heel into place.

Jump ski bindings are usually mounted on an aluminum base plate. This is a safety feature so that if the ski splits under the foot the metal plate will prevent injury. Jump bindings also have a heel pad glued into the binding but some skiers install a firm rubber pad on top of the metal plate for the entire length of the binding.

Some slalom skiers like to use a metal plate under their front bindings. If you are going to screw a metal plate onto your ski, place a rubber gasket under it to protect the finish on the ski.

It is common practice among many tournament skiers to do away with the adjustable binding feature. They take the heel piece and the horseshoe and screw it directly to the ski.

Some manufacturers market rubber bindings in several thicknesses, employing a hard rubber heel and a soft rubber toe. For trick skis I like a standard or thin, soft rubber toe piece with a moderately stiff heel of thick rubber. The reason for this is quite simple — the soft rubber does not cut the circulation in the foot to the same extent as the thick rubber. On slalom and jump runs I am not out on the water long enough for this to become a factor but a trick run can last up to 30 minutes or more and I like comfortable feet.

Word has been received by Gaston Laroche, of the local Molson's agency, that the all-time great Jacques Plante, formerly of the Montreal Canadiens and New York Rangers hockey clubs, will be in Lachute August 11, to participate in the benefit softball game between the Molson's "4-man" team and the Lachute All-Stars.

This game is being staged in cooperation with the Lachute Lions Club, and proceeds will be turned over to the Lions' Arena building fund. It will be held at the Ayers Recreation Centre at 7 p.m. A giant parade will precede the game, and Jacques Plante will be happy to meet and greet the youngsters of the town and to sign autographs. . . As we know, Jacques has a great knowledge of all sports and especially of hockey, and that he is a great kibitzer without resorting to double-talk. It will be interesting to learn, at first-hand, his comment on his intention to retire. After an unequalled career in the NHL, he has decided to call it quits this year, but some observers feel this is just a temporary situation and that, when skating time comes again, Jacques will be back, if not with the Rangers, with some other professional team.

The game itself promises to be the highlight of the softball year in this region. The competition will be enlivened by the friendly rivalry of the opposing managers, Pat Patterson of the "4-man" team, and Jean-Guy "Baril" Laroque, of the Lachute All-Stars. These two have known each other for years, and are both top-notch softball men. It will be a game to remember.

Friends mourn lady resident of Dunany, Lachute

The late Mrs. P. Haldimand

Following a brief illness, Mrs. Percy Haldimand passed away at the Argenteuil Hospital, Lachute, on Sunday, August 1. She was in her 71st year.

Deceased lady was formerly Miss Anne Lee Fotheringham, of Rawcliffe, and was married to Mr. Haldimand in 1920. They lived in Montreal and summered for many years at Dunany. For the past year they have been residents of Lachute.

A brother, John Fotheringham, was killed in World War I and a sister, (Elizabeth) Mrs. Jas. Knox, of Montreal, predeceased her several years ago.

Service was conducted at the MacKimmie Funeral Chapel on Tuesday afternoon, the Rev. Harold Thompson officiating. The remains were taken to Mount Royal Crematorium.

Vows pledged in evening ceremony

McCaskill - Thompson

The marriage of Twilla Jean, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Stan Thompson, of Brownsburg, Que., to Melvin V. McCaskill, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. John McCaskill, of Glen Sandfield, Ont., took place on Friday evening, July 16, at 8 o'clock in the Kirkhill United Church. The Rev. Mr. Hurst officiated, and Mrs. C. McMillan played the wedding music.

The floral decorations in the church were carried out with standards of white gladioli and pink carnations. Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Nixon acted as attendants.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a white Terylene brocade lace suit, with white veiled hat, and carried a nosegay of white mums, and baby pink roses which fell from white streamers.

The bride's mother wore a deep blue nylon floral dress with white accessories, and a corsage of pink carnations. Mrs. McCaskill, mother of the groom, wore a dress of beige and brown floral silk with matching accessories, and a corsage of yellow carnations.

Following the marriage a turkey dinner was served to the immediate families in Alexandria, Ont. Later Mr. and Mrs. McCaskill left on a motor trip to points in Ontario and Quebec. They will reside at Glen Sandfield, in their mobile home.

APPRECIATION

Mr. and Mrs. Melvin McCaskill wish to thank their relatives and many friends who attended the wedding reception held Wednesday evening, July 28, at Glen Sandfield Hall in honor of their recent marriage.

Country Notebook

By WALKER RILEY,
Macdonald College

If the professional rainmakers want a guaranteed way to make it rain, just send them to me. I have a method that really works. Go camping.

For six years, we have looked forward to this first camping trip. We crossed into northern Vermont, found a beautiful spot on a quiet lake among the hills, and pitched our tent. Then it started to rain. And it rained all night. Sunday morning it was still raining. We sat in the tent looking out at the rain. At eleven o'clock we folded the tent up in the pouring rain, and headed home, soaked. A few miles north of the border not a drop had fallen.

Actually, in the past two weeks, there has been enough rain in most parts of Quebec to break the drought. But not in the Vaudreuil-Soulanges counties west of Montreal. In that area there hasn't been a half-hour of rain since seeding.

A chap who has a dairy farm at Rigaud stopped in to see us this morning. He is right up against it for feed for his 35 head. His pastures are bare. He has green-chopped all his oats. The Sudan-sorghum is standing still at six inches. There isn't any hay aftermath. Only 30 tons of hay are left in the barn for next winter. The seventeen acres of corn only half germinated. All his well-laid plans had come to nothing.

He was discouraged. He had fought for eleven years to build his herd. But he wasn't going to sell them if there was any way out of it.

When we looked a little closer at his situation, it didn't seem so desperate. The alfalfa aftermath isn't much, but with strip grazing it should carry the herd until the sorghum-sudan is ready. That should look after most of August. Then he is ploughing up an old meadow to seed oats for September and October pasture. There is no choice but to gamble on sufficient rain ahead.

Thirty tons of hay seems miserably little with which to start the winter. But we worked it out to nine pounds per head per day. Now, if he can get even 100 tons of corn from those 17 acres, he can feed 30 lbs. silage a day. That adds up to 19 lbs. hay-equivalent a day, more than double the absolute minimum roughage for a dairy animal. Add to that ten pounds crushed oats, corn-and-cornmeal, or beet pulp, and he has a sound maintenance ration. This he can supplement with dairy ration as usual, according to milk flow.

Any of these three materials, crushed oats, corn-and-cob meal, beet pulp, are likely to be a better buy than hay at the present record prices. If he can buy any one at $60 a ton, he can't afford to pay much more than $30 a ton for medium-quality hay.

From all reports, it looks like a bumper crop of oats out West this year. Prices, then, for this feed could well come down this fall. Ear corn from Western Ontario may prove to be a good buy. It can be put through a hammer mill to make an excellent dairy feed. Truckers will deliver by 20-ton tractor-trailer loads. I haven't checked on the sugar-beet outlook. No doubt the dried pulp from St. Hilaire factory will be sold out very early.

The Quebec Department of Agriculture is sponsoring a Great Corn Contest. Somewhere around I have the details, but I can't find the announcement.

The deadline for entry is August 1. It is open to growers in west and south-west Quebec. The prizes are substantial. Your agronome will have entry forms.

If any member of your family is planning a space flight this summer, here is a recipe provided by the Meat Packers Council. "Use Choice beef, completely de-fat and debone, remove connective tissue, cook, then freeze dry. Form into bars, sandwiches or bite-size pieces. The latter two are ¾" thick and are eaten dry. To prevent crumbs from getting loose in your space capsule, coat first with a special oil and second with starch. Pack the bar in a special pouch, inject water just before eating. Follow the same basic recipe for barbecued veal, sausage patties, bacon and apple sauce, beef and gravy and other tasty aerospace meals."

The postal strike

IF THERE IS a lesson to be learned from the mail strike (continuing as we write) it is that the democratic system — based on government by the people but also for the people — has a weak link in its application.

Even governments far older than ours have failed to satisfactorily cope with this problem, the paralyzing of essential services through labor disruption. It is therefore no blame upon any particular government in power — except that, in Quebec Province, since the revamping of its labor laws, we appear to have had more than our share of strikes, and strikes of grave consequence.

The Liquor Board (a department of the provincial civil service), the Montreal transport system, gasoline distributors, dockers, and mail carriers (federal civil service) to mention just a few . . . and what is to prevent this epidemic from spreading to hydro services, fuel oil dispensers and other imperative industries, whose role is immediately vital — and we mean vital, as touching the very life and breath of the populace ?

In Canada's most recent disruption, the postal strike, there is an obvious corollary that civil servants, too, are entitled to the right of self-expression. But the machinery should be there for conclusive bargaining, to positively prevent a breakdown in relations and the suspension of essential services. It seems apparent that the postal workers have had grievances for a long time, and it was up to Ottawa to satisfy them, or to reach a compromise, and thus avert a crisis.

It is for such reasons that parliamentarians are elected, by the people and for the people. We believe there should be brains enough among our selected representatives to foresee the hazards and to avert the possibility of their occurring.

Better in the open

DISAGREEMENTS between Canada and the United States should be ironed out in private, instead of being aired publicly, an intergovernmental report recommends.

Baiting our big neighbor to the south has long been a favorite pastime of Canadians. The report doesn't suggest persons outside government should stop doing this.

But it does think Canadian authorities should thresh out their differences over American policies privately, especially where no special Canadian interests or obligations exist.

The report is the work of a committee headed by two respected diplomats, Arnold Heeney, former Canadian ambassador in Washington, and Livingston Merchant, the former American ambassador in Ottawa.

As members of the diplomatic service, their job has been to work out disagreements by private negotiation. It is natural that they would favor this method over that of public airing of disputes.

But is it wise to bottle up criticism of one's neighbor ? This approach seems more likely to increase tension than to ease it. The end result might be that Canadian-American relations would become worse, instead of better.

Sometimes a prod from Canadian government sources has produced action across the line.

A case in point is Prime Minister Pearson's suggestion in a speech last April 2 in Philadelphia that the U.S. halt its air raids on North Viet Nam to see whether peace feelers might result.

President Johnson was reported to be annoyed about this, apparently because he was not advised beforehand of the speech. Nevertheless, in May there was a five-day pause in the bombing.

It hasn't stopped the fighting but that doesn't mean the idea was without merit. Anything that offers a hope of easing world conflict — in Viet Nam or anywhere else — is worth trying.

On balance, public criticism of the policies of a good neighbor seems justified. We can rely on the intelligence of our political leaders not to abuse the privilege. And if close friends can't abide criticism, then obviously something is seriously lacking in the friendship.

Pollution is not new

CURRENT ALARM about pollution of our lakes and rivers is resulting in a slow but determined effort to clean up the mess.

And in this respect modern society is a good deal better off than our forefathers, although one would never know it to hear some people, who seem to think pollution is a modern phenomenon, peculiar to the twentieth century.

Nobody will condone present pollution, or the fact that modern chemicals like detergents are adding to the problems of pollution control.

But things may have been even worse in the old days.

Historians' accounts of London during the 18th century indicate the River Thames was one of the greatest open sewers of all time. Every pint of raw sewage from the vast sprawling city was dumped into it, and its banks were lined with privies overhanging the water at every convenient space.

"Everyone for whom it was handy, hurled into it everything for which there was no further use, from kitchen garbage and bedroom slops to bodies," writes Bernard Ash in his "Golden City". At the same time, down at London Bridge, clanking water wheels sucked up the poisonous liquid and distributed it in pipes through the city, there being no other water supply.

The Thames has been cleaned up since those days, and so have many of our previously polluted Canadian waterways. And it doesn't hurt to remember that pollution is not a new problem, but one that follows population density in any age, until steps are taken to remedy it.

Our image abroad

THE BLESSED FRENCH have come to the aid of Canadians abroad who are fed up being taken for Americans or Englishmen. Their tourism commission in Paris (says The Financial Post) has brought out a how-to-avoid-it leaflet exclusively for us.

Item: "Avoid dressing or acting like a Texan." Is that a cut at bona-fide Calgarians in full Stampede regalia ?

Item: "Don't wear a bowler hat." How many Canadians do ? Or for that matter, how many put on the rest of the London "city" man's uniform which also includes striped pants and that short black coat elegantly known by the British as a bum-freezer ?

We are charmed by this French desire not to mistake us for others. They have also shattered in their leaflet the common French fallacy that it snows all year round in Canada.

An insane enemy

RUSSELL Hanselman, a Central School student, concluded his school project "Forest Fire Safety" with this summary:

"Forest fires have one thing in common, they all start small. A bush fire is an insane enemy and anyone engaged in the control of fires realizes this only too well. It is about the only thing that can and does go up hill faster than down. It will burn with the wind and jump with the wind, but by golly, it does exactly the same thing against the wind and if there is no wind it will make its own. The higher the humidity, the slower your fire will move. A fire is full of contradictions."

OVER THE YEARS With Lachute Watchman

August, 1885 —

A boy driving a horse and cart undertook to water his horse in the river at the paper-mill works, when horse, cart and boy all went suddenly down in deep water. The horse swam across with the cart, but the boy jumped out in the middle of the river, and was rescued from drowning by Mr. McArthur, butcher, and Mr. Cleland, at great risk of their lives.

Obituary: "Seldom in the annals of Argentueil County has a larger and more respectable body of people assembled together to do the last honors to a fellow being than that which on Sunday last followed to the grave the mortal remains of the late lamented —."

Mr. T. C. Noyes, of Chatham, has a contract to supply 12,000 bushels of lime for the building of the Lachute Paper Mills.

Several persons have suffered very much lately in consequence of a disordered action of the moral sensibilities. Some of the cases are very serious.

50 YEARS AGO

August, 1915 —

The good people of Centreville are to be congratulated on the success of their ice cream social; the sum of $58.30 was raised for the Sunday School fund.

The late Wm. A. Leggo, whose death we recorded last week, was the originator of many inventions. He was one of the first to invent a flying machine, the "Airevolt", but owing to the heavy driving power, was unable to succeed. Since then, gas engines have been introduced, to make this possible. He started an illustrated newspaper, The Daily Graphic, in Montreal. . . . Mr. Leggo moved to Lachute following a diphtheria epidemic in '74 and '75, in which he lost three children.

Mr. W. A. Ball, Chatham Street, wishes to inform the public that he is now prepared to take pictures of family groups, buildings, scenery, etc. (Advt.)

Mr. Ernest Walker, of Winnipeg, arrived in town owing to the serious illness of his father, Mr. Gavin J. Walker.

A garden party in aid of the Red Cross fund will be held at the Geneva School grounds. Admission 25 cents, including ice cream and cake.

Edina — Many visitors are now up for the summer and are getting that health and strength to be procured in these lovely Laurentian hills.

25 YEARS AGO

August, 1940 —

Dr. R. Percival, a Dalhousie graduate latterly practicing in the Eastern Townships, has come to reside in Lachute.

Keith Gordon, of Vide Sac, suffered a multiple fracture of the arm when he fell from a load of hay.

A lump-sum contract for the construction of eight dwelling houses in Brownsburg, has been awarded by Defence Industries Ltd. to the Cottingham Supply Co. Ltd., for approximately $35,000.

St. Andrews — Mrs. Geoffrey Simpson and two children, Robert and Judy, have come from London to reside in Canada "for the duration".

Mrs. Bell McCrimmon, who died in her 86th year at Lost River, came from Invernesshire, Scotland, 83 years ago, crossing the Atlantic in a sailing vessel.

A 1937 Ford sedan belonging to H. E. Underhill was stolen Tuesday night from his garage, which adjoins the kitchen of his home.

SUGAR AND SPICE

When The Well Looks Dry

Ever had your water cut off? It happened to us the other day. And that rather vulgar expression, along with an older one, "You never miss the water till the well runs dry", assumed new meaning.

My wife's dad, a 110-pound strip of whipcord with one arm, suddenly got sick, one of the few times in his life. We lit out for the homestead to lend a hand, while he was in hospital.

Everything went fine until about 11 p.m., when we decided to have a cup of tea before retiring. A trickle came out of the tap, and stopped.

My father-in-law is one of that vanishing species of rural dweller who, besides being able to tell the weight of a cattle-beast and know when it's going to rain, is a carpenter-bricklayer-plumber-millwright. He could build a bridge across the St. Lawrence with some wire, a plank or two, a shovel, an iron bar, and a couple of tin cans.

In contrast, I am one of that rapidly-increasing breed that couldn't build a bridge across a trout stream with 200 tons of steel, eight carloads of cedar planks, twelve bulldozers and six civil engineers.

So there I was. Grandad in the hospital. And me out there on the ranch, with no water supply, and three women on my hands, each of whom suddenly had to use the toilet and had a feverish thirst.

I tried to imbue them with the old pioneer spirit, when you had to walk two miles to the spring for water, through thickets of black bears. They were not impressed. All they wanted to do was go to the bathroom.

I went down the cellar, and looked desperately around. There were switches and pumps and hot-water tanks and cold-water tanks, and pipes running in every conceivable combination. Don't sneer, Mac. Do you know the ins and outs of a pressure system?

Granny started to panic about the hot-water tank blowing up. I unscrewed some fuses. The first plunged the house into darkness. The second put the refrigerator out of order (which we discovered next morning.) I pulled a switch. The furnace went on.

I peered at pumps, gazed at gauges. then I pronounced, "the well's gone dry." It was the only thing I could think of, and at midnight, who was going to argue? Granny came up with some folk-lore about priming the pump, but I assured her that modern electric pumps didn't need priming. We went to bed, disgruntled, and thirsty as explorers of the great Gobi desert.

Bright and early, the plumber arrived. He said the first thing to do was prime the pump. He poured 843 teapots full of water down the pipe. I held the flashlight. No results. Female relatives, looking a bit frantic, peered down the cellar stairs about every four minutes. In the old days, there'd have been a two-holer within range. But these modern farm homes have everything. Except an outdoor privy.

Eight hours and many dollars later, we had: five men on the job; torn up a great chunk of the lawn with a digger; found the well; pulled up 90 feet of plastic pipe; lost all the females to various plumbed establishments in town; and found the trouble.

Nope, the well wasn't dry. It was almost overflowing from all those tea-pots of water poured in. Nope. The pipes hadn't burst. Yup. There was something stuck under the foot-valve. One of the legs had broken off the poppet, a 60-cent item, and had prevented the jet in the foot-valve from jetting, and the pump was pumping air. Now, is that clear? If it isn't, hold your peace. That's what the man said.

And it certainly helped me decide what I'm going to do in summer holidays from now on. I'm going to pick up a bunch of firm-legged poppets and go around the country helping people whose water has been cut off. Just give me a call.

New Shape Of Medicare

Now that the country has had a couple of weeks to think about Prime Minister Pearson's Medicare proposals advanced at the federal-provincial conference, it is obvious that Ottawa moved with strategic suddenness in this matter.

The provincial premiers had no inkling that the federal government would rush into this complicated and contentious field when they assembled in Ottawa for the biggest federal-provincial session in history.

As a result of the Pearson government's proposals, the possibility of a fall election can no longer be ruled out, despite the embarrassments of the Dorion Inquiry.

It is significant that all provinces but one have accepted in principle the Ottawa proposals for a universal, compulsory, medical services insurance program administered by government bodies.

Premier Manning of Alberta, sole hold-out as this is written, is fighting what can only be a rear-guard action against the principles of government-sponsored medicare.

His opposition is grounded in the philosophy of the true conservative, who holds that individuals should look after their welfare themselves and that the government should assist only those truly financially incapable of doing so.

This point of view, however, overlooks the fact that all insurance is based on the spread-the-risk principle. Comprehensive medical insurance is possible only when it is universal and compulsory so that rich and poor, healthy and ill alike, share equally the cost.

Because of the current trend in this country for the provinces to jealously protect their rights under the BNA Act — and health and welfare is a provincial responsibility — the federal government is not in a position to launch a federal program of this nature.

However, the Pearson government proposes the next best thing — a series of provincial programs meeting certain basic standards.

The chief standards are that the programs will have to pay the full cost of doctors' bills, that they must be transferable so a person going from one province to another will not lose benefits, that they must be universal and compulsory, and that they must be run by public agencies and not private insurance companies.

The NDP will support the proposals, while criticizing Ottawa for leaving too much initiative to the provinces. The Conservative party will also go along. Even the Social Credit party is unlikely to be as vehement in its opposition as Mr. Manning.

The cost of the program is estimated at $800 million per year, based on it getting off the launching pad in 1967. Ottawa promises to contribute half the cost, and Finance Minister Gordon says that if times remain good, this will not mean any increase in taxes. The provinces will be able to raise their half any way they like — through existing revenues, introduction of premiums, or increased taxes.

As most people are already paying into medical insurance programs of one type or another, they would merely pay into the government program instead of their existing one.

Ottawa's proposals fall into line with the recommendations of the Hall Royal Commission on health services. This must mark one of the few occasions when a royal commission report has been acted on so completely, or so speedily.

The biggest political plum for the federal Liberals could come in Saskatchewan, where at present they do not hold a single seat. Premier Thatcher says Ottawa's proposals could mean the abolition of premiums under the province's present medicare program. If so, this could provide tantalyzing bait for the Liberals in a province where they must win some seats if they ever hope to secure a majority in Ottawa.

Gifts from the Indians

— By NANCY CLEAVER —

Thoughtful teen-age and adult Canadians are aware of the steady movement of young Indians into urban centres seeking employment, further education, and the excitement and bustle of city life. Three out of four of Canada's Indians, who number over 208,000 still live on reserves, but their young people are restless. It is difficult for them to make their own way in a large Canadian community.

Nan Shipley, who has written a number of books about Indians of an earlier time, in her recent novel, Return To The River (Fell, Ryerson) has painted a convincing picture of the plight of a young girl, Nona Hawk, in her struggle to make a living in a Canadian city. Canadians are in no position to criticize their neighbors to the South with their negro problem, until we do a better job in helping individual native people find a place in our society.

Small boys love to "Play Indians" and they and their sisters have a colorful picture of the Indians of pioneer days. Parents can encourage their children to appreciate the many gifts of the Red Men, including their legends and the use of maple syrup and sugar.

Different tribes of Indians used contrasting names for the adjective describing the twelve months of the year. The lists varied in different areas but many of them followed this pattern:

January — the Snow or Cold Moon; February — the Hunger or Raccoon (Hunting) Moon; March — the Crow or Snow-Blindness Moon; April — the Green Grass or Egg Moon; May — the Planting or Flower Moon; June — the Wild Rose or Hot Moon; July — the Thunder or Deer Moon; August — the Green Corn or Sturgeon Moon; September — the Harvest or Fruit Moon; October — the Falling Leaf or Travelling Moon; November — the Hunting or Indian Summer Moon; December — the Long Night or Dropping Horns Moon.

A boy or girl might like to make a poster of these fascinating names for the months which the Indians choose. Mark it off into twelve equal squares, draw a design in each representing whichever name is preferred and color the picture.

An older child might enjoy creating a design showing the phases of the moon which are marked on many calendars. Children are constantly asking questions about the moon and parents will find this information useful: The moon, our nearest neighbor, is approximately 240,000 miles away. If there was a super highway stretching from the earth to the moon, along which a motorist could travel continuously at sixty miles an hour, if he made no stops he would reach the moon in about five and a half months. The moon takes about the same time, twenty-eight days, to turn on its own axis as to travel around its orbit about the earth.

TURN ABOUT

A woman waiting at the door ready to go to the store had her arms filled with coats and four little children at her side. Her husband, coming down the stairs, asked why she was standing there. She replied quietly, handing him the coats: "This time you put the children's coats on and I'll go honk the horn."

A seafood salad success

Salads have come a long way since the days of Marcus Gabius Apicius, a Roman epicure. The ingredients which that gentleman listed for a salad dressing nearly 2,000 years ago included vinegar, dried dates, ginger, pepper, honey, and garum — a strong sauce made from fish and commonly found in Roman cookery.

A dressing more to the modern taste would include such ingredients as mayonnaise, mustard, lemon juice, salt, pepper, and flaked seafood. Such a mixture, call it a salad if you prefer, is recommended by the Consumer Branch of the Department of Fisheries of Canada as a dressing for tomato slices.

Originally developed as far back as 1942, the recipe which follows has proved an unfailing favorite and at varying times has been tested successfully using the main ingredient cooked, flaked fish fillets, chicken haddie, canned tuna, and canned crab. It makes an attractive and easy luncheon dish for a hot day.

Tomatoes With Seafood Dressing

1 Pound cooked or canned fish or shellfish, 2 hard-cooked eggs (chopped), 1 tablespoon minced onion, 1 cup grated carrot, ½ cup mayonnaise or salad dressing, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, ½ teaspoon prepared mustard, salt, pepper, 18 tomato slices, lettuce.

Coarsely flake the fish or shellfish of your choice. Combine with eggs, onion, and ½ cup of grated carrot. In a separate bowl combine the mayonnaise, lemon juice, and mustard. Mix thoroughly. Add mayonnaise mixture to seafood mixture. Toss lightly. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Chill. For each serving, line a plate with lettuce and slightly overlap three tomato slices on top in clover leaf design. Lightly season tomato with salt. Heap ½ cup of the seafood dressing in the centre. Top with a tablespoon of remaining grated carrot. Makes 6 servings.

Bring to a boil, stirring constantly. Remove from heat. Cool slightly. Beat in 1 tsp. vanilla and 1 cup icing sugar until of spreading consistency. Sufficient frosting for a 9" square cake.

REDUCE WITH CARE

Periodically a new food fad turns up, guaranteed to give you willowy lines and reduced weight. Often, it amounts to a reduction in necessary food elements. If you consult your doctor, he can prescribe a diet that will provide the essential nutrients in proper amounts to reduce excess poundage.

Teatime Topics

Specially Written for The Lachute Watchman

By Jean Sharp, Canadian Press Staff Writer

Regardless of what experts tell you, you will probably take the clothes you like best on a trip. But there are rules of thumb about what to take to keep cleaning and pressing problems to a minimum and to give you as much comfort and as many changes as possible without shipping a wardrobe trunk.

The well-planned travel wardrobe, says Carol Lane, women's travel director with Shell Oil, is designed for unpredictable weather and vacation activities, for comfort and versatility.

Choose clothes which can be mix-matched and dressed up or down with accessories. Think in terms of costumes that co-ordinate. It may help if you limit yourself to basic neutral colors to serve as contrasts.

Easy Accessories

You should have one crushable hat, even if you don't normally wear them.

Switchable accessories for daytime and sportswear might include matched low-heeled shoes, roomy purse and sport belt with two bright scarves and a set of simple jewelry.

For afternoon and evening take pumps you can wear with several things, a clutch purse that packs flat, a matching or contrasting stole and a set of more elaborate jewelry.

You'll need, no matter of what else you take, a light coat or topper, a cardigan and rainwear.

Easy Laundry

You should have a dressing gown which takes practically no space. A good idea is the popover type which doubles as a dress.

For an average two week trip you will need two each nylon bras and slips, two pairs of gloves and socks and three pairs of briefs and stockings.

If you are heading for a beach or summer resort, add a bathing suit, beach coat, play shoes, extra shorts and sun shirt.

If your holiday will be on a ranch, farm or in a forest camp, add bathing suit, dungarees, extra sport shirt, sport jacket, hiking shoes.

For the city, add extra daytime dress, convertible blouse, walking shoes.

There are miscellaneous items Carol Lane says you shouldn't be without. They include: alarm clock, comb and brush, cologne, cosmetics, toothbrush and paste, travel iron, clothesbrush, deodorant, facial tissue, hairpins, shampoo, sunlotion and glasses, depilatory, first aid kit, sewing kit, nail care kit, washcloth in shower cap, soap in soap dish.

PREVENTION OF BLINDNESS
(Weekly Tip)

If you chop wood at your summer cottage, be careful. Too often, flying chips lodge in the eye and cause trouble, says the Canadian National Institute for the Blind. Use a sharp axe. Ask children to stand well out of the way while chopping takes place. One careless stroke can ruin vision for life.

LITTLE FOLK MAKE BIG PICTURES

You've probably sat back from time to time, watched the children in a "cute" situation, and thought what a good photograph that moment would have made.

There's no reason why you can't take such pictures at any time. Just keep your camera handy and loaded with film, so you'll be ready for those "candids" everyone will enjoy.

Now that the weather is approaching its summertime best, you'll have many opportunities to snap outdoor photos of your own family or the wee neighbors. Just keep your eyes open for the "unposed" moments.

You'll soon discover dozens of picture opportunities wherever there are children. A girl talking to her dog, a boy greeting his favorite girl friend, little fingers clutching a baseball bat. The list is endless — the picture possibilities are priceless.

Remember that lively, story-telling photos interest most everyone. Sometimes you may have to wait for the right picture-taking moment. At other times, you can encourage a natural ease by using familiar surroundings and objects.

Once the children are absorbed in their play, choose an interesting viewpoint. Shoot close-up, concentrating on the youngsters. Move around, keeping one eye on the viewfinder.

Your subjects "freeze" in front of the lens? Then, lay the camera down and wait until everyone has forgotten about it. Later, when your subjects are relaxed and natural once again, the time is ripe for snapping.

Remember that children grow up quickly. So take pictures of the youngsters today. You'll be glad you did, tomorrow.

"Sunnyacres Sketches"

By Margaret Cook

Here we sit on a cold, rainy afternoon of this queerest of summers. Outside, the thermometer says 50; inside, we have a fire in the big kitchen range, and shall have another on the hearth later. It is nice to eat at the dining room table, by the light of the leaping flames, instead of on an oilcloth on the porch table, but, just the same, it is queer. Over at the local hotel, no doubt the guests are peering dolefully at the clouds. One could write a fair article on the diverse reactions to rain. The farmer, of course, is thankful; perhaps after all, there will be a small crop. The vacationer is disgusted. The city-dweller probably does not pay too much attention, as he dashes from his concrete block to the bus or train. He is completely weaned from a rural background, or perhaps, he never had one. Suburbanites are pleased; they will not have to water the lawn, after all. In those suburbs where all water is from wells — oh yes, dear reader, there are such — they are almost as thankful as the farmer. But whatever the reaction, nature pays no attention. Tampering with Mother Nature may bring blessings in eastern Ontario, but curses are the order of the day in the soggy bits of Quebec, north and west of the capital.

In spite of the vagaries of the weather, we settle thankfully into our summer routine. The head of the house has added, what I refer to as his Easter Island project, to the routine duties about the garden. As I write, I can see twelve rocks — glacial boulders, rather — which he has unearthed from what we hope will be the flower garden. The smallest one is as big as a kitchen chair, and the largest would hardly fit under the kitchen table. Except for a few moments of my sitting on the end of a lever, the man has done all this himself. I forgot to point out that these rocks are nearly all 75-100% underground. Had we known of their presence, perhaps we would not have sought to enlarge the garden. The original garden, about 30x20 ft., was rapidly going back to grass, or lupins. I can weed and water, but I cannot dig; so (canny, after thirty years of marriage) I made small mewing noises, and remarked that I should have to hire the local landscape man to dig up the whole thing this fall, and relocate everything but the lupins. I also added that it would be well to have the next 20 ft. dug up. All men are slow thinkers; I had already estimated that this would cost at least $100, so I was not surprised when, after a few weeks, the head of the house took fork in hand and began to dig... This approach is not advised for brides; for them, tears are still the best bet. Anyway, show me a bride with $100!

As for Margaret Cook, she makes strawberry jam, does a bit of writing, reads all the trash for which she has no time in winter, and generally enjoys freedom from responsibility. Occasionally we make a little trip, such as we did last week when we went to see the man of the porcupines, of whom we wrote last year. Imagine our delight to find yet another albino porcupine, born in captivity at the end of April. It is fascinating to watch the porcupine family, now numbering four, and all of a whiteness of varying degrees. The baby, of course, looks like a white rabbit. If anyone is interested enough to make the trip of about thirty miles from Lachute, I am assured that the owner will gladly show his treasures. Get in touch with The Watchman for directions.

Another trip that was a great success was that to Upper Canada Village at Morrisburg. Having seen Williamsburg, in Virginia, we were inclined to be skeptical, but once again the Canadian caution has asserted itself, and the place is virtually unspoiled by the horrors of tourism. There is a feeling of authenticity about it, from the wool being carded and spun, to the dedicated cabinet-maker with his wares. The houses are veritable mines of history, and it is Canadian history, with no overtones of Davy Crockett or of Daniel Boone. I found the replica of my iron tart-pan in the museum, and recognized my grandmother's rocker in a farmhouse. I even found the answer to a minor puzzle: Why were so many bedrooms downstairs, rather than up? Answer: Because of the difficulty of heating them, of course. The biggest and best farmhouse had a box-stove set between two upstairs bedrooms, and a stove-pipe running through a third. The fourth, the nursery, did not appear to have any heat. Babies, so doctors say, are hot little animals anyway, having the same heating apparatus as we, but with less surface to heat. If you go to the Village, note the difference between the doctor's house and that of the schoolmaster. Anybody who taught school in those days had to be dedicated. My heart went out to the schoolmaster's wife, keeping house in a room about 15 by 10, and doing all her cooking on a tiny wood-burning stove. This particular master is thought to have had about seven in-boarders, and there was a baby. Add to these difficulties for the wife, those of hot, tight stays, long petticoats and dresses, and you'll realize that nuns, for instance, should complain! Space does not allow further notes, but do go, and see for yourselves. It is not necessary to take a lunch, there being restaurant, hotel, and snack bar on the grounds.

Coming back from Morrisburg, we went through part of historic Glengarry County, then swung south to Lancaster, to have dinner at an Inn that began life as a stage-coach stop and hotel. The food is good there, and the view from the wharf of Lake St. Francis really outstanding. This is fishermen's country, the water being clear, cold, and unpolluted. Well worth a visit, and if you like quiet, beauty and fish, a good place for a vacation. At the risk of being a bore, let me repeat that it is not necessary to go south of the border for beauty, history, or good accommodation. Incidentally, it was pointed out to us that the current unrest in Quebec is fine for Ontario. There have been cases of tourists at Lancaster, on hearing that they were near Quebec, asking for a return route that would by-pass Quebec.

I see that the space is about gone, but would like to commend my fellow columnist for his remarks about cruelty to animals. This is a disgusting facet of human nature, and should be relentlessly publicized with names, if possible. If enough fuss is made, the powers will act, as witness the recent legislation regarding the killing of birds and of baby seals.

Farm guesswork eliminated by computers

Use of computers in Saskatchewan farming operations is expected to grow significantly in the next decade as a necessary part of farm management, The Financial Post reports. Farming is no longer "small business", either in relation to capital investment or management skills. John Leier, a farmer in the Sedley district, 30 miles south-east of Regina, this spring became probably the first private farmer in Saskatchewan to have his entire farming operation measured and analyzed by a computer, an NCR 390 in Calgary. He now has confidence in the future of the computer in farming as it rather discomfitingly pinpoints his mistakes and projects an analysis of his 1,160-acre grain and cattle operation.

Leier has already revamped much of his farm financial and operational structure on the basis of his own computer data. For instance, the data told Leier he can have a solid self-sustaining unit if he adds 160 acres of pasture, which would mean no increase in the size of the herd but a better-quality herd; if he adds 320 acres for growing grain; and switches 100 acres from grain to hay for fodder. Expanding grain acreage by purchasing more land would bring his high depreciation costs into line.

Fountain for municipal park

Council decided last week on a new and attractive fountain for the Memorial Park, to replace the one recently demolished due to its state of disrepair. Model above shows the fountain in relation to the cenotaph, bandstand and surroundings. This is an original design composed of four basins into which the water falls in cascades, illuminated at night. The improvement should greatly increase the attractions of the park, which is a bright spot from the visitor's viewpoint and an esthetic asset to the town.

Traffic bottlenecks, Bethany corner and Chatham Street, both on prov'l routes

At the August meeting of Town Council, it was decided to approach the government highway authorities to study the possibility of widening Chatham Street, which forms part of Route 8. The Chamber of Commerce asked for an improvement in traffic regulation at the Main and Bethany intersection. On this score the town engineer, Hubert Pilon, has already communicated with the Quebec department, and since this is the junction of Routes 8 and 41, it is possible there will be a traffic light installed.

Mayor Dr. Z. L. Saindon chaired this regular meeting, and Ald. Linton Armstrong was appointed pro-mayor for the ensuing three months.

Further on the subject of streets, a request from River View residents for the paving of McGibbon, Staniforth and Gordon Streets was held over for the time being. However, a $3,000 paving offer from the Highways Department was accepted by the councillors; this asphalting will be laid on the town engineer's recommendations.

Council took over certain land on Paquin Avenue (lots Pt. 590 to 598) from the Provincial Government.

It was decided to permit parking on the south side of Lafleur Street from the Bélanger restaurant to Palace Hotel, and 30-minute parking from this establishment east to Bethany Street. In consequence, parking will be prohibited on the north side of this stretch.

It was also ruled that parking of vehicles will be prohibited on the west side of Princess opposite the Health Unit and Provincial Police quarters.

Correspondence

Letters of appreciation were received from the Carrefour du Livre and the Centre d'Art for grants received. Council agreed to supply 50 loads of gravel to the Richelieu playground.

A tractor-loader will be rented for one month at $1,200, which amount will be deducted from the price if it is decided to purchase the machine.

Council agreed to give use of the Auditorium to the Richelieu Club for a dance on August 15.

Accounts totalling $34,663 were approved for payment. Finally, an adjustment of taxes was allowed on the Michel Malacket property, and the valuators will be requested to attend the next Council sitting for homologation of the roll.

B'burg workers achieve new no-accident record

Brownsburg — A safety record of more than half-a-million man-hours without a lost-time accident was established August 3 by the ammunition works of Canadian Industries Limited — Works Manager K. W. MacGibbon has announced.

The record wins for the employees the General Manager's Prize in the company's no-accident record plan. Mr. MacGibbon said the more than 1,100 employees have worked since March 26, 1965, a total of 713,356 man-hours, without sustaining a single disabling injury.

To mark their achievement the employees will receive individual awards.

Premises entered during night

Two break-ins within the Lachute limits were reported to the Lachute municipal police on Friday of last week, the incidents having occurred the previous night, Thursday.

Youths gained entry to the Richelieu Park, and while no actual damage was in evidence, some food was reported to be missing from the canteen.

Entry was also reported at the Quilles d'Argenteuil, on Hamford Street. Here the intruders had removed several cement blocks from the rear of the building. The extent of damage or loss has not yet been determined, as the juke box, cigarette machine, pinball machine and peanut machine were all broken into, and the contents and money taken.

Expo '65 trade fair dates October 7-11

Preparations for Expo '65, sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce of this town, are well advanced for the fall dates — October 7 to 11 inclusive — set for this venture. This is actually a postponement from the dates previously planned (September 28 to October 2) due to the fact that automobile dealers will not be receiving their new models until the beginning of October. Since these exhibits will be a big feature of the show, it was considered advisable to delay the opening.

According to Gabriel Valois, in charge of publicity for this coming trade fair, there will be 37 booths in addition to the new car showings, arranged in the new Lions' Arena building. The lighting of the interior will be installed by that time, and Mozart Carrière, chairman of the Arena construction, has indicated to the Expo committee that a scale plan of the interior will be available to them by August 14.

Plans have made headway since a slow-down incidental to the summer holidays. Georges H. Beaulieu, secretary-treasurer, is back on the job since his vacation, and Gérard Courtois has accepted responsibility for planning the layout of the show booths. Exhibitors will therefore be well advised to consult him on their needs. A publicity approach will be made to weekly newspapers from Valleyfield to Joliette, besides the dailies in Montreal and Ottawa, also radio and television stations.

Rental of booths must be completed for August 21, and Gilles Lavoie and Gabriel Valois are key figures in this part of the organization.

It is advised that all car dealers interested will be called together shortly, to discuss a fair allocation of space for their displays.

The late Sgt. Albert Legault

Well and favorably known to the motoring public, Sgt. Albert Legault of the provincial traffic patrol died after a brief illness August 4, at the age of 67. Although retired three years ago, he had been serving as a desk clerk at Provincial Police headquarters here since that time.

Born at St. Philippe, he moved to Brownsburg at an early age and resided continuously in that village. His long service, 33 years, with the traffic police was exclusively in connection with the Lachute unit, and covered the territory of Argenteuil County.

Sgt. Legault is mourned by his wife, the former Yvonne Beauchamp; three sons, Ronald and Yvon, of Brownsburg, and Claude, of Oka; three daughters, (Fernande) Mme Paul Levert, of Brownsburg, (Rolande) Mme Cléo Hodgins, of Ottawa, and (Denise) Mme J.-L. Blais, of Ste. Thérèse. He is also survived by two brothers, Mathias and Omer, at Brownsburg, and 15 grandchildren.

Funeral was held Saturday afternoon from the Menard parlors to St. Louis de France parish church at Brownsburg, with burial in the local cemetery.

Amalgamation Act gives full right of objection; procedure outlined

Clauses applicable to case of Lachute and Ayersville

Bill 13, the "Voluntary Amalgamation of Municipalities Act" (1965) has provisions for the procedure of amalgamation which are pertinent to the case of Lachute and Ayersville. The necessary by-law has been passed by these two municipalities and a joint petition will be submitted to the Lieutenant-Governor in Council for official Quebec sanction. . . Following are extracts from the Act:

2. Municipalities that wish to amalgamate may, by whatever law they are governed, pass by an absolute majority of the members of each of their councils, a by-law authorizing the presentation of a joint petition to the Lieutenant-Governor in Council, praying for the granting of letters patent amalgamating such municipalities and creating a new city or town, village or rural municipality.

3. If all the petitioning municipalities are governed by the Municipal Code, they shall not be amalgamated:

(a) into a city municipality, if their total population is less than 6,000 souls;

4. The joint petition of the municipalities shall in particular:

(a) state the name of the new municipality;

(b) contain a technical description of the territory of the new municipality;

(c) state the terms and conditions of the amalgamation;

(d) indicate the law which, subject to the terms and conditions of the amalgamation, will govern the new municipality;

(e) indicate, if need be, the special legislative provisions governing the municipalities before their amalgamation which shall apply to the new municipality;

(f) establish the composition of the council which will have power to administer the new municipality until the first general election;

(g) fix the day when and the place where the first sitting of the council will be held after the coming into force of the letters patent;

(h) if the new municipality is a city or town, order the preparation of the electoral list in sufficient time for the first general election;

(i) fix the date of the first general election and that of subsequent general elections;

(j) fix the term of office of the members of the council and, if the new municipality is a city or town, determine the number thereof;

(k) designate the secretary-treasurer of the new municipality, if it is a village or rural municipality.

5. The petitioning municipalities shall keep a signed copy of the petition at their offices where any interested person may examine the same.

6. The petitioning municipalities shall cause to be published twice during the same month, in the Quebec Official Gazette and in a Freneh newspaper or English newspaper circulating in their territory, a notice summarizing the purpose of the petition and indicating the place in each municipality where the same may be examined and a copy obtained; such notice shall also state that the property-owners may object to the amalgamation within the delay and in the manner provided in section 8.

If it is established to the satisfaction of the Minister that there is no English newspaper circulating in the territory, the municipalities are relieved from the obligation of publishing the notice in an English newspaper.

7. As soon as possible after the publication provided for in section 6, a signed copy of the petition shall be forwarded to the Minister and to the Commission with a certificate of publication.

8. The property owners of the petitioning municipalities who object to the amalgamation may, in the month following that during which the notice was published, make known the grounds of their objection, in writing, to the Commission.

9. The councils of the petitioning municipalities and the officers thereof shall furnish the Minister and the Commission with all documents and information which they may require in order to satisfy themselves as to the expediency of the amalgamation.

10. The Commission shall conduct a public investigation if the Youth drowned near St. Adolphe

Richard Tessier, a 16-year-old youth from Montreal North, drowned at the Lac Longue Development near St. Adolphe on Thursday of last week. The body was recovered on Sunday. The accident occurred after the victim had been left in his father's car, with instructions to mind the younger children while the parents looked at a lot on the lake. Leaving the younger members of the family unattended, he went for a swim and disappeared.

A search failed to recover the victim. This led to the partial draining of the artificial lake, and the body was finally recovered by Pierre Massie and Gaston Marcaibe, both of Montreal. The fatality was investigated by Q.P.P. Cst. Pierre Lanoue.

A feature in connection with the Argenteuil Art Association's photographic exhibition this year was the presenting of slides at a special showing last Thursday evening. This venture was strictly an experiment, but the response proved highly gratifying to the organizers; around 70 interested persons turned up at the municipal hall in St. Andrews to view the pictures.

Most of the slides were scenic landscapes, and the color effects in many of these were an artistic triumph. There were vistas from different countries, cities, mountains and marines, and the program was virtually a travelogue in color. The projection was handled by Dr. G. R. Rigby and Mrs. John Douglas, with the former as spokesman for the program.

The many spectators also found rare interest in the 50-odd prints displayed on walls and panels. These showed a keen sense of photographic values and skill in their reproduction.

Judge of the pictures and transparencies was Mr. Arch Hardy, of Vankleek Hill, and Dr. Rigby announced the winners in three different media — color prints, black and white prints, and transparencies. The winners were, respectively, Miss F. M. Douglas, Mr. Gerald Cushing, and Mr. Mansiel Wilson. The latter, an enthusiastic scenic and wildlife photographer, was chairman of the committee responsible for this exhibition. Several exhibits in each of the three classes were given honorable mention.

Prescott - Arg'tl scholarship again offered

The Hawkesbury Section of the Chemical Institute of Canada announced recently that the Prescott-Argenteuil Industrial Scholarship will again be awarded this year. The scholarship is intended to promote interest in science among young residents of the counties of Prescott and Argenteuil, and to assist a student of outstanding ability to continue his scientific education at the university level.

This has been made possible by the contribution of industrial firms in the area.

Application forms and copies of the scholarship regulations may be obtained from D. Campagna, 97 Main Street, Hawkesbury. All applications must be submitted to M. J. McLeod, 485 Smerdon Street, Hawkesbury, by August 23.

These mixed-up seasons!

Observations on field and garden crops include these noteworthy items from a Dalesville reader:

At Ernest Coulson's in Dalesville there is a crab-apple tree which has been in bloom for the past two weeks — which is several weeks behind schedule. The tree appeared to have been killed by frost this spring, and the proprietor had serious thoughts about cutting it down.

At Jack McVicar's farm in the same area, some of the corn planted in May is only just appearing above the soil, due to the prolonged drought after seeding.

One-arm golfer's hole-in-one

Golfers here thought they'd heard everything, when a one-armed player, Al Bloom, of Ottawa, scored a hole-in-one with a No. 4 iron last week. Mr. Bloom, with a withered right arm, has cultivated a powerful left-hand stroke, and he scored his ace on the 140-yard (par 3) 15th hole of No. 1 course. He was playing with three fellow-members of the National Garment Salesmen's Association on Tuesday, in a practice round preceding the field day held by that organization last week.

Mr. Bloom is a member of Rideau View Golf Club at Ottawa. He has played golf for 12 years, at the rate of about 30 games a year.

Month's reports from police, fire departments

Reporting on activities for the month of July, the town police department recorded 311 service calls and 24 accidents, including three causing bodily injury. There were no fewer than 27 arrests and 40 investigations.

Bicycle permits numbered 104, dog licenses 11, and traffic tickets issued, 68. Traffic fines amounted to $1,126.65.

Council agreed on the rental of another radio unit for the second police patrol car, and also approved a salary boost of $5 a week to Stephen Griffith, clerk and constable.

Fire Department

The fire department answered 13 calls in July — seven in Lachute, three in Ayersville, two in St. Jerusalem and one in Chatham. Total fire loss was around $15,650, of which the two outbreaks in St. Jerusalem Parish had accounted for $12,000-odd. Revenues from out-of-town services of the brigade and equipment amounted to $950, while there had been payroll expenses of $500 in the month under review.

The reports were submitted by Chief J. R. Chartrand and Chief Don MacCulloch, respectively, and tabled for the Council by Commissioner Linton W. Armstrong.

There was a request from the fire chief that Council increase his salary by $25, to make it $81 a month. But Council decided to offer him a statutory $75, plus, of course, his hourly remuneration while on actual fire service.

Firemen answer week-end calls

Considerable damage from heat and smoke resulted from a fire Saturday evening at the home of Roger Girard, 114 Tessier Street, Ayersville. The loss was only partially covered by insurance. The fire was confined mainly to the kitchen. However, heat ignited a mattress in the house, and firemen had to return later in the evening to extinguish this second blaze, which was of a minor nature.

On Friday evening, a fire of minor importance occurred at Dalphen's Store, Main Street; no damage resulted in this case.

Firemen on duty [illegible] responded to a false alarm in Ayersville.

By BOB ATCHISON

This little story should give you a laugh. One of the local gentry out for a Sunday picnic got himself into an old tote road with not too much trouble. A nice place was picked out for the eats and everything was set up. No flies of any kind pestered the place, so this was going to be a fine outing. However, just as they were ready to mangle the food, in walks a mother skunk with a family of three. Naturally, thoughts of food vanished — they left everything and headed for the car — only to find they had picked up a flat on the way in. With windows cranked up, the only thing to do was to watch the skunks, who tasted everything in the way of food, including some sour pickles and strong cheese. After the animals had sampled everything a nap was in order, and believe it or not, the tablecloth was selected as the best place l. . . This must have been pretty rugged for the onlookers. Sitting in a car with all the windows closed on a warm day is not my idea of fun. Then the pangs of hunger started to take hold. This little operation took about two hours before it ended, then the smellers decided to take off. Then the tire had to be fixed or changed. . . So from now on this family will not be too anxious to try out new picnic places, and I have a faint idea they will not be too taken up with skunks for a while. You may suggest they should have chased them away. But horn-blowing had no effect; and we are all somewhat hesitant about shoo-ing skunks.

The publicity departments at Quebec are energetically telling the tourist to visit this province. Great things are painted for the visitors — hospitality, charm, etc. But they sure don't tell of the sullen, almost discriminating treatment that is handed out too. These are not isolated cases either. In one case that I heard of, a motorist from New Hampshire ran out of gas along the way. Walking some distance to a small service station, he was told that the station was closed and wouldn't be open until nine o'clock the following day. The family had to walk to the vicinity of the gas station and find lodgings, with some difficulty. However, all the time they were there, cars and trucks were going in to get gas. The operator, on being questioned, stated they had permits to buy gas, and that was it; and the visitor knew what he could do if he didn't like it. We all know just how anxious this visitor will be to come back to this province.

Another case was a camper from the State of New York. He saw a campsite near Ste. Agathe, and as it was getting on in the evening, they decided to stop for the night. On approaching the owner they were told that the area was all filled and that no one could be taken in. Not being blind, the visitors pointed out different spots where camps could be set up, but was told these sites were all reserved. The visitors had to swallow this and took off. They finally managed to get themselves a motel. Naturally they were just a little peeved, and later the following day they went back to see the campsite. Know what? Two camps were in there, the same number there had been in the night before. . . Now, it is realized that word of mouth is the greatest form of advertising in the world, so figure out what kind of publicity we'll get from this. You know this makes me sick. . . Sure, Quebec is my home, but now I'm actually ashamed to admit it when talking to visitors; a sad state of affairs. We may be having a little internal trouble ourselves, but this is no reason to take it out on the visitors. Maybe if the Minister of Tourism can find the time, he could put a stop to this.

The usual shrug-off is that "it couldn't happen here" — but even our own town is not free from this indifference, and it is rather stupid to consider we are doing nothing about it. I think our clubs should get together on this. I have always been taken aback at the lack of concern for visitors. Almost every place I have ever been outside this province, tourists have been big business and were to be treated royally (a sacrilegious word!) as an economic asset to the community.

Now for more pleasant thoughts. . . Fly fishing has been exceptional in certain parts, mainly the Sixth Range Lake area, where Dave Fletcher has once again scored very well. One evening last week he landed 36 reds of various sizes; he kept four and released the others; this must have been a lot of fun. The West River has also been good; another rainbow was taken out of this stretch — the second one I have heard of lately. Maybe they were freed from the fish hatchery near Dalesville, but at any rate there must be more. It could end up with us having rainbows in these waters in the future. Nice thought.

Sir John is still giving up the grey trout too, but unfortunately the ones caught were filled with black spot and tapeworms. I believe this was to be expected though; with every other type of fish in the lake covered with this parasite, it is only reasonable to assume the trout would be also. I heard of a 3½-lb. grey being taken from Lake Hughes also. So things are on the upswing. Silver Lake has nothing doing for the time being; this also applies to Lake Louisa, but they should start very soon. A couple of good Northerns have been taken from the North River, so maybe this is going to provide some fun also. Let's hope.

Ducks are to be seen a-plenty, especially around the Ottawa River. Most of them are blacks with a few mallards among them, but not too many. A few green-winged teal are also making the North River their stamping grounds for a while, but the wood ducks have just about taken over in certain spots. I haven't a clue as to how many of these birds are with us, but judging from the number flying around, there are more than there have been for the last couple of years. The young are starting to thin out; growing up, they soon leave the protection of the nests and branch out for themselves. I don't know really, but it appears that these birds will leave the nests earlier than others when new-born.

A visitor the other day ventured an opinion that fishermen in this area are the poorest sportsmen he had ever seen. This came about through papers and waste scattered around his property. I think he was making a mistake in this, however; most of the fishermen around the lakes now are not locals but rather visitors from outside our town (mostly Montreal). I do know that little consideration is given to this detail, but we locals do try, and to be blamed for someone else is just a little unfair. . . One thing the outsiders can't be blamed for, however, is the dumping of garbage along our roads. Most of the time we are to blame for this, and we know it.

A good number of our shooters are out just now, in pits and on the hills. Guns are getting a going-over, and I only hope they will have everything in working order before the season opens. This brings me to the lack of interest being shown by the government on the training of shooters. Let's sell a license, but no matter if the person can use a gun or not! It appears that training in the use of firearms is still to be left to our clubs, and so forth.

Water Skiing with CLINT WARD

360-Degree Turn

After learning the sideslide and 180-degree turns on two skis, you are ready to put them together into a 360-degree turn.

Never forget that all of the tricks begin from the vertical crouch position — knees bent, back almost erect, head up and arms slightly bent. A second point to remember is the very important "bounce" to unweight the skis for all turns.

The key to the 360-degree turn is the co-ordination of the bounce and precise tow-line control with the hands. The handle must be passed swiftly and surely behind your back as the turn is continued past the backwards position. Fumbling the handle will only result in a fall or a turn that will not really be a 360 but only two 180's. The rules clearly define the 360-degree turn as a continuous motion from front to front (or back to back). The skis should not pause in their circular travel.

Begin the 360 the same as a 180. Bounce upwards and begin turning while at the same time bringing the handle in close to the body. The top of your bounce should occur at the 90-degree point and again at the 270-degree point. The bottom of the bounce will be at the start, at the 180-degree position and again at the finish or 360-degree position. In a 180, the turn was stopped by grasping the handle with two hands in the back position. In the 360 the handle is exchanged quickly from one hand to the other as the turn is allowed to continue.

Do lots of ground practice so that you can become "handle-sure". Tie your tow-line to a tree and walk through the 360 many times before first attempting it on the water.

During the sideslide, 180's and 360 practice, a preferred turning direction will likely become apparent. The direction of this turn will be your "basic" turn. Turns in the opposite direction are called "reverses". These should be learned as soon as possible after the basic turn because as time progresses your pattern of turning will become set and the reverses will increase in difficulty.

As soon as you have learned the 180's, 360's and sideslides in both directions, you can begin doing tricks in sequence. This will increase the difficulty a little but it will also begin to show you how exhilarating tricks can be.

Begin your sequence by doing a 180 and then a 180 reverse, follow this with a 360 and then a 360 reverse. Finish up with a sideslide and a sideslide reverse.

Concentrate on going from one trick into the next without hesitation or delay. Work on doing the sequence in the shortest possible time. Little tricks can be employed to save time. For example, on the 180's, don't grasp the handle with both hands in the backwards position. Do the trick "one-handed". Make sure, however, that the skis actually move through 180 degrees. When doing this trick one handed it is easy to shorten up on the turn and not reach the 180-degree point.

On the 360, one hand only is needed when going from the basic to the reverse — this too will save a precious "split-second". Becoming aware of these time-saving possibilities will pay off later as you move on to more advanced tricks.

Biologists study local waters

On the Ottawa River from Carillon Dam down to the Lake of Two Mountains, and the North River from the iron bridge (Lachute) down to St. Andrews, Quebec biologists are making a survey and tagging fish for future study. Their purpose is to determine conditions for fish survival, and the nature of underwater plant life in these waters. The biologists, based at St. Andrews near the old convent, are under direction of Albert Courtemanche, chief of wildlife management service in the Department of Tourism, Fish and Game. Incidentally, they are drawing up a chart of river depths, and studying the oxygen content and physical properties of waters in the Ottawa and North Rivers.

Showcase of livestock

The Showcase comprises 10 representative females from each of the four major dairy breeds — Holstein, Ayrshire, Guernsey and Jersey.

The purpose of the Livestock Showcase is to show visitors from abroad a sample of quality dairy animals available on Canadian farms.

AGILE FLEDGLINGS

The Wood Duck, brightest colored duck found in Canada, nests in hollow trees and stumps. Even ornithologists are unsure how the young birds, before they can fly, get out of the high nests and down to the ponds and streams where they are reared.

DOGS GOING TO U.S.

Canadians taking dogs into the United States must produce a current certificate of vaccination against rabies and should consult a veterinarian at least one month before the planned crossing. Dogs may be brought into this country from the U.S. on a certificate signed by a veterinarian licensed in Canada or the U.S. attesting that the animal has been vaccinated against rabies during the preceding twelve months.

Wrestlers are affluent

Despite its clowning and showmanship, wrestling is a tough but lucrative sport in which the holds and falls are real. So are the injuries. Alvin Epp, writing in The Financial Post, says veteran wrestler "Whipper" Billy Watson (now Progressive Conservative candidate in Toronto's York East riding) has had his nose broken five times, ribs smashed seven times, and lost 90% vision in his left eye. But as a topflight wrestler he still could gross about $75,000 a year. Wrestlers are like professional golfers, always going where the money is best. At present there are about 1,000 professional wrestlers in North America on the circuit that includes New York, St. Louis, Chicago, Vancouver, Toronto and Montreal.

Appointed manager of news publishing firm

The Ogdensburg (N.Y.) Journal makes reference to a former resident, Gilbert W. Scott, who has received a recent business appointment. Gilbert, who left here in 1941, is the son of Mrs. Walker Scott and the late Mr. Scott, and is still a frequent visitor to this town. Friends extend wishes for his further success. Following is the clipping:

Ogdensburg, N.Y. — The appointment of Gilbert W. Scott as business manager of the Northern New York Publishing Co. Inc., has been announced by Franklin R. Little, president. Mr. Scott succeeds the late Hugh B. Lancaster who had served in that capacity from 1929 until his death May 21 of this year.

Gilbert Scott was born in Lachute, Que., and attended elementary and high schools there. He enlisted in the Royal Canadian Air Force in 1943 and served one year in the British Isles as a member of a bomber squadron. He was released from service in 1946. After leaving the Royal Air Force he worked for three years with several firms in Montreal doing accounting work, and during this time attended Sir George Williams College in the evening and completed a course in bookkeeping and accounting.

In 1949 he moved to the United States and worked for the Rutland Railway until 1961. During this time he worked as a telegraph operator and relief station agent at some 25 stations in Vermont and Northern New York. He joined the Northern New York Publishing Co. Inc. in Ogdensburg in May, 1961, as principal clerk and assistant business manager. Since he has been with the company he has completed accounting courses with the LaSalle Extension University.

Mr. Scott married the former Alberta Bouchard of Brunswick, Maine, in 1951, and they have six children, Gary 13, John 10, Shirley 9, Peter 7, Frank 6 and Helen 2. The family lives at 1002 Clark Street in Ogdensburg.

The Bible Today

"Treacle Bible, good condition, for sale" was the wording of an advertisement in The London Times last year. This was rare enough to excite comment and find a place on British television. The Treacle Bible is the Coverdale Bible of 1535. It was given this odd name because in the Book of Jeremiah the translator wrote, "There is no more triacle in Galaad," instead of the more familiar "Is there no balm in Gilead?"

The Bug Bible refers to the edition which translates Psalm 19, verse 5, as "Thou shalt not nede to be afrayed for eny bugges by night." The Murderer's Bible says, "Let the children first be killed" instead of "filled". This was a misprint, quickly corrected!

Best known of the "Odd Bibles" is the Breeches Bible, so called because in Genesis we read that Adam and Eve sewed fig-leaves together and made themselves "breeches", instead of "aprons", as we know it. The Vinegar Bible is a mis-spelling of the Parable of the Vineyard. Many of these are in the library of the Canadian Bible Society in Toronto.

Churchill stamp appears Thursday

A Canadian postage stamp will be issued August 12 to honor Sir Winston Churchill.

This is the first Canadian stamp printed by the duotone offset process, a method of printing particularly suited to the reproduction photographs. It features the famous "roaring lion" portrait of Sir Winston Churchill by Yousuf Karsh, internationally renowned Canadian photographer. Complementary design is the work of Philip Weiss, Canadian artist and director of the Department of Industry's National Design Branch.

The stamp will be in brown, and the total number printed will be 35 million.

Minister so requires, or if in any petitioning municipality, the number of property owners who have objected to the amalgamation in the manner and within the delay prescribed: . . .

(c) is at least three hundred, in the case of a municipality in which the number of property owners entered on the valuation roll in force at the time of publication of the notice in the Quebec Official Gazette is greater than three thousand.

After the investigation, the Commission shall report to the Minister and, should the case occur, forward its recommendations to the Council of each petitioning municipality.

12. If the Lieutenant-Governor in Council deems the amalgamation to be in the interest of the petitioning municipalities and their inhabitants, he shall order the granting of letters patent amalgamating the municipalities and creating a new city. . .

13. The Minister shall give notice of the granting of the letters patent by publishing them in the Quebec Official Gazette; the letters patent shall come into force on the date of such publication or on such later date as may be mentioned in the notice.

14. From the coming into force of the letters patent effecting the amalgamation, the petitioning municipalities shall cease to exist and the special legislative provisions, if any, governing them, shall be repealed with respect to each of them only, with the exception, however, of such particular legislative provisions as are expressly maintained in force by the letters patent.

15. The territory of the new municipality shall be continuous and the section of any watercourse that is located within its perimeter shall form part thereof.

16. The new municipality shall succeed to the rights, obligations and charges of the petitioning municipalities; it shall, without continuance of suit, become a party to all proceedings in the place and stead of the petitioning municipalities. The by-laws, resolutions, minutes, valuation rolls, collection rolls and other acts of each of the petitioning municipalities shall remain in force in the territory for which they were made until amended, cancelled or repealed by the new municipality.

Fatalities

Canada has only 12 cities with populations greater than 100,000. Their combined total population is almost 30% of Canada's total; they are responsible for 12.6% of fatal accidents.

The menace to life is less where traffic is densest and where drivers and pedestrians are most experienced.

History shown in art collection

Visitors to the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto will have the opportunity of seeing a notable collection of paintings dealing with Canada's past. Confederation Life's "Gallery of Canadian History" will be displayed in the Better Living Centre from August 20 to September 6.

Commissioned over the years since Canada's Diamond Jubilee in 1927, the collection now includes 40 stirring events, the majority of which will be on view. The scenes cover 450 years, from the days of John Cabot to the conquest of the Northwest Passage by the RCMP's St. Roch in 1944. Most are the work of J. D. Kelly and Rex Woods. All were displayed in Charlottetown during the centennial celebrations. They have been shown across Canada and in the United States as well.

Things 'n Stuff

By Walter Henry Jackson

"TOWN HALL TO-NITE"

Back in the horse-and-buggy days our Papas and our Mamas for real excitement went to see the lurid melodramas. There always was a Hero and a Heroine, of course. A Villain too — a nasty man — skilled in the use of force.

Here's the synopsis of a play my Mom described to me, and it's a play that if revived, I'd dearly like to go and see.

John put morphine in his cousin's tea so he could claim a certain legacy. She did not die, but was extremely sick. I never heard of a morphinedish trick.

He next tried strychinin (my Mother said) administered before she went to bed. But she believed in "Look Before You Leap", and so she was not strychinin her sleep.

Twice thwarted now, and very much annoyed, and lacking acids or an alkaloid, spread phosphorus upon her slice of bread.

"Why must I sulphur so?" the maiden said.

The victim's Aunt appeared upon the scene. She loved her niece, if you know what I mean. When she saw death was likely to occur, you should have seen her antidote on her.

Then suddenly the frail got tough. "Egad", she said, "Enough's enough." She called upon Ralph, her dearest friend, to bring this nonsense to an end.

The Villain said to Ralph, "Thou fool! Thou challeng'st me to fight a duel? Jump in the lake — don't make me laugh! With one hand I'll tear thee in half; thou shalt regret thy futile deed. I'll smash thee into chicken-feed."

But Ralph stepped in with ease and grace and smacked the Villain in the face — knocked out his teeth and blacked his eyes and heeded not his feeble cries.

The final tableau found them there — the Hero and the Maiden Fair, she took him in her lovin' arms and smothered him with subtle charms.

The curtain fell — the play was o'er. That's all. There wasn't any more. The way it was described to me, it's just the play I'd love to see.

Be seein' ya!

Jehovah's Witnesses

Global paradise now near!

Does that sound odd at a time when atomic war could wear all life from the earth? Not if you know it is God's time to turn earth into a paradise. When Jehovah planted paradise in Eden it was His purpose for it to spread till it clothed the entire earth. A crazed world cannot block his purpose. During this generation Jehovah will prepare the ground for the global garden by plowing under this wilderness of evil. At Armageddon he will "bring to ruin those ruining the earth." (Rev. 11:18). That righteous war will sweep wicked men and frightening weapons from the earth and will bring the power of Satan and his demons to nothing. In its wake no menaces, human or demonic, will remain to plague the global paradise, for only its advocates will survive the war that clears the way before it.

In that new world, the elements will not storm against it, and animals will be under man's loving domination. Disease will give way to health, life will supplant death, love will replace fear, and men will not even learn war any more. Past woes will be forgotten, "for the former things are passed away." (Rev. 21:4). An idle dream? No, a divine promise sure of fulfillment. Convince yourself by reading the book "From Paradise Lost to Paradise Regained".

McCutcheon - Taylor

The marriage of Jean Elizabeth, daughter of Mrs. J. Angus Taylor and of the late Mr. Taylor, of Lachute Que., to Mr. William H. McCutcheon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold W. Kernaghan, of Deep River, Ont., took place August 7 in Lachute United Church, the Rev. Harold Thompson officiating. Mr. L. Hopkins played the organ and Mrs. L. Armstrong was the soloist. Standards of gladioli decorated the church.

The bride, given away by her uncle, Mr. Kenneth Taylor, wore a long gown of white lovelyn. The bodice was fashioned with short sleeves, high scooped neckline edged by Guipure appliqués. The same work was repeated at the waist, emphasizing the empire line, while the full skirt was shaped on princess lines, having a train. Her veil of tulle illusion was held by a bandeau of white lilacs, and she carried a cascade of yellow roses.

Mrs. Donald Parker, as matron of honor, and Miss Mary Kernaghan, as bridesmaid, were in frocks of pale yellow chiffon, having fitted bodices with lace appliqué under chiffon, and full skirts. Their headpieces were bows, and they carried bouquets of daisies and cornflowers.

Dr. Richard McCutcheon acted as best man for his brother, and the ushers were Mr. Scott Taylor, brother of the bride, and Dr. James Smith, of Montreal, cousin of the groom.

Mrs. Taylor, the mother of the bride, wore a Copen blue two-piece dress of heavy Guipure, a matching velvet hat, and a corsage of pink carnations. Mrs. Kernaghan, the bridegroom's mother, wore a pink linen ensemble and pink hat, with white accessories. Her corsage was of white carnations.

Following the reception in the church hall, Mr. and Mrs. McCutcheon left for England, the bride travelling in a moss-green linen suit, beige accessories, and a corsage of Talisman roses. They will reside in Wilmslow, Cheshire.

Summer School for women of United churches

Montreal and Ottawa Conference United Church Women will hold an annual Summer School session for all women of the congregation at Macdonald College, Ste. Anne de Bellevue, August 17 to 20. Due to the postal strike the date of registration will be extended for a few days.

The theme of the school will be "Unchanged Values in a Changing World".

The theme speaker, Rev. Allister E. Kirker, when living in Ottawa, was the president of the Montreal Ottawa Conference Young People, who sent him to the Oslo Conference as their representative. He spent several years in Seven Islands, and is presently the minister at Beaurepaire United Church.

The subject for study will be "Jesus Christ and the Christian Life", a book especially written by Dr. A. B. Moore for adult study. During 1965-66 this book will be used by members of the United Church across Canada.

The study will be conducted by Rev. Margaret Errey, a former president of Montreal Presbyterial Women's Missionary Society. Mrs. Errey was a member of the provisional committee which organized the formation of the U.C.W. in this presbytery. She received a diploma in Theology at the United Theological College, McGill, in 1964, and is presently the minister at Sutton United Church.

Miss Beatrice Wilson, associate secretary of the Board of Women, United Church of Canada, of Toronto, will be among the special guests.

Registrations should be sent immediately to Mrs. H. Meadows, 5180 St. Joseph Blvd., Lachine.

At pianoforte teachers' meet

As one of three Quebec delegates of the Federation of Music Teachers of Canada, Miss Juliette Rodrigue, Lic. Mus., reports a highly interesting experience in attending the Dominion convention in Regina last month. Miss Rodrigue was accompanied by her brother, Mgr. Louis-Joseph Rodrigue, parish priest at St. Eustache, and extending their travels to Edmonton, Banff, Jasper and Vancouver, they were absent 23 days. . . Motoring first to Port McNicoll, they then proceeded by boat and train to Regina, with bus excursions to points of interest before continuing to the Coast. The convention in Regina was replete with lectures, concerts, banquets and social functions.

Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Scott and family, from Ogdensburg, N.Y., spent a week-end in Lachute recently.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy Kelly and wee June, of Avoca, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lister, and Mr. Russell Lister, of Morin Heights, were Sunday visitors of their parents, Mrs. Florence Jackson and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Lister.

Closing program of People's Church vacation school

Last Friday evening amid thunder, lightning and rain, boys and girls and their parents arrived for the closing program of the Daily Vacation Bible School at People's Church. Two weeks of Bible stories, singing, handcraft and sport had been enjoyed by all who attended, and many regrets were expressed that the school had so soon come to an end.

The handcraft and books were on display in the church, but the program was to be conducted outdoors. How to do this on such a night? The boys and girls had been asked to pray about the weather for Friday night, but it did not seem as if the Lord had heard! However, to the amazement of all, they were able to hold their closing service. The rain seemingly was stayed long enough for the children to present their program, and from 7.45 p.m. to about 9 p.m. conditions were favorable. This was surprising, since at St. Andrews, St. Philippe and elsewhere it was pouring rain at this time.

Mrs. A. Nixon and Mrs. A. Stewart were in charge of the Nursery Department, and prizes were awarded to Elaine Pollock and Leigh Cruise.

Miss Edythe Sorley, Miss Susan Lawton, from Two Mountains, and Miss Kathleen Berry, took care of the Beginners, and Trudy Nixon and Allan Tyers took home the prizes.

The Primary Department was in charge of Mrs. C. W. Sorley, Mrs. E. Stephens and Miss Violet Bryerton, and prizes went to three sisters, Nancy, Cathy and Betty Leishman.

Mrs. Wilfred Morrison, Mrs. E. Young and Miss Doris O'Brien took care of the Junior Department, with Chris Nixon and Lorna Currie being the prize winners.

Pastor C. W. Sorley had an enthusiastic Young Teen Group, and a prize was awarded to Vicky Villeneuve.

The pastor and organizers would like to sincerely thank Mr. R. Giles for his consistent kindness year after year in supplying special materials and advertising space free of charge. Also the following — John McFaul & Son, Walker-Kingsbury and Richelieu Swimming Club for displaying posters, and to John Desjardins for the use of cases for temporary seating accommodation. Also appreciated are the kind contributions which helped to take care of the expenses connected with so large an undertaking. Mr. Dawson's loan of a microphone was also a real help.

EXPRESSION OF THANKS

Our sincere thanks to our relatives and friends for all the good wishes, cards, and gifts received on the occasion of our 25th wedding anniversary.

Witnesses' annual prov'l convention this week-end

Delegates from the Lachute area are attending the sixth provincial convention of the Jehovah's Witnesses, to take place in Quebec City from August 12 to 15.

Mr. Henry Purucker, their local representative, states that many families are taking advantage of their annual vacation to go to the old capital. The local members will be taking an active part in the convention; many will be assigned to the cafeteria, which will feed the delegates right on the convention grounds, while others will form part of the attendants' department and the choir. A baptismal ceremony by total immersion will take place, and it is expected around 50 members will be baptized, including a few from this area.

"These conventions help members receive advance training in the ministry, and they contribute greatly to our increase," said Mr. Purucker. Witnesses were very active last year; 68,236 new members joined them, in fact, one every eight minutes. They now have more than one million ministers preaching in 194 countries. In the local area, Mr. Purucker announced they had an increase of 10% in their number, and that their work is progressing well in the region.

The theme of this four-day gathering is "The Word of Truth". The program will feature subjects such as how to prevent juvenile delinquency, the breakdown of morals, and will highlight the use of the Bible in the modern home.

About 20 Lachute area delegates attended a four-day district assembly of Jehovah's Witnesses in Peterborough, which saw attendance figures reach 6,740.

An early estimate of peak attendance had been 4,500. The mounting numbers of delegates led to an appeal for additional sleeping accommodations, and a small tent city complete with temporary roads, lighting and water service was set up on a nearby farm for 600 delegates.

The peak attendance was at a lecture Sunday afternoon, delivered by G. W. Sallis, representative from the Toronto branch headquarters of the Watch Tower Society.

"World government is necessary to the preservation and happiness of the human family. This fact is being admitted more and more as time goes on," Mr. Sallis said. "But can it come only by human means? Is there nothing beyond man and his boasted science to which to look and to appeal? Happily there is," he said.

Diary of a Vagabond

BY DOROTHY BARKER

PROVINCE WITH A GOLDEN SYMBOL

Atop the Legislative Building in Winnipeg there is a shining example of Manitoba's faith in the future of that prairie province. "Golden Boy" holds his torch on high and with his left arm full of golden wheat, has been chosen as "The Spirit of Enterprise". The torch symbolically lights Manitoba's pathway of progress toward a bright and shining future.

Because of this unique and appropriate symbolism, the Golden Boy has been chosen to designate the 2,000 "Golden Boy members" of the Manitoba Travel and Convention Association. Fay McKenzie, CN Prairie Region passenger sales manager, is a member of the executive of this group of energetic citizens. As a youngster he once sold newspapers on a Saskatoon corner with John Diefenbaker. He hasn't lost any of his boyhood enthusiasm for competition and is right in there pitching for the promotion of Manitoba and dedicated, along with other Tourist Association members, to making Manitoba a great visitor convention centre.

The sun shone on Golden Boy the first time I saw him glinting against the intense blue of a prairie sky. With my usual curiosity I had to learn how and where this youthful expression of typical prairie optimism came from. Thirteen feet high, he dominates the capital city and in his golden radiance gives one the feeling of eternal youth.

The sheaf of wheat naturally symbolizes the agricultural wealth of Manitoba. At his great elevation and facing north he holds that torch of his toward the vast vacation reaches that abound there and the promise of untold mineral riches of the great Pre-Cambrian Shield.

The whereabouts of this Golden Boy before he reached his present pinnacle has gilded him with an adventurous tale. He was cast in the Barbidienne Foundry near Paris, France. The factory was wrecked by bombs in the First World War, and later he was found, unscratched, under all the rubble. Subsequently, I was told, he lay in the hold of a troop transport for two years as the ship plied the war zones of the North Atlantic.

Finally, when the war was over, he was landed in New York and sent by freight to Winnipeg. He has become one of the best known figures in Manitoba and it is not difficult to understand why the prominent business men who have organized to promote their province should call themselves Golden Boys.

Manitoba was first seen by a European, Sir Thomas Button, when he discovered the Nelson River in 1612. Later a trading post was established by the Hudson Bay Company in 1670 at Fort Nelson after the company had been given territorial rights over the Hudson Bay watershed which included what we now know as Manitoba. In 1869 the Dominion of Canada bought the territorial rights from the Hudson Bay Company for three hundred thousand pounds. This was the spark that set fire to the rebellion under Louis Riel, because the French and Metis, who had established trading posts throughout the territory, feared the loss of their lands and limitations on their virtual autonomy. As a result of this rebellion, Manitoba entered the Dominion of Canada under the terms of the Manitoba Act in 1870, and became a province rather than a territory.

This then is the rich area Golden Boy surveys from his secure and dominant position. I cannot think of a better symbol for this golden province, constantly expanding its vacation land and improving its industrial position in the family of confederated provinces.

Talkative Canadians

CANADA may have lost its pre-eminent position in amateur hockey in recent years but there's one area where this country remains supreme — talking on the telephone.

International statistics for 1963, released recently, show that for the 12th consecutive year Canadians made more use of their phones than any other people.

Our average was 597.7 calls per person for the year. Iceland was second with an average of 574.9 and the United States third with 570.

But what is it that makes us the gabbiest phone-users in the world?

Surely it's not because Alexander Graham Bell, the inventor of the telephone, was a Canadian. It's highly unlikely that anyone thinks of Bell, even subconsciously, before picking up the phone.

Direct dialing has speeded up the process of putting through long distance calls but we're not the only country with this innovation.

There may be some significance in the fact that Canada and Iceland are one-two in the phone-using contest. Both have large stretches of isolated territory where the telephone is a useful weapon against loneliness.

Another thing in our favor is that, unlike many American cities, there is no limit on the number of calls we can make for the flat monthly charge.

Canadian telephone companies last year spent $370,000,000 to help us keep our tongues wagging, and the areas that can be called without tolls are constantly being broadened.

In the period after the war it was often difficult to get a phone but that seems to have passed. Anyone who wants a phone can get one now; in fact, he'll have a bit of a time trying to talk the phone company out of giving him more than one.

Telephone company representatives say that we make far more social calls than business ones. And some say we make more social contacts on the telephone than we do face to face.

Maybe that's the answer. Whether because of the great distances or just that we're shy, perhaps we find it easier to say things over the phone than in person.

You don't have to get dressed up to talk on the telephone and it's simpler to terminate a conversation — you can always hang up.

The big spenders

GOVERNMENT, as we have reason to know, is spending more of our money for us than ever before.

We are now benefitting from the 10 per cent reduction in personal income taxes which Finance Minister Gordon announced in his 1965 budget. Even so, federal tax revenues this year will in all probability be higher than in any previous year. And so, we can be sure, will federal expenditures.

Yet it is of some interest to note that Ottawa is not responsible for most of the government spending in Canada today, nor has it been for some time past. Last year, for example, the provinces and municipalities between them spent more than $8 billion, compared with $6.5 billion spent by Ottawa.

The rate of increase over the past 10 years as between the various levels of government is ever more revealing.

Total spending by the three levels of government increased by exactly 100 per cent between 1955-1964, while the gross national product — the sum total of goods and services produced annually — rose by just 73 per cent. (These are unadjusted figures and do not take into account higher prices.)

But when this 100 per cent increase in government spending is broken down, federal expenditures can be seen to have climbed by 52 per cent compared with a rise of 172 per cent by the provinces and municipalities combined.

Clearly, there has been a notable shift in the emphasis of government spending in the past decade. Huge as are Ottawa's outlays, those of the provinces and municipalities are, when taken together, ever greater. And they are rising faster, along with the taxes which make them possible.

The trend, a reflection of national growth and the burgeoning demand for those services — education, highways, parks and sewer systems among them — which are primarily the responsibility of the provinces and municipalities, is one which tax-conscious citizens would do well to note. Not least, those who tend to downgrade the importance of provincial and local government elections.

This rings a bell?

One of the most widely read books of all time is "The Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire." It sets forth five basic reasons why that civilization withered and died. These were:

The undermining of the dignity and sanctity of the home, which is the basis for human society.

Higher and higher taxes; the spending of public money for free bread and circuses for the populace.

The mad craze for pleasure; sports becoming every year more exciting, more brutal, more immoral.

The building of great armaments, when the real enemy was within — the decay of individual responsibility.

It vaguely rings a bell, doesn't it?

Undeveloped areas

MODERN technology has been responsible for some fantastic achievements during the first few years of the space age.

Scientists can televise the moon's surface from a rocket and relay the picture back to earth. They can send probes to Mars, detect nuclear blasts anywhere in the world, or land an intercontinental ballistic missile in the Kremlin's back yard — or our own, for that matter — from a range of 8,000 miles.

In some respects, however, science is still lagging. . . With all this progress, nobody has yet devised a shoelace that won't break at the most inopportune moment!

WAYS AND MEANS are being provided (by the Quebec Government) to improve farm lands, homes and equipment. With such proposals many a farm can obtain a face lift in a number of ways. Canada's Class Warfare

One of the poular myths of Canadian life — that this country is a classless society — has taken quite a knocking about lately. This is just as well, because it should be recognized by everyone that Canada does have sharp class divisions.

A virtual class warfare has been waged in Toronto this summer over subsidized public housing. The episode has pointed up again the fact that while we are prone to pay lip service to the ideal of a classless society, we really don't practise it.

The Ontario Housing Corp., which is an agency of the provincial government, set the stage for loud outburts from respectable, middle-class citizens by purchasing row housing set amid the prosperous suburbs of Etobicoke and Scarboro.

The OHC then served notice on present tenants that their rents would be boosted from $150 to $250 to encourage them to hastily move out. The OHC plans to rent the developments — and one happens to include that holiest of status symbols, a swimming pool — to lower income families.

Rents will range from $50 a month for families earning $189 a month or less, to $111 for those making the maximum allowed salary of $375 monthly. (Five million Canadians are in families earning less than this.)

It could reasonably be argued that the OHC should be building new units instead of disturbing settled residents, although the agency claims it was able to buy them at $1,000 per unit less than it would cost to build new ones.

But the blunt fact of the case has been that owners of nearby homes don't want subsidized public housing in their districts under any circumstances.

They've complained this will lower property values (a line started by real estate agents to soften up the market); that it will over-tax school and other public facilities (although there won't be any more people living in the area than before); and that the development will be filled with welfare families (although the OHC is very careful about achieving a social balance among the families it puts in any one project.)

It has been clearly evident throughout the controversy that most middle-class suburbanites would prefer lower income families to be confined to the slum and semi-slum areas of downtown Toronto.

The tragedy of such an attitude is that it effectively blocks the one hope which Canada has of upgrading all levels of our society.

Canada and the United States are the world's outstanding examples of a materialistic class society — where income and possessions determine one's status in life. This is in contrast with the traditional class society of Britain whereby parentage and background is more important than income to an individual's class position.

If our society is to be vibrant and expanding, however, there must be room for upward mobility. Children must be able to aspire and to achieve a better status in life than their parents.

Public housing can play an important role here by giving the children of lower-income families a better environment during their formative years.

Further hard evidence of Canada's still-rigid class lines has come in the publication by the University of Toronto of a book entitled The Vertical Mosaic.

This book, by sociology professor John Porter, proves what we've always suspected — that there's not much room at the top unless you happen to be born there.

The Vertical Mosaic reveals that Canada is "run" by an economic elite of 760 businessmen. Of these, only six are Jewish and 51 French Canadian. The rest are Protestant, of British descent, from well-to-do families who put their sons through private schools and launched them into life already high on the ladder of success.

SUGAR AND SPICE
by Bill Smiley

Now, Back To Work...

Some people say to me, "It must be quite a chore writin' that there column every week."

The only difficulty is getting started. Tonight is column night. Midnight is the deadline. I sat down at the typewriter at 6.30, so I'd have lots of time to watch TV after I wrote the column. I worked quietly until 8.30 Very quietly. No noisy typewriter.

Peeled out pristine sheet with interesting lines, "Sugar and Spice, by Bill Smiley", at the top. Threw it in wastebasket. Decided to mow lawn to relieve mental constipation. Then had a beer. Bundling magazines for tomorrow's garbage, came across fascinating article on Procrastination in the Middle-aged Male. Helped Kim get valves unstuck in French horn. Moved water sprinkler on lawn. Whipped up tea and grub for television room gang. The Fugitive is still running. Or re-running.

It's now 10.30. Time to get cracking. But maybe I'll just answer a few letters, to get in the writing mood. There's nothing that cheers me up and inspires me like reading the warm and friendly notes from column readers.

Here's a nice fat one. Six pages, small writing. From Miss Edna Wegman. "Dear Mr. Smiley: Oh, you poor little pygmy! My heart bleeds for you." Woops. Let's try the next paragraph. "Now, after feeling sorry for yourself and your fellow males, for males they are and not MEN, wake up and face reality." Uh, maybe we'll leave that one till tomorrow.

Here's one that looks friendlier. From a lady who says it's not for publication. Just a quote: "There's not a woman in the world who doesn't consider that her old man is the dope of the earth." Well! Really!

This one sounds better. "Dear Bill: I'll call you Bill instead of Mr. Smiley, seeing I always thought of you as a friend, that is until your recent column in which you were lambasting women."

By George, a bad week. Here's Linda Alton taking me down a few pegs for knocking the Beatles. She has me all wrong. I love the Beatles. I have to, in self-preservation, or I'd go slavering mad every time I drive the car with my kids in it.

Let's see. Here's a letter addressed to me, by Gwen Saretsky. Good old Gwen. She must really like my column. She's written about 1,000 words.

Hey, this is pretty good. She's commenting on a recent column in which I suggested that modern women had gone to pot, while men are the same steadfast, gallant chaps they were in Julius Caesar's day. Gwen says: "I wonder if Cleopatra ever had to drive one of her gladiators home in a chariot after one of those Roman parties. There would be an advantage to a chariot. The over-zealous partygoer would get more air while sprawled in an open chariot than the modern male does when his wife is driving home from a party and he has to relax with his head out the window." Hmmm.

Talk about lambasting. A few others, picked at random. "I agree that man hasn't changed much since Caesar's day; I really don't believe that it's possible . . . It's against their moral code to pick up, or hang up, a piece of clothing . . . This species of human manages to contradict itself more than any other of God's creatures . . . Nobody is, was, or ever could be, as sick as a man with a cold".

There's a lot more in the same vein, so well written it's like listening to my own wife. But I haven't time to sympathize with Mr. Saretsky right now. I have a column to write.

History comes alive

— By NANCY CLEAVER —

"A wise nation fosters national pride and love of country by perpetual reference to the sacrifices and glories of the past", wrote Joseph Howe, Canadian statesman of the last century. Our National Historic Parks and Sites are dedicated to this very purpose. Over four hundred sites have been selected by the Historic Sites and Monuments Board of Canada, composed of historians from the different parts of our Dominion, and marked by the National Parks Board.

When the Queen visited Charlottetown for the pre-Confederation festivities, she saw on the provincial legislature grounds of P.E.I. an imposing cut stone monument to commemorate the four-hundredth anniversary of the landing of Jacques Cartier on the Island, 1534.

This summer the fine Hudson Bay Museum will be open to the public in the lovely old stone central building of the Lower Fort Garry Park on the Red River, East of Winnipeg. This should be a magnet, not only for Manitobans, but for all Western vacationers.

In Eastern Canada where history stretches far back into the past, the national historic parks are a vivid reminder of our earliest days. In every province, however, there are interesting national historic sites, marked by bronze tablets.

Some of these recall individuals who have contributed to Canada's development. Sir Wilfred Laurier's birthplace may be seen at St. Lin, Quebec, and the Alexander Graham Bell Museum at Baddeck, N.S.

The author of Anne of Green Gables, Lucy Maud Montgomery, is honored in a cut-stone monument at Cavendish, Prince Edward Island. There is a tablet in the University Women's Club in Winnipeg to the memory of another well-loved writer, Charles William Gordon, or "Ralph Connor", author of "The Sky Pilot" and other Canadian novels.

The courageous explorers of Canada's early days are named in many places. At Boucherville, Quebec, there is a stone monument to the memory of Father Jacques Marquette, who with Louis Jolliet discovered the Mississippi River in 1673. In Devon Park, The Pas, there is a cairn to the memory of Henry Kelsey, Hudson's Bay fur trader and explorer. On the Marine Drive in Vancouver the place where Simon Fraser ended his exploration of the Fraser River from Fort George in 1808 is marked.

No one who has seen the magnificent sculpture work in Couchiching Beach Park, Orillia, commemorating the treaties with the Indians, is apt to forget this fine piece of art. A great many of the historic sites in Western Canada mention the First Canadians. The cairn at the Hudson's Bay Co. Post at Norway House, Manitoba, tells that here the Cree Syllabic System was invented by James Evans, and it was here the first book, a Cree hymn book, was printed in Western Canada by this inventive pioneer missionary.

Our National Historic Parks and Sites can mean a great deal more to our younger generation if parents would take a greater interest in planning visits to them. Send away at once for the attractive booklet on this topic available from the National Parks Branch, Ottawa. These places can make history come alive for your child! Do find out where they are and make a point of visiting them as a family!

A sandwich sprinkled with a little magic and some imagination becomes party fare for all ages. The home economists of the Consumer Section created a Wiener Tugboat (foreground) to captivate children; Sandwiches-in-the-Round (middle) to appeal to teen-agers; and an Open-face Steak Sandwich (background) to satisfy adults.

Party sandwiches for all ages

Mother is sure to be the hit of the party when she serves these out-of-the-ordinary sandwiches. With a little magic and some imagination she can turn any sandwich into exciting party fare for all ages.

Wiener Tugboats

A child's birthday party is an opportune time to surprise young guests with Wiener Tugboats. An adaptation of the familiar hot-dog, it is certain to be greeted with cries of "Hot-dog!" as Mother steams into port with her delectable cargo.

The construction is basic. Submarine rolls form the hull of the boat; wiener sections comprise the cargo and the masts; barbecue sauce and shredded Cheddar cheese protect the cargo; and a Canadian flag flies proudly from atop one of the masts.

To make; slit submarine rolls lengthwise down the centre three-quarters of the way through. Spread cut portion with approximately two tablespoons barbecue sauce and sprinkle with two tablespoons shredded Cheddar cheese. Cut two wieners in thirds crosswise and alternate pieces upright and lengthwise in slit. Wrap in foil and bake at 425° F. for 10 minutes. Remove from oven, sprinkle with two tablespoons Cheddar cheese. Return to oven and continue baking until cheese is melted (3 to 5 minutes).

To serve, the home economists of the Consumer Section suggest that you cut the boat into servings according to the size of the child and accompany with carrot and celery sticks.

Hearty Fare for a Square Dance

What better excuse than a square-dance house party to serve sandwiches-in-the-round. Simple to make and fun to eat, Mother will be no "square" when she caters to the teen-age appetite with this Dagwood specialty.

Sandwiches-In-The-Round

1 Medium round loaf (about 6" in diameter), butter to spread.

Ham Filling — minced ham 1 cup, dill pickle (chopped) 1 tablespoon, green pepper (chopped) 2 tablespoons, prepared mustard 1 tablespoon, salad dressing 3 tablespoons.

Egg Filling — eggs (hard-cooked) 3, green onions (chopped) 2 teaspoons, celery (chopped) 1½ tablespoons, cucumber (chopped) 1½ tablespoons.

Prepare fillings. Cut loaf in three or four cross-wise slices placing ham in middle for color contrast. Wrap tightly and chill until fillings are firm, two or three hours. Cut loaf in wedges and secure with toothpicks. Serve with potato chips and a relish tray of dill pickles, radishes and cucumbers.

Open-face Steak Sandwich

When the chips are down and the party dull, it's time to serve a sophisticated open-face steak sandwich. The home economists offer this hearty Canadian variation of the Danish open-face sandwich.

Sauté mushrooms (about 6 per person) in a little butter. For each person, fry one minute steak and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Split one hamburg bun, toast and spread each half with butter.

Place steak on one side of bun. Spread with a combination of butter and horseradish to taste. Garnish with parsley.

Arrange mushrooms and sliced pepper on other side of bun. Serve hot with slices of beefsteak, tomatoes and whole green onions.

Home basements not what they used to be

They don't build houses like they used to — and it's just as well. . . Do you recall the dark, dingy cellar of years ago, which had a musty, stale smell, and with its fruit and vegetable storage bins was a constant open invitation to mice, rats and other unpleasant visitors?

Contrast this with a bright, warm, modern concrete-block basement recreation room which provides extra living space for the entire family, and no home owner would wish to turn the clock back.

A recent survey by the National House Builders Association indicates that extra room and more storage space are high on the list of most home owners' requirements.

The least expensive way of providing these is by efficient use of the basement area. Valuable living space can be gained by building a full block basement at a fraction of the cost of construction above grade.

With more efficient heating methods and concrete masonry combining to give families a warm, dry basement, this space can be used for many purposes. Often it is the only place in the house where there is extra storage room. It can become a rumpus room or entertainment centre where children can play without disturbing others in the house.

A competent do-it-yourselfer can finish off the basement with a modest investment plus his time, says the National Concrete Products Association. If extensive remodelling is involved, any good masonry contractor can partition a basement with masonry units that will blend perfectly with the original wall. The partition walls can be built with decorative units, or concrete block with attractive textures, enhancing the beauty of the basement as well as its usefulness.

EXCHANGE NO ROBBERY?

Lethbridge, Alta. (CP) — City police here say the practice of persons placing their own parking tickets on other vehicles is becoming prevalent. Police are considering action against the ticket switchers, and they warn motorists to check parking tickets against their license to ensure they are not paying for someone else's offence.

By Jean Sharp, Canadian Press Staff Writer

Buying clothes a size or so too big for a child won't necessarily guarantee a saving as he grows into them. It will guarantee an uncomfortable fit and clothes which look too big.

There are some points to look for when you are buying that will assure the clothes have some room to grow into. For up and down growth, look for deep hems in dresses and trouser cuffs, adjustable shoulder straps, a slight low, loose-fitting waist. Two-piece outfits can help. There should always be plenty of room from neck to crotch when you buy one-piece overalls or rompers.

Look for wide seams in clothes which will wear long enough to be let out.

If you are buying for little children, stressing features which make it easy for them to put the clothes on or take them off may help make the clothes last longer. Look for front openings, for clothes with few fasteners and those easy to use. Buy pockets which are big enough to use and easy to get at.

Where to Save

You probably will do best trying to economize on shirts and blouses rather than on shorts and jeans for play wear or trousers for school.

For little boys or girls, seats and knees and seams must take a lot of wear, and the cheapest pants probably won't last long enough to be worth the price. Buy moderately good ones and plenty of iron-on patches.

You should be able to cut a corner on a fall and spring topper because the seasons are so short in Canada. An all-weather coat or a jacket that goes with everything should serve the purpose.

But buy the best snow suit and heavy coat you can.

Keep Work Down

In these days of washing machines you may save money and effort if you buy machine washable fabrics as often as possible. A child's everyday garment which needs dry cleaning or careful hand washing and ironing will be apt to turn into a garment not worn often.

If you can, take the child shopping with you. It is good for him to have some reasonable say in what he'll be wearing. It also gives you a chance to test the fit.

Properly fitting clothes have a comfortable collar and ease through body and shoulders. Armholes are roomy enough that sleeves won't pull out with strain.

Blouses and shirts must be long enough to stay tucked in. Jackets, coats and snowsuits must be big enough to fit easily over other clothes.

Ontario gift and W.I. greetings to British Guiana

Canada geese and snow geese (in Ontario ceramics) have winged their way to Georgetown, British Guiana, with the group now visiting the city near the Equator which was twinned with Ottawa for International Co-operation Year. Mrs. Frank Ryan, president of CFRA, was asked to speak to the rural women of British Guiana and will take messages from East Carleton and West Carleton Women's Institutes. CFRA will carry reports of the visit and the presentation of the Women's Institute messages.

The beautiful ceramics are made by Yarko Zavi of Brighton, Ont., from Dochart clay near Arnprior. This is the same clay that the Dochart Company has used to make farm tile for nearly a century. The late Frank Ryan had enthusiastically promoted the Zavi Ceramics and a stream flowing into the Dochart Creek was named Ryan Creek this spring by the Canadian Committee on Geographical Names. The ceramics are the only ones of Canada geese rising with wings outspread, and Mrs. Ryan chose these as representative of lively interchange of friendship among people in International Co-operation Year.

Mother Lives with the Good Pictures

Any mother who keeps a camera handy won't find herself telling a neighbor, "I wish I had a picture." She can have the picture, a story-telling picture, to share with friends and relatives now and in later years, to recall happy moments.

Mother is the ideal family photographer because she spends more time with the children than anyone else. She's at home with the children when father is at work. She's around when picture-taking situations just naturally happen — when junior makes mud pies, when daughter primps in front of a mirror, when hopscotch is played on the front sidewalk.

Are you and daughter heading for the neighborhood park this afternoon? Take your camera and capture, on film, a day in the life of your child. Get a shot as you leave the house and then record the games and fun that follows. With a camera, especially a movie camera, mother is all set to film the action as it happens.

You'll want to vary the length of scenes, the angle of your camera, and the distance of your shots. You might look up at Mary when she's climbing the steps to the slide, and then look down on her while she breezes to the bottom and plunks into the sandbox.

At the swings, you'll have a chance to shoot a complete sequence. You can begin with a long shot, to establish a complete view of the location, and follow with a medium shot — in this case, Mary sitting on the swing. Then, continue with a close-up of Mary's happy face. The final scene would be another long shot, with Mary jumping from the seat.

Movies or snapshots can provide a colorful record of your family life. By telling an interesting story, and shooting with care, you'll have pictures that your family and friends can enjoy for years to come.

THE QUEBEC PENSION PLAN in effect January 1st, 1966

The act establishing the Quebec Pension Plan has just been passed by the Provincial Legislature. Its main provisions will come into force on January 1st, 1966. Here is a brief summary of them.

Who is covered by the Plan

As a general rule, the Quebec Pension Plan applies to persons aged 18 to 70 whose earnings from their work exceed $600 a year.

What are the benefits of the Plan

The Quebec Pension Plan protects participants and their dependents from loss of revenue due to the retirement, disability or death of the main family provider.

In effect, this protection will take the form of the various benefits listed below:

- Retirement pension
- Disability pension
- Widow's pension
- Pension for child of disabled contributor
- Disabled widower's pension
- Orphan's pension
- Death benefit

What the Plan requires of participants

To be entitled to benefits, one must contribute to the Plan and meet certain other conditions.

In the following explanations, only earnings obtained through work are to be considered.

Persons earning $5,000 a year or less will deduct a basic exemption of $600 and contribute on the remainder of their earnings. Persons who earn more than $5,000 a year will contribute on $5,000 less the $600 exemption (i.e. $4,400) and they will not contribute on the part of their income which exceeds $5,000. Earnings upon which contributions are made are called contributory earnings.

An employee will contribute 1.8% of his contributory earnings and his employer will add an identical amount for him.

A self-employed worker will contribute 3.6% of his contributory earnings.

Booklets and folders containing more complete information will be available in the near future.

Country Notebook

By WALKER RILEY,
Macdonald College

Monday, August 1 — Drove north yesterday to New Liskeard. First leg of a round trip of Northern Ontario and Quebec. Satisfying a long-standing ambition to see these northern farming areas.

After driving 100 miles through rock, lake, and bush terrain was scarcely prepared for the sudden transition to farming country. The panoramic view in the setting sun of the New Liskeard clay plain and Lake Temiskaming to the west was beautiful. Good farms, painted barns, comfortable houses, herds of dairy and beef cattle and sheep dot the landscape. There is an atmosphere of prosperity and progressiveness.

Visited this morning the Demonstration Farm on the north edge of the town. Superintendent John Butler was away, but had a good discussion with several of the staff and a tour of the plots. This is forage crops country; there is a perfect distribution of moisture (3½ inches a month) throughout the summer. Barley and oats do exceptionally well, too; yields of 100 bushels of oats are not unusual. The difficulty is finding two harvest days together.

The soils are a heavy sticky clay as I found out the hard way. The PH is surprisingly high, almost alkaline; alfalfa, trefoil and clovers do well. Winter killing is not a problem, thanks to the heavy snow cover.

Drainage in these soils is slow; some tiling has been done with good results. The response to phosphorous fertilizer is striking.

Haying in the area is only half done. Three weeks behind schedule; only eight days in July without rain. Truckloads of hay going south every day to the drought areas. Ten dollars a ton standing in the field or fifty cents a bale ready to go. It is the cost of trucking that runs the price up. The estimate is twenty dollars per ton for the 320 miles to Ottawa. Wilson from Pembroke has bought a hay farm in the area and has brought up his machinery.

This afternoon, went across to Quebec to the corresponding area of good land on the east side of Lake Temiskaming. The rural communities spread out along the roads appear comfortable and stable, but not too prosperous. Surprised to find so many implement dealers. Yards full of combines, swathers and big tractors. The horses are gone, here, too. Greatest surprise was to find in the village of Laverlochère almost at the end of the road a creamery separating 140,000 pounds of milk a day. The butter goes to Montreal and the skim powder to Winnipeg. The New Liskeard milk goes to local dairies. There is a good cheese factory in Thornloe.

This evening, took in the weekly auction sale at Liskeard; there's no better place to feel the pulse of an area. I have never seen an auctioneer enjoy his work more than Vern Shepherdson. His greatest pleasure was selling the rabbits to the youngsters. This is the man who will sell the five northern feeder sales in October.

Prices for cattle ran about four cents below Toronto and Montreal prices. This is just about the cost of trucking ($1.25 per cent) plus shrinkage and commission. The top steer went for $0.18. Day-old calves $17.00 to $22.00. Market hogs $27.25 cent. Some went to the packing plant at Timmins. The pigs finished on local barley looked exceptionally good. Sale finished at 3 a.m. I didn't stay. These northerners don't seem to sleep.

The next three days, I plan to visit the Cochrane area, the Experimental Farm at Kapuskasing and then over into the Abitibi region of Quebec.

Will tell you about that next week.

CO-OPS PRAISED

Humboldt, Sask. (CP) — Canadians should build more and larger co-operatives to keep control of their own industries and resources, L. L. Loyd, president of Federated Co-operatives of Saskatoon, told a meeting here. He said no other country of the world has so much of its economic life directed by people living outside its borders.

Control of dormancy in potato storage

Do I have to peel these?

Yes, but the sprouting of potatoes is being studied at CDA's experimental farm at Morden, Man., from the viewpoint of control of dormancy by varying the day-length in the field. (See story.)

Morden, Man. — As a rule, freshly harvested potato tubers do not sprout until they have undergone a resting period or "dormancy". The length of it differs with the variety of potatoes and determines their storage period.

Dr. M. Kawase, of Canada Department of Agriculture's experimental farm at Morden, says that not enough is known yet about dormancy to control this important plant activity.

Modification of growing conditions, however, has been found to affect dormancy. Dr. Kawase grew potatoes by two methods and in two different field locations at the Morden farm. One lot was grown under normal daylight conditions while the second lot was exposed to light from incandescent lamps for two hours every night from June until harvest.

Tubers from plants exposed to artificial light were much slower in sprouting than those from plants grown under natural light conditions. The researcher says the tests show that light is an important factor in controlling dormancy. Other studies are being carried out to find out why this is so.

ARTIFICIAL BREEDING

Regina (CP) — The use of artificial breeding to beef cattle in Saskatchewan has increased to the point where now it exceeds the same method for dairy cattle. The provincial agriculture department figures showed that artificial beef cattle exceed dairy cattle breeding for the first time.

Three-year concurrent jail term for pair in car theft, kidnapping

Found guilty on charges including armed robbery, hold-up conspiracy

Pierre Delaney and Jean-Guy Desormeaux (alias Lamontagne), both of Montreal, each drew a three-year term in penitentiary for their escapade designed to rob the Bank of Montreal at Arundel. There were numerous charges against them and sentences totalling around 20 years, but since these sentences are served concurrently, each will spend the next three years behind bars.

The charges are itemized as follows: Against Delaney, two automobile thefts and two robberies; conspiring to commit an armed robbery, kidnapping of a taxi driver, Alphonse Paulin, kidnapping of Mrs. Norman Graham and two children, of Arundel, and conspiracy to commit an armed hold-up at the Arundel B. of M. on July 8 last. . . Desormeaux was charged with armed robbery, two car thefts, two robberies, possession of an offensive weapon, conspiracy to attempt an armed hold-up, kidnapping of the taxi driver and of Mrs. Graham and children, possession of a mask for purposes of disguise, and conspiring in an armed robbery of the bank.

Dramatic Sequence of Events

Summarizing the exploits of the two culprits in this area, it is recalled that on July 2 last the pair went to Arundel with intent to rob the Bank of Montreal branch. To do so, they forced a motorist at gunpoint to drive them from Montreal.

The pair was foiled in their plan, since the manager was not at the bank at the time of their entry and they returned to the city in a car which they stole from George Kuster in Arundel, taking with them Mrs. Norman Graham, wife of the bank manager, and two young sons, Barry and Jimmy, as hostages. Arriving in Montreal they released the three, with a warning not to communicate with the police for at least 15 minutes. They also gave Mrs. Graham $5 and the keys of the car belonging to her brother-in-law, Mr. Kuster.

Subsequently, on July 8, attention of the Provincial Police at Lachute was drawn to the presence of a strange taxi seen on several occasions near the Bank of Montreal in Arundel. The information was relayed to a patrol car, and a chase ensued southward from Arundel to this section, in which the pursued driver lost control and crashed his vehicle on the road between Dalesville and Brownsburg. Inside was the driver, one Alphonse Paulin, of Montreal, but two men took to the bush, Delaney and Desormeaux. They were caught by a police posse some time later.

Alphonse Paulin, driver of the taxi, was also implicated in the affair and charged with obstructing the police in their duties. He will appear in court this week.

Sentence on trio in Grenv'l bank hold-up

The trio who perpetrated an armed hold-up and robbery of $12,939 at the Nova Scotia Bank in Grenville on June 25, received a total of 20 months in prison. They were sentenced last Friday by Judge Omer Côté in court of the Sessions of the Peace at St. Jerome.

Denis Nadeau, 23, received a one-year sentence; Florian Jacques, 35, received six months; and Gustave Lamothe, 32, two months. All three men are Montrealers.

It is recalled that Cpl. J.-P. Dallaire, chief of the Provincial Police contingent here, apprehended Nadeau and Lamothe on the evening of the day of the robbery. The strangers drew suspicion of the officer as they were walking along Highway No. 8 near Ayersville and were seen to discard a package at the roadside; this was later found to contain $12,363 in bills.

Following this coup and a description of the third suspect, Florian Jacques was picked up by police four days later in a Montreal North restaurant.

Rotarians' fellowship outing and Governor's official visit

It was "Governor's Night" last Thursday for the Rotary Club meeting, held at La Lorraine Motel, when Rotary District Governor N. Douglas Warner, of Cornwall, made his visit to meet, counsel and inspire greater effort for community and international service.

This was a fitting change for a service group, from the very successful fellowship meeting held the week before when about 70 Rotarians, wives and guests met at the island resort, "Isle de Mai", of Mr. and Mrs. Andy Hughes for a roast beef barbecue around a pool and singsong bonfire. Rotarian John and Ruth (Hughes) Hamilton were the gracious hosts.

School results, Quebec version, 'not for publication', says authority

For the first time in many years the results of the Departmental Examinations in Lachute High School will not be published due to the errors in the certificates sent out by the Department of Education. Out of the 117 certificates for students who wrote Grade XI examinations, 45 have been found to be incomplete or in error. After a careful check of the certificates by the principal and three senior members of the staff, it was decided to issue photostats of the certificates and to retain the originals until corrections have been made.

The errors were mostly in the omission of marks in subjects. Six certificates had Geometry marks missing, another six were lacking Industrial Arts marks, three Chemistry, and one each English Composition, Written French, Biology and Office Practice. Twenty-nine of the certificates for students who had written some of their Grade XI subjects last year under Subject Promotion did not contain their last year's marks. Some of these certificates were marked, "Failed" or "Partial", whereas these students have obtained a pass with their previous marks. Two certificates had the students' names misspelled.

Another strange thing was noted on the computer results. Students who wrote supplemental examinations invariably received their previous mark. In past years, students were given the highest mark that they had obtained whether in the original or the supplemental. It seems incredible that most students after studying the subject for a second year would not improve on their original work. Could the computer be programmed wrongly in this respect? It is a simple matter to blame an inanimate object, the machine, but is it a coincidence that, in the Grade X level subjects written in the Lachute High School, no marks were discovered missing nor misplaced? Are the Grade X students more capable of coding their numbers on computer sheets than a Grade XI student?

Prejudicial to Students Seeking University Entrance

The unfortunate results of these errors and confusion are difficult to assess. Are the marks, which the students received, accurate? Many students' entrances to university are delayed, and in the meantime the university may be filled with students who did receive complete marks (although lower). Students applying to university outside of this province are being rejected, and once rejected by a university it is difficult to obtain acceptance. The future of the lives of many of the students is seriously affected. Regardless of where the blame may lie, it is of utmost importance that an accurate set of marks be prepared and sent out to the students. Not only accuracy but speed is of vital importance now.

A complete list of the omissions has been prepared and forwarded to the Department of Education by the principal and when the corrections are obtained the students will be notified.

There was a flavor of civic support when the Molson four-man fastball squad staged a Lions-sponsored exhibition here last Saturday against a full team of Lachute All-Stars. Seen above at the opening are (left to right) Mayor Dr. Z. L. Saindon; Gaston Laroche, Molson's local representative; Bob Dixon, 1965-66 president of the Lions Club; Alderman François Charlebois; and Roger Regimbal, an active Lions member and former president. Bank hold-up — Four men armed with machine-guns held up a branch of the Banque Provinciale Du Canada in Cheneville, Papineau County, last Thursday and escaped with more than $15,000. A shot was fired, but no one was injured.

Car left road, crashed into house

A car driven by Henri Paquette of Brownsburg crashed into a house beside Route 8 at Grenville last Sunday evening. Cst. Raymond Hétu of the Provincial Police was informed that the driver lost control of his car when he was blinded by the lights of an approaching automobile.

Paquette, in a 1964 Chevelle car, suffered head injuries, while a lady passenger sustained serious injury to both legs and facial cuts. The car was reported a total loss, while damage was also caused to the property of M. Larocque.

All was normal by the peak traffic period at noon, after the driver had disentangled his truck (and his planks) from the bridge structure.

Mgr. Antoine Hebby, from Beirut

Celebrant of a special mass at the Notre Dame de Lourdes shrine on Sunday was Monseigneur Antoine Hebby, priest of a parish in Beirut, who in Lebanon is the equivalent of a domestic prelate in the ecclesiastic hierarchy of this country. The mass, spoken in perfect French, followed the form of the byzantine oriental rite. A large crowd of worshippers attended. (Mgr. Hebby is the brother of Mrs. Michel Malacket, and is presently visiting here.)

Mgr. Hebby is seen at left in the vestments of his office. And below he is pictured near the birthplace of Christ in Bethlehem, where he conducts a pilgrimage each year. The tableau represents Joseph, Mary and the Babe.

Young visitor saved B'burg man from drowning

Michel Bolduc, 20, of Chicoutimi, rescued a young swimmer who was seized with cramps, on the waterfront of the clubhouse at Lake Louisa one day last week.

André Langlois, 21, of Brownsburg, became suddenly immobilized with cramps in the legs. His young sister, Nicole, aged 12, went to his assistance, but the two tangled in a dangerous manner. Bolduc was on the wharf at Gerry Fletcher's cottage nearby, and sizing up the situation, he dived in to assist the pair. He told the young girl to swim back to shore, then grabbed for the drowning man, who by now had submerged for the second time. He was going down for the third time, unconscious, when his rescuer took him in tow. With the victim he managed to reach the Fletcher wharf, then applied artificial respiration. The rescued youth was later taken to hospital and kept under observation for several hours.

Michel Bolduc had been visiting his uncle, Francois Robert, at Brownsburg. André Langlois, who owes his life to the Chicoutimi visitor, is employed at C.I.L. Brownsburg and was working on the 4 o'clock to midnight shift. The incident occurred at around 9 a.m. last Tuesday.

Week-end deaths: accidental and natural causes

Robert G. Trineer, 71, of the St. Philippe - Grenville area, died accidentally last Sunday from the bullet of a rifle. According to information secured by Provincial Police investigators, the elderly man was descending the stairs in his home, carrying a rifle with which he intended to kill a dog. He tripped coming down the stairs and presumably the rifle discharged and he was shot in the stomach with a 30.30 bullet.

Dr. J. C. MacKimmie, joint coroner, was notified and declared the death accidental, no inquest being deemed necessary.

The flag at the Golf Club was at half-mast Sunday for the death of a Montrealer who succumbed while playing in Saturday's extreme heat. The victim was Jules Cohen, a member of the club, 63 years of age, who suddenly collapsed on the course. Two physicians golfing nearby came to assist, Dr. Chas. Leonard and Dr. Ben Tannenbaum, and the man was taken by ambulance to the Argenteuil Hospital but succumbed en route.

By BOB ATCHISON

From all the bragging about the number of grey trout being hooked — this appears to be the year! Guy Forget of Brownsburg caught a real beauty in the West River lake the other day, 4½ lbs., taken in a combined spinning and trolling operation. The effective bait was a Daredevil Midget, pearl finish. With a 4-lb. test line, you can guess he had a lot of fun for a time. This fish had no tapeworms or black spot, so maybe the infested fish taken from this area are just the odd ones. Of course, this disease does multiply rapidly, and it could affect every fish in these waters. But creeks and lakes have all risen considerably with the rains, and a good volume of dead water has been swept away, with a lot of the bacteria that would be in it.

I have heard of many good fish being taken via the trolling method. It is also noticeable that most addicts of this sport are getting away from the huge outfits that were once a must, and are now getting into the much lighter tackles. Spinning rods have been converted to trolling, with, in some cases, a carboloy-tip eye to cut down the wear. Instead of the very heavy lead lines, the Angle Hair or Durolus wire line of not more than 15-lb. test is being used. A great advantage to an outfit like this, is the fact that these lines sink like bullets and can be used on an ordinary casting reel. This makes a much lighter outfit, with the increasing pleasure in handling a fish. Besides, the carrying weight of the former outfit was considerable, so that is another bonus.

As for the lures themselves, these too have changed to the smaller types. Instead of the big gang trolls, ordinary spinning lures are being used, and I believe they are showing superior results, with much better catches. Of course, it has its disadvantages too — the biggest, I believe, is the fact that the lure must be worked all the time. Of course, any good fisherman knows that a lure must not travel along without any action, and they do work them even with the heavier outfits, so this should not be any great trouble to these fishermen. Working the baits like this, places some fishermen right in the catch. This is why some anglers may fish repeatedly with no real results, yet others will come in with catches every time.

The other day, we were fascinated by watching a couple of squirrels and some robins stage a battle-royal. It appears that some of the robins had used an oak tree on our fence-line to hatch out their offspring. The squirrels came along probably anticipating a feed —and that was it! The robin spotted them, then within a couple of minutes there were six of them in the fray. What the squirrels lacked in numbers, they made up for in noise. I'll bet they wore their choppers down in a very short time. Ever see a bird trying to line up a squirrel for a bombing run? Man, the squirrels must have eyes in the back of their heads. Another thing, they were on the move unceasingly, slipping around a limb, darting this way and that. It finally ended after about 10 minutes with the birds calling for more reinforcements, and the squirrels beat it to another tree where they kept up a steady chatter of cussing. Finally everything was peace and quiet — so our dog decided to see what all the trouble had been about; that started it all over again. But Goldie discreetly withdrew when a robin lined her up for a bombing dive. Even the squirrels egged the robins on, it seemed! And I thought the squirrels would later go back to the oak tree, seeing it was unguarded, but they didn't. . . A brief but laughable interlude, I assure you.

A story I heard from the U.S.: My brother had been down in Vermont fishing and met a rare old type who drives around in a Lincoln (so right away, we know he is not short for the long green). However, this is the story: This car, a '65 model, is used as sleeping quarters for his dogs; these he has plenty of, and they go by names such as "Howard" (a cross between a beagle and something else), Crooky, Alexander, and so on. Unmarried, this old gent lives for his dogs, so much so that they push him out of bed during the nights. He even drives them down to swim, goes to their favorite areas, and so on. An old retired Colonel in the U.S. Army, he states that dogs are the one and only thing, as far as he is concerned. Incidentally he has a tract of bush some 5 square miles, and allows campers to use his bush with no charge at all. He even has roads made for them to the special sites. A real Samaritan; too few of them around.

Saw the results of a camper washing his tent the other day. It sure did look clean and he stated it did not leak after this treatment. The soap he bought in the States; I believe it was called Tent-NU. The tent had to be put up for this operation. He used a long-handled brush to reach some of the spots, and except for a little faded-look (not too bad either), it made a very good job. Although it stated on the container that the tent did not have to be waterproofed after washing, our friend took no chances on this. He sprayed waterproofing in just as soon as the tent was dry. I have washed tents before, but this has always involved a lot of hard work, and a lot of cussing too; but such was not the case with this washer. Maybe we'll be able to get it in Canada one of these days. Indeed, something like this may be on the market already, but I have not heard of it. One thing is sure, looking after anything like this will prolong its durability, and this means money in the long run.

This brings up another important item of equipment — boots. With the fall coming on, enthusiasts will be getting their hunting outfits ready for the opening. As usual the item most used will be overlooked, and many a jaunt has been spoiled by poor footwear. In most cases these boots will be as hard as concrete in the leathers, so this is where to start. The very first thing to do is clean these spots with soap — not a detergent, but a saddle soap. This softens, preserves and at the same time cleans. Of course, you will have to do this a few times to get them pliable at all. Then, when this is done to your satisfaction, get some Neet's Foot oil and soak the leather with it, especially around the stitchings. When you have done this, pack the insides with paper, as tight as you can jam it in; this will stop them from shrinking too much. If you have leather soles, very little of the oil should be put on, as you don't want them to get too pliable and feel every little pebble through the soles; but it won't hurt to put plenty of saddle soap into the stitchings of the sole. This will preserve the thread itself, and maybe stop you from having a loose boot. . . The next thing is all the straps and so forth used on these trips; even some of the leather cartridge belts need this once in a while — not too much though. Slings can be well soaked; the more pliable they are, the better for you — there is nothing worse than a sling that's as stiff as a board. Even your knife sheath can be done this way. As a matter of fact, all leather should have this attention every once in a while.

Boating Clinic

By STAN DAVIES

I try to keep track of boating accidents by clipping newspapers from all across Canada because there is no central official statistical system for tabulating them. It's somewhat comforting to know that they are running a little behind last year. We are getting more safety conscious.

And on this topic here are some questions I've been asked:

How many different sizes of life jackets are there?

Answer: Only three sizes are approved by the Department of Transport. They are for children up to 50 pounds; for children from 45 to 90 pounds, and for adults over 90 pounds. It's very important that these weight specifications be adhered to.

Is it all right to water ski even if you can't swim, as long as you wear a lifejacket?

Answer: Reluctantly I must admit I know several young people who do this. But I keep thinking they are begging for trouble. Just suppose the jacket is torn off in a spill.

If a boat livery rents you a boat, must they also supply lifejackets?

Answer: No. If it is a non-powered boat you aren't required to carry lifejackets, and if it's a powered boat, the law requires you to HAVE them aboard irrespective of who supplies them.

What size and kind of boats are in the most accidents?

Answer: Small, light boats used for fishing. More anglers drown than any other single identifiable group.

Is a "motor well" necessary on a boat? (K.V.M., Cornwall)

Answer: If you want the boat to be safe, it's as necessary as the motor. For those who aren't sure, a motor well is a partition just ahead of the stern to catch any water that slops in over the transom.

What's the most dangerous thing in water skiing?

Answer: It's generally agreed that taking a skier too close to shore, piers, rocks or other boats causes the most . . . and most serious . . . skiing accidents. And this generally is the responsibility of the boat driver. Don't ever take a skier into shallow water. It might be deep enough for him to ski, but if he should fall he could hit bottom with disastrous consequences.

Answer: Risking the wrath of the manufacturers of these belts, I would say they are not worth much. If you should be knocked out in a fall, the belt will support you all right, but with your head down in the water, and unless you are picked up right away, you'll drown. Incidentally, they are not "approved" by the Department of Transport.

Are lifejackets "guaranteed"?

Answer: They may be guaranteed as to quality of the foam inside, the cloth cover and the stitching, but they certainly aren't guaranteed to save your life under any and all circumstances. They are very valuable devices, but in an emergency 99 per cent of the success of any life-saving effort is going to depend on the wearer not the jacket. Know-how and care are your best guarantees.

Fishing contest for youngsters, on North River

Inspired by the success of their boys' and girls' fishing contest last year, the Argenteuil Fishing and Hunting Association has planned a similar event for next Sunday, August 22 — to take place along the North River with headquarters at the Richelieu Park, where a picnic will conclude the day. Parents of the young anglers are asked to accompany their children, in the interests of their safety.

Registration will be on the grounds, with fishing from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Entry fee is 25 cents per child and all under 18 years of age may participate. There will be generous door prizes and awards for the best catches of fish. Boundary points for fishing are White's Bridge in the east, and Wilson's dam downstream as the western limit.

FEW KNOW LITTLE DOG

Calgary (CP) — A recent newspaper survey found that only two out of 10 people polled knew what a pug is. The rest said it was everything from a prizefighter to a special kind of nose — though there may be some connection here. Pugs are a breed of ornamental dog, popular during the Victorian era.

OPPORTUNISM

A farmer wrote to a veterinarian for free advice, stating, "I have a horse who sometimes walks normal and at other times has a decided limp. What shall I do?"

The vet replied, "The next time he walks normal, sell him."

(TEATIME TOPICS)

By Jean Sharp
Canadian Press Women's Editor

It's getting late in the season, but if you are still planning a canoe trip, or your youngsters are, there are a few suggestions from the Ontario department of lands and forests which might serve as a check list.

Before you set out, you should be able to read a map, use a compass and handle an axe. You should be in good physical condition.

You should know how to handle a canoe. Inexperience and ignorance multiply your chances of having an accident. If you are not thoroughly experienced, hire a guide. Even if you are, do not go on a long canoe trip alone, any more than you would swim alone.

Government departments can supply you with maps and information about provincial or federal parks to help you plan your trip.

Weight should help you plan your equipment. You can always think of one more useful thing to take, but will probably be sorry the first time you must portage.

Air Mattresses

Tents of silk, nylon or another light fabric will make the lightest, smallest packs. Choose one big enough for people and equipment, but as small as is comfortably possible. Don't forget insect netting.

A light sleeping bag or wool blankets which can be rolled in a ground sheet will keep you warm. An air mattress which can be rolled is more comfortable than the ground. If you make beds of boughs you mutilate trees and leave dead branches which are a fire hazard.

Include a complete change of clothing and take a heavy shirt, windbreaker, slicker, spare socks, hat and footwear. Even if it's 90 degrees where you live, it may get cold and wet while you are on your trip.

Because heavy boots could damage a canoe, the most sensible footwear is moccasins or running shoes.

Equipment

Packs are available in heavy waterproof canvas equipped with adjustable leather straps and a tump line which passes across the forehead and bears the weight of the pack. Packboards provide protection against lumps digging into your back.

Nesting cooking units are most compact and may be bought with a canvas bag to fit.

You should have, a department booklet says, 25 to 30 feet of sash cord or heavy clothesline, waterproof match box, heavy pocket knife, flashlight and spare bulbs and batteries, toilet articles, first aid kit, axe, small spade or folding digging tool, fishing equipment, compass, map and a camera.

Plastic bags and plastic spray can provide an inexpensive waterproofing for some of your equipment.

$400 and costs for obstructing game wardens

Quebec — The outcome of an incident which happened in late April at Rock Forest, near Sherbrooke, has just been settled in Sherbrooke's Court of Sessions of the Peace.

For having obstructed wardens of the Department of Tourism, Fish and Game in the performance of their duties, a local citizen has been ordered to pay a $200 fine plus costs, and an additional $200 fine for having thrown an unopened beer bottle through the windshield of the game wardens' vehicle. It will cost him another $60 to pay for damages cause to the vehicle, which means the incident will cost him $460, not counting court costs. Failure to pay would result in one month in jail for him.

counties — V.P. of the Life Underwriters Association for Canada — married with two sons, and a dedicated Rotarian, charter member of the Cornwall Club — the speaker is well qualified to speak on business and Rotary service.

Introduced by past-Governor Linton Armstrong, he congratulated the group upon their fine park and dam, where he had visited earlier.

Realizing that most clubs do a good job of service locally, and the greater need for better international understanding, both the Governor and the International President of Rotary, C. P. H. Teenstra of the Netherlands are stressing the need for contact, one Rotarian with another, one club with another, in different countries to advance international goodwill.

Governor Warner stressed the fact that, with 12,000 clubs and over 568,000 Rotarian business and professional men, in 127 countries, there was much being done and a great potential for good.

The Rotary Foundation, which sponsors the exchange of graduate students between countries with the purpose of developing greater understanding, was mentioned by the speaker as a means of doing great good for humanity. They also promote the interchange of younger students for short visits of understanding in countries foreign to their own. The local Club was congratulated for its past and present support.

In thanking the speaker — and presenting him with an Ayers blanket — President Tom Johnston mentioned that the Club was grateful for the "pep-up", early in the Rotary year just recently begun.

During the evening the Governor presented charter member Edgar Pollock with a 15-year perfect attendance pin, signifying in this case a full period of active participation as well.

The singsong was led by Les Davies, with Wes Freeland at the "miniature" piano.

Among visitors of the fellowship meeting mentioned above was Mrs. Jean Allen, of Kingston-on-Thames, Surrey, a guest of Dr. and Mrs. R. Rigby and sister-in-law of Elinor Rigby. She joined the group at both the outdoor activities and the musicale in the large living room, while Mrs. Rigby played the piano simultaneously with Mr. Haynes at the organ.

These enjoyable and the enlightening meetings complemented each other.

Motor Sport Club rally set for 140-mile tour on Sunday

L.M.S.C. News

L.M.S.C. held its last meeting August 5, when it was approved that the Club become incorporated as a non-profit organization, the wheels have now been set into motion. Once incorporated L.M.S.C. will be eligible to join the C.A.S.C., the governing body of motor sport in Canada.

On Sunday, August 8, the L.M.S.C. stock car Q8 raced at Maxwell. Although no firsts were picked up, the car showed well.

Napierville ¼-mile drag races was the destination of six cars filled with L.M.S.C. members and friends on Sunday, August 15. The highlight and thrill of the afternoon was a dragster which climbed to a fantastic 201.87 m.p.h. in the quarter-mile.

Summer Rally

The start of this rally will be at the Arc Supply Ltd. parking lot, Bethany Road, Lachute, on Sunday morning. The first car will depart at 10.31, to begin a 140-mile rally covering all types of road conditions. The rally is divided into two sections — an average speed section and a map section. Section one provides straight forward instructions with plenty of average speeds. Complicated problems have been omitted. During section two, navigators will plot the course to be taken by following map instructions. The rally route is relatively simple and provides an excellent opportunity to introduce the novice to the motor sport of rallying. The rally should take approximately 4½ hours to complete, with a one-hour break at the mid-point, located near St. Andrews East. At this break a picnic lunch is available, covered by the entry fee of $4 per car for non-members and $3 per car for members in good standing. The rally will finish within five miles of Lachute.

It should be pointed out that the motor sport of rallying is definitely not a race. Rallyists are required to cover a specified route within a certain period of time. Time, speed, distance problems are prevalent throughout the course and timing is precise, taken to the nearest minute. A rally crew consists of a driver and navigator. The navigator's duties include plotting the course and checking that the crew is on time throughout the entire course. A skillful driver is required in order to maintain the speeds calculated by the navigator. Average speeds which are given in the instructions are always at least two m.p.h. lower than posted limits. A rally course is usually plotted over all types of roads, staying clear of main highways as much as possible, which tend to contain heavy traffic.

Registration takes place starting at 9.15 a.m. and entry forms may be obtained at MacDonald's B-A Service Station, Bethany Street, Lachute. It is suggested that you enter as early as possible as a limit of 25 cars is set.

The next meeting of the L.M.S.C. is to be held August 19, commencing at 8 p.m. at the Legion Hall, Lachute.

WHY DON'T I WRITE A BOOK?

Several times over a period of years someone says to me, "Why don't you write a book about your experiences in show business?"

I try to explain that all that sort of thing has been done before by many prominent performers, from Barnum to the Four Marx Bros., and that my experiences would add very little to the subject.

"But you must have had a thrilling life," or so I've been told. Thrilling? Ever since leaving school my principal means of livelihood has been in the field of photography, commercial illustrating and kindred arts. In show business I was known as an "in and outer", meaning that I sometimes took a flier in some branch of entertainment, but never to the neglect of my main profession. I played in dance bands for 11 years, have taken part in musical comedy, dramatic stock, vaudeville, banquets and smokers. Later, from 1938 to 1948, I did a "thrill act", or so it was called, with fairs and circuses, but to me it was just another job. . .

But perhaps I could write a book about thrills in photography. I've been roasted, frozen, soaked to the skin, had my pants pressed by a locomotive while I was in them, climbed up greasy ladders in an oil refinery, left a building three minutes before it blew up, been detained as a spy in wartime, and a lot of other adventures that I don't recall at the moment.

But show business? Lots of fun and plenty of grief — heat, cold, late hours, frustrations, disappointments — and I have met some of the world's nicest people as well as a lot of undesirables. And I was in it because I liked it, not because I had to do it. . . But thrills? Phooey!

Be seein' ya!

PONIES ON THE BLOCK

For the first time in over six years, registered Shetland and Welsh ponies have been offered at auction. The Canadian Pony Society, a non-profit organization with a membership amounting to some 400 scattered from one end of Canada to the other, has the lofty ambition of improving the strain of these miniature horses. With this in mind, a committee composed of members of the directorate screened the animals for sale and selected thirty-five to be offered to the public.

On the evening of July 21, in the Thoroughbred Society Sales Pavilion at Woodbine Race Course in Metro Toronto, breeders would bid for the animals they thought most likely to improve their stock.

When I read the press release for this sale I was reminded of the days when ponies of these two breeds were shipped by the boat load to this country. They were transferred from boat to railway freight cars and arrived at destinations many hundreds of miles from the port of their landing.

Remember the story of the shipwreck off the shoals of Sable Island, when ponies swam to shore, surviving in sufficient number to breed in large troops? In the process they have degenerated into wild shaggy creatures of little use to man and not worth the rescue. Not so many years ago, a suggestion was made that they should be slaughtered and used for canned dog food. Though this sounds almost barbaric it is meant as a humanitarian undertaking, for there is little on Sable Island on which such a huge number of ponies can subsist. Sea grass and sand is a slim diet. The sand has splayed their hooves and, though they were originally a small breed, they are now spoken of as "runts". There was such an uproar against the proposal from the public that it was abandoned. The ponies still breed and roam the island.

Welsh ponies have been maintained since early Saxon times and the graph of pony breed popularity has had many ups and downs. Not so long ago, at the turn of the century, one of the status symbols of the era was a Shetland pony in every stable to draw a governess cart for the transportation of the children of the family. Demand for cheap saddle ponies grew so fast the breeds degenerated into "scrub" animals.

After the formation of the Canadian Pony Society in 1901 the addition of registered stock in their stables improved the strains. Though the sale is primarily to bring animals to better show stature through breeding, the eventual goal is to increase their popularity among our population.

Breeders Differ

There is considerable difference of opinion among breeders as to whether Shetlands make as good saddle ponies for children as the Welsh strain. One enthusiast, with a raft of ribbons to the credit of his small animals, told me there is no better pony for children than the Welsh breed. Sure footed, kind and good natured, he believes these small beasts, which at one time worked in the coal mines of Wales, would make the best saddle ponies for a child. His ribbons, however, were won by Shetlands proudly prancing in harness at the Royal Winter Fair, Ontario Horse Shows and country fairs.

Maybe ponies are not arriving by the boatload at our Canadian ports these days, but they are still being consigned from overseas breeders and travelling by freight across our land. One certainty, only the finest stock available has this privilege, for that is the only kind breeders are interested in purchasing.

RISING PRICES

Housewives have headaches on shopping days. They find so many items steadily inching up in price. Who should they blame it on?

My belief is that we've brought these price increases on ourselves by encouraging governments to tax and spend, tax and spend. Included in the cost of everything we buy is that unseen ingredient — the share the tax men took all down the line.

As a result of heavy government spending and consequent taxing, both Canada and the United States are experiencing inflation. It is worse in the USA than it is in Canada, because in the States labor has been severe in its demands and between it and government, the impetus given to prices has been tremendous. In Canada, labor has been more reasonable, because our labor leaders know that rapidly rising wages are of little use if productivity doesn't match the increase.

One cause of heavy government spending is the shared cost idea. Provincial governments undertake projects because part of the money comes from the central government. If they had to raise it all themselves, they'd be more prudent.

Most of the big projects go to big cities. It is true these big cities experience a boom and create a lot of jobs, but the farmer or small-towner who shares the cost is getting hit hard. He ought to be screaming to high heaven about it; but governments have managed to make it appear reactionary to condemn any project that appears to be for the public benefit.

True, we all like good roads, fine buildings, beautiful parks and the like, and these should be developed as we can afford them. What is to be deplored most is the proliferation of government boards and bureaus, travelling royal commissions, expensive but often ill-conceived welfare schemes that will create "badfare", if there is such a word.

What is needed most in the field of welfare today, for all people, is a dollar that is worth a dollar and will buy a dollar's worth of food, clothing and shelter.

Premier adamant on U.N. member's three-year suspension from Assembly

Quebec This Week — By the Canadian Press

Premier Jean Lesage, it seems, is determined to accord a place in history, if not in the Legislative Assembly, to Yves Gabias, the Union Nationale member for Trois-Rivières.

Mr. Lesage made it clear this past week that as far as he is concerned Mr. Gabias is going to work out a three-year suspension — believed to be the longest in Canadian parliamentary history — which was imposed on him in July last year.

The Opposition member, suspended when he failed to prove accusations of influence-peddling against René Hamel, Provincial Attorney-General at the time, was quoted recently as saying he thought he would be reinstated for the next session of the Legislature, which opens in January. His grounds for believing this were that the government had continued to pay his salary since his suspension, even though it didn't have to.

Premier Lesage was quick to deny there was any significance in this. "As usual," he said, "Mr. Gabias has understood nothing. . . He is capable only of insults. The Legislative Assembly has not withdrawn its decision, which is that Mr. Gabias does not have the right to sit (in the Legislature) until three years after the date of his expulsion. If the legislature decides to shorten Mr. Gabias' suspension, it will make the decision at the start of the next session."

Mr. Lesage said that the decision to continue paying Mr. Gabias' salary was the Legislature's. The suspension could, in fact, have cost Mr. Gabias something more than $50,000 in salary and travelling and office expenses, over the three years.

After the Union Nationale member made his statement about Mr. Hamel, the Assembly's committee on privileges and elections held six days of hearings into the influence-peddling allegation. The all-party committee voted unanimously in favor of a report saying that the accusation made in the Assembly was without foundation.

But in a free vote on the suspension the assembly divided 53 to 23 along party lines, with the Union Nationale opposition members in general taking the view that though Mr. Gabias had made a mistake, the unprecedented three-year suspension was unjust.

They said the suspension would in effect be permanent because provincial elections were due to be held before the three-year suspension expired.

In the last year Mr. Gabias has made many efforts to regain his seat, but without success. After court action failed, he made attempts to take the seat simply by walking into the assembly and sitting down, only to be removed by the sergeant-at-arms.

IN THE BUSH

When you travel deep into the bush, carry on your person a police whistle. If you lose your way, this sound will prove more penetrating than even your calls. Don't panic and run if you find you have lost your path. Sit down and try to remember from which direction you came. If the ground is damp, you may be able to trace your foot prints. Carry some hard candy — it will help sustain you if you get hungry.

TRACTORS IN PROTEST. Farmers of Tirlemont, Belgium, wanted to protest low prices they were being paid for their sugar beet crops from a syndicate. But how, they wondered. And helps us to forget,
But time so far has only proved
How much we miss you, yet."

The Bible Today

How many languages are spoken in Canada? Perhaps there is no definite figure available. In the City of Toronto, the Board of Education reports 33 different tongues spoken by the students in that school system.

The Toronto Star stated recently that 45% of all school children in that city were Italian, 10 per cent German, six per cent Greek, five per cent Polish, five per cent Chinese and 5 per cent Ukrainian. Less than 20 per cent of the children could claim English as their mother tongue.

When they entered the school system in Toronto, the Star continues, 20,000 youngsters of the present student body could not speak one word of English, having emigrated from Europe.

The Scriptures are requested in 80 languages across Canada, reports the Canadian Bible Society, adding that 511,565 copies were distributed in these tongues last year.

Two and one half million Canadians have a mother tongue other than English or French.

MOM'S HELPER

It was a difficult day for mother. There had been dozens of interruptions caused by the front door bell and the telephone. Finally, she turned to her five-year-old son and said: "The next time the telephone rings, Bobby, you answer and say that I'm not here."

Good little boy that Bobby was, he obediently took the next phone call. The caller wanted to know where his mother was.

"Just a minute," delayed Bobby, while he yelled to his mother, "Mom, where are you supposed to be?"

OUT OF THE PAST

The motto of the British royal arms, "Dieu et mon droit", is a reminder of the time when Englishmen spoke French. French became the language of the royal court and the courts of justice after the Normans conquered England in 1066, explains World Book Encyclopedia. The motto means "God and my right."

FIRST MAP

The earliest known contour map is a chart of the English Channel, drawn in 1737.

Back-to-school fashions

Back-to-school fashions are right in step with adult styles, according to Joan Blanchard, home and fashion consultant. When grown-up trends appear in miniature versions, they often prove more suitable for the children. A miniature version of the high-fashion smock dress shows how suitable this line is for small children. Practical as well as pretty, it is made of easy-care cotton with a pre-set finish. Hemline and cuffs are trimmed with contrasting braid.

'Know Canada'

Was Canada Well Prepared For World War II?

No. After the First Great War Canada reduced her armed forces to insignificance, despite the surprisingly large contribution she had made in that conflict. Canadian rearmament made a tiny beginning in 1936, when the world situation began deteriorating rapidly, owing to Fascist aggressiveness. Nevertheless, when Canada declared war in September 1939 she had just over 4,000 full-time soldiers, 2,000 sailors and 2,400 airmen. The non-permanent militia had about 5,000 men enrolled.

They were still armed, almost entirely, with the weapons of 1918. Peacetime military policy changed considerably at the end of World War II. The armed forces were greatly reduced but not to insignificance. The lowest annual expenditure on the Canadian armed forces, since World War II, was that for 1947 and 1948 — $196,000,000.

In addition to a small participation in the Korean war, Canada also maintains soldiers and airmen in Europe, serving under NATO command and she plays a part commensurate with her relative strength in the North American Air Defence Organization. The contrast between the comparative preparedness of today and the impotence of 1939, up to September of that year, is substantial.

By Jean Sharp, Canadian Press Staff Writer

Coffee was first discovered about 1,300 years ago. The ripe berries were ground at first, shell and all, with a mortar and pestle. The crushed beans were molded into food balls held together with fat. Later, when the practice of drying berries had begun, they were still ground in the same way.

About 500 or 600 years later, after coffee beans were first roasted, little millstones, one turning above the other, were introduced as coffee grinders.

Then a grinder along the style of a grain mill used by Greeks and Romans was used. It consisted of two conical millstones. One was hollow and fitted over the other.

In the 1400's a Turkish cylindrical coffee mill appeared and later a spice grinder standing on four legs was invented and adapted for coffee.

Gourmet Games

For a while in the 17th century the mortar and pestle came back to favor. This was supposed by connoisseurs to be the only way to grind coffee. The grinders were made in elaborate woods and metals, and one is said to have travelled on the Mayflower.

For a time coffee grinders were a fad. Some were made, (it was said), to be carried in your pocket and included a roaster, grinder, lamp, oil, cups, saucers, spoons, coffee and sugar.

As coffee became more and more common, but was still roasted and ground in the home, grinders were made for table or wall and with drawers to catch the coffee.

The wholesale roasting and grinding of coffee was begun in the 1790's, but took more than a century to become commonplace. Through the 19th century housewives continued to grind, and often roast their own coffee.

Steel Mills

Retail and wholesale equipment had to be developed and in the meantime, new and improved home grinders such as a steel mill were being marketed.

It took some time to establish standards of coffee grinds to suit most types of pots.

The coarsest grinds are used for percolators because when coffee and water mingle, perking, for six to eight minutes, a finer grind would yield too much taste and oil.

The gentler drip pot, which mixes coffee and water for four to six minutes, takes a medium grind. The vacuum pot, which mingles them for only three minutes, takes the finest grind.

Italian espresso in a steam pressure machine needs a fine grind, and Turkish coffee is pulverized to a powder.

Historical Review prepared by Miss A. L. Wales

The Historical Society of Argenteuil County owes its beginnings to two historic events of local interest. The first was the dedication of the St. Andrews United Church in May, 1927, when Dr. B. N. Wales, who had been appointed historian for the occasion, prepared records which were placed under the corner stone of the church. The second event was the unveiling of the cairns commemorating the construction of the Carillon and Grenville canals. At this time, June 3, 1933, Dr. Wales, who gave an address on the early history of the Carillon district, was impressed by the importance of having definite provision made for preserving the historic records of the area, and laid plans for the formation of a historical society. In this project he was joined by Dr. Maude E. Abbott, who had already been thinking along similar lines, and by Mr. and Mrs. G. F. W. Kuhring, then of Lakefield, Que.

On Saturday, June 23, 1934, a monument to the first paper mill in Canada was unveiled in St. Andrews East. At the close of the ceremonies, which were presided over by Mrs. G. F. Kuhring as County President of the Women's Institute, the following resolution was proposed by Dr. Wales, seconded by Dr. Abbott and carried:

"Whereas participants in this historical celebration under the auspices of the Women's Institute of the County of Argenteuil feel the importance of the preservation of valuable historical documents in the hands of an officially appointed body.

And whereas the time has arrived when there should be organized an historical society for the County of Argenteuil,

It is proposed that the County President of the Argenteuil County Women's Institutes, Mrs. Kuhring, be appointed to convene a committee from among those interested, to proceed with such organization."

A month later, on July 28th, a meeting was convened in the St. Andrews School house for the purpose of taking the initial steps in forming a historical society. At this meeting it was moved, seconded and carried that such an organization be formed, and a tentative draft for a constitution was drawn up to be submitted to a public meeting to be held on August 11th following, in the Town Hall, St. Andrews. At the public meeting — August 11, 1934 — the Historical Society of Argenteuil County came into being and its constitution was adopted, clause by clause. The same year, in November 1934, the incorporation of the Society was concluded.

In October, 1936, the Society was honored by a visit from Lord Tweedsmuir, then Governor General of Canada, the occasion being the unveiling of a memorial tablet to Sir. J. J. C. Abbott (first Canadian-born Prime Minister of Canada) in the Anglican Church of St. Andrews.

In the same month, October, 1936, Mr. Felix Hungerbuhler, who had bought the beautiful Bellevue property, conferred on the Society an inestimable service by offering them as a gift the old barracks hotel at Carillon to be used as a county museum. Mr. Hungerbuhler's gift was formally accepted by the Society on May 8, 1937. After much negotiation with the Federal Government, a delegation from the Society visited Ottawa in June, 1938, with a view to enlisting the aid of the Government in the restoration of the building. It was finally arranged that the Society transfer the barracks property to the Crown by deed of gift, on the understanding that it be restored for museum purposes and then leased to the Society for $1.00 a year. During the summer of 1938, at the cost of some $16,000.00 from the Government, the building was renovated, with Prof. Percy E. Nobbs as architect, Mr. Fraser Watson as contractor. Mr. G. F. Kuhring in charge of landscaping the grounds, and Mr. G. St. John Simpson as decoration consultant.

On October 22, 1938, the restored building was first used as a museum. Many vaulable gifts and loans were exhibited on that occasion. The visitors who assembled in the library were addressed by Victor Morin, L.L.D., by Senator A. K. Hugessen, and by Mr. Archibald Kains, Hon. President of the Society.

The formal opening of the Museum took place on June 24, 1939, when the Hon. T. A. Crerar, Minister of Mines and Colonization, officially dedicated the building to the Society.

Outstanding among the gifts to the Society in recent years was a legacy of over sixteen thousand five hundred dollars bequeathed by Miss Priscilla McMartin in memory of her parents, Peter E. and Susan McMartin.

Following is a list of those who have held office as President since the formation of the Society in 1934: Dr. B. N. Wales, Dr. H. B. Cushing, Mr. J. S. Giles, Mr. Mac E. Walker, Mr. Benjamin A. Howell, Mrs. George McGibbon, Mrs. Norman Holland, Mr. Arthur Hanley, Mr. A. G. Talbot and Mr. George McGibbon, who is in office at present.

The number of visitors to the Museum has increased with the passing years. During the season of 1964, 5,100 visitors' names were entered in the record book — ample evidence of the growing popularity of the Museum.

MEMORIAL CAMPAIGN. Group of Dallas Texas, residents has launched a campaign to have "suitable memorial" erected at the site of President Kennedy's assassination, above. Committee headed by Martina Langley of Richardson, Texas, asks in petition that President Johnson preserve site for history, as was done with Ford theatre in Washington, where President Lincoln was killed.

Gives safety tips in event of a cyclone, tornado

Because hurricanes do happen sometimes in Canada, the Red Cross has prepared a few tips on precautionary measures in case of a hurricane, cyclone or tornado.

1. Watch your daily newspapers and television for official weather bureau reports, and listen for them on radio. A battery-operated radio set is a wise precaution in the event of power failure in the house.
2. Store garbage cans, garden furniture and tools, awnings and such objects in a safe place. Wind-driven, these can become dangerous weapons.
3. Put storm shutters in place, or board up windows.
4. If you are told to evacuate — don't delay. Get out quickly and follow instructions.
5. If you live in a low-lying area, don't risk being swamped or marooned. Get away from beaches and all low areas likely to be swept by the hurricane tide surge and high winds.
6. Don't go outside during the storm. Stay indoors, preferably in a brick or concrete building.
7. Keep away from windows.
8. Should the "eye" of the hurricane pass directly overhead, there will be a deceptive period of calm that may last a half-hour or longer. Don't be misled, stay where you are. The other side of the storm will return with winds from the opposite direction.
9. Fill bottles and utensils with drinking water, and fill the bathtub. Keep on hand a supply of extra food which requires no cooking. Be sure to have a supply of candles and flashlights, and before the storm hits, turn up your refrigerator to the coldest setting, to preserve foods as long as possible in case power fails later on.
10. Don't touch fallen wires. Report the damage to the police or power company.

Supersonic Jet Wings Of The Future

Construction of the 1,450 m.p.h. Concorde supersonic jetliner, which will link Canada and Europe in two and a half hours flying time, is progressing according to schedule. At present, cutting of major airframe parts for the prototype Concorde is well underway.

Pictured above are eight aeronautical technicians meticulously tracing the delta-shape wing at Sud Aviation's plant at Blagnac near Toulouse in southern France. The overall wingspan of the Concorde will be 83 feet 10 inches, the aircraft's length will be over 184 feet, and the total weight, 326,000 pounds.

The first flight of the Concorde prototype is scheduled for early 1968, and Air France, which has purchased eight Concordes, has slated transatlantic passenger service for 1971.

The current cutting and actual manufacture of Concorde parts follows an extensive program of specimen production which began in 1960. To date, more than 8,000 different specimen parts have been put through exhaustive tests at the Aeronautic Test Center in Toulouse, France. Now, sub-contracts are being awarded for design systems including the supersonic jet's air conditioning, radio and navigation equipment, and other systems.

Test programs have also been launched for the Concorde's electric and hydraulic systems, and in 1966, static ground testing of the jetliner will begin in southern France.

When introduced into passenger service in 1971, Air France's Concorde jetliners will accommodate 118 passengers and fly between Canada and France at almost 25 miles a minute at a maximum altitude of 63,000 feet.

How Did John Horden Rate as a Missionary?

At the top. In 1851 the Church Missionary Society sent this English lad to Moose Factory, an outpost in the desolation of James Bay. He labored there for 42 years. Horden translated the Anglican Prayer Book, the Gospels and a hymn book into the Cree language. He then printed the translations himself on a hand press sent out from England. Later he translated the whole of the New Testament into Cree. Thousands of Indians were baptized by this man and he also taught them to read. Horden literally created the Anglican diocese of Moosonee himself and was consecrated its first bishop. He died at Moose Factory in 1893, a unique example of unconquerable determination to the last.

Canadian surplus – world shortage

ONE OF THE causes of current surpluses in food production of Canada and the United States, according to economists, is the fact that humans just can't eat more than 3,200 calories a day.

As long as people are eating less than this amount of food, overall consumption can be increased. But when everybody has reached the 3,200 calorie mark, an increase in consumption can only come from an increase in population — or through the export of food to other countries.

Production of foodstuffs in both Canada and the United States continues to increase faster than consumption, causing food surpluses, depressed prices and the necessity of farm subsidies. While use of other products can be increased through planned obsolescence and downright waste, utilization of food is generally limited to what people can eat.

Although the number of farmers in Canada has been reduced by almost half in the past 20 years, production has increased nearly 25 per cent in the same period. And despite a growing economy and increasing population, Canada is faced with the paradox of having too much food at a time when the big worry around the world appears to be how to feed an exploding population.

In the context of its own needs and consumption, Canada's over production of food is a serious problem. From the standpoint of a hungry world, it appears to be no problem at all — except for the fact that people who need Canada's food don't always have the money to pay for it.

All that is needed is some method of exchange by which underprivileged nations can pay for the food produced so lavishly by Canadian farms.

One man's language, another man's noise

EVER SINCE the descendants of Noah tried to build a tower that would reach to heaven, one man's language has been another man's noise.

It was severe punishment for the arrogance of man, who today is confronted with more than 2,700 spoken languages, not to mention dialects — according to World Book Encyclopedia.

Along with problems of communication, the glut of languages has provided another instrument for expressing national pride, and even hostility. The ancient Greeks, for example, called all non-Greek speakers "barbaroi," or "babblers" — an unhappy ending for the word "Babel," which originally meant "gate of God." After the French Revolution, which created a wave of nationalism in France, letters addressed in Breton, the old language of the northwestern tip of France, were returned to the sender. Sinhala is the official language of Ceylon; but when the government tried to enforce its use in 1961, some two million people who speak Tamil revolted.

Some countries have tried to solve the language problem by having more than one official language. Canadians use both French and English. Switzerland, which has been at peace longer than most countries, has three official tongues — German, French and Italian — and recognizes Romansh as a fourth national language.

To put an end to the babble, some persons have suggested that one existing language be made universal, but then there's the problem of which one? The French philosopher Descartes had an admirable idea when he proposed that an artificial language be created to serve as an international tongue. He may only have complicated things, however, for several hundred artificial languages — including Volapuk, Interlingua, Spelin and Nepo — have been nominated for the honor.

Sadness in Quintland

UNLESS AT LEAST one of your parents is a movie star or a member of royalty or an internationally prominent family, it's difficult to be born famous.

However, there's one fairly sure way. That's to be part of a set of quintuplets.

Canada's Dionnes set the pattern in 1934 and Argentina's Diligentis followed in 1943.

In the last two years there have been four quintuplet births in which the infants lived, the most recent in New Zealand.

But until such multiple births become a lot more common, it's still a sure way to instant fame.

The only trouble is that it's also likely the fame will be accompanied by problems. Take the Dionnes, for example. When quints were born in 1963 to Mrs. Andrew Fischer of Aberdeen, S.D., the four surviving Dionnes gave them some advice.

"Quintland is a magnet that lures lawyers and promoters and men waving cheque books," they said in an open letter published in McCall's magazine. "It is a hazardous situation to be in. Quintuplets can so easily be turned into a bonanza for all kinds of people. It is so difficult, but so necessary, to think in terms of a lifetime, not only of the immediate future."

The Dionnes were a sensation when they were born in Callander, Ont., 31 years ago and the commercial exploitation of their fame made them wealthy. But happiness has been elusive. They're not on good terms with their parents, Oliva and Elzire Dionne. And they were touched by tragedy when Emilie suffocated during an epileptic attack in 1954.

Cecile, the mother of four sons, including the only set of twins born to any of the sisters, is separated from her husband, as is Marie, mother of two daughters.

That leaves Annette, the first of the quints to marry, as the only one who may be considered to have found a happy life. The mother of three sons, she is married to Germain Allard, a Montreal finance company executive.

But one success in four is hardly a good average. So if you're figuring to be born famous, perhaps you'd better pick a queen — royal or movie variety — or at least a princess for your mother.

Viewpoints and perspectives

GLARING OMISSION. — In spite of the good times Canada as a whole is enjoying, not a cent will be paid on the national debt! (in the federal budget). . . We would hope for the time to come when governments might think it fashionable to pay off some of the country's debts, instead of continually adding to the load. That would be a refreshing way of financing. — Gananoque (Ont.) Reporter

DRIVER TRAINING. — "Outside of a small percentage of completely irresponsible road maniacs, including the dangerous driving drunks, most traffic accidents are caused by the fact that few drivers were ever trained to drive!" These are the words of Harold L. Smith, president of a driver improvement institute when addressing the Safety Conference of the U.S. Brewers Association Inc. "It seems incredible, doesn't it, that the most complicated and expensive machine ever produced by the millions, a machine that will go up to a hundred miles an hour and more, and can so easily become an engine of destruction, should be turned over to anybody as soon as they have learned to step on the gas and steer!"

THE ONTARIO Federation of Labor makes the following classification: It states that destitution means families of four persons with total annual incomes under two thousand dollars; poverty means — families of four persons with total annual incomes under three thousand dollars; and deprivation means families of four persons with total annual incomes under four thousand dollars. On this basis 35 percent of our population subsists in a state of destitution, poverty or deprivation. — Heward Grafftey, M.P. for Brome-Missisquoi.

85 YEARS AGO

August, 1880 —

The 10th anniversary of the Rev. R. S. McArthur's pastorate at Calvary Baptist Church, New York, was fittingly celebrated by a special sermon. The Rev. McArthur is an Argenteuil County man.

A petition has been signed by the settlers of Ponsonby, Amherst and Arundel asking the Lieutenant-Governor for assistance in improving the road (built last year) from Amherst to Arundel.

A number of Lachute young ladies and gentlemen are at present matrimonially inclined, and intend shortly to "get spliced".

The Orange Young Britons Band are practicing twice a week.

There have been 130 to 140 witnesses examined in the Argenteuil Contested Election trial.

The boating season has again opened, and the scenery up the West River is almost equal to that on the Saguenay.

50 YEARS AGO

August, 1915 —

Grenville — The talk of hard times has been forgotten by many for the present, due to the enormous quantities of blueberries that have been garnered in.

Lakefield — Trinity Church is undergoing repairs, and services are being held in the Gibb Hall.

The "Lachute Summer Training School for Teachers" has just closed another successful session. The course covers two sessions, with a year of actual practice in one of the rural schools between the two sessions. . . There were altogether 113 teachers in attendance at the school this year, of whom 44 were completing the course begun last year. As a result of the instruction this summer, 35 Permanent Diplomas and 77 Provisional Diplomas were granted.

Among the successes are the following local names: (Permanent Rural Elementary Diplomas) Margaret MacKimmie, Lachute, with honors; Ruth Rodgers, Lachute; Jessie Silverson, Dalesville; Ethel Walker, Lachute. . . (Provisional Diplomas) Laura Cousins, Grenville; Alma Dixon, Dalesville; Jessie Earle, Lachute; Gertrude Funcheon, Beech Ridge; Margaret McGregor, Ogdensburg; Lucy Morrison, Lachute; Maude Morrison, Arundel; Lilian Rogers, Lachute; Jessie Ronald, Louisa; Alice Somerville, St. Philippe.

August, 1940 —

About 700 tickets were sold for the Lions-sponsored program at Rex Theatre, to raise funds to provide "smokes" for Argenteuil soldiers overseas.

Opening ceremonies for the new Montreal - Mont Laurier - Senneterre highway, to occupy four days, will be held in September with Premier Adelard Godbout and Roads Minister the Hon. T. D. Bouchard officiating.

The Union Church at 16 Island Lake, erected on Ludington's Point and catering to some 200 families of summer residents, is this year celebrating its 35th anniversary.

A gymkhana for Red Cross funds was held by the St. Andrews Riding and Driving Club, at "Birchbell", the property of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence T. Porter.

Abi Rill caught three fish on chewing-gum bait at Lake Macdonald. . . City editors were creditably alert to this item which appeared in The Watchman — since which, we note that one chewing-gum concern and a transportation company have also seized on the incident for a morsel of publicity.

PROLIFIC ESKIMOS

Montreal CP — Greenland's Eskimos are multiplying faster than any other people on earth, Dr. Hans Brun told the Arctic Institute of North America here. The former Danish undersecretary of state for Greenland said families have 15 children, and they benefit from disease controls, better housing, food, and clothing.

China: A Paper Dragon?

As the Vietnam crisis mounted in intensity this week, the threatening posture of Communist China continued to overshadow the jungle struggle being waged in southeast Asia.

Behind every move in Vietnam, there lurks always the question of Peking's reaction to American efforts to bring the fighting there to a stalemate.

President Johnson's policy in Vietnam recognizes that the best that can be hoped for is a saw-off in that country.

The weakness of the Johnson policy is that in order to bring the Communists to the bargaining table where at best a face-saving diplomatic formula can be worked out, the U.S must commit more and more troops and planes to the battle.

When the late President Kennedy visited Saigon as a senator in 1953, he concluded even then that the Communists were going to win.

He observed: "No amount of American military assistance in Indo China can conquer an enemy which is everywhere, and at the same time nowhere, 'an enemy of the people' which has the sympathy and overt support of the people."

How much of a menace is Communist China to world peace? How much fact is there in the 'yellow peril' legend?

While one would be naive to conclude that the Chinese regime is as peace-loving as it pretends, there is considerable evidence to suggest the West has been over-sold on the threat of China.

China was deeply wronged by the white Western nations in the 19th century. It is a country still deeply embittered over its treatment by Britain and the U.S

However, the Peking regime has not as yet made any attempt to extend its sphere of influence beyond regions which historically have been either bound up to China or under its domination.

Tibet, for instance, has been traditionally considered one of the five cultural and economic regions of China. Britain and Russia recognized Chinese control over Tibet in 1907.

Peking was able to settle quietly the question of its border with Burma, which is ruled by a government committed to non-alignment.

Only in the case of India did the border question lead to an armed clash, and the Chinese quickly pulled back after inflicting an impressive defeat on the Indian army in 1962.

It is well known that the India-China border has never at any time been clearly established and India's Nehru was every bit as obstinate as the Chinese in the 1960-62 border negotiations.

In the case of South Korea, it now appears it was Stalin, not China, which provoked the North Koreans into invading South Korea. The Chinese Communist government was only a year old, full of problems at home. Peking did not move until U.S. forces neared the Yalu river at the Chinese border, after Premier Chou En-lai had warned that China would not "tolerate seeing her neighbor being savagely invaded."

China is anxious to have a Communist government in South Vietnam but it has demonstrated it will take only limited action to achieve this end. But the warning is clear that it will react sharply against an invasion of North Vietnam, which it looks on as the same kind of buffer which North Korea provides.

Finally, there are the questions of China's nuclear capability, and the Russian-Chinese split.

The nuclear capability is at this time more psychological than real. But the Moscow-Peking split is very real. China fears a Soviet-American containment in which China would be strategically surrounded. To achieve this, the U.S must avoid the kind of escalation in Vietnam which would force Moscow to react in kind.

In A Tourist Town

Living in a tourist town must be quite different from living in a town of corresponding size that has no link with the tourist industry.

I grew up in a small town that was just beginning to find its potential as a tourist town. Quite a few cars in town were evident in July and August. Everybody thought the tourist business was a good thing and something should be done about it. A few people with large houses and small incomes, including my mother, put up "Tourist Accommodation" signs and were not only flabbergasted but delighted to rent huge, immaculate bedrooms for as much as $2 a night.

But on the whole, the tourist business was just a little extra gravy, and the town drowsed through the summer, the merchants leaning in their cool doorways, waiting for 6 o'clock to come, so they could close up and hustle off to the ball park after gulping their supper.

What a difference from the slam-bam-thank-you-ma'm atmosphere of the modern tourist town!

Today the tourist business is not only a little extra gravy, it is the cream in the coffee, the icing on the cake, the cheese with the apple pie and any other garnishing you care to nauseate yourself by imagining. It is the difference between survival of the fittest and getting along nicely, thank you, in the business world.

For the grocers, the hardwares, the drug stores, the tourist season is a mixture of exhilaration and exhaustion. The harmonious tune of the cash register is offset by the discordant scream of aching feet.

Aside from its economic injection, the tourist business has a very strong impact on the life of a small town. When the first visitors begin to arrive, in May and June, they are as welcome as the first flowers. They add color, excitement, a touch of the outside world, with their different accents and different clothes.

They are warmly welcomed, and not just for their financial contribution. Most of them are very nice, friendly people, and it's a pleasure to greet the repeaters each year, on their first trip to the cottage. We have a little yarn about the winter we've spent, and like as not, they'll urge: "Now you be sure and come up to the cottage and see us this summer. We'll have a cold one together."

They start to come in a trickel that quickly becomes a stream, then an avalanche. The pace quickens in the small town as everyone turns to in an effort to cope with them. By mid-July, the whole town is throbbing with this heady addition to its lifestream. You can't find a place to park, shopping takes three times as long, and you can scarcely cross the street because of the constant stream of cars crawling through.

About this time, the tourist town has almost lost its identity and individuality. Merchants and resort operators are like fishermen who find themselves in the middle of a vast school of fish, like farmers intent on reaping the harvest before the first touch of frost kills it.

As August nears its end, and the golden days fall rapidly away, there is a little sadness in the air, as the tourist season nears its end, and the new and old friends among the campers are seen heading out of town with their sunblackened children and their piled high cars.

But when Labor Day arrives, and the avalanche slows to a trickle, the town becomes a town again, not just a shopping centre. The citizens slow down, stretch their backs, and look around at each other. Within a week, they have forgotten the scramble and the rush and the foolish business of making money, and, full of renewed interest in their town and themselves, get down to something serious, like planning a hunting trip, or having a party.

For Parents Only...

A Weekly Feature of Helpful Hints on Child Training.

(Copyright)

Hobbies are helpful

— By NANCY CLEAVER —

"The world is so full of a number of things I'm sure we should all be as happy as kings."

wrote Robert Louis Stevenson and in his book, "A Child's Garden of Verses," he added greatly to the pleasure of countless children.

He knew how many things attract a small boy or girl . . . the motion of a swing, the boats on a river, the ladder leading to a hayloft, the changing shape of a child's own shadow.

A child's curiosity leads him to wonder and explore. During vacation months children have an opportunity to ride all kinds of hobby horses. This is the time of the year when it is a pleasure to be out of doors almost any day and so nature lore and camperaft projects are particularly popular.

The librarian in the Boys and Girls' Section of the public library is always glad to show books on any special topics. Take time to see the well-illustrated, and well-written books on astronomy, wild flowers, trees, rocks, animals, insects including butterflies. Purchase a reliable guide for your child to use in finding out what he wants to know about any of these topics. The Little Golden Books have guides on many subjects including weather, and these are a good investment.

Parents are frequently puzzled by the short duration of a child's enthusiasm for one particular activity. Girls are afflicted with this lack of perseverance as well as their brothers. Their interests show a constantly changing pattern.

Junior and intermediate boys and girls like watching TV, the movies, certain radio programs, collecting various articles, sports, dramatics and reading. Far places and other races fascinate them.

It would be difficult to find a child who was not eager to own a pet. Stories about wild animals and dogs are in great demand when boys come to a library, while girls cannot find enough horse stories. Girls are also eager to read stories about a student nurse.

They like to watch grown-ups at work. See how quickly a group of youngsters gather around a steam shovel toiling at a new excavation or a bulldozer levelling out land for a new road!

Parents should encourage their children to develop a wide range of interests. They should give their children freedom in choice of hobbies as far as possible.

Some leisure time activities such as stamp collecting may seem to absorb quite a bit of money. But an enterprising youngster who is really keen about a special interest will set about earning the money to pay for his fun.

Mothers and dads should try to enter into the spontaneous enthusiasm of a son or daughter for some new thing. A child's choice of interests is not trivial. All the time a boy is investigating how a rocket or a jet plane works he is learning scientific facts. His interest sharpens his thirst for knowledge.

There is a great deal of self-education a child secures in holidays and after school hours in pursuing his interests. They can be thankful that activities keep a child from spending too great a proportion of leisure time being just a spectator while he gazes at TV.

When your son or daughter speaks of a new interest with enthusiasm and eyes sparkling, have patience. Remember in your child's growth as a person, hobbies are helpful.

"PETS MAKE PRICELESS PICTURES"

Snapshots of pets deserve an important place in anyone's family picture record.

A well-loved pet is a genuine member of the family and pictures taken when the kitten is tiny and playful or when the dog is romping with the children will be treasured in years to come.

In this warm weather, you have ideal opportunities for pet photos. When you're in the backyard and your dog or cat enjoys a meal or a sunbath — take a picture. When he plays with a toy, a bone or ball of yarn, he has a special expression that you'll want to preserve on film.

If your pet seems afraid of the camera, let him sniff it and get to know it. Then he'll relax and return to his natural expression — whether it's alertness or sadness.

For action photos, remember that there is a definite pattern as the action reaches its peak. A dog jumping up for a ball, for example, always comes to a halt just before gravity pulls him back down again. Be ready to press the shutter at this predictable peak of action.

Try squatting or lying down, at your pet's eye level. And get close enough so that the subject fills the viewfinder. With a simple camera, that means a distance of about five feet, but no closer, unless you have a close-up lens for your camera.

Animals and birds have minds of their own and aren't usually predictable — unless they're sleeping. With a dog or cat, of course, you can give a command and expect a familiar reaction. But with birds, you'll want to set your camera for a fairly fast shutter speed, and then keep alert at the button.

Whether you want a photo of a bird building a nest, or pulling a worm from the soil, it's largely a matter of knowing where to look, and then setting up your camera and waiting. Birds obligingly return to the same spots. To be prepared, you might rest your camera on a nearby fence, although a tripod is best.

With some patience, you can have appealing photos of pets. Just keep your eyes open for photographic possibilities, and your camera handy.

Dentist's advice in child feeding

Permitting children to remain on bottles long after they can be spoon-fed — and giving them a bottle whenever they demand it — starts the process of tooth destruction, Dr. Losch says. Milk curds, to which they are overexposed, form an acid which attacks the teeth.

The dentist urges parents to avoid propping bottles, since they are usually placed in the same position at each feeding; thus the same teeth are repeatedly exposed to the curd and acid.

Trio of fruits for your table in August

Canada's fruit is among the finest in the world. Modern techniques of packing, storing, and retailing preserve freshness and high quality. Consumers are given further assurance of quality by the strict grading regulations enforced throughout Canada.

August with the hint of autumn in the air proudly harvests its own delectable fruit. Cantaloupe, watermelon, and early peaches are among the medley of snack and dessert-time treats now offered on local markets.

The home economists of the Consumer Section have a few practical suggestions for buying, storing and using these fruits.

Cantaloupe

Cantaloupe is available on local markets at the peak of its perfection. Choose cantaloupe carefully. Here, your nose is your best guide. A ripe melon has a fragrant typically "cantaloupe" aroma. Another point to look for is the netting over the surface. It should be well defined, coarse, and greyish in color. A slightly sunken, well-calloused scar at the stem end indicates that the fruit was picked when ripe. Also, choose melons heavy for their size. Considerate shoppers do not press a melon to see if it is ripe, since this softens the melon for the next unsuspecting shopper.

Golden cantaloupe with its delectable fragrance needs little to enhance it. Most people prefer cantaloupe well chilled. After washing, wrap the melon well in waxed paper, foil wrap or a plastic bag, and store in the refrigerator for several hours. It is important to wrap the melon well because its aroma mingles with the flavors of other foods. Serve halved and filled with other fruit, ice cream or sherbet; or cube, dice or ball it for a delightful addition to fruit salads or fruit cocktails.

Cantaloupe may be successfully frozen in dry sugar or syrup.

Watermelon

Chilled watermelon wedges make wonderfully cool thirst-quenchers on a hot August afternoon. When choosing cut watermelon, look for bright pink or red-fleshed melons with a firm texture. Avoid melons with a hard, white streak running lengthwise. This is a condition known as "white heart". Seeds are also a good indication of ripeness. Dark brown or black seeds are usually found in well-matured melons. If you are planning to buy a whole, uncut watermelon, choose a symmetrical melon with a dull rather than a shiny surface. The underside of a ripe melon is a light yellowish color. Again, do not rely on the "thumping" method to determine maturity. This bruises the melon.

Watermelon should be served well chilled. It is delicious served as is, or cubed or balled and mixed with other fruit. To ensure that the melon is icy-cold, wrap in waxed paper or any air-tight wrapping and store for several hours in the refrigerator. Use the watermelon shell for novel containers to make attractive centrepieces filled with assorted fresh fruit.

Peaches

Early peaches of the freestone type are appearing in some areas across Canada. They are a welcome addition to any meal. Look for the grade mark when buying peaches. Canada No. 1 grade is your assurance that the peaches are hand-picked and sized, sound, of uniform maturity, and of good color for the variety.

Refrigerate peaches in a covered container or perforated plastic bag. They may be stored for three to five days. Ripen slightly underripe peaches, uncovered, at room temperature. Keep away from direct sunlight.

Sun-ripened peaches are delicious eaten out-of-hand or peeled and sliced and served with cream and sugar. Peach desserts are tops with most families.

Peaches are a delight preserved or made into a tasty jam. They can also be successfully frozen either in syrup or dry sugar with added ascorbic acid to prevent browning. Very ripe peaches may be crushed or puréed for freezing.

Wonder Question on dirt remover

When things are dirty, especially our skin or our clothes or the plates we have eaten from, the cause of the dirt and the chief difficulty in getting things clean, is fat or oil. Try to clean an oily plate with cold water and you will see that it is not easy. Fat and oil are great catchers of dirt and if we wash our fingers perfectly clean and then rub a little butter on one hand, but not on the other, five minutes will show a great difference between the two hands. The one with the butter will be coated with dirt, while the other is still clean.

Fat is simply solid oil and oil is liquid fat. Whether the substance is solid or liquid is decided by the amount of heat in it. If it is hot, it is liquid and then it can easily be got rid of. Hot water turns solid fat and half solid fat into a liquid oil and that is the reason why it cleans things better than cold water.

If the thing we have to clean has no fat or oil in it, we shall find that whether we use hot or cold water matters very little. But the mere fact that we commonly use our bare hands for washing things makes hot water more useful, as our hands themselves are producing fat or oil all the time, except when they are very cold.

Tuesday, August 2 — Left the New Liskeard area early this morning to continue the trip north. The clear, cool morning contrasted with yesterday's steady drizzle. Mowing machines on the go, and side-rakes turning over sodden windrows.

The gently rolling hills smoothed out toward Englehart, then the good farm land yielded to bush and rock once again for the 100 miles to Cochrane. Pockets of good farms at Monteith. Passed a sign, "From this Point on, all Water flows to the Arctic". Then another, "You are now crossing the 49th Parallel". Bit of a shock to realize that this is the southern boundary for much of Canada. No longer did I feel the thrill of being north. The Great Clay Belt is north only because we think it so.

Found Cochrane a clean, cheerful town with remarkably wide streets. Agricultural Representative André Demers took half a day to show me around. Some excellent farms if you know where to look, but few in number. In Cochrane North only 60 dairy farms, 8 beef, 6 poultry, 18 potato. Keen competition for the dairy quotas. One man with 50,000 cabbages, another with 5,000 caged layers. Tremendous potential in land; something like 5,000,000 acres good clay soil still to be developed.

Spent the night in the splendid Provincial Park at Driftwood, but just about froze; my sleeping bag is much too thin. There was actually a white frost.

Wednesday, August 3 — Drove another 75 miles west to the pulp-and-paper town of Kapuskasing. If there were good farms along this stretch I didn't see them. Spruce forest covers most of this low, flat clay land. Visited the Experimental Farm which stood out like an oasis. Excellent barley ripening up and oats tall enough to lodge. All the usual varieties of legumes and grasses doing well; winter killing is the least of the problems. Perhaps this station can't be justified by the number of farms it serves at present, but in terms of world agriculture, it is good to have facts about farming in our Canadian North.

Back-tracked 150 miles to Kirkland Lake to cross into Quebec and to the twin mining cities of Rouyn-Noranda.

Thursday, August 4 — A short visit with my friend the editor of the Monitor, and with the regional agronomes, and then drove northward once again.

Surprise after surprise as the naked hills of the mining country opened out into the magnificent farming land ease of Lake Abitibi. A province within a province, as my host agronome Lucien Fournier put it.

Just two years ago, a cyclone destroyed 300 barns in the area. A disaster at the time, it was perhaps a blessing in disguise. Today, with all its new buildings, there is concession after concession of attractive farms. Most of the 800 commercial farms in Abitibi West are dairy; outlets are the mining towns and two creameries.

Beef raising is being officially encouraged; 95 of the 100 beef herds have registered bulls. Last spring's grand champion Angus at Sherbrooke Fair is there; one bull, purchased from the Legros farm at New Liskeard, is reported to have made a remarkable average daily gain of 3.6 lbs. on R.O.P.

Volume of beef doesn't yet warrant an abbatoir. Which has to come first? New stockyards being built at La Sarre for North West Quebec's first Feeder Sale on October 13th. It's being co-ordinated with the five very successful Northern Ontario Sales.

Good 200-acre farms can be bought as a going concern for $20,000; under-developed farms for $30 an acre.

Friday, August 5 — Headed east to home. By the road sign, 60 miles to Amos, 90 to Val d'Or and 460 to Montreal. Surprised to find good farms, some beautifully located on the many lakes, as far east as Val d'Or. Excellent dairy herds, mostly Holsteins. Haying far from finished; the few fields of oats just heading. Looks as if these farms have all the land they can use.

Into the bush once more at Val d'Or, south through the peaceful wilderness of the Laurentide Park, into the Laurentians to face the mad explosion of week-enders from the city.

I like the North.

B'burg council adjusts valuation; approves paving of various streets

The Brownsburg Town Council approved a motion to withdraw all estimates of basements and fireplaces from the assessors' roll for 1966 at their regular monthly meeting, held on August 2. This action stemmed from a protest made by several local citizens over discrepancies existing in the posted rolls. The group claimed some basements and fireplaces were evaluated much too highly while others were completely missed by the assessors. The remedy they suggested, was to hire professional assessors who would evaluate the interiors of the basements, rather than evaluate from the exterior.

The councillors discussed the matter with the group, emphasizing that although there have always been a few complaints each year, the present system of using local citizens as assessors has been quite satisfactory in the past. In order to assure the people that a proper evaluation would be made, the councillors said professional assessors would have to be employed and these would cost the town an estimated five dollars per hour. Thus, the decision to withdraw the assessments on basements and fireplaces was made with the hope that a more satisfactory solution would be reached before the next evaluations were made.

In other business, the council approved the final payment of $958.38 to Mr. Hilaire Binette for the construction of the new municipal offices; $5,000 was also approved as part payment to Mr. Binette for the renovations made to the dam on the West River.

In response to notification from the Board of Transport Commissioners in Ottawa, the Council decided to issue a protest to the Commission, pertaining to the removal of the regular C.P.R. train service between Montreal and Ottawa via Lachute. The council urged that train service be continued as it exists. The intention of the C.P.R., pending report of the Board of Transport Commissioners, is to remove daily trains numbers 132 and 133, and Saturday trains nos. 137 and 138.

At a special adjourned meeting on August 18, a contract was granted to Desjardins Asphalte Ltee., Ste. Therese, for the paving of the following streets: St. Laurent, St. Vincent, St. James, Park, Woodbine, St. Patrick, St. Joseph and Main Street West. The cost of the operation is to be $13,475.70.

The Council also issued a contract to the same company for the preparation of the above streets, if necessary, to a maximum cost of $1,173.40.

After approving the installation of a curb on the east side of Park Street, the Councillors then decided to ask their assessors to evaluate the land to be expropriated on Maple Avenue South for the purpose of removing the sharp turn on the north side of the bridge.

To be sentenced on charge of attempted murder

Sentence will be handed down today by Judge Camille L. de Martigny, in the attempted murder charge against Russel Laughren, 61, of Grece's Point. The case was turned over to the Attorney General's department by the Fire Commissioner's department, and it was decided that a mental examination would be in order, the results of which declared the prisoner to be of sound mind.

The charge was laid in connection with a recent fire in Grece's Point following an intensive investigation by local officers of the Quebec Provincial Police and Cst. Maurice Miousse, of the Q.P.P. Arson Squad, Montreal.

The incident occurred on the night of July 18-19 following a disagreement between Laughren and Adelard Jean-Louis, 59, who had been residing together in a small building in Grece's Point. Police report that, following the argument, Laughren left the building and some time later he is alleged to have returned, tied the door with wire and set fire to the structure. The occupant of the building, Mr. Jean-Louis, was awakened by the smoke and managed to escape by means of a window.

Court appearances

Two motorists accused of dangerous driving following inquests into fatal accidents, will have their preliminary hearings in St. Jerome court today. They are Jacques Lemay, 32, of St. Philippe d'Argenteuil, who was charged in connection with the death of Philippe Tollenaere, of Chomedey, in an accident which occurred near St. Philippe on May 29, and Fernand Richer, 20, of St. Albert, Ont., who was involved in the June 13 accident at the junction of Routes 8 and 8A, in which Mrs. Jean Guy Seguin, of Vimont, the former Michelle Pichette, of Lachute, was killed.

Of Lake Louisa pioneers

Charles Robinson, member of a family synonymous with pioneer days at Lake Louisa, is seen here on his 90th birthday, in hospital at Woodland, Calif., where he has been confined for the past 18 months. Born at Lake Louisa in 1875, he spent most of his life as a rancher in California, and, twice married, he was visited on his recent birthday by 12 of his 15 children still living.

Receives picture of distant member of pioneer family

Lachute, R.R. 3, Que.
Editor, The Watchman

Dear Sir: I have received from Mrs. Ollie Puerner a recent photograph of her father which appeared in the Woodland, California, newspaper.

This man, Charles Robinson, was born June 15, 1875, at Lake Louisa, the grandson of Zachariah and Esther Robinson, pioneers of the Lake Louisa settlement. His father, Michael Robinson, married Jeannette Vary. The Varys lived on the north shore of the lake, and the Robinsons on the south. Charles Robinson played in the fields of Louisa with Siriah Watchorn over 85 years ago!

I am sure many Louisa residents, also George Robinson out west, the Varys and Hamiltons of Brownsburg, and many others, would be glad to see this photo in your newspaper.

From this man's numerous progeny it is easy to imagine that, if all the descendants of Argenteuil pioneers who left this county years ago, were to return here, our county would not hold them all!

Sentiments and Sidelights

(Comments on the Local Scene)

Although tourists may be noticeably fewer, we remarked on Main Street last week, within a few minutes' space, two far-distant license plates — one from Newfoundland - Labrador, and the other from Seattle, Washington.

Some old, familiar figures are back on the school crossing patrols this week. These must be like friendly mileposts in the steps of many youngsters embarking on their first adventure to school.

A decision of the Dollard-des-Ormeaux regional school commission to lease the Georges Clermont (Handy Andy) property on Main Street for a Retarded Children's School, was subsequently rescinded on consideration of the high rental cost.

The Memorial Park has been a scene of activity. Old tree stumps have been removed, the cenotaph has been raised, and preparations are underway to erect the new fountain which was recently approved by Council.

Operators of all school buses, including local School Commissions, are requested to make arrangements to have their vehicles checked and approved by local officers of the Q.P.P. detachment prior to the end of the month.

The fire, which could have reached serious proportions, started in garbage and had ignited the wall of the house when firemen arrived.

One of Lachute's oldest buildings, and one which during almost a century has served this community in many ways — first as a meeting hall and place of worship, a school, concert hall, lodge room (Masonic and Odd Fellows), and in later years as a residential property — will soon be a thing of the past. Having been purchased by Theodore (Ted) Vachon, proprietor of the Richelieu Super-Market, this old landmark will be torn down to make parking space available for his growing business, and renovations will commence shortly on his store, which when completed will measure 50' x 76' and will be most modern in its equipment and displays.

The hall was built by James Fish, about 1870. In 1877 it was found to be inadequate for the growing population, and a 24-foot extension was added. At this time it was being used by a Temperance Society, and the Methodist Sunday School was also conducted there.

In 1880 the meetings of the newly-formed Laurentian Lodge No. 14, I.O.O.F., were held there.

In 1886 the Baptist Church held their services there, and during the week it was used as a day school, occupied by classes from the Princess Street School No. 1, this school being too small to house all the classes.

Later, it was for some time a post of the Salvation Army.

There were several owners of the building, among whom were the late Telesphore Dallaire, who sold to the late Geo. Y. Deacon. It was purchased then by his brother, Wm. J. Deacon, who has owned it from 1939 to the present time.

While it is regrettable, especially to the old-timers, to see old landmarks disappear, it has been said, "The old changeth, giving place to new", and it may also be said of this place that it served its purpose well. No doubt, could its walls tell of its many activities over the years, it would make a varied and colorful story.

Municipalities announce they'll join

Quebec — Two more sets of municipalities have announced their intention to amalgamate under legislation passed during the last session.

Notices have been published in the Quebec Official Gazette by the Village of Ayersville and Town of Lachute which want to join in the City of Lachute; also by the Town of St. Romuald and the municipality of St. Telesphore near Quebec City.

Under the voluntary amalgamation of municipalities act passed by the Legislature earlier this year, municipalities that wish to join can be amalgamated by the Lieutenant-Governor in Council.

First to take advantage of the new law were the 11 municipalities of the Becancour region where the state-backed steel plant will be built.

$8,000 Stolen in bank hold-up at St. Eugene

Four men perpetrated an armed hold-up at the Bank of Montreal branch in St. Eugene, between 11 and 12 noon on Tuesday of last week, escaping with $8,000 cash.

The bandits wore masks; three of them were armed with revolvers and the fourth with an automatic gun. Entering the bank one of them announced in French, "It's a hold-up". They fired three shots. The manager, Michel Rousseau, 28, and two female tellers were on duty. A customer was talking with the manager. He was pushed aside, and later unobtrusively escaped through the open door. The manager was taken by the collar and forced to open the safe.

A 13-year-old boy meanwhile had seen the bandits, and ran into a house to raise the alarm; the occupant phoned the Ontario Provincial Police. This occurred at 11.45 a.m. Within 10 minutes the police arrived at the scene, and steps had been taken to set up road blocks in the surroundings. The bandits had meanwhile entered a car awaiting them outside, and took flight in an easterly direction. The car, a white Buick, 1964 model, stolen in Montreal, was found the same evening near a woods east of Pte. Fortune.

Joint Federal-Provincial project —

Carillon Park development for Canada Centenary is reaffirmed

The secretary of state, the Hon. Maurice Lamontagne, and the provincial secretary, the Hon. Bona Arsenault, gave joint confirmation last week that Ottawa and Quebec will proceed with the proposed Carillon Park on the Ottawa rivershore as a Canada Centennial project. Also confirmed were plans for Montmorency Park, to be established at the foot of the famous falls, 10 miles out of the Ancient Capital.

Ottawa River

The Dollard des Ormeaux Park, the cost of which will be shared equally by Quebec Government, Hydro Quebec and the Federal Government, will be concentrated in two sections, the first at Carillon and second at Grenville Bay, with facilities for tourists and picnickers, parking areas, ramps for small craft, artificial lakes with bridges and footpaths for strollers, and so forth.

At the Carillon site, at the foot of what was formerly the Long Sault rapids, a monument will be erected to the memory of Dollard des Ormeaux and his valiant comrades of 1660.

Cost of the Carillon and Montmorency projects will together total $3,750,000.

The Centenary Commission is supervisory body on capital projects of this kind, and the Federal Government agrees to pay $1 per capita, to meet a joint expenditure of $2 per capita between the province and the authority promoting the improvement.

St. Andrews landmark destroyed

A property dating back to 1858 — 107 years old — was raged by fire at St. Andrews last Friday morning. Operated for the past while by the Spot Ball Social Club of St. Andrews Marina Enterprises, three charred walls are all that remain of the old building. There were three or four occupants sleeping on the second floor at the time of the fire, but all escaped unharmed. The only casualty was a St. Andrews fireman asphyxiated in the operations; the victim, Bernard David, was brought to the Argenteuil Hospital for treatment. The Lachute fire crew were called in to assist, but according to Mayor Henry Labreche the village volunteer brigade had the situation well in hand by the time they arrived, and the Lachute equipment was not made use of.

The spacious building, on the North River bank and facing the main thoroughfare, is a landmark which has served many purposes in its long history. It was the site of the original Blanchard & McArthur store. It changed hands and was destroyed by fire in 1855, then was rebuilt in 1858 by Findlay McMartin. An elaborate establishment, it was disparagingly known as "McMartin's Folly", due to the plethora of village merchants at the time. It was later bought by Chas. Treadwell Wales, also Wm. Larmouth, was used for a warehouse, then becoming successively a rooming house, an old folks' home, and latterly a yacht and social club.

Former B'burg man first manager of parking authority

A former Brownsburg resident, John Castle, has just resigned his seat as alderman in Brantford to serve as first full-time manager of the Brantford Parking Authority. Mr. Castle, who operates a service station in the city, has been on the council for nine years, and has served as chairman of various bodies, latterly of the works and traffic committee. Council will appoint an alderman to fill the remainder of Mr. Castle's term.

Ald. Castle was one of 20 applicants for the newly created position. The new manager will be responsible for the establishment and operation of parking facilities, supervision of revenues therefrom, and enforcement of parking restrictions in the city.

John Castle was born and educated at Brownsburg, where he is well known among the older residents. He left the community around 15 years ago.

By BOB ATCHISON

The interest in all types of birds in this County is very gratifying to say the least. I have received calls on the numbers of Great Blue heron that are with us just at present — all pointing to the fact that most of us have been wandering around without really seeing anything. With the herons, I think someone should have told them about the population explosion; there sure are plenty of them around. Along the North River the other day we counted 11 of them between the iron bridge and White's bridge, and there must have been many more that stayed well hidden. Looking over stretches like this, also reveals the birds we do not normally see, the bitterns. These are much smaller than the heron, but really they are experts in camouflage; unless you almost walk on them, they will not move. The reason for all these water birds, I do not know; it may be the late summer — with many frogs just hatching, this would attract these birds. But this is just a guess, maybe a poor one, at that.

Sleeping-bags do get dirty during the summer, and I have been asked how to clean them. To begin with, most good sleeping bags should not be washed, but rather dry-cleaned. Any good cleaner can do this without too much trouble, and the cost is reasonable, so it is not worth trying to clean them yourself. However, with dry-cleaning you have to take a few precautions. Do not use the bags without airing them well. Open them up in the air, and leave them for at least two hours. The fluids used can be dangerous to humans, so take this little precaution. Now there is one thing that can save you a lot of this cleaning. Have an inner layer made to fit inside your bag; this can be ordinary cotton, or whatever you want — when it gets dirty, all you have to do is take it out and wash it. This is the best, as far as I am concerned.

Walking in the bush the other day, I was struck by the number of trees that had been girdled by porcupines. Naturally these trees will die, and I was appalled by the loss that these animals will be causing all over the County. I'm not too sure on this, but I think a porcupine is capable of destroying 5,000 board feet of lumber every year. Figuring the destruction that is apparent over a small area, the damage from these pests must run in the millions of dollars. Too bad there are not more fishers around; these animals sure can clean out the porcupines, and to my way of thinking this would be good. Even some of the summer cottages have taken a beating from these pests.

I know this is not a subject to your liking — however, your outboard motors should be checked about this time. You have been running them all summer, and in most cases, no attention has been given them. They do need lubrication, and this is something most of us forget. I don't mean the engine oil, but the under-water system. Graphite tends to run out after a while with continual use, so better take the plug out on the fin and check this. It might be wise to check your carburetor, too. Particles of dirt can cause you a lot of trouble, and it doesn't take too long to check this. Some of the bolts may also have loosened up a little; these can be tightened, especially the brackets for mounting the motor. Your prop will be jagged from some of the rocks you have hit, so either install a new one or have it properly balanced; do not try to do this yourself. It's worth a little trouble at this time; catching these small defects now can save you money later on. Another important thing, you still have a lot of time for boating yet, so it will be worthwhile to haul the boat out of the water and clean off the dirt and moss. Even if you have a fibreglass boat, they have to be cleaned just the same.

It appears that there is going to be much interest in the new Remington 600 in the 350 calibre. There is one thing that most people do not understand — this is a very big calibre gun, not the type to go shooting deer or small game with. It is capable of killing the largest big game in North America, so think about it. There is not much sense in having a gun of these capabilities if you can't use it. Of course, it could (and will) be used on moose, it will be good for this; but we do not have any real big game in this area that cannot be downed by a smaller calibre. While on the calibre, not too much change has been done in the calibres barred by the government for deer hunting. With the exception of the 30 M-1 carabine I believe they are all familiar to you. This M-1 though is another thing. A great many of them have been sold as deer rifles without the buyer knowing they are not to be used; this is really the fault of the buyer, as he has every opportunity to check the weapons and the regulations. The reason this is barred is easily seen. It is far too light a gun for deer hunting. So if you have bought one of these put it away as a souvenir; that's all it is, and nothing more.

I believe this is to settle an argument. I have been questioned on scopes for hunting in the bush. The power of these will naturally vary with the person, but it is not the higher-powered scopes that are always the best. In close brush if you have to use one, then the smaller magnification is the best; this usually has a greater field of vision, which is what is needed in the brush. For those long, open shots across lakes or hills, then the higher-powered ones will do, right up to the 10-power variable, although this type is not easy to use. Even your heart-beat will make the object bounce around a little. It is best used from a rest, and in most cases of long-range shooting this is possible. This is one time when it does not pay to be overpowered. . . . Another point: to try and use a scope from your 22 on a high-powered gun is not much good. You see, these are great for low-recoil guns such as the 22, but not a bit of use on your high-powered weapons; it's not worth a darn — the very first shot would probably jolt everything loose in a scope of this type.

Enthusiasts are still catching some good fish in the district. Grays have been very co-operative in all lakes; to try and pinpoint the best lake, would be impossible. As usual, the creek fishing is good for anyone wanting to work them. The best flies in my opinion have been the Black Gnat Hackle, Black Gnat Crane, and the Tippet and Black tied as a hackle fly. Naturally, the size of the hook itself is of great importance; 10-12 and lower have been the best producers, with the very best being the Tippet tied on a 16 hook. Very small, I will admit, but believe me, it has been deadly. Naturally, with such small flies your leaders have to be lightened considerably. Instead of your 4-lb., you have to come down to the tapered to about 1-lb. on the tip. You can tie them yourself with mono; use a "4" at the butt of about 2 feet, then a "3" of about 2 feet, down to a "2" about 3 feet, and if you wish to go any lower just add on from there. Incidentally, the longer your leaders, the better the fishing. I know they are hard to use, but they are well worth trying out; and for nymph fishing they are a must as you don't really feel the strike, maybe a little tightening of the line. But the best way to get fish in this type of fishing, is to watch the tip of the rod. Maybe all you will see is the moving of the line; strike then. Sure, you are going to strike a lot of times at nothing, but you'll soon get on to it, and then you're in business. It's a good way to fish just now; with water being warm, the fish want their food handed to them, and this is the way you do it.

As I have mentioned many times before, the best way to fish with nymphs is to cast upstream then let it free-drift, taking only enough line to take up the slack. Nymphs being floaters and not swimmers, there is no use in working against the current. The fish know this, so don't waste your time. To me it is the hardest way to fish with the fly rod, and one way you can never count on getting the fish, even when it does mouth the fly. A good nymph fisherman will take more fish under any circumstances than others, especially during those hot, humid days of summer, so give them a good try.

Bird hunting seasons and regulations

Quebec — The Tourism, Fish and Game Minister Gérard Cournoyer has made public the main seasons and new regulations for hunting migratory birds. The regulations have been approved by federal authorities under the terms of the international agreement on migratory birds signed by the United States, Canada and Mexico.

In each district, the season for ducks, geese, brant and Wilson's snipe is the same. Opening and closing dates are as follows: Ungava District, Sept. 1 - Dec. 13; Northern District, Sept. 11 - Dec. 19; Central District, Sept. 18 - Dec. 19; Southern District (including the Magdalen Islands), Sept. 25 - Dec. 19.

A number of changes made this year are worth noting. Counties south of the St. Lawrence River now fall in the Central District; no decoys may be set out within less than 200 yards of any others; the daily limit for Wilson's snipe has been raised to 10 from last year's eight.

No golf carts for octogenarian

Mr. Bawtinheimer, a pioneer garbage operator, can't remember when he took up the game, but it was sometime before he was 60. At 85 he still enjoys the sport along with Mr. Setters, 75.

"We go around the course in more strokes and less time than any other two people," he says.

The reason — "exercise. . . It sure isn't the game I play."

"If it's too bad for us, it's too bad for everyone because we are the last ones to stop for the weather," said Mr. Setters.

And they don't have any use for electric golf carts either.

"If it came to that," said Mr. Setters, "we would have to stay home and get a yo-yo or play a game of marbles."

You can't play golf all year around so in the winter Mr. Bawtinheimer gets his exercise at the curling club. He's not as enthusiastic about that as he is about golf — he only goes there five times a week.

Water Skiing WITH CLINT WARD

Triple Criss-Cross

Many of the water ski clubs in Canada and the United States stage regular community water shows as either a public service or as a means for raising operating funds. One number that is invariably found in a water show is the triple criss-cross, or Florida criss-cross as it is sometimes called.

Make no mistake about it, the triple criss-cross is a precision number, and the effectiveness of the number is increased if the skiers have put in lots of practice so that their timing is exact and their speed of movement is high.

The number involves three skiers who cross back and forth under each other's ropes and create an illusion that "they are braiding the tow-lines into a single strand" — or so goes the claim of any water show announcer worthy of the title.

The triple criss-cross is a number that should not be tried without prior discussion and ground practice. Everyone concerned from the boat driver and observer to the three skiers should know exactly what they wish to accomplish.

Three different lengths of rope are used — 65 feet, 75 feet, and 85 feet. The usual precautions should be observed. For example, if the man on the long line falls, the other two skiers should stay away from his line until it can be pulled in, and on landing make sure that the short ropes land first.

The man on the front (65-foot) line has the easy position and it is up to him to set the pace. Staying within the wake he gets into a crouch and skis back and forth from one side of the wake to the other. Not too fast at first — the pace can be stepped up with practice.

The middle man has the difficult spot and is therefore the key man in the triple criss-cross. Here is where the strongest skier should be used for he must cross under the line of the back man and then lift his line over the front man as he moves back and forth within the wake.

Height is an advantage for the third skier, so the tallest of the three usually ends up on the 85-foot line. His job is simple, he just lifts his rope every time either of the two skiers in front of him crosses under. Simple may be an understatement for it is still difficult to snap that line over the man 20 feet in front of him. The back man calls the signals — when to start and when to stop, and any other instructions that may be necessary. At first he needn't employ too much lateral movement but just stay in the middle of the wake and lift the line. Later as practice makes perfect the back man can move from side to side adding to the total "movement effect" of the number.

The boat speed for the number is best in the low-20 bracket but as three skiers get practiced together they may want to try a higher speed and widen the manoeuvre by moving out of the confines of the wake. This is an excellent variation for a second pass of this number during a show but requires close attention on the part of the skiers because the crossing speed is now quite high.

Before trying the triple criss-cross on the water for the first time, it is wise to walk through it on the beach or dock. One last word of caution — wear a light football helmet. It not only adds to the color of the number but protects the ears and head from rope burns in case the No. 2 or No. 3 man doesn't lift the rope quite as high as needed.

Fourth annual Molson fastball tournament here

The fourth annual Molson fastball tournament will be held at Lachute from September 4 to 6, to be staged on two ballfields, namely Ayers Recreation Centre and Cruise's field.

Last year there were over 18 teams entered in this tournament, and the organizers expect a greater number this year.

This tournament is presented with the compliments of Gaston Laroche, Molson's distributor.

The rules of the tournament are the same as last year, in that no senior-calibre pitchers are allowed to pitch; however, they may play any other position on a team.

A team wishing to enter this tournament must have its application in before Thursday, September 2, at 9 p.m. The entry fee is $20 a team, and a team may not have in excess of 20 players.

The winning team will receive $150 and the Molson Trophy, while the runner-up will take home $75. A drawing of $25 will be held for all the losing clubs.

Clubs interested in entering this tournament should contact the following organizers: Jacques Paul (tel. 562-5621 or 562-2411) or Buzz MacRae (tel. 562-2973, 562-2466 or 533-4090).

Red and rainbow trout season

Quebec, Aug. 9 — The season for speckled, brown, rainbow, splake, sea and Quebec red trout, as well as Arctic char, has been extended to Sunday evening, September 19, to give anglers an extra week-end of sport — according to the Minister of Tourism, Fish and Game, the Hon. Gérard Cournoyer. The closing of the season had been originally set for September 15. Quebec parks and reserves, in which special fishing regulations apply, are not affected by the new regulation. The extension also applies to ouananiche, landlocked Atlantic and sebago salmon, except in tributaries of Lac Saint-Jean, on the North Shore and in Ungava, where the season will close on August 31.

The grey or lake trout season will close as scheduled on September 30.

Raise cash to loan chairs free

Edmonton (CP) — Operation Wheeler Dealer, a Canada-wide effort by the Red Cross to raise money for wheelchairs, has been successful in Edmonton. Five Junior Red Cross organizations, comprised of school-age children, recently raised more than $600 for a Red Cross loan service which provides hospital articles for home use.

Purpose of the service is to allow patients to return home for visits. Hospitals do not have enough equipment to loan patients, which would "force those who cannot afford to rent wheel chairs and crutches to stay in hospital," says Elaine Krause, Alberta supervisor of the Junior Red Cross.

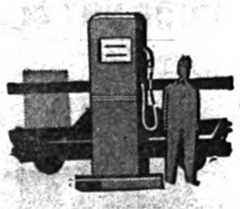

At Ayers Centre aquatic gala

Teaching Science the painless way

Toronto (CP) — A committee under the auspices of the Ontario Curriculum Institute is trying to teach science to children the painless way.

The committee of 25 teachers is taking part in an experiment to determine whether they can bring Ontario classrooms a new way of teaching science.

Instead of placing the emphasis on teaching and telling at the front of the room, the idea is more doing and discovery by the pupils.

The science-teaching project was hit upon in the summer of 1963 when Prof. R. H. Stinson of the OCI's science committee and other university professors, high school teachers and public school people deliberated for several weeks on the problem.

The 25 teachers come from school boards willing to lay out $1,000 for the simple scientific apparatus the new technique requires, such as microscopes and balances.

A booklet drawn up by the science committee after last summer's work says:

"The teaching of science must involve the student in those processes of inquiry which lead him to discover the basic concepts of science."

Alexander - Nesbitt

The marriage of Marion Hazel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Nesbitt, of Buckingham, Que., to Mr. Stanley A. Alexander, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick E. Alexander, of Lachute, took place recently in the St. Andrew's United Church at Buckingham. The Rev. Roland A. Gregoire officiated, assisted by the Rev. C. R. Lang, of Lachute.

Mrs. Chesley MacLennan was the organist and Mrs. R. Evans, as soloist, sang "The Lord's Prayer" and "O Perfect Love".

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length sheath gown of white peau-de-soie and lace. A detachable chapel train cascaded from the waist. Her shoulder-length veil was held in place by a tiara of seed pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of red roses and stephanotis and she wore a string of cultured pearls, the gift of the groom.

Mrs. Peter Brown, sister of the bride, was matron of honor and the bridesmaids were Miss Anne MacLennan and Miss Diana Parker. They wore floor-length A-line dresses of pale yellow peau-de-soie, and their headdresses were circular crowns of matching material. They carried matching bouquets of yellow roses and yellow and white Shasta daisies. The flower girl was Miss Janice Chisholm, niece of the bride. She wore a floor-length dress of white peau-de-soie, with a yellow sash and yellow flowers in her hair and carried a basket of yellow and white Shasta daisies.

Mr. John Rodger acted as best man, and the ushers were Randolph Elliott and Ian MacLaren, cousin of the groom.

The bride's mother wore a dress of aqua peau-de-soie with hat to match and black accessories, and a corsage of orange Delight roses. The groom's mother wore a two-piece dress of Alice blue silk and white accessories, and a corsage of pink roses.

The bride's going-away outfit was a two-piece suit of yellow linen with white hat and black patent accessories, and a corsage of dark red roses.

Out-of-town guests were from Lachute, Montreal, Pte. Claire, Ottawa, Lennoxville, Mascouche, Terrebonne, Toronto, St. Eustache, Shawville and St. Theodore de Chertsey.

Brownsburg man united in marriage at Stratford

Stephens - Stewart

In a setting of pink gladioli and white Shasta mums, Betty Lou Stewart became the bride of John Campbell Stephens, at a wedding in Central United Church, Stratford, Ontario. The Rev. Currie Hinlaw officiated at the double-ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Stewart, of Stratford, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Stephens, of Brownsburg.

The bride, given away by her father, chose a floor-length white sheath peau-de-soie gown with lace appliqué and lily-point sleeves. The chapel train fell in soft folds, accented by two bows at the waist. A flowered headdress held her tiered veil of French illusion, and she carried a cascade of pink Sensation roses, stephanotis and myrtle.

Miss Nancy Stewart, of Stratford, was maid of honor for her sister, and the bridesmaid was Miss Kathryn Stephens, of Ottawa, sister of the groom. They were gowned alike in soft pink street-length dresses of taffeta-organza with lace bodice and overskirt. They carried nosegays of white Fujii mums and pink rosebuds.

Keith Neill, of Ottawa, was best man, and guests were ushered by John Stewart, of Stratford, brother of the bride, and Arthur Mosher, of Chateauguay, Que., cousin of the groom. Miss Myrna Crosby, of Brownsburg, cousin of the groom, sang "The Lord is My Shepherd", and "O Perfect Love", accompanied by Eric McKay on the organ.

The bride's mother received in a powder blue imported crepe and lace ensemble, accented by a corsage of pink Miss M'Liss rosebuds and stephanotis. She was assisted by the groom's mother in an orchid embossed crepe dress, complemented by a corsage of Golden Garnet rosebuds and stephanotis.

For a motor trip south, the bride changed into an aqua and white bouclé suit with white accessories. She wore a cymbidium orchid corsage with red rosette rosebuds. The couple will reside in Ottawa, where the bride will continue teaching, and the groom, his work at the National Research Council, while completing his studies at Carleton University.

Mr. Justice David M. Dickson, of Fredericton, N.B., who with Dr. R. H. E. Bradley, also of Fredericton, survived a forced landing in a small light plane in a bog in the McGivney area in sub-zero weather, credited Boy Scout training for his knowledge of "how to live in extreme temperatures".

FOOD FOR ARGUMENT

One reason most people hang onto their prejudices is that to give them up would mean the loss of important conversational material.

Clan Chieftain, Grenville native died in Ontario

Grimsby lost a respected citizen in the death last week of Lorne M. MacMillan. A quiet, retiring gentleman, few of his friends knew that he was the Hon. Lorne MacMillan, Esq., of Murlagan, Scotland, chief of the Lochabar Branch of his family and thereby a hereditary chief of the Clan MacMillan.

He was the grandson of Archibald MacMillan, Murlagan Chieftain, who came to Canada in 1802, bringing three shiploads of families of the Clan MacMillan and Clan Donald, obtaining land along the Ottawa River. Mr. MacMillan's father settled in Grenville, Que.

Mr. MacMillan began his banking career with the old Molson's Bank in Montreal and continued with the Bank of Montreal after it took over Molson's Bank, serving in many places in Ontario and Quebec. He had been manager at Gore Bay, Ont., for 25 years when he retired in 1946. His wife, Lena V. Hall, R.N., died in 1951 and in 1954 Mr. MacMillan moved to Grimsby where he continued his interest in church and community affairs. He became treasurer of St. Andrew's Anglican Church, and of the Bible Society. He was keenly interested in the Players' Guild and active in the Grimsby Historical Society, being its treasurer for several years.

Funeral services were held at the Stonehouse-Whitcomb Funeral Home on Thursday, with interment taking place in the family plot in Knowlton, Que. Past president Edwin MacMillan of the Clan MacMillan in North America attended the funeral.

Closest surviving relatives are twelve nieces and nephews: Miss Claire MacMillan, Mrs. Donna Burns and Mrs. Margaret Cole in Beebe, Que., Mrs. Isobel Carrière, Mrs. Grace Barker, and Mr. Fraser Carson, also in Quebec, D. MacMillan in Fort William, Mrs. Kathleen Lester and Mrs. Jean Fahranrenbeck, Kitchener, Dr. John MacMillan, Miss Isabel MacMillan and Mrs. Oscar Orr in Vancouver, B.C.

The Bible Today

Films are increasingly being used in all parts of the world to convey God's message to mankind and to bring the Bible to the people.

In the Philippines, where the Christian Council supplies films to the churches, the United Church of Christ reports the following results over the last five years: 1,624,650 people saw the biblical films; 46,316 indicated a decision to follow Christ; 2,434 after further instruction were baptized. As a result of the picture showings 5,838 Bibles were purchased.

Films have been produced to teach people in many languages the message of the Bible — as well as how to use this book. Many releases are available to illustrate the Christian Church in many lands, including the African and Asian countries.

The Good News of Jesus Christ is carried by the most up-to-date methods. Through equipment now available films may now be shown in the most primitive locations.

Jehovah's Witnesses

Trinity not used in Holy Scriptures

"Make Sure of All Things"

The above words may seem quite strange to you. But the fact is that Jesus did not teach the doctrine of the Trinity, and his disciples did not imagine that he was equal with the Father.

— At John 14: 28, and Luke 22: 42, Jesus said, "My father is greater than I and therefore, not my will but thine be done." Hence all, including Jesus, are in complete subjection to the great head, Almighty God. At the time of Jesus' baptism, God said, "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." — Matt. 3: 17.

John 8:28 — "I do nothing of my own initiative, but just as the Father taught me I speak these things."

Phil. 2:11 — "Every tongue should openly confess that Jesus Christ is Lord to the glory of God the Father."

John 5:19 — "The Son cannot do a single thing of his own initiative, but only what he beholds the Father doing."

Isa. 42:8 — "I am Jehovah, that is my name; and my glory will I not give to another."

John 12:49 "The Father himself that sent me has given me a commandment as to what to tell and what to speak."

I Peter 1:3 — "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ."

John 10:29 — "My Father is greater than all others."

John 17: 8, 23, 25 — "I have glorified you . . . having finished the work you have given me to do. . . You sent me forth."

Luke 22:41, 42 — "(Jesus) began to pray, saying: 'Father, if you wish, turn this cup aside from me. Nevertheless, let, not my will but yours be done.'"

Jer. 10:10 — "But Jehovah is the true God; he is the living God and an everlasting being."

These are only a few of the scriptures that prove that Jesus is the Son of the great creator of the heavens and the earth, whose name alone is Jehovah — no third person.

EXTENSION ODE

Mirror, Mirror, on the wall,
What is the favor'd spot of all?

The kitchen is, my dear, you see,
To aid you through your cookery.

You call and talk, and be called too,
With little fear for hue of stew.

It takes no counter space at all;

You roll your eggs around at will,
Or pummel the batter-matter still.

The phone's at hand, not in the way,
And costs you only pennies a day!

This may not be the best poem in the world, but it IS true: an extension telephone costs only PENNIES a day, but what a help to Mom in the kitchen! Why not order one today? Just give us a call at GE 8-3501.

TOTS AND THE TELEPHONE

Any parent in the Lachute district knows the magic that the telephone holds for children. Learning to use the telephone properly, like learning to do many other things in the home, can be taught with a little pre-planning. Here are a few tips to help your youngsters use the phone correctly and courteously:

1. Make it fun to learn: Teach your child how to answer the telephone promptly and in a friendly way.

2. Make a few basic rules — (and stick to them!): Explain to the children that their calls should be brief, that they should speak directly into the mouthpiece (and not shout), and that the receiver should be put down gently.

3. Practice makes perfect: Let your child call a friend, grandma or other special relative under your supervision.

Using the telephone can build a child's confidence, expand his "social graces," and help him communicate effectively. Its "magic" can also be used advantageously to help instill in children those qualities of respect and responsibility that will ultimately mark them as mature adults.

CLEANING PROBLEM?

Occasionally, the question arises as to the best way to clean a telephone. The answer is quite simple: a damp cloth keeps any phone clean and shining. Never clean your telephone with soap and water, as water may penetrate into the set and put your service out of order.

Incidentally, the outer plastic shell doesn't require any special waxes or polishes — it's "self-shining"!

Researchers grow tomatoes without soil and increase crop

Saanichton, B.C. — Researchers are getting up to three times normal yield by growing greenhouse tomatoes in a sand-sawdust mixture rather than in soil, at the CDA's experimental farm on Vancouver Island.

The mixture is three parts pit-run sand and one part hemlock or Douglas fir sawdust. The plants are fed and watered simultaneously through perforated hoses laid along the rows.

Yields in the project have been running at about 15 pounds of fruit per plant. Average yields in the area are from five to seven pounds per plant.

By turning on a tap one man can water and feed the entire crop of tomatoes in a row of greenhouses each 100 feet long and 30 feet wide.

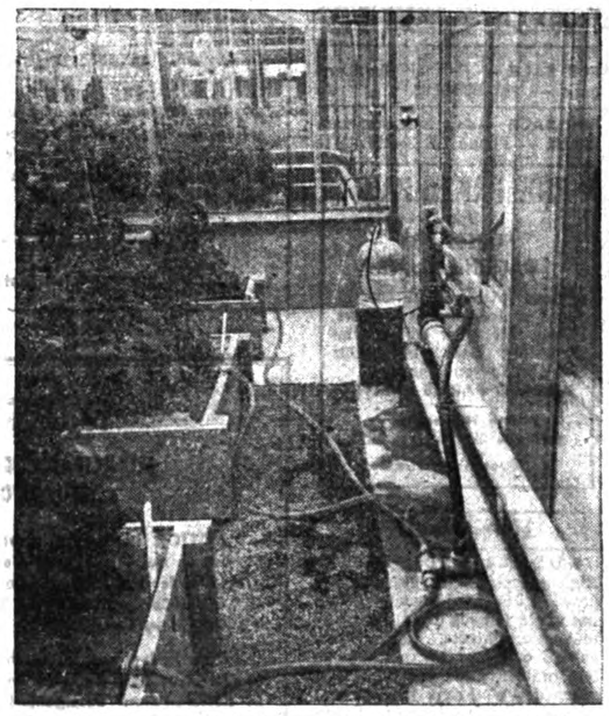

Commercial fertilizers are mixed in solution and metered out by hose proportioners. Water is brought in from the main and flows through the hose proportioners to carry the food to the tomatoes.

Why use sand and sawdust rather than soil? R. M. Adamson, who is in charge of the project, explains:

"The soils that are used for growing tomatoes in greenhouses in our area have become infested with various soil-borne diseases. And generally speaking the soils are too heavy for tomatoes. By switching to sand-and-sawdust we overcame the disease problem while at the same time giving the tomatoes a better medium in which to grow. Also this lends itself very well to use of labor saving equipment."

Mr. Adamson says that there is no reason why the same growing system could not be adapted to commercial tomato growing in greenhouses. One commercial grower in the Victoria area is already trying it.

Of Many Things

THE NEW MATHEMATICS

A professor of mathematics from the University of California has expressed doubts about the value of the new-match versions of set theory, non-decimal number systems and Boolean algebra. He believes the old approach of, "Here is a problem, solve it", was good, while "Here is a situation, think about it," may be a waste of time, because already there is too much effort spent thinking about mathematics rather than doing it.

What he has to say may be greeted with loud cheers by parents who find that helping with homework these days brings them into unfamiliar territory. It wasn't too hard, with the old system, although it could be boring.

Personally, I am delighted that new methods are being suggested and given a trial. It will be good for parents, too, and will force them to think instead of merely going through old patterns of reasoning.

I started out to be a school teacher in the days of the depression. I taught my first and second graders with a system of my own. Always a dunce at mathematics, I knew how difficult it could be. So I set up a small store in my country school and we used real money. The children thus learned decimals, fractions and addition and subtraction all at the same time. When the Inspector called, he was amazed and delighted with the grasp my youngsters had of the subject in these early grades.

It has always seemed to me that our public school system has been too rigid, and that it needs shaking up. I would like to see the school teachers themselves, through their societies, taking a far larger part in planning the curriculum. I believe they would do a better job than the Departments of Education do.

However, the main thing is that education doesn't become a stagnant thing. The world is changing rapidly and there should be room for change right down the line. Mathematics is not a sacred cow. Let's give the new ideas a fair trial.

From the Old Family Album

The title of this picture is "Uncle Walt Supports a Wife". The photo, taken 50 years ago (at John Morgan's farm in Weir, August 1915) shows Mr. and Mrs. Walter Jackson on their honeymoon. Mr. Jackson spent many years in show business and, among other roles, was an accomplished acrobat — a talent which his wife seems also to have shared.

To Mr. and Mrs. Jackson, who reside at 469 Argyle Avenue, Westmount, readers of Uncle Walt's column will join with The Watchman in extending best wishes on their golden wedding anniversary, August 24.

Speculations on early election

DURING THE LAST 18 months there have been quite a few false-alarm election predictions. As a result, many Canadians merely yawn when the talk starts up again.

But for a variety of reasons the latest round of speculation has a more convincing ring than earlier guessing games.

For example, whenever Prime Minister Pearson was questioned in the past he was able to deny in fairly certain terms that he was planning to call an election. But just last week, while talking to reporters in Ottawa, he steered clear of making a flat denial.

It's worth noting that this apparent change has coincided with the announcement of a new deal for sale of $450,000,000 worth of wheat flour to the Soviet Union, an important item in reckoning how the Prairie farm vote might go.

The talk seems to centre on October. One factor is that if the prime minister passes up a fall vote he'll have to wait a year or so for another chance. That's because redistribution of federal constituency boundaries is about to take place and it would be out of the question to call an election while that was going on.

The present standing in the House of Commons is: Liberals 127, Progressive Conservatives 92, New Democratic Party 18, Creditiste 13, Social Credit 9, Independent 2, Vacant 4. Two of the vacancies are in seats that were Liberal and two Conservative.

It's easy to see that just a slight swing in favor of the Liberals would give them a clear majority — 133 seats or more — and it's no secret that the prime minister would like to be able to govern without having to depend on the support of the smaller parties.

What might have prompted him to shelve the idea of an election this year would have been a strong voter reaction to the Dorion report on the Rivard bribery scandal.

But it apparently hasn't happened. In the April, 1963, vote the Liberals got 42 per cent of the total, and the public opinion polls suggest that despite the scandals they are holding at a popularity figure above that.

Support for the Conservatives is said to have fallen since January, while the NDP and Social Credit are up.

It's not known how much stock the prime minister places in polls, but at least they won't discourage him if, as so many seem to think, he is really serious this time.

Education overlooked?

MOST CANADIAN families have to set up priorities in their family spending. Only after housing, food, clothing and education, etc., have been taken care of, can the family make purchases of appliances, a new family car or saving towards a vacation trip. Not all these things can be had at once — in growing families, the purchase of a washer or dryer might have greater priority over buying a better car; or if Dad changes jobs and has to drive further every day, maybe the decision will have to be made that a more reliable car is needed and the special holiday can't be taken for two years instead of this year. The point is that circumstances always determine a family's priority of expenditures from the basic item of food purchases to the luxury item of vacation trips.

Governments, too, should set up priorities in their spending of the taxpayers' money. Recently, the Federal Government advanced a Canada Pension Plan and even more recently a Medicare plan involving gigantic expenditures. Where does education fit into these plans for enormous expenditure? The Canadian Chamber of Commerce has continued to urge the Government to establish expenditure priorities for education, pensions, health and other programs.

The pressure of university needs in Canada cannot be postponed. Projections show how steeply the demands for education will continue to rise. We cannot permit young Canadians to be turned away from universities because there are not adequate facilities. Education is fundamental to this country's growth and should be given high priority in the vast government spending.

Topsy doesn't grow any more

PROFESSIONAL HELP is getting to be big business these days. Whether it's a personal problem or advice on how to run a million-dollar business, there are so many experts around willing to help that it's providing a big new source of income for the yellow pages of the telephone directory.

It's getting to the stage where people don't sit down and figure out their problems anymore. They call in management consultants, motivational researchers, time study experts, public opinion pollsters, practicing psychiatrists or Royal Commissions.

Take the case of the small Canadian city that recently decided to seek outside help on its problems. It wound up with an economic and industrial survey, a report on its traffic flow patterns, an analysis of recreational facilities, a projection of future hospital needs, an evaluation of possible sites for its civic centre, an appraisal of future school expansion, a thesis on its sewage plant, and a confidential assessment of city hall personnel performance!

It cost the city about $50,000 for assorted surveys — to find out it needed to spend about $5,000,000 on new facilities, just to keep up with progress. Then it had to hire public relations experts to convince the people they should vote the money!

Experts seem to figure that if you can afford to ask their opinion, you can afford to spend the money following it.

Professional help has one advantage, though. If the project turns sour, you can always blame the expert.

Doing something about the weather

IN CANADA everybody talks about the weather, but it would hardly be true to say nobody does anything about it.

The meteorological branch of the Department of Transport is doing quite a bit about the weather, keeping careful records of the highs, lows, means and extremes, all the way from Herschel Island to Cape Sable.

Although their labors haven't done much to change things, the statistics may be of some comfort. Because the branch's climatic tables indicate that no matter how bad the weather is, it could almost certainly be worse somewhere else.

Those who don't live in Ottawa, for instance, may be heartened by the fact that below-zero weather has been registered in the capital city six months out of twelve.

Or consider Regina, where extremes range from 110 degrees in summer to 56 below in winter, and wind chill temperature has equalled 100 below. That's a spread of 200 degrees.

Be glad you don't live in Fort Simpson, North West Territories, with a high of 97 and a low of 69 below. Or Cambridge Bay, where it has been 31 below in May and 25 below in October.

When it comes to weather, Canadians seem to have the worst of both worlds, with sizzling summers and wailing winters.

It's the perfect days — as scarce as they are — that make the rest of the year bearable.

Is anybody listening?

In an average week at this time of year the flow of traffic safety literature across and editor's desk becomes a landslide. Some of it is well-written; all of it is well-meaning. The message is always real and important. But as drivers of cars methodically go on killing and maiming themselves and others — 1,383 Canadians dead and 40,893 injured in traffic accidents in June, July and August last year — it's hard to believe that anyone is listening.

Maybe we're sated with numbers and cautions and photographs of cars curled around hydro poles. Maybe a traffic accident looms too small in this era of the bomb. Somehow, though, if only because this kind of carnage is so unnecessary and wasteful, people who drive have to discover that death in a car, or from a car, is just as permanent and much more likely than most other kinds. And somehow, people who talk about safety have to use terms that will make motorists listen.

Maybe like this:

Safety tip: "A 10-minute trip takes 15 minutes at 40 miles per hour . . . and 8.6 minutes at 70 miles per hour. How much time do you have to save?"

Another way to say this is that once there was a man and wife and baby doing 70 on a two lane road because it was seven p.m. and the motels were filling up, and they met a carload of teenagers cresting a hill, same speed. And one of them swerved a little, and there was that ugly indescribable crunch of metal on metal, and just time for the woman to scream. One of them actually lived, though. The prettiest teenage girl. Walks with a permanent limp, but as her parents often say, she's lucky to be alive. . .

Safety tip: "Remember that summer holidays are here and children are at play. Motorists should exercise extra caution in residential areas."

What this really means is that there was this man driving down a quiet street, not very fast, just a little, and it really wasn't his fault. The girl, maybe five or six years old, ran right out in front to grab her dog because she thought the dog was going to get killed. So now she is lying on the pavement, not moving, a wispy thing in white blouse and pedal pushers. The neighbors are gathering around in hushed little knots and the ambulance is whining in, but too late. And the man stands there, sick at the stomach, not really believing it, and the child's mother is on her knees in the street, crying but not really believing it. But both of them will believe it soon enough, and never forget. . .

We could go on and on with safety tips like these. But is anybody listening?

SUGAR AND SPICE
by Bill Smiley

The Day Of No Rest

There have been fantastic changes in our way of living in the last two or three decades. Schools are bigger and brighter, if not better. The teenagers have taken over popular music and public attention. Television tirelessly hurls verbal and visual garbage in our unresisting faces. Murder and rape walk city streets, even in daytime. Not to mention racial strife, the welfare state, frozen foods, instant everything, and Japanese motor scooters.

It's a long, long way from that simple, cut-and-dried, black-and white society in which most of today's middleagers, caught in a world revolution, were brought up.

If our parents and grandparents could be brought back from their eternal rest for a quick look at our world, they would probably go straight into deep shock. They might be able to cope with most of the items above, but there is one thing that would send them right around the bend: — the change in our observance of Sunday.

When I was a kid, Sunday, aside from its religious aspects, was a day of rest, literally. There was nothing else to do. For the average family, it was church in the morning, home for a big noon dinner, flake out for a nap for the adults, gloomy poking around house or backyard for the kids, supper, and early to bed. No swimming, no fishing, not even a game of catch. Peace and quiet, however resented by the young.

Only variation in this was the descent of a horde of dull relatives. Everyone then sat around in Sunday best, in parlor or on porch, and gassed interminably about Cousin Elwood's bad back or Aunt Arlene's asthma.

I grew up thinking that Sunday was just a day on which you couldn't do anything worthwhile. My attitude toward the Sabbath was that the sooner it was over, the better.

But even then, though I was too young to notice, the rot had set in. Some of the wilder elements in the community began smashing the Calvinistic gloom. Here and there, a family would not only go for a drive on Sunday, but smuggle swimming suits and a picnic lunch along. Before you knew it, the odd family was secretly listening to Jack Benny on the radio, after supper.

The virus spread like wildfire. By the time I achieved manhood, the grand old traditional Sunday was crumbling rapidly. The more reckless among the young fellows began hanging around the Chinese restaurant or going for walks with girls. Some of the pure anarchists among them started playing tennis and fishing and all sorts of unspeakable things.

From there, of course, it was only a step to wearing sports clothes and smoking and having a beer on Sunday. Drugstores and restaurants began staying open, to cope with this new wave of wantonness. Sunday sports got one toe in the door, then kicked it wide open. Sunday movies moved in. The beaches set up midway rides. The transistor radio was invented, along with the drive-in.

And you know, too, what's happened to the peace and quiet of our old childhood Sunday. Sports cars bellow, lawnmowers snarl. Traffic whines on highways, children whine at beaches. Transistors blare Beatles-beat. Power boats drum and throb. The air is sweet with the pock of golf balls ricocheting off trees, and water-skiers ricocheting off the heads of swimmers. Beer cans clang on asphalt. Couples wrangle on gin and tonic. Even the birds have to shout louder to hear each other.

And all that, Dads, is why your old man went back from a rest to work on Monday, while you go back to work for a rest.

World With Less People

The great post-war population explosion, which has already run its course in North America, may be easing up all over the world. There is evidence that the spectre of a world consumed by the mouths of its own people may never come to pass.

With the world's population now more than three billion, and increasing so rapidly that this figure will double in the next 35 years, a reversal of these trends would be the greatest news of our lifetimes.

And indeed, such a reversal, still yet barely noticeable, appears to be now in the making.

The past year has seen a near-revolution in general acceptance of the need for birth control around the world.

The birth rate in the United States and Canada already has dropped and recent studies have confirmed that in even Roman Catholic Quebec, the day of the large family has passed.

The birth control revolution is now being won on the political and religious fronts all around the world. It has already been won on the private, family front in North America where the vast proportion of the population, including Catholics, practise family planning aided by birth control devices.

Although the Roman Catholic church has not yet softened its opposition to birth control among its own people, a subtle but vastly significant change has already occurred in the attitudes of leading Catholic prelates.

While Catholics have previously been opposed to any dissemination of birth control information, even to non-Catholics, the Church is now carefully avoiding efforts to impose its strictures on other faiths.

When the U.S. Supreme Court struck down Connecticutt's anti-birth control law, Cardinal Cushing of Boston announced that he would not oppose repeal of a similar law in Massachusetts. "I will make no effort to impose my opinion on others," he said.

Catholics are now awaiting the report of a commission appointed by Pope Paul VI to re-examine the Church's teachings in this area. At present, the Church sanctions only the rhythm method — abstinence during the woman's fertility periods.

But even if Roman Catholic teachings remain unchanged, the fact that the Church appears to no longer oppose birth control by others relieves Western governments of tremendous political pressure.

It is this spirit which has enabled the U.S. to initiate birth control aid abroad without running into political dangers at home.

In becoming the first U.S. president to publicly support birth control, President Johnson recently urged Congress: "Let us act on the fact that less than $5 invested in population control is worth $100 invested in economic growth."

The world's most crucial population problems are in Latin America and Asia. In Catholic Latin America — where the population rose 11 per cent. while production increased only four per cent. in the past decade — mobile birth control units are roving through native villages.

In India, the government has undertaken a campaign to bring the birth rate down from its current level of 40 per thousand to 25 per thousand, comparable to the Canadian rate.

The oral contraceptive pill (developed by a Catholic physician) is the main factor in the increased acceptance of birth control, although India is putting its hopes on the IUD (intra-uterine device) which is even simpler, cheaper and more reliable. China, too, has embarked on a birth control program.

There is now hope that world population in this century may level off at around five billion and that it may thereafter be kept within tolerable limits.

When Junior starts to school

— By NANCY CLEAVER —

"I would like to send Junior in his new sailor suit, but he wouldn't be a bit comfortable in it. He insists it is just for Sundays. On his first day at school Junior will wear a little wash playsuit the same as the other little fellows in our block. As a matter of fact, he vastly prefers his old clothes. Children are funny!"

Children may be funny, but when it comes to clothing a little child for school, parents are sometimes even more puzzling! Of course, mother wants to be proud of her child's appearance on this very special day. Likely she will take a snapshot of him going down the walk, or with a little playmate, to keep as a record of how he looked. But it is really much more essential that a child should feel at home in his clothes, than that he should don a brand new outfit.

The last thing a kindergarten or first grade youngster wants is to be "different"! If his clothes make him feel conspicuous or ill at ease, he is "out of things". He needs to feel that he belongs, and so it is a help for him to look like "the other kids!" Boys especially dread the taunt of being "Mother's pet!" or "A sissy!"

From the teacher's point of view, she likes to see the children in clothes which are attractive and practical. Mother has only one or two or perhaps three small youngsters in her home, but the teacher's "family" comprise twenty or thirty little folk.

It is a great help to her if Junior's clothes are made so that he can manage his own zipper or buttons when he goes to the toilet. On rainy days the teacher will be thankful if the majority of the children have large enough rubbers marked with their names, and if they can take them off and put them on themselves.

Clothes in September are usually fairly simple. But when it comes to winter time, the teacher hopes her small charges will have snow suits and goloshes which they can remove and dress in themselves, without any assistance. After all, she has only one pair of hands, the time for recess or even the noon break is brief enough. If the scholars are independent, the teacher has more free time.

This first day of school will be much more satisfying for a child if mother talks about it beforehand as an experience which he will enjoy. A good mother hides the little tug at her heart that her "baby" is a baby no longer but entering into a new phase in his life. Teacher shares a place in a child's heart along with mother and dad from now on, if she is a likeable person.

Mother wants her child to look forward to school, to playing and working with other children, to learning new ideas and discovering how to do different things. By anticipating a happy experience, the mother prepares a son or daughter to enter wholeheartedly into this world of school.

The unknown is always a bit terrifying. Mother will want to take away some of this fear of the strange adventure ahead. She will tell little stories about when she started to school, little friends she knew, teachers she liked.

A few days before school opens, Mother will walk to school with the child and remind him to stop at the corner, listen and look both ways and wait till the way is clear before crossing. Just in case he should get lost or be in an accident, he should be able to repeat clearly his name, address and phone number. Mother will also try to make sure that her child knows at least one other youngster who is starting to school in the same class.

A physical check-up by the doctor and dentist, and the eye specialist too if necessary, are also important. Many a child is handicapped in school by some small physical defect. There are ways of preparing a child for school.

Is your child ready for his new adventure?

Teatime Topics

By Jean Sharp,
Canadian Press Staff Writer

There was little hardship involved for Canadians in the shortages and rationing restrictions of the Second World War. But generous cooks were called upon to measure quantities carefully and housewives learned and re-learned housekeeping techniques their mothers had known.

The government issued dozens of pamphlets of recipes and kitchen tips designed to save sugar, save butter, stretch meat.

A 1943 booklet entitled Foods for Home Defence suggested serving more hot desserts because they seem sweeter than cold ones. It told housewives they could save sugar by cutting two tablespoons of it from pre-war baking recipes, which, the booklet said, would taste just as good.

You can bring out the sweet taste in food by putting an extra pinch of salt in your cooking.

Saving Butter

Butter can be extended by beating one half to one cup of milk into a cup of soft (not melted) butter. The booklet recommends using this mixture on one slice of bread in a sandwich only.

You can save butter by using mild-flavored fats in cakes and cookies and for greasing baking pans. Housewives were encouraged to use some meat fats for frying, others in meat and vegetable dishes and to turn over any they couldn't use to salvage for munitions.

You put the fat in a large pan and set it over a moderate heat to melt slowly, then strain it through a fine sieve into a clean pan.

To two cups of melted fat allow one cup of boiling water and ½ teaspoon baking soda. Use a large pan because the mixture is apt to foam up. Cook very slowly until water has evaporated and fat is clear.

Pork Pastry

The booklet recommends clarified pork fat for pastry for meat pies, sausage rolls or cheese straws, for recipes containing spices, and if deflavorized, for white cakes.

The pastry recipe called for: 3½ cups pastry flour, 1 teaspoon salt, ¾ cup clarified fat from smoked or fresh pork, ½ cup cold water. The method is standard pastry making method. The recipe will make three pie shells.

In place of pork fat, you may use ¾ cup chicken fat and 2 teaspoons salt or ¾ cup beef and pork fat mixed and 1 teaspoon salt.

Questions and answers on freezing and preserving

The preserving season is now in full swing. The Consumer Section at Ottawa has been busy answering questions on freezing, canning, and jelly-making. The following are some of the most frequent questions asked by the Canadian homemaker.

What does blanching mean?

Blanching is a short, partial cooking in boiling water or steam. It is required to destroy enzymes, found in all vegetables, which would cause undesirable changes in flavor, color, and texture during storage.

I have heard that you can freeze corn in the husk without further preparation. Is this possible?

No, this is not possible. All vegetables, including corn, must be carefully prepared for the freezer. They must be blanched, chilled, and packaged in air-tight freezer containers. To freeze corn husk, desilk, wash in cold water, and blanch the specified length of time in your freezer manual, 9 minutes for medium cobs. Chill cobs in cold water, drain, cut in uniform lengths, and pack dry. Freeze immediately.

I always seem to get seepage around the seal of my jelly glasses. What am I doing wrong?

Be sure to avoid any dribbling of jelly on the inside of the jar above the jelly level because the paraffin will not be able to adhere to the jar properly.

If you are in the habit of pouring a thick layer of paraffin over your jellies, try this method for a better seal. Cool your jelly slightly then pour a thin layer of hot melted paraffin over the jelly, rotating the jar so that the wax will adhere to the glass to form a close seal. Leave until hardened then add a second layer of melted wax, again rotating the jar.

I want to freeze peaches this year, how can I prevent discoloration?

Peaches and apricots tend to discolor easily and so they must be treated with ascorbic acid. If you plan to pack peaches in syrup, use ¼ teaspoon of crystalline or powdered ascorbic acid or 800 milligrams in tablet form to 4 cups of cold syrup. If using tablets, dissolve in 1 tablespoon of cold water before adding to the cold syrup. If you pack peaches in dry sugar, use ¼ teaspoon of the crystalline or powdered ascorbic acid or 400 milligrams in tablet form for each pint. Dissolve ascorbic acid in 2 tablespoons of cold water, sprinkle over fruit in a bowl and mix gently. Then, add the sugar and mix slightly until fruit is well coated.

Is the oven method of canning still recommended?

The Consumer Section does not recommend the oven method of canning. It is not as safe or efficient as the boiling water bath. The oven may be used, however, for sterilizing jars. Just place the sealers with lids in the cold oven, then turn the thermostat to 200°F. When the oven temperature reaches this point, the jars are sterilized. Remove jars as needed.

What is the sugarless method of canning fruit? Will it keep the fruit as well?

The sugarless method of canning fruit is similar to the solid pack method. Remember, the keeping quality of canned fruit does not depend on the addition of sugar but rather on correct processing and the use of air-tight containers. The color and flavor of some fruit are retained better, however, when some sugar is added. The sugarless method is especially recommended for rhubarb, blueberries and cherries. It may also be used for other fruit.

Wash, prepare fruit and crush part of it in the bottom of a preserving kettle. Add remaining fruit and heat for a few minutes. Stir occasionally and if necessary add a little water to prevent scorching. Pack in sealers or cans, crushing fruit down slightly so it is covered with its own juice. Leave headspace and process as for cold pack, from 15 to 20 minutes, or as directed by your canning booklet.

Fruit may also be canned in water, just add a little less water than you would syrup; and use the hot pack method as outlined in your canning guide.

I stored my canned fruit and vegetables at the cottage during the winter. Is there any danger in using these cans since they were frozen?

Freezing may deteriorate the quality of canned fruit and vegetables. There is no danger, however, in using cans which have been frozen, so long as there is no sign of leakage after the food has been allowed to thaw.

I am only allowed to eat fruit without sugar. What fruit may be frozen without the addition of sugar?

The fruits that may be successfully frozen without sugar are as follows: all fruit juices, blueberries, currants, gooseberries, raspberries, and rhubarb.

Some freezing experts suggest freezing strawberries and peaches in water or juice rather than in syrup, with the addition of ascorbic acid to preserve color and flavor. They also recommend freezing raspberries on trays, then packing in freezer containers.

FRUSTRATION

A child who is subjected to strict discipline and too many scoldings, may develop behavior problems. If he feels that his own family does not love him or want him, his reaction may be disobedience and tantrums in efforts to gain attention.

Treating the unborn baby

Greenwich, Conn. (WMNS) — A baby girl weighing 4 lbs. 14 ozs. was born prematurely at Greenwich Hospital, received a blood transfusion for an Rh factor problem within one hour of birth, and was discharged 18 days later, alert and well.

The remarkable thing about this "premie" is that she had also received a blood transfusion before birth, when she was a 32½-week-old fetus yet unborn.

This infant is among the very few human beings ever treated "in utero", an astonishing medical feat first accomplished in 1963 by the New Zealand physician, Dr. A. W. Liley. This breakthrough has already saved more than 100 babies.

Obesity linked to family status

Philadelphia (WMNS): When a family moves up or down the status ladder, a woman's weight reflects the move. With a step up, she gets thinner. With a decline, she puts on weight. This is the finding of University of Pennsylvania researchers who studied 1,660 New Yorkers aged 20 to 59.

Among women in the lowest socio-economic group, one in three was obese, as against one in six of the middle group and only one in 20 of those on the highest income rung.

The investigators found obesity among 17 per cent of women who remained in the group in which they were born. Among those who had moved down, 22 per cent were grossly overweight. But obesity fell to 12 per cent among those who had moved upward. Moreover, the researchers found, the longer a woman's family had been in the country, the less likely she was to be obese.

Similar links between status and obesity were found among men, but the effects were less marked.

Planned weddings

A young woman from Hyderabad characterizes the concept of marriage in this country (and our neighbor) as having crystallized into a manhunt. The possibility of a semi-arranged marriage, giving man and woman a chance to know each other, might satisfy the girl who would be afraid otherwise of missing out on social life for fear of passing up her only chance.

— Camrose (Alta.) Canadian

Skin trouble may be connected with cosmetics

New York (WMNS) — If the tender skin of your eyelid or upper neck becomes irritated suddenly, the culprit may be a cosmetic, and not necessarily one applied directly to the affected area. Two New York dermatologists warned recently that nail polish, hair coloring, eye shadow — any of the numerous powders and paints designed to bedazzle the beholder — can be the cause of skin allergies, irritation, and damage to hair and nails. They recommend that women have themselves patch-tested by a physician to ferret out the cause of the irritation, and then switch to another beauty brand.

The Quebec Farmers' Association recently appointed Harris Shufelt, of East Farnham, Que., as their first full-time secretary-manager. Mr. Shufelt is very interested in agriculture and is anxious to get an active program organized for farm and rural people.

Mr. Shufelt was a member of

his local calf club for eight years and was active in the 4-H program in his Brome County. Harris was club president and assistant 4-H leader for three years. In 1957, he was one of the representatives for Quebec Province in the judging competition at the Royal Winter Fair. Mr. Shufelt assisted in the A.R.D.A. study in Brome County two years ago, and has been actively involved in several community organizations.

Since Harris completed the diploma course in Agriculture at Macdonald College in 1963, he has been operating his home farm in East Farnham.

The Quebec Farmers' Association is an organization serving the English-speaking farmers of this province. This association is involved in providing information and educational services to its members as well as assisting in policy decisions in agriculture.

The directors and Mr. Shufelt have an ambitious program outlined. They now will need the support of the membership to make this program a success.

Mr. Shufelt's address is at Box 237, Macdonald College, Que.

MORE DIE ON ROADS

Ottawa CP — Traffic accidents killed 407 Canadians in May, an increase of 6.5 per cent over May 1964, when 382 were killed, the Dominion Statistics Bureau reported.

Country Notebook

By WALKER RILEY, Macdonald College

Sudan grass, sorghum, and sudan-sorghum hybrids have been frequently in the news this summer as emergency forage crops. The Agronomy Department here at the College has hesitated to recommend them because even the most favored areas of Quebec are on the borderline for enough heat-units. In most ways, too, corn outperforms them except in their ability to re-grow after cutting or grazing.

Therefore, I was surprised recently to find in Vaudreuil and Soulanges counties over 800 acres are planted to sudan-sorghum. And it was doing very well indeed. Some was waist-high; one field was shoulder-high when we saw it in the last week of July.

But the cows were not getting it. Most had been grown for the dehydrating plant at Ste. Marthe to be made into cereal meal. Yield per acre, in two cuts last year, ran 3½ tons dried compared with five tons for alfalfa.

The owner of the drying plant — a pleasant, enterprising New Canadian from Belgium, Jacques Verdonk — likes the stuff because it fits in well between the cuts of alfalfa. If he can get it, he can process 75 tons a day. Dried, ground fine, and packed into paper bags, it finds a ready sale to feed mixing plants. The protein may run as high as 20%. It sells for $55-$60 a ton, but every ton of meal he has four tons of water to evaporate with oil heat.

And here is something I like. He supplies to his growers without charge, 100 lbs. of ammonium nitrate per acre to go on the sudan-sorghum after the first cut.

Jacques had a bad fire in July. It burned out much of his milling and pelleting plant. But he was back in production in ten days, and as cheerful as ever.

If you are in the beef business, here is a date to mark on the calendar. Under president Bob Leberge, the Quebec Angus Breeders are sponsoring, for the first time in their history, a National Angus Sale. It will be in the College's judging pavilion (a place former students will remember well) on Saturday, September 18, starting at noon.

British redcoats to Toronto

Toronto CP — A British military tattoo of the kind that performs for thousands of tourists in Edinburgh, Scotland, each year will visit the United States and Canada. More than 130 men of the Royal Marines band and pipers and drummers from the 2nd Battalion Scots Guards and the Royal Scots Greys will open in Toronto September 18, then continue on to New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Buffalo, Washington, Chicago, Oklahoma City and Dallas.

Raccoons invade Toronto, but become too neighborly for residents there

Toronto CP — The Ontario Humane Society says raccoons are moving into the city and becoming more and more neighborly with upper social and economic classes of human beings.

The Society says the animals are coming into apartment buildings, private homes and even downtown office buildings to find accommodations and privacy.

The raccoons are getting into an unusual amount of trouble this year, and the Society has set harmless traps for the animals to evict them from their residences.

The traps attract the raccoons, snare them, and Society officials release them in their native habitat — away from Toronto residential areas.

Extermination firms use tear gas to evict a raccoon family but only in rare cases do they kill them. The baby coons are often given away as pets and the mother is released in the nearest woods.

One man reported that a coon, attempting to remove the top of a garbage can, slammed the can against the side of a car and caused $200 damage.

In another case, a raccoon came down a chimney into a house while the family was on vacation and turned on a tap. The drain was plugged and the water flooded the lower floors and recreation room.

On one occasion a raccoon was seen hoisting another on its shoulders to reach the top of a garbage can. Chances are they were planning a midnight picnic and the kind thing would be to leave them to it.

The typical domicile of the "city coon" is an attic or chimney. The raccoons are seldom seen in the day, but forage at night in search of food. They usually start with a vegetable course in the garden and then move to the main dishes at the nearest garbage can.

More capital must come from Canadians

Canadians have known for some time that they own a smaller proportion of the industry of their country than the nationals of any other industrial country. The new figures, The Financial Post says, show why there is concern that our political independence is in jeopardy, with the control of so much of Canada's industry outside Canada's borders. Note these facts from Ottawa's first report under the Corporations and Labor Unions Returns Act; it covers all firms in Canada with a minimum of $250,000 in assets or $500,000 a year in sales: (1) The companies firmly controlled from abroad (at least 50% ownership) account for 43% of the assets of all Canadian business firms, 42% of sales and 46% of total profits. (2) Those with some degree of foreign ownership — anywhere from 5% to 100% — account for 57% of total sales and 75% of all profits.

There is absolutely no doubt, comments The Financial Post, that foreign investment has provided great and helpful resources for the development of this country. To it we owe much of our present prosperity and standard of living. But where is the start and stop of it all? Certainly one price now being paid can be seen in the fact that Canadian corporations now send abroad to their foreign owners over $1,000-million annually in dividends and interest — just about the amount that Canada must raise abroad annually to balance its international payments and avoid crisis. Unless Canadians supply more capital themselves, this drain will grow beyond remedy.

DIG UP MAMMOTH TOOTH

Portage Mountain, B.C. CP — A bulldozer operator at work near the site of British Columbia's Portage Mountain Dam found a 30-inch tusk. Scientists said the fossil probably came from a mammoth that roamed the region at least 10,000 years ago.

Flying lawyer

Calgary CP — Lawyer Milt Harradence, who uses a private jet aircraft in his practice, has turned to an F-86 Sabre jet fighter once used by the RCAF Golden Hawks aerobatic team.

The aircraft is one of two acquired by the Air Museum of Canada. Museum President Lynn Garrison said Mr. Harradence will operate the fighter with permission from the federal government.

Mr. Harradence, former Alberta Progressive Conservative leader, turned over to the museum his two Vampire jet aircraft, one of which is entered in the U.S. national air race at Las Vegas, September 21.

Sabre jets replaced the Vampire with the RCAF in 1956.
